RECEPTION TO THE TOURISTS

Col. Kincaide Principal Speaker

Gathering Was At Nantasket

It was an "al fresco" reception which the Boston Chamber of Commerce gave at Nantasket on Thursday to its members who have just returned from a tour of South America and Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, president of the tour was a central figure. Col. Kincaide turned to a friend at the dinner and said, while the 150 men in the room were roaring "Sweet Adeline" under the leadership of His Honor: "My! But it seems good to be back with the boys again. Everything in South America was set and formal and much different from this."

Boston newspaper reports treated the whole affair lightly giving very little space to the speeches and the information so much desired.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide, president of the delegation, said in part:

"It was a unique undertaking—the first of its kind in the annals of history—and its success has been greater than even its wise promoters dared to anticipate. This band of pilgrims, 39 in number, "boosters for Boston," worked early and late to place the fair name of Boston and New England in its rightful leading position among South American people, and it may safely be said that the business trail blazed, the friendships made and good feelings cultivated has made an easy path for others.

"The mission just completed has brought us closer to the South American people, we know them better now and new opinions have been formed in their minds regarding our country and our people. Let us encourage this friendly feeling—it can be best accomplished by more frequent visits between the people of North and South America. Broadened ideas and increased business will surely follow. No nation can live alone and flourish, but by the expansion of commerce and friendly trade relations with our neighbors can we best succeed.

"General Grant once remarked that action and not knowledge was power—and that action guided with knowledge produced the greatest results. Your delegation just returned, possess the knowledge of how best to secure a larger portion of the enormous South American business which is today going to foreign countries—and with this knowledge and proper action on the part of our merchants—millions of dollars worth of profitable business can yearly be turned our way.

"As a Chamber of Commerce it seems to me we should ask the cooperation of similar trade organizations throughout the United States to

ELLEN WINS SERIES

Boston Club Retains the Quincy Cup

Morning R ce Won By Tern

The races Thursday off Marblehead for the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup resulted in a victory for the Tern in the morning and for the Ellen in the afternoon. The win of the Ellen was her third and ended the series this year and the cup will remain in the keeping of the Boston club for another year.

It is unfortunate that an error in the measurement of the sails of the Harpoon prevented her from participating in the races. She is a new boat built this year and with ex-Commodore Adams as her guiding spirit there was a good chance of the cup being returned to Quincy. Mr. Adams however naturally felt disgusted that after having been given a certificate that his sails were all right, to be informed at the last minute almost that a mistake had been made. As stated it seems a little queer that Prof. Edwards should make the same mistake two years in succession and both years with the Harpoon.

If it had been some other boat in which the arror had been made, there is no question but what Mr. Adams would have used his best effort to have the races postponed a day in order that the changes necessary might be made. Unfortunately however all yachtsmen are not as thorough sportsmen as Mr. Adams.

The morning race Thursday was over a triangular race of 11 miles. The Cima was the first of the four yachts to get across at the start being followed by the Tern, Ellen and Chance. But on the second run the boats changed position somewhat. The Tern however held the lead she had at the start and won the race.

In the afternoon race the yachts had the best sailing breeze of the week. As the Chance had failed to run a race she was eliminated from further races leaving the Ellen with two wins and the Cima and Tern with one win each to fight it out.

Almost from the start in this race the Ellen broke away from the other two yachts and with the strong breeze showed her superiority over the other boats in a heavy wind. At the first turn the Ellen had a good

ACCIDENT AT RUBBER MILLS

William Bassett Lost His Left Arm in Press

The left arm of William Bassett of Randolph was twisted off at the elbow at the Monatiquot Rubber Mills at Braintree on Thursday afternoon and he was taken to the Quincy City Hospital, where it was found necessary to remove nearly four more inches of it.

Fellow employees rushed to his assistance when he cried from the pain. The arm was drawn between the rollers before the power could be shut down. Bassett was feeding the big rolling press when the accident occurred.

Dr. C. W. Gould and Dr. J. W. Watson of Braintree were summoned and ordered him removed to the hospital. He was immediately operated upon and this morning is doing as well as could be expected.

Bassett is a resident of Randolph, going there from Plymouth about three weeks ago. He is 18 years of age. The accident was the fifth of its kind to happen within three years.

CASH BAIL FORFEITED

William Smith Defaulted in Court Today

The police are of the opinion that William Smith of 101 Sumner street, whose cases were to have come up before the district court this morning, has skipped. Smiths place was raided by the police Sunday and the following day Smith was arraigned in court on four complaints, viz. drunkenness, assault, keeping and exposing liquor and with keeping a disorderly house. The cases were continued and Smith deposited $150 cash bail for his appearance. Thursday the police received word that he would probably not show up in court today and therefore were not surprised when his name was called that he did not answer. He was then defaulted and the bail was ordered forfeited to the commonwealth.

Word was received at the police station Thursday afternoon that two boys were stealing a boat at Adams shore and the police auto was sent down. No arrests were made.

COST OF HINGHAM BRIDGE

Norfolk County Is Assessed

Also the Street Railway

John F. Merrill, Walter H. Faunce, George E. Smith, Charles Paine, and William S. McNeary, the commissioners having in charge the building of the new bridge over the Weymouth Back river between North Weymouth and Hingham, which was opened to the public last April, have filed their statement as to the cost of the construction of the bridge which has been accepted by Judge Pierce of the Superior court. The cost of the bridge amounted to $102,549.

The new bridge was made necessary by the establishment of the government magazine up the river the government considering the old bridge an unreasonable obstruction to navigation.

An attempt was made to have the government bear a portion of the expense of the bridge and a bill was passed by congress appropriating $50,000 but was given a pigeon hole veto by President Taft.

In 1912 the legislature passed an act authorizing the construction of the bridge at a cost not exceeding $80,000, and provided that it should contain a draw not less than fifty feet wide.

The act provided that in the first instance the cost should be borne by the Commonwealth and the counties of Plymouth and Norfolk, and after its completion the cost of the bridge should be apportioned as follows: Commonwealth 45 per cent, Plymouth county 20 per cent, Norfolk county 20 per cent and the street railway 15 per cent.

It also provided that the cost of maintenance after construction should be borne by the counties of Plymouth and Norfolk and the street railway, each paying one third. The street railway is also to pay for the care of its tracks and the planking between its tracks.

When the plans for the new bridge were made, and estimates of the cost obtained, it was found that the sum of $80,000 authorized by chapter 739 of the acts of 1911 would not be sufficient and an act was passed by the legislature of 1912 increasing the sum to $105,000.

The act of 1912 also extended the time for the building of the bridge from twelve to eighteen months.

These matters of course delayed the work on the new bridge and the commonwealth was liable to a penalty for not commencing work sooner.

It will be seen by the above that the City of Quincy has not as yet been called upon to pay any part of the cost of the bridge but will get its assessment through the county tax, probably next year. Twenty per cent of $102,549.00 is $20,509.80.

An attempt was made at the start to saddle the entire cost onto the towns of Weymouth and Hingham and the City of Quincy but City Solicitor McAnarney and the counsel of the towns of Weymouth and Hingham succeeded in getting the counties to bear the expense instead of fixing the cost directly upon a few places.

BRIEFS

Miss Margaret Stewart of the Currier Market has returned from a short visit at Bath Maine.

A race for classes B. C. E. and F and launches will be held under the auspices of the Quincy yacht club Saturday.

Chief Litchfield of the fire department and Chief Burrell of the police department attended the annual outing of the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Associaion at Nahant on Thursday.

The Reds lost to the Blues in a bowling match at the Valgin alleys Wednesday evening, 487 to 481. The winners were John Sutherland and Miss Jennie Boutilier. The losers were Miss Grace Cairns and George Boutlier.

MRS. BOYNTON SEEKS DIVORCE

Charges Cruel and Abusive Treatment in 1910

Another chapter in the affairs which for several months have exercised the Park and Downs church has been started by the filing at Dedham by Mrs. Helen Theresa Willett Boynton, wife of Chester A. Boynton, a libel for divorce from her husband on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. In her allegation she specifies an assault upon her on or about Nov. 12, 1910, which was about the time that Rev. Mr. Ayers was ordered out of the house in which all three were living at Wollaston Park.

The Boyntons were brought into prominence by the suit of Boynton against Rev. William B. Ayers, pastor of the Park and Downs church, for $10,000 for alienation of Mrs. Boynton's affections, alleging that the minister had broken up his home after joining the Boynton household as a boarder.

The suit was pending some time before it actually came to trial and the trial was a sensational one. Boynton however lost the suit. Pastor Ayers and Mrs. Boynton, in defence of the former, denied the allegations, declaring that the whole trouble was on account of Boynton's attentions to a choir girl at the church of which both Mr. and Mrs. Boynton were members.

After losing his suit Boynton was expelled from the Park and Downs church, and denied by the congregation a letter of recommendation to the church at Revere to which place he moved after breaking with his wife.

The church council also excoriated Boynton and exonerated the pastor, and retained him in the pulpit, although a high Congregational tribunal, the Suffolk South Council allowed Boynton to enter the Winthrop church without the letter of recommendation.

Mr. and Mrs. Boynton were married at Wollaston Aug. 6, 1907, and have no children.

What Is the Foy Standard?

The Foy Standard is what may fairly be called the economic standard

If we took a few cents out of the quality of our groceries and meats and sold something a little "cheaper" they would be worth very much less than they are now.

We have the very finest food products that can be bought and by trading with FOY you secure the utmost satisfaction for your money.

In economics there is what is called the law of diminishing returns; that in all nature a point is reached where it is not possible to produce better results per dollar or per unit of energy expended, whether by curtailing or adding to the gross expenditure of money or power.

In food products we hold all the year round to this safe level, thus offering the people the greatest value for their money.

China has that Mexican feeling.

Empty is the purse, vacation's gone.

Still some of the newspapers act as if they had a special contract to "lecture Bryan."

Drowning after drowning. We do not need a "safe and sane Sunday."

Nearly everybody is willing to concede that the earth revolves around the sun, but when the astronomers insist that the sun is farther from the earth in summer than in winter they pursue a perspiring populace too far.

MIGRATION TO CANADA.

Speaker Champ Clark is taking up the question of northward emigration, which he notes is costing this country millions in cash, not to speak of the loss of citizenship. In one recent week, he says, 1,845 farmers crossed the line to settle in West Canada.

But the drift is not all one way. Fifty-five thousand Canadians crossed to this country last year. The purchase for Canadian settlement of a $1,365,000 ranch at Midland, Texas, was a recent straw.

With lands on the American side at $100 an acre more or less, while fat soil has been going in Canada for next to nothing, a population undertow was inevitable for a time. But as always happens, the cream has been skimmed today by the more far sighted and adventurous.

The American farmer who goes north now should carefully examine the price he pays in directions other than money. There is first that of climate. Regina has a mean winter temperature of zero. This means more than mere physical discomfort. It involves all the social isolation of a snow bound country.

In the western provinces the machinery of civilization is in a more rudimentary stage. The facilities for the education of children must be comparatively low. Prosperity in raising wheat is a fine thing. But one would better pay a little more for his wheat, if he is raising a family of children under conditions that will do the most for their success.

There seems to be only two respects in which Canada "puts it over" on Uncle Sam. One is cheap land. That condition will soon pass. The other is that of order and enforcement of law. It is said that of 634 crimes of violence in the four western provinces in a recent period, 463 met with punishment from the courts. Easy going Uncle Sam can show no such record as that. He must be willing to learn from his neighbor in this one respect where he is weak.

DAY TRIP OF 235 MILES

Quincy Point Party Go To Springfield and Back

Thursday, an ideal day for motoring, saw many parties leave for distance trips, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Yule of Quincy Point who motored to Springfield and back, over 235 miles. In their Michigan 40 was Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd R. Moeser, Douglas Yule, Miss Catherine Yule and Stephen Yule. They started at 7 A. M. and arrived at noon. While there they were the guests of the superintendent of the electric works and also visited C. B. Yule, manager of the Capital Hotel. The return was made between the hours of 4.30 and 9.30. Nothing unfortunate occurred during the trip.

FUNERAL OF MR. WOOD.

Funeral services for Lorenzo Wood, Jr., were held at his late home 130 Upland road, this afternoon. The services were conducted by the Rev. Benjamin A. Wilmott of the Bethany Congregational church, of which the deceased was a member.

"Lead Kindly Light," "Passing out of the Shadow," and "Nearer My God to Thee," the last hymn being a favorite of Mr. Wood, were rendered by Mrs. Emma S. Moore and Mrs. Ella Raymond Bates.

The abundance of beautiful floral offerings testified to the love and esteem in which Mr. Wood was held. Four of his personal friends Frank W. Crane, Abbott L. Melcher, Frank P. Larkin and Walter E. Blanchard officiated as bearers. The burial was at the Village cemetery at Weymouth.

Mr. Wood was a very unassuming man of simple tastes, but all his friends recognized his sterling worth and it may truthfully be said of him:

"None knew him but to love him,
Nor named him but to praise."

HARDLY SANITARY.

George E. Pfaffmann, chairman of the park commissioners upon learning that the boys using the Ward Three playground had filed a petition with the Board of Health asking that the sanitary conditions be bettered, called there Thursday afternoon to personally see whether the conditions as stated in the petition were correct.

From remarks passed while he was at the field he commended the boys for bringing the conditions to the board's attention. He found that the brook was filled with mud which blocked its usually free outlet, and that cesspools in the immediate vicinity had overflown the tops and drained onto the swing corner.

AUTO ACCIDENT.

An automobile accident in which Quincy people figured occurred about 6.30 Thursday on the Blue Hill parkway, Milton. A machine which was operated by Mrs. Harry Bentley skidded and struck a tree. Mr. Bentley, who was a passenger, was thrown forward and his knee went through the glass wind shield. He received a small cut which required one stitch. When the accident occurred the machine was proceeding at a moderate rate of speed. The machine was slightly damaged but was taken home under its own power.

Kissing Is Dangerous; It Transfers Disease

By Dr. J. BAIRD MORTON,
Medical Superintendent of the Bury and District Joint Hospital Board of England

I THINK milk from tuberculosis cattle, ill ventilated houses, the congested areas in the poor parts of a district, insufficient food and bad conditions of employment are the chief causes of consumption.

AT THE SAME TIME KISSING IS POSITIVELY DANGEROUS AND TRANSFERS DIPHTHERIA AND INFECTIOUS SORE THROATS. I WOULD NOT GO SO FAR AS TO SAY THAT IT IS A FILTHY HABIT EXCEPT IN CASES WHERE PEOPLE HAVE VERY DECAYED TEETH.

The habit NEVER WILL BE STOPPED, though kissing on the lips is a habit that most certainly is to be avoided for health reasons, and it is an interesting sign of the times that seventy per cent of those who kiss each other offer their cheeks and not their lips. Sweethearts kiss on the lips; but, of course, no matter what is said, Cupid will have his way.

Among the upper and middle classes, where the surroundings are usually most favorable, kissing is very freely indulged in, and yet the rate of consumption is much less than in the slums. This proves my contention that other causes than kissing are responsible very largely for consumption.

But long after consumption is banished, if ever it is, KISSING WILL BE IN VOGUE, though less common than at present, and if not in broad light or the glare of the sunshine the habit will flourish at a temperature of two in the shade.

BULGARS ROUTED AT TERRIBLE COST

Greeks Lose 2000 Killed and 6000 Wounded In Battle

London, Aug. 1.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondents with the Greeks at Salonica describe the recent battle between the Greeks and Bulgarians in the Djuma district as the most hotly contested and sanguinary of the war.

The Bulgarians, the correspondents say, reinforced by 50,000 men who had been withdrawn from the Servian frontier, made an unexpected attack on the Greek left wing. The fight raged for two days, with varying successes, but victory finally rested with the Greeks, who recaptured their lost positions.

The Greek losses were 2000 killed, including many officers, and between 6000 and 7000 wounded.

FITCHBURG'S NEW BRIDGE

City Authorities Will Investigate Alleged Crumbling of Piers

Fitchburg, Mass., Aug. 1.—Following the reports that piers of the new Harvard bridge are in a crumbling condition, due to the use of too much sand in the concrete mixture, Chairman Monahan of the street commission says an immediate investigation will be made to ascertain whether the city has been mulcted.

City Engineer Davis viewed the bridge and said he did not believe that there is any crumbling of the piers and that the alleged defect is nothing more than a flaking off of a scum which ran down from the top of the piers and caked around the base.

WITHHOLDS GLAD HAND

Boston, Aug. 1.—James H. McKibben, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, declared that the plan to have the chamber give a dinner to Howard Elliott, the new president of the New Haven, was an admirable one, but that before it was decided upon the chamber wanted more information as to what policy the new management was going to pursue.

"We want to know more of what we're shouting about before we begin shouting," he said.

SHOOTS WIFE AND SELF

Man 82 Years Old Kills Woman of 88 During Domestic Quarrel

Montville, Conn., Aug. 1.—Alberi Rogers shot and killed his wife at their home here and then attempted to end his life with the same weapon, a 32-calibre revolver. Rogers is 82 years old and his wife was 85.

The shooting is said to have been the result of a quarrel, although insanity, it is thought, may have been a contributory cause. Rogers is expected to die.

PATERNALISM OF UNCLE SAM FEATURE OF LIFE ON ISTHMUS

Panama Zone Happiest and Best Cared For Community In World.

Government Takes a Hand In Everything, Even Household Affairs.

LANDING on the Panama canal zone from the spacious decks of a government owned steamer, riding on a government owned railway, stopping at a government owned hotel and reading a government owned newspaper of life on the canal zone as conducted almost in its entirety under government auspices, one is led to inquire: Has the United States government gone into socialistic paternalism in that locality, and, if so, has it been a success? So far as any evidence has ever been offered on the subject, writes Leroy T. Vernon in the Chicago Daily News, either in the hearings before congressional committees or in the personal observations of members of congress, the American colony at Panama, barring petty jealousies of an official nature, has been the happiest and best cared for community on this globe.

A perusal of a copy or two of the Canal Record, the official organ of the Isthmian canal commission, published under the authority and supervision of that body, which furnishes one copy free to all employees of the canal and the Panama railroad who are on the "gold" payroll, shows beyond dispute the activity of the government in the everyday life of the canal zone inhabitants. Substantially every want is met by the government, which fixes the price of food, hotel rates, railroad rates and electricity and provides churches, schools, clubhouses and places practically all government property at the convenience of the canal zone inhabitants whenever occasion demands.

Canal Medals.

The issue of the Canal Record of June 18, besides the news of progress in the construction of the canal, contained a list of the canal employees who during that week were eligible to receive canal medals for service on that great work or additional gold bars marking another year of service on the part of the older employees. It contained obituary notices and promulgated the fact that the treasury department had consented to the customs examination of household goods of employees leaving the zone in order that they might not be delayed upon their arrival at an American port.

The column of "social life" proclaimed the fact that for fifty years Christ church, on Colon beach, built by the original Panama Railway company, still remained the official church of that road, now, however, resting in the control of the American church. A list of the societies connected with the church and their varied activities was set forth.

Among the official circulars carried in the issue was one fixing officially the rates at the Hotel Tivoli, operated by the commission. These rates were officially signed by the subsistence officer of the canal commission and fixed the prices to be paid per room by the day, week and month, besides setting forth the rates, with or without meals, for meals only and the "tea room service," where tea is daily served between 3 and 6 p. m., just as in any first class American hotel. Special rates for employees of the canal are made wherever possible. The last page contains the items from the commission clubhouses at Culebra, Empire, Gorgona and Gatun, showing that moving picture shows, tenpins, pool, glee clubs, volley ball courts, tennis, gymnasiums, running tracks, indoor and outdoor baseball and teachers of Spanish are provided to attract the employees of the commission within their influence.

Celebrating the Fourth.

A week later the Canal Record showed how generally the government had extended its aid to make the Fourth of July celebration one long to be remembered on the zone. Practically every committee was composed of canal employees, including those high in rank in the service. Among the notable steps taken were the utilization of the government ships Ancon and Colon as resting places for the women and children; likewise the Christobal schoolhouse, the government hotels and the Y. M. C. A. buildings. The commissary department made a parcel check room out of one of its storehouses; lemonade and ice water were served free at street stations; dressing rooms were set aside at the swimming beaches, and the police notified all bathers that they would call them in time to see the aquatic sports; maps of the city were distributed to all in order that they might find their way about easily and locate their friends; an orchestra was provided for dancing on the ocean piers, the fireworks were supervised by an army captain, and a special train service for the day was arranged to suit the convenience of the population. Substantially all that was required of the canal employees was their presence upon this gala occasion, and the government did the rest.

In the same issue the commission set forth the rates for electric power on the zone, whether for family or commercial purposes. The object of the commission was to furnish the service at cost, and a sixteen candle power light, including all renewals of the lamp, was advertised for 30 cents a month. Enough power to run a fifteen horsepower engine will be furnished on the canal until further notice for $50 a month.

"Market Prices."

Upon the arrival of the food ships from American ports it is the practice of the commission to set forth the "market prices" in Panama, and these prices remain fixed to the employees until officially changed. They are fixed so as to cover the cost of the provisions to the government. The item in the issue of June 25 read as follows:

| | Cents. |
|---|---|
| Celery, per head | 11 |
| Lettuce, per pound | 12 |

"These are articles placed on sale in the last week."

Throughout the issues of the commission newspaper appear at all times encouraging words relative to the work on the canal and the "human touch" as exemplified in marriage notices, personal items and praise of this or that shovel crew which during the last week or month "broke all records for excavation" on the canal. Each month the paper prints the aggregate record of work done on the canal the month previous, and each month this record shows the "estimated" amount of excavation growing smaller and the aggregate amount of filling and concrete work growing larger. The influence of a family newspaper like the Canal Record upon those whose deeds it records, with the activity of the government itself in all matters affecting their personal welfare, will doubtless cause many Americans now in Panama to regret the day when the canal itself is finished and their work is done.

DREAD LAST MAN'S BANQUET.

No Survivor of Company B, First Minnesota, Wants to Dine Alone.

The "last man's banquet" has just been held at Stillwater, Minn. Eight men attended, and twenty-three vacant chairs, draped in black, occupied places at the table, on which rested a cedar chest containing a bottle of champagne.

Some day, when death has reduced the veterans of Company B, First Minnesota, to one man, this survivor will attend the annual banquet, and after calling the roll he will drink to the memory of his thirty gallant comrades who fought shoulder to shoulder with him at Bull Run and at Gettysburg.

The sentimental custom began in 1886, when Louis Hospes, father of one of "the boys," presented the wine on condition that the bottle remain unopened until the "last man's banquet."

"That last banquet is going to be far more heartrending than any of our battlefield scenes," said one of the veterans. "And none of us hopes to hear the cork pop."

Lane Asks For $50,000.

Secretary Lane of the department of the interior has asked the senate and house committees on public lands for a deficiency appropriation of $50,000 to be used in facilitating the disposition of 2,209 land appeal cases which have accumulated in his department.

NAMES TWO GOOD ROAD DAYS

Missouri Governor Expects Free Work Up to $1,500,000 In Value.

Governor Major of Missouri has issued a proclamation setting apart Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 20 and 21, as public holidays, to be known as "good road days." Every ablebodied man in the rural districts and city of the state is to put in these days working upon the public highways.

The governor asks that all ordinary business be suspended and that wherever possible the men put in full time on the permanent improvement of the roads, dragging, ditching or making culverts or bridges or whatever will tend to accomplish the greatest good.

Women in the rural districts are requested to aid by furnishing the volunteer workers with lunches and encouraging them with their presence and good cheer.

The governor estimates that work approximating $1,500,000 in value will result.

Trip For Columbus' Bones.

Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, who recently returned to Washington after a trip to the West Indies, as a result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Haiti suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus, which are at Santo Domingo city, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama canal.

Morton T. Kelsey of Washington street is at Potton Springs, Quebec, for three weeks. He will return about Aug. 17.

Renewed athletic activities are promised under the direction of George Eaton, the physical director of the Cunningham gym. His hand was shown a week ago when he installed a set of sand bumps for the children. The chute is 12 ft. by 20 ft. and is swarmed with children daily. The board of trustees plan to devote more time than ever to the successful maintenance and upkeep of the gym and additional equipment will be secured. Jesse E. Baxter of East Milton who is now chairman is devoting much time to a plan of work during the coming season.

NUMBER PLEASE.

Telephone users have noticed that since Thursday, the telephone operators have been using a new form of response when asking for the number with which the calling party desires to speak. The old way has been to put the query "Number?" with a rising inflection. The new form is "Number, please?" This operating feature has been adopted by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company beginning on the first of August. The two-word query will undoubtedly be more pleasing to the ear, and the addition of the polite word please to the questioning "Number?" will give a fresh touch of courtesy to the service to which the public will respond with a similar spirit.

work jointly with us through our National Government for needed reforms which will assist the development of American Commerce with South America.

"Among these suggestions are:

"A chain of American Banks.

"A ship subsidy for American ships.

"Direct cable service.

"Government buildings for our diplomatic corps.

"Additional consuls and a reasonable wage to permit our foreign representatives to maintain the dignity of their position.

"Lower duties for our exports.

"North American made goods will sell on their merit and in large quantities to our receptive friends in Latin American countries if you will but heed the suggestions so often made, some of which are as follows:

"Select men to represent you who can speak the native tongue and who are familiar with Latin American customs.

"Write letters in the language of the people you intend to do business with.

"Put sufficient postage on letters and see they are properly addressed, ignorance of these matters is not excusable.

"Have catalogued price lists printed in Spanish or Portuguese according to the country they are being mailed to.

"Study your customers needs— be familiar with duties and freight rates on the merchandise you are offering for sale.

"Pack goods securely with extra heavy cases—and have cases lined with waterproof material, if dampness or moisture affect your goods.

"Do not pack goods in too bulky packages—follow carefully the directions laid down—the buyer knows better than you what he wants and there is always a sufficient reason for any request regarding packing and shipping.

"Ship goods K. D. if ordered and above all things ship goods when promised and strictly as agreed—any old thing will not answer—and if you send a substitute for the thing ordered, although it may be a more costly article it will not meet with approval.

"Don't change styles too often—transportation is slow and when a dealer builds up a trade on a certain article—be good enough to show your appreciation of his demands by filling his orders exactly as he directs.

"Use but one set of numbers on a shipment and see that invoices and bills of lading exactly correspond to the serial numbers. Confusion in checking off cases in the custom house will then be avoided.

"If goods are shipped through commission house, have them conform to your numbers and not add a new series of their ow nto the case of shipments. Consider carefully the advisability of a direct representative and extend credits when possible to meet foreign competition."

Other speakers were Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, ex-Mayor James Logan of Worcester, and Thomas F. Anderson. Vice President J. Randolph Collidge, Jr., presided.

AVERY HEARING.

The investigation by Mayor Stone of the shoting of Fracis Gilraine by Officer Avery will probably be concluded tonight. One session has been held and witnesses examined. Gilraine who is at the Quincy City Hospital will not be able to be present. His condition is now favorable to a speedy recovery but it is believed that he will be crippled.

Allison Marsh of Irving place, whose work while captain of the heavy gym team at Amherst earned him the post of physical director at that college, will in all probability take charge of the Ward Two playground in place of Russell Bates who has signed up with the Halifax base ball team for the balance of the season. Mr. Marsh has a fine athletic record and if he accepts will be a most valuable acquistion to the corps now in charge of the supervised playgrounds.

FORECASTING WEATHER.

Now that the vacation season is in full swing, a few simple hints may prevent possible drenchings on outings and picnics when the clouds are in the sky, says a writer in the New York Press. Yet clouds do not necessarily mean rain; in fact they mean quite the reverse in a good many cases. Clouds, indeed, will tell you more about the coming weather than any other sign, provided you thoroughly understand the meaning of the clouds you see.

The three chief types of clouds are the cirrus, stratus and cumulus.

When cirrus clouds lie in long, straight wisps from west to east, then be sure that rain is coming. When they float at a lower level than usual they become what is known as cirrocumulus, small, round masses arranged in groups or lines, giving the appearance known as mackerel sky, is one of the oldest and truest of weather proverbs.

A mackerel sky
Not twenty-four hours dry

The nimbus cloud is a mixture of all three of the chief types of clouds. It is a dark, shapeless cloud, with ragged edges, as a rule, and floats about a mile high. From its surface it throws off cirrus clouds, known to sailors as scud, and the amount of rain that falls varies generally with the amount of scud.

Here are a few hints for foretelling the following day's weather: First of all look at the northwest for your weather. However threatening the sky may appear, if you see a bit of blue in the northwest you won't have a steady downpour. At the worst it will only be showery.

If the day has been very fine and the blue sky is suddenly speckled over in the evening with little curly clouds then look out for a change of weather. The longer they take to form the longer the time before the change comes about.

A red sun in the early morning is a bad sign, for there will be wet weather before the next 24 hours are over. Though the sky at sunrise may be absolutely cloudless, yet if the eastern horizon is red or orange, the clouds will roll up and rain probably will fall before nightfall.

Evening red and morning grey.

Two sure signs of one fine day, is another pretty safe rule.—Boston Herald.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CAPITOL STORMED BY SUFFRAGISTS

Present Petitions Demanding That Their Sex Get Vote

Washington, Aug. 1.—"Votes for Women" were demanded by delegates from every state in the union, who besieged the senate chamber and bombarded the senators with petitions bearing thousands of signatures, urging consideration of a woman suffrage constitutional amendment.

The siege of the senate followed a demonstration in the course of which hundreds of women paraded from Hyattsville, Md., through the country roads and the city streets, down Pennsylvania avenue, and through the Capitol grounds.

Members of the senate woman suffrage committee, which already has favorably reported the suffrage amendment, met the petition bearers and rode to the Capitol with them.

BULLET PIERCES HIS HEART

Contractor Killed by Workman Whom He Had Discharged

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 1.—Nicholas Biafere, a paving contractor of this city, was shot and killed here on the street.

The police say Joseph Morano was discharged by Biafere for reporting late for work and that, after having angrily demanding his pay he whipped out a revolver and shot his employer, the bullet piercing the heart.

Death of "Silver Bill" Riley

Chicago, Aug. 1.—"Silver Bill" Riley, known to gamblers as the "squarest sporting man" of all the race track and poolroom fraternity, died at the Lakeside hospital. He was rated a millionaire when he quit gambling activities in 1888. He was almost penniless when he died.

Telephone Girls Save Lives

MAY BE HIDDEN ON PIER ESTATE

Where Mrs. Hanan Expects Stolen Gems Will Be Found

A SERVANT UNDER SUSPICION

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 1.—Warrants for the arrest of the persons responsible for the big jewelry robberies in which about $200,000 worth of loot was taken from the summer homes of John H. Hanan of New York and Charles C. Rumsey, son-in-law of the late E. H. Harriman, will be secured by Chief of Police Caswell as soon as asked for by the private detectives working on the case. The local police have been eliminated from the case so far as active work is concerned and the detectives and agents of the losers are doing what is being done.

Mrs. Hanan, who is the society leader of the summer colony here, says she expects her jewels will be returned to her. Search of her estate for the missing valuables continues. Members of the family feel that the stolen goods are hidden on or about the grounds of the palatial Hanan home, which is known as Shore Acres. The grounds were searched and not only the persons of the twenty-two servants were searched, but also their belongings.

The most valuable clue which the detectives have to work on in the Hanan case is the fact that the robber, for some sentimental or religious reason, did not take a valuable, gem-studded relic. As the article was worth much more than many of the things that were taken, the detectives are convinced that the person who committed the robbery did not touch this religious relic for fear that the wrath of God would descend upon her. One female servant is suspected as the real thief or the accomplice.

The Rumsey robbery is more baffling than the Hanan one and all who are working on the cases agree that everything points to the fact that they are separate and distinct jobs. The Rumsey job looks more like a professional one.

"I am ready to issue warrants in these cases as soon as they are asked for by anyone, but my position is like that of the fellow who loads the gun for someone else to fire. I don't know yet whether Mrs. Hanan lost a diamond brackett (whatever that is) or a pair of old skates or old shoes. I tried to find out what she lost, but I don't know yet. But I am ready and willing to do what I can."

C. C. Tegethoff, agent of the E. H. Harriman estate, to whom all inquiries regarding the Rumsey robberies were referred, refused to say anything further about the case.

DIES DESPITE SACRIFICES

Blood From Veins of Friends Fails to Save Life of Middleton

New York, Aug. 1.—Five offerings of blood by members of the wealthy Middleton family failed to save the life of Leighborne Middleton, who died yesterday afternoon.

For ten days he had been at death's door with aplastic anaemia or poverty of the blood, which frequent transfusions were unable to appease. His father, brother, wife, cousin and a college mate all poured their blood into his veins within ten days.

Middleton was first stricken while on his wedding trip two months ago. His bride gave 15 percent of her blood supply and his mother wanted to add a quantity of her blood to that alreay sacrified, but physicians forbade it.

BIGAMIST AND FORGER

Southwick Will Spend Sixteen Months In House of Correction

Boston, Aug. 1.—Willard T. Southwick, 25, dishonorably discharged from the United States navy, was sent to the house of correction for sixteen months by Judge Murray in the municipal criminal court.

Southwick got a year for bigamy and four months for forgery. He admitted his guilt on both complaints. Southwick was married three times in two years.

"Father" of French Deputies Dead

Gisors, France, Aug. 1.—Deputy Louis C. P. Passy, "father" of the chamber of deputies and an eminent archaeologist and antiquary, died here in his 83d year.

Famous Seismologist Dead

Isle of Wight, Aug. 1.—Professor John Milne, the seismologist, died yesterday afternoon. He was the greatest earthquake authority in the world.

Fourteen Deaths From Heat

Detroit, Aug. 1.—Fourteen deaths attributed to excessive heat were reported to the health board yesterday. Of the victims ten were young children.

WORLD RECORD AT BOWLING

Paul Poehler Rolls 595 in Five Strings

Although on a summer diet and training but little, Paul Poehler, the bowling champion, equaled the worlds five string record at Lawrence on Wednesday night by rolling 595. The total was made on the opening night of the new alleys at the English Social and Mutual Improvement Club. His best single was 127 and the others trailed shortly behind. The alleys were installed at a cost of about $8000 and Poehler was chosen as one of the few that could demonstrate what can be done with a small ball. In the duck pins his total went to 575.

AMBASSADOR'S SUGGESTIONS

Favorably Impress Senate Foreign Relations Committee

AT ODDS WITH THE PRESIDENT

Mexican Situation May Be Complicated Because of Administration's Unwillingness to Recognize Huerta Under Any Circumstances—Averse to Establishing Precedent

Washington, Aug. 1.—Serious friction between the senate foreign relations committee and President Wilson and his secretary of state may complicate the entire Mexican situation.

The senate committee was impressed by Ambassador Wilson's appeal for recognition of Huerta. The ambassador told the committee frankly that he did not think this country had any right to concern itself with any question of morals in this matter. He declared Huerta had the only actual government that could be seriously considered, and, by inference, severely criticised his immediate chiefs because they have refused to follow his suggestions.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan have taken the position that under no circumstances will they recognize Huerta. They consider his connection with the death of President Madero makes this impossible. The position of the administration is that to do so would establish a precedent, so that when any prominent man in any of the Central and South American countries becomes dissatisfied with the elected ruler he could kill him, set up a de facto government of his own, and demand American recognition.

The president is formulating a policy which, he told his callers, involved nothing that is not entirely friendly to Mexico. He has not yet announced what his program will be but he is emphatically and unalterably opposed to the recognition under any circumstances of the government set up by Provisional President Huerta through the events in which President Madero and Vice President Suarez met tragic deaths.

Armed Mexican Shot by Soldier

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 1.—Corporal Smith of Troop A, second cavalry, U. S. A., shot Ismael Monteros, a soldier, and Colonel Ortega's personal servant, at Tornillo Ford on the Rio Grande, as Monteros was attempting to cross the international boundary fully armed and on horseback.

The corporal's bullet cut a furrow in Monteros' scalp and felled him from his mount. The Mexican was attended by the army surgeon at Fabens, and is being held a prisoner, together with five other Mexicans and three wagon loads of provisions. They were attempting to cross to Ortego's camp.

Dr. Rashbaum, surgeon-major in Ortega's camp, promptly came here with a message from Ortega to the commanding officer of the United States troops in which the constitutionalist commander says he much regrets the incident and hopes to be exempt from responsibility, inasmuch as he has repeatedly instructed his men not to attempt to cross the river, under arms. Monteros is said to have drawn his pistol on the American soldier.

ANOTHER YEAR IN JAIL

Quinlan's Tongue Runs Loose While Out on Bail Pending Appeal

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 1.—Patrick Quinlan, Industrial Worker of the World leader, active in the recent silk workers' strike, was sentenced yesterday afternoon to serve a year in the county jail for saying at a Socialist meeting: "Elect a Socialist mayor and then you won't have cops like Bummy Ryan batting you over the head with a club."

Quinlan is now out on bail pending appeal from conviction and a two to seven-year sentence in state prison for inciting to riot during the strike. He said he would appeal yesterday's decision.

FREIGHT RATES CUT

Sweeping Reductions Are Ordered by the Commerce Commission

Washington, Aug. 1.—Sweeping reductions in through and class rates from Atlantic coast points to practically all Iowa cities were ordered by the interstate commerce commission in its decisions of what are known as the Mississippi river and the interior Iowa cities cases.

The reductions on the through rates average from 3 to 7 cents per hundred pounds, while the rates to the interior cities will be proportionately lower.

INVADING VENEZUELA

Castro's Forces Said to Be Working From Colombian Frontier

Bogota, Aug. 1.—Further reports were received here of the alleged activities of the adherents of Cipriano Castro, former president of Venezuela.

It is said, but unconfirmed, that Castro is back in his own country and that his followers, exiled by the anti-Castro faction, have invaded Venezuela from several points on the Colombian frontier.

From Willemstad came a report that the Castro people have seized the town of Coro. Another rumor is that the revolutionists made an unsuccessful attempt to take the town of Cristobal Colon.

STORM STAMPEDES HERD OF ELEPHANTS

Wreck Half of Circus Tent and Some Small Buildings

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 1.—During a severe electrical storm, a herd of eight elephants with a circus showing here broke loose from their stakes, wrecked half of the circus tents, damaged a number of small buildings in the vicinity and caused a panic in the neighborhood.

The elephants were captured a number of times, only to break forth again before finally being subdued by trainers with iron bars and pitchforks.

The animals destroyed thousands of circus seats, tore the canvas and overturned menagerie wagons, but no other animals escaped.

DEATH LIST OF SEVEN

Result of Cycle Crashing Into Pole and Scattering Blazing Fluid

Cincinnati, Aug. 1.—The list of dead as the result of the motorcycle accident at the Ludlow (Ky.) lagoon motordrome, when the gasolene tank on the racing machine of Olin Johnson exploded, and scattered the burning fluid over the spectators, has increased to seven.

Johnson, captain of the Cincinnati team which was contesting at the motordrome, for some reason that will probably remain unknown, drove his cycle to the extreme top of the circular track, crashed into an electric light pole, broke it off and the contact of the live wire with his machine exploded the gasolene tank, throwing the burning fluid over a score of spectators.

As Johnson hit the pole a stream of flame shot out over the audience and living torches ran here and there.

FOR MISUSE OF MAILS

Stock Swindlers Heavily Fined and Sent to Federal Prison

New York, Aug. 1.—For misuse of the mails in connection with the American Tanning company stock swindle, Adam Hoch, a chemist, will serve two years in the federal prison and pay a fine of $3500, and Eugene S. Robinson will serve four years and pay a fine of $8500.

Hoch and Robinson were convicted Wednesday on several indictments and sentenced yesterday afternoon.

TO FACILITATE CROP MOVEMENT

Millions to Be Deposited In Crop District Banks

IT WILL CHECK STRINGENCY

Prime Commercial Paper Will Be Accepted as Security In Order to Make Special Deposits Available, Thus Minimizing Usual Fall Tightness of Money—Statement by McAdoo

Washington, Aug. 1.—Twenty-five to fifty million dollars of government funds will be deposited in the national banks of the south and west at once by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to facilitate the movement of crops.

Federal, state and municipal bonds and prime collateral paper will be accepted as security for the money, upon which the banks will pay 2 percent interest.

For the first time in history the government will accept prime commercial paper as security for deposits. This privilege will be granted, announced the secretary, in order to make these special deposits available to the banks on securities readily within their reach.

The motive of McAdoo in establishing this new policy is to anticipate the money stringency in the late summer and fall which invariably accompanies the marketing and movement of crops, especially when the crops are unusually large, as the harvest now beginning forecasts. He intends to take time by the forelock and prevent or minimize the usual tightness of money.

In a statement last night the secretary made the significant announcement that government bonds would be accepted at par as security for the new deposits and that the additional money would be placed only with banks which have taken out at least 40 percent of their authorized circulation.

The United States 2 percent bonds, serving as security for most of the national bank circulation, have been depressed recently to new low market records, dropping to 95¾ during the past few days. The secretary's willingness to accept these bonds at par as security for the twenty five to fifty millions of promised deposits and the inducement to the national banks to increase their circulation up to the 40 percent limit is expected to help in restoring the parity of the depressed 2's by creating a new market for them.

"The commercial paper submitted," added McAdoo, "shall first be passed upon and approved by the clearing house committees of the cities in which the banks offering such paper may be located. All commercial paper and bonds must finally be passed upon and accepted by the secretary."

M'ADOO STANDS PAT

Believes Two Percent Bonds Worth Face Value as Securities

Washington, Aug. 1.—Friends of the administration currency bill are standing pat with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo on the secretary's criticism of New York bankers whom he suspects of having tried to manipulate the prices of 2 percent bonds.

The secretary has been swamped with letters and telegrams since issuing his statement but probably will not make a reply. He reiterated his firm purpose to call for no additional margins on the 2 percents, as he believes they are and will be worth their face value under any circumstances.

END OF REBELLION NEAR

Belief That Yang-Tse River Will Soon Be Cleared of Rebels

Pekin, Aug. 1.—With the fall of the forts at the mouth of the Yang-Tse river, which is believed here to be imminent, the Yang-Tse would be cleared of rebels, and it is thought the rebellion would then resolve itself into provincial outlawry, which soon could be terminated.

Reports from Shanghai say that Sun Yat Sen, former provisional president, still is there, but that General Chang Chi-men and General Huan Sing, two other leaders in the revolt, have fled.

WILL REMAIN IN CHICAGO

Mrs. Young Withdraws Resignation as Head of Schools

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Mrs. Ella F. Young, superintendent of Chicago public schools, who tendered her resignation a week ago because of friction with certain members of the body, has decided to retain her position.

This announcement was made after the newly organized school board had declined by the vote of 14 to 1 to accept her resignation.

More Weather Bureau Removals

Washington, Aug. 1.—R. E. Pollock, H. L. Heiskell and Daniel J Carroll, weather bureau officials implicated in the alleged political activity of former Chief Moore, which resulted in his dismissal, were removed from office.

AN IDEAL TWO STORY BUNGALOW.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

This bungalow plan has a den and living room across the front. Could be made into one large living room if desired. There is a bedroom and bath in the first story connected with a dressing room or sewing room. Second story has three chambers. Full basement under entire house. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet. Size, 26 feet wide and 40 feet deep over the main part. Finish in first story red oak or birch, pine to paint in second story. Birch or maple floors. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $3,500.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains about 250 up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

SULKY OVER CANAL TOLLS

Great Britain Declines to Participate In Panama Exposition

London, Aug. 1.—Great Britain has decided against participation in the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco in 1915. Notification of this determination of the British government was conveyed officially to Washington, the dispatch merely stating that Great Britain was not in a position to participate in the San Francisco exposition.

No reasons were given. Both the British foreign office and American Ambassador Page declined to discuss the matter or to reveal the cause of this reversal of the announcement made some time back that Great Britain had decided in principle to participate in the exposition.

It has been mooted for some time, however, that the dispute in regard to the Panama canal tolls might possibly lead to this result, and the present notification of non-participation is attributed to that cause.

WESTERN TROLLEYS SOLD

New York Promoters In Control of Many Lines In Massachusetts

New York, Aug. 1.—Sanderson & Porter, a trolley promotion and operating firm of this city, have purchased the western Massachusetts trolleys owned by the New England Investment and Security company. The New Haven railroad had guaranteed the dividends on the stock of the company, and this sale is looked upon as the initial step in the plan of the New Haven to divorce its trolley lines.

The roads included in the sale are the Springfield Street Railway, the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway, the Milford, Attleborough and Woonsocket Street Railway, the Attleborough Branch Railroad company, the Interstate Consolidated Street Railway company, and two leased lines of the Worcester, the Worcester and Webster and the Webster and Dudley Street Railway companies.

A Man Cannot Get a Wrong Thing in a Store Where They Are All Right

Any man who has so far hesitated about buying his Summer needfuls, and who has the smallest care for a cool, neat, comfortable appearance, should come here and see how much value he can get for his money.

Nowadays most men of sense prefer to be sure of things of full value than to be doubtful about merchandise on which somebody decides to say that there is a "saving" of "a fourth," "a third" or "a half."

Also they prefer to deal with a store where they are always sure of getting 100 per cent value for their money as against the store where there is one chance of getting something for almost nothing and ninety-nine chances of getting taken in.

For these men of sense we are ready to-day with the good things for men to wear and they are rightly priced—not too low priced to disgust any man.

WILL SEARCH QUARRY HOLE

For Body of Paul E. Dovel Who Is Missing

Nothing has been heard from Paul E. Dovell whose clothing was found on the banks of Wendell's quarry the first of the week, and the family have been convinced that his body will be found in the water there. When the clothing was first found it was believed that the man had not been drowned in the quarry hole but that he had gone to New York. What gave weight to this idea was the fact that nothing but his outer garments were found, and the impression was that he had changed his clothing leaving the discarded clothing to be found later.

It now appears however, according to the story told by his family, that none of his clothing is missing from his home and it is out of the question to think that he could have gone away in his undergarments.

There is a rumor that one of his customers presented him a few days previous with a box of clothing, but this story has not been verified.

In order to settle all doubts as to whether the body is in the quarry hole Mayor Stone has directed the police department to secure the services of a diver and have the quarry hole searched.

Thursday the police attempted to secure the services of a submarine diver but were unable to get one. Hiram Phillips who usually does the diving for the police department is out of town at the present time, and they were unable to secure the services of anyone else Thursday.

Today an attempt will be made to get a diver from the Fore River and if this is not possible a diver will probably be obtained from Boston.

Capt. Daniel R. McKay who has been investigating the disappearance of Dovell has come to the conclusion that his body will be found in the quarry hole.

It is said by some of his fellow workmen that Dovell had been talking of paying a visit to a sister in New York. It is understood that this sister has been communicated with and that he is not there.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the biggest novelties of the summer is promised for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in "The Pinafore Kiddies," a remarkable troupe of thirty singers, dancers and comedians in an up-to-date version of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera masterpiece, "Pinafore." There is no more popular operetta on the American and English stage than "Pinafore." At the time of its first production, it enjoyed a vogue equalled by few comic operas before of since, and even to this day is remains a prime favorite with audiences in this country and abroad. The production offered by the Pinafore Kiddies is a condensed version in one act of this famous masterpiece. The stage setting shows the deck of H. M. S. "Pinafore," and all the famous characters of the opera, including "Sir Joseph Porter," Captain Corcoran," "Ralph Rackstaw," "Dick Deadeye," "Bill Bobstay," "Josephine," and "Little Buttercup," not to speak of numerous sisters, cousins and aunts. This great feature will be but one attraction on a splendid bill. Nick' Skating Girls, a novel act from the European circuses, will make its first appearance in Boston, while Marie Fenton, "That Melody Maid," will present a brand-new repertoire of popular songs, besides wearing some beautiful gowns. Other strong features will be the Azard Brothers in hazardous equilibristics; Vessouii Trio of bar experts; Solly Brown and Sprague in a new singing act; and numerous other features as yet announced.

OFFICER AVERY'S HEARING

Dr. Huntings Evidence Important

As to Shooting of Gilraine

The second and final session of the investigation of the shooting of Francis Gilraine by Officer Avery was concluded by Mayor Stone last evening. One witness was introduced and Dr. N. S. Hunting and Dr. John H. Ash who responded from the High school told their story. City Solicitor McAnarney was present in an advisory capacity to Mayor Stone, and James E. O'Connell represented Gilraine. Officer Avery was present.

COLLAGAN TESTIFIES.

Mr. Collagan reviewed the start of the fight and said that Thomas McDonnell was the aggressor, but that he was knocked to the ground three times by Gilraine. When spectators interfered McDonnell remained sitting on the ground and Gilraine walked over to the wall and stood leaning against it.

Two officers then loomed up and the men separated, Gilraine going down Butler road, with Officer Avery and a conductor in pursuit. Both were running and I heard someone say "Shoot, Joe, shoot" and a shot was fired almost instantly.

When I reached Gilraine who was on the ground he said his leg was broken. I asked Avery why he shot him, but he didn't answer. The people then came from the High school, and an old man whose name I don't know slapped Avery on the back and asked why he shot, saying he saw the small distance separating them from the High school window.

In reply to questions by Mayor Stone, Mr. Collagan said he did not hear Officer Avery call to Gilraine to stop. He further said that he knew witnesses by sight who had seen the fight and the start of the chase.

In reply to Lawyer O'Connell he said there was nothing to prevent him from hearing the officer cry stop; that the revolver was fired immediately; and that Gilraine fell under an electric light.

According to Collagan, when Officer Avery reached the spot, he said, "I didn't shoot you, did I Frank? Collagan here remarked that it was funny the officer knew him then but not when chasing him.

DR. JOHN H. ASH.

Dr. Ash told of his leaving the High school upon hearing the groans and explained the position the man lay. He said he was not at the hospital when the operation was performed.

DR. N. S. HUNTING.

Dr. Hunting who helped place Gilraine in the ambulance said he only heard the shot. He was questioned by Mayor Stone.

Q.—Was there any possibility of the shot striking something and glancing into the hip?

A—It might strike anything.

Q—Would the bullet hole indicate that it had hit the ground?

A—I don't think there was anything about the wound that would tell one way or the other. The course of the bullet was downward, but it depended on the position of the leg when it struck..

Q—Then it is possible that it hit the ground and glanced up.

A—Yes.

Q—Do you think it probable?

A—I don't know. I can say that it was probable, but I think it was possible.

OFF ON MAIDEN TRIP

Battleship Rivadavia to Sail

Time Just Before Midnight

Plans have been completed for the departure of the Argentine battleship Rivadavia from the Fore River yard Sunday night on her maiden trip. As now planned the vessel will leave the yards about 10 o'clock and it is expected that she will pass through the draw about 11 o'clock. The topmast which surmounted the basket mast has been removed in order that the battleship may go under the Brooklyn bridge.

The battleship when she leaves the plant will be in charge of Capt. Joseph I. Kemp and other officials on board will be General Manager H. G. Smith, Vice President Harry Brown F. P. Wellington, Chief Electrician John J. Crain, and Chief Engineer Ralph L. Lovell. In addition to these there will be the entire Argentine commission and a large crew so that in all there will be nearly 1000 men on board.

All realize that it is to be no easy job to get the big vessel through the darw of the bridge. The opening in the bridge is 125 feet and as the beam of the Rivadavia is 95 feet it will be seen that she will have a leaway of less than fifteen feet on each side.

In order that Capt. Kemp may be able to see, it is planned to keep the searchlight of the vessel in constant use. In addition to this the buoys will be surmounted by a white flag and lanterns so that they can easily be picked up by the searchlight. Navigating the channel into Hull bay, and through Hull gut will be even more difficult than the bridge.

Once clear of the river and bay she will steam to Brooklyn navy yard, where she will go into dry dock, and it is estimated that about four days will be required to scrape her bottom plates. She will then return to Massachusetts water until her coal bunkers can be filled.

Then it is that President Bowles and possibly some of the other officials will board her and she will steam to the Rockland, Me., course where she will have her standardization trials. On arrival at Rockland she will be boarded by the United States Navy Board of Inspectors and Survey who will remain on board and conduct the trials.

Seldom if ever has a battleship in this country gone her trial trips with full equipment on board. The reason for this is that in the case of a United States vessel the government furnishes the equipment, such as guns, etc., but in the case of the Rivadavia the Fore River Co., furnished them and they are now all mounted in place.

Many have planned to be near the Fore River bridge Sunday night to see the vessel go out and the police are making plans to see that curiosity does not allow the spectators to get too near in case of accident of any kind. On the Weymouth side Chief Butler has detailed four officers for duty and everybody will be kept off the bridge.

While it is not expected that the vessel will hit the bridge, it will be a case of fine navigating to get her through, not because of her width so much as her length. As the relative weight of the battleship is 1000 pounds to 1 of the bridge it can be readily seen that should the battleship happen to hit the bridge in going through it means a new bridge or at least part of a new bridge.

LINEN SHOWER AT GERMANTOWN

Miss Louise Prout Remembered by Her Friends

A linen shower which was very enjoyable to all who participated was given Miss Louise Prout last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Hodgkinson 2 Bicknell street, Germantown. Barges met the electric car at Palmer street. John E. Greene contributed vocal solos, and Miss Ruth MacCullock and Miss Prout rendered piano selections. Dancing and games were enjoyed, and fancy ices and cake were served.

Among those present were Charles Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. David Morris, Miss Ruth McCullock of Malden, Miss Alice Duguid of Wellesley, Mrs. George Prout, Mrs. M. A. McDonald, Miss Ardelle McDonald, Miss Mabel Tibbetts Miss Jennie S. Norrie, Mrs. Mary Joss, Miss Alice Joss Miss Mary Connors, Mrs. Emma Lark, Mrs. Prout, Mrs. Emily Kelly, Mrs. Benjamin F. Hodgkinson, and Mrs. Benjamin F. Hodgkinson, Jr.

OPERATION WAS SUCCESSFUL

Thomas G. Smith Comfortable and on Road to Recovery

Thomas G. Smith of Washington street who has had trouble with his right leg for many years underwent another surgical operation Friday at the City Hospital, and is now reported as doing finely. Mr. Smith has had trouble with his leg ever since boyhood and last April he underwent an operation at the City Hospital. For a time the wound seemed to be getting on all right but recently other complications set in and after a consultation with specialist last week another operation was deemed necessary to save his life.

This was performed Friday morning, the leg being taken off just above the knee. He came out of the operation all right and Friday evening was reported as doing nicely, and this morning was reported as being comfortable, and his recovery is only a matter of time.

He has been a great sufferer with his leg for the past few weeks and for the past few days had been confined to his bed. His many friends hope for his rapid recovery.

CHURCH STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

St Chrysostoms Loss $1,000

Hours Work for Firemen

During the heaviest of the storm this morning a bolt of lightning struck the St. Chrysostom's church on Hancock street starting a fire which damaged the church to the extent of $1,000 before it was extinguished.

The bolt struck the lower part of the short cupola on the front of the church. It then ran down the base boards and followed alongside the building for a space of ten feet then followed a wire into the church.

The auditorium of the church is open finish, showing the roof timbers and rafters and the fire once inside ran up the roof and along the side of the interior.

It must have been burning some minutes before it was discovered for when the department arrived a brisk fire was in progress inside the edifice.

Someone near the Tubular Rivet plant discovered the fire and lost no time in sounding an alarm from Box 51. This was at 6.20 and called out the fighting force from Atlantic, and Wollaston as well as the auto chemical and steamer from the Central station.

The apparatus made good time and on the arrival of Chief Litchfield who arrived about as soon as the auto chemical from the Central Station, the building was surrounded. District Chief Nyhan of Atlantic had arrived with the apparatus from Atlantic and lines were immediately run from the hydrant directly in front of the church.

At this time the only evidence of the fire was the torn boards on the outside of the building for the bolt did not start the woodwork burning until it had spent its force on the inside.

As the firemen entered the building with their lines of hose it looked as though they had a stubborn fire to fight although, the fire was all apparently on the roof the flames not having reached the body of the church.

Several lines of hydrant and chemical hose were laid and it was an hours fight before the all out was sounded.

Considerable damage had been done to the building however, Chief Litchfield estimating the loss at $1,000.

The damage to the body of the church was almost entirely by water as all of the fire was in the open roof. It is thought that the damage was not of such a nature as to prevent services being held Sunday.

The all out sounded at 7.10.

TRIPLETS AT RANDOLPH

And Another Baby Born in the Same House

The generosity of the stork at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis of South Main street, Randolph is unusual. Four times within three days he has called making them the grandparents of three healthy boys and one girl. Tuesday, their daughter, Mrs. Otto. Page of Springfield became the mother of a girl baby, and Thursday triplets were born to another daughter, Mrs. Edwin W. Shaw of East Boston. Another son, 18 months old makes the home practically a nursery. These are the first triplets born at Randolph for many years.

QUINCY BOYS WIN

Awarded Scholarship At Technology

Were Graduated At High

Nathaniel Warshaw of Quincy and Richard J. Favorite of Wollaston were on Friday awarded full scholarship at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the former from the Second Worcester Senatorial district, and the latter from the First Norfolk Senatorial district. The other First Norfolk award went to R. G. Dickinson of Hyde Park. Both of the First Norfolk scholarships at Worcester Polytechnic Institute went to Hyde Park boys.

The scholarships are awarded by the State Board of Education to pupils in the public schools of the state, apportioned through the senatorial districts, who pass the requirements demanded by the two institutions.

In the case of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, where there are 40 full scholarships, the board has seen fit to divide most of them into half scholarships. There are 80 free scholarships at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology which have been awarded similarly.

Under the law that appropriated $50,000 to Worcester Polytechnic Institute and $100,000 to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with the understanding that so many scholarships be granted, it is conditioned

What Is the Foy Standard?

The Foy Standard is what may fairly be called the economic standard

If we took a few cents out of the quality of our groceries and meats and sold something a little "cheaper" they would be worth very much less than they are now.

We have the very finest food products that can be bought and by trading with FOY you secure the utmost satisfaction for your money.

In economics there is what is called the law of diminishing returns; that in all nature a point is reached where it is not possible to produce better results per dollar or per unit of energy expended, whether by curtailing or adding to the gross expenditure of money or power.

In food products we hold all the year round to this safe level, thus offering the people the greatest value for their money.

The country most in need of a little compulsory education is Mexico.

London is to have a $6,000,000 hotel, in which, we presume it may be possible to get a bath, and a meal with the aid of several, healthy tips.

Compared to Ban Johnson's power the Czar of Russia can't even take part in a rising vote.

The African in the Mexican woodpile appears to be a British Lord with an appetite for indigestible securities.

"What shall be done with our ex-presidents?" is fast becoming a momentous personal question to Mr. Huerta, of Mexico.

THE BLUE SKY LAWS.

So called "blue sky" laws have now been pending in 30 states. In 11 at least they are on the statute books. As the reader is no doubt aware, the name was given from the ability of slick promoters to sell securities in property no better than a mine of "blue sky."

The American people have been losing nearly $100,000,000 a year in frauds. While the new laws may contain foolish provisions that would hamper legitimate industry, the time has ceased when promoters can be allowed to peddle securities from door to door like turnips.

If the amount of money named above is lost in absolute fakes, probably a good deal more goes into projects that have some appearance of reality, but would never pass the scrutiny of a careful business man.

A company buys a piece of land that may be attractive. It lays out streets erects a few buildings, carves out house lots. It issues glowing circulars with pretty pictures. It has perhaps had to mortgage its entire property for all it is worth. Then it may sell stock in the equity, and issue "first mortgage" bonds on the stock.

Now if all the people who buy these bonds and stock have the faith to "sit tight," the proposition may be sound. If the land is well located, it may increase in value.

The essential weakness is partly in human nature. One day some one gets scared. If money is tight and the promoters have cut too close corners there is a demand for a show down. Suits and foreclosures follow. Soon the paper equity is wiped out. Few people who have small savings to invest analyze these conditions was any care. The "blue sky" law will shut out the worst of these projects. Many hazardous schemes will remain on which people must use some judgment.

ADAMS SHORE AND HOUGHS NECK

Many Enjoying the Seashore at Quincy Beaches

The Post Island and Adams Shore associations are both planning a Labor Day celebration. Residents recall with pleasure the gay times of past years.

A new soda fountain has been set in the store of Mrs. Charles Hayden of Sea street.

Harry Casey of Boston is visiting John Hallihan of Adams shore.

The family of R. E. Foy, the Quincy grocer is staying at Post Island.

Mrs. Mary Dwyer of Dorchester is the guest of Mrs. Thomas McCaigney of Albatross road.

Mr. and Mrs. C. JJ. Cook of New Hampshire are at the Mallard bungalow.

Mrs. Alice Bartlett of Swan road is visiting friends at Newton.

Miss Grace Manning was the guest of Miss Alice Reardon of Shelton road the past week.

Miss Helen Reardon of Adams Shore is staying with friends at South Attleboro.

Harry Johnson and Thomas Reardon found a motor boat adrift in the bay Friday. It was afterwards claimed by a Houghs Neck resident. Both were on the pier when the boat was sighted. When secured the boat was off Moon Island.

Joseph Bertani of Somerville, a summer colonist at Adams Shore, was summoned to Italy a few days ago because of the serious illness of his mother. Accompanying him were four brothers.

Mrs. Victor Terrio of Shelton road who sprained her ankle a few weeks ago is rapidly recovering from her injury.

Mrs. Laura Crossman and Mrs. Sally Crossman of Philadelphia are the guests of John Bell of Shelton road.

SHIPYARD WANTED.

The Board of Trade at Quebec, Canada, has forwarded a memorial to the minister of public works advocating building a modern steel shipbuilding plant at Levis in connection with the new dry dock that is to be built by Messrs. M. P. and J. T. Davis. The memorial points out that in order to insure the proper working of the dock it will be necessary to maintain a staff of competent shipbuilders and ship repairers and that these men must have constant work.

DUTCH SUPPER AT SQUANTUM

Unique and Enjoyable Social at Vacation House

One of the most successful socials ever held by the Squantum Improvement Association was the "Dutch Supper" at the Vacation House Wednesday evening, 125 being present.

The entertainment started with a selection of stirring music by the Squantum band, whose efforts were received with cheers and applause. The next number was a circle of songs rendered by William E. Harvey, who certainly made a hit with the audience, the latter joining in with a vim on the choruses. Mr. Harvey also acccompanied the band on the piano. The Squantum quartet sang several selections which were very well received, and they were recalled five or six times.. John Marden rendered selections on the harmonica, which were greatly enjoyed. A cornet duet was next, played by Fred Dawson and Charles Bostwick; the selection was most generously applauded. Charles Westlake gave clever impersonations and delighted the crowd with his singing.

About 9:30 the supper gong was sounded and a rush was made for the banquet hall, where the amiable cook, Hiram A. Morse, had prepared a feast of "hot dogs," cheese, doughnuts, sandwiches, coffee and ice cream. Three rousing cheers were given him in appreciation of his efforts and three cheers were given Mr. Eagar, chairman of the entertainment committee, who was assisted by John Marden, Charles Watts, Charles Singleton, James Foster, James Allen, Joseph Uppling, Harleigh Schultz, Charles Bostwick and Edward Carlson.

Everyone pronounced the "Dutch Supper" a grand success and the question has been raised as to when the next one will take place.

GRANITE DUTY WILL BE CUT

Reduction of 50 Per Cent Is Probable

The two vigorous political foemen from New Hampshire, Senior Senator Gallinger, a Republican, and Junior Senator Hollis a Democrat had another tilt in the Senate on Friday says the Herald bureau. Every little while, when Senator Gallinger launches forth on some proposition, up rises Senator Hollis and goes at him. Thus it was today; the discussion was all about granite.

Senator Gallinger demurred to the proposed Democratic duty of 25 per cent. on dressed granite. He read many figures to show wages paid to granite cutters, the growth of the industry and the like.

Thereupon Senator Hollis announced that, as was known in New Hampshire, his family had been identified with the granite industry for many years. Senator Hollis said the duty of 25 per cent would suffice and there was no occasion to increase it. As a matter of fact, he added, once in a while someone wanted Scotch granite for a monument and was willing to pay the extra price for it. But, generally speaking granite owners in this country were able to take care of the local demand and would be under the new duty.

After much discussion, in which Senator Dillingham of Vermont figured, the Senate, as was expected, voted to keep the duties as the finance committee fixed them, a reduction of fifty per cent.

Most of the manufacturers of the country have ignored the lists of questions sent them by the Senate finance committee in regard to their industries and the probable effect upon them of the Democratic tariff revision. Senator La Follette told the Senate today that only 66 replies had been received to the 2500 sets of questions mailed by the committee to manufacturers who had protested against proposed rates of duty suggested by the new tariff or else were not altogether frank.

WICKED SIGHT AT HOUGHS NECK

House at West Quincy and Church Struck

Thunder and lightning storms seem to be coming unusually often of late, and while several of them have been quite heavy, Quincy has up to early this morning escaped without any serious damage. The morning storm started in just about daylight and kept it up until nearly 6 o'clock. During the early morning the roll of thunder was unusually heavy and the flashes of lightning sharp and vivid, some of them being what might be called hair raisers.

While the storm seemed severe to those away from the water front, people residing at Houghs Neck report the storm as being unusually severe. People who were watching it from their homes report they could see what looked like great balls of fire sweep across the heavens and then come down and strike the water and disappear. As far as could be learned this morning however no places at Houghs Neck were struck.

Other parts of the city were not so fortunate. As will be noted in an article elsewhere the St. Chrysistoms church at Wollaston was struck and damaged to the extent of $1,000.

About the same time the house of Mrs. Mabel Fennessey on Rogers street, West Quincy, was struck and while the building did not take fire the bolt ripped the building and did considerable damage as well as badly frightening the occupants, consisting of Mrs. Fennessey and her two children and her mother Mrs. Pendis. They were also quite badly shocked. The bolt struck the chimney and followed it down into the house tearing off plastering and the finish in the lower rooms doing a great amount of damage, but for some reason the building did not take fire. The house is almost a wreck on the inside.

The fire alarm circuits were grounded in several places but a gang of linemen were immediately started out to clear the wires. The striking of the fire alarm bells about 8 o'clock was caused by these men working on the lines.

Two of the sleeping rooms on the second floor were practically wrecked by the bolt. It was in one of these rooms that Mrs. Mary Pendis was. Mrs. Pendis is about 62 years of age and when Mrs. Hennessey entered the room where she was, she found her completely enveloped in the plastering that had been torn from the ceiling. The partitions on the second floor were sprung and the woodwork in places badly scorched by the bolt. Mrs. Pendis while severely shocked by the bolt was not seriously injured.

OFFICER AVERY'S HEARING

Q—If fired within 20 feet would the bullet penetrate the bone?

A—It is a steel jacketed bullet, and if it struck it might go through.

All went to the scene of the shooting after the adjournment where the circumstances were practically enacted. Officer Avery pointed out the relative position of himself and Gilraine.

It was brought out that Gilraine is recovering; that some of the bullet was not removed and is now in the leg muscles. This, according to the physicians will have no effect.

The only version now necessary is Gilraine, and he will be interviewed at the hospital when conditions permit.

TRIBUTE.

Members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union wish to express their appreciation of the loyalty and faithfulness of the late Miss Amelia L. Bumpus, who was for many years treasurer of the local union. The devotion and enthusiasm in the cause of temperance are worthy of emulation. Miss Bumpus was one of the original members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and regardless of weather was always punctual in her attendance at meetings.

The late Henry Hardwick Faxon found in her a congenial worker and her Christian attitude towards this work which she considered of the highest importance was very pleasing to him.

Miss Bumpus was a noble woman and her many kindly and generous deeds were performed in a quiet and unassuming manner. She possessed a high ideal of truth and justice and she will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union placed a spray of beautiful white roses upon her casket as a loving tribute of esteem and affection.

Law Can Rise No Higher Than the Lowest Juror

By WILLIAM H. ATWELL, For Sixteen Years United States Attorney For the Northern District of Texas

THE juries of the United States are HEART HEALTHY AND HEAD SICK in many instances.

FAULT SHOULD NOT BE FOUND WITH THE LAW NOR WITH THE JUDGE NOR WITH THE PROSECUTOR WHEN A CRIMINAL GOES UNWHIPPED. THE FAULT IS WITH THE PEOPLE. THE PEOPLE FURNISH THE JURIES, AND THE LAW CAN RISE NO HIGHER THAN THE LOWEST JUROR.

UNIVERSAL EDUCATION will bring the ability to reason, and with that ability will come the power to detect and avoid the sophistry and sentiment of crime's pleading.

Some of the rules of long ago that were made for the protection of innocence are the VITAL PROPS AND DEFENSE OF RED-HANDED GUILT.

The Social Realm

Mrs. Hattie Baker of Walker street is receiving the congratulations of friends on the two songs she has written recently which have been published by the H. Kirkus Dugdale Music Publishers of Washington. Mrs. Baker has written many short stories and poems which have been published in the different magazines, but these songs promise to make her popular as a writer of songs. The title of one "Only a Cherry Blossom" is filled with pathos and carries one back to the days of home and loved ones. The music was also written by the author. The other song is entitled "My Grandmother's Rose" and it makes one think of the ideal grandmother of the past in the old New England home.

IMMUNITY FOR JEWELRY THIEF

Mrs. Hanan Believed to Know Who Robbed Her

SUPPOSED TO BE A WOMAN

Appears to Be Confident That Stolen Property Will Be Returned—Rumsey Discharges Sleuths Working on Robbery at His Home—Thinks Jewels Will Turn Up In Europe

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 2.—New facts which developed in the investigation of the quarter-of-a-million dollar jewel robberies makes it practically certain that Mrs. John H. Hanan, the chief victim, knows the person who robbed her.

Mrs. Hanan lost $150,000. In interviews she indicated that the thief was a woman and that she knows who this woman is. She holds out a promise of forgiveness and immunity if the jewels are returned. Mrs. Hanan said:

"I wish to cast suspicion on no one—but I do want to say that should it be found that one of my own servants committed these robberies, I would not be harsh with her.

"I should understand that she must have suffered a temptation too great for her strength, and I should pity her. If she returned my gems to me, I should be glad to keep her in my service, or to let her go free and with good recommendations. No one need ever know of her guilt."

The disclosure that Mrs. Hanan knew the identity of the thief came through a slip of Mrs. Hanan's tongue.

Speaking of the jewels she said: "She will return them, I am confident." She used "her" and "she" in speaking of the robber and added: "No woman's conscience would permit her to keep them."

She said her belief that the gems would be returned followed an interview with two priests of the Narragansett churches.

Charles C. Rumsey, son-in-law of the late E. H. Harriman, has "fired" all the detectives who were employed for the purpose of trying to locate the $125,000 worth of jewels stolen from his house last Saturday night while he and his wife were absent.

In discussing the affair with an intimate friend, Rumsey is said to have declared: "I do not intend to let detectives bleed me." Rumsey has given up all hope of ever recovering the gems, which included his wife's magnificent $75,000 pearl necklace. He is of the opinion the only hope of recovering the jewels lies in chance.

If the thief gets drunk and starts talking it is thought that the jewelry may find its way home.

Some of those in close touch with the Rumseys say that if the jewels are recovered it will be from abroad. They think the robbers would not dare try to dispose of the goods in any city of the United States for fear of being apprehended. Paris or London are the cities which it is thought are the most likely places where an attempt will be made to sell them.

Rumsey is of the firm conviction his house was robbed by professional thieves who knew of the presence of his wife's necklace there. He thinks the thieves came for the express purpose of stealing the necklace. He is also convinced the robbers had plenty of money and used a high-power automobile to accomplish the job. By means of a good car the getaway could be made much more easily.

Discovery that robberies have been committed at the summer homes of Professor Brander Matthews of Columbia university and of Fred Mansfield, proprietor of the Crown hotel at Providence, indicates that the gang of thieves whose operations have terrorized the summer colony here have not been in the least intimidated by the host of detectives called to handle the Rumsey and Hanan cases.

The amount of the loot taken from the Matthews cottage cannot be estimated until some representative of the family arrives here to make an inventory. Valuables worth several thousand dollars were taken from "Elberon," the Mansfield home, Thursday night.

ADMITS SLAYING PLAYMATE

Six-Year-Old Used Gun Because He Was Hit on Head With Rock

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Genaro Raffaello, aged 6, confessed the murder of his 5-year-old playmate, James Paullilo.

"He hit me on the head with a rock and made me mad," the boy explained to the police. "When I saw him in the yard I crawled under the bed and got the gun. Then I shot him. That was all."

POWERS ARE NOT PRESSING AMERICA

Action of Europe In Regard to Mexico Officially Denied

Washington, Aug. 2.—Secretary of State Bryan, after a conference with President Wilson, issued a statement denying published reports regarding foreign intervention in Mexico. The statement follows:

"The statement which appeared in some of the morning newspapers to the effect that European governments are bringing pressure to bear on the United States to compel aggressive action in Mexico is entirely without foundation."

The president and secretary of state have been informed that negotiations in Mexico City have already progressed to such an extent that the resignation of President Huerta is imminent.

CURRENCY BILL COMPLETE

Ordered Closed After Very Long and Stormy Discussion

Washington, Aug. 2.—Consideration of the administration currency bill was practically concluded last night by the Democrats of the house banking and currency committee, after more than five weeks of constant and stormy discussion.

The bill was ordered closed and reprinted, and on Monday the Democratic committee members will take a formal vote on recommending the measure to the Democratic caucus. It will go to the caucus with the disapproval of at least three members of the committee, it is practically certain.

CHANGE OF SKIPPERS

MacMillan Expedition Again Starts North In a New Boat

St. John's, Aug. 2.—The steamer Erik, with the Donald B. MacMillan Arctic expedition on board, sailed for Crocker Land last evening.

The damaged steamer Diana, on which the expedition started, was brought here and its stores were transferred to the Erik.

A new commander, Captain Kehoe, who is experienced in Arctic navigation, sailed on the Erik, and the crew included a number of men who were not on the Diana.

Evelyn Thaw In Debt

New York, Aug. 2.—Evelyn N. Thaw filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. She gave her liabilities as $8054, mostly made up by obligations to dressmakers and jewelers.

Because he never missed writing a letter to his mother each week of the fifteen years he has been in America a young Russian tailor in St. Louis is heir to $500,000 left by his bachelor uncle in Libau.

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by William O. Trask, of Los Angeles, in the State of California, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with all the buildings and improvements thereon, situate in said Quincy, on a private way called Shaw Street, leading from Washington Street, in that part of said Quincy known as Quincy Point, being lot No. 4 shown on a plan of house lots owned by the late Abner B. Packard, made by H. T. Whitman, Surveyor, dated March 1901, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 892 page 620, bounded northwesterly by said Shaw Street there measuring forty (40) feet; Northeasterly by lot No. 5 on said plan there measuring ninety (90) feet; southeasterly on land now or late of Tisdale, there measuring forty (40) feet; and southwesterly on lot No. 3 on said plan there measuring ninety (90) feet; containing 3600 square feet of land. Said land being numbered 5 Shaw Street.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the eleventh day of August A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this eighteenth day of July in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.

Attest with Seal of said Court.
CLARENCE C. SMITH, Recorder.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

Any man who has so far hesitated about buying his Summer needfuls, and who has the smallest care for a cool, neat, comfortable appearance, should come here and see how much value he can get for his money.

Nowadays most men of sense prefer to be sure of things of full value than to be doubtful about merchandise on which somebody decides to say that there is a "saving" of "a fourth," "a third" or "a half."

Also they prefer to deal with a store where they are always sure of getting 100 per cent value for their money as against the store where there is one chance of getting something for almost nothing and ninety-nine chances of getting taken in.

For these men of sense we are ready to-day with the good things for men to wear and they are rightly priced—not too low priced to disgust any man.

LANDS WITH ARMED FORCE

Castro Back In Venezuela at Head of Rebel Forces

WHOLE COUNTRY IS AFLAME

Governors Loyal to Gomez, Who Is Authorized to Assume Dictatorial Powers—Two of Invading Bodies Reported Repulsed—Washington, Stirred by News, Sends Gunboat

Caracas, Aug. 2.—In consequence of the outbreak of the revolution in Venezuela and the invasion of the country by forces under the leadership of former President Castro, the federal council constitutionally authorized President Gomez to assume dictatorial powers until the movement is crushed.

Castro has landed an armed force at Curo and the country is aflame. Many are flocking to the standard of the revolutionists. The governors of the various provinces, however, have declared they will remain loyal to the present government. Thus far, telegraphic communication has been preserved between Caracas and the outlying districts.

Two bodies of revolutionists, one invading from Colombia, under General Gonzalez, and the other near the city of Macuro, under General Zayago, have already engaged the federal troops. According to official communications, both rebel commands were defeated and repulsed.

It is reported from Willemstad, Curacao, that Castro's brother-in-law, General Bello, is on the way to Venezuela with men and provisions to aid the insurrectionists.

No troops have yet been sent from Caracas to meet the rebels, as the government believes the state troops are strong enough to deal with them.

The president announced that all news of hostilities would be published, whether favorable or unfavorable to the government.

Washington Surprised

Washington, Aug. 2.—News of the appearance in Venezuela of Cipriano Castro, after his five years of exile, created something of a sensation at the state department.

The department called upon the navy department for a warship to look after American interests in Venezuelan waters, and the gunboat Des Moines, now at Brunswick, Ga., was ordered to make the cruise.

It is calculated that the gunboat can make the run to Guayia, the nearest point to Caracas, in about six days.

For the past five years the department has been keeping Castro under surveillance to prevent him from returning to Venezuela, which country has been enjoying a period of unwonted prosperity and quiet since his retirement.

Department officials still supposed the exile was living quietly in the Canary islands until a cablegram came yesterday announcing his re-entrance into the country of his birth at the head of an armed force, while various uprisings in his behalf were reported from different points in Venezuela.

OLD GLORY TRAMPLED UPON

Soldier Who Commits Insult Discharged and Then Reinstated

Saskatcon, Sask., Aug. 2.—Officers of the local militia have not decided how to deal with a bugler of the One Hundred and Fifth fusiliers who snatched and trampled an American flag waved during a street parade by a young woman in an automobile.

The bugler, it was said, leaped out of the ranks, tore the flag from the girl's hands, broke the staff and threw the flag to the ground, where the whole regiment marched over it.

The man was ordered from the parade and immediately court martialed and discharged from the regiment. A few hours later he was reinstated after the other members of the bugle band had threatened to resign from the regiment unless the officers rescinded their order.

SYLVIA IS RELEASED

Successful Hunger and Sleep Strike of Mrs. Pankhurst's Daughter

London, Aug. 2.—Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes, who was arrested when she led a crowd to storm Premier Asquith's home, was released from jail last evening.

She had inaugurated a hunger and sleep strike while imprisoned, refusing to eat or lie down.

Annie Kenney, another suffragette, was also released from jail.

Panama's Second Street Car Line

Panama, Aug. 2.—A street car service was inaugurated here for the second time in the history of Panama. The first line was operated during the '90s. The new company is American owned.

Imperator's Big Cabin List

Southampton, Aug. 2.—The biggest liner, Imperator, is on her way to New York with over 700 first cabin passengers, the largest list ever carried by a liner.

JOHN PURROY MITCHEL.

MITCHEL BEATS WHITMAN

Nominated For Mayor by Fusionists of New York City

New York, Aug. 2.—After a stormy all-night session of the anti-Tammany allies, John Purroy Mitchel, collector of the port of New York, was named as the fusion candidate for mayor of Greater New York.

Mitchel was named on the ninth ballot with forty-five votes to forty-three for District Attorney Whitman. The nomination of Mitchel was afterwards made unanimous.

The balance of the ticket includes Whitman for district attorney. The keynote of the platform is municipal economy.

PUT ON PROBATION AND FINED $1000

"Loan Shark" Warned Against Further Operations

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 2.—Judge Gnitchel, in the Mercer county court, fined Daniel H. Tolman of Montclair, N. J., $1000 and placed him on probation for three years for conducting a so-called loan shark business in violation of the New Jersey law. Tolman, when on trial, pleaded not guilty, but later changed his plea to guilty.

In passing sentence on Tolman, who is 61 years old, the judge said that if he should conduct a similar business in any part of the United States or Canada, the court would consider the probation broken and would cause his arrest and sentence.

WOULD ABOLISH LORDS

Lloyd-George Says No Self-Respecting Country Would Tolerate Peers

London, Aug. 2.—David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, addressing an audience of 10,000 persons at Carnarvon, made an appeal to democracy against the house of lords. The chancellor did not spare his language in denouncing the peers. In demanding the abolition of the lords, he said:

"The premier has already announced that next year he will introduce a measure for a new second chamber. It will be a chamber in which all parties and all sections and all creeds will have equal treatment."

No self-respecting country, he said, could tolerate any longer the arrogant claim of these peers that they had hereditary right without authority from the nation to fashion to their own tastes and ideas the laws under which 45,000,000 people were governed.

TO SUCCEED ELLIOTT

Vice President Clough Chosen to Head Northern Pacific

New York, Aug. 2.—William R. Clough, first vice president and a member of the executive committee, is to be the successor of Howard Elliott as head of the Northern Pacific railway.

Instead of being president, however, he will become chairman of the board of directors, a new position soon to be created, following the example set by other companies in methods of railroad administration.

Hamlin Takes Oath of Office

Washington, Aug. 2.—Charles S. Hamlin took the oath of office as assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of the customs service at Boston, succeeding James F. Curtis.

Brandeis Not For Bird

Boston, Aug. 2.—Louis D. Brandeis says the report in a Boston paper that he had pledged his support to Charles S. Bird, Progressive candidate for governor, is incorrect.

AMERICANS IN BALKAN WAR

Company of Naturalized Citizens Rendered Good Service

HALF OF THEM ARE SLAIN

Their Captain, Bearing Visible Evidence of Encounters With Turks at Close Quarters, Returns to New York When War Shifts to Conflict Among Allies Themselves

New York, Aug. 2.—First tidings of the company of naturalized Americans which went to fight in the war of liberation against the Turks in the Balkans were brought here by Captain Alfredo Marinelli, an Italian army officer, who helped muster that company in this city and Boston nine months ago, and who has been fighting at its head under General Garibaldi in the Balkan peninsula.

The captain, a tall, swarthy man of powerful build, with huge, bristling moustachios, arrived here with his wife, a small fair-haired woman, who, at the outbreak of the Balkan war, left their 11-year-old daughter in school here and went to the Balkans with her husband to serve as a Red Cross nurse under Princess Sophia of Greece.

Captain Marinelli, who speaks Italian, Greek, French, Spanish and several other languages fluently, but cannot speak English, illustrated his account of the Balkan battles with many photographs taken on the field of action, and also with deep scars on his own face, hands and neck, where Turkish sabres and bullets had found him at the head of his little company of "American liberators."

That company, when it set out under his command in October last, consisted of 170 men, mostly Greeks who had been naturalized, with some Italians and other Americanized natives of the south of Europe. When it reached the seat of war it numbered 164. No less than sixty-four of its men were slain in the battle of Bizzani alone, and fifty-six others were wounded in the course of the war.

Captain Marinelli said that, of the 2000 soldiers commanded by Garibaldi in the war, 500 were slain in the battle of Drisco alone, many of them being decapitated by Turkish sabres in hand to hand conflict at the trenches.

It was at Bizzanti that the captain himself got the better part of his facial gridironing of scars from sword and bayonet thrusts. At that battle thirty-six of his comrades in the company of Americans were severely wounded and sixty-four fell.

When the war shifted from a fight against the Turks to a fratracidal conflict among the allies themselves, Marinelli obtained an honorable discharge. His company, he said, when he left it about a month ago, was engaged in fighting against the Bulgarians.

SLIT SKIRT'S RIVAL

Custom Cutters Wear Slit Trousers at Annual Summer Outing

Sandusky, O., Aug. 2.—The slit skirt has a rival in the slit trousers sprung by twenty-two members of the International Custom Cutters' association concluding the annual midsummer outing at Cedar Point, an outlying summer resort.

The new-fangled trousers were made in every instance of white flannel. Both legs were slit, inside and outside, from the bottom about half way to the knee. From beneath the folds of the delicate fabric, hosiery of delicate hue gave evidence of its presence.

INDICTMENT DISMISSED

Engineer In Stamford Wreck Freed of Manslaughter Charge

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 2.—The charge of manslaughter against Charles J. Doherty, engineer of the second section of the Springfield express on the New Haven road, which ran into the first section here on June 12, causing the death of six persons, was dismissed in the city court.

This action was taken because of the fact that the coroner's finding on the wreck exonerated the engineer from criminal responsibility.

FREE LUNCH DAYS OVER

Fixture of Long Standing In Connecticut Saloons Is Abolished

New Haven, Aug. 2.—The law abolishing the free lunch in saloons, passed by the last general assembly, became effective yesterday and throughout the state the display of edibles to be had for the taking, a fixture of long standing at the bars, is now a thing of the past.

The State Liquor Dealers' association, it is understood, proposes to test the constitutionality of the law.

Spanish Royalty In Paris

Paris, Aug. 2.—King Alfonso and Queen Victoria arrived here last evening from London on their way back to Spain.

ASKS $5000 HEART BALM

Woman Sues Man Who Was Her Sweetheart Before the War

New York, Aug. 2.—After fifty years of loyalty and loneliness, Miss Emma Mahaney, 67 years old, of Wooster, O., has brought suit for $5000 for breach of promise against John Wolfe, 77, of Paterson.

A boy and girl romance that began before the Civil war, and was renewed when the boy and girl were aged, will bring into court one of the most remarkable series of love letters ever presented.

"Sparkling eyes," "pretty, sweet lips," "beautiful tresses," "burning kisses," lonely hours," "sweet dreams" are phrases that have been translated from endearments into evidence.

The letters were all written since June, 1909, when, according to the complaint, Wolfe found his sweetheart of half a century ago and again proposed marriage. The first letters are vivid and brilliant. But toward the end the flames falter.

She was 17 and he 24 when they plighted their troth in Lewiston, Pa. At least so the complaint declared.

KILLS WIFE AND SELF

Slayer Was Member of Daly Chinese Smuggling Expedition

Wellfleet, Mass., Aug. 2.—Angered because his divorced wife, Agnes, refused to live with him after his release from jail, where he had served a two-year sentence for smuggling Chinamen into this country, George C. Fox shot and killed her and then committed suicide last evening.

Rushing into the store of James F. Rich, where Mrs. Fox was working, Fox drew a revolver and after some angry words fired several shots at his wife. He then tured the weapon on himself and fell dead at her feet with a bullet in his brain. Mrs. Fox died two hours later.

Fox was a member of the famous expedition of Captain Daly which smuggled Chinamen into this country. With others he was convicted and sentenced to two years, which he served in the Barnstable county jail. Other members of the crew were sent to the federal prison at Atlanta.

MERE PRODUCTS OF HIS IMAGINATION

Mulhall's Confession as to Some of His Statements

Washington, Aug. 2.—The Overman lobby inquiry committee completed its examination of M. M. Mulhall and announced that he would be released to the house inquiry committee.

Mulhall was permitted to go to his home in Baltimore, as the house will not begin its examination until next week.

Mulhall, under vigorous cross examination, was forced to confess that some of the statements he made in his letters, asserting his ability to get inside information about legislative matters and his ability to manipulate committees, were the mere products of his imagination.

HELD AS JEWEL THIEF

"Hon. B. Barnet" Falls Into Clutches of the Boston Police

Boston, Aug. 2.—According to the Boston police, a young man, posing as "Hon. B. Barnet of London," and dressed in the height of fashion, attempted to steal jewelry to the value of $580 from Bigelow, Kennard & Co. yesterday afternoon. He was arrested by inspectors from police headquarters as he fled from the Hotel Touraine.

When booked he said he was Arthur J. David, 24, of London. He claimed he was a graduate of Highgate university in England and that he had been in this country three years. He was insistent in his contention that he had never been arrested before, but the police are inclined to doubt his word. A country-wide search will be instituted to find out if he has any previous criminal record.

CAHILL WAS MURDERED

Finding of Coroner's Jury In Case of Brooklyn Policeman

New York, Aug. 2.—The question whether John E. Cahill, a Brooklyn policeman, was a suicide or a murder victim, was decided by a coroner's jury, which found that Cahill had been murdered by "a person or persons unknown to the jury."

Cahill's body was found outside St. Matthews' church covered with bullet and knife wounds. The suicide theory was advanced by the police themselves.

INDIAN SUITS DANGEROUS

Have Caused Deaths of Twelve Brooklyn Children This Summer

New York, Aug. 2.—Twelve children at play have been burned to death in Brooklyn this summer while wearing fringed Indian and cowboy suits.

The death of the twelfth victim, a 5-year-old girl, caused Dr. Probat, coroner's physician, to publish this fact and warn parents against letting children wear play costumes with inflammable fringes.

INDEED A GRAND SIGHT

Battleship Rivadavia Sails Away

At Midnight High Tide

Thousands gathered on both sides of the Fore river Sunday night to see the big Argentine battleship Rivadavia start on her maiden trip for Brooklyn, N. Y. It was indeed a grand sight and the many who remained up for the sight were more than repaid.

The street railway company ran a number of extra cars from City Square also extra cars on the Weymouth side of the bridge. In addition there were hundreds of automobile parties, whose cars were lined up on every point of advantage on both sides near the bridge. The bridge itself was black with humanity until just before the draw with its 125 feet openings was quickly swung open. So thick was the crowd on the bridge that it was difficult for automobiles and electric cars to get through and they had to use the greatest caution to keep from running some one down.

The people were allowed to use the bridge at will until five minutes before the draw was opened, but when the deep base whistles on the Rivadavia sounded the signal for the draw to be opened, the police pushed the crowds back from both sides. This was no easy job but the police were greatly aided by the powerful searchlight on the Rivadavia which focused its rays on the bridge, making everything as light as day.

Aside from the crowds on the bridge the advantage points on the wharf of J. F. Sheppard & Sons was black with people and half a hundred automobiles and several hundred people lined the shore at the old wharf between Sheppards coal wharf and the power station of the street railway.

This was an exceptionally fine advantage point for people here could see the big monster come through the bridge, and make the turn about which more difficulty was expected than was the passage through the draw.

The vessel came through however without a mishap of any kind, and the small army of tugs aided her in swinging her bow around the almost right angle turn and down the channel toward Hull gut.

It was but a few minutes past 10 o'clock when several loud blasts sounded on the battleships whistle and was followed by several shrill shrieks from the siren whistle. Then the big searchlight on the bow of the vessel began play about the harbor. Its great volume of white light made everything in the direction in which it was aimed as light as day and made a beautiful sight, which was made even more so by the rays of purple light with which the white light seemed to be surrounded the two colors forming a scene hard to describe.

Slowly the monster was backed from the dock where she has been tied up ever since the lauching, her stern being headed up the river and the bow toward the bridge. In this she was aided by half a dozen powerful tugs from T wharf in addition to the Fore River tug. This operation was eagerly watched by the crowds on the bridge and on the shores.

Once turned about and headed for the bridge, the whistle sounded for the draw to open. It was some minutes before this was accomplished however owing to the crowd which had to be pushed back. The searchlight was thrown onto the bridge and those from a distance had a fine view of the crowd and the officers lined up in a row across the bridge slowly pushing them back.

The telephone which has recently been installed in the office at the bridge was kept busy by people inquiring as to the progress of the vessel. The calls came thick and fast so that some were answered and some were not.

Then the sound of the throwing the bolts, which held the draw to the main bridge was heard and the next instant the bridge was seen to be opening. This was 11.30 and as the draw is operated by electricity it was the work of but a few minutes. The line of the draw was marked on the port, or Weymouth side of the bridge by a row of lanterns and white flags placed on posts, while the channel as far as the eye could reach was similarly marked. These lines were readily picked up and followed by the searchlight.

Telephone linemen were also under the main bridge with lanterns watching the big telephone cable which passes under the water at this point.

As soon as the draw was opened three tugs shot through the opening and lined up against the Sheppard wharf, ready to guide the bow of the vessel when she came through as well as to prevent her in case anything went wrong from striking the granite piers. Then came another tug with a long tow line and in a few minutes the black ship was seen to be poking her nose through the opening.

Standifng near the Power station it looked as though her starboard side was too near the main bridge, but the fact that she was about as near the centre as it was possible to get and she had practically a leeway of fifteen feet on each side. While she was passing through the searchlight was kept directed on the Quincy side of the bridge which enabled Capt. Joseph I. Kemp, who was in charge to see at all times how near he was to the bridge.

The passage through the bridge did not take over ten minutes and twenty minutes after the draw had been opened it was closed and the bridge again opened for travel. As noted above it was 11.30 when the draw was

BLUE HILLS RESERVATION

Drinking Fountain Now Located at the Summit

In the Blue Hills Reservation, instead of building more roads, paths and other improvements, as in past years the Commission is caring for what has been built and is giving much attention to gypsy and brown-tail moths, says the Milton Record. A large force of men is kept busy in the moth-infested districts. Considerable oiling and repairing has been done on the roads and parkways.

At Great Blue Hill a much-needed improvement appreciated by visitors, is the installation of a drinking fountain at the summit of the hill. The water is supplied from a reservoir tank located near the summit with a fixed amount of water kept in it all the time by an automatic pumping system.

Another drinking fountain, a memorial to Professor A. Lawrence Rotch, the founder of the Blue Hill Observatory is to be installed later in the season by Mrs. A. L. Rotch.

At the foot of Chicataubut Hill, near the corner of Administration road and Randolph avenue, the Bay State Street Railway is erecting a waiting room and shelter.

WOLCOTT NOT A CANDIDATE

Roger Wolcott, who returned last week from his vacation, authorizes the announcement that he will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Senate this year, says the Milton Record. He has decided to remain out of politics for the present. Mr. Wolcott was a candidate last year, and was defeated by the Democratic nominee, John J. McDevitt of Quincy, who was elected, but forfeited his right to serve and remained at home during the larger part of the session, under the ban of the Senate because of his conduct.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Miss Margaret Burke, Common street, is taking a two weeks' vacation.

Rev. and Mrs. H. M. Barbour of Wollaston welcomed a little daughter on Saturday. The new arrival was promptly named Jane Everett.

The Retlahanier club of West Quincy will hold an auto ride to Highland Park Thursday evening. A good time is anticipated.

John O'Neil retuprned to duty today at the West Quincy hose house, having practically recovered from injuries received while responding to a false alarm a week ago.

Maple lodge, K. of L. of H. will hold its regular meeting in Protection hall on Wednesday evening. The entertainment is under the management of Miss Bertha Davenport and assistants.

The members of the Kincaide stock company who have been living here during their engagement will make their home in Lowell where they have a long engagement. The popularity of the company augurs for their return in the fall.

Maj. Fred E. Jones, Capt. W. H. Blanchard and Lieut. Sydney Hardwick of the medical staff of the Fifth regiment, who were in camp at Middleboro all last week, returned home Saturday afternoon.

Everett McLaughlin returned Sunday from Maine where he spent the last two weeks fishing, camping and sightseeing having a most enjoyable time. Part of the time he was with his uncle Charles H. Spargo of Stoneington, Me., sailing the coast in his motor boat and part of the time with a young friend from Quincy at Camp Senica, at Sunset, Deer Isles, and other places of interest.

DUNCAN POSSIBLE CANDIDATE

For Second Place On Democratic Ticket

Is Not Seeking Position

The Democratic State Committee had hoped to have its State ticket slate ready for Sundays paper, says the Globe, but the lieutenant governship is said to be still undecided. A prominent member of the committee said Saturday that practically every position on the State ticket had been agreed upon except second place, and that it had been decided to drop Arthur T. Lyman from the list because of his labor and corporation record.

The same authority said that the organization had under consideration James Duncan of Quincy, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Duncan is head of the Granite Cutters' National Union. If Mr. Duncan wil accept, the Democratic leaders say that he will be a great help to the ticket.

It is said by those who are urging Mr. Duncan that if it appears that there is anything like a demand for him he will consent to stand.

GOOD TEMPLARS.

The officers of Friiet Lodge I. O. G. T., were installed in Protection hall, Saturday evening by Deputy Edward Mattson. Many members were present and refreshments were served. Those installed were:

President—Eric Mortenson.
Vice President—Edmund Hammerstedt.
Secretary—Lars Hedinburg.
Financial secretary—Albon Mattson.
Corresponding secretary—Eric Mortenson.
Program committee—Eric Mortenson, Albon Mattson, Olga Abere and Lars Hedinburg.

RUN TO MARBLEHEAD.

The annual run of the Quincy Yacht club to Marblehead, to participate in the annual mid-summer racing events, as well as to witness the trials of the sonder class boats to select the boats to compete with the Germans for the President Wilson and Gov. Foss cups was held Sunday. The fleet got away shortly after 9 o'clock and the first boat to arrive at Marblehead was to take the time of the others of the fleet. Prizes for this run have been offered by Commodore Crane and these annual runs are always interesting events. A larger part of the fleet of the Quincy club both sail and power boats participated in the run as well as several of the Wollaston and Squantum club boats.

CONFIRMATION EIGHT PUPILS

Loving cup Presented to Rev. J. E. Lillback

There was a large attendance Sunday afternoon at the confirmation service at the Finnish Congregational church on Buckley street. The church which has recently been redecorated and painted was very prettily decorated with plants and flowers for this occasion. In addition to this there was a large arch over the entrance to the church made of evergreen and flowers.

The exercises opened with congregation singing. The scripture reading and prayer were by Rev. A. Raita. Then followed the confirmation of a class of eight pupils by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Lillback.

Each pupil was called separately and was examined, charged and confirmed by the pastor, the ceremony being a very pretty one. Then verses were read to each of the pupils by their parents. These verses the pupils are supposed to commit to memory.

Each one confirmed received a diploma and Bible, the service being followed by singing and the Lord's supper.

After the service the pastor Rev. J. E. Lillback was presented with a loving cup, the presentation speech being made by Miss Caroline W. Saleneum.

TAX RECEIPTS ARE LARGER

But Water Receipts Less Than 1911 and 1912

City Auditor Fairbanks reports the receipts for taxes, water, sewer, taxes and particular sewer to Aug. 1, to have been as follows; the figures being given in comparison with the years 1911 and 1912.

TAXES

A day's lecture undoubtedly pays better than a day's work for the government. But the time it takes a man to think up and write out a lecture ought to count something.

One objection to every fishing party is that there is always some man in it who insists on talking out real fishing he used to do, somewhere else.

A pet dog traveled two hundred miles to get back to John D. Rockefeller, this instance of devotion is the more touching because a dog has no use for money.

THE PASSING OF THE TREES.

It should be with a feeling of sadness, almost like unto that of the passing of a dear friend to the great beyond, that sees the stately old elm trees in City Square and about First church succumbing to the ravages of time, bugs, and man.

Our ancestors more than a century ago realized the beauty and need of town commons and shaded roadways and to this day many New England towns owe their beauty and attractiveness to this wise forethought.

In Quincy many have thought trees were appropriate only to back streets and they looked unbusinesslike in City square, hence not much care has been taken to save them, but there has been a reverse opinion of late years and some attempt made to set out new trees. So many trees are dying or died about First church the society should set out young trees to fill in the vacant places.

That the trees are useful and appreciated one has only to use their eyes these warm days and see how every one takes to the shady side of the street. We do not know of anything more hideous or uncomfortable on a hot day than a barren stretch of roadway.

A GRAND SIGHT

opened and it was 11.50 when it was closed.

As soon as the vessel was clear from the bridge, the battery of tugs that had lined up against Sheppards, ran their noses against the bow of the Rivadavia and pushed her around the right angle turn and headed her down the channel.

As the vessel passed the wharfs her outline was plainly visible, and although a crowd of men were seen on her decks, their features could not be distinguished. Some of the crew, however, evidently recognized friends among the spectators who lined the windows high up on Sheppards building for there was an exchange of banter.

Bright lights could be seen through the port holes on the vessel and men could be seen on the bridge, but of course could not be recognized.

As the stern swung round the bend the searchlight on that end of the vessel played her light on the crowds on the wharf and furnished them sufficient light to pick their way out of the darkness.

By midnight the Rivadavia was well by the most dangerous point and was well along toward Houghs Neck.

Then came the rush for the cars. Supt. Gammon, however, was on hand personally directing the movement of the extra cars which had been run down Wharf street, as well as the regular cars which came across the bridge from East Weymouth and Nantasket.

Taken as a whole it was a grand sight and one that none of the thousands who saw it would have missed, and if everybody had realized what it was to be, there would not have been room for them all.

Not only were the shores along the Quincy and Weymouth sides black with humanity, but Germantown point was also black with people, who could be readily seen when the searchlight was thrown upon them. Also along the Houghs Neck shore there were crowds of people but they could see but little more than her outline although at times the searchlight was thrown in their direction lighting up the shore front.

Once in Broad channel the tugs left her and the vessel was headed for New York which port she is expected to reach this afternoon. She will go into dry dock immediately at the Brooklyn navy yard where some repairs will be made to her bottom plates which will also be freed from sea growth.

She will be in dry dock about four days when she will return to Boston harbor and anchor in Broad channel and receive a supply of feul after which she goes to Rockland, Me., for her trials.

The tugs which aided in guiding the ship through the draw and channel were the Mercury, Capt. Wall; Falls, Capt. Ford; Juno, Capt. Cunningham; Neptune, Capt. Nickerson; and Saturn, Capt. Dolan.

Over the propellors, lights were hung in such a position that the working of twin screws were known at all times.

The tonnage of the Rivadavia as she left her moorings at the wharf was 26,200 and some idea of the job it was to get her through the draw and channel may be had when it is understood that she is 585 feet and her breadth is 98 feet, her normal draft 27.6 the draft at the forecastle 25.6 admidships 22.8 and at the stern 17.1.

ELIMINATING GRADE CROSSINGS.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company has under active construction the abolition of sixteen highway crossings and one railroad crossing, representing an expenditure of approximately $2,300,000.

Detailed plans are also being prepared for the abolition of all grade crossings between Boston and Providence, and the company is actively engaged upon the preparation of plans for eliminating crossings at Braintree, Quincy and Taunton, Massachusetts. Four highway crossings are being eliminated in Massachusetts at the present time and one railroad grade crossing at Clinton.

SUBMARINE ACCIDENT.

Five mechanics were overcome by gas, Saturday and later totally revived by physicians aboard the new submarine G—6 which is awaiting her trials off Provincetown. The mechanics were recharging batteries with the aid of a gasoline engine, and the heavy, sultry air prevented the escape of the gas through the hatchway and the men were gradually overcome. All were unconscious when hauled upon deck. The officers of the trial board were on the submarine at the time. The ship was built by the Cramp Shipbuilding Co.

BIG ARMY WILL COMBAT CASTRO

Struggle in Venezuela Declared Certain to Be Furious

GOMEZ TO LEAD HIS TROOPS

Former Dictator Issues Proclamation Calling on Nation to Aid Him and Calling President Crazy and Ferocious, With Eternal Mark of Traitor on His Forehead

Willemstad, Aug. 4.—Placing himself at the head of a big army recruited as the result of compelling everyone capable of bearing arms to join, Juan V. Gomez, president of Venezuela, embarked with his troops for the state of Falcon, where General Cipriano Castro is awaiting him with his revolutionary followers.

The government is in the dark as regards the situation in the state of Falcon, as telegraphic communication between Coro and Caracas has been interrupted since the rebellion.

However, the Venezuela capital has received alarming reports from Falcon concerning the activities of Castro, government officials who refused to accept his leadership having been either imprisoned or killed.

That the struggle between the two armies is bound to be a furious one is regarded as positively certain. They realize the intense hatred Gomez and Castro have for each other and have known for some time that Castro had made careful preparations to wrest the government from Gomez. Castro issued the following proclamation:

"War has become inevitable. I declare myself in the field against Gomez, whose treason and usurpation of power since 1908 have become a real catastrophe calling me from private life.

"Crime extends its horrible wings over the whole republic of Venezuela.

"Heroic Venezuela acclaims me against to revindicate her rights. I am a slave to honor and duty, and I accept the honor.

"My program in regard to domestic affairs is to save my country from threatening anarchy, and my foreign policy is to join hands with civilization and progress on the bases of equity and justice.

"Everybody in Venezuela should take arms and contribute to the salvation of the fatherland."

Gomez is aboard the warship Maresa Sucre, which was purchased from the United States last year. Troops have been mobilized at Caracas to leave for the coast ports to be transported by warships to the state of Falcon.

DECIDEDLY UNWELCOME

State Department Prepares to Deal With the Castro Raid

Washington, Aug. 4.—Cipriano Castro's return to Venezuela, followed by his seizure of officials of the Gomez government at Coro, present to the state department another Latin-American puzzle, anything but a welcome addition to those already pending.

While Secretary Bryan declined to outline the attitude of the United States toward Castro, developments made it evident that the United States was getting into touch with the situation.

Henry F. Tennant of New York was nominated for secretary of the legation at Caracas and will hurry to Venezuela on the protected cruiser Des Moines, sailing from Brunswick, Ga., for La Guayra today. The legation is now in charge of a clerk.

Secretary Bryan announced that he expected soon to announce the appointment of a new American minister to Venezuela, succeeding Elliott Northcutt, resigned.

SUNDAY FIGHTS AT HUB

Precipitated by I. W. W. Trying to Get Restaurant Workers to Quit

Boston, Aug. 4.—Marching squads of striking members of the I. W. W. Hotel and Restaurant Workers' union, local 145, attempting to get workers to quit in a score of restaurants kept the police busy for a while yesterday. Several fights were precipitated.

No arrests were made as the result of these fights, but a number of the strikers were injured by the friends of the restaurant proprietors, who were waiting for the arrival of the strikers at the various places.

The marching squad, numbering about forty, and composed principally of Hebrews, visited a score of places, but succeeded in getting only about ten waiters and kitchen workers to quit.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions passed by the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor No. 1 on the death of Dr. R. McLennan:

Whereas, In view of the loss we have sustained by the death of our esteemed physician, R. McLennan, the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, No. 1, do hereby tender as a loving tribute to his memory, our deep appreciation of his many years of faithful service. In many instances when our Order was in its infancy, many a rough place the doctor smoothed over by his kindly assistance which will ever be held in grateful remembrance.

Resolved—That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his widow and family in their sad bereavement, trusting their great sorrow may be softened by the memory of his many sterling and endearing qualities among those who came in daily contact with him, and had learned to appreciate him as a true, loyal friend, and may we express the hope that even so great a loss may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved—That our Charter be draped in his memory and a copy of these resolutions forwarded to his family also spread upon the records of our association.

Rules For Health

By BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN, United States Senator From South Carolina

© by American Press Association.

1. Before getting up in the morning take the head off the pillow and stretch out straight. Begin by kicking backward with first one foot and then the other, fifteen times each. During this and other movements, where counting is required, draw in the breath to the limit and hold it while the movement is on from ten to fifteen times.

2. Put the heels upon the bed with the knees drawn up; then throw the knees apart as far as they can be carried, repeating twenty times.

3. Throw first one foot and then the other toward the headboard, keeping the knee joints as straight as you can.

4. While still lying on the back, kick out with both feet as wide apart as you can and do the kicking with emphasis so as to strain the muscles of the calf and soles of the feet.

5. Fasten the feet under something and pull the trunk up to a sitting posture. Drop back and repeat four or five times. This is very straining at first, and one ought to go about it cautiously until the muscles have become accustomed to the strain.

6. Throw the head back with the feet on the bed and lift the body clear so that the shoulders do not touch. This will form an arch. Repeat two or three times. This is enough in bed in the morning.

7. Take a cold bath and rub down briskly unless you do not like cold water or have not the facilities to do it. Put on underwear and take a light pair of dumbbells (three and one-half pounds) to give momentum to the movements. Begin to exercise the other muscles which have not yet been used.

8. While standing flatfooted throw the arms down by the thighs backward. Straighten up and repeat ten times. Continue in the same motion. Bend the trunk forward as nearly horizontal as you can maintain it and let the arms swing as near the floor as they can go. This limbers up the muscles of the back.

9. Now, keeping the knees stiff, try to punch the big toe of each foot with both fists. Repeat five or six times.

10. Using the dumbbells, pass them to the right and left, one arm going by the body, while the other is extended as high above the head as possible, and as one goes down elevate the other. This will lubricate and loosen the joints of the shoulders.

WRITTEN 4000 YEARS AGO

Nippur Tablet Proves Bible Story of Noah and the Flood

Philadelphia, Aug. 4.—The Bible story of Noah and the flood is confirmed in many details by hieroglyphics written 4000 years ago, maybe more, by a historian who lived in ancient Babylon, according to announcement made by the University of Pennsylvania.

The writing on a tablet—an epic of great length, purporting to reach back to the creation of the world—has been deciphered at the museum of the university by Dr. Arno Poebel, the announcement says. The tablet, said to be the oldest ever rescued from oblivion, was dug up in Nippur several years ago by a museum expedition.

In strange symbols so finely written that the entire great poem is contained on seven inches square, the primitive historian harks back to the beginning of all things. Then there were seven gods, chief of whom were Anu and Enlil, and a goddess, Nintu, the tablet says. Nintu it was who created mankind, whom she called "my creations."

CARRY OUT SUICIDE PACT

Lovers Ask That They Be Not Separated Even In Death

New York, Aug. 4.—Side by side on an elevation in McCombs' Dam park, known as "Lover's Leap," the bodies of Ellen Sibley and Harry G. Elliott, both dead of bullet wounds, were found, with a letter nearby in which they asserted that they had "sinned and wished to die and be buried together."

The positions of the bodies indicated that the woman stretched herself out on the ground and waited for Elliott to fire the fatal shots, and that afterwards he folded her arms, closed her eyes, and, lying at her side, fired a bullet into his mouth. It imbedded itself in the brain. The woman was shot twice in the head.

The note was written in the same handwriting as Elliott's signature. The girl signed her own name. There were no curves, deviations or breaks in the writing to indicate that either was nervous or suffered any emotion.

BOOKKEEPER HELD AS AN EMBEZZLER

Is Accused of Theft of $1600 Within Two Months

Boston, Aug. 4.—When a shortage of $1600 on the books of Julius Rottenburg, a banker of 115 Salem street, in a period of less than two months was revealed by the examination of the books by James E. Ryder, an accountant, Harold R. Robinson, a bookkeeper and teller there, was arrested at the bank.

Robinson is charged with embezzling the money. He is 33 years old has been in the employ of the bank since Oct. 1, 1912. The alleged thefts cover from June 5 up to Saturday.

BURLESQUE THE LITANY

Suffragettes Ejected From St. Paul's Cathedral In London

London, Aug. 4.—A party of forty suffragettes interrupted the morning service at St. Paul's cathedral yesterday by chanting a prayer in behalf of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst.

Ushers ejected the women from the edifice after a scuffle in which several chairs were upset.

"Save Emmeline Pankhurst!
"Spare her, spare her!
"Give her light and set her free!
"Save her, save her!
"Hear us while we pray to Thee!"

Evidently the chant had been carefully rehearsed. It was in the same tune that the choir had been singing.

THREE-CENT FARES

Detroit Moves Toward Municipal Ownership of Street Railways

Detroit, Aug. 4.—The city of Detroit was one step nearer a municipally owned street railway system, following action taken by Mayor Marx in submitting to the franchise committee of the common council a resolution declaring 3 cents to be the legal rate of fare on all car lines in Detroit on which the franchise of the Detroit United Railway has expired.

The new rate of fare will become effective next Thursday if the resolution receives favorable action at the hands of the council. The present fare on the lines is 5 cents.

K. OF C. CONVENTION

Twenty-Five Thousand Knights and Friends Expected to Visit Boston

Boston, Aug. 4.—Knights of Columbus delegates to the thirty-first annual supreme convention of that order to be held here this week, and other knights, with their wives and families, have poured in on Boston, until the hotels and apartment houses of the Back Bay district are filled almost to overflowing.

It is estimated that there will be nearly 25,000 visiting knights and members of their families in the city when the convention is opened with solemn high mass tomorrow morning in the cathedral.

WOODEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Levangie of 1021 Washington street, South Braintree, celebrated the fifth anniversary of their marriage or "wooden wedding" at their home last Saturday evening, the affair taking the form of a lawn party. There were about 75 relatives and friends present and everybody had a most enjoyable evening.

The grounds were decorated with colored electric lights and Japanese lanterns and at the rear of the house on the shores of the Sunset lake supper was served by a local caterer. The interior of the house was trimmed with bunting and crepe paper.

Delightful music was rendered by an orchestra throughout the evening. The march to supper was led by Master Chester Levangie and little Miss Dunkerley, the little tots looking very cute. Each guest brought a gift of wood, China etc., but the most important present was a beautiful dinner set given by the old crew of the yacht, "Never" the boat formerly owned by Mr. James Levangie and his brother Marcus. The presentation speech was made by the latter gentleman who was the former captain.

Mr. and Mrs. Levangie were greatly surprised and pleased and responded with brief but heartfelt words of thanks. The festivities were continued until a late hour, guests being present from Dorchester, Brockton, Weymouth, Brookline, Holbrook, Randolph and the Braintrees.

Mr. Levangie is employed at the factory of the George E. Keith Co., at Campello. His wife was Miss Susan Roberts of Portland, Maine and they were married August 3, 1908 in Dorchester by Rev. Fr. McCarthy of St. Margaret's church, Columbia road.

They have a cosy home blessed by two children, Chester and Dorothy.

Said to Have Been Found In Boston Pawnshop

NEWS SENT TO MRS. HARRIMAN

Boston Expected to Furnish Crisis In Narragansett Pier Robberies—Bankers of Highest Standing Said to Be Involved In $60,000 Loan—Burns Agency Working on the Case

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 4.—Mrs. E. H. Harirman, mother of Mrs. C. C. Rumsey, passed through Cheyenne Sunday afternoon en route to her country home at Island Park, near Yellowstone park.

When her special train stopped here, Mrs. Harriman was informed of the finding of her daughter's $75,000 worth of jewels in a pawnshop in Boston and she expressed great relief.

"I was becoming exceedingly anxious over the continued failure of detectives to locate the stolen jewels," she said. "I am much relieved that they have been found and sincerely hope that there will be no further trouble over them."

Mrs. Harriman is traveling in a special train of four cars, which the Union Pacific is handling with picked crews. Division Superintendent Jeffers is with the train to prevent delays, and a special agent of the Union Pacific is on guard over Mrs. Harriman's car. Mrs. Harriman will spend a fortnight at her summer home in Yellowstone park.

Inquiry on at Boston

Boston, Aug. 4.—Boston will, it is believed, furnish a sensation in the Narragansett Pier robberies in the near future—possibly today. Investigations of private detectives employed on the cases indicate that $125,000 worth of the jewels have been pawned for $60,000 with three bankers and brokers of the highest standing.

Manager Smith of the William J. Burns agency worked until late last night on a clue that pointed toward a State street vault as the present repository of the jewels.

Today, it is rumored, may precipitate a crisis in the mystery, and result in the making public of many inside facts in the history of the jewel thefts that would probably be guarded under the ethics of the profession of the private investigator.

It was stated that a large part of the proceeds of the robberies had been pawned with a large loan company here.

The Boston police are taking no aggressive steps in the theory that the jewels are safely reposed in a State street vault, and will take action only if proof of a felony is tendered or a warrant is surrendered to be served, a formality a private detective needs the aid of an accredited official of the government in accomplishing.

Literal pawning is the interpretation placed by the investigators on the $60,000 theory and it was believed by many that the initial step after the alleged arrival of the jewels in Boston was the visiting of a big loan company, where the names of financiers who might negotiate a loan of that magnitude were furnished.

Private detectives are hot at work in Boston, and have verified well-founded theories of their own, it was intimated last evening by the manager of the Burns agency.

STORE FAILS TO PAY

Staten Island Minister's Co-Operative Scheme Goes to the Wall

New York, Aug. 4.—Staten Island's only co-operative store has gone to the wall. An auction will be held this week to dispose of the remaining stock.

The store was started eighteen months ago at Mariners' Harbor by Rev. John Croy, pastor of the Baptist church there, to "eliminate the middleman's profit and decrease the cost of living."

The pastor and members of this church formed "The Co-operative Society of America," and opened a general store. For some months the store was apparently very successful. Croy supervised its operations personally for a time, but nine months ago he gave up the ministry for the lecture platform, and since that time the store has steadily declined.

MAKING DESIGN FOR TOMB

Bernhardt Carving a Monument For Grave on Desolate Island

Paris, Aug. 4.—Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is employing her vacation by carving a monument for the embellishment of her tomb, for which she has bought a desolate island off the coast of Brittany.

She is working hard on a clay sketch of the completed conception, with a young Breton woman as a model. The latter is sworn to silence, and the design of the monument is kept a secret.

"Blue Sky" Law In Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., Aug. 4.—Governor McGovern approved the "blue sky" bill bringing all investment companies operating in Wisconsin under the supervision of the state commissioner of banking and requiring detailed reports of all transactions.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

TRIAL TRIP.

The Billow, one of three beam trawlers being built at the Fore River yards, will probably make her official trip this week. The other two under construction will increase the fleet of the Bay State Fish Company to nine. The last three have less displacement and the lines are more graceful than those now in use. The boilers are expected hourly from the west. The boats measure 137 feet overall, 23 feet beam and 12 1-2 depth of hold.

COLONIALS WIN AGAIN

Defeat the Red Men By Score of 11 to 7

The Colonials beat the Red Men on the Ward Four playground Saturday afternoon, 10 to 3. The game abounded in exciting moments which were readily taken advantage of by the winners.

Hebert, basket ball player, runner and good fellow, after a partial season of poor control, got a beam on the base and cut corners and centres with his former characteristic deftness. He secured eight strikeouts and allowed but one pass. Three or four times this season he has retired from the mound because the plate was too small for him to pitch to, but Saturday a smaller rubber would have made no difference.

C. Carlson, whose batting ability comes to the fore too often for the glory of pitchers stepped up and bumped Hebert for a home run. The sturdy little second base man promised that he had his wallop with him when he reached the plate.

McIntire at first played good ball for the winner. He accepted 14 fielding chances without an error. In addition he made a single when it was needed. DeCoste and Joe Desmond were a tower of strength in the infield and divided the assist honors with Hebert.

ORIENTS LOSE AT MILTON

The Milton Cunningham gym team administered a severe defeat to the Orients South Quincy at Milton on Saturday, 8 to 0. The winners had a strong lineup and played their best game of the year, while the local boys were not ready to follow the pace set.

In the face of impending defeat pitcher Bradley never flinched in his efforts to shoot them across for the marbles but when the last out was called, the winners had allied 13 hits and two men reached first on errors.

The Orients not having their batting eye open got but six hits and then not at critical moments. Only one error by Milton advanced them.

The defeat is the hardest given the amateur championship contenders since they organized their club. Dugan materially assisted his team in getting across by slamming out a triple and a home run.

The batteries were Nelson and Whitney for Milton and Bradley and Mattson for the Orients. The score by innings:

ATHLETES SUSPENDED

Fourth of July Meet Was Not Sanctioned

A wholsale suspension of the registered athletes that competed in the Quincy Fourth of July games has been ordered by J. Frank Facey, chairman of the registration committee of the N. E. A. A. A. U. The action is taken because the games were not sanctioned by that association. Those competing did so on the assurance of James F. Neary and Louis F. LaRose that arrangements had been made with the authorities. Mr. Facey however states that he in no way recognizes these men as officials.

William H. Flynn of the Quincy A. A., the only club here that is affiliated with the A. A. U., has been asked to furnish the particulars regarding the meet. Mr. Flynn was in charge of his Chicago basket ball party at the time. In an interview last evening he stated that he would have protested the meet being held without a sanction

The rules regarding competition are stringent and violators suffer indefinite suspension. Nearly all that took the gun were registered. The suspension necessitates their appearance before the board of registration in explanation of their entry.

A similar occurence followed the meet of a year ago. Athletic circles throughout the city are incensed at the attitude of the association in not having the meet sanctioned. They recall the banner meet with nearly 150 entries a few years ago when making a comparison.

The publication of the suspension will be more or less of a shock to those who participated, because of the statements of Mr. LaRosee and Mr. Neary just before the start that no man was liable to suspension.

VICTORY FOR WANDERER

Three Classes of Quincy Yacht Club Hold Races

For the second time this season the Gleamer, owned and sailed by Dr. H. A. Jones, lost a race Saturday. Out of eight races of the club held this season the Gleamer has secured six first and two seconds, and for a time it looked as though she would hold first place against all comers.

The breeze Saturday was not over strong, yet the three classes were able to finish inside the time limit. On the home stretch the Gleamer was leading and was sailing on the port tack when the Hush came along on the starboard tack. Under the racing rules the Gleamer had the right of way and Dr. Jones shouting to the skipper of the Hush warned him to keep out of the way. Instead of doing so however, he attempted to cross the bow of the Gleamer with the result that the Hush came near having a hole torn in her sail. The bowsprit of the Gleamer struck the sail but as she was sailing on an angle it did not do any damage.

This little mixup cost the Gleamer some seconds and might have made a difference in the result. After the race was over the skipper of the Hush came to Capt. Jones and apologized saying that he had looked up the rules and found that he had been wrong. This being the case the Gleamer did not enter any protest. The race went to the Wandered with the Gleamer second and Hust third. In class F, the Yaritawon and in class B the Harold.

The corrected time was:

POLICE ARE LOOKING UP DAVID'S RECORD

Admits In Court His Attempt to Rob Boston Jewelers

Boston, Aug. 4.—Driven to theft by failure to find work, Arthur J. David, a young Englishman, who was arrested in the Hotel Touraine by detectives, told Judge Murray in the police court that he was guilty of an attempt to steal jewels worth $580 from Bigelow, Kennard & Co.

David's case was put over until Thursday to give the authorities a chance to investigate his statements regarding his search for work and the starvation which drove him to his first downward step. He told the court he has been employed as a traveling salesman, but lost his place.

Murray declared he was inclined to show leniency if the man's story was true, but said he would have to suffer the consequences if his statements proved to be "a pack of lies."

NAVAL BASE IN BERMUDAS

Washington Stirred by Contemplated Plans of Great Britain

Washington, Aug. 4.—Keen interest has been aroused in official circles here by a report reaching the state department that Great Britain is contemplating establishing a great naval base in the Bermuda islands.

It is stated authoritatively that the British government has made inquiry concerning the plans of the United States for the protection of the Panama canal routes, and it has been suggested that this indicates an intention to safeguard British shipping through the isthmus as is done by Gibraltar in the Mediterranean.

It is expected that if Great Britain changes her naval policy in American Atlantic waters, other Europeean nations probably will follow suit.

POLICE AUTO UPSETS

Patrolman Is Killed and Commissioner Receives Fatal Injuries

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 4.—Patrolman Robert P. Kiersted was killed, Police Commissioner William A. Johnson was fatally hurt and three men were more or less seriously injured when an automobile belonging to the police department overturned in the road near Seymour. The party was returning from a visit to New Haven. The machine, recently purchased, was demolished.

So far as the inquiry showed the automobile was not being driven at excessive speed. A bridge was being crossed and the roadway was slippery. As the wheels skidded one struck a mound of dirt, and, collapsing, upset the machine. Kiersted was an expert department driver.

Suicide Pulls Trigger With Toe

South Kingston, N. H., Aug. 4.—Sitting on the step of the veranda at his home and placing the muzzle of a gun at his head, Harry Parker, 61, a farmer, pulled the trigger with his toe. He was killed instantly.

Mother and Daughter Killed

Camden, N. J., Aug. 4.—Mrs. Ross P. Schlabach and a daughter, Elizabeth, 5 years old, were killed at Buena, when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by an electric train.

Amateur Killed In Motor Race

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 4.—During a motorcycle race here Garry Creigh, aged 21, an amateur, was killed. He lost control of his machine, which plunged through a fence.

THEFTS LAID TO NEGRO BELLBOY

Theft of $4000 In Jewels From Hotel Is Charged

MAINTAINED A BACHELOR HOME

Police, Who Place Suspect Under Arrest, Amazed at Wealth Displayed In Furnishings of Single Family House—Only $1000 Worth of Valuable Recovered Thus Far

Boston, Aug. 4.—Thefts of jewelry valued at $4000, and taken, the police charge, from suites in the Hotel Vendome by a bellboy in the hotel on June 23 and July 18, became known when police inspectors arrested Isadore Bowman, 32 years old, at his home in Everett.

Taken to headquarters Bowman was charged on two counts with breaking and entering. Bowman was employed at the hotel during the months when the thefts occurred.

Two suites, the police say, were entered by means of a pass key, by a person who seemed to have a mania for diamonds. In both cases, sums of money amounting to hundreds of dollars were left untouched. One of the suites was occupied by Charles F. Dowse and his wife. Rings, brooches, bracelets and watches, valued at $2500, were stolen here.

The other suite was occupied by Mrs. William B. Sewall, and $1500 worth of diamonds were stolen.

Simultaneously with the making public of the two thefts of which Bowman is accused it was learned that, on May 11, a suite in the hotel was entered and more than $200 worth of jewelry stolen. In connection with the charges against Bowman this theft will be investigated. The occupant of this room was a Mrs. Walbridge.

Bowman's home, the police say, is richly and handsomely furnished at a cost which must have been greater than the $19 a month wages which he received. He occupied bachelor apartments in a single family dwelling house.

Bowman, who is a negro, secured employment at the Vendome on April 1. He said he was an experienced bellboy, having worked in hotels for nearly fifteen years. He was well liked by guests in the hotel, by his fellow employes and by his employers.

Bowman left the employ of the hotel on July 31. Since then he has been under suspicion and has been searched for by Pinkerton men and Boston police headquarters inspectors.

Only $1000 worth of the valuables have been recovered. The rest the police are now searching for in local and distant pawnshops.

When the inspectors entered Bowman's house to arrest him they were amazed at the wealth displayed. Every room was furnished with rich decorations, expensive chairs and tables and costly foreign rugs. In a corner of the dining room was a handsome buffet, which contained bottles of the best wines and liquors.

When questioned as to how he was able to provide himself with such surroundings while without employment, or even while employed at a bellboy's wages, Bowman replied: "Oh, it's easy enough when you know how."

At police headquarters no previous record was found against Bowman. He will be arraigned in the municipal court today.

WESTON IN MINNEAPOLIS

Performs Even Greater Task Than He Set For Himself

Minneapolis, Aug. 4.—Amid the roar of cannon, the clanging of bells and the tooting of whistles, Edward P. Weston completed his tramp of 1546 miles from New York city here.

The aged pedestrian, by changing his plans after leaving the metropolis, added 100 miles to his original schedule and walked 1546 miles. Leaving New York on June 2, Weston was due to reach Minenapolis on Aug. 2, but when he reached Stillwater, Minn., July 29, he was four days ahead of his schedule.

Shortly after his arrival Weston laid the mortar on the corner stone of the Minneapolis Athletic club's building, which is to be a fourteen-story affair.

BEATEN BY ROBBERS

Pittsfield Woman Receives Injuries Which May Cause Death

Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 4.—As a result of being beaten by two masked foreigners in her home Mrs. John Zonderland is suffering from concussion of the brain and may die.

While one of the men who robbed the house of $40 and two bank books attempted to gag Mrs. Zonderland, the other struck her over the head with a blackjack.

Manchester Boy Drowns

THE CRAYON PORTRAIT

A Person Is Just as Old as He Feels

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"For the land's sake!" shrilled Miss Louisa Mull, peering from the window at a passing form. "Look at what Emma Binns has got on her foolish head."

The Ladies' Aid society arose in a body and hovered behind the Nottingham lace curtains of the parsonage sitting room.

A woman was coming toward the house—a slender, middle aged woman, with bright brown hair.

"She looks like sixteen," giggled Fanny Banks from her corner by the window.

"Not sixty," admonished Mrs. Morris from the sewing machine. "I think Mrs. Binns looks about—well, about forty, and she does take a lot of comfort in wearing pretty clothes." She sighed and fastened her thread with impatient jerks of her thin fingers. She looked tired and fagged.

Before any one could think of a suitable retort to the remark of the minister's wife the door opened and Emma Binns glided into the room. Her bright eyes darted a quick glance around, and she gave animated greetings in different directions, ignoring the rather grim salutations she received in return.

Any one else in Little River might have noticed that the Ladies' Aid society strongly disapproved of Emma Binns and her youthful style of dressing, except Emma Binns herself. If she suspected it she gave no sign of her knowledge. She placed her white parasol on the square piano, calmly dusted her nose with a bit of powder produced from a tiny vanity box, fluffed up her hair, sat down near Louisa Mull and opened her silk workbag.

"What shall I do this afternoon?" she inquired of Mrs. Morris.

"Buttonholes," suggested Mrs. Morris, tossing over a number of white garments.

"Such elegance could not attempt anything so coarse as hemming flannel petticoats," murmured Mrs. Banks to her daughter.

Fanny giggled again and threaded her needle. Emma Binns was sewing nimbly with swift motions of hand and elbow. There was a contented smile on her face, and her lips relaxed into pleasant lines of repose.

There was less chatter than usual as the members of the Ladies' Aid society partook of the refreshments passed by angular Louisa Mull in her mustard colored cashmere and Emma Binns in her girlish white. That the two women had little to say to each other was unnoticed, for the many pairs of eyes were watching the bright brown Psyche knot and the twist of blue ribbon and strongly disapproving of both on the head of Emma Binns, widow of Simeon Binns, who had been dead scarcely two years.

Mrs. Binns was the first to leave. As she unfurled her white parasol and tossed it over her shoulder she knew that the women she had left behind were busy with her name. Her thin cheeks flushed hotly, but her eyes maintained their brightness until she arrived at her own square white painted house and closed the door on the outside world.

She hurried upstairs to her own room and faced her reflection in the old fashioned mirror. In the dim afternoon light the sight was a very pleasant one to Emma Binns, who thought she had said goodby to youth twenty years ago, when she married Simeon and settled down to a life of drudgery. She had slaved for Simeon and helped him pile up his dollars only to find that he had left her a meager pittance out of the whole amount and willed the rest to a brother in a distant state. Simeon had always been mean and grasping and small natured, and he had so ill treated Emma that she felt a sense of relief when he reluctantly bade goodby to his dollars and went to a greater reward.

Little River never understood why Emma Binns wore black for a brief year and then returned to colored garments. It threw up its hands when Simeon's widow openly confessed to dyeing her gray hair until it shone more lustrously brown than in her girlhood days. They scoffed at her modish gowns, her girlish hats and her love for bright colors. They did not know that her girlhood had been starved of all finery. To escape poverty she had become Simeon's second wife, and she had paid the price of marrying for money. She had suffered, and she was free once more.

Now she was indulging her starved taste for pretty clothes, and if in her eagerness she threw aside good judgment and forgot the aging years Little River remembered and frowned upon her attempts to relive her girlhood.

People said she was angling for Frank Mull, Louisa's bachelor brother, who kept the big grocery store on the corner. Louisa frowned fiercely at the idea, and Frank Mull closed his lips tightly when his sister repeated village gossip.

"She's all of fifty!" sniffed Louisa.

"So am I," Frank had retorted once. "She claims to be only thirty."

"Did she ever say so?"

"No, but she dresses that way, and it's as good as saying so."

"Then you must be eighty, Louisa. You certainly dress like Grandmother Mull," said Frank cruelly. And after that she let him alone.

The next time the Ladies' Aid met at Louisa Mull's house the members of that charitable organization twittered with suppressed excitement, for Louisa had promised them something in the way of a startling surprise.

"What's it going to be?" whispered Mrs. Banks as she sat down near Louisa.

"Never mind. Wait until Frank comes in to play the phonograph pieces for us; then you'll see." Louisa could not help a sly glance at Emma Binns' face, bent above her sewing, and Mrs. Banks knew that the surprise had something to do with Emma Binns, of whom it was known that Louisa Mull was fiercely jealous on her brother's account.

Emma Binns wore the same gown in which she had appeared at the minister's house, and the brown hair still boasted the blue ribbon, and somehow it was vastly becoming to the little widow. If nobody else approved of these fripperies it is certain that the starved vanity of Emma Binns rejoiced in wearing them. They made her happy, and happiness took years from her age.

When refreshments were served Frank Mull came in and wound up the talking machine, and there were much music and singing and pleasant conversation, and Frank Mull looked contentedly at Emma Binns and voted the affair a great success.

It was when they arose to go that Louisa Mull led them into the parlor and pointed to a large crayon portrait on an easel in one corner.

"This is a guessing contest," laughed Louisa nervously. "I'll give each of you one guess as to who sat for that picture. You begin, Fanny."

Fanny Banks pursed her red lips and looked at the badly executed portrait of a woman dressed in the period of twenty years ago. The bodice of the black gown was tight across the chest, and the sleeves were great bags of fullness stiffened with crinoline. The hair was strained back from the face, and across the forehead was a small, fluffy bang. Even the prettiest woman would have taken on ugliness under the painfully unskilled pencil of the crayon artist. And although the woman in the picture showed signs of prettiness it was overshadowed by drawn lines of age.

"Well," said Fanny Banks smartly, "if the picture wasn't taken twenty years ago and the woman looked so old then I'd say it was the living image of Emma Binns."

There was silence, while each one carefully traced a likeness to Mrs. Binns in the horrible portrait. All came to the same conclusion at the same moment. If Emma Binns looked forty years old twenty years ago—the style of the dress was that of a score of summers past—now she must be sixty. Was it possible?

With one accord they all turned and looked at Emma Binns. Her face was white as marble save where a little red spot glowed on her cheek bone. She looked handsome, her blue eyes flashing, her lips trembling.

Back of her stood Frank Mull blazing with wrath. Louisa, his sister, cowered against the wall. She had never seen her brother so angry in all her life, and she was afraid of him.

"Well, Emma?" giggled Fanny Banks indifferently.

"It is my picture," said Emma Binns proudly. "Simeon had it done the first year I was married. I expect I looked just like that, tired and old and worn-out, for he was a hard man, as you all know, those of you who can forget that he was rich.

"I was only twenty years old then, but I admit the picture makes me look forty! What of it? Don't you care for me for myself—for what I am? Must you bicker with me over my age? Don't you want to see me happy? I am happy now, happier than I ever have been in my life. I wonder if you are glad, you members of the Ladies' Aid society. If you only knew the bitterness, the long years, the unhappiness"— Her voice broke, and she hid her face in her hands. "I suppose I seem foolish, but my heart is young yet."

One by one the members of the Aid society glanced at the blue bow on the bright brown hair, the head that had held itself so bravely and so jauntily the past two years of freedom, and then with averted eyes they stole quietly out of the house to hold a meeting of self condemnation, whereat they agreed that hereafter Emma Binns could dress herself like "a circus woman," as Nancy Ballard expressed it, and they wouldn't wink an eye. "We'll see that she has a happy time of it," nodded Mrs. Banks over her shoulder as she left them, and even shallow Fanny forgot to giggle and followed her mother soberly into the house.

Back there in Louisa Mull's parlor Frank Mull was holding Emma Binns in his arms and comforting her with loving words, while out in the woodshed Louisa was viciously smashing the crayon portrait to pieces with an ax.

"I don't know what tempted me to buy that picture from Simeon's auction," grunted Louisa, pausing to draw breath. "I wonder what makes me so hateful to Emma Binns? Somehow, the idea of having her for a sister-in-law is quite pleasant, and Frank's so happy, and they've been so good about forgiving me this cut-up. Well, the first chance I get I'm going to find out from Emma where she buys that hair dye stuff!"

PARIS MODES IN EVIDENCE.

Many Original Materials For the Midsummer Frocks of Sheer White Voile, Marquisette and Batiste to Be Found In the Shops at Reduced Prices.

It has been the objection of many American mothers that Parisian styles for children were absurdly grownup and "fussy." There is some truth in the statement, but the children of the better class in Paris are modishly clothed in frocks of extreme simplicity that have, however, all the earmarks of the latest vogue.

"Clothes consciousness" in a child is a deplorable thing. On the other hand, there is no good reason why a little girl, for instance, should not wear pretty, attractive dresses, coats and hats without incurring this censure. The summer kiddie styles all smack of the ideas, some of them rather extreme, that are to be seen on mother's costumes, but they have brought an element of originality into the wee folks' clothes that otherwise have been monotonous, if not exactly ugly.

It is a summer fad for the little girl's frock to show a touch of color, and the combination of lemon yellow and white is a happy change from the more usual blue and white or red and white variations.

Materials this season in white are charming, and the mother in search of a fabric has a number of sheer stuffs from which to choose. Among these voile, marquisette, crape and batiste are equally popular.

The two little frocks illustrated are charming examples that emanate from Paris. One of the dresses is of white pique, and a black velvet sash passes through buttonholed slashes. The scalloping is done in pink on this frock.

Even children's clothes have the slouchy effect so noticeable a feature of grownup styles. The other gown pictured is of stone blue linen, with collar and cuffs of batiste, trimmed with plaited frills, and the entire effect is absurdly "sloppy" and modish.

UNSIGHTLY STAINS.

Tea and coffee stains, unsightly as they seem, are not difficult to manage if they are treated without delay. Tea and also cocoa stains should be rubbed out in cold water first, and then boiling water should be poured slowly through the spot. Coffee stains may be treated with the boiling water in the same way, but it should be poured through at once, omitting the rubbing in cold water.

Stains of coffee or tea containing cream should be treated with pure glycerin, which can be used successfully alike upon silk, wool or cotton fabrics. Rub it on the spot thoroughly with a brush or a soft cloth, let it lie for a little while and then wash out with lukewarm water, afterward pressing it with a warm iron.

An excellent cleaning liquid, made with a pint of grain alcohol, a pint of ether or chloroform and a tablespoonful of household ammonia, is pretty sure to be efficacious in taking out the stains of black coffee or of strong clear tea. It is equally good for removing the traces of almost any kind of dirt and grime and grease. The mixture leaves no mark if properly used and does not injure the fabric. It can be used with a brush or a soft cloth. Several folds of clean cloth should always be kept underneath the spot that is being cleaned.

Two Simple Desserts.

Banana Pudding.—Lady fingers or stale cake, two large bananas sliced, one-half cupful seeded raisins, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls cornstarch, one and a half pints of milk.

Line deep baking dish with cake. Lay sliced bananas and raisins in bottom. Make custard of eggs, yolks only, milk and cornstarch. Pour hot custard over bananas. Make meringue of egg whites, spread on top of pudding, and bake a few minutes until well flavored and brown.

Beat eggs well, add sugar, and then the nuts and dates. Last the flour and spread one-half inch in shallow pan. Bake in slow open. Cut in small squares while hot. When cold lay in stone jar. This cake improves with keeping.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col. John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Adams, the first Vice President and second President of the United States, Franklin street, Quincy Adams house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Admission charged.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erected June 17, 1896 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

President Adams Mansion.

Presidents Lane.

M., until 4 P. M Other days admission charged.

Myles Standish Cairn.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept 30, 1621, guided by the Indian Tisquantum.

Myles Standish Spring.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay

Squaw Rock.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

Spend Your Money Where You Make It

By HOLLAND.

MONEY that is kept in the community helps every one in that community. It is a part of the common fund on which any one with anything to sell—merchandise, labor, farm products—can draw. Money that is sent away from home is withdrawn from this common fund. It helps to impoverish the entire community. Send all the money away and all the people in the community would be "broke."

The dollar that you spend with the local merchant will continue to circulate in the neighborhood, paying lawyer, doctor, blacksmith, carpenter, teacher. Ultimately it may return to you to be again started on its journey of purchase and payment. The dollar sent to the mail order house goes to swell the bank account of a concern in Chicago or New York. It is lost to your community forever. Your neighbor can't get it, and you will never see it again.

Can't you see that self interest tells you to do your buying at home? Can't you see that it is the part of wisdom to spend your dollar where you are likely to get it again?

The advertisements in this paper will aid you in deciding where to make your purchases. Only the more reliable merchants can afford to advertise continuously, and only the better grade of goods can stand such publicity.

FORE RIVER CONTRACT

Will Build Torpedo Boat Destroyer

Bids Opened Today

Bids were opened at Washington this noon for six destroyers. The Fore River Corporation of Quincy offered to build one boat for $861,000 the Bath, Me., Co., two for $835,000 each. Fore River will probably be awarded the contract for one of the vessels. Cramps will probably get one, the New York Ship Building Co., two; and Bath, two.

COST GOING DOWN.

Electricity is practically the exception to the rule that everything costs more than it did ten or twenty years ago. Everything else seems to have gone up, and is still going up, but electricity is ten times as cheap as it was twenty-five years ago and is still dropping in price.

The actual cost of production has not diminished materially, if at all, but concentration of operation and of the facilities by which it is produced has had its effect. It is a fact, however, that partly because of this and partly because of improvements in lamps and lamp material, one can buy now for 10 cents the same amount of light which in 1885 cost $1.00. In 1885 you paid $1.00 for 800 candle hours of light, while now the same $1.00 buys 8000 candle hours. Here it is interesting to note that in the 30 years preceding 1911 the yearly manufacture and sale of electric lamps increased from about 30,000 in this country to 160,000,000.

DOMESTIC DISASTER.

With dignified gait and head erect the woman descended the front steps and proceeded slowly down the street, in one hand she held a hat-box, in the other a large paper bundle, and in her eyes was the light of battle.

The man ran distractedly after her. "Come back!" he cried. "For Heaven's saks do not leave me thus."

But the woman turned upon him with a withering glance of scorn, and the corners of her mouth dropped contemptuously.

"You don't know what this means to me," the man cried, in a frenzy of despair.

But in vain. Her retreating figure had turned the corner, and the woman, deaf to his entreaties, was now out of hearing distance. The man re-entered the house and threw himself upon a divan.

WWhat is" to become of us?" he groaned, "Our cook has gone!"

COBB—KING.

Miss Eliza King, daughter of Mrs. John King of Centre street, and Roy Churchill Cobb, son of Mrs. Alice Cobb of Bigelow street were married by Rev. James Thompson at Christ church rectory on Saturday evening. A reception to immediate relatives and friends followed at the home of the bride's mother. The bride's gown was a white marquisette. Mr. Cobb is a gas fitter employed by the Old Colony Gas Company, and the couple went that night to their new home on Washington street, Weymouth.

LITTLEWOOD—JOHNSON.

Miss Ellen E. Johnson of 70 Garfield street, daughter of Andrew P. Johnson and Lynwood Littlewood of 21 Clarendon street, were married at the Presbyterian manse Saturday evening by Rev. J. A. Matheson. The groom is a machinist at the Fore River yard.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

The Sunday School of the First United Presbyterian church, to the number of 100, held their annual picnic at Highland Park Saturday. They made the trip in a special car. The day was spent in games and general fun. Suitable prizes were awarded in the athletic events.

The day was in charge of John Russell, superintendent.

YUAN SHIH KAI

His Adherents Want Him to Found a New Dynasty

President Yuan Shih Kai's adherents express much elation over the successes gained by the loyal armies in the present rebellion and advocate the introduction of a dictatorial form of government. It is said that they hope for the ultimate establishment of a Yuan dynasty, under which they would share in the spoils of office. They contend that any compromise at the present time would place China in a chronic condition of revolution, which, they argue, would be most dangerous owing to the territorial aspirations of Russia and Japan.

CANTON SIEGE EXPECTED

Reward of $60,000 Is Offered For the Head of Governor Chan

Hong Kong, Aug. 4.—The situation in Canton remains serious. The electric lights are cut off at midnight and the people are fearful of a mutiny. Trains and junks and other vessels leaving the city are packed with refugees.

A siege of Canton is expected with the arrival there of General Lung Chi-Kuang, commander of the government forces in the province of Kwang-Si, who is moving southward on the city with his army.

Soldiers are patrolling the streets of Canton, as the police there are unreliable. Seventy traitorous soldiers were shot in that city Friday. A reward of $60,000 has been offered for the head of Governor Chan of Canton.

DOUBLE CRIME ON CROWDED STREET

Woman Seriously Shot by Man Who Commits Suicide

New York, Aug. 4.—In the midst of a dense throng of shoppers at Fifth avenue and Thirtieth street Abram Fink, a jewelry salesman, shot and seriously wounded Miss Bessie Silverman, lured from her Boston home ten years ago, and then killed himself.

The would-be murderer was well known in the jewelry trade in the east. He had nearly $3000 in cash in his pockets, and his clothing and jewelry was of the costliest sort.

The young woman, too, was richly dressed, and is known to be wealthy. For years she has conducted a resort in Buffalo, at intervals leaving it for trips about the country with Fink. The woman will recover from her injuries.

UNABLE TO RENDER AID

Friends See New Proprietor of Turkish Bath Burn to Death

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 4.—Blinded by a hot air explosion from the boiler of the Turkish bath at 22 Plymouth street, which he had purchased Saturday, Louis Minski, 31, wandered into the flames which followed the blast and was burned to death yesterday afternoon. Several men who attempted his rescue were driven back by the flames, burned and half suffocated in their efforts.

Once Peter O'Brien came within an arm's length of the wounded man, only to be forced to safety by the terrific heat, with his face deeply burned.

The explosion of the boiler broke every window in the building and hurled people in neighboring houses from their seats. Fire started immediately after the men who had remained to do the work of rescue fled for their lives.

President Frees Aged Smuggler

Washington, Aug. 4.—Compassion for a feeble and desperately ill prisoner, 70 years old, caused President Wilson to commute to expire at once the four months' sentence of Ynocente Rosas, convicted at Tucson, Ariz., of smuggling mescal from Mexico to the United States.

Because he never missed writing a letter to his mother each week of the fifteen years he has been in America a young Russian tailor in St. Louis is heir to $500,000 left by his bachelor uncle in Libau.

DARTWELL WINS AT LYNN

Outsails the Clara, Iris and Dolly

The chief yachting event Saturday was the annual interclub squadron run under the auspices of the Lynn club to Marblehead in which several of the yachts of the Quincy yacht club took part, particularly in class D. In class A, the Marie L of A. W. Finlay was second, the Eleanor of W. L. Jefferson of the Wollaston club third, and the Little Haste of G. W. Sargent of the Squantum club sixth. In class S the Zoe of F. J. Stewart of the Wollaston club finished first.

In class D the Dartwell, Clara, Iris, Dolly and Grayling took part. The race was won by the Dartwell of ex-Commodore Whittemore who defeated the Clara of ex-Commodore Robbins by one minute and 16 seconds corrected time.

The corrected time was:

CLASS D

| | |
|---|---|
| Dartwell, I M Whittemore | 2:15:18 |
| Clara, H W Robbins | 2:16:34 |
| Iris, F F Crane | 2:17:55 |
| Dolly III, W W Arnold | 2:21:42 |
| Grayling, C V Nickerson | 2:38:08 |

TO NEW YORK CHURCH.

The members of the congregation of the First United Presbyterian of West Hebron, N. Y. will extend a call to Rev. A. M. Thompson this week, following a month's visit to the congregation. Rev. Mr. Thompson recently resigned from the pastorate of the First United Presbyterian church of Quincy. He will remain here throughout the month of August.

DISTRICT COURT.

Isabelle Grasic was sent to the reformatory at Sherborn for the larceny of a watch at Cohasset. The case was later put on probation as the woman is but 18 years of age and has a small child.

Peter Miller was brought in for larceny of a saw at Quincy. An old case for which he had been defaulted for non payment of fine was brought up and he was committed. The case for larceny was placed on file.

Two societies of the First Presbyterian church of Water street will hold their outings this week. Wednesday the Ladies Aid Society will go to Nantasket and Saturday the Ruth and Lydia Class of the Sunday School will go to Highland park.

If the small boy had that coat of tan on that the girls are carrying around, Ma would call it dirt.

COLLEGE MEN FOR PUBLICISTS.

The fact that our universities are the most democratic ground in America fits them well to be the recruiting stations for publicists. Men of all classes, poor and rich, throng American universities, wherein merit is the sole measure of the man. For the tree to be healthy the sap must flow freely from the root through the trunk to all the branches. So must it be with the men who are going to affect vitally public opinion and political action. They must spring from the bosom of the people. The statesman is a man of uncommon ability with common opinions. His heart must throb responsively to the multitude, for, as Emerson said, great ideas incarnate themselves in the multitude. In suggesting that we need schools for statesmen, as we have had schools for prophets, for physicians, for engineers, for lawyers and for journalists, it may be asked whether any definite career awaits the publicist as a certain door opens to the physician, lawyer or engineer. Can the publicist expect a career? Democracy is government by influence rather than by office. Under a monarchy one must hold office to exert influence, and his influence is the more effective the nearer he stands to the king. But the glory of popular government is that every man counts according to his character and capacity for leadership in molding public opinion. Public opinion is sovereign, and whoever gives impulse to public opinion has a decisive part in shaping policies and making laws. Office is for the few. Influence is for all.—Samuel Chiles Mitchell.

DANCE AT SQUANTUM

Enjoyable Affair Under Auspices of Women's Club

A mosts uccessful subscription dance, held under the auspices of the Squantum Women's Club, was enjoyed at the home of Mrs. James Loughan, Saturday evening. The dance was in charge of the following members: Mrs. Wiliam A. Reed, Mrs. Hiram A. Morse, Mrs. James Foster, Mrs. Charles S. Bostwick and Mrs. George Hersey.

BRIEFS

Miss Elizabeth Monahan and Miss Mary Lyatte of Squantum street, are spending a two weeks vacation at York beach.

The clock on the Universalist church continues to be fully five minutes slow, and many people who are taking that clock for the correct time are missing their trains.

During the absence of Miss Purchase, secretary of the associated charities the office of the secretary will only be open on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays of each week.

A. Cohen and family have engaged the Mathorn cottage at Manet beach again this summer. "Abe" as the boys call him is taking a well earned vacation this week.

The many friends of Mr. Harleigh Schultz of Squantum will be pleased to learn that he is rapidly recovering from the operation which he underwent at the Boston City Hospital last week.

The funeral of Mrs. Carolina Wilson, wife of Andrew Wilson. who died Saturday in her 78th year, was held this afternoon from her home 11 Gothland street. Services were conducted by Rev. Leander Kokenson of the Swedish Lutheran church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary L. Fulton was held this morning from her home, 80 Oxenbridge road, Wollaston. Services were conducted by Rev. C. T. Mills, formerly pastor of St. Chrysostom's church. Burial was in Malden. Mrs. Fulton died Saturday and leaves her husband, David Fulton, one daughter and two sons, John and Frank Fulton.

Rubin Berman of the Berman Furniture Co. son of Jacob Berman, died Saturday night after a short illness and was buried in West Roxbury Sunday afternoon. The funeral was held from his home, 8 Franklin street, and was largely attended. Mr. Berman was one of the youngest Jewish business men in the city and a respected resident. He was in his 33rd. year and leaves a family.

DORCHEN II A WINNER.

The Dorchen II of A. W. Finlay continues to capture prizes away from home for last week she won two out of the three races in the eighteen foot class at Put-in-Bay and in the third race was only beaten by two seconds.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Pretty English Girl Conductor on Her Father's Motorbus.

THE ORIGIN OF OLD GLORY.

You never heard of a little girl—or a woman, for that matter—being a conductor on a car, did you? No. In this country a girl of fifteen would not be allowed to collect fares on a public conveyance, but in England the young girl whose picture you see is a conductor on her father's motorbus, which runs between St. John's Wood and Woking, two lovely villages just outside London.

The young lady's name is Hille Mills, and she is a dark eyed, clever lassie of fifteen. Miss Hille is a fine mechanic, and when anything gets the matter with the bus she helps her father make repairs and in this way is as useful to him as a big, strong boy.

The Origin of Old Glory.

Did you ever wonder where the American flag got its nickname, Old Glory? If you have thought anything about it, then the origin of the name will interest you. Captain Stephen Driver was without doubt the first man to christen our flag Old Glory. He was born at Salem, Mass., March 17, 1803. When about to sail from that port in command of the brig Charles Doggett, in the year 1831, he was presented with a large American flag. As it was sent aloft and broke out to the air Captain Driver christened the beautiful emblem Old Glory, and this was the name he evermore used for it.

His flag shared with the captain the perils and adventures of the deep, and on his retirement from the sea it was taken by him to Nashville, Tenn., where he finally made his home and where he died in 1886. Everybody wanted his flag at the time of the civil war, but Captain Driver quilted it with his own hands and made it into a comforter for his own bed.

However, when the Federal troops took Nashville the stanch Union captain carried it to the capitol at Washington, and as it floated from the flagstaff—unquilted again and a real flag—he exclaimed, "Now that Old Glory is up there, gentlemen, I am ready to die."

At present this same flag is in the Essex institute, in Salem, Mass. Isn't it an interesting thing to know about?

The Miller.

The players decide among themselves what one of their number shall act the part of the miller. When this is done each boy chooses a girl as partner. The miller takes his stand in the middle of the room, and they all walk arm in arm around him, singing the following lines:

There was a jolly miller who lived by himself.
As the wheel went round he made his wealth.
One hand in the hopper and the other on the bag,
As the wheel went round he made his grab.

At the word "grab" all must change partners, and while the change is going on the miller has the opportunity given him of securing a partner for himself. Should he succeed in doing so the one left without a partner must take the place of the miller and must occupy the center of the room until he gets another partner.

The Lost Boy.

All the family looked around.
They searched the attic, the cellar and shed,
Under each chair and under each bed.

They called the neighbors; they rang the bell;
They looked in the cistern and down in the well.
Alas, he was gone, that bright little boy—
The pet of the house, their pride and their joy.

His mother looked frightened, and then she cried,
And all the friends were sad and sighed.
At last they heard a funny snore
Right in the pantry behind the door.
They all gave a jump and then a peep,
And there sat Jack, sound, sound asleep.
—Clara E. Detwiler.

The Landing of Columbus.

But horse and pickaninny were parted with a jolt.
"Oh, are you badly hurt, my boy?" his master asked in dread.
"Why, no, sah; not a bit, sah, caze I landed on my head!"
—St. Nicholas.

Y. M. C. A. CAMP.

The fourth week of the Braintree Y. M. C. A. camp at Manomet is proving an appropriate climax of a most successful season. From morning "dip" at the beach to the evening chats by the fireside, and from Saturday to the present writing (Thursday) north, south—east and west—this has proved an eventful, delightful, helpful outing, worthy of a habitual scribe etc.

On Sunday the squad hiked to Big Island Pond. On the return trip at exactly 12.20 P. M. the day chief halted. Distance was carefully measured from him to the nearest trees. An oak was nearest. This meant 100 paces to the right; so over the bank and through the woods in a bee line went the invincibles, narrowly escaping Mud Pond. There a halt was called and the surprised boys discovered themselves in Sunday school.

Early Monday morning the party went to Plymouth, saw the points of historic interest, then tramped to the police station. The Chief of police sent them to the new jail—the climax of the day. The authorities there took finger prints of the most suspicious fellow from the camp, and several others felt relieved when safely away.

Tuesday was fish day. All the biggest Y. M. C. A. bass were caught easily by ringing the fish school bell. The largest fish caught was a turtle weighing about 35 pounds.

Wednesday was improvement day. Paths, wood-pile, pump, etc. about the camp were put in Sunday clothes. Mr. Hardy broke all records for cross-country speed, but had to put on a left-over pair of trousers to do it.

For Thursday a trip to the life-saving station was planned. There is no time to record the hikes, the swims, the athletic victories, won and lost, the fireside debates, etc., which have kept smiles and good humor growing on all the bushes. Capt. Pratt has furnished the get-strong-quick food all the time. His blue-berry pudding is better than ever, and Johnny cake disappears like morning dew.

Each day records new reasons to be thankful for this ideal retreat.

CALIDONIAN PICNIC.

Quincy was well represented at the 60th annual picnic of the Boston Caledonian Club at West Roxbury on Saturday. Many members of Clan McGregor were present. The Fore River soccer team were beaten by the Caledonians, 2 to 1 in the trial run. Many of the best players are out of town. "Ted" Keohane of Atlantic sprung a surprise in the 100 yard dash. He was new to many of the competitors and went through the trials, semi finals and finals handily. Running from a six yard handicap, he recorded 10 seconds. Keohane was among those suspended by the A. A. U. because they competed in the Quincy Fourth of July games. He applied for reinstatement and it was granted shortly before the race.

A BIG SUNDAY AT NORTHFIELD

Northfield's largest gathering, the general conference for Christian workers, heard two great speakers Sunday Dr. G. Campbell Morgan of London and Dr. Len G. Broughton of London, formerly of Atlanta. This gathering which comes as the climax to a season of six conferences promises to be a record one. At the first session Friday evening 1500 people filled the main floor of the auditorium and listened to Dr. Morgan.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 180 QUINCY MASS., TUESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 5, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

CONTRACT SIGNED FOR SHIPYARD WATER

Minimum Price Is $1000 per Year on 15 Year Contract

The formal contract between the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation and the City of Quincy whereby the shipyard is to be supplied with water from the old reservoir at Braintree has been signed and work will be immediately commenced laying the necessary mains to connect the twelve inch main near the old pumping station at South Quincy with the Fore River plant.

Under the terms of the contract the city is to lay a ten inch main from the twelve inch main at the pumping station to the Fore River plant the expense of the same together with the necessary meters to be paid for by the Fore River Co.

Under the contract the Fore River Co., is to be allowed a maximum of 750,000 gallons per day, but in no case is the Fore River Co., to pay the city for the water used less than $500 every six months, which means a guaranteed income of $1,000 a year.

The water thus furnished is to be used for mechanical and manufacturing purposes only.

The city also has the right to sell to other manufacturing plants along the line water for mechanical and manufacturing purposes, but the amount thus sold shall not prevent the Fore River Co., from receiving its maximum amount of 750,000 gallons although it is said that it is not often that so great an amount will be required.

The agreement or contract also provides that in case of fire or other such emergency case, such as a serious break in the city mains, the city may cut off the supply of the Fore River Co. The city also has the right to sell the privilege of harvesting ice in winter on the reservoir at Braintree.

The contract or agreement is made for a term of fifteen years, but may be terminated at any time by a sixty days notice given in writing, by either party. If terminated by the City it will have to pay to the Fore River Co. pro rata for the cost of the mains between the two points. If not terminated at the end of fifteen years it shall continue in force for another period of fifteen years.

Commissioner Tupper expects to award the contract for the pipe necessary and that work laying the mains will be commenced in a few days. The route of the main from the Pumping station is as follows. Crossing the railroad tracks to Federal avenue, thence across private property, the easement to be obtained and paid for by the Fore River Co., thence across Franklin street to Payne street, to Phipps street, to Water street, to Quincy avenue, to Scammell street to South street, to DesMoines road where it will connect with the main leading to the Fore River yard. It is estimated that 10,800 feet of pipe will be required and that the cost to the Fore River Co., for the pipe fittings, meters and laying of the same will be $18,000. The main after being laid becames the property of the city.

In speaking of the contract, Commissioner Tupper said that its is a well known fact that Quincy is growing rapidly, and that it is fast outgrowing its present system. That the selling of water from the old reservoir will give the city an additional supply of water and will enable the city to sell to small consumers at the rate of 23 cents per 1,000 gallons what is now sold to the Fore River Co., at the rate of 8 cents which should furnish an additional income to the city. Further than this it will furnish the city with an assured income of $1,000 a year from the Fore River Co.

Another item is the fact that under the agreement the city has a right to tap the main anywhere it desires and sell water to other plants for manufacturing and mechanical purposes and negotiations are now under way which when consumated Commissioner Tupper believes will insure the city an income of not less than $4,000 a year for water from the old reservoir which for years has been going to waste.

This $4,000 represents the interest on an investment of $100,000 and will help the city out in making extensions of the present water system which are badly needed in many sections.

As stated above, Commissioner Tupper expects to close the contract for the pipe today, and that work will be commenced in a few days. It is also expected that the new pipe line system will be completed and put into service in about sixty days.

CUT IN FREIGHT RATES

Rate to Quincy Reduced to 50 Cents a Ton

Is Approved by Commission

Some important concessions have been made by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad effecting the shipment of ice from Plympton and Wenham to Quincy and other points along the railroad, as well as the matter of free transportation to charitable organizations which have been approved by the Public Service Commission, created under the new law. The reduction in the freight rates for ice was made at the request of the Dorchester Ice Co., but effects Quincy as the rate from the two points named above to Quincy have been cut from $1.20 per ton to 50 cents per ton. This year it is a well known fact that the ice crop of the Quincy dealers was not up to the full requirements, and that before the season is out that a supply may have to be obtained from out of town. If obtained from the two stations named the rate will be as announced above. The rate from these places to East Milton has been reduced from $1.20 to 65 cents per ton.

In granting its approval the Public Service Commission specifies that its action is not to be construed as a precedent for further action by the commission in similar cases.

The Dorchester company pointed out that if rates were not lowered at once it would be unable to get ice to the market to its own financial advantage in a busy season, the railroad is permitted to reduce its rates without the 30 days' notice ordinarily required for changes in freight schedules.

According to a ruling of the Public Service Commission, free transportation may be issued to charitable organizations this year, just as in former years, but this is not to be construed as a precedent for similar action in the future.

There has been some question as to whether, under the new railroad law, the companies have the right to issue passes to charitable institutions, but the Commission found that many institutions had already made plans for free excursions this summer. A definite policy will be adopted before another Summer.

SWAM TO BOSTON LIGHT.

Swimming from Charlestown bridge to Boston Light has become quite a fad with swimmers of both sexes and Sunday two more accomplished the trick. One was Miss Marion Gibson of Dorchester and the other Timothy Maloney of Lowell. Miss Gibson accomplished the trick in seven hours and 36 minutes, but Mr. Maloney accomplished the trick in fifteen minutes less time. Quincy boasts of having some good women swimmers but as far as known no Quincy girl has attempted this swim.

CAPT. SPEAR ILL.

Charles F. Spear, formerly of Quincy, is seriously ill at the Charlesgate hospital, Boston, where he has undergone two or three operations. At the time of the Spanish war he went to the front as an officer of Co. K. but returned as captain of the Hudson company. He married Miss Frye of Quincy and has lived recently at Somerville. He is a clerk of the Old Colony Trust Company.

Another five-a-side competition will be given at the St. George A. A. field day, Aug. 16, at Riverside, West Newton.

INDEPENDENT POST OFFICES

Lynn Divorced from Boston and Others Want To Be

A Washington dispatch to the Boston Advertiser says: Now that Lynn has been declared an independent postoffice once more, it is believed a substantial precedent has been set for granting independence for some other Massachusetts postoffices, amalgamated out of separate existence.

There are two that are so aspiring from the ties that bind them to the Boston district—Waltham and Woburn. Congressman Mitchell is looking after Waltham, it being in his district, and Woburn lies in the district represented by Congressman Rogers.

It is known that the Postoffice Department will authorize a separation only on strong public demand for such a separation and Congressman Mitchell has advised the people of Waltham to send petitions from influential bodies that a separation from Boston is desired. He is helping along in this work. It is understood here that several large organizations in Waltham have interested themselves in such a movement.

CLARA WINS IN CLASS D

Opening Race in Mid-Summer Series at Marblehead

In the fleet of 64 yachts which competed in the opening race of the midsummer series of races off Marblehead Monday were several yachts credited to Quincy clubs. It was expected that the Harpoon which has been fitted with new sails would compete in Mondays race but she did not appear. She may be looked for however before the series of races are over and the race between the Harpoon and Ellen this years winner of the Quincy cup will be watched with interest. In Mondays race the Ellen hade no difficulty in winning from the others in the sonder class.

All of the old rivals in class D were out in Mondays race. There is perhaps no class in which more interest is taken than in this same class which is composed of what are known as Cape Cat boats. In Mondays race the Clara won out with a good margin over the Dolly III, the Dartwell winner of Saturday's race finishing in fourth position. The summary of this class was as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Clara, H. W. Robbins | 2:06:15 |
| Dolly III, W. W. Arnold | 2:07:34 |
| Mudjekeewis, E. W. Emery | 2:09:36 |
| Dartwell, I. M. Whittemore | 2:10:42 |

GRANITE FIRM INCORPORATED

The well known granite firm of Long & Saunders which was dissolved a few days ago by the retirement of William L. Saunders has been incorporated and will be known as the Long & Saunders Co. ## MUCH LARGER SHIPS

New Destroyer Will Be 300 Feet Long

Will Cost Nearly a Million

The new torpedo boat destroyer which will probably be awarded to the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation of Quincy will be the largest of any of their class yet designed and will mark a decided advance in radius of action at high speed over previous designs and will have largely increased offensive power.

The destroyers known at present as Nos. 57 and 62 later will be given the names of six distinguished naval officers. They will have a length of 310 feet, beam of 29 feet 10 inches, draft of 9 feet 3 inches and displacement of 1090 tons. They will be equipped with batteries of four-inch rapid firing guns and four twin torpedo tubes and will be propelled by steam turbines with oil-burning tube boilers.

Some idea of the great increase in size and, therefore, in the cost of construction of warships may be gained from a comparison of the cost of torpedo boat destroyers, just after the Spanish War, and now. The contract price was $281,000 for the Lawrence and Macdonough, built at the Fore River yards in 1899, when that company was at East Braintree. Alterations asked by the Government, however, brought the final cost to a high figure.

But the difference between the contract price of those ships and the lowest contract price offered at the opening of bids this week is $544,000. The cost of building a torpedo boat destroyer today is not far from the price paid for a cruiser in the days when our first modern steel war ships were laid down.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation of Quincy, Mass., bid $861,000 for one boat.

Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia bid $881,000 each for two.

The Newport News Shipbuilding Company bid $902,500 each for two.

The Union Iron Works $906,000 for one.

Indications are that two of the boats will go to the New York Shipbuilding Company, two to Bath and one to Cramp's and one to Quincy.

DUNCAN NOT A CANDIDATE

As a Labor Official He Must Keep Out of Politics

James Duncan, Secretary-Treasurer of the Granite Cutters' union and Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, who has been mentioned as the Democratic candidate for Lieut. Governor, informed the Ledger this noon that he had declined to accept the honor of becoming the Democratic candidate. Mr. Duncan's ground for refusing to become a candidate is that while he is officially connected with the labor movement he must remain out of active politics.

All the summer hotels advertise that people sleep under blankets at their resorts, but sometimes this may be because the chambermaid couldn't find any sheets.

The suffragettes seem to have no trouble in burning buildings, but doubt is expressed if they could make a fire burn in the cook-stove.

The Mexicans object to the presence of the United States warships. No objection will be made in the country should they send a couple of theirs up to New York.

If the King of England and the Emperor of Germany will wait patiently in the Secretary of State's ante-room, no doubt Mr. Bryan will be glad to see them on his return from his lecture tour.

The people who write pieces in the women's magazines about making over food remnants, do not seem to realize how many people there are now who keep servants.

It the Greek government keeps its young men at home, there are some places in this country where the men will be up against the distressing proposition of blacking their own boots.

In traveling through the New England cities and towns we find the condition of the trees in Quincy much better than in most places. In all sections here, not only on private grounds but the trees along the roadside and woodland look green and heavy of foliage. Tree Warden Andrew Stewart seems to be the right man in the right place.

KNOCKERS AND BOOSTERS.

The baseball ground is a great revealer of human temperament. In some towns the bleachers are friendly enough as long as the home team plays star ball. The moment anything goes wrong, the yell "Take him out" resounds. It is hard enough for a team to face a hostile crowd in a strange city. It is doubly worse when a player finds himself turned down at home for a single error.

In other towns, the baseball fans may criticize and knock after the game, but in the presence of the enemy they are invariably friendly to the home players. "Too bad, old man, better luck next time" makes a fellow feel like trying once more after a failure.

As in baseball, so in business. No town goes ahead much where a section of the home people stand one side and display the superiority of their intellects by criticising everything that is done. There are many places where almost every one that attempts some public enterprise is made to feel himself a fool. There are some people who enjoy the wagging of a free tongue better than a general advance in Prosperity.

ALL IS NOT GOLD THAT GLITTERS

(This happened but not in Weymouth)

Over in our neighboring town (Quincy), a few days ago, the wife of one of the citizens took a look out of her back window, and that's what started it. In rear of the house, the land is a little low and swampy and down on his knees brandishing a big knife was a strong man. Visions of murder immediately presented themselves to exclusion of all other ideas. Horrors! How shall I save him? Grabbing the telephone she gave central the call "Emergency Police!" and the police force got a jolt. The next scene showed a big touring car with six valiant coppers headed for the tragedy. Stopping a block away, the force formed in battalions of three and deployed by the right and left flanks into the bushes. "Carefully on tiptoe stealing" they surrounded the wielder of the machette and saw the flash of the gleaming blade as it descended upon something unseen. At a signal they rushed upon him just as he plunged his hand downward and drew out—another piece of flag-root. —Weymouth Times.

NEW EXPLOSIVE SAFE, BUT DEADLY

Stronger Than Dynamite, Yet Less Dangerous.

TROTOL THE NAME OF IT.

Only One Way to Explode It, as Shown by Remarkable Tests Made by Government and Du Ponts—Invented by New York National Guardsman In the Postal Service.

What has been pronounced by some military men the safest high power explosive the world has yet seen, an explosive equal to 80 per cent dynamite, the strongest dynamite made, has been produced by a lieutenant of the New York national guard after three years' work. He will give it to the United States government, although it is said that a half dozen nations would pay from $500,000 up for the formula.

Lieutenant Harold Chase Woodward of the Twenty-second engineers, national guard, New York, is the inventor of trotol, the new explosive. He is employed in the New York postoffice at a branch station. Three years ago a brother came across an old volume that had been presented to German officials at the time of the Franco-Prussian war. In the book were 2,000 formulas for high explosives, mainly anonymous. The Germans had simply shelved the book, perhaps discouraged by the number of recipes and the impossibility of testing them all.

Hit Upon It by Chance.

Woodward tried five formulas at random and found them all either worthless or inferior to explosives now in use. He tried a sixth at random and found it extraordinarily safe and good, but rather weak as compared with the best dynamite. But from it he developed trotol.

Trotol can be exploded only by fulminate of mercury, the substance used to explode dynamite. It cannot be set off by any shock, however great. In a test at Fort Wadsworth trotol was packed into a twelve inch shell, and the shell was fired at armor plate 1,000 yards away. The shell struck the armor plate while going at a rate of 2,750 feet a second, but the trotol inside remained unexploded in spite of the terrific concussion.

Six ounces of trotol, it is said, will do the explosive work of twelve ounces of dynamite. Dynamite deteriorates in water or on the water and under certain atmospheric conditions. Trotol can be soaked in water for years and be as good as ever. It looks like wet brown sugar and is made up in sticks like dynamite. Trotol can be carried wet or dry, and the fulminate of mercury, which must be kept yards away from dynamite lest a premature explosion result, may come as close as six inches to trotol without danger. Like dynamite, trotol cannot be exploded by ignition.

The Government's Experiments.

Trotol has a longer name. It is derived from a coal tar byproduct which has been subjected to step up nitration—that is, reduced to dregs. After Mr. Woodward had worked over it for a year the United States government began experiments which lasted for two years and which concluded at Peekskill, N. Y., a short time ago. No possible tests remain to be made of the new explosive. If there are further ones they will have to be especially invented for it.

Tests were conducted at Fort Wadsworth and Peekskill, and the Du Pont de Nemours Powder company has exhausted its tests on trotol without finding a flaw in it. The secret formula is possessed in its entirety only by Lieutenant Woodward. Government engineers have parts of the secret, and the Du Pont people have parts.

Lieutenant Woodward declares that he will give the full secret of trotol only to Uncle Sam and will take no money for it.

MAN POSED AS GIRL LONG.

For Ten Years He Toured Country as a Vaudeville Artist.

May Belmont, a vaudeville singer, accused in Syracuse, Ky., on information given by a patron, was found to be Harry Thompson, twenty-seven, who has practically all his life been known as a girl.

Thompson said that only his parents knew that he was a boy, and for some reason they had chosen to dress him in girl's clothing and gave him a girl's name. He was born in the west and ten years ago moved east and made his debut as a vaudeville performer and since that time has toured several states, during which he has been arrested and searched by police matrons five times without ever having one detect that he was a man or even suspect it.

Thompson's hair is very dark and luxurious and reaches to his waist. He says his beard grew very fast, but he discovered an acid preparation which removed the hairs and kept his face smooth.

Never Wore a Hat; Is a Hundred.

Mrs. Mattie Crise of Somerset, Pa., who became 100 years old recently, has always lived in the same place and in her 100 years never saw a railroad train, a street car or a telephone. She never wore a hat, a knitted hood taking its place.

Hot Times.

There's Mexico a-quarreling,
With factions full of fight,
And several revolutions
Of divers kinds in sight.
There'd Portugal with crisis
Already most acute.
And China, just established,
Prepared to follow suit.

There are the restless Balkans
In turmoil all the time,
With Turkey getting ready
For new career in crime.
There's England torn to pieces
With threatening civil war
O'er home rule's fate in Ireland
And suffragettes' big jar.

There's congress with the tariff
And Mulhall with his tale;
There's strikes of all descriptions,
And riots right in jail.
No wonder that the prophets
Their aim, they missed it not,
In saying that this summer
Was apt to be some hot.

BRITISH MINER'S FEATS OF MEMORY WONDERFUL.

His Strange Faculty Compared With Performances of the Past.

A Northumberland (England) quarry miner, George Harbottle by name, has been the subject of many tests lately, and he has been proved to be in possession of a memory which retains an indelible impression of everything he hears or reads.

He can repeat half a dozen pages of a book without the omission or misplacing of a single word after he has once heard or read them. He is also able to repeat long lists of words backward or forward after they have been read out to him. For a wager recently he read once through a whole pamphlet of street songs, a task that occupied twenty minutes, and then repeated the whole from beginning to end without a mistake.

His gift, though now regarded as wonderful, would have been regarded as an ordinary accomplishment in olden times, when men were accustomed to train and exercise their powers and gifts of memory. This was particularly the case with the priests of the different religious systems, as in the majority of instances the contents of the sacred books were not permitted to be committed in writing.

Thus the Vedas, the Talmud and other sacred writings were preserved mainly by committing them to memory. Apart from these, however, there are many authenticated cases on record of people in all classes and positions—kings, statesmen, soldiers, artists and others—who had remarkably trained natural powers of memory.

"Justus Lipsius, a Flemish writer of great celebrity in his time (the eleventh century), knew by heart the whole of Tacitus. About the same time a French poet of the name of Nicholas Bourbon astonished the Parisians by reciting accurately the French history of Chancellier de Thou and the eulogies of Piolo Giovio," says the Standard. "Avicenna, the famous Arabian physician who lived in the eleventh century, could repeat word for word the whole of Aristotle's 'Metaphysics' and also knew in common with many Moslems the whole of the Koran by heart.

"George Vogan de Arrezo knew by heart line after line the whole of Vergil's 'Aeneid,' which he had learned when at school. Klopstock, the celebrated German epic poet, is said also to have known the whole of Homer's 'Iliad,' which he had memorized in his school days.

"Before the days of shorthand writing Memory Woodfall used to attend the house of commons and after listening to a debate could reproduce the whole without taking a single note, a power also possessed by William Radcliffe, the husband of Mrs. Radcliffe, the novelist.

WHEAT OUTLOOK PROMISING.

Yield Probably Will Be Greater Than Big Harvest of 1912.

Prosperity is indicated by the wheat crop prospect. The present outlook for the total yield of spring and winter grain is that the nation will produce as much as it did last year, when the aggregate was estimated at 730,000,000 bushels.

Winter wheat, according to the latest government report, indicates a total of 483,000,000 bushels compared with 400,000,000 bushels last year. Iowa is sending flattering reports of the winter wheat yield. Thrashing machine returns in many instances are from forty to fifty bushels an acre. The average yield for that state, it is now estimated by the state weekly crop bulletin, is about thirty bushels an acre.

Compilations on the government report issued some time ago show that the spring wheat yield probably will be 248,000,000 bushels instead of 218,000,000 bushels, as was suggested immediately after the report became public. If these later estimates be correct the total production of wheat in the country will be slightly more than that of 1912, or approximately 731,000,000 bushels.

Nearly $1,000,000 to University.

Nearly a million dollars is left to Milliken university by Mrs. Anna B. Milliken, widow of James Milliken, founder of the institution, whose will has just been made public at Decatur, Ill. The large Milliken mansion will be converted into an art museum, and a corporation may be founded to carry on the educational and charitable projects for which Mrs. Milliken provided by turning over all her property.

FOURTH DEGREE WORKED

Boston, Aug. 5.—A crowd estimated at 50,000 viewed the parade of the fourth degree Knights of Columbus in the Back Bay last night.

The parade started at Hotel Somerset and ended at Mechanics' building, where 500 members were accepted and initiated as fourth degree Knights, the limit of degrees within the order.

It was composed of fourth degree members only from Boston, Lowell, Fall River, Springfield, Salem and Lynn.

BOYS MOB WEARER OF SLIT TROUSERS

Member of Pittsburg's Upper Ten Won't Wear 'Em Any More

Pittsburg, Aug. 5.—A martyr to fashion, W. F. Doak, of the North Side fashionable set, was mobbed by newsboys in Fifth avenue when he appeared in slit trousers.

Doak's trousers were of a light check material. The slit extended from the bottom of the legs on the outside to within about six inches of the knee. A glimpse of bright green hosiery, of the long feminine variety, was disclosed. Doak carried a light bamboo cane and a handkerchief was tucked in the cuff of his right sleeve.

Doak bore the clamorings of the boys until they began to kick him in the shins. He summoned a policeman and the boys scattered. Doak took a car, announcing he would go right home and change his clothes.

OUT FOR FOURTH TERM?

Foss Replies to Bird's Challenge to Contest Progressive Nomination

Boston, Aug. 5.—Governor Foss made public last night an open letter to Charles S. Bird, Progressive candidate for governor, in which he urged the latter to enter the Republican primaries against Everett C. Benton.

The letter was written in answer to the challenge of Bird that the governor contest with him for the Progressive nomination for governor.

Foss declines to be a candidate in the Progressive primaries. He berates Benton, Bird and Lieutenant Governor Walsh as discrediting the direct primaries in their candidacies, and defines the situation as "a three-cornered fiasco of three machine-made candidates, each controlling his own party machinery."

The governor's statement follows many weeks of political maneuvering and indicates that he will be a candidate for a fourth term.

DIE IN BURNING PIT

Twenty-Two Scotch Miners Killed In Colliery Near Glasgow

Glasgow, Aug. 5.—Twenty-two coal miners perished in a fire which broke out in the Mavis Valley pit of the Cadder colliery, near here.

Only one man escaped alive of the shift of miners in the pit at the time of the fire. A widow lost three of her sons.

The rescuing parties passed through a severe ordeal, owing to the intense heat and poisonous gases. Many of them were brought to the surface unconscious.

Police Station Robbed

London, Aug. 5.—Burglars robbed the safe in a police station of $650 while the superintendent was away.

Elevator Operator Crushed to Death

GUEST OF ENCAMPMENT

Quincy Odd Fellows Will Entertain Rockland

Rockland encampment, I. O. O. F. of which Edward Prouty, Deputy Grand Chief Patriarch of Manet encampment of Quincy is a member, will be the guests Saturday of Manet encampment at an outing to be held at Merrymount park. The patriachs from Rockland are expected in Quincy soon after noon and will go immediately to the park, the lower field of which has been reserved for their use. During the afternoon there will be a series of sports of various kinds including a game of ball between nines composed of the two encampments. This game is something that will be well worth seeing for among the members of Manet encampment there are some well known old time ball players.

In addition to the game of ball there will be running races and other athletic stunts which will consume all of the afternoon. Between the different events light refreshments will be served.

At the close of the afternoon an adjournment will be made to Odd Fellows hall where a supper will be served and the evening will close with brief addresses and a social gathering.

—Weak eyes that ache when exposed to the glare of the sun, especially on the sea, should be treated with cold water compresses. These are folded on the closed lids and ease the aching at once.

NEW SIGNS AT CITY HALL

Visitors May Readily Find the Office Desired

People who have occasion to visit City Hall will appreciate the signs which Commissioner Tupper placed outside of the doors leading into the several offices on Monday.

Hardly a day has passed but strangers entering City Hall stop to inquire of anyone, seen in the corridor, where this or that office is, although a bulletin board facing the main entrance conveys the information desired.

This bulletin board however simply gives the number of the room and as all doors leading to the several offices are always open it is not much to be wondered at that people make inquiries.

Monday afternoon Commissioner Tupper caused to be placed outside of the offices on the main floor a sign extending a foot from the top of the door and facing the main entrance, upon which in large gilt letters, appears the name of the officer who occupies that room.

For instance over the door of the Treasurer's office is the sign "Treasurer, Water bills, pay here."

The other signs read: City Clerk, Mayor, City Engineer, Assessors, Tax Collector and Water Department.

There is no sign over the office of the Commissioner as it was thought that office was so prominent a sign was not needed.

For over fifteen years Grape-Nuts, the pioneer health cereal, has had no equal either in flavour or nutrition.

Thousands of families use it regularly because

Grape-Nuts

Has qualities which make it the ideal food—

Delicious Flavour,
Rich Nourishment,
Quick Preparation,

and withal, easily digested.

Grape-Nuts and cream, in place of heavy, indigestible food, helps to make one cooler and more comfortable on hot days; and builds body and brain in a way that gives zest and energy.

STRONG WORDS
From a Doctor with 40 Years' Experience.

"In my 40 years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Calif. physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people.

I "have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts, and Postum in place of coffee, when giving my patients instructions as to diet, for I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition, Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in a perfect, healthy tone." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientfic food in the world.

ELECTRIC BARBER POLE.

The expedition which left New Yodk on July 2nd to explore the Arctic continent known as Crocker Land carried with it a powerful wireless telegraph equipment. The generators will be operated by kerosene engines and the wireless system will have a range of 2000 miles. The wireless apparatus will be installed on the north side of Flagler Bay. This will enable the expedition to keep in touch with civilzation and it will also permit of experiments with directed Hertzian waves under the ideal climatic conditions of the Arctic

Only recently has the barber pole been electrified. By day it revolves and by night it is illuminated by a small electric lamp. The electric or revolving barber pole has for a middle section a glass cylinder that is two feet or more in height by about eight inches in diameter, this section being supported on an ornamental base or on a stout brass rod rising from the sidewalk. The glass section of the pole is surmounted by an ornamental cap.

Within the glass section of the pole is another cylinder made of a thin, light-weight, translucent material upon which are painted the traditional spiral stripes of red, white and blue, the familiar sign of the barber. This inner cylinder is pivoted top and bottom and made to revolve by means of a tiny electric motor attached at the top. Current is carried to this motor on a wire leading from an electric light fixtures within the building and up out of sight inside the pole's base. Within the inner cylinder of the electric revolving barber pole are two incandescent electric lights by which the pole can be illuminated at night.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

The usual large number of pleased patrons were in attendance Monday afternoon and evening, and were loud in their applause of the new program provided by the management.

The Howley Musical Comedy Company was the big feature of the show. These new entertainers, ten in number, created an uproar of laughter for 45 minutes with their "Fun in a Boarding School." There's lots of good singing, catchy music and clever dancing in this skit, which is fun from beginning to end. One of the three male members of the company did a "Skip rope dance" that was remarkable for its perfect time and step with the music, and brought much applause. In fact the solos, dancing and chorus work throughout was exceptionally good. This company is here for a week's stay and will be seen in a new comedy beginning Thursday matine.

The pictures were exceedingly interesting. Pathe's Weekly, the news of the world as caught by the camera is always watched with interest. The two-reel feature "Honor Thy Father," and the comedy reel are both very pleasing.

MEXICAN PEACE VIEWS DELAYED

Lind Will Represent President and Advise Embassy

THE RESIGNATION OF WILSON

Formally Accepted Because of Difficulty In Representing Views of Administration—Envoy Says He Believes President and Secretary of State Actuated by Highest Motives

Washington, Aug. 5.—Secretary of State Bryan announced the appointment of Former Governor John Lind of Minnesota to act as the personal representative of President Wilson in Mexico and as the adviser to the embassy in Mexico City in the present situation.

Lind and his wife left here for Mexico last evening, going via New Orleans or Galveston.

The secretary of state also announced that when the president is ready to communicate with the Mexican authorities as to the restoration of peace he will make public his views. Bryan would not prophesy as to when this publication of policy would take place.

The ambassador resigned, with all the other United States representatives in foreign countries, when President Wilson took office. The acceptance of the resignation under the present circumstances is equivalent to forcing him out of office. Bryan made the following statement:

"Ambassador Wilson's resignation has been accepted, to take effect Oct. 14. The part which he felt it his duty to take in the earlier stages of the recent revolution in Mexico would make it difficult for him to represent the views of the present administration, in view of the situation which now exists."

Ambassador Wilson was closeted with the secretary of state for about two hours, discussing matters connected with the administration in Mexico. On leaving the state department he said he had no comment to make on any policy or proposed policy of the president or the secretary of state.

The ambassador said he was sure the president and the secretary of state were actuated by motives of the highest patriotism and that he was sorry he could not consider himself in accord with their ideas.

When asked what he intended to do in the future Wilson replied: "Frankly, I don't know. I came into the state department naked and I am going out naked. I probably shall return to the practice of law."

Ambassador Wilson declared that President Wilson had taken the only right course in accepting his resignation.

COALING STATION ONLY

New York, Aug. 5.—Lieutenant General Bullock, governor of Bermuda, who arrived here on a vacation trip to the White Mountains, deprecated the report that Great Britain is contemplating establishing a strong naval base in Bermuda.

"England has for a long time maintained a sort of naval base at Bermuda," he said, "and often there are a number of small war craft there. Our real naval base is at Jamaica. It may be that the opening of the Panama canal will call for a coaling depot in Bermuda, but the idea of a great naval base there is largely imagination."

BURSTS IN FINAL TEST

Twenty and a Half Ton Pressure Too Much For Big Gun

Washington, Aug. 5.—A great 14-inch gun burst at the naval proving ground at Indian Head, Md., involving an estimated loss of $50,000. No one was injured.

A statement issued by Acting Secretary Roosevelt said the gun burst at the breech end, while being "proof fired." "The pressure at which the gun burst," said the statement, "was 10½ tons, which is approximately four tons above the service pressure. It is the custom to subject all guns to one shot at this high pressure, although they are never again so fired."

Brady $70,000,000 Estate to Family

New York, Aug. 5.—The will of Anthony N. Brady, the traction magnate, leaves to his five children and a grandchild the bulk of his estate, which has been estimated at $70,000,000. The widow receives $1,000,000 outright and an annuity of $60,000.

Fatal Fall From Staging

Fire Takes Seven Lives

Quebec, Aug. 5.—Seven lives were lost in a fire which destroyed the home of Joseph Paquet at St. John parish, Isle of Orleans. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erected June 17, 1896 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. ## PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

Women to Have Great Part In The Making of World's Exposition. To be Active Factors in Development of Panama Pacific International Exposition in 1915. Improved Wage for Women and Children in All Countries to be Considered.

For the first time women have been given a place as co-adjutors in the creation of an international enterprise,—the Panama-Pacifiec Intrnational Exposition at San Francisco in 1915.

When Congress awarded to San Francisco the honor of holding the Panama-Pacific International Exposition a group of prominent California women offered their services to the exposition directors. The offer was promptly accepted and the Women's Board of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition was organized.

After mature deliberation on the question as to whether the Women's Board should erect a palace on the exposition grounds for the housing of individual exhibits of women from all parts of the world it was agreed that the works of men and women were so closely associated in every field of endeavor that it would be practically impossible to separate the exhibits on the standpoint of sex.

The women asked that they might assume an even part of the responsibilities and cares attendant upon the creation of an exposition such as the directors were planning. Their offer was accepted by the directors of the exposition and at this time women serve on committees and have an active part in the upbuilding of some of the most important departments of the exposition.

While the active membership of the Women's Board is composed of California women who, as they are upon the ground, are better able to direct the great work which the Women's Board has outlined, yet the Board has gained the cooperation and support of women throughout the world. Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, one of the most famous sociologists in the world, has promised her active assistance to Alvin E. Pope, chief of the Department of Social Economy at the exposition, and a number of the prominent women of Europe and America will act as an advisory board to the department.

Women's work in the preparation of the exposition will demonstrate in a practical way many of the important principles of applied social economy. The study of social science will be elaborately treated in one of the most important departments of the exposition,—that of Social Economy. Yet in the display of exhibits throughout the exposition there will be no separate classification for the sexes; the exhibits that pertain particularly to the work of women will be displayed with those of men. The decision of the exposition management in this respect is an acknowledgment of the advance that has been made generally throughout the civilized world in the recognition of women as an integral part of the state and as an important factor of society, from an industrial as well as an intellectual standpoint.

The Departments of Education and Social Economy will be housed in a splendid exhibit palace, which forms one of the main buildings in the central exhibit section of the exposition.

The displays in the Palace of Education and Social Economy will prove of vital interest to thinking women. In the department devoted to education every phase of educational endeavor will be taken up. School appliances, text books, furniture and models of school buildings will be shown, while entire sections will be devoted to drawing, painting, music and agricultural education in elementary grades, business and commercial training, education of defectives and delinquents, the blind, the deaf and dumb, cripples and the feeble minded. In the department of social economy will be found studies in hygiene, exhibits dealing with the care of defectives, statistical charts on the consumption and effects of alcoholic beverages, tobacco and drugs. There will be a division devoted to the remunerative wage of women and children in all countries. The modern development of sociological work as exemplified in playgrounds and recreation centers will be vividly treated in exhibits mostly contributed by women from all over the world.

Women will play an important part in the purely social features of the exposition. In the California Building, under the direction of the Women's Board, many receptions and entertainments will be arranged for visitors from other states and foreign countries, and in these entertainments, as in many other social functions upon the exposition grounds and within the pavilions of the foreign nations and of the American states, the members of the Women's Board will actively cooperate with their sisters from all parts of the world in welcoming visitors.

The funds of the incorporated Women's Board, raised by the women themselves, will be used in many ways, not the least important of which will be the maintenance of a corps of women attendants and interpreters; while the Board is also planning to cooperate with the W. C. T. U. and the Y. W. C. A. in such welfare work as may be necessary on the exposition grounds. A portion of the money will be devoted to the entertainment of distinguished women guests of the exposition and it is even planned to raise a fund later on for defraying the expenses of famous women and international sociologists both from America and from abroad.

Not the least significant of all the work of the Women's Board will be its activities in connection with the various conventions and congresses which will be held at the exposition. More than one hundred and forty such international gatherings are already arranged for the exposition year in San Francisco and this large number is increasing daily. The women workers of the exposition will be responsible for the generous hospitality extended to the world delegates gathered on the shores of the Pacific in 1915.

As the temperament of the entire exposition is one of an uplifting and educating force with the more than usual attention given to the welfare of women and children, it is natural that women shall play a large part in the exposition. Their part in the exposition will be a manifestation of the principles which will be displayed in the exhibit halls.

MANET BEACH.

Mr. Hebenstreit and family of Aspenwall road, Dorchester are spending the summer at the Planet cottage, Manet beach. This is their eighteenth season at this popular place and Mr. Hebenstreit who is a prominent shoe merchant in Boston finds keen enjoyment each evening in seeking the cool breezes of Quincy Bay after the heat of the city.

Speaking of the changes since he first became a summer resident he said "Manet beach was a beautiful driveway forty feet to the willows but the Portland storm played great havoc eating away the embankment till there is barely a foot path at what was Charlie Jacobs cottage. Of the old summer resident along the shore "Billy" Jacobs and Mrs. Echorn are the only ones who now make it a summer residence.

BRIEFS

Mrs. Golden and her daughter will leave Friday for a visit to Florida.

Revere road, between Hancock and Bigelow streets, is being resurfaced. The sidewalks should also receive attention.

Mrs. H. E. Whyman and children from Hartford, Conn., were the guests of the C. E. Carlson family, 125 Huckins avenue, Squantum, last week.

Rev. T. W. Davison from Atlantic is preaching at the clubhouse on Bellevue road, corner of Huckins avenue, in Squantum every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Sunday school after the services.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

PLAYGROUND ATTENDANCE

Naps Defeat the Red Sox in a Close Game

There was a total attendance of 3,297 boys and girls at all of the city playgrounds last week. This is a good mark when it is considered that the grounds were closed on parts of two days on account of rain. Ward Three led as usual with a mark of 1,524; Ward Two was next with 932, and Ward Four brings up the rear with 841 as a total.

The girls of Ward Two have finally passed the boys on a weekly attendance as last week they numbered 525 to the boys 407. Ward Three had 795 boys and 729 girls. Ward Four had 445 boys and 396 girls.

Ward Three baseball league standing:

| | |
|---|---|
| Naps | .666 |
| Red Sox | .500 |
| Athletics | .000 |

The Naps defeated the Red Sox Tuesday afternoon in a close game by a score of 6 to 5. The Red Sox were big favorites before the game as they had beaten the Senators in the preceding game. Capt. Barr however put lots of "pep" into his squad and from the start the Naps had a shade on their opponents.

MR. LaROSE TAKES BLAME

Has Written to A. A. U. Relative to July 4th Sports

Louis F. LaRose of the Y. M. C. A. and a member of the July 4th athletic committee, wishes to absolve James E. Neary, the chairman of this committee from all blame for the fact that the July 4th sports were not sanctioned by the A. A. U. Last year the committee held a cross-country run under exactly the same conditions as these sports were held on the Fourth and nothing was heard from the Cambridge branch of the A. A. U., and as the events were all closed it was taken for granted that this year conditions would be the same.

It seems, however, that some one in Quincy is trying to get the Quincy athletes "in bad" and as a result there is a so called wholesale suspension by the A. A. U. officials. Mr. LaRose has written a letter to Mr. Facey of Cambridge explaining the matter, and it is hoped that it will soon be cleared up.

NURSE ACCUSED OF MURDERING DOCTOR

Complaint Alleges She Administered Dose of Morphine

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Emma E. Krill, a professional nurse, was arrested at Cornwall-in-the-Hudson and brought to this city, charged with the murder of Dr. Stanley E. Tron, a physician of this city. On June 22 he died suddenly. When arraigned Miss Krill fainted and was revived with difficulty.

In the examination into Tron's death it was discovered that the doctor and Miss Krill had first met in New York and that they lived together before coming here and continued their relations thereafter. Miss Krill professed ignorance as to the cause of Tron's death.

Miss Krill is charged with murder in the first degree in having administered to Tron a dose of morphine.

MILLIONAIRES KILLED

Death Claims Three Who Are Injured In Automobile Smashups

Emlenton, Pa., Aug. 5.—Edward O. Crawford, a millionaire oil operator here, was instantly killed and Mrs. Crawford and three women friends were injured when the automobile in which they were riding went over a thirty-foot embankment in this city.

Hempstead, L. I., Aug. 5.—William Laimbeer, the millionaire banker and society leader injured in the automobile accident at Long Beach, in which S. O. Pell and his chauffeur, Charles Gambean, were killed, succumbed to his injuries. A fracture of the skull was the cause of death. Mrs. Laimbeer is in a critical condition but it is believed she will recover.

Pell was a millionaire real estate operator and a member of an old New York family. He was a daring hunter and motorist and only recent became an enthusiastic aviator. He was well known in New York and Newport society.

LOBBY PROBERS ATTACKED

Watson and N. A. M. Counsel Charge Breach of Etiquette

Washington, Aug. 5.—Democratic majority members of the lobby investigating committee were accused of having prejudged a verdict of guilty against the National Association of Manufacturers and congressmen mentioned in the Mulhall letters.

Robert McCarter, counsel for the N. A. M., made the accusation verbally, and James E. Watson of Indiana, former Republican whip of the house, wrote a stinging letter refusing to appear before the committee.

McCarter, unheeding the angry protests of Senator Reed that he would not listen to "a lecture," charged the Democrats with a grave breach of etiquette in granting interviews stating that Mulhall's testimony had practically proven the N. A. M. an "insidious lobby."

Watson's letter, written to Senator Overman, was bitter in condemning statements summing up Mulhall's testimony, appearing in a New York newspaper and signed by Senators Overman, Reed and Walsh.

"I submit that you have prejudged my evidence," Watson wrote. "You have passed on its character and sufficiency without having heard it, for you have privately determined and publicly announced that Mulhall has made his case."

TWO BULLETS IN ABDOMEN

Woman Called to Her Door and Shot by Rejected Suitor

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 5.—Delerea Romani heard a knock at the front door of her home here. She answered, and found Emanuel Margetti at the door.

He had a revolver in his hand, and before she could move he shot her twice through the abdomen. She is not expected to live.

Margetti used to board at Mrs. Romani's home. He paid her some attentions, which were rejected. This is blamed for the shooting. Margetti escaped on his bicycle after the shooting.

FURTHER EFFORT TO RECONCILE CLAIMS

Armistice In Balkan States Extended Three Days

Bucharest, Aug. 5.—A three days' extension of the armistice between the Balkan states was agreed to by the peace delegates of Roumania, Servia, Montenegro and Bulgaria.

This action was taken to enable the plenipotentiaries to endeavor to reconcile the differences and claims of the various states.

It is understood the allies will abandon their demand for an indemnity from Bulgaria. The disposition of Kavala, in the vilayet of Salonika, on the Ægean sea, remains the thorniest problem with which the peace conference has to deal and which seems destined to produce another war within a few years even if it is settled now without further hostilities.

CUT RATES FOR WEDDINGS

Cincinnati Limb of Law Promises All the "Frills" For $10 Fee

Cincinnatti, Aug. 5.—A leading magistrate of this city is making a strong bid for the business of marrying couples.

For $10, strictly in advance, he guarantees to meet couples coming from other cities at the railway station in an automobile, and after the ceremony to furnish a wedding breakfast.

He also announced that the wedding would have the outward appearance of an expensive and elaborate affair, and that all the "frills" necessary to carry out the delusion would be provided by the $10 fee.

THREE-CENT FARE FIGHT

Detroit Railway Company May Refuse to Operate Its Cars

Detroit, Aug. 5.—The franchise committee of the Detroit common council unanimously approved of Mayor Marx's resolution calling on the people, on and after next Thursday, to refuse to pay more than 3-cent fares on local street car lines where franchises held by the Detroit United Railway company have expired.

It seems certain that the council will pass the resolution tonight. The street railway company presented a statement which declared that the company will stop running cars on the affected lines at the first sign of trouble.

Cure For Cholera Discovered

Paris, Aug. 5.—Dr. Pierre Roux, director of the Pasteur institute, announced before the Academy of Sciences his discovery of an anti-cholera serum. He said that monkeys which had been inoculated with cholera had been perfectly cured by inoculation with the serum.

Aviator Falls to Save Spectators

LOOT HIDDEN UNDER STAIRS

Police Recover Gems Worth $6000 Stolen In Hotel

FOUND IN BELLBOY'S HOUSE

Negro Who Worked For $19 a Month Maintained Luxurious Apartments In Guise of Physician—Pleads Not Guilty In Court, but Is Said to Have Confessed to Police

Boston, Aug. 5.—A veritable Aladdin's treasure cave was discovered under the attic stairs in the "Bungalow of Mystery" at 28 Tileston street, Everett, by Boston police inspectors and Pinkerton detectives as a climax of the investigation into the Hotel Vendome jewelry thefts, which caused the arrest of "Diamond Izzy" Bowman, a former bellboy, who has been living in luxury.

Diamonds, rubies, silverware, trinkets, rings, pendants, watches and bracelets were extracted by the handful after raiders had searched every nook and cranny in the bungalow, where Bowman had been maintaining bachelor apartments in the guise of a physician.

The trail finally led to a small flight of stairs leading to a diminutive attic and the second and third treadboards showed more hammer marks than the others. The nails were removed and a searchlight thrust in through the aperture, illuminating a sparkling collection of jewels and gold and silver.

On the buffet the inspectors found cut glass, Havana cigars, silverware and rare liquors. From room to room they continued their search and found lavish furnishings, apparently owned by the arrested negro bellboy, who is 32 years of age, and whose salary while working at the Hotel Vendome was $19 a month.

The confiscated jewelry, appraised at $6000, was taken to police headquarters. It was partly identified. Pawn tickets showed that other jewelry had been redeemed.

"Diamond Izzy" was further questioned by the police, but maintained a cool demeanor. Despite his plea of not guilty in the police court, where he was detained until Sept. 1 for trial, he is said to have told the police many of the details of the Vendome jewelry robberies.

He is reported as having said he had secured temporary possession of the hotel's master key to all the rooms and made a wax impression from which he had manufactured a duplicate key, which enabled him to enter any of the suites at leisure.

Fifty volumes taken from the Vendome library were recivered by the police, and when Bowman was asked about the silverware he said that some of it was snatched by him from a descending dumbwaiter which stopped momentarily opposite a room he was in.

The investigation revealed that neighbors thought detectives were trying to secure evidence against Bowman for running a "baby farm," as this was the general impression as to his profession through the fact that he always called himself "Dr. Bowman" when meeting strangers.

Three Boston terriers, which are apparently pedigreed dogs, were found in the cellar of the bungalow and from their value are believed to have been stolen.

THE NEW FLOOD STORY

Ministers Take Little Stock In the Babylon Translation

Philadelphia, Aug. 5.—Theologians and archeologists place little credence in the latest story of the creation and flood as interpreted by Dr. Arnoth Poebel, the Oriental scholar, from tablets unearthed at Nippur some years ago and now in the possession of the museum of the University of Pennsylvania.

The translation of the tablets upon which Poebel has been working for a long time is said to antedate any known version of the events in Genesis. It assigns the creation of mankind to a female goddess, Nintu, and sets forth that the flood lasted seven instead of forty days.

How a Rich Man Paid For an Injustice

By ANDREW C. EWING

Edgar Beckwith, at eighteen, having shown a marked artistic ability, wished to be an artist, but his father had recently died leaving no estate, and Edgar, far from having the means to study a profession, was obliged to support his mother. He obtained a position, in the mercantile house of Goldwin & Co. at $15 a week.

Mr. Goldwin claimed that a business plant should be run on strictly business principles. He paid very low salaries, not inquiring into the honesty of his less important employees, his chief object being to get his work done cheaply. He figured that he could afford to lose small sums now and then rather than pay an increase of salaries for honesty. Besides, he had an inexpensive detective service which consisted of himself only. He would place bills on his desk in his private office, go out, set a watch on who entered, and if the bills were missing on his return would know who had stolen them. Then he would discharge the thief.

One day he placed a bill on his desk and went out, intending to be gone only a few minutes. Half an hour passed before he returned to find Edgar Beckwith just leaving the room.

"Come back," said Goldwin.

Edgar went back into the room and when asked what he had wanted said that he had been sent with a message by the head of one of the departments. While he was delivering the message Goldwin was looking for the bill he had left exposed. It was gone. He said nothing about it to Edgar, but the next morning the boy was notified that he was discharged.

Edgar was not minded to submit patiently to an imposition. He went to Mr. Goldwin and said to him that since his services were no longer required he would not object to leaving the concern, but a certificate of good character would be necessary to enable him to find another place.

"It's against my rule to give certificates of good character. I require none when I hire persons, and what I don't ask I don't give."

"Then tell me the reason of my discharge."

"That I decline to do also. Should I give you the reason you would call upon me to prove it. That would take time. Time is money."

Edgar saw by the resolute look on the man's face that he would gain nothing by pressing the matter and left with anger in his heart. He went straight to the head of his department and asked for an explanation. He was given the reason of his discharge and advised not to stir the matter, because it could only result to his injury.

There had been two other persons in Goldwin's private office besides Edgar, one of whom had taken the bill. But it would be difficult to prove this even if an opportunity had been offered Edgar went home and talked the matter over with his mother. After thinking of it she counseled him to swallow the pill. Since he had not been openly accused it was not incumbent upon him to make a defense, and if he made a defense there was every chance that he would not be able to prove his innocence.

It happened at this time that news came of the death of an uncle of Edgar's, who left him the sum of $3,000. He resolved to apply a part of it to studying art, and since this would obviate the necessity of his obtaining another position he concluded to accept his mother's advice. But he swore to himself that a companion object to success in his profession should be to "get even" with the man who had refused him an opportunity to vindicate himself from a charge of being a thief.

Young Beckwith's talent lay in transmitting a human face to canvas. This was evident from the first, and he resolved to become a portrait painter. Nevertheless he painted portraits for years before he obtained a reputation for excellent work. But at last he received an order to paint the portrait of a promient judge on the bench and succeeded in making a very life-like representation of his subject. The painting was hung in a courthouse, and every one who saw it admired it.

From this time Beckwith received orders from prominent men, and every portrait of such added to his reputation. Not only prominence in his art but money came to him. Persons of wealth flocked to him to have themselves represented on canvas.

Twelve years passed since Beckwith had ceased to be a clerk and become an artist. He had grown a beard, and his hair was already flecked with gray. A great change had come to his appearance since he had been an employee in the house of Goldwin & Co. One morning a carriage drove up to his studio and a man came up the stairs. The moment he entered Beckwith recognized him as his former employer. But the artist saw that he was not himself recognized.

"I believe you are a portrait painter, sir," said the visitor in a tone he would have used if he had been asking if a man sold mouse traps.

"I am," replied Beckwith, dreading lest his voice should give him away. Goldwin went up to a portrait standing on a table, took out a pair of glasses, put them on and inspected it. Beckwith went on with the work he was doing.

"The size doesn't make any difference as to the price."

"Well, what will you charge to paint my portrait? I don't want it myself, but my family do. If it doesn't cost too much I'll humor them."

"Five hundred dollars."

"Five hundred dollars! How many portraits can you paint in a year?"

"A dozen perhaps."

"That's $6,000 for sitting here daubing paint. Why, I don't pay any one of my heads of departments in my business half that, and they're all first class business men."

To this the artist made no reply.

"If you'll paint my portrait that size, painting, frame and all, for $250, it's a go."

"Five hundred is my price."

Goldwin spent some time trying to obtain a reduction. Finally it occurred to him that, after all, perhaps, he would not need to pay anything till the portrait was finished and the artist, having expended his time on it, would then probably take less for it rather than have it on his hands.

"You'll want your money, I suppose," he said, "on delivery of the goods."

"Yes."

"Very well; go ahead."

Beckwith arranged with his subject for the sittings, and Goldwin departed. While the man of business was planning to beat the artist, the artist was planning to beat the man of business. But Goldwin was in this respect in his element, while Beckwith was not. Though during the sittings that followed he racked his brain for some plan by which he might get his revenge for that past injustice which still rankled within him, his inventive powers failed him. One thing he resolved upon—he would paint the best portrait of his subject that he was capable of painting.

The features are expressive of the character, and Goldwin's features were no exception to the rule. Beckwith while painting drew his subject away from his covetousness by chatting with him on other subjects and thus caught his best expression. When the portrait was finished the man it represented seemed to live. One would suppose he was about to speak, and speak pleasantly. Goldwin told the artist to send the portrait to his house, but Beckwith preferred to keep it till he got his money and frankly told Goldwin that if he would send for it with a check for $500 it would be delivered to the messenger. Goldwin grumbled at this and went away.

The next day Beckwith received a note from his client stating that the portrait did not come up to his expectations and he had concluded not to accept it. Beckwith made no reply to the note and in time received another stating that since Goldwin preferred to pay for the time spent on the portrait he would pay half the amount charged, $250. To this also Beckwith paid no attention, but sent the picture to a dealer for sale.

One day Goldwin was informed that his portrait was hanging in an art store; that it was being visited by connoisseurs and pronounced a remarkable piece of work. It had not yet been sold, for the artist had set a very high price on it. Goldwin at once went to the store, saw his portrait and asked the dealer the price for it. He was informed that it was $10,000. Goldwin went at once to an attorney, whom he directed to take steps to claim the portrait as his property. But when the lawyer called for the correspondence in the case and read copies of his client's letters to Beckwith he said he had no case.

Goldwin found himself in an unpleasant position. His portrait—pronounced a work of art—was for sale, and persons were asking why he did not buy it. To do so would cost him $9,500 more than the price he would have paid had he accepted it. He sent an agent to Beckwith to try to effect a compromise. The agent returned with a statement from the artist that the painting was making a great reputation for him and he had decided not to sell it, but keep it before the public. Goldwin decided not to be "done" that way and let the matter rest.

The picture was withdrawn from exhibition, and when it appeared again the covetous expression that had been left out was in it. This being reported to the original, he went to see it again and was furious. Again he went to his lawyer and directed him to prosecute the artist for ridiculing him before the world. The lawyer showed him cartoons of prominent men in the newspapers and informed him that it would be much more difficult for him to recover in his own case than for these to do so. Besides, any jury would decide against him. If he wished to own the picture he must pay the price.

Goldwin sent again to Beckwith, asking him to make a price on the portrait. Beckwith made a price of $25,000. Goldwin made no reply to the offer. Again the picture was withdrawn, and when it reappeared the covetous look on the face had become miserly. Goldwin tried again to buy it, but the price had gone up to $30,000. Goldwin feared that if he did not pay it the expression would become worse and the price would go higher.

He sent word to the artist to ask whether, if the $30,000 was paid, he would restore the original expression to the face. Beckwith agreed to do so and intimated that if the money were paid him he would distribute it among the poor. This closed the bargain, the covetous look on the face disappeared, and the poor were richer by $30,000.

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

Many Things That People Do That Seriously Injure Their Health.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

FROM the way people cling to life, from the measures they adopt to avoid disease, one would think that their most profound study would be the laws that would make them healthy and extend their period of life, but when we examine their habits, when we put the conduct of the human family beneath the searchlight of science, we find that most of the things they do tend toward shortening their life period and toward the production of disease. This is rather a gloomy aspect of the question, but it is true.

The dreamy optimist who can see sunshine through the darkest cloud is not always the best friend to humanity; neither is the pessimist who sees nothing but the cloud, but the true friend of humanity is the one who can stand midway between and see the facts as they exist and tell them in plain language and thereby relieve suffering and aid in extending our period on earth. This is what I have endeavored to do.

As stated in one of my previous articles, man gets his growth at about twenty-four years and dies at little less than thirty-nine. If he should live eight times his period of maturity, as do all other animals, his period of life would be about 200 years. The fact that he does not do this is evidence conclusive that there is something wrong—that he is committing some fundamental error that is shortening his life and rendering him less able to enjoy the time he does live. The purpose of this article is to point out some of these mistakes and suggest a few remedies.

Wrong Eating.

Man is by nature a vegetarian. From this healthy and natural custom, however, he has departed and preys like a wild beast upon his brother animals. When we take the flesh of another animal into our bodies we must take in the uric acid, the toxic carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide poisons that reside in all flesh food. This adds greatly to the same poisons that are residual in our own bodies. Inability of the system to throw off these poisons causes disease and shortens life.

Instead of studying our diet as we would our business and balancing our food as we would our cash, we eat at haphazard. It is a system of guesswork. The most skillful mechanics and the most learned of our population are called upon to construct our houses and machinery, to cut and make our clothes, but the most ignorant of our population lay out our diet.

The city people are fed from subcellars. The food is selected, prepared and combined by uneducated persons, who neither know nor care anything about the harmonious chemistry of the things they serve. The one primary object is to appeal to the taste, which causes people to eat more than they should.

Food Should Suit Age.

Bread is the great American staple of diet, and it cereal starch—that is, everything made out of corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley or rice—is the most difficult of all foods to digest and convert into energy. Food should suit age.

These cereal products are composed largely of starch. The principal purpose of starch is to make bone, cartilage and teeth. When a person is grown, middle aged or old he needs but very little of these foods, and yet starch composes probably 50 per cent of the human diet. Inability of the body, therefore, to cast out this great excess of unused matter is the cause of a tremendous amount of disease, such as stomach and intestinal fermentation, intestinal gas, rheumatism, Bright's disease, sclerosis of the arteries and liver and consequent nervousness and insomnia. A book could be written upon the evil effects of cereal starch and the subject would not be exhausted.

The overconsumption of acid fruits is another fundamental error in nutrition. If we were living in the tropics, where the pores of the skin were constantly open, the body could eliminate and volatilize a great deal of acid, but in our northern climate such articles as grape fruit, lemons, limes, pineapple, apricots and all sour fruits should never be taken except in exceedingly hot weather. When taken at other times the tendency is to ferment other foods, crystallize the starch atom which makes the blood crystal, which in its turn makes rheumatism, gout, lumbago, knotted hands and feet, stiffness and premature old age.

The overconsumption of sweets is another mistake in our diet. The carbohydrate (starch and sugar) element is prominent in nearly all of our foods, and when we add to this pure concentrated cane sugar in any quantity, especially in the hundreds of combinations which compose the desserts on the average table, we are burdening the digestion and assimilation of our food and especially the elimination of waste. The failure of the body to utilize sweets and throw off the excess is a most prolific source of disease.

Overeating.

Overeating is one of the greatest errors of civilized people. There is nothing more conducive to this habit than the average "good dinner," composed of six to a dozen courses. We eat all that we should of probably some good, plain food; then we change from one thing to another, appealing to a different set of taste buds with each change, until we have laden the stomach with twice or perhaps three times as much food as the body needs.

If the stomach cannot dispose of it indigestion, fermentation and sour stomach result. This poisons every ounce of food that passes through the intestinal tract. If the stomach can dispose of it and it is taken into the cells we become superfat, laden with adipose tissue that we do not need and that possesses no item of strength to its own support. It is as much a burden as carrying so much brick on our shoulders day in and day out.

The surplus fat accumulates around the vital organs, limiting the capacity of the lungs to purify the blood. It also accumulates around the heart making the action of that much over worked organ more and more difficult. This is why fat people have no endurance and often fall down with vertigo and dizziness.

Endurance is measured almost entirely by the ability of the lungs to oxidize and purify the blood.

Wrong Drinking.

In addition to man's "civilized" errors in eating, he has made nearly as many mistakes in his drinking habits. Pure water, designed by nature as the great universal solvent, the helper, the digester of foods, the maker of good blood, is the last thing man seems to want to drink. Instead of this purifying, life giving beverage, he takes whisky, brandy, cordial, rum, gin, beer, wine of a hundred kinds, fermented grape juice and the hundreds of soda fountain concoctions, bubbling, sparkling vichies, sharp tasting carbonated waters, anything and everything except the pure article.

In addition to these mistakes the old dieticians have told him for a hundred years not to drink with his meals, the hypostasis of these good old teachers being that water diluted the gastric juice. Modern science shows that this is the very thing that should be done; that man does not take enough water with his food.

The normal human body is composed of 66 per cent water, and the average meal is composed of only 25 to 30 per cent water. If this difference is not made up by drinking pure water, then the stomach calls to its aid a large amount of gastric juice, which robs the body of its normal amount of moisture and sours and ferments the food. Every meal, therefore, should be composed of 66 per cent water, but the liquid should be water, nothing but water.

Tobacco and Liquor.

The tobacco and liquor habits are probably the most universal and the most injurious vices of civilized people.

Liquor is a stimulant that not only dethrones the reason, but poisons the body, and thus the heart action is quickened in the effort of nature to oxidize and cast out these poisons, while tobacco is a sedative which paralyzes, as it were, and slows down the action of the heart and the general circulatory and vital processes.

All the mistakes and errors above recited are difficult, troublesome, expensive and worse than useless. Man's health would be as much superior to what it now is as pure water is superior to beer and whisky if he would obey the simple laws of his organization, and his period of life would gradually increase until in a few generations he could live out his natural period of 200 years if he would obey the three great fundamental laws of life—natural eating, natural exercise and natural breathing.

Day Is Advertised Better Than Night

By HOLLAND.

THE day is a more popular time than night. Most of the work of the world is done while the sun shines, and only that which can't be done at other hours is performed while darkness reigns.

The day is the more popular and the more fully utilized because it is better advertised. The sun is the great publicity agent. It forces all to see and to remember. If it were possible to advertise any product of man as well as sunlight is advertised that particular product would drive all competitors from the field. Any breakfast food, baking powder, brand of shoes, style of furniture, cough drop, patent medicine, or what not, if it were only as well known as daylight, would have a monopoly of trade that would defy all rivals.

Such successful advertising of the works of man is not possible, but it can be followed at a distance. Successful manufacturers and merchants do follow it, and as a result the best advertised articles are the most widely sold. This is due to the fact that advertising makes the name of an article known, and it also insures its quality. Goods must be of superior merit to make it profitable to advertise them.

ADVERTISING MEANS RELIABILITY.

MANY DROPPED AS VOTERS

About Equally Divided Among the Wards

Under a recent law passed by the legislature the names of all registered voters of the previous year who failed to be assessed the present year by the Assessors, and whose names were therefore dropped from the voting lists, must be notified that they have been left off by the Assessors and that if they will call at Assessors office and get assessed their names will be restored to the voting lists.

The Assistant Assessors in their rounds always fail to find many who should be assessed. The result is that when the voting lists are made up by the Registrars many voters fail to find their names. Under the present law however the Clerk of the Registrars has to notify all of these parties that they have not been assessed and that their names have been dropped and that if they desire their names put back on the voting lists without going through the form of registration they must visit the Assessors and get assessed. This year the Clerk of the Registrars has found that 522 names were left off. These have been notified according to law. The list of omissions by wards is as follows:—

HEALTH CONGRESS AT BUFFALO WILL BE AN IMPORTANT EVENT

Will Discuss Pernicious Conditions In Public Schools of the United States.

Conference Takes Place Aug. 25-30, Under Patronage of President Wilson.

THE most important health conference that has ever been held in the United States will take place in Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 25-30, when the fourth international congress on school hygiene meets in that city. It is the most important conference, because educational experts have come to realize that the most potent factor in dealing with the health problems of any nation is the education of the people to know and understand the laws and influences which govern individual and public health.

Many important public health and hygiene conferences have been held in this country and abroad, but heretofore all these have dealt principally with adult or infant life. When the individual has reached adult life he has attained an age when health education has to be forced upon him, while in infant life the individual is too young to receive a lasting impression. It is with the school children, then, that the most effective and lasting work can be accomplished in dealing with the health problems that confront humanity. Therefore the assertion that the fourth international congress on school hygiene will be the most important health conference ever held in the United States will find few to contradict it.

The Importance Realized.

The congress is being conducted under the patronage of the president of the United States and is being supported by practically every civilized government in the universe, showing that at last we are coming to recognize the value of having a proper foundation upon which to build and support the health of the individuals who form or support the various governments.

For the period of time within the recollection of any one living at the present date the health of the armies and navies of the world has been presided over by the most effective corps of medical and health experts possible to secure. It is but recently, however, that the governments of the world have begun to learn that those who are to be their future citizens should receive the same care and consideration that is given the armies and navies.

The health of the school child is, indeed, far more important to the nation than that of its fighting men—in the next generation at least.

Many governments, like our own, make it compulsory for children within certain age limits to attend school, but until the recent past little thought or consideration was given to the conditions which surround the public school children of the country from the health standpoint, except that which was exerted by the boards of education in the different communities.

Tuberculosis In Schools.

It is only when such startling reports as the following from the Michigan state board of health become current that the governments, municipal, state and national, become active in dealing with these problems:

"In making a study of the occupational relation to tuberculosis one cannot help being impressed by the frequent occurrence of tuberculosis among schoolteachers. A careful study of the following table will give a very comprehensive idea of the situation:

"Over a period of years 52.4 per cent of the deaths among schoolteachers between the ages of twenty-five and thirty-four were due to tuberculosis, while only 25.8 per cent of the deaths among all persons in Michigan between the ages of twenty-five and thirty-four were due to this disease. Among schoolteachers of all ages 27.6 per cent of the deaths were due to tuberculosis, while among all persons of all ages only 9.4 per cent were due to this disease.

"This is a matter which should engage the active attention not only of teachers, but of the patrons of the public schools. It would appear from our data that the conditions under which public school teachers labor are conducive to tuberculosis. This is, in a great many instances, an easily established fact. Now, this ought not to be. The schoolteacher, who should be considered as the most valuable factor in the establishment of an efficient citizenship, should not be required to work under conditions which are relatively more conducive to the occurrence of tuberculosis than other professions.

Precautions Necessary.

"Extreme precautions should be observed by school commissioners and boards of education to prevent teachers who are affected with tuberculosis from continuing in the service. This should be done in the interest of the teacher and in the interest of the pupils. The solution of the situation, however, should not rest simply with the attempt to prevent infected teachers from being employed. The school officials and the patrons of our public schools should be united in an effort to remedy the existing conditions, that the public schoolroom can in no sense be considered as a place in which one's health is subjected to unfavorable conditions. A more active interest in considering the principles of proper construction, warming, ventilating and lighting of school buildings will go a great way toward remedying this situation."

Mouth Hygiene Instruction.

The above is one of the strongest pleas for teaching mouth hygiene that has been published by the health department of any state in the Union. The writer has also contended that the public schoolteachers of the country are not paid salaries which are commensurate with the obligations that are placed upon them in the fulfillment of their duties.

If practically three times as many schoolteachers are dying from tuberculosis in this country as are people in other walks of life, because of the conditions which surround the teachers, what must be the effect produced upon the schoolteachers of this country by the various other germs which are just as readily transferred from individual to individual as are the germs which produce tuberculosis? And what must be the influence upon our boys and girls who are compelled by the various governments to attend school from six to twelve years under the same conditions and surrounded by the same influences that surround the teaching profession?

EUGENIC MARRIAGE FAILS.

Husband Accuses Bride and Companion of Kicking Him Out.

"Eugenic marriages are a failure," according to Edwin Ferron of Lynn, Mass., the first eugenic husband in Massachusetts, who nursed a badly bruised face while he denounced his assailant and his wife. Perron was married about a month ago, both parties producing physicians' certificates as to their fitness to marry.

Perron told the police that he returned home to find his house in darkness. He said that when he entered his room a strange man who was with his wife leaped at him and hit him, knocking him downstairs. His wife and the stranger fled, according to Perron.

Perron said he and his wife had quarreled frequently.

"I thing eugenic marriages are a failure," reiterated the eugenic husband to the police.

PREPARE FOR NEW FLOOD.

Natives of Panama Are Building an Ark, Imitating Noah.

Word lately arrived in Panama from Penonome, a town in the interior of the republic, that Segundo Sanchez, a native of that section, has proclaimed himself the Messiah.

He has predicted the destruction of the world by a deluge in a short time, and some of his eighty adherents are engaged in building an ark, while others are busy collecting in pairs animals of all species found in their region.

His followers also have armed themselves, and in view of this fact the Panama government is taking steps to avert possible trouble by them.

VENISON MAY REPLACE BEEF.

Possibility of Using Reindeer In Alaska Is Being Investigated.

It may be that the purchase of a reindeer steak or roast will be possible not very long hence in almost any meat market in the United States and that venison, now reserved for the wealthy, will be within the reach of every family.

Reindeer are multiplying so rapidly on government lands in Alaska that T. N. Conway, manager in the northwest for Armour & Co., has gone to Alaska to investigate the possibility of shipping the meat to the United States. Before going Mr. Conway said the suggestion of using the reindeer as a food supply was made by government representatives to J. Ogden Armour. Mr. Armour believed that, with the existing transportation facilities, it would not be possible to sell the meat at retail in eastern cities for less than 75 cents a pound. He referred the question to Mr. Conway, however.

Mr. Conway is investigating along the arctic circle and along the shores of the Bering sea north of Nome, where the herds are increasing very rapidly. It is his opinion that reindeer, caribou and other animals thriving in the great open regions of northern Alaska and Canada will become an important factor in America's meat supply as soon as railways have been extended farther into that territory.

Appointed Ten Policewomen.

Mayor Harrison of Chicago has appointed ten policewomen in accordance with a recent order passed by the city council.

The policewomen will be assigned to duty at public bathing beaches and dance halls. Their uniforms have not yet been decided upon.

GREAT SLASH IN EXPRESS RATES

Ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission

GO INTO EFFECT OCT. 15, 1913

New Price List Much Lower Than Parcel Post Rates In Many Instances—Reduction of High Cost of Living Aimed at—Many Drastic Changes Provided For

Washington, Aug. 5.—Sweeping reductions in express rates on parcels all over the country were ordered by the interstate commerce commission. The new reduced rates become effective Oct. 15.

The reductions range from about 10 to 60 percent, relieving shippers from exorbitant charges.

For two years the new rates are to be "experimental," the commission declared. Unless too great loss of revenue results to the express companies they will become permanent. The cost to the companies is estimated at $26,000,000 annually.

The express companies vigorously opposed the rate reductions, first ordered June 8, 1912. The rates were suspended pending further investigation. Now they are finally ordered to go into effect.

The companies originally alleged that the new rates would reduce their revenues 30 percent. Later they said the loss would be 15.33. Despite this opposition, the commission ordered the two years' trial, beginning next October.

The order was the result of a broad investigation of express rates begun over a year ago. It forces direct and close competition between the express companies and the federal parcel post. In many instances the new express rates are much lower than the parcel post rates.

Practically all rates on parcels under fifty pounds are radically lowered. On small packages carried more than 200 miles and less than 3000 miles the new rates are nearly all lower than the parcel post rates. Over 3000 miles the express and parcel post service will cost the same.

Reduction of the "high cost of living" is especially aimed at by the commission in shaving the rates. It orders that rates on articles of food and drink be only 75 percent or the ordinary first class rates. Rates on bread, newspapers and magazines are not materially changed.

That the express companies can, if they will, meet parcel post competition and also conform to the reduced rates, is declared by the commission in the following illuminating phrase:

"The commission's conclusion is that any losses of business for the future may be easily replaced by new business if the express carriers are so inclined, and the establishment of the parcel post is not a justification for any higher scale of rates than the one here shown to be reasonable."

Other drastic changes in express business are ordered by the commission. A new form of express receipt, more carefully guarding shippers' rights, is prescribed. It provides an indemnity to shippers of $50 on every parcel under 100 pounds.

MOTORS ACROSS ALASKA

Sheldon Accomplishes First Trip Ever Made In Automobile

Valdez, Alaska, Aug. 5.—The first automobile trip from Fairbanks, in the heart of the interior of Alaska, to the coast was completed when Robert Sheldon drove his five-passenger car into Valdez, having covered the 363 miles in fifty-four hours, actual running time.

Sheldon, with two passengers, were forced to make a long detour because of road conditions.

Koehn Rows 2567 Miles

New Orleans, Aug. 5.—Andrew Koehn, quartermaster in the United States navy, returned to New Orleans from the lighthouse at South Pass, after finishing his 2567-mile trip down the Mississippi river from Lake Itaska, in a ten-foot steel rowboat. The voyage consumed forty-five days and twenty hours.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Quincy Knights Receive Fourth Degree

Nearly all of the Quincy members of the Knights of Columbus who have taken the fourth degree were present at Mechanics hall Monday evening to see the degree conferred upon a class of 500 among whom were three candidates from Quincy lodges.

The exemplification of the degree is reported to have been grand. The conferring of the degree required a large number of men and a senic setting of great magnitude. The arrangements for the evenings work were complete in every detail and the decorations and light effects were so worked out, and the work itself so well rendered that nothing but the highest praise was heard from the 1200 who saw the ceremony. Lavish use of butning and flags and insignia of the order transformed the interior of the hall into a scene of splendor.

The work was in charge of Supreme Master Reddin, assisted by Vice Supreme Master Hanrahan and the following degree corps: Michael J. Downey secretary, Rev. James J. McCarthy chaplain, Capt. Daniel J. Murphy marshal, J. Philip O'Connell, William J. Shanahan, George E. Larkin, Charles J. F. O'Brien, Robert F. Hurley, Frank J. Flynn, Michael E. Fitzgerald, Arthur L. Gould, John S. Quinn, Francis J. D. Ferguson and Lawrence Watson 2d.

One of the features was the rendition of the musical portion by a choir of 100 voices, under the direction of Pio DeLuca, with Paul V. Donovan as organist.

Those from Quincy to participate in the work were W.W J. Sullivan, J. J. Fallon, and I. T. Machedon of Quincy council.

Quincy and Ave Maria councils were also represented by many of its members who have already ben elevated to the fourth degree rank.

HOOPES—OSBORNE.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the office of the City Clerk Monday afternoon, with City Clerk Crane as the officiating official, when William W. Hoopes, Jr., assistant inspector of machinery at the Fore River Co., was united in marriage to Miss Jennie B. Osborne of Philadelphia. Both the bride and groom come from Philadelphia, and they will make their home on Massachusetts avenue.

KNEW WHAT HE WANTED.

A small boy went into a South Boston drug store, wrinkled his face, rubbed his head, and rubbed his left foot up and down his right leg in an effort to remember something that had escaped him.

"Say," he began, "will you tell me the name of the place where we Americans have so many soldiers?"

"Fort Sheridan?"

"On, no; it's further away than that and a new place."

"The Phillippines?"

"That ain't just it, but it's somewhere around there."

"Perhaps you mean Manilla."

"Manilla! That's right! I knew I would get it after a while. I want a bottle of Manilla extract for flavoring. They're goin' to have ice cream."

HIS LAST COLIC.

There was a poor old carter whose sole means of livelihood was an old white horse that was periodically troubled with colic.

On these occasions a neighboring veterinary attended to the needs of the suffering animal, and the frequency of these spells and their fortunate endings caused the owner to look upon them with unconcern.

But one night the old horse made a few desperate kicks and breathed his last.

"Well," said the doctor, "old Jim will work for you no more."

"Is he dead?" exclaimed the bereaved carter. "That's odd. He's had the colic twenty times already, but he's never done this before."

Battleships in Warfare Near Long Island Sound

Three of the Quincy built battleships were in the squandron of eleven great gray battleships, the most powerful fighting craft in the United States navy which steamed out of Narragansett Bay in a long line Monday bent on the theoretical destruction of the fortifications guarding Long Island Sound, thus opening the way to the ultimate occupation of New York city.

The vanguard of the attacking squadron, 20 destroyers, five submarines and seven auxiliaries, including refrigerator, hospital and supply ships sailed Sunday. While the plans of the naval commanders have been kept with the utmost secrecy, it is understood that either all the vessels will rendezvous at sea and there receive detailed instructions as to the method of attack, or that each vessel already has been assigned its part in the mimic warfare and is now endeavoring to carry out the commander's orders.

While the maneuvers which will last a week, are not considered as a contest between the army and navy, the game will be played under conditions that would prevail in actual warfare, with the intention of giving both the military and naval branches of the service practical experience in coast defense and coast attack, respectively.

LAUNCHING AT BATH.

The torpedo destroyer Cummings will be launched at Bath, Maine, Wednesday afternoon, at the plant of the Bath Iron Works. The Cummings is a sister ship to the Cassin, recently launched, and belongs to the largest type of destroyers in the American navy.

CLAN MacGREGOR, O. S. C.

A special meeting of Clan MacGregor No. 5, O. S. C., will be held in Clan MacGregor Hall, Wednesday Aug. 6, at 7.30 P. M. for the purpose of electing Clan Physician.

MINISTERS SUDDEN DEATH

Rev. Antti Raketti Passes Away

Preaching Almost Daily

Rev. Antti Raketti, the venerable associate of Rev. John E. Lillback, died suddenly at 5 o'clock this morning of heart failure. For two years he has been a travelling missionary of the Finnish Congregational church in Massachusetts. On Saturday he preached at Carver, and on Sunday at South Carver and Tremont, and was enthusiastic over his success there. At his home at 30 Nelson street Tuesday evening, at a gathering of neighbors he preached for nearly two hours, it always being a delight to him to explain the Bible.

He retired about 10 P. M. Later his good wife found him beside the bed in prayer. She spoke to him but received no response. Later she tried to arouse him, and then realized that he was ill. Dr. Reynolds and Rev. Mr. Lillback were summoned, but he passed away soon after sunrise.

Rev. Mr. Raketti was born in Finland Jan. 15, 1828, the son of a farmer. He entered the army at 18 years, and at 23 while in the army was converted and began to preach to the soldiers. After service of nine years in the army, he became a preacher in Finland continuing in the work there for 22 years.

When he came to America 26 years ago he was a conservative. He preached all over the United States. About five years ago he met Rev. Mr. Lillback, and entered a joint debate with him. The Quincy pastor won, and after that Rev. Mr. Raketti was a liberal and a devout admirer of Rev. Mr. Lillback, and became a co-worker in the missionary field.

He was a fine old man, fatherly to all; referring to his congregation as sons and daughters. Rev. and Mrs. Raketti had 14 sons and daughters of their own, of whom 12 are living in North Dakota. He was proud of the fact that he was an American citizen.

Funeral services will be held on Friday at the Finnish Congregational church, Buckley street, at 2 P. M. All the Finnish Clergymen in the state will be invited.

TO BE MARRIED AT PAWLET, VT.

Quincy Teacher to be Bride of Local Business Man

An August wedding of local interest will be that of Miss Elvira A. Horner and Charles H. Cox, to take place on Monday, the 18th, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Abbie E. Horner, in Pawlet, Vt. It will be a quiet ceremony, and after the wedding breakfast the newly married pair will leave on an auto trip to the Adirondacks, stopping at Lake Champlain and Lake George.

Miss Horner has taught in the Wollaston grammar school for the past three years and has many warm friends there. She is a graduate of the Plymouth, N. H., High school and the New Hampshire Normal school.

Mr. Cox, who is in the wholesale paper business here, was the all-round athletic and gymnastic champion of the Cambridge Y. M. C. A., when he lived in that city. He has recently resided in Wollaston. Mr. Cox and his bride will make their home in Watertown.

OPEN RACE AT MARBLEHEAD

Many Quincy Boats Take Part in Tuesdays Event

A fine racing breeze off Marblehead Tuesday brought out a fleet of 117 yachts for the second racing day of the mid-summer series. It was an open regatta under the auspices of the Boston yacht club and it was an ideal racing day in every way. The race is of local interest from the fact that there are many Quincy yachts at Marblehead this week. The new sonder boat Harpoon, challenger for the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup was out Tuesday with her new set of sails and took part in the sonder class. The race in this class however was won by the Ellen with the Cima second and Harpoon third.

In class A, the Nutmeg was again a winner with John T. Cavanagh Meemer second, the Eleanor and Marie L, finishing near the bottom of the list.

In class H the Thordis of ex-Commodore Frank E. Dawes of the Wollaston club was an easy winner having a lead of nearly two minutes over the Sinbad, the second boat in.

In class S, the Martiza won first position with the Waweenock second and Zoe third.

Local interest however centered in the class D, or Cape Cat boats where the old rivals were lined up against each other. Thus far at Marblehead the honors have been divided between the Clara of ex-Commodore Robbins and the Dartwell of ex-Commodore Whittemore. The Dartwell won Saturday and the Clara Monday. Tuesday it was the Dartwells turn again and she won with a lead of nearly three minutes corrected time, the Iris and Mudjekeewis last year's champions finishing near the bottom.

The summary:

The corrected time was:

| | |
|---|---|
| Dartwell, I. M. Whittemore | 2:27:45 |
| Clara, H. W. Robbins | 2:31:34 |
| Dolly, III, W. W. Arnold | 2:33:35 |
| Mudjekeewis, E. W. Emery | 2:35:43 |
| Iris, F. F. Crane | 2:36:54 |
| Graylin, C. V. Nickerson | 2:53:46 |

ORDERED TO REPORT.

Dr. Harry W. Blaisdell of Faxon avenue, who recently passed an examination at Washington as assistant surgeon dentist in the U. S. Navy, with rank of second lieutenant (junior grade) received orders this week to report at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and left for that station immediately. Dr. Blaisdell is a native of Portsmouth, N. H., and has been a resident of Quincy for the past three years.

ARRAIGNED FOR LARCENY

Colored Man Was Soliciting Funds

For a Boston Institution

A young colored man who gave his name as Charles Beverly, and his address as 142 Northampton street, Boston, was arrested Tuesday afternoon by Officers Whelan and Ford for soliciting funds. From what the police could learn, Beverly made his appearance in Quincy, on Monday and had been going from house to house soliciting funds for the Christian nonsectarian Rescue Home for Old Ladies and Homeless Children at 135 East Lenox street, Boston.

Complaints were received by the police Tuesday about the party, and Lieut. Hanson got into communication with the institution, and was informed that they had no authorized collector in this city. The officers were then sent out after the man and he was arrested on Edison street.

The book which he carried showed that he had convassed Hingham and towns south of Quincy and had collected upwards of $150. The book however showed that he had only collected $1.40 in Quincy from half a dozen different parties.

Rev. G. W. Tillman, head of the institution, came to Quincy later, and said that he did not recognize the man. He however said that the certificate and badge which Beverly carried were genuine. He further said that some certificates and two badges had been stolen from the office of the institution and that the officers had been trying to locate them.

Beverly claimed that the badge and certificate had been given him by a man named Walker who was an authorized agent of the institution and that he was working for him. Rev. Mr. Tillman said that Walker was an agent all right, but that he had not left their employ as Beverly had stated.

This morning Rev. Mr. Tillman and several other officers of the institution came to court to testify in the case. Mr. Tillman said that he had seen Walker and that he had denied knowing Beverly.

After consultation with the court it was decided to charge Beverly with larceny, and later he was arraigned on that complaint.

Beverly was arraigned later before Judge Avery on a complaint charging him with larceny. He entered a plea of not guilty and the case went over until Friday for a hearing.

J. T. COLLINS PASSES AWAY

Employee of City and Member of A. O. H.

James T. Collins, for many years one of the Street department of the city, passed away Tuesday at his home 31 Gay street after an illness of some duration. About two years ago, while at work near the old reservoir, Mr. Collins horse broke through the ice into the water. Mr. Collins jumped in and rescued the animal but in doing so contracted a severe cold from which he never fully recovered. He was a member of Division 5, A. O. H. He leaves a widow and one son, the latter being one of the Daily Ledger news boys. His funeral will be held Friday and will be attended by the members of Division 5.

LEFT TODAY FOR COLORADO

Commander and Mrs. W. E. Piper To Attend Conclave

Em. Sir. Walter E. Piper, Commander of Quincy Commandery, Knights Templars and Mrs. Piper left this noon with St. Olmer Commandery of Uphams Corner for Denver, Col. to attend the trienial conclave of the Grand Commandery of United States. They were also accompanyed by Mrs. Ellen F. Bush who will leave the party at Chicago, from which point she goes to Evanston, Ill. The itinerary of the trip calls for the party to leave Boston at 1 o'clock and to arrive in Chicago Thursday at 5.31 P. M. Arrive at Kansas City, Friday at 11 A. M. Colorado Springs, Saturday at 7.15 P. M. The party will remain at the Alamo hotel, Colorado Springs until Monday morning at 7.25 when they leave for Denver, Col., which city they are due to reach that same day at 11 A. M. While in Denver they will make their headquarters at the Hotel West Denver where they remain until Thursday at 8.55 when they leave for Galesburg, Ill., arriving at Chicago Monday, Aug. 18. Commander Piper and Mrs. Piper will leave the party at Chicago and visit Evanston, where they resided for a time after their marriage. They expect to reach Quincy on or about Monday Aug. 25.

While in Denver the visiting Sir. Knights will be royally entertained and Commander and Mrs. Piper are looking forward to a royal good time.

JONES—LAWRENCE.

Word has just been received of the marriage at Swansea July 16, by Rev. J. Wayne Jones of Mr. Richard Jones of Ritchie road and Miss Elsie Lawrence of Quincy Point. Mr. and Mrs. Jones left immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip to New York and Vermont from which they returned this week and are now domiciled at their home 32 Ritchie road where they are receiving the congratulations of their many friends.

WILL MUFFLE ENTIRE FLEET.

Captain Grady of the police boat "Palm" presented eight complaints to the East Boston court on Monday. Captain Hird, the harbor master of Boston, presented sixteen complaints for boats belonging to T wharf fishermen which were not muffled in a reasonable manner. The defendants inthe first four cases pleaded guilty, and upon the promise of counsel for all the fishermen that the entire fleet from T wharf would be muffled down, the four cases were placed on file, and the other cases were withdrawn. The muffling of this fleet should effect some relief all along the North and South shores of Massachusetts bay.

ALL READY FOR REUNION

Old Fire Vets Will Gather at Houghs Neck Saturday

The members of the Washington M. French Hose Association and their many friends are looking forward to next Saturday when the annual midsummer reunion of the association will be held. The headquarters for the reunion this year will be at Norteman's, Houghs Neck where the old time fire fighters will gather soon after 1 o'clock. They will sport themselves on the broad piazza of Mr. Norteman's house during the early afternoon and many of the fires of olden days will be fought over again. Promptly at 5 o'clock the alarm, which will call the veterans and guests to assemble around the long tables in the dining room will be sounded and at the simple command, "man the brakes" the assault on the good things will begin. Dinner over and before the command "Limber up" is given Fred F. French the first and only president of the association will have a word to say by way of welcome.

Other remarks of a very brief nature may also be expected from Mayor Stone and ex-Mayor Shea who never tires of telling what the Granite used to do, and whose remarks will be backed up by Overseer Elcock, an ex-Engineer attached to the famous old company. There will also be other remarks along the same line. Usually President Whiton of the City Council is present to shout for the old Vulture but as he is away on an automobile trip it is doubtful if he is able to attend. However it is safe to say that the Vulture, and old Niagara will not lack for sponsors.

RIVADAVIA IN DRY DOCK

Went Into Dry Dock This Noon, For Minor Repairs

The Argentine battleship Rivadavia, which left Quincy Sunday night, arrived in New York last night after an uneventful trip. The weather was fine during the trip and those on board enjoyed the trip. She went into dry dock at the Brooklyn navy yard this noon to have some minor repairs made to her hull and to have the plates cleaned from the sea growth. She will be in dry dock for several days.

ELECTIONS NEAR AT HAND

Special Meeting of Council Necessary

To Name Polling Places

It is expected that Mayor Stone will issue a call Thursday for a special meeting of the City Council for next Monday evening. There are several matters which must be attended to. Just what will go into the call has not been determined, but the following matters will be included:

To receive the appointment of election of officers.

To designate the polling places for the caucus.

To call the caucus.

The last item is relative to the fixing of the amount which the city may raise for current expenses in 1914. Under the law the City Council must give a public hearing on the question and it is understood that the business Monday evening will be to fix a date for the hearing. As there are some other matters that require the attention of the council they will probably be included in the call, if issued.

LAUNCHING AT FORE RIVER

A car float for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad was successfully launched at the Fore River yards this noon. There was no function of any kind. The blocks were simply knocked from under her keel and she slid overboard. The car float is about 325 feet long.

Division 5, A. O. H.

The members of Division 5, A. O. H. are hereby notified that a special meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock to take action on the death of our late member, James T. Collins of 31 Gay street. A full attendance of members is requested.

If you don't raise more small fruit in your garden, how are the boys of the neighborhood going to subsist?

It is not so much a question whether you can afford an automobile, as whether it is safe to give your creditors something tangible to levy on.

These I. W. W. methods cannot be wholly a surprise to any one who has ever taught a class of boys in Sunday school.

It is strange how many more sick friends there are to be visited Sunday morning after you get an automobile, particularly when the dust has been laid.

The University of Wisconsin is instructing 5000 students by mail, but if you want to learn baseball, you have got to locate at some college.

As the theory of the present currency system is to provide the most money at the times when the least is needed, almost very one favors changing it.

Several couples were seen at a summer hotel the other day doing a graceful waltz, but the management is trying to keep this antiquated exhibit out of the papers.

An effort is being made to stop betting on baseball, but it is feared that people won't go to the games if they can't lose their money.

With 75 automobile accidents a day this summer in New York state, everything seems to be done to make joy-riders have a good time.

There is a general movement among bootblacks for a higher price. They will probably be satisfied if the price is made 10 cents, with 5 cent tips for both the proprietor and the polisher.

This five minutes of silence to celebrate the anniversary of peace with England is a pretty idea, but probably Jack Johnson couldn't help cutting out his muffler.

CHURCH WORK IN SUMMER

Father and mother took it seriously. Even with the thermometer at 100 the customary pews were filled. Grandma was there, too, with a great palm leaf fan, which she swung back and forth sleepily with sluggish but regular rhythm. Mother snapped a jerky little black fan. Japanese fans were considered ungodly, as the red and yellow pictures took the eyes off the minister.

It was not thought proper to suspend or vary the sessions of Sunday school. The momentum of regular attendance would be lost. Besides, the young folks might go to walk, which would be demoralizing.

It is easy in these flippant days to laugh at the intense older generation. There was iron in the blood then. Even if it did make one's backbone as stiff as the old high pews, there was a foundation on which institutions were built to last.

Today the majority of people on Sunday are eating the dust of the next automobile ahead, roasting the umpire at the ball park, consuming peanuts and corn balls at pleasure resorts. If that is the best use they can make of it, let them do thus with clear conscience, and may the Lord be with them.

Still, it isn't always a day of rest. It is much cooler in the shady church than out on the sun baked road. The well trained choir may sound just as well as the squeaky merry-go-round. The minister may say quite as new things as the barker for the palmist.

For those cooped in towns, no Sunday is good that does not bring God's fresh air and sunshine. Happily trolleys and parks provide this for millions.

To find listeners, in the Babel of a summer Sunday, the minister must speak the language of those who hear. A problem from metaphysics may interest him. But Tom, Dick and Harry will go to sleep. He may not talk the language of the street. But he must talk about the problems of the street, the shop, the office, and the kitchen.

EMERGENCY BATTLESHIPS

Congress Asked to Build Three Immediately

The Quincy shipyard will be busy night and day if the emergency appropriation for new battleship is passed. A Washington dispatch to the Globe says:

In a resolution bristling with war scares Congressman Britten, a new Republican member from Chicago, on Tuesday asked the House to pass on emergency appropriation bill for the construction of three battleships. The resolution sets forth in dramatic form the danger of trouble with Japan and Mexico and then states that the United States is in a sad state of unpreparedness for war.

Mr. Britten announced that he will lay the matter before the Naval Committee, of which he is a member. He hopes to get favorable action by bringing to the attention of the committee the alleged activities of Japan in increasing its Navy.

He will lay before the committee a statement attributed to the vice minister of the Japanese Navy, Admiral Takarbe, to the effect that Japan should increase its Navy immediately to meet the added facilities the Panama Canal will give the American Fleet.

REUNION CO. C 4th. REG.

The forty-third annual reunion of Co. C, Fourth Regiment Association, of which several Quincy veterans are members will be held at Hotel Nantasket, Thursday. The program calls for a business meeting at 11.30 and dinner an hour later. Relatives and friends of comrades are cordially invited to join in the reunion. In the notice of the reunion sent out by Secretary F. B. Lee it states that the committee hope to see or hear from the following comrades. Naham Sampson, O. W. Allen, G. C. Durrell, W. O. Merritt, Harvey Merritt, J. R. Howe, M. G. Litchfield, C. S. Buss, J. C. Burns, J. W. Billings, H. T. Clark, Chandler Cutting, Albert Clapp, J. E. Curtis, S. P. Dalby, Michael Dunn, D. F. Goodwin, C. # ORDERED TO VENEZUELA

The cruiser DesMoines which was built at Quincy has been ordered to proceed to Venezuela because of another revolution which has been started by ex-President Castro. There are many Americans in Venezuela who are joyous over the news that the DesMoines is to protect them. The DesMoines was one of the first war vessels built by the Fore River Cor., in Quincy and she is constantly being mentioned in news dispatches, for the government finds much use for her in emergency cases. It is understood that there are several Quincy boys among her crew.

GARAGE OF FIRST AID.

Our Havana colleague, La Politica Comica, has taken up the cudgels against the indifference to human life of the automobilists of that city, abetted by the inaction of the municipal authorities. The latest from the facile pen of Senor Torriente is the following:

Nowadays, when a cautious citizen has to cross the Prado, he first makes his will and then bids his family a tearful good-bye.

Perhaps his mother-in-law will ask: "But where are you going? To the wars in Morocco?"

"No, mamma, but I am going to the Prado, which is the same thing."

"But there are no Moors in the Prado."

"But there are automobilists, who are worse. When one hears an automobile approaching, with its horn sounding, it is time to bid good-bye to the world."

In view of the daily accidents, the department of hospitals in considering a garage of first aid on the Prado, where they will have an assortment of cork legs and arms, pasteboard ears, cement noses and celluloid eyes for the unhappy victims. Every one who goes for a saunter on the Prado is warned that he is in danger of going to the garage of first aid.—N. Y. Times.

HARD TO SELECT UNBIASED JURY

Trial of Diggs is Begun in Court in San Francisco

CASE WHICH STIRRED NATION

Defendant Charged With Taking High School Girl to Reno, Violating White Slave Act—Caminetti to Be Tried Separately—No Decision on Change of Venue

San Francisco, Aug. 6.—As the climax of an escapade which stirred the nation from the Atlantic to the Pacific, involved the Washington administration, caused bitter diatribes in congress and cost John L. McNab of San Francisco his position as United States district attorney, Maury I. Diggs of Sacramento faced trial here, charged with violation of the Mann white slave act.

Diggs, who, with F. D. Caminetti, deserted his wife in Sacramento and fled to Reno, Nev., with two high school girls, Martha Warrington and Lola Norris, appeared before United States District Judge Van Fleet, with Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore Roche, special assistants to Attorney General McReynolds, as his prosecutors.

When Van Fleet took the bench Attorney Woodworth appeared for Diggs, assisting Counsel Coughlan, Devlin and Howe. Both Diggs and Caminetti were in court.

As soon as the case was called Woodworth, for the defense, entered a motion for a change of venue to Sacramento. Van Fleet declined to rule on the motion at present, saying he would wait until the talesmen with excuses had been weeded out. This has been taken to indicate that he would deny the motion. The preliminary examination of talesmen then proceeded.

It is expected that because of the great publicity of the case, some difficulty will be encountered in getting an unbiased jury. When this is obtained, however, it is probable both girls will be placed on the stand to tell their stories of the Reno adventure and what occurred at that time.

It had been the intention of John L. McNab, former district attorney, to try both Diggs and Caminetti for conspiracy to violate the Mann act. This plan, however, was abandoned when Sullivan and Roche were named to act, and Diggs, the first to be tried, will face a charge of actual violation of the law. The maximum penalty is five years in prison with conviction on each or any of the several counts.

Immediately upon the conclusion of the Diggs trial, which is expected to last about a week, Caminetti will be placed on trial on the same charge, with Miss Norris as the principal witness. Upon the conclusion of the Caminetti trial, Diggs and his attorney, Charles B. Harris, will face a jury on a charge of attmpting to suborn perjury in connection with the case.

FACES ANOTHER CHARGE

Bowman May Not Have Confined His Operations to One Hotel

Boston, Aug. 6.—As a result of the finding of several thousand dollars' worth of jewelry in the cottage of Isadore Bowman, negro, at 28 Tileston street, Everett, the police discovered that among the alleged loot was property said to have been stolen from Mrs. S. F. Day of Minneapolis in November, 1911, while Mrs. Day was a guest at the Copley Square hotel.

Bowman worked at the hotel at the time and the police will charge him with that theft when his case comes up in court.

Much of the loot alleged to have been stolen from the Hotel Vendome, where Bowman was formerly employed as a bellboy, has been recovered, and the police are confident that a further search will reveal more.

INQUIRY NOT DROPPED

McReynolds' Assistants Still Probing New Haven Road's Affairs

Washington, Aug. 6.—Various reports that the government's anti-trust investigation of the New Haven railroad had been suspended caused Attorney General McReynolds to formally deny that the work had been dropped.

"There has been no direction to suspend the investigation," said he. "The matter is proceeding just as it has been for quite a while."

The attorney general intimated that it would be some time before the findings of his assistants in charge of the work would be made public.

Missing Submarines Report

London, Aug. 6.—The two British submarines which were missing after participating in the recent naval maneuvers have reached their stations. Their commanders had not known the maneuvers had come to an end on Saturday.

Reinsch Named For China Post

Washington, Aug. 6.—The nomination of Professor Paul S. Reinsch of the University of Wisconsin, to be minister to China, was sent to the senate by President Wilson.

MAURY I. DIGGS.

One of the Defendants In California's White Slave Case.

STOREHOUSE WRECKED

Explosion Sends Iron Barrels Through Air Like Cannon Balls

Reading, Mass., Aug. 6.—People the immediate vicinity of the Sanford mills dodged iron barrels and a shower of bricks when the large storehouse in the mill yard blew up with a roar that was heard for miles, causing a damage of $20,000.

Heavy iron barrels, containing fifty gallons of a mixture of naphtha, lampblack and solvent, went flying through the air like cannon balls.

No one was in the building at the time, as the plant, which manufactures artificial leather, has been shut down for several days. The cause of the explosion is a mystery. The storehouse, a one-story brick building, with a roof of steel construction, was wrecked.

DRIVEN BY HUNGER TO GIVE SELF UP

Man Wanted For Murder Is In Hands of Police

Plymouth, Mass., Aug. 6.—Superano di Silva, charged by the police with the murder of John Steives, was arrested at the home of Manuel Wager, where he had gone in search of food. The man was thoroughly exhausted and told Wager he was tired of being a fugitive any longer and desired him to notify the police.

Di Silva said he had shaved off his mustache with the intention of disguising himself, but being acquainted in town and being hungry, decided to give himself up.

The prisoner admitted to the police, it is said, that he fired the shot that killed his countryman.

POLICEWOMEN ON DUTY

Will Look After Welfare of Chicago Women and Children

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Chicago's ten policewomen, clad in modest blue tailor-made suits and wearing silver stars and hats with blue bands, are on duty.

Their work will be mainly to look out for women and children in the public parks and other places of recreation.

The policewomen will visit the public dance halls, excursion boats, beaches and railroad stations and will try to keep young folks off the streets late at night. They will obtain information rather than make arrests, although on occasions they may be called upon to arrest some one.

SEVEN THOUSAND OUT

New York Knitting Mills Tied Up by Strike of Women

New York, Aug. 6.—Seven thousand women employed in East Side knitting mills went on strike, demanding shorter hours, higher pay and more sanitary working conditions.

It is estimated that more women are involved in the strike than in any labor disturbance in New York since the great shirtwaist strike of 1909-10.

Several thousand men went out in sympathy with the women workers. This is said to be the first tie-up in the knitting industry in this city.

Boston Broker Bankrupt

Boston, Aug. 6.—Arthur F. Dow, a Boston stock broker, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. Among his creditors are many women who have dealt in stocks with him.

Wilson Wants Pitt Statue

Washington, Aug. 6.—President Wilson asked permission of congress to accept a statue of William Pitt, sent to him by British admirers.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col. John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7, 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

President Adams Mansion.

Presidents Lane.

"TIMMY" MEETS SUDDEN DEATH

Pet of City Hall Clerks killed by Electric Cars

"Timmy," the pretty little City Hall kitten, has joined the angels, and there is an air of sadness around the basement of the stone building. "Timmy" had not been in this world of trouble long, but since his arrival he has had the run of City Hall, and being of a winsome nature he soon became the favorite of all the lady clerks.

"Timmy" had no regular resting place, for sometimes he might be found quietly sleeping in a corner of the front entrance, and a little later he might be found wandering about the Council Chamber, and still later curled up in the big chair occupied by President Whiton. At other times he might be found curled up in the lap of one of the young lady clerks, for he was a general favorite and the clerks saw to it that he was never long hungry.

His end came this morning and was sudden. Leaving City Hall he wandered across Depot street and for some unknown reason crawled beneath a big electric car, where he remained out of sight and unseen until the car started. Then there was a screech and "Timmy" was no more.

CHANCE IN INVENTION.

The making of khaki, the olive-colored canvas cloth so widely used for soldiers' uniforms the world over, came about in a curious haphazard way.

For years there had been furnished to the British troops in India a greenish brown cotton material, the chief defect of which was that it faded when washed with soap. A Manchester man, being told of this defect, set about to remedy it. For a long time he searched for an olive dye that would remain impervious to soap or soda. Months of experimentation were required to solve the problem. The cloth that finally resisted soap proved to have been dyed by a liquid that had rested in a metal dish of a certain kind. It was some quality of this metal that had contributed the very quality needed to insure permanence. The remainder of the problem was easy. The khaki that we know was the result, and a most profitable industry sprang up.

Years ago a firm of printers in Paris executed an unusally large order for almanacs. Each sheet was punched with a small hole for eyeleting, and an immense number of tiny circles of colored paper accumulated in the work rooms. One day a workman grabbed a handful of these and, in a spirit of fun, threw the bits of paper over a girl worker who was passing. She retaliated; others followed the example of the two, and a minature snowsorms was in progress when the head of the firm entered. Being a man of imagination, he saw "something in it." Confetti was the result. Instead of destroying the punched-out circles of paper, he ordered new and special forms of machinery for turning out the little papers that form so picturesque a role in many festivities throughout the world. It is said that this firm alone turns out more than sixty tons of confetti a week.

One day a man entered the office of a paper manufacturer, holding in his hand a hornet's nest. "Why can't you make paper like this?" he asked. The manufacturer's imagination was appealed to; he had seen that the hornet began to make its nest by first chewing particles of wood until they were a fine pulp. This little incident led, it is said, to the utilization of wood pulp in making paper.—Harper's Weekly.

—There is no proposal to add books to the list of articles transmissible by parcel post. This is a sad defect in the original law and will probably require congressional action to remedy it. These department changes will relieve the parcel post service of some of the disfavor which its defects have created and make the system much more useful to and more used by the people.—Philadelphia Press.

FAST SWIMMING.

Strokes to Use and Methods to Follow to Acquire Speed.

The general rule may be set down that no swimmer should attempt speeding—and I mean in practice as well as in racing—until he can cover a quarter of a mile with a good stroke. It matters not whether one aims at becoming an all around competitor or a specialist at the sprints, the same rule obtains. Once the stroke has been perfected, the chosen events may be taken up, but even then it is the best policy to alternate fast swimming with easy stretches, at moderate pace, under the watchful eye of the coach. It is always advisable to limit the number of time trials.

There are but two strokes which can be recommended to the racing man for free style swimming, the crawl for distances not exceeding 220 yards and both the crawl and the trudgeon for longer journeys. Some question is still in the mind of many as to which is preferable for the latter events, but in the writer's opinion—based upon the teachings of the past—any set of movements which affords best results at the furlong will also prove best at the longer courses after the swimmer has accustomed his muscles to the action by constant practice.—Outing Magazine.

SLAUGHTER IN BATTLE.

Gettysburg Losses Eclipsed Those at Balaklava and Inkerman.

At Balaklava the light brigade lost 37 per cent of its men, and at Inkerman the guards lost 45 per cent, and both go down to history in verse and prose as having been annihilated.

At Gettysburg the Second Wisconsin lost 233 out of 302, the Nineteenth Indiana lost 210 out of 288 and the One Hundred and Fiftieth Pennsylvania volunteers out of 380 men and 17 officers brought back about eighty men and only one officer not wounded. The One Hundred and Twenty-first, the One Hundred and Forty-second, the One Hundred and Forty-third, the One Hundred and Forty-ninth and the One Hundred and Fifty-first Pennsylvania lost quite as heavily.

Among the First corps officers wounded in the first day's fight were Generals Doubleday, Meredith and Paul and Colonels Morrow, Stone, Wister, Fairchild, Dudley, Biddle, Tilden, Leonard, Coulter and McFarland. The disasters of the afternoon to the Second division were lessened by its capture of much of Iverson's brigade, of Ewell's corps, out at the Mummasburg road, near Oak hill.—General H. S Huidekoper in National Magazine.

Puzzled Jurymen.

At a recent sessions a prisoner was indicted for pocketpicking, and to most people in court the clearest possible case was made out by the prosecution.

"Have you anything you would like to tell the jury before they retire?" said the judge.

"Well, all I wanter say is, I hopes as 'ow they'll give me the benefit of the doubt," replied the prisoner despondently.

The jury considered their verdict. They were no little time over it.

"Can I assist you in any way, gentlemen?" said the judge, as last becoming impatient.

"We are almost agreed, me lud," said the foreman, "but we can't quite understand what the doubt is the prisoner wishes us to give him the benefit of."—London Answers.

Curious Marriage Custom.

Among the islanders of Jersey there is a very curious but pretty marriage custom. As soon as the ceremony is over and when the happy couple are entering into occupation of their house the large granite slab over the porch is inscribed with the initials of the bride and bridegroom, and between the two a rough representation of two hearts is entwined, the whole thus forming a marriage certificate for all the world to see. It is said that should the couple by any chance be one day divorced the hearts are pierced through by an arrow, which is cut into them.

Witty Retort.

A lady of great beauty and attractiveness who was an ardent admirer of Ireland once crowned her praise of it at a party by saying:

"I think I was meant for an Irishwoman."

"Madam," rejoined a witty son of Erin who happened to be present, "thousands would back me in saying that you were meant for an Irishman."—London Tatler.

Persuasion.

"I can't marry you," she said. "You are old enough to be my father."

"Don't hesitate on that account. Ten years from now nobody will suspect it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Imitative.

Mother—Whatever are you doing to poor dolly, child? Child—I'm just going to put her to bed, mummy. I've taken off her hair, but I can't get her teeth out.—London Tit-Bits.

Soul System.

"Algy writes to seven girls."

"It's a wonder he doesn't get his love affairs mixed."

"He keeps a card index."—Washington Herald.

The Nature of the Creature.

"Your cook"—

"Oh, she is so careless that I don't believe she could drop a remark without breaking her word."—Smart Set.

QUINCY MEN IN HINGHAM COURT

Several Quincy men were lined up before Judge Pratt in the Hingham court this week having been arrested at Nantasket for various offenses. Peter Mahoney was sentenced to thirty days in the house of correction for creating a disturbance on a street car. John Smith and Joseph J. McCarthy were fined $15 each for disturbing the peace at Hull, Philip C. Green was fined $5 for drunkenness. Another Quincy man arrested for drunkenness had his case placed on file.

Judge Pratt of the Hingham court has given notice that hereafter in cases for creating a disturbance on street cars he shall impose a jail sentence instead of a fine.

WHAT WORLD THROWS AWAY.

"A Chinaman will live on what a renchman throws away; a Frenchman will live on what a German throws away; a German will live on what an Englishman throws away; an Englishman will live on what an American throws away." We are the most wasteful people in the world. This, says a writer in Success Magazine, is so much the better for those who deal in our waste. The humble junk business, the trade of unconsidered trifles, has prospered in America more than in all other countries. In Boston lives a dealer who has accumulated more than million dollars; several of his competitors could sign checks in six figures. The leading dealer in Providence, who handles nothing but scrap-iron, is worth half a million. Philadelphia has two junk millionaires and a cluster of near-millionaires. One of these Philadelphian dealers has half a million invested in buildings and equipment alone. Ground in New York is too costly for many large warehouses or iron yards, and most of them are located in New Jersey. Scattered over that state are a dozen dealers who have made fifty, one hundred, two hundred, five hundred thousand dollars from that which the metropolis has thrown away. One of these New Jersey dealers recently bought the greatest "lot" of junk ever handled in the world's history—the old iron and refuse which the French abandoned at Panama. The original cost of this material was about twenty million dollars. What was the tune of the mere song he paid for it, or how much he has made by selling off the scrap-iron and metal, no one has ever dared to estimate.

PRIZES FOR SPORTS.

A meeting of the committee in charge of the first annual picnic and field day of Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association, to be held on Labor Day, took place Tuesday evening at the rooms on Water street. In addition to the dancing and field events the committee has contracted with a Boston firm for a large fireworks display for the evening.

Excellent prizes are to be awarded the winners of the following events: 100 yd. dash, 440 yd. run, mile run, 3 legged race for children, shoe race, and to victors of the water sports. Two ball games, between two good Quincy teams and two outside Y. M. H. A. teams are also to be played for beautiful silver cups. Entries for the athletic events should be sent to E. Berman, 98 Franklin street.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

HOT GAME IN WARD TWO

South Quincy Boys Beaten by Score of 7 to 4

Yesterday morning at the Ward Two playground the Quincy Point boys took sweet revenge on the South Quincy lads for their licking of two weeks ago by trimming them by the score of 7 to 4. South Quincy started off as if there was to be nothing to it by scoring three runs in the first inning, but Frank Bassett, who was in the pitchers box for the Point boys soon steadied down and the score came to an abrupt stop. Bassett pitched a fine game and deserves a great deal of credit for his clever work in the box, for it was his first appearance as a slab artist. He had 10 strike-outs to his credit and let the heavy hitting Ward Three boys down with only 4 hits.

Percy Jenkins started the work in the box for his team but only lasted four innings as the Point lads were finding him quite often. His support was not of the best and "Tricky" Wallace was substituted for him but it did not seem to make much difference who was in the box, for the Ward Two boys hit him just as hard and often.

Billy Thompson of the visitors made a star catch in the fifth inning by running out in short right field and spearing with one hand a hard hit liner. As three men were on the bases at the time the catch saved a couple of runs. Barr and Krogh played well for the Ward Two boys.

Another game will be played next week at Ward Three.

TROUBLE OVER CHERRIES.

Miss Marie Lund and Miss Edith Lund are suing Mrs. Frank J. Byrne of Winthrop, formerly of Montclair, for $1000 damage, for calling her a thief, all because of cherries.

QUICK RESULTS ARE EXPECTED

Lind Will Approach Mexicans Along Lines of Friendship

HAS ELASTIC INSTRUCTIONS

Washington Expects Him to Bring Peace Between Warring Factions In Southern Republic—Huerta Regime Will Not Be Recognized Under Any Circumstances

Washington, Aug. 6.—John Lind, personal representative of the President of the United States, speeding toward Mexico City to aid in bringing about a peaceful settlement of the internal affairs of that troubled republic, carries elastic instructions. He had no hard and fast rules laid down for his guidance either by the president or Secretary of State Bryan. And because of that fact the president entertains high hopes that he will be successful in his mission.

Before he started southward Lind conferred at length with the president and the secretary of state. Every possible contingency that might arise was considered.

When the suggestion was made that sending him as an adviser to the embassy was unprecedented, there was no hesitancy on the president's part. He decided there has been too much sticking to precedent already. Because there was no such position he simply had it created.

And Lind, while not accredited to the existing Mexican government, carries with him almost plenary powers through the wording of the order starting him on his mission which makes him in fact the personal representative of the President of the United States.

Lind's first task will be to get in touch with the influential Mexicans who have sent word through third parties to President Wilson that they are trying to reconcile all the Mexican factions. They will tell him what they have been able to accomplish.

Lind will also be able to make it clear beyond the possibility of doubt that under no circumstances can Huerta's recognition be considered. That in itself is expected to clear the air.

This is the first step in the administration's Mexican policy. Others are planned, but will not be made public until after Lind's first-hand investigation of existing conditions.

It was made very plain that President Wilson is hopeful of quick results after his representative reaches the Mexican capital. Having entire confidence in Lind's judgment and ability, the president believes he will show the Mexicans the utter disinterestedness of this country's position.

Much damage has resulted in the past from the suspicion in Mexico that this government had territorial designs on Mexico. Lind, representing President Wilson, will approach the Mexican people along the lines of friendship, and it is very probable, according to the belief in diplomatic circles here, that coming in such a way the offers of good fellowship will be met half way.

One thing that will be insisted on by Lind will be that no matter what plan may be adopted for restoring order in Mexico, it must be accompanied by a plan which will insure the election of a bona fide president of the republic. The president believes there can be no permanent peace in Mexico unless the people are permitted to say who shall be their ruler. And one of the real problems for Lind to solve will be how a fair election there can be assured. The president, however, believes a plan can be discovered.

DETROIT FARES LOWERED

Railway Company Agrees to Give Seven Rides For a Quarter

Detroit, Aug. 6.—The threatened trouble between the city of Detroit and the Detroit United Street Railways company, caused by the refusal of the company to grant 3-cent fares on all city lines where franchises have expired, was halted when a temporary agreement was reached by representatives of the traction company and city officials.

The company agreed to grant seven tickets for 25 cents on all its lines within the one-fare zone. Universal transfers will also be given. The workingmen's rate of eight tickets for 25 cents during certain hours of the day is not to be affected.

SHOOTS SELF AT DESK

Manager of Boston Concern Said to Have Been Short $5000 In Accounts

Chicago, Aug. 6.—William Harriman, aged 55, western manager for the Independent Button Fastener Machine company of Boston, shot himself through the head while seated at his desk. He was removed to a hospital, where he died three hours later.

Harriman had just been deprived of his authority by Samuel L. Sheierson, president of the company, who told the police that he had come to Chicago to investigate an alleged shortage in the affairs of the Chicago office. He said it would not exceed $5000.

FORAKER DENIES STORY OF MULHALL

Lobbyist Squirms as Former Senator Gives His Testimony

Washington, Aug. 6.—Drifting casually into a discussion of old-time political situations, former Senator Foraker related the history of his acquaintance with Martin M. Mulhall, former lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, denying every one of Mulhall's statements which connected him with the fortunes of the N. A. M.

Foraker, the first witness who has been able to deny Mulhall's testimony and at the same time keep his temper, referred to Mulhall as "an exceedingly social chap, who wrote ardent letters and really thought himself greater than anybody else did."

Instead of calling Mulhall names, he made the former squirm by referring to him in contemptuous tones. He said, half apologetically, he always thought Mulhall honest.

RUMOR UNCONFIRMED

President of Portugal Reported to Have Died Three Days Ago

Paris, Aug. 6.—A rumor current here, and which is said to have originated in the Portuguese consulate at Seville, Spain, is to the effect that Manuel de Arriaga, president of the Portuguese republic, died three days ago, but that the government is withholding the announcement of his death from the people.

Great Explosion of Powder

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 6.—Two rolling mills of the E. I. Dupont De Nemours Powder company blew up, shaking the surrounding country for miles. A thousand pounds of powder went up in smoke.

Survives Five-Story Fall

Washington, Aug. 6.—William Walton, 18, fell five stories down the airwell of the bureau of engraving building and escaped with nothing more serious than a slight brain concussion.

Mrs. Romani May Recover

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 6.—Physicians at the hospital say Mrs. Madelina Romani, who was shot by Emanuel Margetti, may recover.

PERFORMED BY HIGH CLASS MEN

What Detectives Think of Narragansett Pier Robberies

CLEARLY WORK OF A GANG

Probably Tipped Off When and How to Act by Workman "Planted" For That Purpose—Stolen Gems Hard to Dispose Of—No Trace of Loot Has Been Found

Boston, Aug. 6.—"The Hanan and Rumsey jewel robberies were carefully planned and executed by high class expert thieves," is the declaration of Managers Smith and Donovan of the Boston office of the William J. Burns Detective Bureau, employed to solve the mystery.

"It is as true a case of gang robbery as ever occurred in this country. It is not improbable that some workman or workwoman was planted thereabouts previous to the robberies who tipped off the gang when and how to act.

"High class robberies of this sort are trades, requiring men who are intellectual, although thieves. They obtain information about families and valuables in the simples way. Perhaps one of them is a gardener, who works in the neighborhood for some weeks, and observes the habits of the families.

"He may finish his work and go away and in a few days be forgotten. The porch climber appears at a dinner hour and robs the house. A pal whisks him out of sight in an automobile. They have come from nowhere and gone anywhere so long as it is a safe distance.

"The jewels stolen at the Pier may be in a safety deposit vault in Boston or New York, but not with the knowledge of the bank.

"No brokerage house would put up $50,000 for jewels which might be claimed as stolen and put them in wrong. Brokers are not loan agents. They could not affort to trifle with their big interests of money and public confidence.

"No Boston bank would put up money for such collateral without making such an inquiry as would expose the whole deal. Few loan offices would take the chance of receiving stolen jewels.

"The public may as well make up its mind that this was a clear-cut, high-class gang job and that a hard, common sense chase must result to overtake the culprits and recover the missing jewelry.

"We have under surveillance a suspect in Boston, several in New York, another in Providence, and are also watching certain persons at Narragansett Pier.

"We believe that we know who committed the robbery. We do not yet know what became of the loot. That we hope will be worked out in a little more time."

TO FACE CASTRO'S ARMY

President of Venezuela Is Leading His Troops In Person

President Gomez will lead the army to Maracay, fifty miles southwest of Caracas. During his absence campaigning Jose G. Fortoul, president of the federal council, will act as chief executive of the republic.

SUES PASTOR FOR $5000

Church Organist Charges Statements Derogatory to His Character

Attleboro, Mass., Aug. 6.—Members of the Pilgrim church in this town are stirred over the announcement that Lester E. Moore, for several years organist of the church, has brought suit for $5000 against Rev. Thomas J. Horner, pastor of the church.

Moore alleges the pastor has made statements derogatory to his character. Horner has been pastor of the church for three years and during that time there is said to have been ill-feeling evinced between minister and organist.

FARLEY REPORTED DYING

Noted For Breaking Street Car Strikes In Many Cities

New York, Aug. 6.—James Farley, for many years widely known as a professional strike breaker, is reported to be in a dying condition at a hotel in this city.

Farley retired from his profession in 1905. He is credited with having broken street car strikes in San Francisco, Pittsburg and this city, and is said to have employed over 40,000 men in his work at various times.

Japan Undecided About Fair

Tokio, Aug. 6.—Inquiry here has elicited the answer that Japan's attitude regarding participation in the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco in 1915 is still undecided.

Huber's Daughter

She Was the Last of His Children Unmarried, and He Could Not Give Her Up

By EDITH V. ROSS

In one of the little villages overlooking the Lake of the Five Cantons in Switzerland there lived a retired watchmaker named Huber. For years he had made watches in Lucerne, and when he had saved enough of his earnings to live without work he bought a chalet on the lake shore, near the city, where he could pass the rest of his life in ease and comfort.

His children had grown to manhood and womanhood and left the paternal abode, except Katrina, a lass of eighteen. Huber, who was a widower, held on to her as one will keep his last dollar, dreading to have a man come near her lest he take her away from him. But so far as the old man knew there was no one who wanted her or whom she wanted.

The truth is that Katrina, knowing her father's wish that she should discourage all suitors, assured him that she would not leave him in his old age. Indeed, when the matter of marriage was broached it was by Huber himself. Carl Gotthold, about thirty-five years old, who had succeeded to the old man's watch business, went to see his former partner one day and asked for his daughter. Huber told him that Katrina was not to marry, but remain with him always.

Gotthold, who had a persuasive tongue in his head, represented to Huber that when he died Katrina would be a middle aged woman whom no man would care to marry and would thereafter live a lonely life. "If you will give her to me," he said, "I will come here to live with you, going into the city every morning to business and returning in the evening. You will thus keep her with you, and when you die she will not be alone in the world."

Now, Gotthold had considerable money that he had inherited from his father, besides his watch business. His proposition struck Huber favorably, though he did not admit it. But before Gotthold left him he promised to think of the matter. He did think of it and made up his mind that he had better accept the proposition. He said nothing for some time to his daughter, for in Europe parents have for centuries been accustomed to arrange marriages for their children.

Katrina kept a boat, and when she wished to go to any place on or near the margin of the lake she would go down to the little shed where she kept it, take it out and pull out on the bosom of the water. One evening, while near the middle of the lake a sudden squall came up and overturned her boat. She clung to it till another boat approached her and a young man in it took her aboard, righted her boat and pulled his, towing her boat, to the nearest point of land. There he built a fire, and she dried his clothing by its warmth.

The two remained there for some time waiting for the storm to subside, then re-entered the young man's boat, and he pulled her to her landing place. He asked her if he might come and see her, and she refused her consent, telling him that her father dreaded to have any young man call upon her. But there was another reason. She did not intend to let her father know that she had been capsized in the middle of the lake. She had narrowly escaped drowning, for, though a good swimmer, the water in these Swiss lakes is so cold that she could not have possibly swum ashore. Indeed, she was so benumbed when help reached her that she was about to let go her hold. Should her father know all this he would never let her go out in her boat again.

Who knows but that if Katrina had given this young man, Caspar Beck, permission to visit her he would never have availed himself of it. Be this as it may, her refusal, which was not dictated by an unwillingness on her part to receive him, at once filled him with a desire to break through the barrier that stood between them. But he said nothing to her of this, apparently accepting her refusal as final, and with a goodby he pulled out into the lake toward his home near Lucerne.

Katrina reached her father's house when he was absorbed in Gotthold's proposition. Consequently she did not receive as close a questioning as to where she had been during the storm as might have been expected. But the old man had no idea of broaching the matter concerning her future until he had definitely made up his mind on the subject, and his mind was far from being made up. Gotthold knew that if he got Katrina it would not be soon and, having made his proposition, waited patiently for the old man to come to a decision. The applicant had nothing further to do in the matter, for Huber would not be influenced and whichever way he decided his decision would be final.

After his rescue of Katrina Caspar Beck often went out on the lake in his boat purposely to meet her. One evening shortly before sunset he saw her pulling toward her boathouse and, rowing with all his strength, he intercepted her. He asked her if she would not remain out a little longer, and she consented. Helping her with his boat, he took hers in tow and pulled southward in the direction of Flewsln.

It was after dark when Katrina returned and found her father worrying about her. This time he questioned her more closely as to where she had been and noticed that her usual frank expression was replaced by a troubled look. Perhaps he feared the true cause of her detention. At any rate, from that moment he resolved to accept Gotthold's proposition.

The next morning Huber went to Lucerne, saw Gotthold and told him that he might have his daughter. The two went to an attorney, who drew up an agreement by which Gotthold was to settle a part of his possessions on Katrina, was to leave her with her father so long as he lived, and Huber agreed to give a stipulated amount for a dowry. Katrina herself, most concerned of all, was not consulted. Indeed, her father, who was very deliberate, did not tell her of the arrangement for two weeks after it had been made.

During this fortnight Caspar and Katrina had met frequently on the lake, where they were not likely to be observed by her father. The forbidden fruit, which is always sweetest, worked on the emotions of the two and stimulated the passion that was growing between them. Katrina, who loved her father and realized the obedience required of her, suffered with her newly found pleasure. Her father noticed that something was troubling her and concluded to bring about her nuptials in the hope that they would drive it away.

The principal cause of Katrina's distress was that she had got wind of the match her father had arranged for her with Gotthold. She was at liberty to write her lover, but she dare not receive a letter from him lest it fall into the hands of her father. As soon as she learned that she was to be given to Gotthold she wrote Caspar of the fact, telling him at the same time that they must succumb to the plan. There was but one other alternative—that she should refuse to marry any one, remaining unwed with her father. He might consent to the latter alternative, but that he would consent to her marrying Caspar, who was but a few years older than herself and without any means whatever, was not to be considered.

On receipt of her letter Caspar abandoned all caution. He resolved to see Katrina at once and persuade her to defy her father. Getting into his boat, he pulled toward her home, reaching it after dark. Seeing a light in her window, which was accessible by means of a trellis, he climbed it and appeared before her. Standing on the trellis, he told her that he would not give her up and remain alive. The idea of being the cause of his death well nigh drove her to madness. She begged him to go away and accept the situation. During the interview he climbed into the window. Frightened lest he be discovered there, she promised him that if he would go away she would refuse to marry any one, the only alternative her father could be expected to accept.

Caspar, thinking he could not accomplish any more, at least at the time, was about to depart when a step was heard coming toward the room. It was so real that within a few seconds whoever was coming would enter. Caspar, seeing some jewels on a bureau, seized them. Katrina convulsively clutched his wrist. Huber came in and saw a man clasping his daughter's jewels, she apparently endeavoring to prevent his getting away with them. Caspar's move won. Huber seized him by the shoulder, and Caspar dropped the jewels.

"Let me go," he cried. "It will kill my poor mother to know that her son is a thief."

Without reply Huber, keeping his grip on Caspar, took him down the stairs and out on to the porch, where he set up a shout that aroused his nearest neighbor, who came to his assistance. The two took their prisoner to the basement, where they locked him in. Then Huber returned to his daughter, whom he found just recovering from having fainted. She asked what had become of the thief and was told that he was locked in the cellar. In the morning he would be taken to Lucerne She must go to bed and try to sleep, for she would be required to go to the city and appear against the robber.

Katrina begged her father to let the man go for his mother's sake, but Huber was not so merciful and paid no attention to her request. Within half an hour the house was closed and those in it supposed to be asleep. There was but one opening, a door to the room where the prisoner was confined, and to that Huber had the key.

Katrina lay awake thinking. To go to Lucerne and appear against her lover with the evidence that was expected from her would send him to prison probably for many years. To tell the truth would defeat the object for which her lover had sacrificed himself—to save her good name. A third course which might be successfully carried out suggested itself to her.

Rising, she put on her clothes and crept downstairs to her father's room. The door was ajar, and, going in, she felt for the chair on which he always laid his clothes. In his trousers pocket she found the key to the basement. Going there, she unlocked the door. In a moment she felt her lover's hand clasp hers. Without a word she led him out into the open.

"Go," she said.

"Not without you."

"Then you must go to jail or I be disgraced."

"I will go to jail."

She stood irresolute. Placing an arm to her waist, he hurried her down to his boat.

When the next day the two returned a married pair and confessed the story to Huber he made a virtue of necessity and on their promise not to desert him pardoned them.

SUMMER DRINKS.

Several Thoroughly Reliable Recipes For Cold Dainties.

It is a good idea to have on hand several cooling beverages to serve when the weather is warm. Iced tea, coffee, lemonade and orangeade are favorite summer drinks, while ice creams and ices are always hailed with joy. Several recipes for cold dainties are given below:

Iced Coffee.

To each quart of strong black hot coffee add half a pint of milk and four tablespoonfuls of sifted sugar and when cold add half a pint of thick cream. Ice in the freezing machine and then place in a large jug in a pan of freezing salt and cover with a blanket. The coffee should be freshly roasted and made as strong as for after dinner coffee. Serve in tall glasses with a spoonful of whipped cream on each.

Barley Water.

Juice of four lemons with the rind, one-quarter pound of pearl barley, one or two ounces of loaf sugar, three quarts of boiling water. Well wash the barley in a little cold water. Peel the rind of the lemons very thin. Pour the boiling water on to all the ingredients. When cold strain off and serve.

Pineapple Lemonade.

Pare and grate a ripe pineapple and pour over this the strained juice of five lemons. Make a sirup with one pound of sugar and one pint of water boiled together for ten minutes. Mix all the ingredients and add one quart of water, strain through muslin, put into well corked bottles and keep in a cool place. When serving pour it over broken ice and put a cherry in each glass. The above keeps some months if tightly corked down.

Lemon Sirup.

Peel the rind thinly, use the juice of sixteen small lemons, six pounds of granulated sugar, two quarts of water, two ounces of tartaric acid. Pour the water when boiling on to the rind, juice and sugar. Cover it over and let it stand for twenty-four hours. Next day add the tartaric acid and strain. Let it stand another twenty-four hours. Bottle and keep in a cool place.

Lemon Sherbet.

Rub the yellow rind of five small lemons with three-quarters of a pound of loaf sugar. Crush the latter to a powder, put it into a saucepan with a pint of water and simmer gently till the sugar is dissolved. When cold add the strained juice of the lemon. Take out the rind and serve the sherbet in glasses. This quantity is sufficient for six or seven persons.

Corsets Need Special Care In Summer.

A woman who is very athletic and finds that her corsets soon soil from perspiration says that her maid constantly freshens them for her by very simple means. She places them flat on a wooden table and scrubs them with ammonia and soapsuds, then hangs them in the sun. When they are perfectly dry she uses sparingly on them the mixture used for whitening canvas shoes, smearing it on lightly with a rag to give an even whiteness.

With each bath the corsets are retrimmed at the top with inexpensive lace or a shirred band of footing, as this goes far toward making them look almost like new, and, though old corsets are best for exercising, there is no need to have them look shabby, "for," as this woman naively remarked, "one may some time have an unlucky accident, and mortification, added to pain, would be more than I could survive."

Try This Dessert.

Take two boxes of raspberries and pick them over, reserving the best to serve whole, says the Woman's World Magazine. What remains mash and strain through a cheesecloth and place this juice in a granite pan to come to the boiling point. After adding half a pint of sugar, measure, and if it lacks being a cupful add hot water to make up the lack. Put the cupful of juice where it will boil; then stir into it two rounding tablespoonfuls of cornstarch wet in two tablespoonfuls of cold water, add one cupful of sugar and stir until it looks transparent; then add one level tablespoonful of butter and the juice of one-half lemon and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs; turn the mixture into cups or fancy molds and set in a place where it will become cold. When serving place on a cold dish and fill the center of the crown and the base with the fruit that has been reserved. Pass sweet cream with this dish.

Sleeves Do Not Match.

The pegtop mantles started the vogue, for it was found that the fullness of the material necessary about the shoulders could produce the sleeves and afterward be narrowed down to make the tapering silhouette.

Numbers of the new dance frocks are given an individualistic touch by sleeves which do not match. A model of much distinction was seen developed in blush pink charmeuse, with a limp corsage of the same colored mousseline de soie draped over lace.

The skirt was knotted on one side and was draped over an ivory lace simulated petticoat, threaded with gold to match the lace of the corsage chemisette.

SHE LIKED SAILING.

The following true tale is a most curious instance of living well on nothing a year without breaking the laws of the land. Many years ago a steam packet company of Liverpool wished to buy a piece of land which was owned by a "stay at home spinster," as her neighbors described her. She sold her land at a very low price, but insisted upon a clause being inserted in the agreement giving her the right at any time during her life to travel with a companion in any of the company's vessels.

When the agreement was closed she sold her furniture and went on board the first outgoing ship belonging to the packet company. For years this wise spinster lived nearly all the time upon one ship or another, frequently accompanied by a companion, according to the agreement. This was always a person who otherwise would have been a regular passenger, but who purchased her ticket at reduced rates by paying the spinster instead of the packet company. The company offered her more than twice the value of the land if she would give up her privilege, but this she would not do. Her reply was, "You got the land cheap, and I like sailing, so we both should be satisfied."

TENNYSON AND SCOTT.

Why the One Did and the Other Didn't Accept the Laureateship.

When Sir Walter Scott was offered the laureateship in 1813 he declined the post because, as he wrote to Lady Abercorn, "the necessity of writing odes twice a year is a difficulty which no one ought to encounter who has any poetical character to lose; at least I am sure I should find it insurmountable. The thing might be easily done in a decent sort of way as old Whitehead himself describes it:

"Whose muse obliged by sack or pension,
Without a subject or invention,
Must certain words in order set
As innocent as a Gazette,
Must some half meaning half disguise
And utter neither truth nor lies."

Tennyson received the letter offering him the laureateship one morning before he was out of bed. On rising he immediately wrote two replies, one accepting, the other declining the offer, and determined to consult with his friends at dinner which to tend. Ever afterward he would jokingly declare that he accepted the honor because Venables assured him that if he became laureate he "would always, when dining out, be offered the liver wing of a fowl."—London Chronicle.

A Haunted Library.

One of the most curious "hauntings" occurs in a northern castle of great antiquity where Mary, queen of Scots, rested when she was being conveyed a prisoner through England. It is manifested in the library and takes the form that the books cannot be kept in order. They move about or are moved about from shelf to shelf. If you arrange the works of Shakespeare in correct order on one shelf, by next morning the volumes are scattered anyhow on different shelves. This has gone on for years. At different times the library has been searched and locked, watches have been set all night, servants have come and gone, but the mysterious occurrence goes on and is vouched for not only by the family, but by the guests who have stayed in the house. There is no legend to account for it.—London Mail.

Decoration of china has been reduced to an art in Limoges. The processes of lithographing and decalcomania have replaced all hand painting, except for rich decorations and special orders. Another process is that of applying soft underglaze colors so as to produce fine effects, and it is probable that very soon the leading styles of the best classes of goods will be decorated in this manner. The large manufacturers make their own decalcomania sheets, work out their designs and control their decorations. They employ girls to apply the decalcomania lithographs on the china. After the paper has been removed therefrom the articles are fired in the "moufles" to set the colors.

She Knew.

"Miss Janet is a long time coming down," he said to the pretty parlor maid. "Perhaps she is—ha, ha—perhaps she is making up her mind whether to see me or not."

The maid smiled coldly.

"No," she said; "it is not her mind she is making up."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Happy Bridegroom.

The happy bridegroom knows the word "obey" is in the marriage service only by hearsay. The happy bridegroom knows something to which he is a party is happening, but he has no definite idea as to what it is.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Her Bribe.

Unattractive Maiden Aunt—Goodby, Jottie. Come soon again. I hope you'll forgive my not kissing you, but I have an awful cold. Jottie (aged six)—Never mind. Do kiss me, auntie. Mother said she'd give me 5 cents if I'd let you.—Exchange.

Deception of Truth.

Bismarck boasted that he deceived the whole world by telling the truth. It is thus that the simple defeat the clever, but without intending it.—Westminster Gazette.

Face a situation and you are three-quarters master of it.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

PROMPT ACTION IMPORTANT

State Board of Health Commends Local Board

The State Board of Health in its monthly report for June 1913 issued Tuesday cites the outbreak of typhoid fever in Quincy last April as an incident where prompt action and cooperation between the state and local authorities and milk dealers prevented what might have been an epidemic of the disease.

Fifteen cases were reported to the Quincy Board of Health in April, beginning with April 10 and the State Board of Health was promptly notified by telephone with the result that H. Linenthal, M. D. state inspector came to Quincy, and in company with Dr. F. E. Jones of the Quincy Board of Health promptly made an investigation of the situation.

It was found that the infection came from a farm in Connecticut. It was further learned that on one of the farms which contributed milk to the local dealer in Connecticut a child was ill, with what later proved to be typhoid. The milk from this farm was promptly stopped and the threatened epidemic averted. As stated above it was the prompt action of the Quincy Board of Health in reporting the cases and the prompt action of the prompt action of the state Board of Health which stamped out the spread of the disease.

PERSONAL.

Miss Charlotte C. Sweeney, 72 Phipps street, has accepted a position at the Parisian Cloak and Suit Co., Kansas City, Missouri, as buyer of ladies suits, coats, gowns, and cotton underwear. Miss Sweeney has worked eleven years for the William Filene's Sons Co., where she has been buyer of the ladies suits for the past two years. She will leave home Sunday, for New York, where she will buy for a week or ten days, and from there will take a train for Kansas City, making a stop over of a couple of days at Chicago. Miss Sweeney's many friends wish her an abundance of good luck and much success.

DECAY OF MANNERS.

The New York Times prints under London date of July 29, Lord Rosebery's address on ""The Decay of Manners" before the boys of the Royal Grammar School at Guildford. Lord Rosebery, who presented prizes to the boys, referred to a school statute framed three hundred years ago, that "courtesy and good manners are to be established by all good means," and proceeded:

"The men of the seventeenth century were, I suspect, the gentlest-bred Englishmen ever produced, partly because they possessed good manners themselves, and partly because they realized the enormous importance of courtesy and good manners in the common transactics of life. Now, we English people, and I am afraid, still more we Scotch, are never famous for good manners. I think at one time there was a sort of John Bull feeling in England that good manners were a device for the dancing, frog-eating Frenchman, whom it was our duty to despise.

"When we distributors of prizes visit schools we are apt to judge the school by the respect the boys pay to the masters. If we go to a school where the boys do not touch their hats to a master when they meet him, we form, perhaps erroneously, a poorer opinion of that school. If we see the king going through the streets we take off our hats to him, as a mark of respect to him in the first place, but in the second place as a mark of respect to ourselves.

"I think there has been a decay of manners in England, Scotland, and all over the world. Good appearance and good manners have an enormous commercial value in life. I sometimes wonder why they are not harped on more on these occasions. Good appearance, you may say, is not at our command. I don't agree. Good looks are not at our command; they are a gift of the gods, but a good, straightforward, manly appearance, an appearance without self-consciousness—which is the most disagreeable feature perhaps of all in appearance—is within the command of every boy.

"Manners are even more important than appearance. Say three boys are applying for the same situation. One boy may not have the abilities of either of the other two, but if he has good manners; if, instead of grunting an answer like the first one or giving only an inarticulate sound like the second, he gives a clear, respectful answer to the questions asked him, it is ten to one against the other two."

URGES NEW INSPECTION

Boston Fire Commissioner Declares Hub Faces Peril of Catastrophe

Boston, Aug. 6.—Fire Commissioner Cole amazed the legislative committee investigating building conditions when at the public hearing he said:

"Not 10 percent of the buildings in Boston in which women and children are employed could be emptied quickly in case of fire.

"There is one building alone in which 3500 women and children are employed where only one exit is kept unlocked. If a fire ever broke out there it would be a holocaust—the worst fire catastrophe the world has ever seen—an appalling loss of life.

"I'm not here without a remedy to offer. My remedy is this: In the fire department there are over 1000 men trained to know fire causes and fire prevention.

"These men should be given the work of inspecting buildings, with power to enforce their recommendations, and this work should be taken out of the hands of the building department, with its unskilled inspectors. My men are experts. They could work a vast improvement in Boston."

Knights of Columbus Officially Open Their National Convention

Gathered in the cabin of the Rose Standish the supreme officers and the delegates officially opened the convention.

The delegates, knights and ladies, to the number of more than 1000, were en route for Nantasket, where a day of pleasure had been arranged for them by the Boston members of the organization.

The formalities of the official opening of the convention were brief and behind closed doors. The supreme officers occupied their respective chairs when Supreme Knight Flaherty opened the first session.

An adjournment was taken until today and the delegates and officers rejoined the merrymaking crowd.

NAVIES OF WORLD TO OPEN BIG CANAL

Prospect of the Greatest Sea Pageant In History

Washington, Aug. 6.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels announced his plan to have all the world's fleets mobilized in Hampton Roads in February, 1915, and, led by the American squadron, proceed through the Panama canal and up the west coast to San Francisco.

Daniels considers that this will form a fitting opening for the Panama canal, besides being the greatest naval pageant the world has seen.

In addition to this, Daniels plans to have the American fleet, headed by the old battleship Oregon, steam through the canal next spring to celebrate the opening of the passageway to ships of commerce.

HEIRESS TO BIG FORTUNE

Daughter of Lord and Lady Sackville to Wed Embassy Attache

London, Aug. 6.—The engagement of Victoria M. Sackville West, daughter of Lord and Lady Sackville, to Harold Nicholson is announced. Nicholson is an attache of the British embassy at Constantinople. He is a son of Sir Arthur Nicholson, permanent under-secretary for foreign affairs.

Lady Sackville, mother of Miss Sackville West, recently won in the legal fight for the great fortune of Sir John M. Scott, after a sensational trial in the courts.

Miss Sackville West is the only child of the Sackvilles and will succeed to the Scott fortune.

MEARS AHEAD OF TIME

On Final Leg of Record Journey Which Girdled the World

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Three minutes ahead of his scheduled time, John H. Mears, who is making a record-breaking world tour, arrived in this city last night.

After being greeted by the members of the Adventurers' club, he was off again at 11:30 for Cleveland. There he met the Lake Shore line train No. 42, the fastest in the service of that road, which was held twenty minutes for his arrival. He is expected at the office of the New York Evening Sun this evening at 9:20 o'clock.

REEF MAY HAVE WRECKED TITANIC

Part of Vessel's Hull Sighted at Scene of Disaster.

PROTRUDED FROM WATER.

Report of Liner's Captain Believed to be Important by Naval Official—May Establish Contention That Ship Was Torn by Sunken Ledge as Well as by Giant Iceberg.

Much of the mystery that surrounded the sinking of the White Star liner Titanic on April 14, 1912, may be dispelled by the discovery of a wreck, believed to be part of the hulk of the ill starred vessel, standing on end in the Atlantic ocean off the grand banks of Newfoundland, practically in the spot where the disaster occurred.

Captain Remnant of the British steamship Lucilline, which arrived at Philadelphia from Bordeaux some time ago, reported sighting the derelict, and the United States hydrographic office has begun an investigation to learn more about the wreck. Lieutenant Commander Landenberger, United States hydrographer, stationed in Philadelphia, attaches much importance to the report.

May be Titanic.

Should the wreckage sighted by the Lucilline prove to be part of the remains of the Titanic the story of the memorable wreck would be rewritten. The fact that after more than a year the hulk stands vertically in the waves, protruding eight feet or more above the surface, would indicate that a submerged ledge of rock had prevented the wreck from going to the actual bottom of the sea. If such a ledge exists—and evidences of one were reported as long ago as 1722—then it is regarded as possible that the foundering of the Titanic was caused by the hidden obstruction ripping open her hull as much as by her collision with the iceberg.

Should these theories prove to be facts, Captain Smith, who was in command of the Titanic and perished when his vessel went down, might be absolved, it is said, of the charge of lack of vigilance and damage suits against the International Mercantile Marine based on the disaster would fall, admiralty lawyers say, for the same reason.

Captain Remnant of the Lucilline believes that what he saw was the wreck of the Titanic or part of it. It was covered with a marine growth of comparatively recent formation, tending to show that it had been in the water a little more than a year. It had the appearance, Captain Remnant said, of being held down by anchors in shoal water and of being buoyed up by water tight compartments. He is of the opinion that it was the forward part of the Titanic, which, it was said, split in two just before it sank.

Sunken Ledge May Exist.

Mariners say there is every reason to believe the existence of a submerged ledge of rock at or near the spot where the Titanic was destroyed. Three different obstructions of such a character have been reported and the calculations of the position of the grave of the Titanic as well as those of the sunken rocks and of the wreck reported by Captain Remnant are all approximate.

Lieutenant Commander Landenberger, United States hydrographer, said in discussing the report that the matter is one of the utmost importance. He asserted that the government should dispatch a surveying vessel to the scene of the disaster to establish or disprove at once the existence of the sunken ledge and to ascertain if possible if the wreck seen by the British officer was that of the ill fated Titanic.

U. S. WATCHES TOMATO CLUB

Farm Girls Compete In Getting Up Cheap Meals.

The Ohio Tomato club, founded by Mrs. J. K. Turner of Cleveland among a group of farm girls, and the recent attack on the high cost of living on the farm, also led by Mrs. Turner, have attracted the attention of the United States government.

Miss Ilena May Bailey of the farm management office of the department of agriculture is at the Turner farm, near Chardon, O., to investigate the work being done. Miss Bailey is interested particularly in the contest among farm women to prepare the best and most economical meals in the farmhouse for the month of August.

"The need of such work among farm people has been apparent for a long time," said Miss Bailey. "Mrs. Turner is doing great work. I am much interested in the Tomato club girls, and I believe it will be a huge success and will be copied by people in farm communities all over the country within a few years."

Record Big Tree Discovered.

All previous records of big trees discovered in Washington and Oregon forests have been eclipsed by the latest find in Snohomish county, Wash. The giant is a yellow fir, is nearly sixty-six feet in circumference at the butt and is twenty-eight feet to the first limb, which measures 100 inches in circumference. The estimated height of the big fir is 300 feet.

PUZZLED THE CAPTAIN.

The Mysterious Dane Who Boarded His Vessel at Hamburg.

The captain of a vessel which was bringing to America in the fall of 1796 a mysterious passenger who had come aboard at Hamburg watched the latter so closely that at last the passenger said one day: "Sir, this is not the first occasion upon which I have observed the attentive scrutiny you bestow upon me. May I inquire the reason?"

"Sir," responded the candid captain, "you took passage on my ship as a Dane. I don't believe you're anything of the kind."

The passenger smiled. The smile was full of perspicacity and confidence and was followed with, "Pray, tell me, then, what you believe me to be?"

At this question Captain Ewing fidgeted, hesitated and finally blurted out: "Well, to be honest, I think you are a gambler. You've well nigh ruined yourself at home and are now coming to fleece the fools you'll find on shore."

The young man's smile broadened. The next minute he turned grave again, lowered his voice and replied: "Captain Ewing, as you have studied me during this voyage, so I have studied you. I have come to the conclusion that you are a man to be trusted. I am Louis Philippe, duc d'Orleans, eldest son of that Louis Philippe d'Orleans who was slain by the guillotine on the 7th of November, almost three years ago."

VANISHED WILD PIGEONS.

Once They Darkened Our Skies, but Are Never Seen Now.

Old residents of Olean—some of them not so very old, either—remember distinctly the time when flocks of wild pigeons flew over the then straggling village of Olean in such countless numbers as to almost obscure the very sky, when flock followed flock in such close succession as to partly give the impression that each was but the separated group and companion voyagers of the flock that had but just passed overhead on swiftly whirring wings. These flocks passed in one long procession for days at a time in the early spring and even for weeks. Thousands and even hundreds of thousands of them, if the reports of those days were to be taken implicitly, nested in the woods of Alton and Big Shanty, a short distance across the Pennsylvania line.

All at once these myriad flocks of pigeons ceased to come—disappeared abruptly, mysteriously, and apparently forever. Whence did they go so suddenly and so completely? No one has yet been able to answer that question. Since that time game authorities and naturalists have searched in vain for further traces of the birds, not only in this vicinity, but all over North America. Large sums have been offered by magazines as well as individuals for a nest or even a single egg of the passenger pigeon.—Olean (N. Y.) Times.

Where J. R. Green Was Librarian.

Lambeth Palace library was founded about the beginning of the seventeenth century by philanthropic Archbishop Bancroft, and has been enriched by several of his successors. It now contains over 30,000 volumes, many of great rarity, besides a vast number of important manuscripts. Among the celebrated scholars who have had charge of this library was John Richard Green, the historian. He welcomed the change from an east end vicarage, because it set him free to pursue his historical researches. "The quiet of the Lambeth library," he wrote to his friend, Boyd Dawkins, "is like still waters after the noise of the east. I enjoy even the cleaner street, and, above all, my morning's trot through the parks."—Westminster Gazette.

One or the Other.

Her class was bright, and the teacher was proud of it. She was conducting a quiz in geography.

"In what zone do we live?" asked the teacher.

"The temp'rut zone," chanted the well drilled class.

"Temp'rut is where it's freezin' cold half the time an' roastin' hot the other half the time."

If Willie wasn't sent to the head for that it wasn't because he didn't deserve the honor.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An Author Who Lived Too Soon.

That Swift's life was a failure in the eighteenth century and would have been a splendid success in the twentieth century no one, we think, will deny. Imagine what a fortune "Gulliver's Travels" and "A Tale of a Tub" would have brought their author in these days. Like the author of "Peter Pan" he would have made his plum and been made a baronet or an archbishop had he clung to holy orders, which he would probably have discarded. As it was, Swift died "like a rat in a hole," to use his own words.—London Saturday Review.

Very Annoying.

Mabelle—What makes the leading lady so grouchy? Estelle—She had counted on making a big hit with her divorce case this season, and just as she was about to bring proceedings her husband had to go and die. Mabelle (indignantly)—Now, isn't that just like a man?—Judge.

Explain a Mystery.

"It has always been my idea," remarked the man on the car, "that something jostled nature's elbow when she was pouring the seeds into the watermelon."—Toledo Blade.

RETRENCHMENT NOW IN ORDER

Retrenchment will be the order of the day hereafter at the Fore River yard. One of the first acts in this line by Mr. Schwab was to order that the big automobile used by the company be sold, which has been done. Quite a number of workmen at the yard have also been dropped from the pay rolls. Some of the men dropped were known as high salaried men. The policy hereafter it is said will be that every employee earn his salary.

WANTED THE DRINK ANYHOW.

Tommy after going to bed became thirsty, or thought he did. He called out:

"Ma, I want a drink."

The mother's voice answered back: ""Tommy, you go to sleep."

Tommy grunted, turned over and was silent for 10 minutes. Then again:

"Ma, I want a drink."

"Tommy, you go right to sleep," was the reply.

Intense silence again for 10 minutes. Then:

"Say, ma, I want a drink."

"Tommy, if you don't go right to sleep I'll come and spank you."

More silence, this time for about two minutes. And then:

""Say, ma, when you come to spank me, won't you bring me a drink?"—Detroit News-Tribune.

NAMES FOR BATTLESHIPS.

If we keep on building battleships, the names of the States will soon be exhausted. What course will be followed then? Mr. Bryan's suggestion that names of peace be employed rather than any other is hardly practicable. A battleship called the Turtle Dove would not arouse the enthusiasm of the sailors, which is a desirable thing to do in case of war.

The hint supplied by the Kearsarge is worthy of being followed. The names of great American mountains contain the suggestion of strength, of impregnability, of dauntlessness. The name Monadnock is admirable; it is already borne by an old ship of the navy, but this vessel is obsolete, and the name might properly be transferred to a new mountain of the deep. The pride of all New Yorkers would be aroused by a vessel called the Dunderburg or the Storm King.

If this hint were not followed, the names of warlike Indian tribes would serve the purpose admirably. The Mohawk, the Sioux, the Apache, the Seminole, the Blackhawk would all convey an appropriate sense of bloodthirst and redoubtability. They are mouth-filling names, and their use for this purpose would be in some sense a monumental honor to people whom we have greatly wronged.—New York Mail.

Vol. 28 No. 182 QUINCY MASS., THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 7, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

UNCLE JOE CANNON

Visits the Adams Shrine in Quincy

Also Dorothy Q House

Historic Quincy added another distinguished visitor to its long list today. Uncle Joe Cannon, ex-speaker of the National House of Representatives one of the strongest defenders of Republicanism in the United States, spent the greater part of the morning visiting the Dorothy Q house, the tombs of the Presidents and their birthplace. Accompanying him was a Mr. Wright of New York. They rode in a registered New York automobile and left here for Marshfield Hills to visit the Webster homestead.

About 9 o'clock "Uncle Joe" entered the pharmacy of C. Hearn to inquire about the historic points,and was recognized by Mr. Hearn immediately. He told a patron and the news spread like wild fire. When the party stopped at the First Church they were the centre of over 100 eyes, but Uncle Joe didn't seem to mind the gaze of the curious.

Some little delay in entering afforded many the opportunity of seeing the man who was conspicuous in legislation a few sessions ago. Before passing through the open door he removed his felt hat and turning to Emery L. Crane, city clerk, he said, "Well, John Adams was a good sport."

As the party took their places in the auto after the visit Uncle Joe placed one of those long black cigars that he smokes at a characteristic angle in his mouth, threw his right leg up on the side and settled back in the cushions. The chauffeur started the engine and they left City Square at moderate speed.

When the party arrived at the Dorothy Q mansion on Butler road they left their automobile on Butler road and entering the main walk approached the front entrance and gave the knocker a bang Mrs. Andrews the caretaker answered the knock and at once saw that one of the two visitors resembled the well known "Uncle Joe". Having heard however that Uncle had a counterpart in Quincy she thought that the gentleman was the counterpart and not the real article.

Both gentlemen seemed greatly interested in what they saw at the house and Mrs. Andrews said that "Uncle Joe" was in best of spirits and all of his remarks were in a humerous vein. He also told several anecdotes of Chauncey Depew and the wife of Judge Holmes.

The party did not remain as long as they would have liked for "Uncle Joe" said that they had left a lady up the street who was waiting for them. It was not until after they had gone that Mrs. Andrews found on consulting the visitors registration book, that the gentleman was the real "Uncle Joe."

WON TWO MATCHES.

Walter J. Travis, the veteran master of golf, won at Belmont and Montclair Wednesday. Both matches were hard fought and the veterans demonstration shows that he is still a formidable factor in title tournaments He had a card of 76 at Montclair. His strenuous day resulted in his first match wins here for years. He played with Travelli against C. M. Hart and R. R. Freeman at Montclair.

PLEASE RATIFY.

The new state primary law is certainly a screecher. It was passed with the idea that the dear "peepul" would make the nominations. What is the result? The candidates for governor are all selected in advance, as a matter of fact, Bird, Progressive; Walsh, Democrat; Benton, Republican. The dear "peepul" will please ratify, as usual, and make it unanimous in the respective parties.—Salem News.

GOOD RACING AT MARBLEHEAD

Harpoon and Dolly III Win in Wednesdays Races

A fleet of 188 sailing and power crafts took part Wednesday in the annual open race of the Corrinthian yacht club off Marblehead, breaking the record of last year when the number of starters was 181 the largest in the history of the club. There was a brisk southerly air which kicked up quite a sea causing the withdrawal of a number of yachts on account of minor accidents. None of the Quincy boats however met with any mishap.

In the sonder class the Harpoon finished in second position, the race having been won by the Sprig which finished with a lead of 1 minute and 18 seconds over the Harpoon. The Ellen winner of the Challenge cup this year was obliged to withdraw owing to a slight accident

In class A, John T. Cavanagh's Meemer won the race with a lead of nearly three minutes over the Virginia. The Meemer is so large and she has to allow the other boats in this class so much that while often finishing in first position she loses the race on time allowance. Take Wednesday's race for instance she finished with a lead of over seven minutes actual time but as noted above on corrected time her lead was cut to nearly three minutes. The Eleanor finished fourth and the Marie L, in the sixth position.

In class D it was a battle royal, but in Wednesday's race with a stiff breeze the Dolly III showed what she was made of and was an easy winner with a lead of five minutes actual time and nearly four minutes corrected time over the Dartwell. The Iris finished in third position and the Clara in the fourth with the Grayling fifth. The Mudgekeewis which took everything in sight last year did not enter in Wednesday's race.

|---|---|
| Dolly III, W. W. Arnold | 2:29:40 |
| Dartwell, I. M. Whittemore | 2:35:33 |
| Iris, F. F. Crane, | 2:38:15 |
| Clara, H. W. Robbins | 2:42:57 |
| Grayling, C. V. Nickerson | 2:57:07 |

Wednesday morning the race of last Saturday under the auspices of the Boston club was resailed, in a nice light southerly breeze. The result of the race was that the Harpoon won the race with the Ellen second, the remainder of the class finishing in the following order: Badger, Cima, Dorema and Otter

It would appear from this race that the Harpoon does better work in a light air while the Ellen is a heavy air boat.

HIS VISION WAS FAULTY

Fire Department Called to Put out Fire In Airship

The alarm from Box 31 at 3.18 Wednesday afternoon was a false alarm but it served to furnish Dick Hennessey with a free ride in the police automobile to the police headquarters. When Dick gets too much down he is apt to see things and thus it was Wednesday. Looking across the street from his home he saw, or thought he saw an airship on fire in a tree. If there was a fire it was of course necessary to call the fire department and a minute later the alarm was being sounded. The alarm brought the fire department on the rush and after learning the cause of the alarm the police were notified and the wagon took Dick to the police station.

It was just about a year ago that Dick saw the same or a similar airship on fire on the roof of a building and rushing to the fire station told the firemen what he had seen?

It is proposed to harness the Ohio River near Louisville to generate electrical power.

QUINCY STREET TRAFFIC

Nearly 500 Vehicles Hourly on Hancock St.

Washington St. Second

Which streets of Quincy have the largest traffic? By traffic we include trucks, mercantile and pleasure all kinds of vehicles—motor cars and teams.

Of course Hancock street in City Square leads, but how does Washington street compare with Adams street or Hancock street at Atlantic? Has Franklin street or Sea street the most traffic? How about Granite street, Quincy avenue and Copeland street, and other main thoroughfares?

Commissioner Tupper believes that it is important to the Department of Public works to know, and he now has a record taken during July at 27 different points, showing the traffic records for eight hours from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M.

In the summary which follows the maximum traffic per hour, the minimum per hour, and the average per hour are given, also the total for the nine hours:

| Street | Max. | Min. | Av. | T |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Hancock, Quincy Sq. | 454 | 223 | 302 | 2418 |
| Hancock, Atlantic | 197 | 49 | 155 | 1242 |
| Washington | 193 | 89 | 128 | 1026 |
| Adams | 133 | 60 | 94 | 752 |
| Franklin | 119 | 76 | 88 | 703 |
| Sea | 72 | 42 | 56 | 449 |
| Liberty | 84 | 45 | 56 | 448 |
| Granite | 94 | 29 | 54 | 429 |
| Quincy Avenue | 64 | 31 | 50 | 398 |
| Copeland | 63 | 24 | 38 | 309 |
| Willard | 46 | 27 | 37 | 300 |
| Penn | 43 | 26 | 32 | 257 |
| Water | 34 | 19 | 25 | 203 |
| Beach | 29 | 9 | 19 | 150 |
| Palmer | 27 | 9 | 18 | 143 |
| Scammell | 28 | 10 | 18 | 143 |
| Billings Road | 29 | 9 | 15 | 123 |
| Newport Avenue | 17 | 6 | 11 | 92 |
| Beale | 16 | 4 | 9 | 72 |
| Elm Avenue | 17 | 3 | 9 | 69 |
| Sumner Street | 15 | 4 | 8 | 62 |
| Quincy Shore Park. | 13 | 3 | 8 | 62 |
| Centre Street | 13 | 4 | 7 | 55 |
| Squantum | 10 | 4 | 7 | 54 |
| Brook Street, Wol. | 13 | 2 | 7 | 53 |
| Lincoln Avenue | 6 | 2 | 3 | 26 |
| Farrington | 5 | 0 | 2 | 20 |

Many will be surprised to note that Hancock street at Atlantic has a larger traffic than Washington street. Franklin street at South Quincy has more than Sea street to Houghs Neck. Liberty street leads Granite street. Quincy avenue leads Copeland and Willard streets.

Penn street over which there has been so much discussion in the City Council leads Water street, the main thoroughfare to West Quincy.

It will also be a surprise to learn that Newport avenue the main thoroughfare to Wollaston had less travel than such streets as Beach street at Wollaston, Palmer street at Germantown, Billings road and Scammell street.

Beale street another important Wollaston street also falls below the streets mentioned above, and Elm avenue upon which the city is about to expend $7,000 is smaller than Beale street.

The least travelled street upon which the count was made seems to be Farrington street where the maximum was but five per hour and the average but two an hour and a total of but twenty for the eight hours during which the count was made.

Many who have watched the traffic on Adams street, especially on holidays will be surprised to find that the total for the eight hours was but 752 and that it leads Franklin street, South Quincy by but 49. It should be borne in mind, however, that Adams street is what might be called a pleasure driving street while Franklin street is used largely as a business street.

In considering table it should be borne in mind that the count was made between the hours of 8 and 12 and 1 and 5 the noon hour being omitted. As a rule the traffic between 12 and 1 o'clock is the lightest.

PROWLER ON UPLAND ROAD

Attempted to Enter Two Houses About 2 A. M.

A 2 A. M. prowler who divided his attentions between the flat occupied by Charles Roberts and family in Bates block and that of B. F. Macomber and family on Upland road was discovered this morning when he accidently rung the bell in the Macomber house and aroused the occupants. Before that he had removed a screen from the window of the Roberts flat andd awakened Jack, a fox terrior whose barks sent them investigating. He ran away when asked what was wanted and disappeared in the direction of the Quincy station.

It was shortly before 2 o'clock that Mrs. Roberts awoke and heard the man creeping along the stretch of plazza. He carried a flash light which he occasionally used and after the dog commenced barking went across to the rear door of Macomber flat where he accidently rung the bell while trying to open the screen door. Mr. Macomber immediately went to a window to inquire what was wanted and it was then the man rushed through the yard and Mrs. Roberts got a good description of him.

Mr. Macomber called aloud from an open window at the fleeting man but he ran faster than ever.

Van Roberts told his mother that he had heard noises on the veranda some little time before Jack commenced barking, but thought it was one of the roomers in the block.

Mrs. Robert's description may be of value to the police department. She very plainly saw him as he ran from the Macomber piazza.

Mr. Roberts and family have lived in the Bates block since June, while Mr. Macomber and family have resided on Upland road for some time. Both families were very excited about what they term more than an ordinary incident.

ACCEPTS CALL TO RANDOLPH

Rev. C. G. Horst of Wollaston to Hold Double Pastorate

Rev. Carl George Horst, the popular pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church since 1909, has decided to enlarge his sphere of usefulness. In addition to his present pastoral duties, he has decided to accept the call from the Church of the Unity at Randolph, and has so notified the Randolph parish. The services at Randolph are held in the afternoon, so that Mr. Horst will be able to conduct as usual the services at Wollaston in the morning and evening. Randolph is to be congratulated upon securing the services of so able a pastor.

CITY SQUARE BURGLARY

Several Pair of Shoes Taken at Heffernan's Store

An emergency call to the station advised the police about 1 o'clock this morning that three men were trying to enter Heffernans shoe store in City Square. They immediately responded in the police auto but were not in time to stop a successful burglary. They found that entrance had been effected by cutting away the glass of the office window and then opening the catch. Several pairs of Oxfords were taken.

Madame Santos who lives overhead was awakened by talking under her windows and saw three men in earnest conversation. A few minutes after she realized their intent and phoned the police. The job was done while they were on the way.

The principal military personage down in Mexico is still Gen. Anarchy.

The aviators frequently join the "back to the land" movement sooner than they expected.

Many paying investements can now be had at low prices, but most of the "paying" must be in the form of assessments.

You can't expect the hired girl to work any longer in a family where the mistress refuses to turn the ice cream freezer.

So far none of the railroads have put up signs warning the engineer to "Stop, look, listen," on account of the automobiles.

Contrary to the college graduate's expectations, the Boss rarely rushes to the door to receive him when he comes around looking for a job.

No copy of the Old Testament circulated from New York public library? Mention in some one's last Will and Testament is what New Yorkers are looking for.

The result when President Wilson is interviewed seems to be that the reporters talk very freely.

"Undigested securities" are said to be the cause of the stock market's troubles. Formerly it was customary to "digest" them by putting in more water.

The innocent bystander is much better off sitting in his parlor reading the newspaper than out watching the I. W. W. conduct a strike.

The Indian may have been unfitted to survive, but he never attempted to cool off on a hot day by swigging down the firewater.

Summer resort hotels are said to lack patronage this summer, perhaps because you can't spend as much money boarding as you can on an automobile trip.

THE SUMMER COTTAGE.

Formerly it was supposed, if you spoke of your summer home, that you were fruit for an income tax. With the common use of the word "shack" a different kind of vacationing came in. The summer home need not be a thing of servants and bath rooms and costly furniture. Many people arrange it on a basis where it is much cheaper than boarding at even an inexpensive resort.

Sooner or later most people weary of the artificial atmosphere of a summer hotel. They have tested the aridities of its conversation. They have danced to all the new dances, and heard the rise and fall of successive eras of ragtime. A longing for the simple life begins to come over them, where the children don't have to be dressed up as for church three times a day.

The real essentials of comfort are good beds and good food. With a few hundred dollars these can be assured, up to the point where the cook determines the fate of your housekeeping.

Formerly the summer home was usually thought of as connected with some exclusive colony, having stables full of horses or motors, shaven lawns, carefully tended shrubbery. Now people go out into the nearest woodland or waterside and build a little haven of rest from labor, noise, dust, and the steamy air of towns. Its walls may consist merely of matched boards nailed over a framework, minus inside finish, carpets, rugs, or plumbing.

But the air is just as tonic, the woods are just as green, the sun dances as merrily on the water, the human companionship may have just as much charm, as if they paid thousands for their outing.

The happiest summer vacations are the most informal. The fellows who wash the dishes and picnic with the girls in some frail and obscure shanty get much better acquainted than if they motored along to the oases of stiff fashion at costly hotels. College songs and the woodland ramble are better than dress suits and dancing master steps.

THREE PARTIES THIS YEAR

Progressives to Enter Joint Caucuses

Voters of the Democratic, Progressive and Republican political parties are entitled to participate in the state primaries of the present year and they are also entitled to participate in the city primaries, provided the notice required by law has been furnished by the city committees of such parties.

Party enrolment of voters in the state primaries of last year or the year before will continue for both primaries of the present year.

Party enrolment of voters as appears by the voting lists used at the state primaries will continue for the city primaries as under the present law there will be only one party enrolment of voters, and this will apply to both state and city primaries.

Voters who have not previously participated in primaries or have not established their party enrolment as provided by law, will, when they present themselves to vote at the primaries, be asked with which political party they desire to be enrolled, and their choice shall be checked upon the voting list to be used at all subsequent primaries.

No enrolled voter shall be allowed to receive the ballot of any political party except that with which he is enrolled, but he may establish, change or cancel his enrolment by appearing in person before the City clerk, and requesting in writing to have his enrolment changed to another party or cancelled, provided that such change or cancellation shall not take effect until the expiration of 90 days after the voter so appears. No voter enrolled as a member of one political party shall be allowed to receive the ballot of any other political party, upon a claim by him of erroneous enrolment, except upon a certificate of such error from the board of registrars.

PARTY FOR CHILDREN

Enjoyable Affair of the Womans Riverside Club

More than a hundred children and mothers attended the children's party given by the Quincy Womans Riverside Club Wednesday afternoon. Music games and dancing were enjoyed. The Camp Fire girls added much to the enjoyment of the little ones. Prizes were awarded to Violet Tucker, Mildred Jones, Eugene Godreau and Raymond McGilvary. Miss Josephine Thompson and Miss Mollie Avery presided at the piano. The ladies in charge of the affair were: Mrs. Harmon, Mrs. Avery, Mrs. Stone, Mrs. Griswold, Mrs. Marnock and Mrs. Ward.

BROOKLINE TAX RATE.

Brookline seems to be joining the procession with other towns and cities in the Commonwealth in the increase of her tax rate. The increase of the 1913 rate over that of 1912 was $1.30, and $4.30 more than in 1906, as will be seen by these figures:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1906 rate | $9.00 |
| 1907 rate | 10.80 |
| 1908 rate | 11.50 |
| 1909 rate | 10.50 |
| 1910 rate | 12.50 |
| 1911 rate | 12.20 |
| 1912 rate | 12.00 |
| 1913 rate | 13.30 |

A GOOD GUESSER.

A captious traveler in Northern Arkansas stopped by a fence to criticise a near cornfield which met his disapproval.

"Mighty small corn you have there," he shouted to the man who was "superintending the growth" from a shady corner.

"Yep," said the Arkansan. "Planted the small kind."

"Looks mighty yellow to me for this time of year."

"Yep. Planted the yellow kind."

"Well," said the traveler, severely, "I can't understand your method of farming. You won't get over half a crop there."

"Nope," said the Arkansan, cheerfull. "You are shore a good guesser, stranger. Half a crop exactly, that's mine. I planted this on shares."

Crew Rescued After Princess Is Rammed by Tabasco Off Marblehead

Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 7.—During the Corinthian midsummer regatta off Marblehead the 15-footer Princess, owned and sailed by J. M. Prince, was rammed and stove in by the Tabasco, Jr., of the same class.

The Princess sank immediately. Her crew of four men had to swim until picked up by the Tabasco. There were 188 starters in this regatta.

HAWTHORNE WON'T RECEIVE A PARDON

With Morton He Must Stay In Prison Until October

Washington, Aug. 7.—Julian Hawthorne, the author, and Dr. William J. Morton of New York, who were convicted of using the mails to defraud in the sale of certain mining stock, must serve out their sentences at the Atlanta penitentiary, despite the fact that the federal pardon board recommended that they be paroled.

Officials of the administration believe that enough leniency has been shown by reason of the fact that the judge in sentencing them dated back their terms of a year and a day to the date the trial began. With time off for good behavior they will be liberated in October.

RECORDS GO TO SMASH

Mears Completes Journey Around the World in Remarkable Time

New York, Aug. 7.—Promptly at 10:10 last night the Empire State express drew into the Grand Central station on time, and John H. Mears, the New York Evening Sun's globe trotter, had established a new mark for encircling the world.

He has gone around the world in 35 days, 21 hours, and 35 minutes, taking the "title" away from Andre Jaeger-Schmidt, who in 1911 made the trip in 39 days, 19 hours and 43 minutes.

Ten minutes after he had alighted from the train, Mears was once again in the editorial offices of the paper which he had left a few minutes before 12 o'clock on the night of July 1.

There was a big throng at the station to greet the globe trotter and his quick run downtown was a continual ovation.

NO TRACE OF GEMS

Detectives Still Working on the Hanan and Rumsey Robberies

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 7.—Recent rumors that Mrs. John H. Hanan's jewelry, valued at $150,000, which was stolen from her home a week ago Friday night, had been found or its location known were denied in a statement by Mrs. Hanan.

"All reports that the jewelry has been found or its whereabouts known are utterly unfounded," she said.

Charles C. Rumsey, who home was robbed of jewelry worth $125,000 on the following night, also denies his wife's gems have been found.

Detectives are still working on both cases, but no tangible clues have apparently been discovered.

MULHALL AGAIN CONTRADICTED

Counsel For N. A. M. Before Senate Lobby Probers

MANUFACTURERS' ACTIVITIES

Emery Declares They Were Directed Mainly Against Work of Federation of Labor and Fighting For "Open Shop" Principle—Tells How Congressmen Were "Prodded"

Washington, Aug. 7.—James A. Emery, Washington representative of the National Association of Manufacturers, testified before the senate lobby committee, telling the organization's side of the story that Martin M. Mulhall began. Emery was examined first by Robert McCarter, attorney for the association.

McCarter announced that he intended to show the National Association of Manufacturers had only been opposing the work of the American Federation of Labor, "taking the opposite view" on most subjects of legislation.

"We are going to investigate the American Federation of Labor, too," said Senator Walsh.

Senator Reed observed that his idea of the duty of the committee was to establish the truth or falsity of the Mulhall letters.

Emery testified he had been national counsel for the manufacturers since 1907, and for the National Council for Industrial Defense since 1908. The council, he explained, was the natural outgrowth of the desire of employers of labor to form some national organization that might be able to do for them what the united labor organizations wished to do for labor. Broadly speaking, he said, the main idea was to fight for the "open shop," instead of the unionized shop for which labor contended.

Emery testified that in August, 1907, at the suggestion of James W. Van Cleave, then president of the N. A. M., representatives of fourteen employing associations met in New York and laid plans that resulted in the formation of the council for industrial defense.

Mulhall swore there were no meetings, that Van Cleave and other officials just formed the council, a paper organization, and elected themselves officers.

How the N. A. M. "prodded" members of congress to support legislation the association favored, and opposed those who threatened its interests, was explained by Emery.

Discussing the political activities of the association, Emery said the body itself did not engineer congressional campaigns. The association kept track of the records of congressmen, he added, and, when the time for their re-election came, notified its members in the individual districts, and the campaign was done by the local members.

BROKERS WON'T TESTIFY

Sulzer Said to Have Received Campaign Funds Not Accounted For

New York, Aug. 7.—Evidence tending to show that Governor Sulzer received large contributions to his campaign fund last year which were not accounted for in the returns of campaign expenses filed by the governor, was presented to the Frawley investigating committee.

An attempt on the part of Eugene L. Richards, counsel for the committee, to show that during the campaign last fall Sulzer had invested heavily in Wall street was thwarted by the refusal of members of brokerage firms to testify, on the ground that the private transactions of an individual did not come within the scope of the investigation.

Not Time For New York to Go Into Ice Business, Says Mayor

New York, Aug. 7.—Mayor Gaynor vetoed a resolution adopted by the board of aldermen providing for an issue of $32,000 of special revenue bonds for the establishment of a municipal ice plant.

"The resolution does not say whether the ice is to be sold or given away," he comments. "There are many other things we have to do before we may reasonably think of manufacturing ice, assuming we have the legal right to go into such an enterprise."

PRIZES FOR CLEAN MILK

Also For Dairies Best Protected from Flies

The State Board of Agriculture, through its Dairy Bureau, offers $2550 in cash prizes for clean milk, open to all dairies of five cows or more in this commonwealth whose owners are practical farmers, superintending their own dairies.

Dairies located in the Eastern section will be visited during the month of September, and those in the Western section during the month of October, by duly authorized experts, and samples of handdrawn, unstrained, mixed milk taken and tested for cleanliness, the object being to encourage the cleanly habit among dairymen.

The result of the tests in the Eastern section will be shown in connection with the dairy exhibit of the Massachusetts Dairymen's Association to be held at the Brockton Fair.

Entries in the Eastern section must be made on or before August 30, and those in the Western section on or before September 30.

Four hundred and fifty dollars in cash prizes are also offered for dairies best protected from flies, open to all dairies of five cows or more whose owners are practical farmers, superintending their own dairies. Separate entries required. Entries close September 1.

Entry blanks may be obtained from the State Board of Agriculture, 136 State House, Boston, on application.

Some of the officials and inspectors who accompanied the battleship Rivadavia on her trip to New York have arrived back in Quincy, as the battleship will be in dry dock for some time. They will probably return in time to accompany the vessel on her return trip to Boston.

Maple Lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, held a well attended meeting in Protection hall, Wednesday evening. In the games that followed Mrs. Annie T. Grignon and Mrs. E. E. Marnock won first and second place. Miss Maud Tibbetts was awarded the consolation prize. Commencing next Thursday a series of weekly whist parties will be held in Electa hall under the auspices of the entertainment committee.

PURELY FROM NECESSITY.

A young woman stepped on board a train at the Grand Central Station one evening and sat down, placing her dress-suit case beside her. Presently a gentleman, who had dined not wisely but too well, wandered down the aisle sidled into the space beside her, and deposited himself precipitately upon the dress-suit case.

"Excuse me," she said, "you are sitting on my dress-suit case. If you will be kind enough to rise I will remove it."

"No, you needn't—s'pose you think I'm sitting here because I want to. Well, I'm not. There's no osher place in car, that's why!" responded he, aggressively.

NEW CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR

Rumored that C. M. Bryant is to Enter Race

There was a rumor about City Square this morning that a new candidate was to enter the September caucuses seeking the Republican nomination for Senator from the First district. The name mentioned was Councilman Charles M. Bryant.

Up to the present time the only Republican candidate for the nomination is ex-Representative Louis F. R. Langelier, who apparently had a clear field.

Should ex-Mayor Bryant enter the contest however it promises to be a lively campaign.

Mr. Bryant's reputation as a vote getter is well known and whenever his name has been put up to the citizens of Quincy he has always received a large vote.

Nomination papers it is understood were also taken out by ex-Representative William R. Thomas but at last accounts he was undecided whether he would enter the contest or not. With Roger Wolcott out of the race it would appear that the Republican nomination this year would come to Quincy.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

A small book of interest during this month and next has recently been added to the Thomas Crane Public library. The title of this book is "House-flies, and how they spread disease," the author is C. G. Hewitt, Dominion entomoloquist of Canada, and the call no. is 545.83. The first part of the book describes the structure and life history of the fly, and the second part the relation of house-fly to disease, and ends with a chapter, proposing some preventive measure.

Another book along the same line, although perhaps not of so general interest, but extremely valuable to the gardener, fruit-grower, or truck- gardener, is W. C. O'Kane's "Injurious insects," call no. 462.51. This book is a "scientific-popular" treatise on economic entomology, containing a very large amount of authoritative information. It is profusely illustrated by new and remarkably good photographs. This also takes up insects as carriers of disease, and suggest measures (fumigants, spraying, etc.) for their extermination.

CLARK ATTACKS MEXICAN POLICY

Sending of Lind Is Sharply Criticised In Senate

CANNOT PROTECT AMERICANS

Other Steps Necessary to Give Our Citizens and Their Property Protection They Need and Demand—Introduction of Resolution to Obtain Some Definite Information

Washington, Aug. 7.—President Wilson's action in sending former Governor Lind of Minnesota to Mexico as a special emissary in the present situation was attacked in the senate by Senator Clark of Wyoming, who declared "something else must be done by the administration" to guarantee adequate protection to Americans.

Clark presented a resolution for an immediate investigation by the senate foreign relations committee of the conditions of American citizens and American property in Mexico.

"This resolution is not introduced in a spirit of hostility to the administration, or of criticism of the foreign relations committee," declared the senator, "but conditions are growing steadily worse in Mexico. Now we learn that Governor Lind has been sent there by President Wilson.

"That does not satisfy. Lind does not go as the official representative of the United States. He does not go as an ambassador, cloaked with authority to represent the United States. He cannot be appealed to by American citizens for protection. Some other steps are necessary to give to Americans and American property the protection they need and are demanding."

Senator Sheppard presented a summary of the strength of the constitutionalist forces in Mexico. It showed the constitutionalist leaders had followers numbering between 60,000 and 80,000 and that they were in possession of far more than half of Mexico.

"We are unable to get exact and definite information," continued Clark, "about conditions in Mexico. Evidence still continues, however, to show that American property is being destroyed every day, that American citizenship is being dishonored there and even officers of the American government are being shot down. It is no purpose of this resolution to place the responsibility for these outrages. It is to obtain information.

"I know there is a disposition at times to regard such information as confidential. But in my judgment that is not the proper course now, because it is no secret that other nations than ourselves are interested in the situation. Conditions are being talked of, not only in the senate, but elsewhere.

"The conditions cannot long be borne with by the American republic. Something must be done or something will be done. I do not Intend to ask for a vote on the resolution at this time, and unless some one desires to make a statement in regard to it, I shall ask that it go over."

RACE SEGREGATION

Maryland Court Holds That Action of Baltimore Is Legal

Baltimore, Aug. 7.—The Maryland court of appeals, in a preliminary opinion, held "that the mayor and city council of Baltimore may, in the exercise of its police powers, validly pass an ordinance for the segregation of the white and colored races without conflicting with the provisions of the constitution of the United States or of the state of Maryland."

The opinion, however, declares invalid on technical grounds an ordinance approved by the mayor in 1911. It was announced that an ordinance will be drawn up to meet the legal exactions.

MIXED POSTOFFICE FUNDS

Providence Merchant Sentenced For Embezzlement Freed by President

Washington, Aug. 7.—Believing the man had been punished enough for a crime he did not intend to commit, the president commuted to expire at once the one year sentence of Waldo A. Hopkins, a merchant of Providence, who was sentenced on a charge of embezzling money order funds.

Hopkins was sentenced on Nov. 22 last after a plea of nolo contendere. It appeared that his small postoffice books were in order, but that he had mixed the postoffice funds with those of his business.

Woman Fatally Burned

Nashua, N. H., Aug. 7.—Mrs. Mary Pike, 42 years old, who lived alone in her small home in this city, was fatally burned when she accidentally overturned a lighted kerosene lamp. She was found by the firemen who responded to the alarm of fire.

THE DRINKER'S FAREWELL.

(Written by boy of 14 years.)

Oh! my comrades, I am dying,
And I'll drink with you no more,
There'll be none of tears and sighing,
As for those who've gone before.

Come near, and hear the story
Of my saddened, wasted life,
It is not filled with glory,
But with sad and bitter strife.

Years ago, when I was young,
Lived a maiden, bright and fair,
I was called the "Silver-Tongue,"
For my words flowed rich and rare.

So I used my silver speech,
When I tried to win her love,
But she flitted out of reach,
And I only have her glove.

Only a glove to remind me
Of my sweetheart of long ago,
Of the years that stretch behind me,
Full of the bitterest woe.

Now you know what drove me to drink boys,
Now my story you know,
Come, give me your last good-bye boys,
For I'm ready and waiting to go.

"I should be scared to death if I had such an unnatural child."

"Oh, he isn't unnatural. They say he squalls and kicks just the same as any other boy whenever he has to take a bath."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Clean Score for Francis McDonnell

Anna Stevens A Winner

Little Francis McDonnell still keeps up his habit of winning first places and Wednesday afternoon he added two more victories to his long list. This makes his score 30 points, he having won first place in every event for the Class A boys that has been held. In Class B, Francis Ryan has the highest number of points a total of 18. "Speck" Melville of Class C leads in his division with a total of 22 points.

In the girls sports, Anna Stevens of Class A has almost as good a record as Francis McDonnell of the boys for she has won every first place but one in her class; her total being 27 out of a total of 30 points. In Class B, Ruth Dunham leads with 16 points. And in the older girls Helen Jones holds the honor position with a mark of 15 points.

ELEVEN TEAMS IN LEAGUE

Rough Playing at Soccer to be Penalized

The Boston and District Association Football League met Tuesday evening.

A change was made in the by-laws to the effect that players hereafter will be more severely dealt with when reported for any rough playing and obscene language to the referee on the field of play, and will be punished by suspension for an indefinite period. It is the intention of this year's committee that nothing but good clean soccer will be allowed.

Eleven clubs have so far entered for the coming season and it is the wish of the body that 12 teams be admitted if possible, so that an even schedule can be made without any team having an off date each week. Entries will be left open for another week and will close at the next meeting on Aug. 12 when the schedule will be drawn up.

George Collins of the Charlestown club has been elected secretary.

FOYS TEAM A WINNER

Defeats Nine Composed of Quincy Clerks

The base ball team of Foy's Water street store defended their claim to the championship Wednesday by beating the Quincy clerks on the Ward Three playground, 10 to 5. The game abounded with excitement of all kinds.

A batting rally in the last by the Quincys netted only two runs although it looked as though they were going to pound out a victory. One of the most amusing incidents of the day was the attempt of Joe Roach to stop a long fly with his nose. He succeeded in juggling the ball for a few seconds but he fell to the ground.

Tinney in addition to performing well in the box, where he netted 10 strikeouts, got several pretty doubles and a single which added to the Foy run getting. A three base hit by Tom Curtin was stretched into a homer through throwing the ball around. Officer Canavan of the police force umpired but was not present in his official capacity.

ALDEN REUNION.

The Alden kindred of America, comprising the descendants of John and Priscilla Mullin Alden, held its thirteenth annual reunion at the old Alden house, Duxbury, Wednesday. Many Quincy and Braintree people were present. Miss Flora H. Matherson of South Braintree, who was chosen secretary, read a paper on "Why we should honor the name of Alden." Almira Simmons of Wollaston was elected a member of the executive board. J. Eliphaz Hayward of East Braintree who celebrated his 90th birthday last December was the oldest one present.

WHERE HER THOUGHTS WERE.

The husband was reading a newspaper account to his wife. Now and then he paused and asked a question. The nature of her replies made him doubt that she was listening closely. He accused her of having thoughts elsewhere, and she indignantly retorted that she had heard every word.

He continued reading for a few minutes and then glanced at her. From the far-away look in her eyes he knew her thoughts were not upon the item he was reading. So, turning the sheet as an excuse for the pause, he continued as follows:

"Last night, at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, just a few minutes before breakfast, a hungry boy about 60 years old bought a doughnut for nine pins and threw it through a concrete wall 20 feet thick. With a cry of dispair he jumped into a dry millpond, broke his arm at the knee joint and was drowned. It was only 10 years later, on the same day and at the same hour, that a goat gave birth to six elephants. A high wind then came up and killed three dead horses and a wooden cigar Indian. What do you think of that, dear?" he questioned suddenly.

She gave a little start, smiled and said:

"I think that's a splendid bargain, Henry. You had better get a half-dozen, for your stock of shirts is low" —Puck.

HOUSE RENT $1500 MORE THAN SALARY

Gerard Finds a Residence In Berlin For a Year

Hamburg, Aug. 7.—James W. Gerard, American ambassador to Germany, with his wife and her sister, Countess Anton Sigray, embarked here today on the Amerika, sailing for the United States.

Gerard succeeded, aided by the newspaper versions of his house-hunting difficulties, in finding two suitable houses for his residence in Berlin. The rental of each is about $19,000 annually, thus exceeding the ambassador's salary by $1500. Either one of the residences contains ample room for the embassy offices and private quarters as well as for entertaining purposes.

Girard will, before deciding on taking a lease of one of the houses, discuss the situation with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, when he reaches Washington.

PUBLIC HEARING REFUSED

Foss Strikers to Submit New Peace Offer to the Governor

Boston, Aug. 7.—Following a demonstration of the Hyde Park strikers from the plants of Governor Foss at the state house yesterday, when their demand for a public hearing was refused by the state board of conciliation and arbitration, the strike leaders decided to suggest to Foss a new plan to settle the strike.

Through their attorney a letter will be sent to the governor today stating that if he will agree to receive the shop committees, after the men are back to work, and adjust all grievances which remain unsettled at the end of sixty days to a board of arbitration whose decision shall be binding for six months, the strikers will return to work.

TRY TO DIE TOGETHER

Two Baltimore Girls Take Poison Tablets In Death Pact

Baltimore, Aug. 7.—Gladys McClure, 16 years old, and Lillian Love, 17 years old, attempted to commit suicide by taking poison tablets in the women's wash room in a department store.

They were hurried to a hospital, where antidotes were administered, and hopes are expressed that their lives will be saved.

The girls said they had troubles greater than they could bear, and decided to kill themselves together. They were not employed at the store.

Death of Arriaga Denied

Lisbon, Aug. 7.—The rumors in circulation abroad that President De Arriaga was dead are officially denied. It is stated his condition continues to improve.

Price Minister to Panama

Washington, Aug. 7.—William J. Price of Danville, Ky., has been selected by President Wilson for minister to Panama.

WAR IN BALKANS COMES TO CLOSE

Peace Treaty Signed by Delegates of Five Nations

BULGARIA IS HARD PRESSED

Accepts Modified Frontier Proposed by Her Former Allies Because of Utter Helplessness to Resist—Nurses Hopes For Its Eventual Revision by the European Powers

Bucharest, Aug. 7.—Peace was concluded last night between the Balkan states, and the preliminary treaty was signed today by the delegates of Servia, Greece, Montenegro, Roumania and Bulgaria.

The agreement was arrived at only after another exhibition of the utter helplessness of Bulgaria to face her ring of enemies.

The discussion in the peace conference threatened to become interminable, but M. Majoresco, the Roumanian premier and president of the conference, clinched matters by threatening that unless Bulgaria accepted the modified frontier proposed by the allies Roumania's army would occupy Sofia next Saturday.

This threat had the desired effect, and an agreement was arrived at after numerous private consultations between the delegates and a four hours' sitting of the conference.

The new frontier, as agreed to, starts at a point on the old frontier west of the Struma river, follows the watershed to west of the town of Strumnitza, thence runs almost through the Struma valley to the Belesh mountains and thence easterly in almost a straight line to the Mesta river, thus leaving the town of Strumnitza, the port of Lagos and Kanthi to Bulgaria and the port of Kavala to Greece.

The new frontier is a deep disappointment to the Bulgarians, who still nurse hopes for its eventual revision by the powers.

It is believed that an agreement for the demobilization of the various armies will be signed at once. The news that peace had been arranged caused great rejoicing here.

IN BED SINCE 1886

Death at Last Comes to the Relief of an Ossified Man

Wellington, Mo., Aug. 7.—Thomas F. Lockhart, after spending twenty-seven years in bed, practically in one position, came to the death he for years has prayed for.

Lockhart's joints were ossified so that the only movements of the body he could make were a shrugging of the right shoulder and the bending of the middle joints of two fingers on the right hand. With this shoulder and finger movement Lockhart had written an autobiographical book, which brought him funds sufficient to purchase the home here in which he died, and to pay for a nurse to care for him constantly. He had published several other writings, mostly of a biographical nature and emphasizing precepts of patience.

Lockhart took to his bed Christmas night, 1886, following a long ride through a cold rain. He never left it. One after another his joints became useless. He was 43 years old.

RESCUE CUTTER SINKS

Many of Party In Search of Explorer Perish In the Arctic

Christiania, Aug. 7.—A further mishap in connection with the ill-fated Schroeder-Stranz Arctic expedition was reported in a telegram announcing the sinking of the cutter Lievenskiold, which set out to the relief of Lieutenant Schroeder-Stranz and his party. Many of the party disappeared in Spitzbergen and some are known to have perished.

Members of the Norwegian relief expedition on the Lcevenskiold, commanded by Captain Lerner and comprising five German explorers and a crew of eight sailors, continued the search in the ship's small boats and on sleds. They have found no traces of the missing explorer or his companions.

AN UNDERGROUND PANIC

Sixteen Men Overcome, One Fatally, by Fumes of Explosive

New York, Aug. 7.—Stupefying fumes of an explosive containing glycerine overcame sixteen men, killing one, and caused a panic among 400 others in the Catskill aqueduct, 700 feet under the streets of New York city. The sixteen affected were dragged unconscious to a shaft and brought to the surface.

Meanwhile an alarm was spread through the tunnel, and 400 laborers made a frantic rush for the shaft, where they fought for places in the lift.

Held on Murder Charge

Boston, Aug. 7.—Domincio D'Allesandro, who shot and killed his brother-in-law, Antonio Borgio, while they were quarreling on Hanover street, was arraigned for murder in the municipal court. He was held without bail for the September term of the superior criminal court.

MARIA'S MONEY

She Drew Too Much on Her Imagination

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Maria Bevis dusted the glass showcase in her little store, piled the bolts of percale and gingham neatly on the shelves, hung some imitation lace collars in the window and unlocked the door for the day's business.

Behind the store, which was the front parlor of her house, were the rooms where Maria lived.

As she sat at the window waiting for customers she saw a girlish form hurry past and enter the grocery store. Maria Bevis smiled sourly.

"Shiftless," she muttered, snatching irritably at the red yarn of her ball. "If that ain't just like Amy Lane. Probably just got out of bed and gone to the store for something for breakfast! I never could believe Cousin Sam's daughter could be so different from me! Bevises have always been thrifty and hardworking. Somehow Amy Bevis was different; then she went and married Howard Lane, and everybody knows it's starvation business running a country newspaper. But"—

"Yes—up to Mrs. Bremer's. I'll want two yards of slate colored silesia and two spools of black thread No. 80, I guess. Just saw Amy," remarked Ida.

"So did I."

"Amy looks sick, Maria."

"Probably she eats too much pastry. I hear she lives out of the bakery," sniffed Maria, squinting nearsightedly into a box of thread.

"Humph! Howard better go to work and do something that will bring in real money. I never dreamed when I lent that money to Amy's father that he would die without a penny. When I spoke to her about it she and Howard up and promised to pay every cent, with interest."

"I heard they said they would pay compound interest."

Maria flushed. "You do hear a lot of trashy talk, Ida! Howard did say that, but it's all talk. They've never made but the one payment on the interest. I never expect to get the rest."

"I expect it's a good deal for you to lose," suggested Ida inquisitively.

"That's a personal matter," returned Maria stiffly. "It's enough that I lent it to Cousin Sammy, and he gave me the note for it payable on demand. Amy and Howard have promised to pay it. But, land, I've given it up!"

"Folks say you don't speak to Amy and Howard now," ventured Ida Ramsell as she arose to go.

"Maria!" For once Ida's sharp voice was warmly sympathetic for young Howard Lane and his wife, Amy. Swiftly she changed the topic. "Mr. Busby told me to tell you that you was appointed one of the delegates to the convention at Ripple River. There'll be twenty-five churches represented. Mrs. Bremer's another. I suppose you'll go?"

"Go nowhere!" cried Maria bitterly. "I can't afford to, Ida. If Amy would pay me that money I could go."

"Well, I'm sorry. Goodby," said Ida hurriedly, and the door jangled after her. "My," she breathed as she skipped down the street, "Maria must have lent them a lot of money! When I think of all the things she's wanted to do and couldn't because of the money tied up in that family loan I feel's if she was a martyr."

Ida Ramsell repeated that remark the next afternoon at the sewing society, and a buzz of laughter went around the group of busy women.

"It must be thousands of dollars," observed Mrs. Bremer quietly, "although I never could understand how Maria Bevis could get hold of very much to lend. I remember, when I went into black for Mr. Bremer, I offered to sell her my new garnet silk, but Maria said she couldn't afford it just then; she'd lent every penny to Sammy's folks and they hadn't paid her back."

"Too bad of her to talk so much about it," said the minister's wife. "Family affairs are best kept in the family."

"That's what I'm always telling Maria," chirruped Ida Ramsell, sewing jerkily. "But she will gabble about it. Does seem's if her milk of human kindness was turned to vinegar and she just rejoiced in gettings slaps at Howard and Amy."

"Better, so Amy said when I ran in there yesterday. Seems they had trouble with the milk from Long's. Howard wants to buy a cow, but I guess he doesn't dare to until they pay Maria."

That same night Amy and Howard Lane sat in their garden and talked of the future and played with Joyce, who seemed much better. From a tent on the green came sounds of laughter and threads of music, where a fair was in full swing.

Howard's arm was around Amy's waist. "Dear, if you hadn't married me you might have been over there enjoying yourself," he said, a little bitterly. "Now you are ashamed to go because you haven't got decent shoes to wear and because if you spent a penny Cousin Maria would frown and call us"—

"Cheats," finished Amy, with a little laugh. "Never mind, Howard. I've been to lots of fairs, and I've got you and baby, and that's enough for any girl. Only I do wish we could pay Cousin Maria's note."

They started to go into the house when a man entered the front gate and came briskly toward them. "Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lane?" he asked abruptly.

"Yes," said Howard.

"I'm Tobias Bevis—Maria's brother. Guess you've heard of me from your father, Amy, ain't it? You was a little girl when I went away. Your father, my Cousin Sammy, mortgaged his house for $1,000 to send me to California to get back my health. Well, I got it back and went to Australia, and I've been making money. I've brought back Cousin Sammy's money with compound interest. It's here in this packet. I'm sorry I couldn't give it to him direct. He was one of the best men in the world." The man's voice trembled as he finished speaking.

Without questioning why this long delayed loan was only now being repaid, Howard and Amy ushered Tobias Bevis into the house and listened to his story.

"I came here first. Maria wasn't home, and I went to the minister, Mr. Busby, and he gave me the particulars of Cousin Sammy's death. I'm sorry, Amy, that your father lost his home on account of me, but I'll make it up, if I can, to this little girl of yours. Did you say her name was Joyce?"

He played with the baby while Amy and Howard counted the money with trembling fingers and unbelieving eyes. Twenty-two hundred dollars! What wealth! Perhaps there would be enough left after Cousin Maria's awful debt was paid to give them a fair start in the world. Paying the interest had always kept them back.

"We must go tonight," whispered Amy, and Howard nodded assent.

Tobias promised to care for the baby until their return, and the happy pair hastened to Maria's house, where they found that spinster in a state of perturbation over the discovery of a man's leather suit case on her front piazza.

"What in time has happened?" she asked tartly as she ushered them into her sitting room.

"We've come to pay the note," said Amy proudly. "Will you please bring it at once, Cousin Maria? We must get it off our minds."

"With compound interest," added Howard.

Maria looked at them blankly. She had never expected the note to be paid, and she had not looked at it for years.

Slowly she walked to the china closet and took down a large blue china teapot. She thrust her hand in the top and drew out a bundle of yellowed papers.

Her spectacled eyes selected one and brought it to the table and laid it on the red cover. "There it is," she said skeptically. "Do you want to pay the whole of it?"

"I hope it isn't over $2,000," whispered Amy prayerfully as she turned over the note.

She stared uncomprehendingly at it and gave it to her husband. "What does it say?" she whispered tensely.

Howard read and his face flushed.

"Cousin Maria, do you mean to say that this note is only for $25—that that is all Father Bevis borrowed from you?" he demanded hotly.

Maria nodded dazedly. "I guess that's right," she said sheepishly. "Somehow I got to thinking how many things I could do with that money. It got to seem like a whole lot. I—I"—She paused helplessly, while Howard counted out $30 and pushed it across the table. Then he caught up the note and set a lighted match to it. When it crumbled to ashes he looked across the blacked fragments on the red cloth into Maria's scared eyes.

"Maria Bevis," he said gravely, "you've spoiled the three years of our married life, all for that paltry little sum. It is paid in full. How are you going to pay us back for the agony you have caused us? You have made us the laughingstock of the village and"—

"Don't Howard," said Amy softly. "Please don't. She is sorry."

"What would Rippledale say if it knew how much we really owed you?" Howard added remorselessly.

Maria's head dropped into her hands. "Tell 'em," she sniffed miserably. "I don't blame you one mite!"

There was silence. Then Howard spoke abruptly. "We won't tell a word, Maria. People may think what they please about the amount, but it is your place to inform every one that the note is paid, the debt is canceled. Will you do it?"

"Yes," cried Maria fervently. "I'll tell 'em tomorrow at the missionary meeting, and I don't suppose you'll ever have much to do with me again."

"Nonsense," said Amy brightly. "I'm coming over tomorrow morning with baby to buy something for new little dresses and we will have a cozy chat."

But Maria Bevis punished herself in her own way. When her brother Tobias came in and surprised her by his sudden arrival she told him the whole story, and any one who knew Maria Bevis and realized how she worshiped this young brother might understand that Maria Bevis was not too old to learn a lesson.

RAG BAG OF TODAY.

The Modern Housewife Has Four of These Catchalls.

The rag bags of today are quite as up to date as the housekeeper to whom they belong. They are not the bulgy, well filled ones that our grandmothers had that were saved for the visit of the tin peddler, when they were disposed of for quite an appreciable amount, to be applied on new tinware to replenish the kitchen shelves. The modern bags serve quite different purposes, and four are considered the number needed by the particular housewife, and none of the contents are for sale.

One contains clean cotton rags for cleaning purposes, one is for old linen pieces for household or sickroom use, one for old soft silk and satin pieces for special dust cloths for polished furniture and one for soft flannel pieces, chamois and old suede glove tops for silver polishers. These bags are considered valuable household assets and are kept most carefully. The common rags are disposed of daily, as they do not sell for enough to pay for the nuisance they are. If the tops of long gloves are saved they will be found most useful in a number of ways.

They are good to recover nail buffers with, for foundation circles for rosettes, for fancy work cushions and needle books, to clean jewelry with and for a dozen and one other things. Flour bags after being ripped open and washed may find a resting place in the cotton bag until there are a half dozen or more, when they may be hemmed and used to cover food.

GLORIFIED CUSHIONS.

Lacquer Furniture Has Brought In New Pillow Schemes.

The cushion has been glorified lately almost out of recognition. Once upon a time a good plain silk or satin cover was accounted all sufficient. Now cushions, or, rather, the covers, are changed at least once each season. The vogue for lacquer has had its influence on the fashion in cushions. Rich fabrics are still used, but so that the attention shall not be distracted from the beautiful background of red or black lacquer with decorations of dull gold their colors must be subdued.

THE NEWEST DESIGNS.

Venetian shape is most liked, and tarnished lace of gold thread, but soft and fine in texture, is applied at the ends for, say, four inches. Gold tassels depend from each cover, and just below the "knob" of the tassel, glimpsed through the gold and supplying a charming note of color, is a touch of old rose ninon. Old pieces of needlework or tapestry are also applied to chiffon velvet and are outlined with wool. Wine colored velvet, it has been found, looks particularly well on a settee or chair of black lacquer. The designs seen in the cushions pictured are new and most attractive.

A Basket Luncheon.

Several days before the luncheon the invitations for the affair may be placed in tiny baskets filled with flowers and left at the door of each guest to be. These small baskets may be bought at the ten cent store and covered with delicate shades of crape paper, which is frilled around the edges and wound around the handles.

The dining room may be decorated with similar small baskets filled with flowers and vines, either suspended from the plate rail or otherwise hung about the room, while larger baskets filled with blossoms may be placed about the room. The table may also be decorated with vines and blossoms as desired.

The refreshments may be served altogether in baskets, says the Woman's World. In the center of the table may be placed a flower decorated basket containing sandwiches of different kinds, which are passed around. The salad may be served in little baskets made of lettuce leaves, and cream cheese molded in the form of little eggs may be served in tiny baskets made of parsley leaves. Candy may also be made in small fancy baskets.

Self Winding Clothesline.

Doesn't the very name suggest a labor saving scheme? Aren't you glad to hear about something that will save work at the end of "blue Monday?" You'll recognize it when you see it, for it's merely a reel inclosed in a metal case, fitted at one end with a hook that attaches the line to a wall and at the other end with a ring for adjusting it to the opposite extreme.

At one edge of the metal case is a small clip which holds the line in place while in service and allows it automatically to wind itself when its day's work is over with, and the entire contrivance is so compact that room may be found for it in the tiniest of flats.

A HIGHER LIFE FOR WOMEN.

Suffragette Movement Part of Current "Unrest"—Moralizing of One Who Has "Higher Uses for Women" and Does Not Wish "to Degrade Them to the Level of Man."

The wife of the Vice President—a woman of sense and virtue not carried away by the hysteria of the times—thinks that the bizarre in the conduct and dress of certain women indicates their unfitness to vote.

We should not generalize this observation. It applies solely and directly to the women implicated. A woman who will indecorously expose herself is fit for nothing. If we compare the unfit men with the unfit women we shall find that the men in unfitness have much the better of it. We are having quite an upheaval about the "split skirt." After the tango, why not? Nevertheless, bless God, there's a right smart chance o' women left who do not care for either.

Inevitably, Mrs. Marshall, the wife of the Vice President, like Mrs. Scott, the president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution—being normal women as well as learned in worldly wisdom and experience—oppose the mad rush of those of their less sagacious and self-controlled sisters after "votes for women." They know the suffrage is a cure for no social or moral evil—rather an aggravation—for whatever gets into politics is likely to be polluted. We are living in a period of transition, an epoch of investigation, an age of unrest. It is all over the world. It means, to quote and command the words of Edward Sanford Martin, a general reaching out for more, for more liberty, more justice more opportunity, more to eat, more money to spend, more fun, more leisure, more knowledge. In the masses of the people there is a longing for a better chance and a fuller life. That is a phenomenon, and, of course, women have their share of it.

The people moved by this general unrest, Mr. Martin tells us, don't know precisely what they want nor how to get it. They don't know at all accurately what is right and what is wrong in the way the world is run at present, nor what resources are available to satisfy their yearnings, nor what instrumentalities of government and justice are defective or obsolete, nor who, nor what, is to blame for distresses or wants or restrictions that they chafe under. Every innovator, every mover for new methods, every vaunter of a new remedy, finds his opportunity in this prevailing temper. That is why Teddy has such a large personal following.

Listen to Debs, lately the Socialist candidate for President, in his speech accepting the nomination:

Capitalism is rushing blindly to its impending doom. All the signs portend the inevitable breakdown of the existing order. Deep-seated discontent has seized upon the masses. Poverty, high prices, unemployment, child slavery, widespread misery and haggard want in a land bursting with abundance; prosititution and insanity, suicide and crime; these in solemn numbers tell the tragic story of capitalism's saturnalia of blood and tears and shame as its end draws near.

When that sort of discourse engages the sympathies of millions of men, there is bound to be unrest among women. There is unrest among women because there is unrest in the air they breathe, and, naturally, it takes its own special forms. The form that is most conspicuous is the aspiration for suffrage.

A portion of women—how large no one yet knows—have reached the conclusion that they want to vote. That seems to stand in their minds as the evidence of equality with man. Give them the ballot and they will see to it that women are paid the same wages as men for the same work, that the factory laws are what they should be, that white slavery is abolished, that child labor is duly guarded and restricted, and "like o' that an' sich" Not only are the suffragists restless themselves, but they force disturbance on apparently a large majority of women who have found their vocation in life, and are fairly satisfied with it, or else see no cure in suffrage for what they don't like, and fear its drawbacks more than they anticipate its benefits.

Such women, Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Scott for example, find themselves threatened with political obligations which they think do not belong to them, and which they do not wish to incur, unless they organize their opposition and make it felt. And this one of them are doing, and with energy, though not with much joy in the combat. For, much as they dislike the duty, it is not one that can safely be neglected by women who believe that political government will remain in the hands of men anyhow, and that it is better that the responsibility should go with the power.

Wise women still prefer that it should so remain. Wise women prefer, other things being equal, government by men to government by women. And that seems a sound preference, for though it might seem natural that women should side with women against men, and men with men against women, that is not so natural as it seems, and usually does not happen. It is woman, not man, that is indispensable to man, and he is notoriously prone to take the side of a woman against a man; an it is man, not woman, that is indispensable to woman, and at a pinch she will usually cleave to her own as against her like.

The Courier-Journal thinks that women are as fit to vote as men—or would be when educated and prepared for it as men are—but it has higher aims and uses for women, and does not wish to degrade them to the level of man and the ballot.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CRYING FOR HELP

Lots of It in Quincy But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help.

Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed;

Not one more important to health.

When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.

There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble.

REUNION OF SPEAR FAMILY

Descendents of Seth Spear Meeting at Houghs Neck

The annual reunion of the Seth Spear Family Association is being held today at the Quincy yacht clubhouse at Houghs Neck. The descendents of this well known family, many of whom reside in Quincy, began to gather at the yacht clubhouse along toward noon and the morning hours were passed in reviewing incidents of the family which have taken place since the reunion a year ago.

At 1 o'clock the party adjourned to Norteman's pavilion where a shore dinner was served.

The business meeting of the association took place late in the afternoon with Joseph G. Spear, of Braintree presiding The principal business of the meeting was the election of officers.

After the business session the party will enjoy themselves as each individual taste dictates.

CLAN ELECTS PHYSICIAN

One of the largest attended meetings in the history of Clan McGregor O. S. C. was held Wednesday evening. It was a special meeting called to elect a physician for the clan to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. McLennan.

The meeting was so largely attended that it was necessary to place a large number of chairs in the body of the hall.

There were two candidates for the position Dr. John T. Reynolds and Dr. John H. Ash. The election was by ballot and Dr. Reynolds was elected by a large majority. This was the only business to come before the meeting.

SQUANTUM WOMENS CLUB

Officers Elected for the Ensuing Season

The annual meeting of the Squantum Women's Club was held at the home of Mrs. William R. Donovan, Bellevue road, Wednesday afternoon, and a large number of the members were present.

It was decided to hold a sale Saturday afternoon, Sept. 6, on the grounds of Mrs. Eagar's home. it was also voted to continue the Saturday night subscription dances during the month of August, and Mrs. Loughan has offered her spacious home again for next Saturday night.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year; Mrs. William A. Reed was unanimously re-elected President; Vice-President, Mrs. James H. Foster; Secretary, Mrs. S. H. Adams; Treasurer, Mrs. Edward Eagar, who was unanimously re-elected; Historian, Mrs. John Holmes. The Executive Board was chosen as follows: Mrs. Gustav Wunderlich, Mrs. William R. Donovan, Mrs. Helen McGowan and Mrs. C. A. Ramsdell.

Mrs. Reed called upon Mrs. Foster, the new vice president, to occupy the chair for a few moments in order that she might make a few remarks to thank the ladies for their kind support which they had extended her during the past year, and she expressed the hope that all would continue to do so and great results might be obtained next year, as had been this year. She was given a great ovation and it only in a measure began to show the appreciation which the members wish to extend to her for her hard work during the initial year of the Squantum Women's Club.

After the business meeting was over all enjoyed a social hour, during which time Mrs. Donovan, assistd by Mrs. Ramsdell and Mrs. Morse, served a dainty lunch.

MORRISON—REED.

A very pretty home wedding took place in Atlantic, Wednesday afternoon when Miss Beulah Foster Reed, daughter of Mrs. Clarence Reed of 279 Squantum street, was married to Frank Sifford Morrison, son of Dr. William S. Morrison of St. Johns, New Brunswick, at the home of the bride, by Rev. T. W. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial church.

The bride was handsomely gowned in white crepe de chine trimmed with real lace and pearls. She was unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison left Wednesday evening for Vancouver, British Columbia, where he is to be instructer in one of the schools.

HISTORIC OLD TAVERN.

Lexington now holds formal possession as its old Buckman tavern, famous as the gathering place of the Minute men on the morning of the opening engagement of the revolution. The deed for the property was placed on record at the town hall last week.

The old tavern on the edge of the historic village green still retains the bullets fired by the British. For years it has been one of the landmarks of the town, and has been owned by private persons. At a town meeting in May it was voted to appropriate $30,000 for its purchase.

—One of the leading moving picture men of the country says the business is overdone, and predicts hard times for many who are in the enterprise. That is likely to be true, a little later, if not now.. The tendency is always toward overdoing a business that is unusually profitable, and this business can hardly be exceptional in that respect.—New Bedford Standard.

ODD FAMILY HISTORY

Missouri Man Married Triplets Who Bore Eleven Sets of Twins

Washington, Aug. 7.—What is regarded by the pension bureau as the history of one of the most remarkable families ever coming before its notice was contained in a letter received from Dr. William Warren of St. Joseph, Mo.

The letter was in reply to one from the pension commissioner asking Warren for his family history so that a readjustment in his pension might be made under the new law. Warren replied:

"I do not know whether there was a family record of the births of all my father's children, of whom there were twenty-five in all by three wives, who were sisters, and of whom the first two wives were twins and the third wife also was one of twins. My mother had triplets, three boys, of whom I was one. She had no other children. All the other wives' children were twins.

"In all, of the three wives, there were thirteen boys, all of whom were soldiers. All of the twenty-five children are dead but myself."

The veteran is 76 years old. He will get an increase in pension.

OLD OFFICERS REMAIN

No Change In Supreme Heads of Knights of Columbus

Boston, Aug. 7.—All the supreme officers of the Knights of Columbus were re-elected at the business meeting of the delegates. There was opposition for only one office—that of supreme physician—but Dr. E. W. Buckley of St. Paul was re-elected when Dr. T. L. Harrington of Milwaukee withdrew after a spirited contest.

The officers for the next year will be J. A. Flaherty, Philadelphia, supreme knight; M. H. Carmody, Grand Rapids, Mich., deputy supreme knight; W. J. McGinley, New Haven, supreme secretary; D. J. Callahan, Washington, supreme treasurer; J. C. Pelletier, Boston, supreme advocate; E. W. Buckley, St. Paul, supreme physician; Rev. P. J. McGivney, Middletown, Conn., supreme chaplain, and T. J. McLaughlin, Newark, N. J., supreme warden. Four new directors were also elected.

ENORMOUS COLD STORAGE STOCKS

Butter Jobbers Are Awaiting a Rise In Price

Chicago, Aug. 7.—Although Chicago housewives have been paying midwinter prices for butter and a further advance is expected, there are more than 65,000,000 pounds of the product in cold storage, according to the report of the Warehousemen's association. This is better than 10,000,000 pounds more than the reserves a year ago.

A half-cent increase yesterday made the price 26½ cents to jobbers and another advance of 1 cent is predicted. Prices to consumers range from 35 to 38 cents, according to location.

Jobbers have been paying more for butter than they could sell at and have been forced to place their purchases in storage, awaiting a higher market.

DEAD LETTER SALES

One of Washington's Annual Features Abolished by Burleson

Washington, Aug. 7.—"Dead letter sales," which have been an annual feature of Washington for years, were abolished yesterday by Postmaster General Burleson.

Hereafter all undeliverable third and fourth class matter which has been sent heretofore to the division of dead letters will go to the postoffice at the headquarters of the railway mail service of the division in which the matter is detained. There matter of manifest value will be held for one year, subject to reclamation, and then sold at auction.

Boston is one of the fifteen postoffices which will handle the dead letter matter.

GHOULS RAID FAMILY TOMB

Coffins Are Ripped Open and Many Skeletons Carried Away

North Smithfield, R. I., Aug. 7.—The family tomb on the estate of James Wilson of this place was broken into by ghouls. Caskets were ripped open and their contents scattered about the tomb.

In all thirteen coffins were disturbed and many of the skeletons carried away.

One metal casket, which had contained the body of a diphtheria victim, was broken open, and this body is missing. The police are making an investigation.

BOILERMAKERS MAY RETURN

Three Firms Agree to a Form of Arbitration

Boilermakers at the local shipyard have watched with interest the strike in other plants in the state.

A form of arbitration which may bring about an amicable settlement of the strike in 13 plants was agreed upon by three of the firms, at a conference before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, on Wednesday. The firms which agreed to the terms are: Roberts Iron Works, Cambridge; George E. Lawley and Son Corp, Neponset; Atlantic Works, East Boston.

Similar conferences are being arranged by the Board with the proprietors of other plants and the same form of agreement will be discussed.

The form of agreement is:—

"That, if the employees return to work the employer will take up each individual grievance presented by the employees or by their shop committee, and will endeavor to adjust satisfactorily to both parties such controversy as may exist relative to wages or conditions of work: this to be done within 60 days from the time of the return to work. If, at the end of 60 days, any items of controversy remain unsettled, such items shall be referred for determination to the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, and the decision shall be final and binding upon the parties for a term of six months in accordance with the law."

ESTIMATE OF TAX RATE

Will be About $23, an Increase of $1.

The Daily Ledger estimates that the tax rate of Quincy this year will be about $23 per $1000. This is based on a valuation of nearly $37,000,000.00. The total levy will be about $860,000.00, an increase of $80,000.00 over 1912.

FIRE AT HULL.

Fire totally destroyed the car shed of the Nantasket branch of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. at Point Allerton, Hull, Wednesday night. The property was about 30 years old and valuable for business purposes. The fire was discovered about 10.45, after it had gained great headway. The reflection spread over the sky and was visible from Quincy.

SPANISH WAR OFFICER

Leaving school he entered the employ of the New England railroad as a clerk in the freight department which position he held for many years.

Some years ago he entered the employ of the Old Colony Trust Co. of Boston and had worked himself up to a responsible position.

When quite a young man he enlisted in Co. K of the 5th regiment, then located at Braintree and worked himself up step by step until he was elected as captain of the company.

The company returned in the spring of 1899 and upon the retirement of Col. Henry L. Kincaide from the captaincy, and the election of William W. Whitney to captain he was elected as first lieutenant. When Capt. Whitney retired Lieut. Spear was elected as captain of the company and served for several months.

He married Miss Minnie Frye of Quincy and soon after his marrige took up his residence in Atlantic where he resided for several years, later moving to Somerville where he has since resided.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide when informed this morning of the death of Capt. Spear said that he felt extremely grieved to learn of his death, that he and Capt. Spear had always been warm personal friends and his loss was a personal one. Speaking of his service in the militia, Col. Kincaide said "Capt. Spear was a fine type of man and a splendid soldier. He had a kindly disposition and was courteous with all with whom he came in contact. While in Co. K he was deeply interested in the work of the company and did much to bring it up to the standard which it held. He was a man much beloved, not only by the officers with whom he served but with the men of the company as well, and was looked upon by all as a most efficient officer."

Funeral services will be held Friday at 3 P. M. from the Village cemetery chapel at Weymouth. All friends are invited.

BIG FIRE AT SCITUATE.

The Torrey estate on Scituate Hill, Scituate, suffered a $5,000 loss from fire Wednesday which also threatened to destroy the estate of Frederick B. Lund, adjoining. The fire was confined to three barns through the combined efforts of out of town firemen and summer residents. A horse, 300 chickens and valuable farming implements were destroyed. The observatory on the estate was saved.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col. John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Adams, the first Vice President and second President of the United States, Franklin street, Quincy Adams house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Admission charged.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erected June 17, 1896 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb, reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7, 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

COUNTRY FAIR AT WOLLASTON

For Flowers Fruit and Vegetables

May Offer Silver Cup

For the first time in the history of Wollaston, an agricultural fair is to be held this year. Having in mind the success that always attends the Brockton, Hingham, Weymouth and other county fairs, the farmers of Wollaston have decided to hold a fair of their own. There are few in the berg who farm it on an extensive scale, but there are hundreds who have their little backyard farms of which they are very proud, and upon which they spend all their spare time hoeing out the weeds and killing the various kinds of bugs, hundreds in number, which live upon the plants.

There seems to be a bug for almost every vegetable, unless it be sweet corn, and the enemy of this is black rot. However the farmers have succeeded pretty well in keeping the upper hand of the bug family and if "the farmers" will only co-operate the success of the fair is assured.

The plan as now outlined is to have a large exhibit of fruit, flowers and vegetables of all kinds sometime about the middle of September. Suitable awards will be made for the best exhibits, and possibly a silver cup to the exhibitor winninw the greatest number of awards. The judging will be done by experts, and as an incentive to good work, none but amateur farmers wil be allowed to enter their product.

No fee is to be charged to enter exhibits and the more exhibits that are entered, the better the show.

Of course the promoters do not expect to compete with such shows as are given at Brockton, but who knows but what in time the association may spread out and hold a big show with horse racing, a midway and the attractions usually found at such exhibitions.

Now that the Wollaston farmers know what is coming it is up to them to look a little more carefully after their back yard gardens, and see to it that the fruits of their labor are shown.

Frederick H. Bishop is the chairman of the exhibits, and if you want to know more about the show call up Arthur Rohn, manager of exhibits, Quincy 137-W.

JAMES T. COLLINS.

The funeral of James T. Collins, a long time employee of the city of Quincy, was held this morning from his home, 31 Gay street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor. Music was by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon, organist. At the grave the commitment service was read by Rev. Fr. Hugh Fred Smith of St. Rose's church of Chelsea. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. In the funeral procession were many friends and neighbors of the deceased who was a highly respected resident of this city. Among them was a large delegation of members from Div. 5, A. O. H., whose floral tribute to their departed brother was a large standing cross. There was a profusion of floral tributes. The bearers were Timothy Collins of Dorchester, Denis Behan, Timothy J. Collins, John Callahan, John J. Callahan and John Donovan of Quincy.

POLICE LEAGUE.

The Quincy police are in third place in the Police league and next Wednesday they will play Lowell, who are in second place. The Metropolitan Park officers, by defeating Chelsea on Wednesday jumped into first place with eight won and one lost. But one game behind is Lowell. If Quincy defeats Lowell it will not alter the position, but will give them more chance to climb into the second notch. Quincy has won six and lost three.

CONFERENCE OF DEMOCRATS

Will Consider County and Senatorial Nominations

The Democratic situation in Norfolk county is receiving the attention of the State Committee and invitations were issued today to all known and prospective candidates and committee men to attend a meeting in Electa hall Quincy, Monday evening, where the issues will be discussed.

It is some few years since the State committee took an active interest in affairs of Quincy and the county to the extent they now contemplate. The movement is precipitated by the absence of a candidate for Senator who is acceptable to the majority of the party.

John J. McDevitt, the suspended Senator, is known to be one of those seeking the nomination. He claims to be a candidate on a "vindication" platform.

John J. Dwyer, representative from the district including Weymouth, has papers in circulation for the Senatorship. They have not been filed. It is common knowledge that he and the suspended Senator parted company a few days after both houses convened. The rupture openly occurred in a committee room while a reduction of the price of gas, a pet horse of McDevitts, was being considered for Weymouth.

SUBMARINE TRIALS.

Submarine G—4, built at the Cramp shipyard, completed the last of her underwater trials at Provincetown Thursday. The speed attained was nine knots and in thet rials of the past week she is said to have surpassed contract requirements. The vessel is from the design of a well known Italian naval constructor, Maj. Laurenti. The over water trials will now be held and if the requirements are fulfilled she will be turned over to the government.

GRANITE DEALERS INVITED

To Accept Our Hospitality Aug. 22

Red Letter Day Assured

In spite of all that has been said by Barre, Friday Aug. 22, will be known among the delegates to the Retail Monumental dealers convention as "Quincy day." The outline of the plans for the day have already been published in Daily Ledger and plans are now about completed. In order that the delegates to the convention may be fully informed of what to expect, the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association published the following open letter in the issue of Granite Marble and Bronze which was issued today:

"As the opening date of the National Retail Monument Dealers' Association convention at Boston, Mass., August 19, is drawing close and believing many retail dealers would like to know about some of the arrangements outside of the plans of the Convention Bureau, we take this opportunity to advise the Retail Dealers of Quincy's entertainment.

We are advised that the Convention Bureau plans for entertainment and the exhibition are an assured success. There will be an exhibit that will surpass all others as to quality, design and workmanship, and this in itself will amply repay any dealer for his visit to the Boston convention.

The Convention Bureau has made its plans for entertainments to blend with the hours of meetings of the convention so as to avoid any conflict, and the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association have arranged their day to fit in with any plans made by both the Convention Bureau and the Retail Dealers' Association.

Quincy has made all plans for their entertainment of the retail dealers for Friday, the 22d day of August, and it will be a day well remembered by all who participate, as Quincy is determined to make this day a Red Letter Day as far as entertainments are concerned, either at this or any other convention, whether in the past or in the future.

Leaving the Arena at Boston at about 8 A. M., automobiles will take the visitors through Boston's famous parkway system, including the Fenway, Jamaica Pond, Arnold Arboretum, Franklin Park, thence through Forest Hills Cemetery and the Metropolitan Parwkay to historic Quincy, the City of Presidents and the birthplace of the granite industry of this country, where the party will be welcomed by the Mayor and given the key of the city.

Here will be visited the many historical points of interest, including the birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth presidents of the United States, the Dorothy Q. House and the Cairn where Abigail Adams watched the Battle of Bunker Hill, and many other interesting points connected with the early history of our country. Then through the cutting yard section of the granite industry of Quincy to the quarries.

After the visit to the quarries, lunch will be served by the Board of Trade, followed by a trip through the large Fore River Shipbuilding plant, where our battleships are built. And then on to Nantasket Beach, where is located the Coney Island of Boston. The Palm Garden at Paragon Park, where the dealers will be entertained by Mace Gay's band while the inner man is being taken care of by one of our famous clam bakes and fish dinners.

Quincy not only produces the best granite in the world but also has more of nature's pleasure gardens within easy access than other granite centre, and a cordial invitation is extended to all visiting dealers to accept our hospitality for one day, the day following the close of the business of the conventon, Friday, August 22d, 1913.

Very respectfully yours,
The Granite Manufacturers' Assn. of Quincy, Mass.
T. J. Dunphy, Secretary.

NO TRACE OF DOVELL

Rumors That He Has Been Located Unfounded

Although there have been countless rumors of Paul Dovell being heard from at this place or that, the fact remains that no word has been received from him and the police and his family are as much in ignorance as to his whereabouts as the day he disappeared.

At the time of his disappearance he left his outer clothing on the bank at Wendell's quarry. The police argue it out that Dovell could not very well have gone away with nothing but his under garments on, for he took no clothing from home.

Capt. Daniel R. McKay, who has been working on the case has located the woman said to have given Dovell the box of clothing, and has interviewed her. He has learned that it is true that she gave him a box of clothing but it was not men's clothing that she gave him, but womens.

It is quite obvious that Dovell could not very well have gone off wearing women's clothing, which adds more mystery to his disappearance.

Capt. McKay said this morning that while there had been many rumors of Dovell being heard from in New Jersey, New Hampshire and other places, they were simply rumors for his family had received no word of his whereabouts.

Diver Packard who explored Wendell's quarry last week, unsuccessfully it will be remembered found the water very cold and so clouded that it was impossible to see for any great distance, and about all that he could do was to feel about where he walked. It is not among the impossibilities therefor that under these conditions he may have missed the body, allowing that it was in the quarry hole.

There is some talk of making another attempt with a diver, when it is possible that the conditions under water may be different and that the diver will be able to see for a greater distance.

PROBABLY THE OLD TICKET

But It Is Not Certain McGilvray Will Be Senator

The representative situation as regards Democratic candidates in the fifth and sixth Norfolk candidates is hardly out of the fog, but it is practically certain that Michael T. Sullivan, the fifth district representative is a candidate for reelection.

It is extremely doubtful that Charles J. McGilvray will enter the contest in the sixth district. Although he has been prominently mentioned by many of the voters he has not as far as is known been in a position to seriously consider running because of pressure of business. He has not authorized any statement however that he will not be in the field.

SUMMER BOWLING.

Poehlers All Stars beat the St. Mary's in the summer bowling league at the Valgin alleys, Houghs Neck, Thursday evening, 1383 to 1372. Poehler was high man with a single of 122 and a total of 321. In the winning five were Poehler, Davie, Earnest, Gunbridge and Purcell. The losers were Montgomery, Welch, Clarke, Burns and Quinn. On the same alleys the Hill Tops beat the Valleys, 1241 to 1191. Regan of the winners was high with a single of 111 and a total of 272.

TESTIMONY OF GILRAINE

Mayor Stone Expected to Visit the Hospital

Francis Gilraine who was shot while trying to escape from officer Avery on the night of June 25, is the only witness that has not been examined by Mayor Stone in the investigation of the case. It is expected however that he will be questioned at the City Hospital this afternoon.

At the hearing last week all of the testimony was concluded with the exception of that of Gilraine and it was agreed that he should be questioned by Mayor Stone and Mr. O'Connell counsel for Gilrane at the hospital. The date for his examination was set for Tuesday, but as Mr. O'Connell was unable to be present it was put over until this afternoon.

SHERWOOD F. KELLEY.

Sherwood F. Kelley of Atlantic, died Thursday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Stephen B. Little of 13 Crescent street, in his 39th year. The funeral will take place from there on Saturday morning. A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. Mary's church and interment will be in St. Patrick's cemetery, Abington.

The Germany sonderklasse boats are due to arrive in Boston from Hamburg, today, aboard the steamship Cincinnati. They will take part in the challenge races off Mrblehead for the President Wilson cup.

COUNCIL SPECIAL CALLED

Several Communications From Mayor

Ten Items in the Call

The call for the special meeting of the City Council next Monday evening is being sent out today by Mayor Stone. There are ten items mentioned in the call which augurs well for an important meeting.

In addition to the drawing of jurors, the Council will be asked to receive and act on communications from the Mayor appointing election officers, appointing a measurer of wood, and special constable; also to issue the call for the State primary caucuses and designate polling places for the caucuses.

In addition to these, the important matters include receiving and action on a communication from the Mayor relative to the establishment of an

The Foy Stores

Adams Market — Water St. Market

INTEGRITY in all our dealings with the public has been one of the guiding principles of the Foy business since it was established more than a dozen years ago.

We have maintained a certain high standard and have done all in our power to foster public confidence in our Water street store and all we say and do in the future we shall not deviate from this course in our new Adams Market.

We owe our success equally to the giving of best values and to the way of giving them. The necessities and the luxuries are provided for in this new store, and our service is unstinted. The range of quality and assortment are on a large scale with all the scope of choice which this implies while the prices at all times are the lowest on dependable goods.

We believe we have proven our principles in the past, and in the future distribution of goods we shall endeavor to satisfy all that in freshness, quality and price the Foy standard of value has not deviated in the least from the record of past years.

Our traditions we will never discard nor supersede, but uphold with all our strength, so will we attain the goal we aim at, to hold the confidence of the public.

Moving pictures of a party ascending the Matterhorn are being provided, but what the public would like would be to see a party falling down.

When your cat and dog have been subsisting on the dry bones of the back yard for two weeks, the welcome they give you on your return is not wholly due to disinterested affection.

Many of the women campers in New Jersey are wearing trousers this summer. There are distinct advantages when it comes to lighting the fire.

It is said that frequently President Wilson is not recognized on the street. This would be serious if he were an alderman.

The chief reason why camping out is not more popular seems to be that you are not required to wear your best clothes.

A few years ago hard working people were supposed to look at the rich with envy and resentment. Now they merely deride the occupants for not having a more up to date car.

One common method of keeping the boys contented on the home farm is to place them on the hottest and dustiest mow in the barn to tuck the hay under the eaves.

There is a demand that the Washington lobbyists wear badges. The Congressmen would then know where to go for advice.

The merchant who doesn't advertise at this season at least won't have to bother to buy much new stock next spring.

It is not good judgement for the summer girl to wear more than four diamonds rings on a certain finger simultaneously.

There is an old saying that the man who never takes a vacation takes one all the time.

Few prudent people go camping in the woods nowadays without a telephone, banquet lamp, upright piano, and automobile.

WHY GIRLS LEAVE SCHOOL.

Probably the treatises on sociology which one studies in college would say it was because their parents wanted the money the child could earn. But are father and mother smart enough to get possession of any large part of the daughter's pay envelope?

The United States government recently issued a pamphlet dealing with this subject. According to this study, the desire of parents for the earnings did not figure as the cause so much as the fact that the girls are tired of school.

Pocket money is quite as attractive to the girl as to the boy. The latter enjoys being able to take his girl friends on automobile rides and lining them up against the soda fountain.

Similarly to the young girl, pocket money is the raw material of clothes. Clothes are the arsenal of the campaign for a beau. The prevailing home sentiment is that last year's school dress, with a little modernization, will do very well for the coming season. She sees much better than mother the futility of any such temporizing course Nothing will give her true social position but several new frocks. Then there are millinery and other incidentals.

Whenever she mentions these vital truths, mother refers to disagreeable subjects like Dad's life insurance policy. Dad looks worried and grows more absorbed in the newspaper. What can an ambitious girl do, but get out in the real world, away from bookland and at melancholy shadows, and hustle for her own pocket money?

It is of course needless to analyze or refute this point of view. The girl who quits school too soon is the girl who gets married too soon, who is driven into the factory to help her husband. Meanwhile the little ones grow away from home influence like little weeds.

REUNION OF SPEAR FAMILY

Descendents of Seth Spear Gather at Houghs Neck

The attendance at the annual reunion of the Seth Spear Family Association at Houghs Neck Thursday was not as large as expected, from the fact that several of the members of the association are ill while others are away for the season. Thirty-three however answered to the roll call and the afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed. The participants began to gather along toward noon and an hour was pleasantly passed on the broad piazzas of the Quincy yacht clubhouse.

At 1 o'clock dinner was announced and an adjournment was made to Norteman's where a shore dinner was served. After dinner the clubhouse piazzas were again sought until 3 o'clock at which time the business session was held. There was but little business to transact other than the election of officers. In the absence of Joseph G. Spear, the president, who was detained at home on account of sickness in his family, the first vice president presided. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Joseph G. Spear of Braintree.

Vice Presidents, J. Howard Stone of Kendall Green and James Spear of Neponset.

Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Charles Gragg.

After the business session the remainder of the afternoon was passed in social entercourse.

BATES FAMILY REUNION.

Frank A. Bates of South Braintree, historian of the Bates family, attended the annual reunion Thursday at Cambridge. The association is composed of residents of many states in the Union and the Provinces. The affair was held in the First Parish church with about 75 attending. An appropriation of $60 toward a permanent fund was made. New members were admitted from Washington, Oregon, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri.

DISTRICT COURT.

Alto Kalle and Tuomista Kalle were arraigned for assault on Edward Buski at Quincy. Cases continued until Aug. 11.

The continued case of Charles Beverly for larceny at Quincy was called. He was also arraigned on a second complaint for larceny. Both cases then went over until next Thursday.

BUYING IN DRIBS.

A New view of the parcel post has been presented by Secretary J. R. Morehead of the National Federation of Retail Merchants.

"The parcel post will add to the high cost of living, because it will educate the people to buy in dribs."

We are grateful for that word dribs, which is excellent English, but which has been ignored too generally by all save the homely folk who are too seldom heard in public.

It is quite possible that the drib is responsible for a very large part of the evil of high prices.

We in the city are all too familiar with the practice of purchasing in dribs, and the retailer everywhere is shrewd enough to take advantage of the public's weakness for dribs.

"Fifteen cents apiece or two for a quarter," we are told by "the man," and we direct him to wrap one of them up. What do we care for the five cents we are needlessly transferring from our purse to his?

The retailer bases his scheme of profits upon the popularity of dribs. He does not sell an article for twelve cents, though he may offer two such articles for twenty-five cents.

And the housewife is too often an improvident and careless soul who finds that it is easier to take along a drib, especially if she wishes to stop at the moving picture show on the way home. A full market basket would prove a burden; but what are a few dribs?

Moreover, the pantry and the cellar are unpopular in smaller houses, and the ice box is usually large enough to hold just enough for one day's consumption. Thus there appears to be a general conspiracy toward the end that the wife of the poor man, who ought to count her pennies most conscientiously, is almost compelled to do business on the drib plan.

However, we hesitate to accept this latest criticism of the parcel post. Eleven pounds is the limit; and eleven pounds of most things is an abundance. It cannot be called a drib.—St. Louis Times.

CODY PLUNGES TO DEATH

Passenger Also Killed When Famous Aviator's Machine Turns Turtle

Aldershot, Eng., Aug. 8.—Colonel S. F. Cody, one of the best known aviators in England, and a passenger named Evans were killed when Cody's aeroplane turned turtle near here and buried both men under it when it fell.

Cody was an American by birth, but became a naturalized Englishman several years ago. Last year he won the British military prize of $25,000.

Cody's aeroplane, a new one he was trying out, fell 200 feet and was so broken that it was impossible to tell what caused the accident.

Cody's two sons were among the spectators who saw the aviator and his passenger fall. Cody's neck was broken.

Cody was one of the most interesting figures in aviation, more especially in the British Isles. He was a real soldier of fortune with a varied career. He was said to be able to build anything in the way of a flying machine or balloon.

SHOW FINE DEGREE OF FORBEARANCE

Americans and Japanese Still Friendly, Say Envoys

San Francisco, Aug. 8.—Sailing next week from Vancouver on the same ship with Felix Diaz, special ambassador from Mexico to Japan, will be Dr. Juichi Soyeda and Tadao Kamiya, the two commissioners sent to this country by the Affiliated Chambers of Commerce of Japan to investigate the conditions surrounding the California alien land act. In summarizing the result of their investigations, Soyeda said:

"The general feeling toward our country we found to be very cordial, and the general sentiment among Japanese living on the Pacific coast also was satisfactory. There seems to be a fine degree of patience and forbearance manifested. Our people at home also are waiting for the ultimate solution with forbearance. So long as the people of the two countries keep their heads and try to understand each other there is nothing to fear."

DEATH OF MRS. ROMANI

Police Are Hunting Her Assailant on a Charge of Murder

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 8.—Mrs. Madelena Romani died last night, a victim of a bullet fired by Emmanuel Margetti, an Italian, now being hunted by the police on the charge of murder.

Margetti rode away on his bicycle after the shooting, escaping to Boston in a taxicab, where he boarded a train for Montreal, where he has a brother. It is believed that friends supplied him with money for the getaway.

HUERTA THROWS DOWN GAUNTLET

Says He Will Reject Lind Unless He Is Recognized

CALLED "UNDESIRABLE ALIEN"

"Mexican Affairs For Mexicans" Is Provisional President's Remark to Followers—Bryan Advises Him to Be Patient and to Read Wilson's Note Before Taking Decided Stand

Mexico City, Aug. 8.—Provisional President Huerta of Mexico boldly threw down the gauntlet to the United States in his move to secure recognition of his government by the American government at Washington.

By Huerta's direction Foreign Minister Aldape informed the United States embassy that John Lind, who is being sent to Mexico as the personal envoy of President Wilson, will be expelled from the country as an undesirable alien unless Lind goes before the Mexican government and explains his official character and intentions, or else brings official recognition of the Huerta administration in Washington.

Following out the new aggressive policy of the Mexican government, a delegation will wait upon Lind upon his arrival in Mexico City and the attitude of the Mexican government toward the United States will be outlined then in unmistakable terms.

In addition to being a special investigator, Lind is commissioned to act as peacemaker between the leaders of the various revolutionary factions, but it is doubtful if Huerta will allow an alien to act in such a capacity.

"Mexican affairs for Mexicans" was the laconic remark made by President Huerta to his followers in congress who called at the national palace.

Previous to the statement issued by the Mexican foreign minister, the United States embassy had received the following note from Secretary of State Bryan:

"You may say to the Mexican foreign minister that Governor Lind comes to Mexico on a mission of peace and that President Wilson feels that his presence there will contribute towards a settlement of existing difficulties. The Mexican government should await the president's communication and not give weight to misrepresentations published in sensational newspapers."

Not only in Mexico City but throughout the entire republic increased antagonism toward Americans is being shown. Huerta and his advisers believe that if war should be declared it would have the result in making a unit of all the revolutionary bands so that a solid front could be presented against any foreign foe.

A Delicate Situation

Washington, Aug. 8.—The American government is confronted by what official Washington regards as the most delicate situation in its relations with Mexico that has yet developed since armed revolution disturbed the peace of the southern republic.

The threatened rebuff from the Huerta administration to the mission of John Lind, en route to Mexico City to expound the hopes of the United States for a suspension of hostilities and an orderly, constitutional election in Mexico, drew from Senator Bacon, chairman of the foreign relations committee, a declaration on the floor of the senate that the present situation was "the gravest in years, much graver than confronted us when the Cuban question was here."

President Wilson was unmoved by advices from Mexico City depicting the Huerta government as inimical to Lind's mission. He let it be known, too, that so far as he was able to learn there was not the slightest demand from the American people for intervention and declined to discuss alternatives that might be used in event that the efforts of the American government to help restore peace in Mexico were rejected.

The president is confidently hopeful that a peaceable solution of the Mexican trouble can be affected.

BISHOP LAWRENCE SUED

Rector Also Made Defendant in Action Brought by Woman

Boston, Aug. 8.—Bishop William Lawrence and Rev. Arthur B. Papineau, rector of the Episcopal church at Wayland, are each sued for $10,000 in two suits filed in the Suffolk superior court by Effie A. Carter of Wayland for alleged refusal to administer holy communion to her and for alleged defamation of character and alleged false imprisonment.

One of the suits charges the refusal of communion and the other repulsion from the Lord's table without cause and defamation of character. The other suit charges false imprisonment and defamation of character on her trying to enter the Episcopal church in Cochituate.

Seventeen Persons Drowned

Swinemuende, Ger., Aug. 8.—Seventeen people were drowned here here by the capsizing in a squall of a sailboat fitted with an auxiliary motor. There were twenty-two persons on board.

ALDEN KINDRED OF AMERICA

Quincy and Braintree People at Annual Reunion

The thirteenth annual reunion of the Alden Kindred of America, was held Wednesday at the "Old Homesetead" in Duxbury. A special train arrived in Duxbury at 10 o'clock. A gathering of about 500 filled the huge tent in which the exercises were held.

It was stated that many of those present had attended all the reunions since the first one held at Highland Park, when the organization was started. Miss A. Ella Alden of Middleboro was instrumental in starting the association and was ably assisted by George W. Alden of Brockton, the first president, and Mrs. A. H. Sweet of Norton, the first secretary.

George W. Alden, an honorary president presided at the reunion Wednesday in the absence of Vernon A. Field, president of the family association. Mr. Alden in his address of welcome said "A reunion of this kind is valuable because it insists upon our locating definitely the reason for the honor attached to the name we bear and because it more closely knits together men and women and children who should have more than an ordinary interest in each other." He also expressed the hope that the organigation might bear an important part in the coming years, in working out the best welfare of the country, that a permanent memorial building might be erected on the family grounds. In its thirteen years, the organization has purchased the old homestead and placed a tablet on the Pilgrim memorial at Southampton, England. Many think the time has arrived to erect a memorial building in Duxbury.

Mrs. Flora S. Mathewson who has been secretary for six years read a report of the last reunion and was given a vote of thanks for her excellent report. Other reports were listened to and the well arranged program followed.

There were readings by Miss Dorothy Barry Carpenter of Lynn, which were most successful and greatly enjoyed. Ex-congressman Robert O. Harris gave an address, speaking of the life of John Alden and his place in the community in which he lived.

Mrs. Flora S. Mathewson conducted the memorial service and said "We meet no year that we do not find a vacant place, that we do not look for a well remembered face. The "Silent Messenger" has entered our family circle since we met last and left a touch of sadness in many homes. All were true and loyal members and performed life's tasks with earnestness and fidelity."

Vernon A. Field said that the reunions coming in midsummer and only once a year prevented the members from meeting and knowing other Aldens. He suggested holding a meeting in Boston sometime between October 15 and March 15. During the day musical selections were given by the Simmons orchestra and the Adelphi male quartette.

Of those present at the reunion eight came from New England states outside of Massachusetts, one from California, six from states this side of the Mississippi and one from Minnesota. The oldest descendant present was J. Eliphaz Hayward of East Braintree. The exercises were closed with the singing of the National hymn. A buffet luncheon was served by a Boston caterer in a tent erected for the purpose. The afternoon was devoted to visiting the Old Homestead to auto trips to the Standish monument and Duxbury.

Among those present from Braintree were: Miss Edith Leonard of Central avenue, Mrs. H. Willie Simonds of Tremont street, Mary Cushing Thayer of Pearl street, Mrs. O. K. Wilder of East Braintree, J. E. Hayward of East Braintree, Mrs. J. Herbert Annis of Grove street, Mrs. William Heath of Hobart avenue, Mrs. Hannah Hill of Academy street, Mrs. Francis Arnold of Washington street, Mrs. Flora S. Mathewson of Washington street, Mrs. Willard E. Dow of Braintree.

From Quincy: Arthur W. Newcomb, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis N. Curtis, Annie W. Badger, Laura G. Pierce, and Miss Alice G. White,

The following officers were unanimously elected:

Pres. Vernon A. Field of Chelsea.

Sec. Mrs. Flora Mathewson of South Braintree.

Treas. Charles L. Alden of Hyde Park, as well as the vice-presidents and executive committee.

APPARATUS RUN DOWN

Auto Chemical Run Down By Automobile At Atlantic

People who run automobiles as well as pedestrians and others using the streets should bear in mind that when a fire alarm sounds that the fire apparatus has the right of way. They should also remember, especially automobile drivers, that it is dangerous to run too near the apparatus. An instance of this was had at Atlantic this morning when an alarm was sounded from Box 8 located at Squantum.

The Atlantic apparatus was responding to the alarm and directly behind it an automobile whose driver was evidently trying to see how near he could run to the apparatus. The auto chemical came to a sudden stop and the automobile which was less than five feet behind being unable to stop banged into the chemical. Fortunately the only damage done was to the lights of the automobile but had there been any firemen riding on the running board of the apparatus they would have been hurt.

The proper thing or pedestrians, carriages and automobiles to do when a fire alarm sounds is to get out of the way and not attempt to follow too close behind the apparatus.

The alarm this morning from the box to which the apparatus was responding was false.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Daniel Corcoran of Grove street, councilman from Ward Four, is taking his annual vacation.

Charles French of Billings street is recovering from the severe attack of acute indigestion which he had Tuesday morning.

Rev. Sampson Nicholls will preach in the Atlantic Memorial church on Sunday morning. Mrs. Harvey Holt will be the soloist.

Mr. and Mrs. George Height, Jr., of Walker street, have returned to their home after spending two weeks with his sister in Higgin's Beach, Maine.

The Castle Memorial Knights of King Arthur had a meeting Tuesday evening at the home of W. T. Davy of Appleton street, and decided to begin their work the first week in September.

Many members of Ave Marie council, Knights of Columbus, have been attending the festivites connected with the national convention at Boston. Among those that attended the ball at the Hotel Somerset, Thursday evening were Grand Knight Bernard M. O'Neil and Dr. J. T. Reynolds.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

Miss O. M. Baxter who has been visiting friends at Littleton, has returned to her home on Adams street.

John W. Graham and family of Adams street are occupying their new home on Turlin street.

Miss Mary Barry of East Milton is touring the Provinces and is expected home Wednesday.

Miss Eleanor Dunlap of Dorchester has returned after a visit to Miss Helen Cross, Huntington road.

Mrs. Lewis M. Abbott, and daughter Ruth, and Miss Isabell Thomas have returned from a Maine tour.

Nelson Davenport of East Milton who is at Eastport, Me., will return Tuesday after a two weeks stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lathrop are at their home on Milton terrace after a five weeks stay at Five Islands, Me.

Preparations are being made by the Thursday Evening club for a busy season. The first meeting will be called within a few weeks. The main topic for discussion this season is the proposition advanced by J. Turner regarding the incorporation of the club. It was proposed that a building association be formed which would proceed to secure funds for the erection of a permanent headquarters. The subject was introduced at a spring meeting but postponed until the fall. In the interim the members have been studying the situation and to many plans appears to be feasible. The fact of the undertaking being favored by many gives the topic some importance in East Milton. At present there is no permanent clubhouse, although the club is assured permanent quarters in the Ellsworth block. It appears that a ready response would be found in the district. An elaborate report is being prepared by the committee in charge.

Athletic plans for the fall are commencing to receive their share of attention at Cunningham gym and under George Eaton, the new physical director. It would not be surprising to find that the season would be the most glorious since the gym opened, since Mr. Eaton is an East Milton boy and his appointment was popularly approved of by the members. Football basket ball, wrestling and track teams will be on the schedule. In addition the regular gymnastic team will compete for the state honors. Additional equipment will be furnished the gym by the trustees, of which Jesse Baxter is chairman and everything that can possibly stimulate added interest will be extended to the boys.

CASEY'S SUGGESTION.

The women of the church in a suburb of Chicago were soliciting money to pay for decorating their house of worship.

They were told diplomatically that if they would call on Casey, who kept the leading saloon in the village, they might get a good donation. They called. Casey met them genially, listened to what they had to say and promptly subscribed $500.

This was so much more than the solicitors had hoped for that they were much flustered, and could do nothing but stammer their thanks.

Finally one of them rounded to and said: "Why, Mr. Casey, this is most generous of you. It will allow us to get what we want very much—a fine stained glass window."

"And, Mr. Casey," said the spokeswoman, "in view of this magnificent donation, isn't there something you would like to put on the window, some sentiment or some remembrance, or something of the kind?"

"Well," said Casey, "I think it would luk foine to have on the glass, bechune th' two parts av it, in nate letters, somethin' loike this: "Afther Mass Visit Casey's"—Saturday Evening Post.

☞At the prices quoted by Remick, it might be a good investment to secure a straw hat for next summer. But there are several weeks more of this season when a good looking straw hat will be needed. Straw hats are not the only bargains advertised by Remick.

AT GATE OF CANTON

Five Hundred Casualties In Fight Between Opposing Forces

Pekin, Aug. 8.—Five hundred were killed or wounded in the fighting between the northern government troops and the rebels at the east gate of Canton, which was attacked by two divisions of the northern army.

The position of the city is regarded as serious. Reinforcements consisting of a detachment of an Indian regiment from Hong Kong have arrived to guard the lives and property of foreigners in the Shameen district there.

A desperate fight among the rebels themselves occurred at the Wu-Sung forts. The famous rebel regiment called "Dare to Die," whose commander, Lufu-Piao, was suspected of having plotted to capture the fortifications by stealth from the revolutionists in order to sell them to the government, attacked the fort.

The forts opened fire upon the attackers and simultaneously the northern troops executed a flanking movement which literally mowed down the "Dare to Dies."

PEACE TREATY SIGNED

Salvador First Nation to Formally Accept the Bryan Plan

Washington, Aug. 8.—The first of the international peace treaties embodying Secretary Bryan's plans was signed by Bryan yesterday afternoon. It is between the United States and Salvador, and soon will be sent to the senate for ratification.

The terms of this convention are practically identical with the details of the international peace proposal submitted by Bryan to the nations of the world. Twenty-six countries have approved the plan in principle, and it is probable that the signing of other treaties will follow in rapid succession. All will be drafted on the same general lines.

The principle of the convention is that most disputes between nations can be peaceably adjusted if sufficient time is allowed to dissipate passion and for cool and reasonable consideration of the issues involved.

DAY LABORER FALLS HEIR TO $1,750,000

Refused to Accept $20,000 Annuity Through Pride

Omaha, Aug. 8.—Frederick Grosse Von Alvensleben, for twenty-seven years a day laborer, received notice from the German consul at Chicago that he had fallen heir to an estate in Germany valued at $1,750,000.

Von Alvensleben became estranged from his family and came to America nearly thirty years ago. He has known he would some day receive a large inheritance, but his pride prevented him for twenty-seven years from accepting an annuity of $20,000, which has been accumulating in a bank at Danzig.

EXCURSION BOAT ASHORE

Near Panic as Bow of Nantasket Is Raised High In Air

Boston, Aug. 8.—Six hundred passengers, more than half of them women, were almost thrown into a panic last night when the excursion steamer Nantasket ran aground in the midst of a heavy fog just off the eastern end of Gallupp's island, about 9:30.

The boat ran upon a sand bar with such force that many persons were thrown from their feet. Women screamed in terror and several fainted. The bow of the boat was lifted up about four feet and the boat settled at the stern.

DIGGS JURY SECURED

Court Will Suppress Sensationalism as Much as Possible

San Francisco, Aug. 8.—The jury which will try Maury I. Diggs on a charge of violating the Mann white slave act was completed and immediately sworn in.

Judge Van Fleet is suppressing sensationalism as much as possible in the nature of the case. It is expected, however, that there will be sensations when Martha Warrington and Lola Norris are put on the stand to tell the story of their trip with Diggs and Drew Caminetti to Reno.

WHY LEAVES CHANGE COLOR.

Despite the commoness of autumn coloring, we do not yet know the full meaning of autumn colors of leaves. We do know that late in the summer the tree is preparing for the leaf fall by drawing the valuable substances of the leaf into the stem. It also ceases to make chlorophyl (the green substance of the leaf aids in the making of the plant's food), and this gradually fades away in the bright light. By fading, it exposes to view any other colors in the leaf: and all leaves contain yellow coloring matters called xanthophyl (whose function is not known), and it is these which give the yellow color to autumn leaves.

The red is formed differently; in bright light and cool temperature a new substance called erythrophyl is made from sugar and tannin in the leaf cells, and that has a red color. A brown substance is also sometimes formed, and besides, the skeleton of the leaf itself turns brown as the leaf dies. It is the various combinations of these substances that give the many shades of autumn colors. Some students think these colors are a useful protection to the living protoplasm (life material) of the leaf after the green disappears, protecting it against the full blaze of light which is injurious; but others think the colors have no use at all but are simply the incidental chemical result of the processes in the ripening and dying leaf. —St. Nicholas.

HARPOON A WINNER

New Boat Proves To Be Fast in a Light Breeze

The race at Marblehead Thursday under the auspices of the Corrinthian yacht club exceeded, in number of starters the race of Wednesday. There were 188 starters Wednesday and 190 Thursday. The sailing conditions were also slightly better than on Wednesday, the breeze being a northeasterly one and lighter than on the previous day so that the sea was not as choppy. There were many close finishes in the different classes.

In the sonder class the Harpoon came into its own and was a winner in that class in which all of the nine boats, that are being tried out for a selection of yachts to meet the Germans were entered. The Harpoon, with Charlie Adams at the stick, finished with a lead of 1 minute 38 seconds over the Sprig the second boat in while the Ellen in the light wind finished in the seventh position.

In class A the Meemer of John T. Cavanagh was again a winner defeating the Nutmeg by nearly two minutes corrected time, The Marie L. finished in third position and the Eleanor in seventh and the Little Haste last.

In class S the Maritza finished first with the Waweenock second and the Zoe third. None of the class D boats entered in Thursday's race.

Loot Jeweler's Home of Gems Worth Thousands of Dollars

WORK WHILE FAMILY SLEEPS

Hartford, Aug. 8.—While a merry dinner party enjoyed the hospitality of Frederick H. Sloan of the jewelry firm of Hansel, Sloan & Co., patient, clever burglars sat and waited their opportunity to enter the Sloan residence on Torraine street and sack it of thousand of dollars' worth of jewels.

The Hartford detectives working on the case are as completely baffled as the sleuths on the Rhode Island robberies.

The robbery here, which was bold and thorough, occurred between the time the dinner guests departed and 4 o'clock in the morning, when the first maid to arise discovered the house in disorder, even the rooms in which the Sloan family peacefully slept being stripped of their choicest valuables.

The Hartford police were immediately notified and furnished a list of the stolen property. In turn the police departments of Boston, New York and Connecticut cities were advised of the burglary, which was obviously the work of professionals. Neither Sloan nor the local police will talk about the robbery or the total amount stolen beyond admitting that it is very large.

Entrance was obtained by means of a trellis through a dining room window, and once inside the burglars opened back and front doors for an emergency getaway. None of the solid silverware was taken and apparently a sum of money in Sloan's dresser was overlooked.

No finger marks were discernable and apparently the sole clue for the police to work on is the imprint of a small shoe in the soft ground beneath the dining room window.

MEN'S PAY AGAIN RAISED

Co-operative System on Railway Makes Better Wages Possible

Philadelphia, Aug. 8.—The Philadelphia Rapid Transit company announced a further increase in the pay of its motormen and conductors, to take effect on Sept. 1.

The new scale will establish a maximum rate of 30 cents an hour for the platform men on the surface lines, while the rate for motormen on the subway-elevated system is 3 cents an hour more. New men on the former lines will receive 25 cents an hour, and their wages will be increased 1 cent an hour each year until the maximum is reached. On the elevated subways new men will start at 28 cents an hour.

The company announces that these increases have been made possible by the co-operative system by which a percentage of the earnings are placed in a fund to increase the wages. Nearly 8000 men will be affected.

GUARDED LEPER COLONY

St. Louis Man Finds He Contracted Disease Nine Years Ago

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—Leprosy, contracted in the Philippine Islands nine years ago, was discovered when George Hartman applied at a hospital to have a skin disease treated. Hartman, since his return to St. Louis after his service in the Philippines, has married.

"While in the Philippines I was guard over a leper colony. It was there, probably, that I contracted the disease," he said. "They tell me I am to be sent to a farm down the river to keep company with a Chinese leper. Well, if I am, there will be two less lepers in the world the first time I get a chance to kill the Chinese and then myself."

ARMY BILL A LAW

Measure Adds 210,000 Men to Peace Footing of French Army

Paris, Aug. 8.—The French senate adopted, 254 to 37, the bill introducing three years' service for soldiers in the French army, which was passed by the chamber of deputies July 19.

The measure, by increasing the term from two years to three, adds 210,000 men at the lowest estimate to the peace footing of the French army, thus bringing it up to nearly 800,000 men. The service in future will begin at the age of 20 instead of 21.

BEARS AND HEDGEHOGS

Both Appear to Be Plentiful In the Green Mountain State

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 8.—Eighty black bears were killed in Vermont during the past fiscal year as compared with sixty for the preceding year, according to an announcement made by State Auditor Graham.

In the same time, eighty-one bay lynx were killed, as against 120 for the previous year. Bounty was paid on 27,000 hedgehogs killed during the year.

GREATEST FISCAL YEAR IN COMMERCE

Trade Records of United States Show Enormous Gains

Washington, Aug. 8.—The trade of the United States in the past fiscal year was greater than in any previous year. The total was $4,275,000,000, greater by $421,000,000 than last year's record of exports and imports.

The balance in favor of the country this year was $653,000,000. The exports exceeded those of 1912 by $261,500,000, while the imports increased only $159,700,000.

Most of the imports were from the United Kingdom, which furnished $296,000,000, while Germany came next with $189,000,000; France, $137,000,000; Cuba, $126,000,000; Canada, $121,000,000; Brazil, $120,000,000, and Japan, $92,000,000.

Most of the exports went to the United Kingdom, which took goods worth $597,000,000; Canada, $415,000,000; Germany, $332,000,000; France, $146,000,000; Netherlands, $126,000,000, and Italy, $76,000,000.

SEEKING A PARDON

Life Prisoner's Alleged Victim Is Said to Be Alive

Jefferson City, Mo., Aug. 8.—Jack Bennett of this city testified before the state board of pardons and paroles that James P. McCann, for whose murder Seymour Barrington, known as "Lord" Barrington, is serving a life sentence in the penitentiary, is alive.

Bennett said he saw McCann on the streets of San Francisco a year after his supposed death. Barrington has asked the board to release him.

KNOWS CHIEFS OF GRAFTERS

"Men Higher Up" Will Be Exposed by Becker Agent

MONEY SHARED BY THREE MEN

One at Police Headquarters and One an Inspector, According to Plitt, Whose Statement Is Supported by Witnesses—Becker "Pull" Found Wanting In Gunmen's Cases

New York, Aug. 8.—Charles B. Plitt, Jr., formerly known as a press agent for Charles Becker and a police informer, will go before the grand jury soon to give testimony against three high police officials.

These, according to Plitt, comprise the "inner circle" and were the "big three" to whom his former chief, Lieutenant Becker, paid over a good part of the graft collected by him.

District Attorney Whitman is satisfied that Plitt is telling the truth. Plitt himself is accused of perjury as the result of statements he made on the stand when he was tried and acquitted of the murder of Waverly Carter, a negro, who was shot in a raid by the "strong arm" squad of Becker.

By the hardest kind of work, however, Whitman and his assistants have found three supporting witnesses.

If the grand jury takes the same view of the case that the district attorney does, indictments will be returned against three men. It will be impossible to indict one without indicting all three.

One of the three is now at police headquarters, where he occupies an important position. Another is now an inspector. The identity of the third man has never been guessed. He was not included in the preliminary statement made by Plitt.

Plitt says they all took a share of the graft that was paid to Becker. He names times and places where the money was paid. Corroboration sufficient to warrant a grand jury inquiry has been found. More is expected.

The trend the case has taken was apparent when it was learned that Plitt's bail had been reduced from $10,000 to $2500. The bail was reduced by Judge Rosalsky. The $2500 bail was furnished by the Illinois Surety company.

By many the acquittal of Plitt in the Carter murder case was held to be in a measure responsible for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, at the behest of Becker.

Two detectives who had worked under Becker were assigned to the case. They reported to the district attorney that it was impossible to fix the crime upon any one. Finally the negroes of Harlem took the matter up, and on the same day that Magistrate Appleton discharged Plitt in the police court, upon police testimony, an indictment for murder was found against him upon testimony which the district attorney's homicide bureau had gathered without the aid of the police.

Plitt was rearrested and put on trial for his life. Members of Becker's squad testified in his defense. It was evident that the police were on his side. He was acquitted.

The impression got abroad that Becker had been able to shield Plitt. That added to Becker's prestige among a certain type of gangmen and gunmen, and when the proposition was made to "Bald Jack" Rose to put Rosenthal out of the way, and he in turn hired four gunmen to do the job, it did not appear so unreasonable that the all-powerful Becker might shield them.

Whether it was the effort of Becker that resulted in Plitt's acquittal or not, he did not offer to help Rose or his thugs when they were caught, and consequently they turned on Becker. Becker is in the death house at Sing Sing.

Now Plitt finds himself again in the toils, and no one has offered to come to his assistance. Plitt, like the other tools of Becker who saw themselves facing punishment, has turned not only against Becker, whom he cannot harm, but also against the others.

FOUND DEAD ON BEACH

Uncertain Whether Invalid's Death Was Suicide or Accident

Malden, Mass., Aug. 8.—Lying face down on the beach at the Point of Pines, Revere, the dead body of a partly dressed woman was discovered and afterwards identified as that of Mrs. Allen T. Smiley of this city, who had wandered away from home.

An investigation indicated that Mrs. Smiley, who had been in poor health for some time, either was accidentally drowned while bathing or committed suicide. She had been under treatment of a physician for a week and at times was demented.

Two Held In Death Case

Taunton, Mass., Aug. 8.—Joseph Nolan and Thomas Flood were arraigned before Judge Wood, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of John Haley. Pleas of not guilty were entered and the men were held for a hearing.

Two of A Kind

The Widow Won Out

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Maria Fish was baking molasses cookies while I sat in the hot kitchen reading aloud from the column of "Social Jottings" in the Quince Harbor Weekly Echo.

"'Our genial neighbor, Captain Barnabas Fish, spent Thursday in the great metropolis.'" I read at last.

"Trash!" snorted Maria, popping a pan of cookies into the oven and flying back to the table to grease another pan.

"It's true," I remarked mildly, for I found the Echo fascinating in the extreme, for it carelessly tossed a halo of adventure or romance about the most trivial facts of daily life in the little Long Island village.

"That's as it may be," retorted Maria grimly, "but 'tain't no news to nobody that the cap'n went to the city. Every Tom, Dick and Harry in town saw him go off on the stage, and those that didn't was up to the station loafing around when the train went."

"True," I murmured, "but it does sound so impressive when one reads that Captain Barnabas went to the 'great metropolis.' It's much more suggestive than plain New York or the city."

"You air romantic, Miss Telham," Maria wagged her head severely at me. "You can see romance in almost nothing. Mebbe you can find a speck of rosy color in the fact that Barnabas met that old scamp, Ananias Sline, in New York and has invited him down to Quince Harbor for a spell."

"Ananias Sline—here!" I cried joyfully. "Oh, Maria, isn't that too splendid! Just think of hearing his yarns at first hand instead of having the captain relating them!"

"Has Mr. Sline any relatives?" I asked, with interest.

"Has a sister somewhere who dressmakes for a living and I reckon provides a home for him when he's ashore. He was married once and had a wife, but I hear she ran away and left him because he was so mortal mean and stingy. I don't blame the woman. Most any human being would get tired of living with a goggle eyed codfish!"

"A goggle eyed codfish! Oh, Maria, is he as homely as that?" I gasped.

"Judge for yourself. Here he comes!" said Maria snippily as she threw off her gingham apron and marched into the front hall. "Come along, Miss Telham. You'll have to talk to him while I'm getting dinner."

Maria's bark was always worse than her bite. So it proved in this particular instance when she greeted the dapper little man whom her husband introduced.

"Maria, let me interduce my old shipmate, Ananias Sline. Ananias, shake hands with my wife. Ha, hum!" The captain smiled delightedly as Maria gave pleasant greeting to the little man, who did bear a striking resemblance to the goggle eyed codfish that Maria had so graphically described.

"Pleased to meet you," grunted Ananias, bobbing his long head first at Maria and then at me. At last, with a great effort, as if the mere formalities of conversation caused him agony, he muttered, "Nice day."

"Pretty fair, considering that the wind's in the east," retorted Maria. "I guess I'll leave you to talk to Miss Telham, Mr. Sline, while I tend to dinner. Captain, can you clean them fish now?"

"Course," assented the captain cheerily as he picked up Mr. Sline's shiny black bag and left it at the foot of the stairs. "Make yourself comfortable, Ananias. Smoke if you want to; Miss Telham don't mind."

"Really, I don't object," I said.

"I've given up smoking," he said solemnly.

"Indeed? Since when?"

"About an hour ago. I've taken a position in the bank," said Ananias, turning a fishy eye toward me, "a position of trust."

"How very nice. You mean in the Quince Harbor bank?"

"Yes'm."

At that moment Captain Barnabas drifted on to the porch and sat down in his old hickory chair.

"Ananias been telling you about his good job?" he asked.

"Yes, isn't it splendid?"

"Fine. Rollins has been talking about taking on a janitor there—said he could act as night watchman, too—and I thought to myself that Ananias was the man for the job, and he got it too!"

Ananias shot a sly glance at me. "Thanks to the captain," he murmured.

"Oh, I happen to be one of the stockholders," explained the captain.

"Then Mr. Sline will live in Quince Harbor," I remarked.

"He's going to board with the Widow Rowell. She'll make him almighty comfortable," chuckled the captain.

"Dinner's ready," interrupted Maria, appearing in the doorway to lead us to the dining room.

It was directly after dinner that Ananias Sline disappeared. For three hours we searched high and low for some trace of the valiant little seaman, but he had disappeared, shiny bag and all, and Maria was almost as upset as the perturbed captain.

"What in time ails the man?" muttered the captain for the hundredth time as he trudged back from the beach, having searched every square inch of the little home acre. "Ain't got a grouch and gone back to the city? You don't think that, Maria?"

"Don't ask me," admonished Maria darkly. "After slaving myself over them flatfish and an extra high shortcake—and I may say that I never saw a little man that could tuck away such a sight of food, Barnabas—after slaving myself all the morning, not to mention molasses cookies, because you said he was partial to 'em, to have him eat and run in this way is jest downright scandalous!"

"I don't blame you, Maria," said the captain meekly.

Maria rocked herself to and fro, fanning herself with a corner of her gingham apron.

"I'm going down to the postoffice to inquire if anybody's seen him. If Maria Pitt once clapped an eye on him she would never forget him. Always reminds me of a camera, that woman does," growled the captain, shrugging himself into his blue coat and dragging his cap over his white hair.

When his stalwart form had disappeared over the bridge by the flour mill I leaned back in my chair and looked up into the leafy greenness of the big paper mulberry tree.

I remained in this attitude, gazing upward, open mouthed and staring.

"Miss Telham! Land sakes! What's the matter?" gasped Maria suddenly.

"Look!" I murmured, pointing upward where the pale face of Ananias Sline peered down at us from the high branches of the mulberry tree.

Nothing was visible save Ananias' mean little face, and that was pale and drawn with fright. There was something elusive about the face up there. It reminded me of the Cheshire cat in "Alice In Wonderland," and I wondered if Ananias' face would fade away as did the cat's, leaving only a smile behind.

It looked possible, for Mr. Sline's mustache was twitching in an attempt at a smile, but every now and then his prominent blue eyes rolled downward to the lower branches of the tree as if there was something to be feared beneath him.

Presently I followed his glance and saw, and Maria saw at the same time, and we were speechless before the queerness of it all. In a lower crotch of the tree, her back supported by the smooth trunk, her feet incased in balbriggan stockings and congress gaiters, was the Widow Rowell, Ananias' prospective landlady. Her hawklike nose and her sharp chin almost met in witchlike fierceness as she knitted busily away at a long, red woolen stocking.

Maria was the first to recover herself.

"Hettie Rowell, whatever do you mean by such actions?" she shrieked, going to the edge of the piazza, where her head was on a level with that of Mrs. Rowell.

Mrs. Rowell smiled sweetly down upon Mrs. Fish, and her almost vertical eyebrows went up to meet her gray hair.

"Dear Maria," she lisped pleasantly, "I'm just waiting for my boarder, Ananias. He thought he'd like to get a view of the harbor from the top of the tree."

"Pshaw, Ananias! What does this mean?" shouted Maria up into the treetop. "What air you doing with your carpetbag up there and the window sitting here in the tree like a—a—catbird"—

"Like a cooing dove knitting a red wool stocking," amended Maria grimly. "I ask what is she doing here, Ananias?"

"Waiting for me, Mrs. Fish," said Ananias quite meekly. "She came after me, she did, saying she'd been waiting dinner for me two hours, and when I told her I'd been invited to spend the night here and I couldn't come to her house till tomorrow, why, she up and flew at me so's—well, I'm a seafaring man, as you may see, ma'am, and 'tain't no hard job for me to get up into the rigging when things are hot below." Now Ananias actually smiled.

"Well, Hettie, what you got to say? Air you crazy?" demanded Maria angrily.

"The captain engaged board for Mr Sline from me, Maria, and, 'tain't no manner of use for you to try to keep him away from my house, a-tempting him with all sorts of cookery," she said in her dulcet tones. "He's my boarder, and he's going home with me if I have to stand here all night and wait for him."

Maria was pale with anger. "Take your boarder and go," she said coldly. "And I wish you joy of each other." And she went into the house.

Half an hour later I saw Ananias Sline come down the mulberry tree with his shiny black bag. He cast a reproachful glance at me as he passed, but he followed closely in the wake of Mrs. Hettie Rowell.

When we related the incident to tired Captain Barnabas he shook his head dismally.

"I foresee the end already," he murmured. "Ananias has met his match in the Widow Rowell. She's buried two husbands and calculates to plant a third before she dies. I'll warrant Ananias will be the third."

"Until that happy release I'm sure I wish them joy of each other," sniffed Maria meaningly. "They're two of a kind."

ATTRACTIVE HATS.

Black and White Correct Millinery Colors This Season.

She is a very foolish maiden who allows her vanity to induce her to wear a tulle hat on the beach. Once or twice, on clear, fresh days, when there is a land breeze blowing, she may with safety wear a tulle hat on the sands, but if she continues to wear it the tulle will soon lose its crispness, a strange odor will cause her to wonder if a glue factory is near, and the tulle hat will become a limp, sticky, pitiable object. To be sure, a malines is offered for sale which the manufacturers claim is impervious to salt breezes, but how is one to be certain that the milliner has used this waterproof malines? Better keep the tulle hat for the country or the trip to town and choose one trimmed with ribbon for the seaside.

shape, and it is a practical choice for the beach. A black hat does not look quite as summery or light as an all white hat, but the sun cannot damage it as it can one of colored straw, or even one of the natural tone straw, which may become actually sunburnt. There is a fad for trimming some of the black hats with blue ribbon bows, and a few of the bolder spirits among the fashion leaders are appearing in brown straw hats. When the latter are worn with brown shoes and stockings and a sash of brown moire or tulle the effect is really artistic. The hat pictured is a black creation made attractive with a wreath and a mount of gourd feathers.

THE KITCHEN SINK.

Keep the Pipe Hidden From View Absolutely Clean.

One of the things that every housewife should look after carefully is the kitchen sink. Many a good housewife will keep the enameled part of the sink spotless, the woodwork polished as white as possible and imagine that her sink is clean. This is right. The sink should be kept spotless from every stain or discoloration, but the cleaning must go further than this.

The pipe that is hidden from view should be kept just as clean as the porcelain part. Crumbs, tea leaves and greasy water, matches and little bits of this and little bits of that find their way into the pipe, and it soon becomes clogged. This sometimes occasions a plumber's bill and makes carelessness in this regard very expensive; but, more than the plumber's bill, the dirty sink pipe may occasion illness. It cannot help but give off impure odors, thus vitiating the atmosphere of the kitchen and contaminating everything around it.

A splendid little device for keeping things out of the sink pipe that ought not to go in is a sink strainer. This strainer can be set in the sink and the water passed through it before reaching the sink pipe. This serves to strain out all the bits of dirt that would otherwise find their way into the sink pipe.

Care, however, should be taken in other ways also. In washing dishes every dish should be cleaned of particles of food before being put into the water. Every day or so boiling water should be poured into the pipe. A piece of common soda dissolved in the water will help remove any greasiness from the pipe. Milk should never be poured down the sink, because it causes the pipe to become sour. With just a little care the housewife can keep the pipe of the sink free from grease and dirt. Then, with a clean pipe, spotless enamel and polished woodwork, the kitchen sink will be sweet and wholesome and a credit to the one who takes care of it.

Useful Brush Rack.

There is on the market a very useful little rack for brushes to be used in dishwashing. It contains a round brush for washing glasses and cups, a heavy brush for scrubbing pots and pans, a brush for plates and platters and a little round brush to reach the bottom of pitchers, vases and other narrow mouthed dishes. This little rack, with a printed legend above each brush stating its use, is made of enameled tin and can be hung conveniently over the sink. It costs, stocked with brushes, less than $1.50.

Brushes of all sorts can be best cleaned with ammonia or borax. If ammonia is used be careful not to get the handle of the brush in the water any more than is necessary, as the ammonia removes and whitens varnish and paint. Use a tablespoonful to a pail of soapy water. If borax is used add it to the hot soapsuds in about the same proportion.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col. John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7, 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Myles Standish Spring.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay

Squaw Rock.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

AMUSEMENTS

KINCAIDE THEATRE, QUINCY.

"More for your money than ever" is what the management of Quincy's cool playhouse is giving this week in first-class amusement. The show now playing is a long one. And it's mighty good too.

A troupe of ten new entertainers, the Howley Musical Comedy Company, start the show. They are the cause of an uproar of laughter lasting fourty five merry minutes, in which they present their funny farce comedy, "Married Life." There's lots of snappy song and dance hits, interspersed with a wealth of witty sayings and chorus work that wins great applause.

The vaudeville is tip-top. Pierce and Alden have a pleasing line of patter, and sing several songs. They have splendid costumes and merit the great applause they get. Col. Sam Holdsworth is 80 years old, yet his rich tenor voice is charming. His singing is surely wonderful. Lander Brothers are black-face comedians who do some dandy dancing and a lot of good singing. They prove very pleasing entertainers.

The big feature photo-play is "The Wild Ride."

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

"The Woman Who Passed By," a new dramatic comedy by Vincent A. Lawrence, the rising young Boston playwright, will be presented for the first time on any stage at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. Mr. Lawrence, who is prominent in social and club circles in Boston, is the son of Frank W. Lawrence and one of the most promising of the younger generations of dramatists. "The Woman Who Passed by" is the first of his works to be produced by professionals. The story of the playlet is in itself a novelty, dealing with the events of a single evening in a man's life. For the presentation of this play there has been engaged what is unquestionably the strongest and best balanced cast ever engaged for a one-act play in vaudeville. Frank Munroe, the famous Detective Boyle of "Alias Jimmy Valentine," will have the role of a sleuth in "The Woman Who Passed By," while the part of the millionaire man of the world, who at least meets the woman of his dreams, will be played by Earle Ryder, late of the New York production of "Joseph and His Brethern" at the Century Theatre. George Ernst, until recently a member of the Eleanor Gordon Players, will have another important role, and Miss Lillian Niederauer, one of the most beautiful and accomplished young actresses in Boston, will play "The Woman." This novelty will be surrounded by an excellent vaudeville.

Satisfying a Customer Carried to an Extreme

By HOLLAND.

A WOMAN who bought a dress which she found was not just what she wanted went with it to one of the biggest stores in the world and said it did not suit her. She wanted her money back, but explained that she had lost the sales slip. The sum she claimed was given to her.

Two days later she found the sales slip and discovered that she had not bought the dress at the store to which she had taken it, but had bought it at a rival establishment. She went to the store and explained.

"We knew you had not bought the dress here," explained the manager, "but you were palpably dissatisfied with it, and our aim is to satisfy all our customers. If we have impressed on your mind the fact that we are more than fair we are satisfied. We covet nothing more than such a reputation as we are sure you will give us."

Many will think that this was carrying fairness too far. Perhaps it was, but it was done by the greatest retail merchant of this age, one whose name is known wherever the English language is spoken and whose expenditures for advertising run up to a million dollars a year.

Successful advertisers know that satisfied customers are an invaluable asset. You have an advantage in dealing with the liberal advertisers

NEWSY BRIEFS

Alexander L. Rose of Houghs Neck has filed a petition inbankruptcy. Liabilities $420; no assets.

Thomas F. O'Brien of Crescent street leaves Monday for a ten day stay at Hampton Beach, Me.

Edward Reardon of Common street who is on his vacation will resume his duties with a Boston shoe firm Monday.

George Sullivan of Copeland street, the well known local athlete has resumed his duties at the Quincy post office after his annual vacation.

Albert Clarke of Willard street, connected with the clerical force of the Quincy post office is at Peaks Island, Me., where he will spend his annual vacation.

Mrs. Peter Dolan of Copeland street who is at the Quincy City Hospital is reported as slowly progressing and bright prospects for a speedy and complete recovery are held out by the physicians.

Charles Hebert, pitcher for the Colonial base ball team and a member of the champion Quincy A. A. basket ball aggregation, is at the Lawson farm, Egypt, for three weeks. Because of his absence the Colonials secured no game for Saturday afternoon. Hebert, in last Saturdays game showed himself to be the original "comeback kid," and shot them across in speedy and telling fashion.

The members of St. Mary's parish are planning to extend a right royal welcome to Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady, the pastor on his return from a European trip. It is his first long absence from the parish since he became pastor. Committees are now at work perfecting arrangements. The affair will be held in St. Joseph's hall.

The severe electrical storms of this summer have done immense damage to the fruit orchards at West Quincy. Trees that were bearing large quantities of apples, pears and plums were twisted so that they will eventually die and many of the more valuable trees were snapped off at the ground or else uprooted. Most of the damage occurred in Furnace brook valley orchards.

MANY TROPHIES.

On the walls of his office in Boylston street, Dr. W. G. Kendall has a frame containing two silver medals of surpassing beauty; they represent the awards of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for two successive years of the prize for the best gardens shown to the committee of inspection. To win them Dr. Kendall competed against the expert gardeners of the great estates round about. He has only one workman and does most of the actual skilled work himself. His garden, house and all his "farm" occupy little more than an acre at Atlantic. Dr. Kendall's whole house is stuffed with the winnings of his kennel—for he was practically the originator of the Boston terrier—his medals and ribbons as a militiaman, as a bicyclist from away back—he was one of the old high-wheel fellows—and even as a golfer.—Around the Town in Herald.

Colored Man Charged With Larceny of Funds

Considerable merriment reigned in the district court this morning when the case of Charles Beverly, colored, charged with larceny of money and fradulent soliciting was heard and continued to August 13.

Joshua Crawford, the colored counsel for the defendant, immediately applied for another date, saying, "If it please the court, I am not a bit superstitious, but I would much prefer to have the trial set ahead one day. The request was granted.

Beverly is charged with being an unauthorized solicitor, and the principal government witness was Rev. George W. Tillman, colored, president of the Christian Non-Sectarian Rescue Home.

The defense maintains that Beverly was authorized by one Charles Walker, a deputy of the home, to make the collections. The continuance was asked so Walker could be summoned.

The home is situated on Lennox street, Boston. A nearby church is called Mt. Pilgrim. A simple wooden cross on the belfry is all that attracts passersby to the tiny edifice which sets between two buildings. Within its unpretentious walls a great work is being done, according to religious reports, in human rescue and Christian charity.

The congregation is less than 50, and Rev. Mr. Tillman calls them his "faithful few." But little encouragement is extended in the unselfish work of Rev. Mr. Tillman, who admits he has received no salary for five years. No one is turned away from its doors. Here are fed the hungry and the naked clothed. Although it is the smallest church in Boston its charitable work is greater than that of many of the largest churches .

Beverly was charged with another count of larceny this morning. Many of the colored brethren were in the court.

Beverly was arrested on Edison Park on the complaint of a woman after telephone conversation with the home which led to the belief he had no right to solicit.

FALSE ALARM AT SQUANTUM

Two Men Seen Driving Away From the Box

The police are searching for three men alleged to have pulled a false alarm at Squantum this morning. Shortly after box 8 came in at 11.12 two men were seen driving away from the vicinity at fast speed. The Atlantic auto chemical passed them on the Causeway but were making time and did not pay much attention to them. Arrests will probably be made within a few days.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Thomas F. Carrigan, son of the late Thomas and the lafe Margaret Carrigan, died suddenly in the Framingham hospital from blood poisoning Thursday. The funeral will take place Saturday morning from the home of his brother Edward Carrigan, 28 Mechanic street. A high mass of requiem will be held in St. John's church at nine o'clock. Burial will be in Avon. The deceased was born in Quincy and has been working in a Framingham shoe factory.

Poehlers All Stars and Hughey Jennings Cracks roll tonight on the Valgin alleys. The Eh—Yah will resound through the rafters all evening. High scores will be made since all are in good form.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

ordinance regulating speaking and parading in the streets and public places.

There has been more or less argument about speaking in public places, and the using of the public streets for parades, and it seems that while the ordinance concerning streets is rather broad and covers many matters, it does not make any provision relative to speaking in public places or streets and parades. The idea is to have an ordinance that will apply to these two matters.

Another matter in the call is to receive and act on a communication from the Mayor regarding the repair of the Neponset bridge. This bridge, which connects Quincy with Neponset is badly in need of repair both on the driveway as well as on the sidewalk; the latter walk being badly damaged by fire some weeks ago.

Then there is the matter of taking action on Section 19, of Chapter 719 of the acts of 1913. This chapter provides that within three months from the passage of the act a public hearing shall be given the citizens regarding the establishment of a tax limit for the city.

The only thing that the City Council can do Monday night on this matter is to adopt an order for a public hearing. As under the law the hearing must be held before Aug. 28, it would appear that it will be necessary for the meeting to adjorun for a week.

The only matter upon which there is likely to be any discussion is number ten in the call. This reads to receive and act on applications for licenses to collect junk.

It is probable that there will be four applications received. These are from parties whose applications were refused by the City Council earlier in the year. The main objection at that time was the location. It is said however that the parties have now secured new locations and that they think the Council should not grant them a license.

As many of the members of the City Council are out of town at the present time there is some question if much more than a quorum is obtained. It is understood that President Whiton of the City Council is among those who are away which means the election of a President pro tem.

COST OF ADVERTISING.

The suggestion is sometimes thoughtlessly made that the buyer has to pay for the cost of advertising. It would be equally reasonable for a small store to claim, because a large store employed more clerks, that the patrons of the large store had to pay an extra price because of these additional clerks.

Almost any man by persistent advertising, justly proportioned to his business, can increase his trade. If he did so, it is not likely that his rent, taxes, bookkeeping cost, insurance and similar items would be increased in the same proportion. Every article has to be charged something for these general expenses, which keep running along whether you do much business or not.

Consequently if a merchant doubles his business and increases his fixed charges less than a half, the amount to be charged to each article to cover these expenses is much less. Hence instead of advertised goods costing the public more, they cost the public less. —Exchange.

OF COURSE.

A nature faker declares that he heard the following conversation the other day on a doorstep of upper Fifth avenue:

Said one small brown sparrow wonderingly, as he pecked at certain white grains scattered over the brown stone. "Why-ee, this is lots sweeter than what we found here last Spring!"

—The recent suffragette automobile tour through New England was not without its success says the Barre Vt. Times, because we read that the "blue-eyed, black-haired," Miss Margaret Murphy received five proposals of marriage—in other words five votes for Miss Murphy supporters.

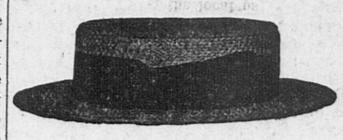

—The New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co., has decided to equip all of its locomotives with a superheating device, at the rate of five a month, and a total cost of about $1,000,000. The change will increase the hauling power of the engines about 20 per cent., and at the same time effect a saving of coal of 20 per cent and 25 per cent. of water.—Old Colony Memorial.

LONG IN THE SERVICE

Conductors and Motormen 25 Years

Popular Street Car Men

Patrons of the local street railway have doubtless taken note of the fact that some of the conductors wear gold stripes on their coat sleeve, while some motormen wear white stripes. As is probably well known these are service stripes and denote long and faithful service. At the present time none of the employees wear more than four stripes, but it will not be many days before two of the employees will be displaying five stripes while a third employee will add his fifth stripe next May. These five stripes denote 25 years faithful service.

The two men who will soon add a stripe to their arm are George H. Dunham a conductor, and Francis W. Perry a motorman; while next May, Herbert L. Packard, also a motorman will add his fifth stripe.

Of the three men Frank Perry is probably the best known. Previous to his entering the railway business he was employed by the late William A. Hodges as a driver of one of his bread wagons. Frank sold the staff of life to residents of Quincy for many years and there are but few of the older families who do not remember him. Tireing of the baker business he entered the employ of Joe Lapham and for a time drove the barge that ran between the Quincy depot and Hall's store near the Quincy Point bridge.

It was in July, 1888, that the first horse car line was put into operation to Quincy Point and as Frank saw these one horse affairs passing to and fro he had a hankering that he would like to drive one. He applied to the late Herbert M. Federhen, then the superintendent, and in Sept. 3, 1888, he went to work.

He was assigned to the Quincy Point line upon which cars were run at intervals of half an hour. At that time he drove a one horse bob tail car. That is a car where the passenger when he entered dropped his nickel into a box near the driver. Previous to the advent of the cars the fare by barge was ten cents to City Square.

The Quincy Street Railway as it was then known however put the fare down to five cents and issued an eight cent transfer which entitled the holder to continue his ride to the West Quincy depot and later when the line to Neponset was opened to a ride to Neponset bridge.

The road soon demonstrated the fact that the cry of the calamity howlers, that it would never pay, were wrong, and soon the bob tail cars were suplemented by two-horse cars and second man, known as a conductor, added to the crew.

A little later came the electric car, and Frank stepped from the driver of a horse car to motorman. He however for a time ran on the tail end of the car and rung up fares, but he preferred the front end and for most of his twenty-five years service he has been on that end of the car.

He ran the first electric car around the Norfolk Downs loop and during the time that the car on this line simply ran betwen the Norfolk Downs Depot and Hancock street, via of the Downs he operated the car, most of the time as conductor.

Frank has run on every line of the company in Quincy, and is familiar with them all. For some time past however he has been running as motorman on the line between Neponset and Squantum and he is a familiar figure to patrons of this line.

When his son Munroe grew up into manhood he decided to follow his father's footseps and take up railroading. His father broke him into the busines, but the ambitions of young Perry were such that he gradually worked himself up to the position of starter and he now holds the position of superintendent of a line at Canton.

MARRIAGE AT QUINCY POINT

It Is Now Mr. and Mrs. William Sherriff

The sound of wedding bells never rang more merrily than they did last night at 24 Broadway, Quincy Point, for one of Quncys popular young men was united in marriage with a charming young lady who had just crossed the Atlantic.

The bridegroom was Mr. William James Sherriff and the bride, Miss Jeanie Niven Marshall. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Matheson, of the First Presbyterian church, Quincy, and took place in the parlor of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Falconer. The room was beautifully and tastefully decorated with palms and potted plants. The bride was given away by Mr. Robert Falconer, and looked very pretty indeed, dressed in Scotch white lace, and long train, and carring white roses. She was attended by Miss Ina Sherriff, who was bridesmaid, while Mr. Stewart Sherriff acted as best man.

A reception and supper followed. The supper was served in excellent style which certainly did great credit to Mrs. Falconer.

The bridesmaid's present from bride and bridegroom was a gold bracelet and pendant, while the best man received a solid gold watch and fob.

The presents received by the bride and bridegroom were numerous and beautiful, both from friends and fellow workers.

Mr. Sherriff is an assistant in Dept," at Fore River Shipbuilding plant, where he has been employed for the past four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherriff were both born in Glasgow, Scotland,

A very large circle of friends unite in wishing them perfect happiness on life's journey in double harness.

Mr. and Mrs. James Gibb and family leave tonight on Fall river boat for Atlantic Highlands to enjoy a two weeks' visit with friends.

NOT ORDERED TO STOP

Francis Gilraine Tells of the Shooting June 25

The taking of testimony in the hearing relative to the shooting of Francis Gilraine by Officer John J. Avery, on Butler road on the night of June 25, was completed Friday afternoon, when Gilrane was given an opportunity to tell his story at the City Hospital where he is still confined.

Friday afternoon Mayor Stone and James E. O'Connell, counsel for the Gilraine family, visited the Hospital, and Gilraine was questioned at length by the Mayor and counsel.

No new facts were brought out however. Gilraine said that there had been a fight and that he had run down Butler road and had been shot. He said that he knew Avery and that Avery knew him. He denied emphatically that Avery had commanded him to stop, and said the first thing he knew was when he received the bullet.

The taking of Gilraine's statement statement required only a few minutes. It was expected that Mayor Stone would make his finding in the case this morning, but as today is a half holiday at City Hall the Mayor said that he expected to be able to give out his finding in the case on Monday.

MRS. ROBERT ROBERTSON.

The funeral of Mrs. Bella Robertson, wife of Robert Robertson who died Wednesday in her 32nd year was held Friday afternoon from her home, 47 Trafford street. Services were conducted by Rev. A. M. Thompson. At the grave in Mt. Wollaston cemetery Mrs. Bella Stronach conducted the services of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, No. 1, of which the deceased was a member. The attendance was large and there were many floral tributes.

FUNERAL OF CAPT. SPEAR

Squad of Co. K. Fire Volley at Grave

The funeral of Capt. Charles F. Spear, who died at Somerville, was held in the chapel of the Village cemetery, Weymouth, Friday afternoon. A large number of members and former members of Co. K., 5th regiment, M. V. M. attended. Rev. M. V. Cressey of CAPT. CHARLES F. SPEAR.

Cambridge conducted the services, and at the grave there was a military service, with three volleys and "taps."

Capt. Spear was one of the most popular officers in the State militia. He had many friends in Quincy. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Mary Frye Spear and one daughter, Marion Louise Spear, his mother Mrs. Charles H. Spear of Weymouth, and one sister, Mrs. Mabelle Walker of Wakefield.

GARBAGE HOUSE COLLAPSES

The garbage house of the Board of Health situated near the city stables collapsed sometime during Friday night leaving a pile of garbage exposed to the elements. The building was an old wooden one and that it has not collapsed before is surprising. The Board of Health called the attention of the City Council to the necessity of a new building sometime ago but nothing has yet been done. Fortunately there were no horses or men in the building at the time or someone would have been injured. The building is one used by the Board of Health to store the garbage collected, until it can be carried away. This morning men of the department went down and buried the garbage.

DEVOTED TO HIS CALLING

Funeral of Rev. Antti Rakketi

Several Clergy Take Part

The funeral of Rev. Antti Raketti, the venerable Finnish Congregational minister who labored in the cause of Christianity since his conversion 52 years ago, was held in the Finnish Congregational Church Friday afternoon. The body rested on a catafalque, in front of the altar, on which hung a copy of an old master, Christ in the Garden, painted by Arthur Heickell a Finnish artist of renown.

There was a large attendance of clergy and laiety all of whom joined in the service. The clergy present were Rev. Reino Hiironen of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Rev. Alexis Wright who will succeed the deceased in the missionary field; Rev. John Vaananan of Maynard; Dr. J. J. Walker, treasurer of the Home Missionary Society; and Rev. Alex Muhonen, an associate missionary of the deceased.

The hymns, all favorites of the Rev. Mr. Raketti, were sung by the congregation, and Miss Elsie A. Williams was the organist. At the close of the services all passed around the bier and viewed the remains.

The eulogy was preached by Rev. John E. Lillback, pastor of the church. He and Rev. Mr. Vannanen chanted the commitment service at the grave in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

A deep bank of flowers surrounded the catafalque, the tributes of long time friends. All the clergy present took part in the services.

In the eulogy Rev. Mr. Lillback referred to the fine character of the man and of his love for his work. He reviewed the events of his life, dwelling particularly on his refusal of advancement in the army of his native land; so that he could devote his efforts to the cause of religion and humanity.

Rev. Mr. Raketti has been laboring among his countrymen in the east for the past 22 years. Previous to that he lived in North Dakota, the home of his family. None were able to reach Quincy in time to attend the ceremony.

Miss Maud Baylis Newman and Forrest Cameron Holbrook, both of Pawtucket, R. I. were married Friday evening by Rev. J. A. Matheson. They will live in Quincy.

The Foy Stores

Adams Market — Water St. Market

INTEGRITY in all our dealings with the public has been one of the guiding principles of the Foy business since it was established more than a dozen years ago.

We have maintained a certain high standard and have done all in our power to foster public confidence in our Water street store and all we say and do in the future we shall not deviate from this course in our new Adams Market.

We owe our success equally to the giving of best values and to the way of giving them. The necessities and the luxuries are provided for in this new store, and our service is unstinted. The range of quality and assortment are on a large scale with all the scope of choice which this implies while the prices at all times are the lowest on dependable goods.

We believe we have proven our principles in the past, and in the future distribution of goods we shall endeavor to satisfy all that in freshness, quality and price the Foy standard of value has not deviated in the least from the record of past years.

Our traditions we will never discard nor supersede, but uphold with all our strength, so will we attain the goal we aim at, to hold the confidence of the public.

Big apple crop predicted. In the pie belt mother has an autumn's work cut out for her.

The small boys naturally feel restless in Sabbath school these warm Sundays, thinking what a good time they would have getting drowned in bathing.

The Militant Suffragists keep on setting fires, but it must be remembered that girls will be girls.

From the way the children scrap over croquet, it is evident that some great ball players are coming along.

In view of the many railroad accidents it might be well to tell the engineers not to speed up when they see a danger signal.

It is not safe for anyone to black his own boots any longer, as it may be thought you have to work for a living.

The summer girls are getting so critical that many hotels are making eligible young men pay board.

There are plenty of pretty places around home, but the railroads never put on a summer resort publicity man to write them up.

American golf players are shocking the Englishmen by playing in their shirt sleeves. Also they do not wear their plug hats.

"I stood on the bridge at midnight" will not be an appropriate quotation for those attending the launching Sunday night, for policemen are to be stationed at both ends of the Point bridge to keep people off the bridge.

BETTER CHILDREN TO TEACH.

"School hygiene has gone for forward from the old fashioned daily ten minutes of classroom calisthenics and from the semi-weekly half hour of recitation from a dull text book on physiology," says an editorial writer in World's Work. Such practical things as adequate ventilation, scientific lighting, sanitary privies, exercise in school gardens, and health inspection have replaced the old routine gymnastics and the instruction that did not instruct. Physicians and dentists and sociologists have come to the aid of the schoolmen, and they all are studying together the problems of healthful childhood and co-operating to put into practice the efficient knowledge of science to build a better race.

It has been estimated that of the twenty million pupils in the schools of this country, probably five percent have tuberculosis of the lungs, more than five percent have defective vision, twenty-five percent are suffering from mal-nutrition, more than thirty percent have enlarged tonsils and adenoids or enlarged glands in the neck and more than fifty percent have defective teeth which interfere with their development. In others words, about fifteen million children require attention to their physical health.

To meet these conditions, many cities now maintain open-air class rooms and even whole schools in the open air fight tuberculosis, dental clinics to discover and correct defects of the teeth that lead to mal-nutrition, optical clinics that turn many 'dull' pupils into bright pupils, special classes for backward and deficient children and health inspection and visiting nurses, that do an incalculable service toward improving the bodily and mental vigor of the young folk.

These helpful activities lend special significance and interest to the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene, which will gather at Buffalo this month. More than 250 doctors and teachers from all parts of United States, and Europe will be there to exchange information and to compare experiences in this vitally important work of human conservation and uplift. The hopeful advance of Amercan education—especially of rural education—is largely bound up in the practical knowledge and the inspiring enthusiasm that arise from such gatherings as this."

SOUVENIRS OF SOUTH AMERICA

Col. Kincaide Presents Them to Several Friends

The party of local business men who called upon Col. Henry L. Kincaide, just before he started on his South American trip with the Boston Chamber of Commerce and presented him with a diamond pin, have been pinned in return by the genial Colonel. Friday each of the gentlemen in the party was called upon by Col. Kincaide and presented with a handsome stick pin which he procured in Brazil. The pin represents a green beetle and is gold mounted. It is a very handsome souvenir of his trip and is highly prized.

LONG IN THE SERVICE

Frank also broke in Herb Packard as a motorman and it would be almost impossible to enumerate all that he has given first instruction in railroading to.

Many changes have taken place in the street car system during the past twenty-five years, and the company has also changed its name and title several times, so that Frank, George and Herb, have seen men come and men go, but they still stay on. It is also quite a remarkable fact that of all those connected with the railway during its first years of operation that these three men are the only ones now connected with it.

George Dunham who is the oldest employee by a few days has always run on the rear end, although he is capable of taking a motorman's position if necessary. It has been said that conductors eventually get rich and own houses. Not so with George Dunham, for although he has always ran on the rear end he has never accumulated enough to own his own house. He has however followed the advice of ex-President Roosevelt and raised a large family.

Of late Dunham has been running as conductor on the Houghs Neck line, although he has, like Frank Perry, ran on every line in the city and for many years ran with Perry. He will have completed his twenty-five years of service on Aug. 15 and will then be entitled to add his fifth gold stripe.

Herb Packard is at present running on the East Milton line, although it may also be said of him that he has run on every line. He will get his fifth white stripe on May 1, next year.

The street railway company is proud of these three men, and they are sure of employment as long as physically able, thus disproving the claim once made that the company desired to get rid of its old men.

Probably the general public would not know, but the fact remains that it is seldom that an accident happens to a car in charge of old men, but if the general public do not realize it, the company does, and experienced men are retained as long as possible.

QUINCY HERD.

President Charles H. Finn of Quincy herd, Benevolent Order of Buffalo, was given a royal welcome by the brothers at the regular meeting of the heard this week. President Finn has been confined to his home for several weeks with a serious affliction of the eyes. One candidate was initiated and several applications were received.

The herd is planning to hold a class initiation the first meeting in September. The work will be performed by the new degree team and there are a large number of candidates waiting for the degree.

The entertainment committee reported that arrangements were being made for a social and entertainment to be held in the early fall. Many of the members of Quincy herd announced that they were planning to attend the field day and sporting events to be held under the auspices of the Gloucester herd in September.

MORE HOUSE LOTS.

Surveyors have been at work during the past few days plotting out the estate of the late Joseph F. Berry on Quincy avenue. The estate which comprises two large lots containing a total of 78,150 square feet is to be laid out into house lots, with a street running through the centre and is to be placed on the market. The estate is situated on the easterly side of Quincy avenue joining the estate of Daniel F. Desmond on the north and the estate of Mary Faircloth on the south. There are now three houses and a stable situated on the lots.

IMPEACHMENT MAY BE SOUGHT

Startling Evidence Against Governor Sulzer of New York

CAMPAIGN FUND GAMELING

Legislative Committee Learns Definitely That Executive Used Contributions to Buy Stock While $50,000 In Debt to Brokers—Man Now on His Staff Paid $26,739 For Him

New York, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stock while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony adduced at the hearings of the Frawley committee of the legislature.

The evidence brought to light is sufficient, according to Senator Frawley, chairman of the committee, to warrant proceedings to impeach the governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, and the committee closed its hearings here to consider what action should be taken.

A definite decision, Frawley indicated, would be reached by the time the legislature meets on Monday.

The governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock excange firms, and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. M. Josephthal, a Wall street banker, a member of the governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after Sulzer had received repeated calls for more margin.

The governor's transactions with the other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions in the purchase of stock.

Arranged chronologically, the testimony appeared to show that on Jan. 1, 1912, there stood on the books of the stock exchange firm of Harris & Fuller an indebtedness of $48,599 against the purchase by Sulzer of 500 shares of "Big Four," 200 shares American Smelting and Refining company and 100 shares of Southern Pacific.

This testimony was given by Melville B. Fuller, a member of the firm who on Wednesday had refused to answer the questions of the committee.

There were no other purchases of stock recorded on this account until Dec. 5, 1912, when Sulzer bought 100 shares of "Big Four," making 600 in all.

On Oct. 11 the firm made its first call upon Sulzer for more margin, the market being at that time "weak and panicky." The books showed that on the Nov. 18 previous Sulzer had paid $10,000 against the account and that on Dec. 16, apparently in response to the call for margin, he paid in $6999 more.

In October of the same year, the evidence indicated that Frederick Colwell, the governor's alleged "dummy," purchased from Boyer, Griswold & Co., 200 shares of "Big Four" railroad stock outright at 60 for $12,025, the $25 representing commission.

This was at the height of Sulzer's campaign for the governorship, and transcripts from the firm's books showed the stock, bought on Oct. 16, was paid for partly in checks, at least two of which were identified in the testimony as Sulzer campaign contributions. There were seven checks in all and the others are charged by counsel as having been also campaign checks.

During the same month 200 more shares of "Big Four" were delivered to Colwell by Fuller & Gray, another stock exchange firm. This is the firm which had on its books "Account No. 500," the identity of which was solved when a clerk testified that Gray had told him the account was Sulzer's.

The governor's next transaction in Wall street, as developed by the evidence, was on Jan. 16, 1913, when he deposited a $5000 check of A. E. Spriggs against his indebtedness to Harris & Fuller. On July 9, 1913, he further reduced this indebtedness by selling his 100 shares of Southern Pacific for $9248. Sulzer's account with Harris & Fuller, according to Fuller, was known as No. 63. The governor, Fuller said, ignored the firm's calls for more margin.

A. E. Spriggs is said to have been interested with Governor Sulzer some twenty years ago in the exploitation of the Alaska Industrial company, a mining corporation.

JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON

Had Been Governor of Alabama and Member of Senate

DEATH OF JOHNSTON

It Leaves Only One Vote to Spare on Tariff Measure In Senate

Washington, Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph F. Johnston of Alabama weakens the Democratic majority on the administration tariff bill in the senate, though party leaders insist there still will be no serious difficulty in passing the measure.

In the Democratic senate caucus it was announced that forty-nine senators had declared they would support the bill on its final passage.

On the basis of the caucus alignment, Democratic leaders figured that the vote on the tariff bill, without defections from either side, would be 49 to 47 for its passage. The death of Johnston leaves the calculation 48 to 47.

Senator Johnston died of pneumonia. He was 70 years old, had served through the war between the states in the confederate army and was governor of Alabama for two terms.

WEEKS LAW DEFIED BY NEW HAMPSHIRE

Nation's Acquisition of Forest Lands Is Blocked

Washington, Aug. 9.—The forest service was notified that Attorney General Tuttle of New Hampshire, on behalf of that state, had filed a brief which, in effect, defied the federal government to enforce the Weeks law for the conservation of water and power in the White mountains.

This is the first official act of a state to prevent the progress of national conservation. It is declared by government officials to raise the issue as to whether national or private control of the waters of both the Atlantic slope and the upper Ohio valley for power purposes shall prevail.

Tuttle refuses to agree to the condemnation of 100,000 acres of land in the White mountains, except upon agreement that the power control shall remain with the state and that the lands shall pay a state tax.

LIMITED TO $60 A YEAR

Senators Must Not Spend More Than That Amount For Telegrams

Washington, Aug. 9.—Hereafter senators must get along with only $60 a year for telegrams, under the terms of a resolution introduced by Senator Shafroth.

Recently Senator Bristow charged on the floor that Senator Ashurst had spent $100 a day at times in telegraphing in regard to grave political matters. The charges were denied.

The senate contingent committee, of which Shafroth is a member, has been investigating the use or abuse of the telegraph privileges by senators.

SUN YAT SEN AT TOKIO

Chinese Fugitive Undecided About Coming to United States

Tokio, Aug. 9.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first provisional president of China, and now a fugitive because of the apparent failure of the rebellion against President Yuan Shi Kai that he helped to foment, arrived here from Formosa.

It was at once rumored that Sun is on his way to America, but when questioned he said he had not yet decided whether to visit the United States or not.

Martial Law In Barcelona

Barcelona, Aug. 9.—The Confederation of Labor here declared a general strike and the government in response proclaimed martial law in the city and took extensive military precautions. Many of the labor leaders were arrested.

Death Takes Colonel Fuller

Bath, Me., Aug. 9.—Colonel Edward M. Fuller, for forty years a practising physician and surgeon in Bath, and for twenty years identified with the medical corps of the state militia, died of blood poisoning, aged 63 years.

WILSON'S POLICY IS UNCHANGED

Hostile Note Sent by Order of Huerta Is Ignored

STICKS TO MEDIATION SCHEME

President Entirely Within His Rights In Sending Lind as Adviser of Embassy—Mexico Regards Character of Investigations Recently Carried on as Extremely Offensive

Washington, Aug. 9.—The administration has decided to ignore entirely the hostile note sent by President Huerta to the American government, and Special Envoy Lind is directed to proceed to Mexico City without delay, unless he be held by armed force.

"The president declines to be bluffed," stated a prominent government official.

The note sent by Huerta to Charge O'Shaughnessy has been studied carefully by the president, and he determined to proceed regardless of its contents. Rumors of an anti-American uprising have had little effect at the White House.

The president does not intend to abandon without a struggle his mediation scheme, which was conceived by him in a spirit of good will toward the people of Mexico.

Secretary of State Bryan issued the following statement relative to Lind and his mission:

"The statement of the Mexican foreign office was based on misrepresentation, for which this government is not responsible. In sending Governor Lind as an adviser of the embassy, the president is entirely within his rights, and this department will not assume that his going will be regarded as unfriendly when the character of his mission is understood."

It is believed here that General Huerta will abandon his announced plan of treating Lind as a disturber and interloper and of driving him out of the country.

An official statement given out by the Mexican embassy said the Mexican government resented the presence in Mexico of special envoys of the American government, and the Mexican government had taken the opportunity presented in the coming of Lind to exercise this resentment.

Mexico regards the character of the investigations carried on by William B. Hale, R. F. Del Valle and others as extremely offensive, and believes the unfriendly information that they sent to Washington is responsible for the present attitude of the American government.

Former Bovernor Lind is due to reach Mexico City in time for a conference with Huerta this afternoon. It is believed here that the Mexican president will be forced to confer with President Wilson's representative, if only to discover the nature of the communication, which it has been admitted Lind carries with him.

Should Huerta then deem it best to expel Lind, the United States may be forced to take drastic measures.

Mexican Press Backs Huerta

Mexico City, Aug. 9.—The press of the Mexican capital continues its discussion of Provisional President Huerta's note to Secretary of State Bryan, declaring that the presence of John Lind in Mexico would be undesirable unless he brought with him recognition by the United States of the present Mexican government.

The newspapers unanimously applaud Huerta and support their criticism of President Wilson's policy by publishing extracts from American newspapers in which President Wilson is attacked.

DARKNESS IN PEABODY

Streets Will Be Without Lights For a Month Because of Fire

Peabody, Mass., Aug. 9.—Streets in this town will be in darkness at night for at least a month and a number of factories which rely upon electric power to operate the machinery will be shut down as a result of a fire which caused a damage of $50,000 to the Peabody municipal electric lighting plant.

Persons who use electricity to light their homes will be supplied temporarily by the Salem Municipal Electrict Light company, which, however, cannot furnish power for commercial purposes.

Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause of the fire. This was one of the first municipal electric plants built in Massachusetts.

Triple Rowing Accident

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 9.—Three men were drowned in the Connecticut river about two miles above this city as the result of the capsizing of a small skiff containing seven men. The dead are John McDonald, Gettinio Angelini and Umberto Aliverine.

OVER $2000 A DAY.

There has been a great rush at City Hall during the past week to pay water bills for the usual shut-off notices will go out after today. The receipts for water have been heavy every day this week, each days receipts for water being over $2,000.

The Assessors announced this morning that the tax rate for 1913 would probably be announced next week. They gave no inklin of what the rate would be.

VISITORS TO QUINCY

Our Historic Places a Great Attraction

In these days when long trips about the country in automobiles have become common Quincy and other places that abound in buildings and other points of historical interest have many visitors. Nearly everybody who passes through Quincy wants to see the President Adams birthplaces, the shrine beneath the entrance of the First church and the Dorothy Q house. All of these places keep a registration book for visitors to sign. Many do this but it often happens that where there are several in the party some neglect to affix their signatures to the book. Capt. Benjamin King, curator at the John Adams cottage at South Quincy, the birthplace of President John Quincy Adams, now owned by the Quincy Historical society, however is very particular to have all visitors register.

Following is a list of those who have registered there since the first of August.

Mrs. W. B. Hathall, Middletown, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Wing, Tampa, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hart, Tampa, Fla.; Mrs. Mary Lewis, Bridgeport, Conn.; George Waters, Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. Bertha Upham, Randolph, Mass.; Miss Carrie Upham, Randolph, Mass.; Charles Upham, Houghton, Mass.; Mrs. E. B. Cushman, Canton, Mass.; Dr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Byrns, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Mason, Racine, Wis.; Mrs. A. E. Wardville, Elgvia, Ohio; Miss Grace Wardville, Elgvia, Ohio,; Mr. and Mrs. Day, Chicago, Ill.; Miss Jeannette Wales, Indianapolis, Ind.; Miss E. Wales, Indianapolis, Ind.; Mrs. A. A. Fisher, Rochester, New York; Mr. McKollas, Kansas City, Kansas; John von Kent, South Africa.

PACKARD ANNIVERSARY.

To celebrate the 275th anniversary of the landing of Samuel Packard at Hingham, Aug. 10, 1638 the Packard Family association has planned a gala time for Sunday and Monday on the site of his home, a few hundred feet from Central square, near the soldiers' monument, West Bridgewater. A tent will occupy an open field with seating room for 500.

Sunday, at three o'clock there will be memorial services in recognition of the real anniversary day. The opening musical service will be by the Weber Male quartet of Boston, and the occasion will be in charge of Rev. Edward B. Maglathlin, the pastor of the First Congregational Unitarian church of West Bridgewater. This church was organized in 1656, and in the days of Samuel Packard the Rev. James Keith was its pastor, "the first minister of Bridgewater." There will be two or three short addresses in appreciation of the lives of our fathers, and a short "In Memoriam" exercise by the Weber Quartete, M. Clifton Edson, cornetist, Rev. Edward B. Maglathlin, chaplain of the day, and the president of the Association. Winthrop Packard, the journalist and nature writer, is one of the speakers.

Monday forenoon reception, the social hours, the attendance registration and until 1.15 P. M., music will be furnished by Martland's band of Brockton. It may be of interest to note that the same historic band twenty-five years ago furnished music at the Packard 250th anniversary under the same leader, Mace Gay, also three others of the band Waldo Packard, baritone, Bradford Edson, trombone, and Walter Foley, drummer. From twelve o'clock to one o'clock will be lunch time. There will be no set banquet at tables the location being inconvenient for anything of that kind. The day's celbration must assume more of the form of a summer day's outing.

At half past one there will be a business meeting and election of officers. At two, after an address of welcome by Hon. Robert A. Harris of East Bridgewater, Joseph Packard, Esq., of Baltimore, Md., will act as presiding officer. Various papers, short speeches and letters; the reading of Samuel Packard's will; and other interesting matters for a couple of hours.

BRIEFS

Rev. Sampson Nicholls will preach in the Atlantic Memorial church on Sunday morning. Mrs. Harvey Holt will be the soloist.

On account of extensive repairs, made necessary by the damage caused by lightning, St. Chrysostom's church will be closed for worship until further notice.

The many friends of Miss Charlotte F. Donovan of Chubbuck street will be glad to learn that she has returned home from the Quincy Hospital where she underwent an operation a few weeks ago and is rapidly improving.

During the vacation of Rev. Mr. Matheson of the First Presbyterian church, the pulpit will be occupied by different clergymen each Sunday. Rev. Duncan Macphee of Boston will preach tomorrow.

Miss Helen King returned to her home on Clay street Friday after being at the Quincy Hospital for two weeks where she was operated on for appendicitis. Miss King convalescence has been most favorable.

The Sunday school of Hall Place M. E. church is to hold a lawn party on the Church grounds Wednesday afternoon and evening from 3 to 10, the proceeds to go toward the picnic expenses. A fine time is anticipated as extensive preparations are being made.

FLEET OF NEARLY 200

Take Part in Yesterdays Race off Marblehead

Friday was another record breaking day at Marblehead. It was ladies' day of the week's series and brought out a fleet of 191 power and sail boats, just one more than the record breaking day of Thursday. Fridays event was under the auspices of the Corinthian club. Although it was foggy outside during the morning the fog lifted by noon so as to give a good afternoon for the racing. The wind was from the southeast giving the several skippers a fine chance to try out their craft.

There were nine starters in the sonder class in which the Harpoon finished in the fourth position. The race in this class was won by Dorina, who scored her first win of the season.

The Dorchen II of A. W. Finlay raced in class I but only got third position.

It was a pretty race in class A between the eight boats entered, and the race went to the Nutmeg with the Marie L second and the Meemer third, the Little Haste eighth and the Eleanor in the last position.

In class H the Maritza II of C. H. Porter won the race with the Waweenock second and Zoe third.

Ex-Commodore Dawes of the Wollaston club entered both of his yachts in class H, his Wanderer IV finishing in first position and his Thordis in third position.

The race of the afternoon however, as far as local interest was concerned, was centered in class D. There were six starters in this class and the race was won by ex-Commodore Whittemore's Dartwell with the Clara second, then the Iris, Mudgekeewis, Grayling and Dolly III.

But 48 seconds separated the Dartwell and Clara, corrected time, which shows how closely these two yachts are matched. With one exception this week it has been the Dartwell or Clara which won in this class the one exception being the race that went to the Dolly. The summary of this class was as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Dartwell, J. M. Whittemore | 2:08:00 |
| Clara, H. W. Robbins | 2:08:48 |
| Iris, F. F. Crane | 2:12:01 |
| Mudgekeewis, E. W. Emery | 2:12:05 |
| Grayling, C. V. Nickerson | 2:26:32 |
| Dolly III, W. W. Arnold | withdrew |

Although the weather was rather foggy in the morning it did not prevent the race of the Corinthian club scheduled. There was quite a large number of starters in classes B, D, and H as well as the special classes of the Annisquam, Manchester and Winthrop clubs.

Ex-Commodore Frank E. Dawes of the Wollaston club entered both of his yachts in class H and the Thordis finished in second position.

All of the class D boats were out for their usual scrap and this race went to the Clara with the Dartwell second. The afternoon race as noted above going to the Dartwell and Clara. First it is one and then the other. The summary of the mornings race in this class was as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Clara, H. W. Robbins | 2:03:26 |
| Dartwell, J. M. Whittemore | 2:07:47 |
| Mudjekeewis, E. W. Emery | 2:08:22 |
| Doly II, W. W. Arnold | 2:11:58 |
| Iris, F. F. Crane | 2:13:16 |
| Grayling, C. V. Nickerson | 2.37:38 |

An open amateur meeting was held by the Wollaston Golf club this afternoon on the Montclair links.

TOWNS WRECKED BY AN EARTHQUAKE

Structures Built to Resist Shocks Reduced to Ruins

Lima, Aug. 9.—An earthquake destroyed the Peruvian towns of Caraveli and Quicacha. Thousands of the inhabitants were rendered homeless, and great misery prevails.

Caraveli is a town of 4000 inhabitants in the state of Arequipa, 130 miles to the northwest of the port of Molendo. Quicacha is in the same state.

The whole district is subject to frequent earthquakes, and in the towns of Arequipa and most of the other towns of the state the houses and public edifices are built to resist earthquake shocks. Arequipa itself has been laid in ruins on several occacions. The volcano of Misti is in the immediate vicinity.

BANK SUSPECT HELD IN $10-000

Note Broker In Alleged $200,-000 Swindling Scheme

CHARGED WITH $500 LARCENY

Bail Placed at High Figure So That Defendant May Be Held While Investigation Is Being Made—Sum of $117,000 Secured From Several Boston Banking Institutions

Boston, Aug. 9.—What is believed to be a bank swindle which may involve $200,000 and many of the largest banking institutions in Boston, was uncovered when Jacob Watchmaker of Revere was arraigned before Judge Cutler in the Chelsea district court and held in $10,000 bail, charged specifically with the larceny of $500 from the Broadway National bank of Chelsea.

The present larceny charge is merely a technical one and the bail was put at a high figure in order that Watchmaker could be held until a further investigation is made which is expected to result in the discovery of a sensational swindle.

President Howland of the Broadway National bank and Attorneys Ham and Stoneman, representing many prominent banking institutions of Boston, made strenuous efforts to have the bail fixed as high as $25,000. Howland declared that within the past few days several large amounts, aggregating $25,000, have been withdrawn from several local banks by Watchmaker, and it was feared he would depart with whatever cash he could lay hands upon.

Watchmaker, who is a note broker, was arrested at his home in Revere by Inspector Galliac and taken to police headquarters in Chelsea. On the charge upon which he is being held, the Braodway bank officials allege that money was loaned to Watchmaker on a note and that a statement attached to the note purporting to set forth the man's liabilities and assets was false, in that items set forth as assets were in reality liabilities.

Stoneman, in the Chelsea court, declared that Watchmaker had attached statements to notes listing his assets as $300,000. Of this amount it is alleged that Watchmaker stated $175,000 to be in personal property. A careful probe by Ham and Stoneman is said to have failed to locate the $175,000 worth of personal property. The rest of the declared assets, amounting to $133,000, was said to be in real estate

Ham said that practically all the real estate which Watchmaker owned was heavily mortgaged and was practically worthless.

Stoneman related at length of Watchmaker's dealings with his creditors and with the banks in which he was interested.

That Watchmaker had called a special meeting of his creditors a short time ago and had admitted to them that his statements attached to many notes regarding his financial standing were false was a statement made by Stoneman. At this time it was discovered that the sum of $117,000 had been secured from several local banking institutions.

Stoneman stated that after a consultation between the attorneys of the various banks involved it was agreed to lay the matter before District Attorney Pelletier for action.

DULUTH CREWS WIN

Thousands Witness Rowing Championship Regatta at Boston

Boston, Aug. 9.—The sweeping victories of the Duluth four and eight-oared crews and the remarkable sculling of R. Dibble of the Don Rowing club of Toronto featured the first day of the forty-first national rowing championship regatta held on the Charles river basin under the auspices of the New England Amateur Rowing association.

More than 25,000 people witnessed the events from the banks of the river and from the small craft which literally sprinkled the basin.

OCTOGENARIAN TENOR.

Chipper and breezy as a youth in his teens, Col. Sam Holdsworth, the 83 year old tenor, has revived the love of old favorites at all performances in the Kincaide theatre. Its a great old town said the Colonel as he strutted about in front of his dressing room, and my travels which have taken me into all parts of the civilized world have taught me a thing or two about places. Quincy is a fine old place and if I could only forget the call of the boards I really believe it is in just such a place as I would want to settle down.

Col. Holdsworth opened his engagement here at the Wednesday matinee. A curous audience awaited the finish of his first solo, and from that out he became the favorite of the bill. Of course, said the Colonel, I have been in the business ever since my 24th year and know genuine applause and I am glad to say I have received it here.

MIKE REILEY'S FUNERAL

Showing That a Mistake May Breed Mistakes

By OSCAR COX

The incident of this story was a recent occurrence. This is mentioned beforehand because there are carping critics who would say after reading it that the plan was farfetched; that such happenings are only to be found in stories and there is nothing probable in it.

Mike Reiley, a young mason, started out to work on a bright morning, light hearted, for by the end of the week, when paid off, he would have the $500 that he had resolved to save before marrying Nora O'Toole, the girl he loved and who loved him better than all the world. The banns had been published, and everything was being made ready for the wedding, which was to occur in just ten days from that date.

Mike said "So long" to his mother, who was a widow, and to his sister, Kathleen, who worked in a paper mill, and then walked briskly along till he came to the house where Nora lived and where he expected to see her sitting in the second story window sewing on her wedding outfit, for Nora knew the time that Mike went to work and was always there to give and receive a smile, and sometimes they had a brief chat together.

This morning Nora threw up the sash, and Mike stopped, and Nora asked him if he had attended to this and to that in preparation for the wedding or the fixing up of the nest in which they were to live, a four room house near Mike's present home. He had satisfied her that he had done the painting needed, and replaced the broken glass in the windows, and mended the roof, and they both agreed that there was nothing more to be done on the premises except what could be done after they moved in. Mike kissed his hand to her. She threw him a kiss in return, and Mike went on his way, while Nora drew down the sash and resumed her sewing.

She was very happy considering that she was to be married so soon to the man she loved and plied her needle briskly. It seemed to go through the fabric of itself.

But suddenly a presentiment came over her that something was about to happen. In her mind's eye she saw a coffin with Mike in it and a lot of mourners sitting about as at a funeral.

Then it seemed to her that Mike sat up in his coffin and said: "What are you sittin' around that way for when you've come to a weddin'? Get up and shake a leg." But Nora drove it out of her head.

About 9 o'clock that night Mike's sister, Kathleen, appeared at Nora's home and asked if she had seen anything of Mike, for he had not come home. Nora was a bit troubled, for Mike, especially since he had begun his preparations to be married, had been very regular in his homecoming after knocking off work at 5 in the afternoon. She told Kathleen that she had not seen him since he went by in the morning, when he was looking very well and very cheerful. She asked Kathleen to tell him when he returned to come and let her know of his arrival, for she would not go to bed until she had news of him.

Mike did not come home that night, and in the morning her mother, his sister and his sweetheart were all very much troubled about his absence. They hoped that the postman would bring a note from him stating that he had been called upon to do some work which would take him too far from home to warrant his coming in the evening and going out again the next morning. But the postman passed, whistling at the door of every other house on his way except that of the Reileys, not leaving them a single letter.

The day ended without any word from Mike. They would have sent to where he worked to inquire about him, but Mike had never taken pains to keep them informed as to the places where he was employed, since he was frequently changing, sometimes working on two or three different jobs in the same day.

A week passed, and Mike did not turn up. His mother was broken down with worry. Nora ceased her preparations for the wedding. Kathleen alone, who was obliged to go to work every day and whose mind was therefore employed, stood up under the trouble. All three of them scanned what newspapers they could get hold of to see if a body had been found anywhere that might be Mike's.

One morning just before Kathleen went to the factory she saw her mother, who was looking in a newspaper for news of Mike, fall in a faint. Kathleen ran to her, and her first words after regaining consciousness were:

"My boy is dead!"

"Where is it, mother?" asked the horror stricken girl. "Show me!"

Mrs. Reiley put her finger on the item, and Kathleen read that the day before a man had staggered into St. Luke's hospital and had fallen unconscious. He had revived just long enough to say "My name's O'Reiley."

"It isn't Mike at all, mother," said Kathleen. "There's no 'O' to our name."

"Yes, it is," replied the poor woman. "The newspapers never get names right, and like enough the hospital people made the mistake themselves."

"Now, don't you worry, mother, dear. I'll go to the hospital—I'll do no work today—and see if it's Mike. But I'm sure it isn't."

So Kathleen, instead of going to the factory, started for the hospital and on reaching it asked to see the body of the man who had died there the day before. She was taken to where the body lay, and the moment she looked at it the tears started to her eyes, and she turned them away at once, so ghastly was the sight.

"It's my brother, Mike Reiley," she moaned.

She went away, stopping at Nora's to break the sad news to her. Nora was broken hearted, but bore her affliction with resignation. She went with Kathleen to Mrs. Reiley and told her that the body in the hospital was Mike's.

After awhile when they had become quieted they took steps to have the body brought to the house for the funeral. They called in friends, who took the burden upon themselves of making all the preparations. An undertaker was instructed to bring the body, and all other details were attended to.

The same evening the body arrived, already in its coffin.

"He looks very natural," said one. "He must have died a peaceful death."

"How changed!" said another. "I'd scarcely know him."

And so the comments went on. Mrs. Reiley gazed down upon the corpse, her face blinded with tears. Nora would not look at it, saying that she preferred to remember the happy countenance of her lover as she saw it when he looked up at her while she was sitting at her window the last day he ever went to work.

When the day of the funeral came round the mother, the sister and the betrothed were given seats near the coffin, while the friends of the family took chairs behind them. There they awaited the opening of the funeral ceremony.

We left Mike on his way to his work. He was engaged in laying brick all day, and just before knocking off the boss drove up in a buggy and said to him:

"Mike, I've got a call for a chimney out in the country. The carpenter work is all done, and they can't do any more till the chimney is put in. I've agreed to send a man out tonight to go to work the first thing in the morning. I want you to go."

Mike demurred, but the boss offered him double pay, and he consented. A train was leaving in half an hour, which was barely enough time for him to catch it. He arrived at his destination at 11 o'clock at night and found a team waiting for him that carried him fifteen miles into the country, where there was no other house than the one being built within a considerable distance.

Mike worked several days on the chimney. He thought he should try to get word to his family as to the reason for his absence, but he was too busy to think much about it. He had once or twice remained on a job for several days without going home or sending word and did not expect to be longer on this one. But before he finished it he was called upon to put in the foundation walls for a house ready to be built a few miles away and was offered double pay if he would do it. He thought what a beautiful bridal gift he could buy for Nora with the extra money he was earning. He would take the job and if Nora complained of his being away so long just before the wedding he would console her with the gift.

When Mike finished his work and went home, as he approached the house where his mother lived he saw a hearse and carriages standing before the door. Terrified, he went in, eager to know who was dead. There sat his mother and sister and bride to be in a row before a coffin. His mother gave him one look and fainted. Nora drew back from him. Those occupying the rear seats tumbled over each other to get through the narrow door.

Kathleen alone seemed to take in the situation.

"Mike," she cried, "ye're not dead, after all!"

"Dead? Why should I be dead?"

"I made a mistake. Mebbe I didn't look close enough."

"What's the matter with you all?" asked Mike.

By this time Nora had recovered her wits and flew to her lover's arms, burying her face on his breast and crying:

"Oh, Mike, sure it's a miracle! We thought you were in your coffin."

"In my coffin? Do I look like that?"

This led to a comparison, and it was agreed that the dead man, though not unlike Mike, under other circumstances would not have been mistaken for him.

"Get it out at once!" cried Mike.

In a twinkling all was changed. The faces put off the lugubrious appearance of mourning and put on the happy expression of wedding guests, for it was decided to hurry up the bridal preparations and turn the funeral into a marriage. That very evening the pair were united and went to live in the house they had prepared for their reception.

My story shows, among other things, the power of the imagination. Kathleen's fear that she would find Mike's dead body in a coffin impressed on her mind that she saw him. This started a chain of imaginary incidents that led to a union of errors. After all, was there anything especially remarkable that Mike, being supposed dead, another person with a similar name should have been mistaken for him?

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

The Homemade Awning an Aid to Seashore Comfort.

CHEAP AND CONVENIENT IDEA

The Fatal Habit of Eternal Reiteration More a Failing of the Feminine Than The Masculine Sex—A Remedy For This Failing Is Suggested.

My Dear Elsa—So you have decided to spend August by the "sad sea waves?" Now, you really must take a homemade awning with you as a shield from the sun while sitting on the sands. Of course you will find plenty of covered chairs which you can rent on the beach by the hour, but they are not only expensive when frequently used, but they have the disadvantage, too, of not being movable. You love to get off by yourself in secluded nooks, and it's out of the question with one of these chairs as a resting place.

You say, "Why not use an umbrella?" According to my notion, this protection is awkward, gives inadequate shade and shuts off air. So it's me for the homemade awning that can be toted around with you. This is the way to get the awning into shape: Buy four bamboo or cane poles about five feet long and fasten a brass hook into the top of each one.

Now take four yards of dark green sateen or similar material a yard wide and cut it into two two yard lengths and sew the strips together, making a four yard square. Hem all four edges and at each corner sew a good sized brass eye to fasten over the screw holes on the poles.

Now drive your poles one foot into the sand about two yards apart in a square, and when you've hitched your top to it you will have a four yard block of shade open to the breezes in which four people may sit comfortably.

Denim would, of course, make a denser shade, but it is heavy to burden oneself with, and the chief joy of this awning, my dear, is the fact that it can be easily carried to the beach—poles and all—and as readily moved from spot to spot on the sands or rocks.

Talking about vacation and vacation conveniences reminds me of a woman where we stopped for a week's "breathing spell" not long ago. Well, this particular mondaine was more addicted to vain repetition than most of our sex, and Dick says, "We've all got this fault bad." But, really, just between ourselves, we women are given to the uncomfortable habit of rubbing it in. Lots of women give a command to their children not once, but twenty times. They tell their husbands their opinions on certain matters on all and every occasion. In other words, they confuse emphasis with frequency, and this is where they defeat their own purpose.

Forgive this sermonizing on the subject, but when a painter wants to focus attention upon a certain face he makes everything else in the picture subservient to this one single feature. If an actress exploits her attractive mannerisms continually she is a poor actress, and the woman who crams her house full of a hundred pieces of bric-a-brac destroys the virtue of all.

The best way in my estimation to put a stop to this unfortunate practice of reiteration and repeating is to diplomatically lead up to a point or seize it when it comes in the natural course of events and then say what one wants to with unmistakable clearness.

There will have to be sufficient preparation for this climax, to be sure, but forethought should be one of action rather than of words, methinks.

And after all, dear, gaining one's point is not the chief business of life. I often think one learns more through what one has been forced to accept from others than through what one has forced others to accept from us. But if one wants to gain some point or to make a position clear on some matter one stands a better chance of doing it by a few well directed remarks than a constant hammering on the same old nail.

Let me tell you about a chocolate pudding, a delicious summer dessert, by the way, which we had the other night, and then my story for this week will be ended.

Into a double boiler or an aluminium saucepan put one-half cup of granulated sugar and two rounded tablespoonfuls of cornstarch. Blend these carefully with one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt and then add two and a half cups of sweet milk. Cook all together until it begins to thicken, stirring gently from the bottom to prevent lumping and scorching; then add two squares of cooking chocolate and a teaspoonful of butter. Let it cook slowly for ten minutes if an aluminium pan is used or a half hour if a double boiler is preferred; then remove from the fire and add one teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat thoroughly, pour into a mold which has been thoroughly moistened with cold water and when cold serve with whipped cream.

Hope you'll like the pudding. Yours ever,

MABEL.

How to Keep Meals Hot.

In many households there are times when meals have to be kept hot after the usual time, and it is often a difficult matter. The simplest way is to fill a deep baking tin with boiling water and set in it the different articles of food in separate jars. Cover over and let the tin stand in a moderately hot oven and the meal will be quite fresh and nice when wanted.

M'CALL NOT A CANDIDATE

Politics In Bay State Getting Pretty Close to Fever Heat

Boston, Aug. 9.—Ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall in a statement issued last night declined to be drafted as a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. His decision means that the fight for the Republican nomination is between Governor Foss and Everett C. Benton.

In a statement last night Benton opened up on Foss, saying: "It would seem that the Democratic party is through with Mr. Foss and he is again ready to jump the political fence by unloading himself with the blower works and all its troubles onto the Republican party. I have watched with interest the campaign of Governor Foss, in which he has endeavored to make the public believe that there was a 'spontaneous uprising' in behalf of his candidacy for governor for the fourth term. The people have been humbugged so much with this sort of political intrigue in recent years that it will deceive nobody."

These are the big developments in a political situation which is unprecedented in the history of this state.

FUNDS UNACCOUNTED FOR

Lawrence Strike Committee Members Are Held Responsible

Boston, Aug. 9.—The I. W. W. Lawrence strike committee members, Joseph A. Bedard, William Trautman and Joseph Shaheen, are personally responsible for $18,695.86 of the strike fund contributions, not yet accounted for, according to a supplemental report filed in the supreme court here by Winfield S. Slocum, master in the suit of the attorney general against them.

The master also finds that another member of the committee, William Yates, is responsible personally for a check for $3000 sent to Thomas Powers of Providence and for another check for $2800, sent to Vincent St. John of Chicago.

He finds that the total amount received by the strike committee from Jan. 20, 1912, to March 16, 1912, was $62,564.40, and that $16,375.66 of that amount was not deposited with the Lawrence Trust company, where the committee had an account.

TWIN BOYS VICTIMS OF RARE DISEASE

Color of Italian Babies Changing From White to Black

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—Two 18-months-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science which has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is "pseudo-leukaemia," or Hodgkins' disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands, in which the number of white blood corpuscles are increased and the red blood cells are greatly diminished. The outcome of the disease is usually death.

The twins are the children of Anthony Allato, and from the time they were born until about six weeks ago were as white and as attractive as any Italian babies.

MAKE THEIR FIRST ARREST

Chicago's Policewomen Rewarded With Cheers From Big Crowd

Chicago, Aug. 9.—"Madam, you are under arrest—we are officers of the law," announced Policewoman Margaret Wilson, who, accompanied by Policewoman Margaret Butler, took Mrs. Nellie Cameron, 23 years old, into custody at North Clark and West Erie streets on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Cameron was walked to the patrol box, followed by a large crowd, where Detective Maher, who had seen the arrest, telephoned for the police conveyance. Both policewomen were almost unnerved when someone in the crowd shouted: "Three cheers for the women cops and their first arrest." When the patrol wagon arrived Mrs. Cameron was turned over to the "wagon man" and the policewomen resumed their "beat."

KILLS A POLICEMAN

Divorced Woman Says Her Former Husband Made a Fool of Her

Cincinnati, Aug. 9.—Clara Bosken, the divorced wife of Patrolman Peter Schaller, who was shot and killed in a lonely residential section of this city, was formally charged with the murder.

The woman says that she married Schaller ten years ago, was divorced several months later, and that since that time he had been continually annoying and threatening her.

The formal charge followed a statement made by the woman while she was in a hysterical condition. She said: "I shot him. He made a fool of me for ten years."

Train Instantly Kills Woman

Wakefield, Mass., Aug. 9.—Mrs. Martha L. Walsh, aged 41, and two other women were walking along the railroad tracks here when a train struck Mrs. Walsh and killed her instantly. The others narrowly escaped and were prostrated by their experience.

VALUATION OF WEYMOUTH

It Is Being Increased Ward By Ward

"We give our readers elsewhere in this issue some quite interesting figures in regard to the tax situation in Weymouth. The assessors show a gain of $1,127,565 in valuation and a tax rate of $17.50 which looks well from some standpoints and yet it is far from satisfactory in Wards 1 and 2.

Possibly the assessors have done the best they could with the time and means at their hands. They adopted a plan last year for an increased valuation. The plan marks the town by wards and with, as we have said, time and means, confines the work to one ward for each year, when had the plan covered the entire town in a single year and the whole town been put on an equitable basis with wards 1 and 2, as they are now taxed the rate would have been less than $13.00, and the natural question arises how far is a low tax rate desirable.

It may have an influence on outside people who are seeking investment or homes but when an old resident looks at a tax rate of $13 or even $17 he smiles until he sees the aggregate figures and then he says things."

What will happen when the town gets both the high valuation and the high tax rate?

ARTICLES OF AMENDMENT

Will Be Submitted to Voters at State Election

At the State election this year the following articles of amendment of the constitution will be submitted to the people for their ratification and adoption:—

Article four of the articles of amendment of the constitution of the commonwealth is hereby amended by adding thereto the following words: Women shall be eligible to appointment as notaries public.

Full power and authority are hereby given and granted to the General Court to refer to the people for their rejection or approval at the polls any act to resolve to the General Court or any part or parts thereof. Such reference shall be by a majority yea and nay vote of all members of each house present and voting. Any act, resolve, or part thereof so referred shall be voted on at the regular State election next ensuing after such reference, shall become law if approved by a majortiy of the voters voting thereon, and shall take effect at the expiration of 30 days after the election at which it was approved or at such time after the expiration of the said 30 days as may be fixed in such act, resolve or part thereof.

REQUIEM MASS.

The funeral of Thomas F. Carrigan, who died suddenly at Framingham, was held this morning from the home of his brother, Edward Carrigan, 28 Mechanic street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Casey. Music for the mass was by the regular choir who sang the Gregorian chant under the direction of John Mahon, organist. Burial was in Avon. Mr. Carrigan was the son of the late Thomas and the late Margaret Carrigan and was in his 18th year. He leaves two brothers, Robert and Edward Carrigan.

MACHINERY IS NEW

Rivadavia Will Be All right After Awhile

Samuel T. McQuarrie, secretary of the Fore River Shipbuilding corporation denounce as absurd the rumor that the turbine engine trouble experienced by the Argentine dreadnought Rivadavia on the way from the company's yard to the New York navy yard was due to a plot.

"If any part of the engines had been purposely loosened up we would have found it out before the ship left the yard," he said. "We had the same trouble with the turbines of North Dakota and there was a lot of talk of the same kind then. Marine engines like other machinery, must be used a bit before they are right, and the discovery of imperfections in them is not unusual."

The special car for the party left City Square at 1.40 and dinner will be served promptly at 5 o'clock.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

GEORGE GRAY DROWNED

His Father and Others Unsuccessful

Braintree Pond the Scene

George Gray, 18 years old, was drowned at Braintree Pond on Sunday and his father, George Gray who went to his assistance, was rescued by William Welsh of 115 Copeland street. The body was immediately recovered by Charles Clugan of the Braintree post office.

The pulmotor of the Quincy police was applied shortly after but over an hours work failed to revive the boy. The father was given treatment and taken to his home. The son's body was removed to the undertaking rooms of John Hall.

The boy was not able to swim but fearlessly entered the water with the others. A cry of distress soon came from the boy and his father immediately went to his rescue. Midst the greatest excitement the boy was drowned and his father brought to shore.

Three men Alexander Cummins, Samuel Munroe and William Taylor formed a human chain, reaching nearly to where both were struggling in the water. When the father was secured he lost his hold on the son.

Dr. W. H. Blanchard was the first physician to arrive and he directed the workings of the pulmotor. The body was later viewed by John C. Frasier of Weymouth, medical examiner, after all efforts at resuscitation had failed.

The Gray boy was one of a family of five. His mother and two members of the family are expected home from Aberdeen, Scotland, this week. Today the father has hardly recovered from the shock of seeing his son drowned and exhaustion while trying to save him.

SUDDEN DEATH

Wilford Clarence Hunt, formerly of Quincy, died suddenly on Sunday at his farm at Amherst, N. H. With his niece Miss Helen Rhines, he was driving to the neighboring city of Nashua, on Saturday morning, when he sustained a shock. Miss Rhines promptly notified her mother, Mrs. Effie L. Rhines of Miller Stile road, Quincy by telephone and she was able to reach Amherst that afternoon. Mr. Hunt lingered until Sunday.

The body will be brought to Quincy, funeral services being held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Miller-Stile road.

Mr. Hunt was in his 57th year. For 40 years he was with Oliver Ditson Co. of Boston and also played in an orchestra. He owned the house on Bigelow street at the corner of Miller Stile road, and also the house in the rear on Miller Stile road. When he retired from business he purchased a farm at Amherst. Of late he was threatened with blindness, which troubled him. He is survived by two sisters, Miss Luella S. Hunt and Mrs. Effie L. Rhines and two nieces.

HOSE COMPANY REUNION

Veteran Firemen Recall Old Times

Mr. Penniman 94 Attends

Ideal weather was handed out to the members and friends of Washington M. French Hose Association Saturday for their annual reunion. This year as for several years past the reunion was held at Norteman's at Houghs Neck and it is hardly necessary to say that a grand good time was had. The reunion was the largest attended for several years, over seventy sitting down to the shore dinner a little after 5 o'clock.

The members and guests began to arrive soon after 2 o'clock, the early birds going down on a special car which left City Square at 1.40. Others went down as business permitted. The early afternoon was passed by the old veterans on the broad piazza of Mr. Norteman's house admiring the beautiful water scene. All were anxiously awaiting the arrival of James T. Penniman, the oldest fireman in the state. He arrived about 4.30 having been brought down by ex-Senator Hultman in his automobile. He was given a royal welcome.

By this time the greater part of the party had arrived and among those gathered on the piazza were many who were prominent in the present and past governments. Among them were Mayor Stone, ex-Mayor Shea, Chief Engineer Litchfield and Assistant Engineers, D. J. Nyhan and Frank C. Packard, ex-Chief Walter H. Ripley, ex- Engineer James T. Penniman, ex-Senator Eugene C. Hultman, Dr. F. E. Jones, County Commissioner John F. Merrill, Dr. John H. Ash, Frank A. Hall, a former superintendent of the water department, John Q. A. Field, ex-Representatives Peter T. Fallon William R. Thomas and Inspector of Buildings, Warren S. Pakrer.

About this time, a photographer put in an appearance and a group picture was taken of some of the old veterans. In the group were President Fred H. French, James T. Penniman, James W. Pierce, Asa Pope, James E. Maxim, John Q. A. Field, Frank C. Packard, John Whicher, Mayor Stone, George Tirrell, Walter S. Randall, James Nicol, Capt. Rhodes and Galen Bowditch, while back of them was a body guard of younger veterans.

Word that dinner was ready was passed around soon after 5.30 and no time was lost in taking seats at the long tables that had been made ready in Norteman's pavilion. William was on hand in personal charge and he set before the hungry party one of his best fish dinners that included everything that goes to make up a good dinner. President Fred H. French occupied the place of honor at the head table while on his right and left were Mayor Stone and ex-Mayor Shea, Mr. Penniman, Dr. Ash and John Q. A. Field who composed the vanguard of the after-dinner spell binders.

President French briefly welcomed the gathering and said that without any extended remarks he would simply give the company "play away," and for the next hour the party did their best to get on the outside of the many good things set before them, the occasion being enlivened with music by Wilson's orchestra.

Whenever the orchestra would play a familiar air the party would join in singing the chorus showing that their vocal powers were fully as good as their ability had been in years gone by to extinguish fires.

After dinner President French said that he was very much pleased to see so many present and he was also pleased to report that death, that grim destroyer, had not entered the ranks of the association since the last reunion, and he hoped that kind providence would deal as lightly with them the coming year and that all would be present to greet his successor next year.

Mayor Stone said that these reunions were a grand good thing, as they served to link the past more firmly with the present. In looking over the tables he saw many of those who had served the town and city faithfully in positions of trust. It was a pleasure to meet together and talk over old times. He had been told, that sometimes when there were no fires for them to run to, that fires were made for them. However, he would not say anything about that. He however, hoped that all would have a good time and as for a successor to President French, there would be none.

Ex-Mayor Shea added his word of greeting. That old argument about the Granite had been settled long ago, so that there was no need of bringing it up again. He also declared that there would be no successor to President French, for as long as he was spared to them he would head the association. He was glad to see so many of the old boys as it made him feel young again.

Dr. John H. Ash and County Commissioner Merrill who were having their first experience at a reunion of the association told of the good time they were having and that they realized that they had missed many good times in other years, but that in the future they could be counted upon to be present.

Overseer of the Poor James H. Elcock could not refrain from having a word to say about that famous run made by the old Granite which he said had now been generally admitted. He also spoke of the good that such gatherings did in bringing the old and the new together.

President French said in reply, that the executive committee had ruled that the Washington M. French Hose Co. made the best time and that there was no appeal from their finding.

James T. Penniman was introduced as the oldest fireman in the state who had now reached the ripe old age of 94 years. Mr. Penniman in reply said that he was glad to be present. About ten years ago he had said at a dinner at Squantum he hoped to be present at two or three more dinners. Someone had suggested that it be not less than ten years and he had agreed. He had not fulfilled that contract. He however hoped that he might be present next year.

Ex-Councilman Studley was also called upon for a few remarks, but he had eaten so much dinner he said that he was at a loss for words.

John Q. A. Field who has held many positions of trust under the town and city form of government was sponsor for the old Tiger. Say what you might about the Granite, Vulture or Hose Company, whenever work was to be done the Tiger was always there and could be depended upon.

CARS MEET HEAD ON

Motorman and Passengers Hurt

New Signals at Fault

A head on collision between two electric cars on the Houghs Neck line Saturday afternoon resulted in the injury of four passengers and one motorman. The accident occurred at the Adams farm, a short distance toward Quincy from the double track. Faulty signals are said to have been the cause of the collision.

Those injured were:

Samuel Pitts, motorman of Main street, cut and contusions of the right thigh.

Mrs. Thomas Monahan, 771 Sea street, bruises and nervous shock.

Miss Etta Appleton, 771 Sea street, bruises and nervous shock.

Mrs. Mary L. Hudson, wife of constable William Hudson of Houghs Neck, two teeth broken and muscles of the leg strained.

The cars in collision were one leaving City Square at 4.25 in charge of motorman W. J. McDonald and conductor Edward Sullivan, and the car from Houghs Neck at 4.15, in charge of motorman Samuel Pitts and conductor Patrick Cavin.

Pitts, the motorman of the Quincy bound car saw that a collision was imminent as he rounded the bend hidden by the trees, and while trying to bring his car to a stop he was caught in the crash. He was treated by Dr. C. W. Garey and taken to his home. The other passengers were treated by Dr. Fred E. Jones.

The Quincy bound car, No. 3573 with 10 seats received the brunt of the collision. The dasher was smashed and the front end chopped while the centre of the car buckled up. The car was also derailed. On this car 17 fares had been rung in while on the down car there were just 40.

Both crews claim that the signals were set for them to proceed.

Supt. Gammons, personally assisted in getting the car back on the track, and then it was pushed as far as the Post Island road by the other car, returning on the other track.

Supt. Conway was early on the scene and the signal baxes were tested. Again Sunday afternoon they were tested.

All those known to be injured are doing well today and none are serious.

SPONSOR FOR THE NEVADA

Ten Year Old Reno Miss to Give Name to New Battleship

A dispatch from Washington announces that Eleanor Anne Sigbert, the ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sigbert, and niece of Gov. Oddie of Nevada, and a resident of Reno, has been selected as sponsor for the battleship Nevada now building at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy.

It is expected that the Nevada will be launched in October. Her father who is the expert mining engineer for George Wingfield the millionaire and her mother, the sister of Gov. Oddie, as well as the Governor himself and family and a prominent party of Nevada people will also attend the ceremony. They will present a silver service to the battleship.

TO WELCOME COL. KINCAIDE

Col. Henry L. Kincaide will be given a welcome home by the Home Furnishers' Association of Massachusetts on Wednesday at their annual midsummer reunion at Paragon Park, Nantasket. The committee has laid out an elaborate program the chief feature will be the welcome home to Col. Kincaide, a former president of the association. Col. Kincaide will also tell the furniture men of the conditions and features that he found during the tour to South America.

Encampment Odd Fellows Field Day

Great Sport At Park

Rockland Encampment of Rockland were the guests of Manet Encampment of Quincy at a field day Saturday afternoon at Merrymount park. The Rockland Patriarchs arrived in Quincy on a special car soon after noon, and immediately went to the park where the members of Manet Encampment were ready to reecive them. The Park Commissioners having in mind the safety of passers on Hancock street assigned the Patriarchs the use of the lower field for their ball game, so that in case of any great hits the ball would not endanger the life of any citizens who might happen to be about.

Of course the ball game was the main feature of the afternoon and the ball twirlers of both encampments were in fine trim. George Doutty of Rockland and Edward L. Goodridge of Quincy were selected after some difficulty as umpires of the great game. They were the features of the game. That is, their decisions were. They were based on the utmost simplicity for as soon as one side had scored two runs, they stiffened their backs and

It is not necessary to know the difference between a check and a bank note before making a speech on the currency question.

A grammer school education, a set of dancing school bows, a knowledge of the turkey trot, and a dress suit, will get into very exclusive circles at the summer hotels.

Although persons of foresight might have known how hot the weather would be now, some people were so rash last spring as to start gardens.

If the aviators want to get the cattle show jobs away from the parachute jumpers, they must expect to take a tumble occasionally.

There is complaint that tips are not as lavish as they used to be. Pity the poor hotel keeper!

If Mr. Wilson wants to get a crowd at the railroad stations when he passes through, he will need to notify the local newspapers, giving his friends time enough to hire a band.

If the summer resort bell hop is dissatisfied with a 20 cent tip for bringing a postage stamp, you can conclude that your hotel has some of the elements of good form.

It is complained that the banks are slow to lend money on the growing crops. Perhaps they think if they lend their money they can't have the satisfaction of taking it out and looking at it.

The papers being full of heat prostrations, the young people think there is some satisfaction in showing that they can go out and play six or seven sets of tennis in the hot sun.

Some of the farmers are using a vacum cleaner on their cows, but the farmer's boy takes the dust out of Dobbin with the whip.

Any of the grammar school boys can tell you how the league teams could win if it wasn't for their bonehead playing.

It is safe to say that when Judge Frank H. Rudkin of Spokane, Washington, is charging the jury at his record rate of 211 words per minute, the stenographer could not go to the window to listen to the hurdy-gurdy.

GLOBE CIRCLING RECORD.

If John Henry Mears had asked that trains and boats be held so he could reach the bedside of a sick wife or child, he would have been curtly reminded that the fixed movements of transportation cannot be upset for individual needs. But as he was making a sporting record, the most rigid time-table proved pliable and the most autocratic officials friendly.

Thus often the merest paper bauble counts above the most substantial goods of life, if it stands for the qualities of grit and resourcefulness to which the world gives its first admiration.

Travelling conditions have changed mightily in the 40 years from Phileas Fogg, in Verne's whimsical yarn "Around the World in 80 Days." Verne's pictures of American railroading in those days, while highly colored, were not wholly imaginative. In Nevada, Fogg's train was held up three hours while a herd of 10,000 buffaloes crossed the track. While passing the Rockies, progress was blocked by a dangerous bridge. When the passengers learned that there were from 50 to 80 chances of getting across alive, they unanimously voted to try it. A lurid conception of American rashness, though the modern death toll on our railroads gives it a touch of realism.

The reduction of the earth circling record from 72 days in the time of Nellie Bly in 1890, to Mears' notch of 35 days, is of course mostly due to the Trans-Siberian railway. The fabulous wealth of this silent land of silver, copper, lead, fur and cattle is a reserve of resources on which the rapidly filling states of our union must some day draw. Mears' timetable of today will be the common place of the business man of some other generation.

REPUTATION AT STAKE

Clergyman Calls Attention to A Growing Evil

Editor Quincy Ledger:

There is an evil in this city among others which seems to be a growing one. I do not know that the public press has paid much attention to it. We are not finding fault with the press for not doing so. It seems to me that it is the duty of those interested in matters of civic, social and moral reform, to keep the press informed relative to growing evils. There are doubtless many evil in the growing city of Quincy which are not always referred to in the press because of the lack of definite information, and sometimes it is a delicate matter to approach in some of its aspects.

The evil to which your correspondent refers is one which in my opinion ought to be brought to the attention of the public, so that some remedy may be applied to lesson it. One of the things, among others, which all good citizens are interested in is the purity of the girls and young women of our city.

We have in our city probably as many excellent young ladies of the very highest reputation for moral excellence as can be found in any other city of the same population in any part of New England. These are found in the families of the poor as well as among the wealthy. Some of the very best of our young women come from the homes of parents of moderate means.

But the class to whom I refer are not among those mentioned above. They may come in some instances from good homes, but the parents have evidently lost control of some of them if they do. They are of the class who are frequently seen between 10 and 12 o'clock at nights alone with young men of shady reputation in public places on certain streets. Judging from their looks some of these girls do not seem to be more than 15 or 16 years of age.

One of the streets that has of late years been frequented by these young men and women is Granite street and that particular portion of it between Parker street and Whitwell street. Your correspondent in company with his wife was passing along that portion of Granite street, one night this week and saw a young woman sitting on the stone wall at the corner of Parker and Granite streets where the wall is low, with her arms around a young man, and he was lying across her lap face upward.

This was between 10 and 11 o'clock at night. No one was near them excepting my wife and myself at the time. How long they had been there, I do not know. This is only one of many scenes of a similar kind that may be seen almost any night of the week between the hours of 10 and 12 o'clock in that portion of the city of Quincy.

It is needless to say that no young woman who has the slightest respect for her reputation would be seen on the street at that hour of the night with any young man, embracing him as she was, and no young man of any reputation, and with the slightest respect for a young woman, would be seen with her in that position on a public street at that hour of the night, or at any other time.

I am informed that what takes place in this part of the city as such hours of the night is also prevalent in other parts of the city. Is not this a note of warning to many mothers of the city, who may have reason to fear the kind of company their daughters may be keeping at nights when away from them. Mothers cannot be too careful in keeping guard over daughters whom they have reason to believe are easily led into temptation.

Young girls who make a habit of remaining out at nights with young men after 10 o'clock and loitering about dark places in public streets ought to be reminded that they are being watched by the public, and are in grave danger of being reported either to their parents, or to the police.

A. M. Thompson.

SLIGHT FIRE.

The alarm from Box 52 at 7.30 Sunday morning was for a slight fire in the pantry of a house at 248 Farrington street occupied by John Hill. The fire probably started by someone stepping on matches. There was some soiled clothing on the floor which was burned and the walls of the pantry were scorched. The loss will not exceed $25.

OUR POST OFFICES.

People traveling abroad this season find their mails from one to three days longer in transmission to and fro than in previous years; longer even than as far back as 1900, before the days of the Mauretania, the Adriatic and other fast boats. They are inclined to attribute this to "longer routes" taken by the ships in crossing the ocean, and to lessened speed. Neither of these surmises is correct because the lanes of travel today are no longer than 10 years ago and the steamers average faster passages. Across the water, they declare that they have not changed methods, and claim that, if anything, they have expedited forwarding of mails. They still deliver mails at one's hotel or pension as early as 7 A. M. and as late as 9 P. M., and also on Sunday mornings before breakfast.

Is the fault with our post offices? It is said that the greatest trouble in this country is in the section served by the Boston post office and is not only foreign but home mail. The New Bedford papers say that they can not get Boston mails, posted in the late afternoon, delivered that night. There have been repeated instances in Salem where mails have been delayed in the Boston office. One prominent citizen who corresponds with friends weekly, says they now mail a letter 24 hours earlier than formerly to catch the same mail boat from New York and often fail to get it at that. On several occasions last spring mails arriving in New York harbor in the early evening of Friday did not reach Salem parties until Monday morning. The explanation given was that no mails were handled in Boston from midnight Saturday until midnight Sunday. Careful examination of post marks of several foreign letters and inquiry of writers on both sides does lead to the impression that the delays both ways are on this side.

In the House of Representatives in connection with the parcels post legislation, the department was critised for its work. Many attribute much of the delay of letters and papers to the parcels business but the fault existed before the days of parcel post.

It is just possible that the post office is too busy with reforming the wickedness of the world to attend to legitimate business? Postmaster Hitchcock spent most of his time as a Puritan missionary. First, he directed that the Sabbath should not be broken by handling mails. Then he directed that the people should not have mail delivered to them at the general delivery window until they had undergone an inquistorial process as to who they were, how old, what their business was and why they wanted mail to come to the general delivery window. All because somebody in Boston said that a few young men and women were corresponding through the post office Now they correspond through secret addresses just the same. The post office department has undertaken the savings bank business and various other reforms, all of which are good in their way, but really should not the delivery of letters and papers receive a little more attention?—Salem News.

No, they exhaust their efforts in promoting war scares, because that means more battleships to build.—Salem News.

GOVERNOR LIND IN MEXICO

President Wilson's Special Envoy on Way to Capital

NO DEMONSTRATION IS MADE

Goes to Mexico City to Be "Eyes and Ears" of American Government and to Explain Attitude of Administration—Huerta Regime Will Not Be Recognized by United States

Vera Cruz, Mex., Aug. 11.—Ex-Governor Lind of Minnesota, the personal representative of the President of the United States and counselor of the American embassy at Mexico City has landed on Mexican soil. When he will leave for the capital has not yet been determined.

Both the ex-Governor and Mrs. Lind were a bit tired and he made no haste to rush into the stronghold of Provisional President Huerta, although the delay in doing so will be but a day or two at the most.

The people of Vera Cruz gave no intimation of any desire to indulge in a demonstration of disapproval of Lind's coming. His landing was witnessed by only a small group made up of the more patient of the curious persons who had watched from piers the battleship New Hampshire, on which he made the trip from Galveston, since the vessel anchored shortly after noon.

A message from the state department at Washington was handed to Lind as soon as the New Hampshire anchored and with Dr. William Hale, who is also in Mexico as a personal representative of President Wilson, he went over it carefully. Both appeared to be impressed with its contents, but they were non-committal as to its character.

La Union, a local newspaper, in its afternoon edition, urged all citizens to abstain from disorder and not to listen to agitators, declaring that those taking part in manifestations were not patriots, since such action might easily compromise the Mexican government. The paper suggested that all wait until they might be called upon by the government of Provisional President Huerta to participate in a foreign war, in which case all should be disposed to shed their last drop of blood in the defense of their country.

Unless instructions to the contrary are received from the capital Lind will proceed to Mexico City without hindrance. Dr. Hale will accompany him there.

Dr. Hale has been in Mexico for two months as the personal representative of President Wilson, but he has never admitted his Washington connection, which may explain why the Mexican government has not interferred with his actions. Dr. Hale's trip to Vera Cruz was made solely to meet Mr. Lind.

Two hours of conference between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and the senate foreign relations committee brought about no change in the attitude of the administration toward Mexico.

That John Lind, his special envoy to Mexico City, does not bear any solution of the present situation, but goes to continue this government's effort to induce Provisional President Huerta to redeem his promises for free and constitutional elections.

That under no circumstances does the administration propose to recognize the Huerta government.

That Lind has gone to Mexico City to be the "eyes and ears" of the Washington administration on the ground, and to explain the attitude of this government when he has become fully familiar with the situation.

That by withdrawing Ambassador Wilson and sending Lind, the president planned to have a man on the ground who was in sympathy with the administration here and was in no sense a factor in the situation in Mexico City.

ROUGH WORK BY POLICE

Mounted Officers In London Ride Down Women

SUFFRAGETTES ARE CLUBBED

Third Attempt to Attack Premier Asquith's Home Results In Battle Between Guardians of Law and Female Trouble Makers Who Are Aided by Dock Laborers and Others

London, Aug. 11.—The third attempt of the suffragettes under Sylvia Pankhurst to take Premier Asquith's house in Downing street by storm, failed when the militant leader was captured by a cordon of police thrown across Whitehall, after a stiff fight in which the police used their clubs and mounted officers rode down women and children without discrimination.

The trouble began after a mass meeting held under the auspices of the free speech defence committee which was called to demand the conditional release of George Lansbury, former Socialist member of the house of commons, who was sentenced July 29 to three months' imprisonment for making inflammatory speeches, but who was released Aug. 2 under the "cat and mouse" act while on a hunger strike.

Miss Pankhurst had refused an invitation to make a speech at this meeting when informed that she would not be permitted to urge her hearers to march upon Downing street. The free speech speakers advised the crowd not to attack the premier's residence, but at the close of their meeting Miss Pankhurst, true to her promise made last week, mounted the plinth of the Nelson column and in fiery words ordered her sympathizers to follow her.

Hatless, her hair bound close to her head, the young militant leader started down Whitehall surrounded by several women carrying the Women's Social and Political union flag surmounted by a red liberty cap and preceded by a flying wedge of dock men and other husky East Enders.

The squads of police in Trafalgar square allowed the procession to leave the square, and then fell in behind. The suffragette sympathizers saw the reason for this strategical move when they found a battle line of heavy policemen drawn across Whitehall at the Horse Guards, the office of the inspector general of the forces.

The militants attacked this line with such dash and courage that a few of them penetrated the first cordon, where the fight became so fierce that the police used their clubs. Reserves of police then rushed up and Sylvia Pankhurst and five other women and nine men were arrested and taken to the police station in taxicabs.

The police, blaming the suffragettes for many months of enforced Sunday work, cleared the streets with unusual roughness, mounted officers riding down women and children without discrimination. One of the suffragettes, a Miss Cook, who carried a suffrage banner during the fight, said that Miss Pankhurst was badly injured during the melee.

The morning service at Westminster abbey was interrupted by twenty suffragettes, who repeated the scene enacted in St. Paul's cathedral last Sunday by chanting:

"Save Emmeline Pankhurst."

They were ejected with but slight disorder.

KILLED BY TRAIN

Unidentified Man Struck by Fast Freight In Maine

Freeport, Me., Aug. 11.—An unidentified man was struck by a fast freight train on the Maine Central about half a mile from this city. He was picked up and rushed to a hospital, but upon examination the doctors stated that death had been practically instantaneous.

From a diary found in his clothing, which was written entirely in French, the coroner was able to get only the information that the man was evidently a foreman in some lumber camp in this vicinity. There was nothing to give any clue as to his identity.

He was about 30 years old, 5 feet 6 inches in height, and wore a dark blue suit with a pencil stripe.

Cloak Makers Vote to Strike

St. Louis, Aug. 11.—More than 90 percent of the members of the Cloak and Suit Makers' union here have voted in favor of a general strike. No definite steps toward calling the strike will be taken for at least a week, during which an attempt will be made to reach an agreement with thirty employing firms.

ACCIDENTS AT BRAINTREE

Automobiles Figured In Four On Saturday

An automobile carrying four passengers and owned and operated by Lloyd Mosher of East Braintree collided with the sand car of the Bay State street railway, opposite Thayer Academy, Braintree, Saturday evening. No one was injured. The front wheel of the auto was taken off and the front axle was sprung. The machine was removed to a garage.

A Newfoundland dog owned by Thomas Burke of Braintree, weighing 168 pounds and said to have been the largest animal on the South Shore, was struck and instantly killed by an automobile travelling at terrific speed in Braintree Saturday evening. Although the new auto law requires that parties stop under such conditions the machine proceeded on its way. Witnesses took the number and furnished it to the police authorities. Arrests will probably follow.

William Gallivan, the 6 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gallivan of Central avenue, Braintree, was knocked down by an automobile on Washington street, Braintree, Saturday afternoon and received a fracture of a rib on the right side and his right leg was bruised and cut. He was removed to his home and attended by Dr. C. A. Sullivan. The automobile is owned by William O'Brien of Randolph who was operating it at the time Mr. O'Brien took the boy to the office of Dr. Sullivan.

An automobile owned and operated by John L. Sheppard of Dyer Hill, Braintree, was in collision Saturday afternoon at Braintree with a motorcycle owned and operated by James McGlone of Sunnyside Park. On the motorcycle with McGlone was Charles Evans. The collision occurred on what is known as Damon's corner, the two machines coming together with a crash that could be heard a long distance. The two men on the motorcycle were hurled from the machine and the machine badly wrecked. The automobile sustained a sprung axle, bent radiator and lights broken. The two injured men were taken to the home of Mr. Evans brother, J. P. Evans, and were attended by Dr. F. H. Merriam and Dr. C. A. Sullivan. McGlone's right leg was badly cut and he sustained multiple cuts on the neck and head. He was also badly bruised and dazed from the shock. Evans was also badly shaken up but Mr. Sheppard the occupant of the automobile was unhurt.

Nearly 10,000 incandesent lamps are required to illuminate the world's largest steamship, the Imperator.

NEARLY 2200 WERE COUNTED

Quincy Visited by a Large Number of Autoists

Quincy was again a center of Sunday automobile traffic, but a few of the resident owners made long trips. Between the hours of 9 A. M. and 8 P. M. 2183 machines of all descriptions passed the home of Napoleon B. Furnald, Esq., on Washington street, an average of 200 per hour. Mr. Furnald who is in his 84th year sits on his veranda an dclicked off the machines on a checker. It is noticeable that more out of state machines are passing through here than ever. Register numbers from all over the country, even the state of Washington, have been seen on Quincy streets. The historic points of the city are the destinations of many of the tourists.

A few weeks back the number of Quincyites on long trips were numerous and beyond doubt the record still continues but no reports have been submitted to this office as yet. The possibilities are that on the return an attractive story of a pleasant outing will be furnished by the pioneers.

Among those who spent Saturday and Sunday on an outing were Dr. George M. Sheahan and party who went to Provincetown on Saturday and returned on Sunday evening in a Reo machine.

Word has been received from Joseph L. Whiton at Pittsfield. Mr. Whiton and family are making for New York in their Kissell six. A long circuit takes them finally to Portland, Me., from where the start for home will be made.

Arthur P. Russell and family are booked to reach Quebec today, from which point they will go to their summer camp. Mr. Russell who is a well known attorney is piloted by Frank Dorley, better known in automobile circles as "little Jeff." Last season he established a new road record and it is probable that he has beaten it this year.

E. C. Snowden of Wollaston, left Saturday with a party of four in his Rambler for a 10 days trip, taking in Niagara Falls.

Eugene F. DeNormandie and party are on their way to the Bershires in a Buick car.

SPECIAL OF COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the City Council will be held tonight, but the meeting should be a short one unless the Councilmen should get into a wrangle over the granting of licenses to collect junk.

Under the rules of the Council, applications for licenses to collect junk cannot be received after the first Mondap in April and the only way to consider these applications is by suspension of the rules, and it takes a two thirds vote to suspend.

The other matters are such as to require no discussion. As President Whiton is out of town it will be up to Councilman Gauthier to call the meeting to order when a president pro tem will be elected.

NO HITS, NO RUNS.

The Braintree A. A. blanked Clapp Memorial, 5 to 0 at Braintree on Saturday. Carson, the former Milton High school mound artist pitched a no-hit, no-run game. He was ably supported by his team mates, among whom was Paul Mulligan of West Quincy who secured four putouts in centre field, three of them being sensational. The Quincy men playing with the winners were Cane, Pittipit and Sid Duggan and with the losers were Artis, Hoyt and Jenkins.

RAIVAAJA DAY.

Under the auspices of the Finnish Workingmen's Association, "Veli" of Quincy, nearly 200 men, women and children gathered at Faxon park Sunday to celebrate Raivaaja's Day, in honor of the founding of the Finnish paper of that name, which is the only Finnish daily in the eastern states. Music was furnished by the Finnish National band of Quincy, and speeches were delivered by Wilho Boman, in Finnish, and in English by A. S. Edwards. Refreshments were served.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG IN FOLLOWING ADVERTISEMENTS.

HOSE COMPANY REUNION

There were several others who would have responded if called upon, but it was noticed that some of the party were getting uneasy, and as the president said that there was some unfinished business to be completed he would only say "Limber up" which they did.

Score Eight Runs Before Visitors Get Started

The Oriens handliy defeated the West Everett Athletics on the Ward Three playground Saturday afternoon, 9 to 2, before a large number of the Orients followers.

The weakness of the visiting battery and the eagle eye of the local batsmen were mainly responsible for the victory. Three doubles by Markham, Brown and Melvin figured at different periods, Cremins was robbed of a pretty one by Higgins who made the sensational catch of the game. The ball was taken on the run about a foot from the ground after some distance ad been covered.

Aside from hitting, the Orients secured their share of stolen bases. Many of them took wild chances and were able to steal or return safely at he first sign of danger.

The game lacked much of the pitching display which has marked most of the games this season. Bradley fanned only five mean against eight for Patterson. The former passed one and the latter two. The strikeout total has been much greater in Bradley's games this season.

The visiting outfield seemed to possess a vim and spirit that was immitable. Well placed singles were scooped after streuous efforts, all putouts being registered at first. The Orients played an errorless game and the Athletics were not able to score more than two runs, these crossing in the sixth innings when the Orients rested up.

The score by innings:

| | |
|---|---|

Two Base Hits—Markham, Brown, Melvin. Stolen Bases—Markham 2, Bradley, Brown ,Anderson, Cremins, R. Mitchell 2, Melvin, Cashiese, Higgins Base on Balls—By Bradley 1, by Patterson 2.

Struck Out—By Bradley 5: By Patterson 8.

Sacrifice Hits—Bradley, Higgins.

Double Plays—Brown to Markham to Mattson.

Umpire Smith. Time—1 hour, 50 minutes.

BIG GOLF FIELD.

A field of 128 golfers took part in the open amateur tournament of the Wollaston Golf club Saturday. Of this number 79 turned in cards, Arthur G. Lockwood of Belmont Springs club was awarded the prize for the best score of the day beating G. H. Hoyt by one stroke. Twelve golfers had cards under eighty and R. J. Dunkle of the Wollaston club with a handicap of 15 strokes captured the trophy for the best net. He was two strokes better than his clubmate D. H. Goodspeed.

PFAFFMANN IN SEMI FINALS.

Jack Pfaffmann and H. A. Lawton of the Quincy Tennis club took part in the annual tournament for the championship of Worcester county at Worcester on Saturday. The matches in singles went through the second round, and the semi-finals and finals will be played this week. In the first round Pfaffmann beat E. R. Goodwin of Worcester 6-0, 6-2 and in the second round he beat C. S. Anderson of Worcester, 6-0, 6-0. Lawton was out of it after the first round having been beaten by A. Ingraham of Providence, 6-2, 8-6.

WARD TWO BASE-BALL.

Three teams are now tied for first place with 3 games won and 2 lost. The Senators received a good drubbing this morning administered by the Naps, which team by the way is the only one to defeat the Senators.

The standing to date:

| | |
|---|---|
| Senators | 600 |
| Red Sox | 600 |
| Naps | 600 |
| Athletics | 200 |

SHUT OUT AT BRAINTREE.

The Braintree White Sox shut out the Fore River Apprentices on French's Common, Braintree, Saturday afternoon. Mack, the winning pitcher fanned 11 men, allowed but two hits and his team mates made but two errors. Walter Williams was cracked for nine hits and his players made four errors. The score:

| | |
|---|---|
| Fore Rivers | 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0 |

MODEL OF UNSINKABLE SHIP SHOWN IN WALES.

Water Tight Belting the Secret of Craft's Remarkable Buoyancy.

Remarkable experiments with the model of an unsinkable ship are described in a letter to the London Times by John Rees, harbor superintendent at Llanelly, Wales. The model, four feet in length, nine inches wide and scaled to represent a steamboat 410 feet long and 72 wide, drawing 21 feet, was loaded through five hatchways with copper ore down to the Plimsoll mark, and Mr. Rees was invited to do what he liked with it.

He tilted the vessel sidewise until water filled the whole interior to the deck level; then he let go. She immediately righted herself and floated easily and buoyantly, with the deck just above the water level.

Mr. Rees pressed her well down under the water and then let go. She immediately bobbed up to the surface and floated exactly as before. With her whole cargo shifted and still full of water, she had a corresponding list, but still three-quarters of her deck was well out of water.

This floating power is obtained by such a plan of construction as to allow water tight belting being built outward and downward from the deck level. It is absorbed in the ship's form, does not extend to the water level and, following the lines of the ship, is roughly triangular in section. There is thus apparently no interference with speed, so far as water contact with the hull is concerned, nor does it interfere with cargo carrying, for the vessel to all intents and purposes is an ordinary sized and shaped one.

The inside belting being divided into water tight compartments, if any portion of it is injured owing to a collision there is only a loss of floating power corresponding to the section crushed in and rendered useless.

The inventor has been working on his idea for twenty years. He says that the added cost of construction to embody his idea is about 5 per cent.

MAKEUP STONE AT GRAVE.

One of the most remarkable gravestones on record has just been placed in the cemetery at Jefferson, O.

It stands at the head of the grave of J. A Howells, the veteran editor of the Ashtabula Sentinel, who died recently. It consists of the makeup stone used by Mr. Howells for fifty years, during his successive evolutions as printer's devil, printer, and editor. It is inscribed with these lines, written by William Dean Howells, a brother of the editor:

Stone, upon which with hands of boy and man
He framed the history of his time until
Week after week, the varying record ran
To its half centuried tale of well and ill.
Remember now how true through all those days
He was—friend, brother, husband, son—
Fill the whole limit of your space with praise.
There needs no room for blame—blame there was none.

The boyhood of William Dean Howells was spent in the office of the Sentinel. The father of William Dean Howells and J. A. Howells was editor of the paper.

Trees on Lighthouse Grounds.

The lighthouse service, so far as the great lakes are concerned, proposes to grow its own timber for the manufacture of spar buoys, piling and the other wood necessary to the service. Four forest service experts will investigate the reservations on which the lighthouses stand with a view to their forestation. Lighthouse reservations in the lumber states of Michigan and Wisconsin aggregate nearly 5,500 acres. On these reservations white and Norway pine and cedar will be planted.

BURGLARS GET JEWELS AT KENNEBUNKPORT

Maine Summer Colony Aroused Over Robbery

Kennebunkport, Me., Aug. 11.—A daring jewelry robbery was made at "Cro-nest," the summer home of Mrs. M. H. Forrest, a wealthy widow of Philadelphia. Diamonds valued at over $9000 were obtained by the thieves, who left no clue to their identity.

Coming so close upon the disappearance of jewels valued at approximately $300,000 from Narragansett pier, the police are of the opinion that a gang of expert crooks are doing business in New England.

The robbery occured about 3 o'clock in the morning, and entrance was obtained by forcing a cellar bulkhead. One of the servants was awakened by steps, but as there are numerous guests at the cottage, nothing was thought of the matter at the time.

Entering the room where Mrs. Forrest was sleeping, the intruders ransacked her bureau and dressing table, and also her writing desk without disturbing her. Apparently jewelry that did not contain diamonds was not wanted, as several valuable gold watches and other articles were left behind.

MINES TO REOPEN

Calumet Copper Officials Say They Have Men Enough

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 11.—Officials of the Calumet and Hecla Mining company announce that enough of the men who have been on strike had agreed to return to enable the company to resume operations in at least two branches.

The Western Federation of Miners officials, who have been in charge of the strike, asserted that not enough men would return to bring about anything like normal conditions. They said the ranks of the strikers were remaining firm and that the trammers, who push the cars in the mines, are standing with the federation to a man.

The artillery of the Michigan state troops, here since the strike of copper miners began, will be the first to leave the strike zone.

OPERATION NECESSARY

Feared Mrs. William Laimbeer Will Be Cripple For Life

Long Beach, L. I., Aug. 11.—An X-ray examination of Mrs. William Laimbeer who was hurt in the collision that killed S. Osgood Pell, his chauffeur and Mr. Laimbeer, disclosed a wound that will necessitate an operation later. It is feared that the operation may leave Mrs. Laimbeer a cripple.

At present her condition is generally favorable. Fever is intermittent but she rests comfortably at the Hotel Nassua, from which it has not been possible to move her.

Drowns While in Swimming

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 11.—Frank Dabut, a mill worker, was drowned in Wamsutta pond. The man is believed to have been overcome with cramps. His body has been recovered.

Escaped Leper Surrenders

St. Louis, Aug. 11.—George O. Hartman, the leper who escaped from the isolation cottage near here, surrendered at the city dispensary. He was taken at once to the quarantine station from which he escaped.

TROPHIES FOR QUINCY BOATS

Meemer, Wanderer, Maritiza and Dartwell Winners

As a result of the week's racing at Marblehead, Quincy boats won several of the series trophies. The Quincy winners were as follows: Class A, Meemer; Class H, Wanderer; Class S, Maritza; Class D. Dartwell.

The race of Saturday, while not having as many starters as some of the other days was a good race. In class A the Meemer again won out and the Maritza in class S. In the Sonder class the Sprig was the winner with the Harpoon finishing in third position In class D there was the usual interest as in the race of Saturday. The Dartwell was the winner, having won out by over three minutes over the Iris, the second boat in. The Clara finished third, the Mudjekeewiss fourth and Grayling fifth. This week at Marblehead will be trial races to select the three boats that will meet the Germans.

Electro-magnets are being installed by treasure hunting ships to recover submerged metals.

LOOK HERE FOR IT

Many a Quincy Reader Will be Interested.

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, is it surprising that they onder if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter. Read Quincy endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills.

G. E. Mitchell, prop. restaurant, 26-27 Temple street, Quincy, Mass., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and disordered them. I didn't seem able to overcome the trouble until I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I improved at once and since then haven't needed a kidney medicine. I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable remedy for the back and kidneys."

If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Mitchell had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Emigrants

A Story For Labor Day

By EVELYN C. GOODRICH

In what is called the Black forest in Germany lived a poor couple, Jacob Gaatz and his wife, who had but one child, a daughter, Gretchen, who was the main comfort of her parents. She and Hans Dreckel, the son of a blacksmith, were brought up together, each being the other's only companion, for the region in which they lived was sparsely settled, and no other family lived near them.

Jacob Gaatz was a woodcutter. When Gretchen was nineteen years old there came a great commotion in the family. Hans Dreckel one day met Gretchen on the road carrying a bundle of fagots and said to her:

"Gretchen, I have come to an important decision. I am young and strong and am not satisfied to remain here in the forest, where there is nothing for a man to do but cut wood. One can earn only money enough by so doing to keep body and soul together, for if we ask a better price our employers say to us: 'There are plenty of men who would like the work at the same price. If you are not satisfied we will employ others in your place.' I shall go where there are labor unions, and, since I hear that there are better prices paid in the United States of America, I shall go there."

Hans kept his eyes on Gretchen while he was speaking and saw hers gradually fall till they rested on the ground and were wet with tears. Till this moment Hans had never thought of Gretchen other than as a playmate and, after they were grown, as a friend. But now, when he saw the tears gather in her eyes because he was to leave her, a new sensation was born in his heart, a tenderness for the maiden with whom he had been reared, and, taking her in his arms, he kissed away her tears.

When Gretchen reached her home and threw the fagots beside the fireplace she sat down in a chair and covered her face with her hands. Her mother, who was washing the breakfast dishes, paused and said:

"What is the matter, Gretchen?"

It was a long while before the mother could draw from her daughter that Hans was going to that far country, America. But Gretchen did not tell her what was of far more importance to all of them—that he had asked her to go with him as his wife. It was hard for the poor girl to lose her companion and, since the announcement of his intended departure, her lover.

There would have been no cause for sorrow, but reason for rejoicing, if she could have yielded to his wish. This she could not do, for it would have been cruel for her to leave her old father and mother, who would now need her more and more every day. She only said that Hans was going to America, knowing that if her parents knew they were keeping her from going with him it would trouble them greatly.

When Hans found that Gretchen would not go with him he asked her to promise him that if her parents died she would come to him. But this was not much comfort to him, for on that condition his sweetheart was not likely to join him for many years. And, as for Gretchen, it meant that she must lose her parents in order to join her lover.

The day Hans departed he said to Gretchen: "You know that my father is old and cannot live long and my mother is not my own mother, but my stepmother. Father will never come to me in America, and when he dies mother will go to live with one of her own children. But there will be nothing to prevent your bringing your parents with you to my new home. They say money is made very easily there. A skilled laborer gets 12 marks a day. Out of that I can save 6 marks a day at least and can send this money to you so that you may all join me in"—

"Oh, Hans," exclaimed the girl, "you are so good, so hopeful, but you must learn to do something that will enable you to earn so much money, and in those countries where high wages are paid they say it costs more to live. But," she added, "I will come to you if I can ever do so without bringing sorrow to my dear father and mother."

Hans kissed her again and again, then strode away without once looking back, lest he should show the moisture in his eyes, which he considered unmanly.

* * * * * * *

Eight years passed, during which the lovers remained true to each other. In all this time there was never an interval of more than a month that Hans did not write to his sweetheart, and she always replied to his letter with her whole heart. Hans prospered and offered to send her money to bring over her parents, but she never even mentioned the matter to them. Nor did they know that they were keeping apart two young persons who but for them might be happy together and rearing a family of children. In all these eight years Gretchen never breathed a word to her parents of the sacrifice she was making for them.

One day when Jacob was cutting wood a fierce storm came up and blew a huge limb from a tree, burying him under it. He lived but a few days, when his wife and daughter found themselves without even the support of an aged woodcutter. Gretchen at once wrote to Hans announcing her father's death and in a few weeks received a reply. Folded in the letter was a paper which ordered a bank to pay her 300 marks. Hans told her to use it as she liked, either for support of herself and her mother or to bring her mother to him in America, where he and Gretchen might be married and her mother could live with them.

Gretchen, who was a prudent girl, with great self control, thought over Hans' proposition for several days before coming to a decision. When she had made up her mind as to the only course to pursue that would be justice to Hans she confessed to her mother that when he had gone to America he had asked her to be his wife and she had refused to leave her parents.

"I am too old to go so far, Gretchen," said the old woman, "but I will not longer be a burden to you. Go to Hans. I will remain here."

It was a long time before Gretchen could persuade her that such a course was impracticable and that her mother could only repay the sacrifice that she and Hans had made by giving her consent to go to America. Hans had learned the mason's trade and was getting 12 marks a day for his work. But recently he had set up as master mason and employed men to work for him.

When the old mother became convinced that it was her duty to make the trip she consented, and the two sailed for America in the steerage of an ocean liner. They arrived at the port of New York in due time and expected to find Hans there to meet them. In this they were disappointed, but he had been there and had made arrangements for them to be admitted into the country by the emigrant authorities, pledging himself to take care of them, so that they should not be a burden on the people. He also left instructions for them to come to him in a neighboring city, with tickets on the railroad to take them there.

When Gretchen and her mother reached their final destination they learned the reason of his not having met them on the arrival of the steamer. A strike had been declared by a certain trade union, and other trades had been gradually drawn into the struggle between capital and labor, including the masons. Hans had great influence with the men of his trade and was exerting himself to persuade them to keep the peace, assuring them that by doing so they would certainly win every just demand.

On arriving at the city where Hans lived they carried all their bundles except one box, which, being too heavy for them, they left to be brought later to the address that had been given them. Hans had expected them to hire a conveyance, but the frugal life they had led had not prepared them for such extravagance. So they walked, Gretchen inquiring the way, and passed through a street that was filled with workmen. On a wagon a man was standing speaking to a crowd of laborers who had gathered about him. They stopped to listen to him, but could not understand him since he spoke in the English language. But they could see by the upturned, intent faces that he was producing a profound effect upon them.

"Let us go on," said the mother. But Gretchen seemed disposed to listen to the man, though she did not know what he was saying. In vain her mother tugged at her to get her to go on, but in spite of the urging she remained. It was only when the man ceased to speak and, getting down from the wagon, was lost in the crowd that Gretchen consented to pursue their way.

When they reached the house where Hans lived they found a suit of rooms on the second floor comfortably fitted up. They were received by a woman whom Hans had deputed for the purpose, who told them that Hans was very busy and they must make themselves at home till he came.

After awhile they heard a cheering in the street which seemed to be approaching the house and growing as it came nearer. Then there were shouts of "We've won! We've won!" The crowd stopped before the house where the two emigrants were, and a man stood on the steps for a few minutes, cheered by the crowd. Then he hurried up the stairs and burst into the room. He and Gretchen flew to each other's arms.

Gretchen had recognized Hans the moment she laid eyes on him, though he was but little more than a youth when they parted and he was now a man and very much changed. Their meeting was a happy one in many respects. In the first place, the winning of the strike was a great advantage to Hans, who had feared enforced idleness, whereas now that it was settled he could proceed with work he had contracted for. Gretchen and her mother had completed a journey both dreaded, and their future comfort was assured.

There was no reason for haste or delay in the wedding, so Gretchen was called on to fix the day, and, inasmuch as she had no trousseau to prepare, she chose an early date, since Hans desired that they should all get settled down to their new life and he give his mind to his work. The bride and her mother had no friends in their newly adopted country, but the groom had a-plenty. A number of bridal presents from them came in, some of them from well to do persons for whom Hans had constructed buildings, and they were quite valuable.

Hans is prospering and is considered one of the most reliable men in labor matters, he being always consulted before any important action is taken.

WOMAN INFERIOR SINCE BEGINNING

So Says Professor Frederick Starr of Chicago University.

MAN OF TODAY STAGNANT.

Noted Anthropologist Points Out That No Member of Fair Sex Was Ever Great Musician, Painter or Scientist. Dr. Cornelia B. Debey, Prominent Woman Physician, Makes Reply.

"Woman has been an inferior creature ever since the human race was developed, and she must always remain so. The presence of large numbers of women in occupations hitherto monopolized by man is unnatural and indicates racial decline or at least racial stagnation. This is an unprogressive age, and on this ground alone can be explained the relative success of woman in competition with man."

That is the opinion just voiced by Professor Frederick Starr, who holds the chair of anthropology in the university of Chicago.

Continuing, the educator said:

"The race is at a standstill. We are not making progress in really important fields. We are inventing automobiles and aeroplanes, it is true, and are worshipers of machinery and system.

"But that does not count for the true advancement of civilization. Man is stagnant. The male has dropped out of the struggle and until he enters it again we shall make no serious advance.

Unequal by Nature.

"Woman by nature is unequal to man in the development of those qualities which make for human progress. She never has distinguished herself by important discoveries in any line of science.

"As compared with man there never was a great woman painter, sculptor, musician, architect or scientist. She has never invented anything of benefit to the race.

"The elements of sex superiority were fixed back in the vegetable kingdom, and she cannot overcome them. She is conspicuous in affairs now only because she is playing an inevitable part in a great race experiment in which the activities of man have been temporarily abridged.

"As soon as man resumes his normal stride woman will drop back immediately to the natural position of inferiority which the female has held through all the centuries that life has existed in the earth."

Evolution Slow But Sure.

Dr. Cornelia B. Debey, a noted woman physician, upon being told of the professor's sentiments said:

"In a general way he is correct, but in one great particular he is wrong. Woman is evolving slowly and when she is of full stature she will be ready for larger action.

"Man to date has had abundant evidence of his own superiority, but the great issues of life, the human issues—the problems of existence and adjustment, the spiritual problems—will be solved by woman. The male still belongs to the crust of things.

"The great, large, 'eternal womanly,' as Goethe calls it, is the human species that will solve the great differences of humanity. The very slowness of woman's evolution gives promise of larger fulfillments. This gentleman has misread the scientific evidence. He has taken the superficial and left the profound.

"After all, the woman is the mother of the babe, and a baby is a greater poem than Shakespeare ever wrote, a greater creative evidence than man ever demonstrated."

FACTORIES SUPPLANT FARM.

American Exports Changing From Foodstuffs to Manufactures.

How the United States is changing from a great exporter in foodstuffs to manufactures is shown in every report issued nowadays by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce at Washington. The bureau's latest figures show a growth in exports of manufactures from $468,000,000 in 1903 to $1,200,000,000 in the fiscal year just closed and in manufacturers' materials from $409,000,000 to $740,000,000, while the exports of foodstuffs remained at a standstill. $510,000,000 having been the value of the exports in that line both in 1913 and in 1903.

Fresh beef exports have fallen from 225,000,000 pounds in 1903 to only 7,000,000 this last year; beef cattle from $30,000,00 a decade ago to $1,000,000 in 1913 and canned beef from 76,000,000 pounds to 7,000,000. On the other hand, iron and steel manufactures exported increased from $97,000,000 ten years ago to more than $300,000,000 this year and copper manufactures from $40,000,000 to $140,000,000. Machinery increased from $51,000,000 to $130,000,000

Leaning Tower In Danger.

Dispatches from Pisa, Italy, say that arrangements have been made to strengthen the leaning tower, which is tipping more every year and is becoming dangerous. It has been decided to drain the foundations, into which water from the river Arno has penetrated. The base is to be widened and filled up to the level of the square.

BATHHOUSES BURNED

Firebug Destroys Buildings Where Eleven Boys Were Drowned

Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 11.—Fire believed to be of incendiary origin destroyed three of the municipal bathhouses, at one of which eleven boys were drowned a month ago by the collapse of a runaway.

Crazed with grief at the loss of their child, the police believe that some of the foreign-born parents fired the three structures in the Merrimac river, causing a loss to the city of upward of $1500

After the investigation following the drowning, the bathhouses were closed by order of the mayor. The two on the north side of the river, where the tragedy occurred, were towed to the south side and moored beside the third. For a month, they have been closed. Simultaneously, all three burst into flames and, before help could be summoned, had burned to the water's edge.

GREAT WIRELESS STATION

Darien Plant Will Be Most Powerful In the World

Washington, Aug. 11.—One of the greatest naval radio stations in the world, even eclipsing in size the new station at Arlington, Va., will be constructed by the United States at Calmito, in the canal zone. It will be known as the Darien radio station, and whereas only one of the Arlington towers reaches the height of 600 feet, all three of the towers at Darien will be of that height.

The Darien plant, it is expected, will be able to communicate with San Francisco as well as with Arlington, and to reach into the southern seas as far as Valdivia, Chile, 421 miles south of Valpraiso, on the west coast of South America, and as far as Buenos Ayres, Argentina, on the east side. Throwing its waves across the Atlantic, this new station should communicate with the island of St. Vincent, 500 miles west of Africa.

WOMAN IS CAPTIVE FOR THREE WEEKS

Kept In Locked Room and Beaten Every Day

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Mrs. Katherine Burke was released from a padlocked room in which she says she was held for three weeks by "Bull" Dwyer. She had answered an advertisement, thinking to make a little money while her husband was traveling in Canada, and when she entered the place at 530 Wells street, she claims Dwyer overpowered her and made her prisoner. She says he beat and choked her every day, when she resented his advances and her appearance bears out her story. Dwyer has been arrested several times on various charges.

While Dwyer was absent from the room, she managed to scrawl a message to the police, and dropped it out of a window to a pedler, who took it to the station. Two detectives were assigned to investigate.

When they arrived Dwyer had returned, and was about to administer the customary beating when they broke in. Dwyer fought them savagely, but was finally clubbed in submission, handcuffed and taken to the station, while his prisoner was taken to the station hospital and given medical attention.

MAN AND MONEY GONE

Lynn Woman Wants to Find Prospective Husband and $100

Lynn, Aug. 11.—Josie Borofsky of 19 Morris street appealed to the police to assist her in locating her prospective husband, Gustave Rochinski, of the same address, who has disappeared with $100 which the girl entrusted to him a week ago. Their marriage was set for next Sunday.

The girl told the police that Rochinski went away suddenly and left no message as to his destination. She gave him the money a week ago and it represented practically all of her savings. Rochinski is 26 years old and had assented to all of the arrangements for the wedding.

Bath Loses Handsome Estate

Bath, Me., Aug. 11.—"Longview," the residence of Mrs. Arameda Tarbox and of her daughter and son-in-law, Alderman and Mrs. Ernesta Allen, one of the most pretentious dwellings in Bath, was burned to the ground. The loss is $25,000.

No Flying Over Canal Zone

Washington, Aug. 11.—President Wilson signed an executive order prohibiting any aeronaut from flying over the canal zone without written authority from Washington, on penalty of $1000 fine and a year's imprisonment for each offence.

Supposed Suicide Found

Londonderry, N. H., Aug. 11.—E. Boyden, who disappeared from his home here four weeks ago after leaving a note that said he contemplated suicide, was located in Mansfield, Mass., where he is staying with a brother.

Switzerland Joins Peace Ranks

Washington, Aug. 11.—Switzerland has accepted in principle Secretary Bryan's peace proposal, making the twenty-seventh nation so recorded.

GENERAL JONES IN DYING CONDITION

Commanded Sixth Massachusetts In Civil War

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 11.—General Edward F. Jones, one of the few surviving leaders of the Civil war, commanding the sixth Massachusetts regiment, is dying at his home in this city. He suffered a celebral hemorrhage, lapsing at once into an unconscious condition from which he will never emerge, the physicians say.

General Jones was originator of the phrase "Jones of Binghamton, he pays the freight," which has brought wealth and fame to his great manufacturing plant here. The general was born June 3, 1828, at Utica.

IS TORTURE PEN

Maine Prison Inspector Says Institution is Barbaric

Bangor, Me., Aug. 11.—Declaring the Maine state prison at Thomaston to be a veritable torture pen and a horrible example of barbarism, Prison Inspector Matthew C. Morrill in an interview said the institution should be abolished at once. He recommended that a modern up-to-date building be erected in some central spot, with good railroad communication, and with ample farming lands surrounding it, so that men might be reformed in a humane and civilized manner, rather than be punished by slow torture, as at present is the case.

"My first thought on looking the prison over," said the inspector, "was that it must have been planned and built with the sole idea of punishing wrongdoers rather than with the idea of making them better citizens. Protection to society comes first, then the improvement of the convicts. If a new prison is built, the old one should remain as a horrible example of the tortures of barbarism."

FOURTEEN NEAR DEATH

Boston Man, on Vacation, Most Severely Hurt

Providence, R. I., Aug. 11.—Thomas Mayo, a Boston man just starting on his vacation, nearly lost his life when a float on the Pawtuxet-Crescent park ferry suddenly sank and plunged him and thirteen others into the water. Mayo was struck on the head by a submerged object and had to be taken to a doctor's office for treatment.

He was in company with a large party bound for the British club outing at Gaspee Point that went to the ferry, landing at Pawtuxet, about four miles from Providence, at noon to take the boat, a large motor boat, to the outing grounds.

They had just swarmed out on the float in readiness for the ferry, which was a short distance off shore, when the landing broke with a snap, one corner sagged suddenly and then the whole float went beneath the water, throwing all fourteen into the cove.

Balkan Peace Head Decorated

Berlin, Aug. 11.—Emperor William conferred the Grand Cross of the Order of the Red Eagle on the Roumanian premier, Titu Majoresco, the permanent president of the Balkan peace conference at Bucharest, in recognition of his services to the cause of peace.

FREIGHT CAR IN STREET

Broke Away At Quincy Freight Yard Saturday Night

A freight car that was being shunted into the Quincy freight yard broke its coupling Saturday night, ripped down the bumper and tore across about 50 feet of ground to Granite street where it splintered a heavy pole which carried the wires of three lighting circuits of the city and the fire alarm. Fortunately no one was passing at that moment although several people were nearby when the runaway hit the pole. For many minutes the street was blockaded. The car was pulled back onto the track by a switching engine. Repairs on the wires were finished after midnight. The police were sent to the scene and established a line of safety. Michael Shea, superintendent of streets, was one of the first to arrive and carefully made an investigation of the blockade.

TOOK HOME SOUVENIR

gave off hand decisions until the other side had caught up and tied the score. It was for this reason that at the end of several innings, when everybody was tired out, that the game was called with the score 12 to 12. Several times it looked as though it might go hard with the umpires but the presence of Officer Crooker probably saved their lives.

There were many features during the game but only a few can be mentioned. Bob Wood made a home run and Gil Booth a three bagger.

As for the battery they did noble work, George Ela of Manet Encampment making a record of pitching fifteen balls toward catcher Wood, maintaining a perfect score by not once making a slip and putting the ball over the home plate. Green of Rockland tried the same trick, but his record did not quite come up to the record of Ela. For all that, however, after the game, Ela was presented with a prize for striking out the most men

As for the catchers, Shirley did pretty well up to the fourth inning, when he went to pieces. Someone was unkind enough to say that it was because he visited the orangeade tank too often, for orangeade was on tap all the afternoon and was as free as water. He did not get any prize however. After Shirley went to pieces, Al Marnock finished out the game.

Charlie Wood got a prize, a tin rooster, for his efforts to stop the balls that Ela tried to put over the plate.

After the ball game there was a series of field sports, the results of which was as follows:

Fat men's race, won by James Richardson of Manet Encampment, who also got a stein.

Shoe race, whatever that is, was won by W. A. Shirley of Manet Encampment, who got a pair of catcher's gloves.

George Doutty and Eddie Goodridge were given match safes for their questionable work.

After the game a short walk took the party to the rooms of John Hancock lodge at Wollaston, where a supper was served, after which "ten centers" were passed around and there was a general good time. There was some little speechmaking and some singing, and some tried their hand at whist.

FETE AT HOUGHS NECK

Under the Auspices of the Catholic Lyceum

The third annual outdoor fete of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum was held Saturday afternoon and evening on the clubhouse grounds with a large attendance. A series of games were run off for the children, and dancing was enjoyed in the clubhouse. Booths were set about the grounds and were illuminated by electric lights in the evening.

The invited guests who attended were Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, Mayor Eugene R. Stone and ex-mayor William T. Shea. Lieut. Gov. David I. Walsh was unavoidably detained at the last moment and did not attend.

The committee, consisting of some of the best known residents of the beach, was headed by Mrs. James Malone. The fete was the most successful ever held in connection with the Lyceum.

The afternoon sports resulted as follows:

200-Yard Dash for Girls—Won by Sadie McKay.

200-Yard Dash for Boys from 12 to 15—Won by Frank Walsh; Joseph Murphy, second.

200-Yard Dash for Boys from 8 to 10—Won by Frank Murphy; Francis Comeau, second.

Fat Ladies' Race—Won by Mrs. James Quigley.

Tug-of-War between the Lyceum and the St. Alphonsus A. A. of Roxbury—Won by the Lyceum team.

Grab-Bag Contest—Won by Miss Margaret Maloney.

Bag Contest—Won by Claire Daverin.

PLAYGROUND ATTENDANCE

Great Popularity Shown By Figures for Week

The there City Playgrounds turned in a total of 3533 children for total attendance for the past week. Of this number Ward Three had 1,639: Ward Two, 1083 and Ward Four, 811. This is the second best week of the season for Ward Three, their best mark having been the second week when the total attendance was 2105.

For all of the playgrounds up to date there has been the enormous total of 18,363 boys and girls. Ward Three almost doubles its nearest ocmpetitor, Ward Two. The South Quincy grounds have had 9,042 boys and girls use its many privileges. Ward Two has had 5,040 and Ward Four 4,281.

JAMES H. BAYLEY.

Mr. Bayley was born in Weymouth and in his younger days spent a few years in the west. On his return he settled in South Weymouth and afterward moved to Braintree where he has resided for about 35 years.

Mr. Bayley enlisted in the 44th Regt. Mass volunteers during the Civil war and participated in several engagements. He never became a member of any Grand Army Posts however.

At the time of his death he was connected with the shoe firm of L. F. Stevens of Bedford street.

He leaves a widow, and two daughters, Miss Rosie Bayley who lives at home and Mrs. Helen Babcock of Taunton. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon from the Hall undertaking rooms. Burial will be in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Rev. Harry Grimes, a long time friend of the deceased will officiate.

HALL PLACE CHURCH.

The services at the Hall Place M. E. church were held as usual Sunday At the close of the morning service the pastor Rev. T. C. Martin preached at the Wollaston M. E. church.

The Sunday school is to hold a lawn party on the church grounds on Wednesday aternoon and evening. the proceeds to be devoted to picnic expenses. A most enjoyable time is assured as the committees have all worked hard to make it a success. In the aternoon there will be sports and games for the children and a band concert in the evening.

There was orchestra music and vocal solos rendered by Mrs. Fred Swallow, the Misses Della and Lenone Ryan of Clay Centre, Kansas and others. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served and the guests voted the affair to be a most pleasant one. Miss Babbitt has entertained in a similar manner in former years with marked success.

Rev. and Mrs. Tyler E. Gale and son Bennett of Hancock street are at Camp Ramasa Lake Monomonac, East Rindge, N. H., for their annual vacation.

Mrs. H. E. Dagget of Hancock street was the guest Thursday of her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dagget who are spending the summer at the Cliff House, Winthrop.

The Misses Florence and Anna Killian of Union street who are employed in the office of the Ashton Valve Company, Boston, left Monday for Winthrop where they will remain until Labor day.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman E. Roberts of Monatiquot avenue have been visiting relatives in Maine. Mr. Roberts returned the first of the week to resume business duties. Mrs. Roberts remained and was the guest of relatives in Lyman.

Among the pleasant nearby resorts which seems to be most popular with the people in Braintree is Glen Echo park, Stoughton. Every day numbers of residents can be seen there and appear to be enjoying all the natural beauties of the place. Miss Mildred Dyer daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses T. Dyer of Pond street has been spending the summer there. Early in the season she secured the position of cashier in the Hotel Inn and will remain until the park finishes it season which will probably be on Labor day.

Mr. A. D. Atkinson of Holbrook avenue the well known restaurant keeper is enjoying a well deserved vacation and is spending a month at his farm in New Brunswick.

Harry S. Snow of Tremont street is enjoying his annual vacation of two weeks which he is spending about home.

The Misses Clara and May Shay of Washington street are planning to spend a portion of the summer at Old Orchard, Maine.

Mrs. Gleason Torrey of Pond street with her father Mr. J. W. Baker of Union street are guests of Mrs. Eugene Cobb of Keene, N. H.

Old Orchard, Maine is a favorite vacation resort for many of Braintree's young people. At present there is a merry party of young men there who are making the most of the summer vacation. They are:—Dudley P. Howland, Joseph J. Finnegan, Joseph V. Cuff, James G. Cuff and Edward P. Cuff. The last two named left on Thursday. The remainder of the party went today.

Mrs. Charles Bailey of Taylor street who has been making an extended visit at the summer home of her father, H. M. White at North Wayne, Maine, returned to her home on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. H. Bailey and son Joseph G. Bailey of Union street have been spending their summer vacation at Wiscasset, Maine. They returned this week.

Edward V. Heffernan of Dearing avenue, the popular clerk at the South Braintree post-office with his family have been spending a pleasant two weeks at Brant Rock.

Fredrick W. Kehr, driver for J. H. Schraut is expected to arrive home tomorrow after a pleasant vacation of a month's duration, spent at Nantucket. The island of Mantucket is a most delightful place to spend a vacation. The sea bathing alone is worth the journey.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Rev. and Mrs. James A. Matheson of the Water street Presbyterian church have gone to Philadelphia on a vacation trip.

Councilman John R. Richards and family, who have been on a ten days vacation trip to Connecticut, are expected home today.

Wyatt and Lewis in illustrated songs at Kincaide's theatre this week. They are two of the popular Kincaide players and a warm welcome is assured them.

Miss Marguerite S. Lyons of the City Clerk's office, and Miss Margaret Farrell of the Tax Collector's office returned this morning from a two weeks' vacation trip at Peak's Island, Me.

William A. Wadsworth of 6 Garrison street, Boston, died Sunday in his 55th year. He is a former Quincy resident. The funeral will be held from the undertaking rooms of John Hall. Burial will be in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Eugene L. Briggs of 8 Old Colony avenue, a freight claim investigator and Miss Louise H. Collier of 124 Highland avenue, a telephone operator, were married at Boston, July 12, by Rev. Wilbur K. Thomas.

The Wollaston Citizens' Association met Saturday evening, preliminary to their evening in September, to discuss the many plans for improvements that the association has now underway.

One of the most interesting playlets ever seen here, New Bedford papers say of "In Tennessee" which is one of the attractions now at Kincaide Theatre. In fact, from all over the country, press reports highly praise the clever work of Maudie Scott and Dick Watts. Miss Scott's portrayal of several characters, each widely different, and standing out apart from the other, proves her an artist of no ordinary ability.

THREE RIBS FRACTURED.

Eugene McGillicuddy, a well-known Quincy Point resident, is suffering from three fractured ribs and a severe cut on the forehead, the result of slipping on a cucumber peel in his yard on Sumner street, Sunday evening. Mr. McGillicuddy was but a short distance from the entrance of his home when he slipped. The spot was dark. He reached his house in a fainting condition and was attended by a physician.

AS MOTOR BOAT SINKS IN POND

Seven Members of Merry Party Meet Their Death

WERE IN 14-FOOT LAUNCH

Speedy Craft to Rescue too Late to Save More Than Three—One Woman Taken From Water Alive but Fails to Revive—Were Bound For Dance at Lakeside Park

East Freetown, Mass., Aug. 11.—Six women and a man were drowned and three other persons were saved when a power boat sank in Long pond.

The rescues were made by Frederick Macy, treasurer of the Soule mill at New Bedford, who has a cottage at the pond. Responding to the cries for help, he was able to pick up four persons with his power craft. One of these, Miss Hamilton, failed to revive.

Darkness added to the confusion. Several boats on the pond started for the scene, but Macy's speedy craft was the first to reach the spot.

For a few moments Macy circled around the place where the others went down, but no more bodies were in sight. As other boats came up Macy turned his boat for the shore in an effort to save the lives of those he had managed to pick up.

All but Miss Hamilton responded quickly. After working over her for a long time it was seen that she was dead.

All of the party were young and bent on a good time. Their singing could be heard as they left shore, but before they had gone far their song was shifted into shrieks for help, which startled campers along the shore.

The party had been guests of Luther Dayton of 22 Bay street, New Bedford, at his cottage on Second island, and were bound for Lakeside park in a 14-foot motor boat owned by Albert Joan of Brockton. After attending the dance at the park the New Bedford party planned to return home by trolley.

KILLED BY FREIGHT TRAIN

Mark H. Briggs Tried to Cross In Front of Locomotive

New Bedford, Aug. 11.—Mark H. Briggs, a contractor and builder, living in North Marion, was killed when a freight train from Tremont to Fairhaven struck the auto in which Briggs was driving as he attempted to cross the tracks at Hathways Crossing, about a mile south of the Marion station. Briggs' body was badly mutilated.

The crossing is at grade and Briggs, coming down onto the crossing, was unable to get across the tracks before the freight struck him. The heavy locomotive hit the machine with sufficient force to roll it along for quite a distance, leaving it simply a mass of twisted rods and wreckage. Briggs was not thrown from the auto until after his body had been crushed and mangled in the smash. Briggs had lived in Marion all his life. He was about 34 years old, and is survived by a wife.

SUNK IN FOG

Schooner Strikes on Pollock Rip Shoals In Calm Sea

Chatham, Mass., Aug. 11.—The British schooner Parana, bound from Elizabethport, N. J., for Bridgetown, N. S., with a cargo of coal, struck on Pollock Rip shoals and sank. Her crew of five men escaped in the boats and landed at the Old Harbor life saving station.

The Parana lies about 400 yards inside the gas buoy, just out of the channel, and it is thought that her wheelsman lost his bearings in the thick haze which hung over the water, as the sea was perfectly calm.

READY IN DECEMBER

Panama Canal May Admit Light Draft Boats Before That

Washington, Aug. 11.—Latest reports from the canal zone announce that as a result of the prospective substitution of dredges for steam shovels in the excavation of the famous Culebra cut, the canal may be ready for shipping by next December.

Even earlier than that light draft vessels are likely to be passing through the waterway, for as the greater part of the canal prism has already been cut to its final depth small vessels probably can navigate it safely within a few days after Oct. 10 next, when Gambo dyke is to be blown up, thus admitting to the Culebra level the great store of water in Gatun lake.

McGoodwin's Nomination Held Up

Washington, Aug. 11.—The nomination of Preston McGoodwin of Oklahoma to be minister to Venezuela was held up in the senate foreign relations committee and his political affiliations are to be looked into.

STORE LOOTED AND WRECKED

Recent Proprietors Are Among the Missing

The store at 547 Washington street, which has been run by two Syrians, William and George Pupendren, looked this morning as though it had been struck by a cyclone. There is a little history that goes with the store which may have a bearing on the wrecking of the interior. It seems that the store was originally run by Mrs. Sawaya, who sometime ago sold out her interest to the Pupendren brothers for $900. At that time, according to Mrs. Sawaya, they paid $400 down and gave a mortgage for the balance.

Nothing has been paid since that time either on the interest or principal. Sunday, according to witnesses, the two brothers left Quincy Point on the car due to arrive in Quincy about 8 o'clock, but it was not until this morning that it was discovered what had happened to the interior of the store. Then it was found that the interior of the store had been wrecked. Not only had the showcases been smashed but the soda fountain as well The billiard table had suffered for the cloth had been badly torn so that it will have to be replaced.

Everything that could be conveniently carried away, such as cigars, and things of like nature were gone. In fact the interior of the store looked as though it had been run over by a freight train.

Although it is not certain that the missing brothers did the damage they are suspected as the parties, as Mrs. Sawaya was pressing them for her money, and it is understood that she had threatened to foreclose the mortgage if not paid. It is probable that a warrant will be sworn out against the two missing men.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DEMOCRATS ENCOURAGED BY SUCCESS OF 1912

Making Plans to Capture Legislature As Well As State and County

Judge Reilly and Peter Tague Address Quincy Meeting

Men from Norfolk and Plymouth counties of all shades of political preference united on the common ground of Democracy in Electa hall Monday evening. They discussed organization with the purpose of placing a real Democrat in the Governor's chair, backed up by a Democratic house.

The feeling was that the Republicans had dominated the county politics too long and steps will be taken to carefully organize a committee in this district which will not only be responsible for the men placed in the running but whose word will be taken in the distribution of patronage offices or anything else in the nature of political reward.

John J. McDevitt was not present and the only time his name was mentioned was when his candidacy for the Senate was announced by Charles C. McHugh of West Quincy. A deep feeling seemed to sweep through those present whenever the Senatorial situation was mentioned, and it was not dissipated even when James A. Shea of Milton announced that he was a candidate.

David I. Murray, although casting fond glances towards the office said he was not ready to say so, inasmuch as he would like to represent Hyde Park in the house. During this portion of the discussion, quality of candidates was openly requested.

The meeting was called at the behest of the Democratic state committee and Judge Thomas Reilly of Malden, state chairman, was the speaker of the evening. He depicted the rapid advance of Democracy in this state since the Springfield fiasco and urged an organization that would have substance as well as form at all seasons of the year. He commenced at 8.10 and at 9.30 was just commencing to drive home his concluding points.

Among those present were Representative Jeremiah O'Leary of Sharon, candidate for county commissioner; Thomas Buttimer of Hingham, John Vahey, Plymouth; candidates for district attorney; Rep. John J. Gallagher of Milton, Representative Michael T. Sullivan, Representative John J. Dwyer of Weymouth, Representative David I. Murray, James A. Shea and James E. Foley of Randolph.

Peter Tague, house Democratic chairman gave an interesting talk on Democratic success this year in the adoption of investigation measures and flayed Governor Foss because he had failed to appoint Democrats on the committees. He asked for the line support of David I. Walsh.

William Kelly presided. The meeting adjourned at 11.15 P. M.

BRAINTREE TEACHER DEAD.

Miss Ruby L. Tuxbury, a teacher in the commercial course at the Braintree High school, died at the residence of her grandfather, Charles B. Kingsbury at Amesbury, Monday, aged 23 years. At the close of school last June, Miss Tuxbury was stricken with appendicitis and was operated upon at the Quincy City Hospital. A second operation proved necessary which revealed conditions which led the attending physician to give her family but little hope for her recovery. Miss Tuxbury graduated from the Amesbury High school in 1908 and has taught in Portsmouth, N. H., Plymouth and Braintree. She leaves besides her grandparents, a brother and sister.

COMING WEDDING.

Miss Ruth Merrill, whose marriage to Dr. Willis P. Middleton, son of Dr. W. J. Middleton of Quincy, takes place Aug. 26, is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Frederick G. Merrill of Amesbury, formerly of North Weymouth, and is a graduate of the Weymouth high school. Later she attended Wheaton Seminary, now Wheaton College. Dr. Middleton is a graduate of the Tufts medical school, class of '12, and during the past year has been connected with the Ancon Hpspital in Panama. The wedding will take place in the Congregational church in Amesbury, of which the Rev. Mr. Merrill is the pastor.

MAY NOMINATE JOHNSON.

According to enrolled members of the Progressive party certain individuals are making a canvass which they hope will result in giving Charles H. Johnson their nomination for mayor. The movement is now under way and is based on rumors that connect John L. Miller with a withdrawal from the mayoralty field.

The Husbands of Edith

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

PROLOGUE

This humorous tale, written in McCutcheon's best vein, is faultless in its morals, despite its title, and cumulative in its interest. It may be stated in strict confidence that Edith did not actually have more than one husband; consequently the gentle reader need harbor no apprehension on this score. Like all other estimable married women, Edith had only one husband, but circumstances arose through which it seemed necessary for her husband to be in two places at the same time, and how this was accomplished and what the outcome was— But wait a bit; let George Barr McCutcheon, the prince of story tellers, unfold the romance.

CHAPTER I.

Husbands and Wife.

BROCK was breakfasting out of doors in the cheerful little garden of the Hotel Chatham. The sun streamed warmly upon the concrete floor of the court just beyond the row of palms and oleanders that fringed the rail against which his Herald rested, that he might read as he ran, so to speak. He was the only person having dejeuner on the "terrace," as he named it to the obsequious waiter who always attended him. Charles was the magnet that drew Brock to the Chatham, that excellent French hotel with the excellent English name.

Charles was standing, alert but pensive, quite near at hand, ready to replenish the bowl with honey. Brock was especially fond of it. Brock had gone to the Chatham for years just because Charles was a fixture there. Charles spoke the most execrably picturesque English, served with a punctiliousness that savored almost of the overbearing, and boasted that he had acquired the art of making American cocktails during a five weeks' residence in the United States.

It was a lazy morning. Brock was happy. He was even interested when a porter came forth and unraveled a long roll of garden hose, with which he abruptly began to splash water upon the concrete surface of the court without regard for distance or direction. Moreover, he proceeded to water the palms, operating from a spot no less than twenty feet away, until the faithful Charles restored him to earth by means of certain subdued injunctions and less moderate gesticulations, from which it could be readily gathered that "m'sieur was eating, not bathing." Whereupon the utterly unerushed porter splashed water at right angles, to Brock's relief. "M'sieur will pardon the boy," apologized Charles in deepest humility, taking much for granted. "It will be very warm today. Your serviette, m'sieur—it is damp. Pardon!" He flew away and back with another napkin. "Of course, m'sieur, the Chatham is not the Waldorf," he announced deprecatingly. "Parbleu," beating himself on the forehead, "I forgot! M'sieur does not like the Waldorf. Eh, bien, Paris is not New York, no." Having sufficiently humbled Paris he withdrew into the background, rubbing his hands as if he were cleansing them of something unsightly. Brock spread one of the buttered biscuits with honey and inwardly admitted that Paris was not New York.

He was a good looking chap of thirty or thereabouts, an American to the core, bright eyed, keen witted, smooth faced, virile. From boyhood's earliest days he had spent a portion of his summers in Europe. Two or three years of his life had been employed in the beaux arts, fruitful years, for Brock had not wasted his opportunities. He had gone in for architecture and building. Today he stood high among the younger men in New York, prosperous, successful and a menace to the old cry that a son of the rich cannot thrive in his father's domain. Nowadays he came to the old world for his breathing spells. He was able to combine dawdling and development without sacrificing one for the other, wherein lies the proof that his vacations were not akin to those taken by most of us.

The fortnight in Paris was to be followed by a week in St. Petersburg and a brief tour of Sweden and Norway. His stay in the gay city was drawing to a close. That very morning he expected to book for St. Petersburg, leaving in three days.

Suddenly his glance fell upon a name in the society column before him. "Roxbury Medcroft." His face lighted up with genuine pleasure. An old friend, a boon companion in bygone days was this same Medcroft, a broad minded, broad gauged young Englishman who had profited by a stay of some years in the States. They had studied together in Paris and they had toiled together in New York. This is what he read:

Mr. and Mrs. Roxbury Medcroft of London are stopping at the Ritz, en route to Vienna. Mr. Medcroft will attend the meeting of Austrian architects, to be held there next week, and, with his wife, will afterward spend a fortnight in the German Alps, the guests of the Alfred Rodneys of Seattle.

"Dear old Rox, I must look him up at once," mused Brock. "The Rodneys of Seattle? Never heard of 'em." He looked at his watch, signed his check, deposited the usual franc, acknowledged Charles' well practised smile of thanks, and pushed back his chair, his gaze traveling involuntarily toward the portals of the American bar across the court, just beyond the concierge's quarters. Simultaneously a tall figure emerged from the bar, casting eager glances in all directions—a tall figure in a checked suit, a gray cap, white reindeer gloves, high collar, and gray spats. Brock came to his feet quickly. The monocle dropped from the other's eye, and his long legs carried him eagerly toward the American.

"Medcroft—bless your heart—I was just on the point of looking you up at the Ritz. It's good to see you," Brock cried as they clasped hands.

"Of all the men and of all the times, Brock, you are the most opportune," exclaimed the other. "I saw that you were here and bolted my breakfast to catch you. These beastly telephones never work. Oh, I say, old man, have you finished yours?"

"I'm in a deuce of a dilemma."

"Quite—but luckily I didn't have to bolt it. You're off for Vienna, I see. Sit down, Rox. Won't you have another egg and a cup of coffee? Do!"

"Thanks and no to everything you suggest. What you doing for the next half hour or so? I'm in a deuce of a dilemma and you've got to help me out of it." The Englishman looked at his watch and fumbled it nervously as he replaced it in his upper coat pocket. "That's a good fellow, Brock. You will be the ever present help in time of trouble, won't you?"

"My letter of credit is at your disposal, old man," said Brock promptly. He meant it. It readily may be seen from this that their friendship is no small item to be considered in the development of this tale.

"My dear fellow, that's the very thing I'm eager to thrust upon you—my letter of credit," exclaimed the other.

"What's that?" demanded Brock.

"I say, Brock, can't we go up to your rooms? Dead secret, you know. Really, old chap, I mean it. No one must get a breath of it. That's why I'm whispering. I'm not a lunatic, so don't stare like that. I'd do as much for you if the conditions were reversed."

"I dare say you would, Rox. But what the devil is it you want me to do?"

"Do I appear to be agitated?"

"Well, I should say so."

"Well, I am. You know how I loath asking a favor of any one. Besides, it's rather an extraordinary one I'm going to ask of you. Came to me in a flash this morning when I saw your name in the paper. Sort of inspiration, 'pon my word. I think Edith sees it the same as I, although I haven't had time to go into it thoroughly with her. She's ripping, you know—pluck to the very core."

Brock's face expressed bewilderment and perplexity.

"Won't you have another drink, old man?" he asked gently.

"Another? Hang it all, I haven't had one in a week! Come along. I must talk it all over with you before I introduce you to her. You must be prepared."

"Introduce me to whom?" demanded Brock, pricking up his ears. He was following Medcroft to the elevator.

"To my wife—Edith," said Medcroft, annoyed by the other's obtuseness.

"Does it require preparation for an ordeal so charming?" laughed Brock. He was recalling the fact that Medcroft had married a beautiful Philadelphia girl some years ago in London, a young lady whom he had never seen, so thoroughly expatriated had she become in consequence of almost a life time residence in England. He remembered now that she was rich and that he had sent her a ridiculously expensive present and a congratulatory cablegram at the time of the wedding.

The Londoner did not respond to the innocuous query. He merely stared in a preoccupied, determined manner at the succeeding etages as they slipped downward. At the fourth floor they disembarked, and Brock led the way to his rooms, overlooking the inner court. Once inside with the door closed he turned upon the Englishman.

"Now, what's up, Rox? Are you in trouble?" he demanded.

"Are we quite alone?" Medcroft glanced significantly at the transom and the half closed bathroom door. With a laugh Brock led him into the bathroom and out and then closed the transom.

"You're darned mysterious," he said, pointing to a chair near the window. Medcroft drew another close up and seated himself.

"Brock," he said, lowering his voice and leaning forward impressively, "I want you to go to Vienna in my place." Brock stared hard. "You are a godsend, old man. You're just in time to do me the greatest of favors. It's utterly impossible for me to go to Vienna as I had planned, and yet it is equally unwise for me to give up the project. You see, I've just got to be in London and Vienna at the same time."

"It will require something more than a stretch of the imagination to do that, old man. But I'm game, and my plans are such that they can be changed readily to oblige a friend. I shan't mind the trip in the least, and I'll be only too happy to help you out. Gad! I thought by your manner that you were in some frightful difficulty."

"By Jove, Brock, you're a brick!" cried Medcroft, shaking the other's hand vigorously. At the same time

PUBLIC HEARING ON THE TAX LIMIT

Ordered by City Council to be Held Next Week at City Hall

Election Officers Named and Other Business

It required just twenty-five minutes to dispose of the business at the special meeting of the City Council Monday evening. There were ten matters mentioned in the call, none of which required, or received any debat, with the exception of the appropriation for the repair of Neponset bridge and this was confined to a few questions asked the Commissioner by Councilman Cunningham.

The applications of the four parties for licenses to collect junk over which it was thought there might possibly be some debate were disposed of without a word.

The absent members were Councilmen Bass, Bryant, Richards and Whiton.

In the absence of President Whiton the meeting was called to order by Councilman Little, the oldest member. On motion of Councilman Bailey it was voted to elect a president pro tem by roll call. On roll call Councilman Bailey was elected. The matters in the call were then taken up.

NO JURORS DRAWN.

As the venire for the drawing of jurors had not arrived none were drawn.

ELECTION OFFICERS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing the following election officers, which were read and laid over until the next meeting for approval.

Gardner and Gietting would make a good ticket for the Republicans, recognizing Cape Ann and the western part of the State.

Owing to the high cost of living it is believed there is a chance for a lot more people to start new automobile manufacturing concerns, picture theaters and summer hotels.

One difficulty in modern poultry raising is that the hens have not yet learned that the automobiles go faster than Old Dobbin.

After many rumors that employees at the Fore River shipyard might become involved in the boiler makers' strike of Boston, it is good news that 300 boilermakers on strike for nearly 11 weeks returned to work Monday, their differences having been adjusted in conferences before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration. The men returned in eight of the 13 plants originally affected by the strike.

ICE A NECESSITY.

An elderly man, observing an ice cart distributing freely in a tenement district, was heard to remark that when he was young every one got along without buying any ice. He regarded it as an extravagance for poor people.

Farmers, he said, almost never used to have it. They lowered perishables into wells. Of course a descending bucket might tip the milk over, which made the water look sickly, but did no harm. Of course farmers very commonly have ice now, but if it in cool latitudes, they cut it from their own little ponds.

Still it is very questionable if it pays even a poor man to go without a little ice if he can possibly buy it. Without his milk and butter waste almost fast enough to pay for the refrigerator.

The poor man's poverty never falls much more heavily than when he lets the ice man go by. No one can eat a square meal on a hot day from warm and partly tainted foods. There are few more practical charities than free ice stations.

SMOKING BY WOMEN.

Society circles report a steady increase of the habit of smoking by women. But while it has become common in the gilded circles of aristocracy, it makes but little progress among every-day people.

The difference detween the European and American point of view on this question is singular. The heroines of standard English novels smoke freely, and from all accounts the practice is so common as to attract little notice.

In this country where a woman is seen smoking in some hotel or public place, a crowd often gathers around as if she were a polar bear in a cage.

American opinion gives women the highest range of freedom in the world. It permits its girls solitary association with men that would create newspaper scandal in Europe. Connected with this implicit trust are severer standards of conduct. Acts that are condoned as harmless or venial in the case of men are condemned when committed by women. Smoking is a conspicuous illustration.

Public opinion will probably soon make changes in the attitude of both sexes toward "My Lady Nicotine." The gates of all occupations are falling before the daughters of Eve. They can work at any honest, clean task. Their habits and diversions will be likely to coincide more and more with men's. The future will probably see less discrimination between them and men on the tobacco question.

On the other hand, there is a growing sentiment in favor of the best physical development. The abstinence of the non-smoking man is likely to seem less eccentric than in the past. These are the days of efficiency. The human machine must have the wisest, kindest treatment to run the swift race of modern business. Many young men feel that tobacco is a dead weight. Their choice will command respect, and will not seem so unsocial as it was formerly regarded.

Councilman Griffin offered an order designating the polling places for the caucuses of Sept. 23 and calling the caucus.

At this point Councilman Cunningham raised a point of order that under section II of the City Charter that the president of the City Council should be sworn in.

Councilman Cunningham asked the City Solicitor for a ruling. The City Solicitor ruled that a President pro tem was elected for but one meeting and did not have to be sworn in.

The order designating polling places and calling the caucus was then adopted.

APPOINTMENTS.

Communications were received from the Mayor appointing Joseph T. Lamb, a measurer of wood, and Carl Johnson, a special constable to serve only on the premises of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation. Confirmed.

A communication was received from the Mayor recommending the passage of an ordinance, enclosed, relative to speaking on public streets, and parades in public streets. Referred to Committee on Ordinances.

The ordinance prohibits speaking in public streets or squares and parades without a permit first having been obtained from the Mayor, application for the same having first been made in writing, stating the time and place of the public meeting or the time and route of the parade. The penalty for violation is not less than $20 for each offense.

The next matter was relative to a public hearing on fixing a tax limit for the city. Councilman Gilliatt offered an order for a public hearing on the matter for Monday evening, Aug. 18, which was adopted.

Section 19 of Chapter 719 under which a public hearing must be held is as follows:

"Within ninety days after the passage of this act the City Council or other governing body of every city, except Boston, shall give a public hearing in regard to establishing a tax limit for that city.

"The time and place of holding such hearing shall be duly advertised, and, after the hearing, any city, except Boston, may provide by ordinance that the taxes assessed on property therein, exclusive of the state tax and other amounts assessed upon the city by the commonwealth, the county tax and sums required by law to be raised on account of the city debt, shall not in any year succeeding the adoption of such ordinance exceed an amount specified in the ordinance on every one thousand dollars of the average of the assessors' valuation of the taxable property therein for the preceding three years, such valuation being first reduced by the amount of all abatements allowed thereon previous to the thirty-first day of December in the year preceding said assessment:

"And the tax limit so established by ordinance shall have the force of law until it is annulled or modified by the action of the City Council or other governing body of the city. After such ordinance has been established it shall not be annulled or modified within one year thereafter, and then only after a public hearing, duly advertised, and by a two-thirds vote of the City Council or other governing body of the city."—Approved May 28, 1913.

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Commissioner of Public Works asking for an appropriation of $1,500 for repairing Neponset bridge.

Councilman Gauthier offered an order apropriating that amount, charging the same to the estimated receipts of 1913.

Councilman Cunningham asked the Commissioner if he had been given the amount asked in the budget for bridges, etc., if he would not have been able to do this work. The Commissioner replied yes.

Further questions and replies by the Mayor and Commissioner brought out the fact that after the fire on the bridge on the night before the Fourth that it had been found that the under side of the bridge was very rotten, and that it was much worse than was expected.

The communication and order was then referred to the Finance Committee.

COLLECTION OF JUNK.

The last matter in the call was to act on applications for licenses to drive wagons for the collection of junk.

Four applications were received as follows: Sam Silverman, David Silverman, Hyman Katz and I. Cutler.

President Bailey ruled that as these had been received after the first Monday in April they could not be acted upon.

No one made any move to suspend the rules to admit the applications and a motion to adjourn was voted.

These four were the same parties who were given leave to withdraw by the Council earlier in the year, mainly because of the location. It was understood that they had now selected a new location, but the applications showed that only one had done so.

Adjourned at 8.10.

Immediately after the adjournment meetings of the Finance and Ordinance Committees were held and the matters referred to them acted upon.

Another meeting of the Council will have to be held next Monday evening, and will be called by Mayor Stone some time this week. In the call will probably be mentioned in addition to the drawing of jurors the matters that came up at Monday nights meeting that required two readings.

WHAT HE CALLED HER.

This happened in the office of the marriage license clerk of a certain Maryland city which has an already prodigious and ever-increasing colored population.

A negro of 22 or 23 years of age (he wasn't sure of the number of years, but he was certain that he was "mo' dan twentyone") applied for a marriage license.

He answered correctly the inquiry as to his name and where he lived but when the name of his intended bride was asked he was linguistically stalled. He shifted from one foot to the other and rolled his eyes, but the current was off in his information works. The clerk made it worse when he asked:

"I want the name of the woman you are going to marry. I don't want her full name—her last name—but the cognomen which she received when she was baptized. What's her Christian name? Can you give it to me?"

The negro cleared his throat and showed signs of consternation.

"Skuse me, Suh," he said, "but ah jes doan—"

"Her given name, her first name," explained the clerk.

"Skuse, me, Suh—"

"Ah-h-h, what does she call herself?" The clerk was becoming impatient' "Is it Sallie or Jane or Jennie or Dinah?"

The negro's face looked apopletic after that.

"No, Suh," he answered, "'pears lak hit haint none of dem."

"Well, what's her last name?"

No answer.

"You don't mean to tell me that you don't know her last name?" said the clerk incredulously.

"Skuse me, Suh, but ah jes doan—"

The clerk daid down his pen and turned around and began whistling to prevent an explosion. When he could trust himself to speak, he asked hopelessly:

"Say, what do you call her? Can you tell me that?"

There was an instant illumination in the benighted countenance and an embarressed smile bared big white teeth as he answered:

"Ah calls her Babe."

RECEIVER APPOINTED

President Jopp of Beacon Trust Handling Watchmaker's Affairs

Boston, Aug. 12.—Judge Morton, in the United States district court, appointed Charles B. Jopp, president of the Beacon Trust company as receiver for Jacob Watchmaker, who is under arrest charged with obtaining money from a Chelsea bank by fraudulent means. Mr. Jopp furnished a bond of $5000. Watchmaker was represented in court by Attorney J. R. Murphy and the banks were represented by Guy A. Ham and David Stoneham.

The particular charge against Watchmaker is that he defrauded the Broadway National bank of Chelsea out of $500. It is said, however, that Watchmaker's operations in various banks in the city will total a sum approximating $200,000. Watchmaker is under $10,000 bonds for his appearance before the Suffolk county superior court.

CAPTURE CASTRO'S KIN

General Torres Castro Taken by Government Troops

Caracas, Aug. 12.—General Torres Castro, a relative of former President Cipriano Castro, was captured on Aug. 8 by the government troops commanded by Generals Corcegas, Sayego and Bustamente, according to an official communication. Several of General Torres Castro's officers who had fled to the mountains of Macuro after the defeat of Castro's adherents on July 28 in the attack on the government forces in the city of Macuro also were taken prisoners. Fighting continues in the state of Tachira.

The army of government troops which was formed at the capital to fight the revolutionists, arrived at Maracay on Friday under the command of President Juan V. Gomez.

Monsignor Juan B. Castro, archbishop of Caracas, has issued a pastoral letter, instructing the clergy to pray for peace.

ADMITS ATTEMPTS TO CONTROL BOARD

Emery Says N. A. M. Active In Industrial Appointments

Washington, Aug. 12.—Frank admission that the National Association of Manufacturers made every effort to control the national industrial commission in 1912 by repeatedly advocating for appointment of men disapproving the principles advocated by labor unions, was made before the senate lobby investigating committee. James A. Emery, Washington counsel for the N. A. M., swore efforts were made to have anti-labor men fill at least three and possibly six of the nine positions on the commission.

Emery also admitted the N. A. M. took active part in various political campaigns in the interest of congressmen seeking re-election. Emery denied the N. A. M. sought to place any candidate under obligation by thus aiding him.

After weeks of waiting the house lobby committee got a chance to grill Mulhall on his wholesale charges of influence with various congressmen and corruption of employes of the house.

Mulhall related the story he already had told the senate committee of his fight on Senator McComas of Maryland and the alleged corruption of Downs, the senator's secretary.

Mulhall testified he did "lobby work" with Representatives Littlefield, Sherman and Jenkins, and Senators Foraker, Carter and Aldrich.

TROOPS AFTER TRIBESMEN

Strong Resistance Expected by Men Who Are Well Armed

Amoy, China, Aug. 12.—A column of 500 government troops was dispatched from here in pursuit of the Tungan tribesmen who were responsible for the recent disturbances here in which a number of Formosans were killed, leading to a demand from the Japanese government for an indemnity and for the execution of the leaders of the tribe.

Strong resistance is expected to be offered by the tribesmen against the arrest of their leaders. The Tungans are fairly well armed.

Thirteen Killed In Quarry Slide

Colon, Aug. 12.—Thirteen men were killed by an unexpected slide at the Porto Bello quarry, which completely buried a steam shovel near which they were working. The dead include Charles Nyland, an American citizen, and twelve negro powder men, drill men and pit men.

Pray For Rain and Get It

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Prayers for rain in the parched regions of the west were offered in several Chicago churches. During the service the tattoo of showers on the roof testified to the bounty of nature in northern Illinois.

Cows Killed by Lightning

Hastings, N. Y., Aug. 12.—When Henry Dietrich, a raiser of blooded stock, went to his barn he found eighteen registered cows dead in a row. Lightning had run the entire length of a string of stalls, killing everything within. The barn was not damaged.

MADERO'S WIDOW MAY TELL STORY

Hoped She Will Testify Before Senate Committee.

FIRST HAND INFORMATION.

Relict of Slain Mexican President Could Give Many Facts to Administration Which Would Aid It In Dealing With Present Situation—Woman of Great Moral Strength.

As a possible means of aiding the administration in dealing with the Mexican situation, Mrs. Madero, widow of the slain president of the warring republic, may testify before the senate committee on foreign relations at Washington.

Friends of the Maderos hope that Mrs. Madero will appear before the committee. They say she has a great amount of first hand information concerning the betrayal of her husband and the participation of the former American ambassador in events leading up to the resignation of Madero. These friends say she will make an excellent witness, that she speaks English fluently and is dramatic.

She is beloved by all of the little band of revolutionists in the United States. They regard her as an extraordinary woman. One enthusiast said recently that the physical and moral strength of Mrs. Madero is wonderful. During the turbulent scenes in the City of Mexico on Feb. 18 Mrs. Madero never once lost her poise nor a full comprehension of her position, her admirers say.

Huerta Clouds Situation.

Washington officials read with interest the recent declaration of Aurelliano Urrutia, the Mexican minister of the interior, that President Huerta would not resign and, moreover, would brook no interference on the part of foreigners in his administration.

While no plan that the American government has had under serious consideration involved any direct interference in Mexican affairs, the admitted attitude of the administration is one of unalterable opposition to the recognition of the Huerta regime.

Without the recognition of the United States, leading Mexicans have declared that Mexico would not be able to extricate itself from its financial difficulties. On this account it had been believed in Washington that pressure would be brought to bear to persuade Huerta to resign.

The announcement that he has determined not to do so has beclouded the situation somewhat and has spurred the Constitutionalists to further activity to obtain the repeal of the embargo on arms. They claim that if they do not get arms the revolution will be a protracted struggle. With munitions of war they say they can quickly bring matters to a crisis.

Mediation Not Abandoned.

Despite these conditions, the administration has not altogether abandoned the hope that mediation may prevail.

It is believed that, in view of the depleted condition of the Mexican treasury and the long and hard campaign which is bound to result if the present status is maintained. Huerta may be influenced to suspend hostilities and hold an election. Carranza, it is thought, could be induced to suspend fighting if Huerta would eliminate himself from the elections and abide by the vote. Carranza will not agree to anything which includes the participation of Huerta. He has said so directly and through his junta in Washington. Members of the latter have declared that, while they did not believe there would be any mediation, Carranza would agree to anything reasonable. These members added that Carranza does not seek the presidency; that all he desires is the punishment of Huerta for his treachery to Madero.

ANOTHER PARCEL POST USE.

C. O. D. Plan Aids Merchant to Collect From Unwary Debtors.

A Kansas merchant has found a new use for the parcel post. When the C. O. D. feature went into effect on July 1 he hit upon an idea to collect a number of small accounts which he had been carrying for some time and which had caused considerable loss during a period of several years.

A number of small boxes were obtained and filled with waste paper and on the top was placed a receipted bill for the proper amount. A five cent stamp was required for each box, and the C. O. D. fee was 10 cents for each package. The next day the returns began to come in, and in nearly every case the debtor paid the amount, supposing that the package contained something of value, but, of course, not being permitted to confirm this suspicion before opening it.

Snake Half Cooked In Oven.

When Mrs. Guy Kefne of Valencia, Kan., started to make cookies one day recently she got the portable oven for her gasoline stove off the back porch and placed it on the stove without opening the door. A few minutes later, as the oven grew hotter, she heard a racket on the stove. She waited until the noise ceased. Then she opened the door and found a half baked rattlesnake three feet long.

LONG TRIPS BY AUTOMOBILE

President Whiton Averaging 150 Miles Per Day

President Whiton of the City Council, who is away on an automobile trip, writes that he is averaging about 150 miles a day and that he and his family are having a fine trip. Leaving Quincy they rode through the Berkshires to Albany, N. Y., thence to Saratrga Springs, Lake George, Schroom lake, Ticonderoga, Crown Point, up the Adirondacks to Plattsburg, all the way by Lake Champlain. Sunday they left Plattsburg and went into Canada and down the Vermont side making a stop for the night at Burlington, Vt. Monday they left for Brenton Woods, thence to Crawford Notch. Mr. Whiton says that the roads were good most of the way and that the scenery was very beautiful.

Arthur P. Russell of Wollaston and wife, Master Russell Sanborn of Wollaston, Miss Lillian Batchelder of New Hampshire and Frank Dorley of Wollaston are to tour through Quebec, and have travelled as far as the Derby line, Vermont, distance of 241 miles.

BUSY MAN IN MAINE.

The Sun has received from Machiasport, Me., an envelope which gives upon its face the record of a busy man—in fact he must be about the busiest man in Maine. His activities are blazoned forth in this wise:

Dealer in General Merchandise
Gasolene Engines and Launch Supplies

Justice of the Peace
Notary Public
and Trial Justice

Real Estate Agent
Agent for Fire, Life, Accident and Health Insurance

Correspondent for the Associated Press

It would seem that here was enough to keep even a man from Machiasport fairly busy, but it is not all. Turning over the envelope, the busy man's face appears, with the information in type of varying blackness that he makes and sells balsam spills. These, it appears, are simply twigs from the fir balsam tree all ready to be stuffed into pillows.

TOO MANY DOGS AND CATS

Mr. C. L. Colby Given Hearing by Board of Health

The dog and cat farm on Cummings avenue, Norfolk Downs, about which there has been numerous complaints to the Board of Health, will be abandoned, as Mrs. C. L. Colby who kept the animals has agreed to dispose of most of her pets. This was decided upon Monday night after a hearing before the Board of Health.

Complaints were made against Mrs. Colby and her daughter Ina that the nine dogs and twelve cats which they harbored were a source of nuisance to the neighborhood.

John Hilderbrand, W. C. Clark and James C. Cruikshank, neighbors, testified before the Board of Health that the odor that came from the animals was almost unbearable, that they had frequently made complaints but nothing had been done to abate the nuisance. It was also said that the cats and dogs were out at all hours of the night making a racket that prohibited the neighbors from getting their night's sleep. It was also said that the animals got into some of the gardens and ruined them.

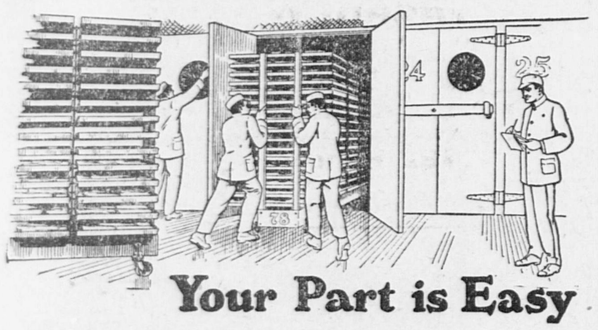

Mrs. Colby said that she did not keep the dogs and cats for any financial consideration, but simply because she loved the animals. It was also said that cats and dogs left behind by people of the neighborhood when they went away had been taken in by her and cared for.

After hearing what the witnesses had to say about the matter the gentleman representing Mrs. Colby and the petitioners got together in an adjoining room and talked things over.

After a discussion between the parties at interest they announced to the Board of Health that they had reached an agreement whereby Mrs. Colby had agreed to dispose of all of the cats and of all of the dogs with the exception of six.

—Hingham's new town office building is nearing completion in all but the minor details which require considerable time. The selectmen have assigned the office rooms to the different departments of the town, but the steel work for the vault has not arrived and is loafing along the route somewhere. It is hoped to have the building in shape to use at the primaries next month.

CHELSEA AMONG THE HIGHEST

Has a Tax Rate This Year of $21.80

The Chelsea's tax rate was announced this week and is $21.80 on every $1000, an increase of 40 cents compared with the rate a year ago.

The real valuation of the city is $24,811,700, and the personal $3,833,500 In 1912 it was $23,931,400 and $4,131,450, respectively. The resident bank account this year was $82,480; last year it was $37,310. Poll tax payers this year number 10,000.

The city requirements total $528,422, which is $14,290.81 more than last year. The state requirements are for the state tax $51,360, north metropolitan sewerage tax $28,507.06, metropolitan park tax $15,033.21 and Charles river basin tax $2474.13.

The Chelsea rate is among the highest of Massachusetts cities the only one in excess thus far reported being Marlboro with $21.90 Everett has a rate of $21.00. Others $20.00 and over are: Salem and Woburn at $20.50; Cambridge, Melrose and Taunton at $20.80; Lynn and Fitchburg at $20.00. Nine cities out of 19 have reported rates less than $20.00. Quincy has not been heard from.

DON'T QUARREL AT MEALS.

There are families who reserve all their unpleasantness for meal hours; they think it a convenient occasion to discuss things that have gone awry, to thrash out grievances, to dwell on disagreeable of gloomy subjects. If they but knew it they are courting dyspepsia more surely than if they indulged in mince pie or terrapin.

Haven't you gone to the table ravenous with hunger and had your appetite leave you in the face of a family quarrel? Who has not felt their food heavy after a meal hour of ructions? Yet how few blame it on its real cause, which it the interruption of digestion by mental agitation.

The meal hour should be the pleasantest hour in the day. It should be looked forward to rather than dreaded; and it will be if parents insist on each one being agreeable. Contribute to the family good cheer and dyspepsia will vanish.

To one household where meals had been constant turmoil, where food, health or the latest worry were the sole conversational efforts, came a woman with wholesome views on table cheer.

She directed the talk into agreeable channels, she exerted herself to be entertaining, until the captious family followed her lead. Finally they agreed on a fine for every unpleasant subject broached at meals.

Not only did the manners of that family improve, but also the general health. The children from being easily sickened by their food and constantly doctored for weak digestions, could eat anything with impunity.

Cheer during meals will do away with the need of digestive tablets. Make it a rule to come to the table smiling, and continue to smile though the food does not suit you and every one else is down on her luck. Your smile will prove contagious.

Good manners are desirable, but not so desirable as good health. If your child can only learn to eat well through constant nagging at meal time, better let it slip up in its table manners. Many children refuse to eat at table because their hunger is driven away by reproof.

A mother once complained to her doctor that her small son had no appetite; no matter how tempting the food, he could not eat it, though he seemed hungry between meals. The physician asked to be invited to lunch, which the child ate with the family.

At the close of the meal he said: "It is not your boy's digestion that is at fault, but his mother. Let that boy's manners alone. Stop your incessant, 'Willie, your elbows,' 'do not smack your lips,' If you think he will not shine as a gentleman without such coaching take fifteen minutes midway between meals for lessons in table breeding, but stop your nagging while he eats if you would not have a chronic dyspeptic."

Watch your table talk, keep it pleasant at any cost, learn to digest your food with laughter and fight dyspepsia with cheerfulness, and not only will your home life be happier, but you will forget the weak stomach.

—James Duncan says his obligation to the unions which have reposed their trust in him prevents him from becoming Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts. Spoken like a man! says the Times of Barre, Vermont.

NEW BOOKS ON CIVIL WAR

Recently Added to Thomas Crane Public Library

Editor Quincy Ledger:

The Gettysburg Reunion was an event the results of which cannot be measured, and the stories of Gettysburg have only whetted the appetite of readers for more.

The Thomas Crane Public Library has just added two books bearing upon this subject of deepest interest and importance. One has for its author Jesse Young, who was an assistant adjutant at the battle, and who has kept in touch with all that has been written on the subject for fifty years. One might say that he has compressed the whole library into one volume.

The other work is "The Life of General Meade," in two volumes. No public library is complete without these two volumes. Volume one is not the biography of General Meade up to the time he assumed command of The Army of the Potomac, but is an exhaustive history of the Mexican War as well. If one does not care especially for this, volume number two begins with his assumption of command of the Army of the Potomac when General Hooker suddenly and unexpectedly resigned.

If history students are still in doubt as to why Meade was justified in not following up Lee when the Battle fo Gettysburg had been won, the reasons are more clearly and fully set forth in his biography than in any previous statement.

It is well that both eof thse books are available during the life time of many of the survivors of the Civil War, and one might well say that the last word on the Battle of Gettysburg has been said when he has carefully read through the pages of this second master-piece.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

A most pleasing and interesting entertainment opened at this house yesterday and a continual round of applause was accorded to each and all of the talent participating. An audience that filled nearly every seat last night vied with each other in showing their appreciation of the different acts.

The Tremont Quartet were royally received and in their many selections their blending of voices was beautiful. Then there's a rich streak of comedy in this act that must be seen to be fully appreciated. Field Barnes is a crackerjack with the xylophone. Maudie Scott & Co. in their dramatic playlet "In Tennessee" made a great hit.

Lewis and Wyatt, who made so many friends while here this summer with "The Kincaide Players," were received with ovations and their singing of illustrated songs and the "Hunting Duet from King Arthur" received storms of applause. Jack and Mabel Price, black face artists were very pleasing in their skit, "How to be a Soldier." The pictures are all splendid.

HER SUBLIME FAITH.

A dentist over in the Rose building has a little daughter who believes absolutely in the efficacy of prayer. If you want anything, pray for it, and you'll get it—that's what she thinks.

The other day her father, who tells the story, says the Cleveland Plain-Dealer, was trying to shame her for having disobeyed him.

"What would you do if papa were to die?" he asked her.

"Oh," she told him, "mamma and I'd both pray for another papa for me, and we'd have one the very next day."

BRIEFS

Miss Gladys H. Kelly of 29 Phillip street, Weymouth, has returned home after enjoying two weeks with friends in Quincy, Wollaston and Revere.

Assistant Surgeon Dentist Harry W. Blaisdell writes to a friend that he is now aboard the U. S. S. Washington at the Brooklyn navy yard and much pleased with his new appointment.

When the telephone bell rings and you answer and the telephone girl says sweetly, "Please excuse it," you will be bewildered. What she really means is: "I beg your pardon—you were called by mistake." The change went into effect on Monday.

Edward Bennett and John O'Connell who have been in Maine where they are following up building construction spent the week end at their home on Grove street. Both are members of a base ball team and their conditions point to the regular life the boys are following.

SPENT 23 YEARS IN AFRICAN WILDS

Black Men Are Splendid Race, Says Missionary.

WOMEN ARE SUFFRAGETTES.

More Advanced In Every Way Than the Men, Says Scotchman, Returning to America — Cannabalism Rarely Practiced, and Never by the Women. Opposed to Conversion.

Daniel Crawford, a Scotchman, who lost himself in the heart of Africa for twenty-three years and who recently produced a book called "Thinking Black," arrived in New York a few days ago. The missionary author is a short man with sandy hair, beard and mustache. He has sharp flashing eyes and a manner of speaking rapidly and with great emphasis.

"For twenty-three years," said Mr. Crawford on his arrival, "I never wore a collar, never saw a train of cars and hardly ever spoke to a white man. I really feel more negro than white man. A quarter of a century ago I was a young man, and I was dying of consumption. I heard that the climate of Africa would be good for my trouble, and I went there as a missionary. I struck into the heart of the country alone and lived by my rifle.

Blacks a Magnificent Race.

"I found the black men in Africa a magnificent race," Mr. Crawford continued. "I settled among the Luban tribes. There are about a million of these people. They speak a wonderful language, which it took me years to learn. There are twenty-three tenses of the verb and the noun has nineteen genders. I translated the Bible into the Luban language and also wrote a grammar, which, incomplete though it is, gives a pretty good idea of the tongue."

"Did you find any of these peoples cannibals?" Mr. Crawford was asked.

"Very few," he replied, "and it may interest you to know that there is no such thing as a female cannibal. Although the men may eat human flesh the women of the same tribe never do. The women are further advanced than the men and they band together to protect themselves from 'man the monster.' Yes, the movement for equal suffrage is probably stronger in Central Africa than anywhere in the world."

Advised Against Conversion.

"And were you able to convert these people to Christianity?"

"The tribesmen with whom I made my residence were ready to profess Christianity, but I dissuaded them from it. They would have been but nominal Christians, and I feared that a change of faith would result in their destruction. Unless you have seen them as they are you can have but a faint conception of these black men in their natural state. The 'civilized' blacks have picked up all your vices and few of your virtues. But the negro under natural conditions possesses a culture of his own. He has a definite and delightful code of etiquette."

Mr. Crawford said that after his visit to this country was over he would return to Africa to live again among the people with whom he has chosen to spend the greater part of his life.

LESS AMERICANS TO CANADA.

Report Shows Decrease of Such Immigration to Dominion.

Immigration figures for the first three months of the fiscal year just issued at Ottawa, Ont., show an increase of British and European immigrants over the same period last year and a heavy decrease in immigration from the United States.

American settlers entering Canada during the first quarter this year numbered 44,908, as against 53,343 in the same period last year. Total arrivals were 210,206, as against 175,346 in the same period last year. Of these 84,305 came from Great Britain, an increase of 15,000. The government estimates that the American settlers brought with them in cash and effects upward of $67,000,000.

SHINS RUE SLIT TROUSERS.

First Man to Wear Them Is Kicked by Newsboys.

A martyr to fashion, W. Leffingwell Doak, a member of the north side gentility of Pittsburgh, was mobbed by a gang of newsboys in that city. Doak was the first wearer of the prophesied slit trousers.

When the boys saw the innovation they gathered about Doak, voicing uncomplimentary criticisms. Finally they began to jostle him and kick him in the shins. At sight of a policeman they scattered.

Doak's trousers were of a light check material. The slit extended from the bottom outside to about six inches from the knee. Bright green hosiery of the length women wear were disclosed.

New Gold Field In Kongo.

A gold field of exceptional richness has been discovered in the southern part of the province of Katanga, in the Belgian Kongo, acording to dispatches just received in Antwerp. Some of the samples are declared to yield an ounce of gold to the ton.

ORGANIZATION TO BRING WAR

President Believes Movement Is Not Extensive One

MISREPRESENTATIONS MADE

Ex-Governor Lind Now Installed In American Embassy In Mexico City —Arrival Causes Demonstration by Students and Laborers Who Support Huerta's Attitude Toward Mediation

Washington, Aug. 12.—President Wilson let it be known that he was inclined to believe there was an organized desire—proceeding from sources unknown to him—to bring on a war between the United States and Mexico. The president does not regard the movement as extensive but as very troublesome, and referred to misrepresentations in some individual newspapers. He indicated that he shared somewhat the views of Senator Williams, who declared in a speech last Saturday that an organized lobby existed to involve the United States in war. There is no occasion for alarm, in the opinion of the president, who told callers that within the last forty-eight hours the Mexican situation had improved materially. It was made clear by the president to those with whom he discussed the situation that the instructions to John Lind, his personal representative were chiefly to inform the American government how things stood, generally, in Mexico and just what were the opportunities for the good offices of the United States in the interests of peace.

Sooner or later, it was pointed out, Mr. Lind will make certain suggestions to the Huerta government through the American embassy, but in just what circumstances has not yet been fully determined upon. Anything in the suggestions that may properly be made public will be revealed, according to administration officials here, and foreign governments will be constantly apprised of the various steps taken by the United States. This may not take place, however, for several days.

Ex-Governor John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson in Mexico City, installed himself in temporary offices at the United States embassy as unofficial adviser to the American charge d'affaires, Nelson O'Shaughnessy. Lind passed several hours in close conference with the charge, discussing the difficulties of the Mexican nation.

The arrival of Lind, which was the direct cause of a public manifestation, when a thousand students and laborers paraded in support of General Huerta's attitude toward American mediation, has of itself been devoid of any thrills. When Lind, alighted from his train after a tedious day's journey from Vera Cruz, there were only a few persons about the station who seemed at all curious to watch his movements.

N. A. Jennings and Marvin Ferree, American newspaper correspondents, were arrested and are held by order of the minister of the interior. The nature of the charges against them is not made known. Jennings is a representative of the Hearst newspapers and Ferree is correspondent of a Los Angeles newspaper.

Secretary Daniels announced that the cruiser Tacoma had been ordered from Newport, R. I., to the east coast of Mexico to take aboard American citizens desiring to leave the turbulent southern republic. Many Americans have found refuge on board the battleships of Rear Admiral Fletcher's squadron, but as the battleships can go into only a few of the larger harbors, it was decided to dispatch a vessel of light draft to drop into shallow harbors along the coast. The Tacoma will proceed at once to Norfolk for coal and then steam southward, probably to join the battleships of Vera Cruz.

OYSTER PROSPECTS GOOD

Connecticut and Great South Bay Report Good Sets

New Haven, Aug. 12.—Every indication is shown of a good oyster set for the season of 1913, something which the Connecticut growers have not been favored with in the last few seasons. It is a little early yet to be sure about the beds in deep water, but those nearer shore show a fine set.

New Haven growers with interests in Great South bay, Long Island, are getting reports of the same thing from there, and have reason to expect that the set will be good in Narragansett bay as well. This means much to the growers for future seasons. Millions of bushels of oyster shells have been thrown overboard on the beds this year.

Augusto's Casket Riddled

New York, Aug. 12.—Instead of presenting arms when ordered to do so the military escort to the body of Tancrede Augusto, late president of Hayti, aimed their rifles at the casket and riddled it with bullets, according to Marfield Kemp of Lexington, Ind., a young engineer, employed by the National railroad of Hayti, who reached here from Port-Au-Prince.

EXPLOSION IN CHEMICAL PLANT

One Man Is Killed and Two Seriously Injured

Newton, Mass., Aug. 12.—Antonio Bolselli, 49, of 5 Quirk street, is dead and two fellow workmen, Frank Zezan, 26, and James Cafarello, 34, lie seriously injured at the Newton hospital, as the result of a terrific explosion of a quantity of fusee at the chemical plant of the Vulcan Manufacturing company, Newtonville.

The men were at work tamping the fusee into a huge papier mache carrier, when from some unknown cause the explosion occurred. A tongue of red flame leaped into the air, and then the fusee exploded with a thunderous roar, hurling the men into the air and wrecking the small room in which they were working.

Ten other workmen in the building after quickly recovering from the shock of the explosion, rushed into the wrecked room, where they found the three men lying on the floor, mangled and burned. Bolselli's left arm was blown completely off.

FOURTEEN SENTENCED

Result of Sunday's Rioting by Suffragettes

London, Aug. 12.—In Bow street police court the five women and nine men arrested in Sunday's suffrage riot in Whitehall, led by Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, were sentenced to jail for from one to two months. Miss Pankhurst, who was hurt in the melee, is in a nursing home and when she recovers will be returned to Holloway jail.

The riot resulted from Miss Pankhurst's favorite Sunday pastime of trying to storm the official residence of Premier Asquith in Downing street. The open air meeting was under the auspices of the Free Speech Defence committee and was arranged in behalf of George Lansbury, the male suffragette sympathizer, who is out of jail under the "cat and mouse" act.

Only 200 Out of 30,000 Escape

London, Aug. 12.—A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Calcutta, reports an appalling loss of life when the Damodar river burst its banks near Burdwan, flooding the country for miles around. Burdwan is submerged six feet. Only 200 of its 30,000 inhabitants reached the safety of the railroad depot.

Lodge Names Boy For West Point

Washington, Aug. 12.—Lawrence Dwight of Weston, son of Theodore S. Dwight, United States consular agent at Vevey, Switz., was named by Senator Lodge as a principal for the West Point examinations.

Played With Gun, Boy Dies

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 12.—A revolver that refused to go off on schedule cost the life of 17-year-old Leo LaMothe.

WITH INTENT TO MURDER

Mrs. Alice B. Frost Is Arrested In Somerville

WOMAN WOUNDED HER FRIEND

Both Claim Shooting Was an Accident Which Happened While She Was Showing Him a Revolver—Weapon Was Discharged Hitting Him In Side

Somerville, Mass., Aug. 12.—On a warrant charging her with assault with intent to murder, Mrs. Alice Frost, 35 years of age, the woman who shot herself in the left breast on the afternoon of July 5 last, after she had shot a friend, Arthur T. Holt, was placed under arrest by Lieutenant Carter and Inspector Kennedy at her home, 21 Ashland street, late yesterday.

Owing to the condition of the woman she was not taken to the police station, Carter and Kennedy summoning Clerk of the Court Daniel H. Bradley, and he admitted Mrs. Frost to bail in the sum of $1000, furnished by her brother, Charles B. Brigham.

The warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Frost was sworn out by Chief of Police Kendall. The woman gave her occupation as a waitress.

Both principals in the shooting have maintained that the shooting was accidental. On the afternoon of the shooting Mrs. Frost is said to have stated: "The shooting was accidental," and that she turned the revolver on herself because "I did not want to live after what I had done."

Mrs. Frost was discharged from the Somerville hospital last Friday afternoon and Arthur T. Holt, the man she is accused of shooting, called at the institution with an automobile and drove her to her home on Ashland street.

It was stated at the time of the shooting that Holt went to the Frost home on Saturday afternoon, July 5, to break off the friendship between himself and Mrs. Frost of some ten years' standing. Mrs. Frost is said to have gone to a drawer in a desk in the parlor and taken out a revolver which she was showing to Holt, when it exploded, the bullet striking him a glancing blow on the rib. Holt ran out of the house and Mrs. Frost evidently turned the revolver on herself as she was later found lying on the floor of the parlor with a bullet wound in the left breast.

WITH MILITARY HONORS

Colonel Cody, Noted English Aviator, Laid at Rest

Aldershot, Eng., Aug. 12.—The body of F. S. Cody, the Anglo-American aviator who was killed here in a hydro-aeroplane accident Aug. 7, was buried with military honors in the soldier's cemetery here. Enormous crowds lined the route of the funeral procession, paying a splendid tribute to the popularity of the dead airman.

The coffin was mounted on a gun-carriage and covered with the Union Jack. It was followed to the grave by contingents of all arms and the full strength of the Royal Flying corps. As it passed the various barracks in the camp, the troops turned out and stood with bared heads.

The pipers of the famous Black Watch (the forty-second Highlanders) headed the procession playing a Scottish "lament," while the bands of the other regiments played funeral marches.

MURDERED IN REVENGE

Brothers Slain on Newark Street and Woman Injured

Newark, N. J., Aug. 12.—Gaspero Privinzano, 35, and Joseph Privinzano, 25, brothers, were shot to death, and Mrs. Elizabeth Richards, 30 years old, wounded here by four men who escaped. The shooting occurred in the foreign section.

With another brother, the Privinzano's were returning home after working all night as steamboat coal-passers. Mrs. Richards was on her way to church. She was shot in the shoulder by a stray bullet.

The motive for the killing is believed to have been revenge. One of the Privinzano brothers was a foreman of coalpassers on a Coney Island boat and the murderers are believed to be men recently discharged by him.

$50 For Low Cut Waist

Savannah, Aug. 12.—Recorder John E. Schwarz fined Miss Bessie Carter $50 for appearing on Savannah's main shopping thoroughfare in a short skirt and low cut waist. Henry Smoak, her escort, paid $25.

Record Bedford Tax Rate

Bedford, Mass., Aug. 12.—The tax rate for the coming year is to be $22 per $1000. This is the highest in the history of the town. The total valuation of $1,790,000 is a gain of $130,000.

ORDERS AN INVESTIGATION

Governor of New York to Probe State Departments

COMMITTEE MAY CALL SULZER

He Will Fight Impeachment With Technicalities—Declares Legislature Is Not In Session—May Refer Matter to Courts Which Will Cause Delay In Proceedings

Albany, Aug. 12.—Fully expecting that a move will be made to impeach him when the Frawley committee reports to the reconvened extra session of the legislature, Governor Sulzer, still defiant, struck back vigorously at Tammany and Charles F. Murphy, when by his order, John A. Hennessy got under way his investigation of the state departments.

The Hennessy probe is really Sulzer's effort to expose the New York bors and that fur will fly a-plenty is not doubted. The Hennessy inquiry will be conducted without gloves, it is declared, and will search into every corner of state politics, bring out every possible bit of information that will smirch Tammany and divert attention from the governor.

Commissioner Delaney of the department of efficiency and economy was the first witness. Hennessy quized him mainly about his appointments.

Members of the Frawley committee, who have been at Saratoga since Saturday making up their report and recommendations arrived in Albany late yesterday and it will soon be known whether Sulzer will be invited to testify before the Frawley probers.

In view of the governor's contention that the present legislature has ceased to exist, the opinion is expressed by some of his supporters that an effort will be made to block the program of his opponents through some legal process. Attorney General Cormody recently rendered an opinion that the legislature is still in session.

It is pointed out that if the governor's attorneys procure cognizance of this matter by any judicial tribunal, whatever the finding of such tribunal might be, the result would be to start the case on its way to the court of appeals, and as the judges of this court also are made by the constitution an essential part of the court of impeachment, it would be impracticable for them to act in this latter capacity until the judicial proceedings were finally settled. Even if the final adjudication should be adverse to the governor it would greatly delay an impeachment trial and unless specially expedite the issue might not be determined before a new assembly qualifies.

With reference to the contention of Governor Sulzer in his statement that his account with the stock exchange house of Harris & Fuller, New York, was not a speculative one, but a loan, the firm issued the following statement:

"The governor's statement is correct as borne out by the transcript of the account which we rendered to the Frawley committee.

"It was not a speculative account in any sense of the term.

"The statement of Judge Olcott, our attorney, before the Frawley committee previously to the testimony of Melville B. Fuller, explains our position perfectly.

"When the value of the collateral contracted so that the equity in the loan was below the required amount of course, it was a matter of business for us to ask for more collateral or a reduction of the debit.

"When we delivered the collateral, the equity in the loan at the then market prices, was approximately $6000 and considered ample to protect the loan."

TURKEY WON'T QUIT

Claims Invasion Was Caused by Atrocities of Bulgars

Constantinople, Aug. 12.—Turkey firmly declined to give up Adrianople in a courteous note handed by the sublime porte to the ambassadors of the powers.

The note explains that the Turkish invasion of the Midia-Maritzo zone, which is beyond the new frontier fixed by the treaty of London, was forced by the atrocities of the Bulgarians.

To Try Feudist For Murder

Winchester, Ky., Aug. 12.—Thomas Davison of Breathitt county was placed on trial here charged with complicity in the murder of former Sheriff Ed Callahan, the noted feud leader. Three men have been tried already on this same charge, convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. Fourteen others are to be tried on the charge.

Meet After 27 Years

Lebanon, N. H., Aug. 12.—After twenty-seven years of separation, Mrs. Lulu Dunn of this town and her only brother, Arthur Nason, were reunited by the appearance at the home of Mrs. Dunn of her brother, who is a traveling salesman from the west.

CARTER GLASS

Virginia Congressman Who Heads Banking and Currency Committee

CURRENCY BILL UP

Is Strongly Defended by Head of Banking Committees

Washington, Aug. 12.—Vigorous defence of the administration currency bill by Representative Carter Glass, one of its authors, was received with general applause and support in the first session of the caucus of Democratic members of the house before which the measure is to be worked over and its fate determined.

Representative Glass' speech followed an unsuccessful attempt by the insurgent Democrats of the banking and currency committee to have the caucus thrown open to the public. Led by Representatives Neeley of Kansas and Ragsdale of South Carolina, members of the committee, Representative Henry of Texas and others, the advocates of open caucus mustered 63 votes against 119.

The currency bill was laid before the caucus by Representative Glass as chairman of the committee with the indorsement of eleven Democratic members.

It is expected that the caucus will be read and debated section by section after the general debate is ended.

FREE PULP AND PAPER FROM SWEDEN

They Will Come Under Most Favored Nation Treaty

Washington, Aug. 12.—Sweden was conceded the right to send wood pulp and paper into the United States free of duty.

The state and treasury departments have decided the recent decision of the customs court that nations having "most favored nation" treaties with the United States were entitled to free wood pulp and paper, because that privilege was granted Canada, is applicable in principle to Sweden.

Claims of other countries not directly parties to the customs court suit are under consideration by the government. Russia will not be given free entry because of the abrogation of the treaty of commerce and navigation of 1832.

BYSTANDERS SHOT

Fighters Escape Injury but Are Arrested

South Framingham, Mass., Aug. 12.—Abbell Seconni, 28 years old, and Antonio Rezzolli, 28 years old, are in the Framingham hospital suffering from severe pistol wounds. They were shot as they stood in company with others and witnessed a desperate hand-to-hand pistol duel between two fellow countrymen for the possession of the revolver.

Seconni was shot in the right side and Rezzolli was shot in the abdomen. Adanno Bronzetti and Frank Soppennia were arrested. The former was held in $4000 for the grand jury and the latter was released on $300 surety.

GREAT FEAT FOR BOY

Swims Fifteen Miles In Six Hours and Fifteen Minutes

New York, Aug. 12.—Swimming from Coney Island to the Brooklyn bridge, a distance of fifteen miles, was a feat accomplished by Edward Snyder, 12 years old. He covered the distance in 6 hours and 15 minutes.

Young Snyder was piloted by his father, Commodore Charles Snyder of the United States Volunteer Life Saving corps, and Henry E. L. Mason, vice president of the United States Humane society.

Two Killed by Train

Buffalo, Aug. 12.—Harold S. Warner, real estate man, and Charles Calkins, his father-in-law, were killed when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Nicket Plate passenger train, five miles west of here.

Minute "Movies" of the News Right Off the Reel

Nonunion chickens are now tabooed in Boston. The Chicken Pickers and Handlers' union won a strike.

Moving picture shows on ocean liners is the latest plan of those catering to the entertainment of voyagers.

Amos Rusie, once famous pitcher of the Giants, is now a plumber in Seattle. Not long ago he worked as a day laborer.

Treasury officials are puzzled over the withdrawal from circulation of the recent issue of buffalo nickels. It is believed they are being hoarded.

Eccentric Swiss living in Moscow left $10 in his will to a Geneva editor to "drink to my death on Jan. 1 and Aug. 1 of every year." The editor never heard of the man, but will accept the bequest.

WALKER CURRENCY PLAN SUBMITTED TO WILSON.

Well Known Editor Offers Substitute For Complex Currency Systems.

John Brisben Walker, formerly chairman of the Colorado state monetary commission and whose reputation as editor and publisher is nation wide in character, has submitted a plan dealing with the currency problem to President Wilson which is far simpler than any of the many hitherto offered to the administration for consideration. In a letter to the president, under date of July 26, 1913, now made public for the first time, Mr. Walker points out that the plan was previously presented as a substitute for the Aldrich bill in 1911. He adds that it would be "certain in its operation, quick of action, infallible and requiring no political pull."

"First.—Subject all commercial paper accepted by the banks to a double inspection, first by the government and then by the clearing house, and stamp 'O. K.' if so found.

"Second.—Permit any banker who finds danger of unexpected withdrawals to go to the nearest subtreasury—subtreasuries to be established at convenient points throughout the country—and upon presentation of his inspected and stamped commercial paper obtain from the government currency amounting to 50 per cent of the face value of the paper so presented.

"The banker's visit need not be known to the public, his right to the currency could not be questioned, there would be no political influence required, and the government's security would be absolute. A high rate of interest would prevent undue inflation.

"If this plan appeals to you I will be glad to send a report prepared upon the subject while acting as chairman of the Colorado state monetary commission. But if it seems to you obscure or unworkable I will feel obliged if you will so state in your answer, that I may be able to lay stress upon any points which may seem weak or doubtful."

WOMAN IS GAME WARDEN.

Mrs. Gibboney of Alabama Not Afraid to Arrest Lawbreakers.

Mrs. Norma F. Gibboney of Aloha, Ala., is the only woman game warden in the United States. Living near Mobile bay, she has always been fond of outdoor life and is expert in the use of the rifle and shotgun. Her friends were not surprised when Governor O'Neal appointed her a state game warden, which gives her authority to make arrests. Speaking of her new place, she said:

"While I am not fond of publicity about most of my affairs, I am not averse to having it known that I am deeply in earnest about protecting the birds. I have been shocked to find how rapidly the birds are disappearing right here in my own neighborhood.

"I wanted to do something to stop the wanton slaughter, and if possible, give them an opportunity to come back to their old haunts. An ardent sportsman, a friend of mine, suggested that I could do this most effectively by being appointed a game warden.

"Having ample leisure and a good saddle horse, I decided that I would do what I could if appointed to stop the pothunters and the game hogs from slaughtering our birds. I have made two arrests already and am ready to make more if it is necessary."

SCIENTISTS SEEK NEW GAS.

A New Ballooning Era Forecasted if Search Is Successful.

Leading London scientists, including Sir William Ramsay, are making an endeavor to produce on earth the new gas coronium, the weight of which is one-sixteenth that of hydrogen, whose presence in the sun was definitely established at the time of the last eclipse.

The successful production of coronium would revolutionize the science of aerostatics. The new gas would take the place of hydrogen in balloons, according to scientists.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

his face expressed considerable uncertainty and no little doubt as to the future welfare of his as yet partially divulged proposition.

"It's easy to be a brick, my boy, if it involves no more than the changing of a single letter in one's name. I'd like to attend the convention anyway," said Brock amiably.

"Well, you see, Brock," said Mederoft lamely, "I fear you don't quite appreciate the situation. I want you to pose as Roxbury Mederoft."

"You— What do you mean?"

"I thought you'd find that a facer. That's just it. You are to go to Vienna as Roxbury Medcroft, not as yourself. Ha, ha! Ripping, eh?"

"'Pon my soul, Rox, you are not in earnest?"

"Never more so."

"But, my dear fellow"—

"You won't do it? That's what your bone means," in despair.

"It isn't that, and you know it. I've got nothing to lose. It's you that will have to suffer. You're known all over Europe. What will be said when the trick is discovered? Gad, man!"

"Then you will go?" with beaming eyes. "I knew it would appeal to you as an American."

"What does it all mean?"

"It's all very simple, if one looks at it from the right angle, Brock. Up to last night I was blissfully committed to the most delightful of outings, so to speak. At 10 o'clock everything was changed. Mrs. Medcroft and I sat up all night discussing the situation with the messenger—my solicitor, by the way. The Vienna trip is out of the question, so far as I am concerned. It is of vital importance that I should return to London tonight, but it is even more vitally important that the world should say that I am in Vienna. See what I mean?"

"No, I'm hanged if I do."

"What I have just heard from London makes me shudder to think of the consequences if I go on east tonight I may as well tell you that there is a plot on foot to perpetrate a gigantic fraud against the people. The county council is to be hoodwinked out and out into moving forward certain building projects, involving millions of the people's money. Our firm has opposed a certain band of grafters, and when I left England it was pretty well settled that we had blocked their game. They have learned of my proposed absence and intend to steal a march on us while I am away. Without assuming too much credit to myself, I may say that I, your old friend, Roxbury, I am the one man who has proved the real thorn in the sides of these scoundrels. With me out of the way they feel that they can secure the adoption of all these infamous measures. My partners and the leaders on our side have sent for me to return secretly. They won't bring the matter to issue if they find that I've returned. It would be suicidal. Therefore it is necessary that we steal a march on 'em. I know the inside workings of the scheme. If I can steal back and keep under cover as an advisory chief, so to speak, we can well afford to let 'em rush the matter through, for then we can spring the coup and defeat them for good and all. But, don't you see, old man, unless they know that I've gone to Vienna they won't undertake the thing. That's why I'm asking you to go on to Vienna and pose as Roxbury Medcroft while I steal back to London and set the charge under these demmed bloodsuckers. Really, you know, it's a terribly serious matter, Brock. It means fortune and honor to me, as well as millions to the rate payers of Greater London. All you've got to do is to register at the Bristol, get interviewed by the papers, attend one or two sessions of the convention, which lasts three days, and then go off into the mountains with the Rodneys. The society reporters will do the rest."

"With the Rodneys? My dear fellow, suppose that they object to the substitution? Really, you know, it's not to be thought of."

"Deuce take it, man, the Rodneys are not to know that there has been a substitution. Perfectly simple, can't you see?"

"I'm d—d if I do!"

"What a stupid ass you are, Brock! The Rodneys have never laid eyes on me. They know of me as Edith's husband, that's all. They are to take you in as Medcroft, of course."

At this point Brock set up an emphatic remonstrance. He began by laughing his friend to scorn; then, as Medcroft persisted, went so far as to take him severely to task for the proposed imposition on the unsuspecting Rodneys, to say nothing of the trick he would play upon the convention of architects.

"I'd be recognized as an impostor," he said warmly, "and booted out of the convention. I shudder to think of what Mr. Rodney will do to me when he learns the truth. Why, Medcroft, you must be crazy. There will be dozens of architects there who know you personally or by sight. You"—

"My dear boy, if they don't see me there they can't very well recognize me, can they? If necessary you can affect an illness and stay away from the sessions altogether. Give a statement to the press from the privacy of the sickroom—regret your inability to take part in the discussions and all that, you know. Hire a nurse if necessary. You might venture to express an opinion or two on vital topics in my name. I don't care a hang what you say. I only want 'em to think I'm there. No doubt our enemies will have a spy or two hanging about to see that I am actually off for a jaunt with the Rodneys, but they will be Viennese, and they won't know me from Adam. What's the odds, so long as Edith is there to stand by you? If she's willing to assume that you are her husband"—

"Good Lord!" half shouted Brock, leaping to his feet, wide eyed. "You don't mean to say that she is—is—is to go to Vienna with me?"

"Emphatically yes. She's also invited. Of course she's going."

"You mean that she's going just as you are going—by proxy?" murmured Brock helplessly.

"Proxy, the devil! 'Pon my soul, Brock, you're downright stupid. She can't have a proxy. They know her. The Rodneys are in some way connections of hers, and all that—third cousins. If she isn't there to vouch for you, how the deuce can you expect to"—

"Medcroft, you are crazy! No one but an insane man would submit his wife to— Why, good Lord, man, think of the scandal! She won't have a shred left"—

"At the proper time the matter will be explained to the Rodneys—not at first, you know—and I'll be in a position to step into your shoes before the party returns to Paris. Afterward the whole trick will be exposed to the world, and she'll be a heroine."

"I'm absolutely paralyzed!" mumbled Brock.

"Brace up, old chap. I'm going to take you around to the Ritz at once to introduce you to my wife—to your wife, I might say. She'll be waiting for us, and, take my word for it, she's in for the game. She appreciates its importance. Come now, Brock, it means so little to you, and it means everything to me. You will do this for me—for us?"

MANY ATTACKED BY MAD DOG

Is Cornered and Shot on Adams Street

A large St Bernard dog suffering from the rabies started from South Quincy Sunday, covered the Dorchester district spreading terror in its wake and finally was shot Monday evening near the Rice estate on Adams street by a squad of police armed with carbine rifles and revolvers.

Two men, a horse, two cows and a dog were attacked by the dog and it is feared that others who have not reported their injuries bear scratches and bites of a dangerous nature. The brains o fthe animal were removed by Dr. Abele and were sent to the Harvard Labratory for examination.

David A. Spiero a street car conductor, was bitten Sunday evening in Dorchester and Christopher Kenney of Mattapan is today carrying a badly mutilated arm which he received Monday morning while crossing the Milton meadows.

The disappearance of the dog on Sunday alarmed its owner Stephen Zavatonni of Centre street and Monday he called at the office of the City Clerk to pay this years license to assure its return if picked up by an officer.

Officer George W. Fallon who is covering Atlantic met the dog Monday and patted him. As he stopped to examine its collar for the owners name the dog attacked him. Fallon secured a hold on the collar and both rolled over and over in the street. Dennis O'Niel of Sagamore street was passing and ran to the assistance of the officer. He struck the dog a heavy blow on the head with a hammer and caused him to let go his hold. Before Fallon could draw his revolver the dog romped across the Atlantic meadows at fast speed.

He next appeared on the Quincy Shore oulevard where he made friends with James White of the park police. No trouble was experienced in that section.

During the evening word was received at the station and Chief Burrill dispatched a suad of officers in the patrol. The dog was cornered and the fatal shot was fired by Officer Farrell.

The cows are in quarantine.

Monday morning Russell A. Sears was awakened by a fight on the veranda of his house on Glendale road. He saw the dog tumbling about with a dog answering to the description of the St. Bernard. In the interest of public safety he ordered the dog killed although it bore no signs of the struggle .

A dog owned by James Hayes on Willow avenue was also killed by Dr. Abele this morning because of bites reecived from the St. Bernard.

Two other dogs have been placed under quarantine for possible development. They are owned by F. J. Ripley, of Marlboro street and George A. Thomas of Newton street.

HEBREW CITIZENS' CLUB.

The Hebrews of Quincy have formed a club to be known as the Quincy Hebrew Citizens' Club, with a membership at the present time of 52 and with the prospects of taking in many more members in the immediate future. Hyman Edelstein president at the meeting at which the club was organized and the following were elected as its officers:

Chairman—Joseph Szathmary.

Vice Chairman—Joseph R. Grossman.

Secretary—Max Cooper.

Treasurer—Samuel Castleman.

The main object of the club is to assist in the naturalization and registration of the Hebrews of Quincy. Committees were appointed to consult with the members of that race in the city and secure their membership to the club.

NO WORK FOR NAVY YARD.

Discouraging reports as to conditions in the boiler shop of the Navy Yard at Charlestown were received Monday, says the Globe by Representative Curley in a letter from Lieut. Commander Yancy Williams. Instead of being able to reinstate the men recently laid off, says the letter, the departmennt contemplates discharging or suspending a number of other men in the shops, owing to lack of work. Nor is the outlook good, concludes the note, for any increase whatever for a long time to come.

SANBORN BODY RECOVERED

Fully Identified by Papers Found in His Pockets

A dispatch was received by Chief Burrell from Chief Connolly of Newport, R. I., Monday night, stating that the body of Edwin Sanborn, who had been drowned in Narraganset bay on the day of the Grocers' outing, July 30 had been recovered and had been fully identified by papers found in the pockets of his clothing.

The body was recovered by the naval tug Ontaria, and was landed at the naval coal depot at Bradford. Medical Examiner B. F. Storres, who viewed the body, found evidence which convinced him that it was that of Sanborn.

The body was in such a condition, however, that its immediate burial was imperative and Chief Burrell was notified that unless the body was claimed within a few hours that it would be buried at Newport.

The parents of the boy were notified and steps were taken to have it removed to Quincy. The body encased in a hermetically sealed box is due to arrive in Quincy this afternoon.

Sanborn was one of the party who participated in the outing of the Old Colony Grocers' Association on July 30. The party boarded the steamer Warwick and while in Narraganset bay Sanborn attempted to climb to the main deck from one of the lower decks by the stantions. When half way up he lost his balance and fell over backwards into the water. It was some minutes before the steamer turned around and started for the boy, who could be seen swimming about. Boats from some of the destroyers in the harbor also put out to the rescue but he sank out of sight before aid reached him. The boats searched about for a time but the body did not come to the surface.

SQUANTUM WELL PROTECTED

Atlantic Auto Chemical Makes A Trial Run

The Squantum Improvement Association and the residents of that section of the city are now satisfied that in case of fire the fire apparatus can arrive at the scene in short order. There has been considerable discussion among the Squantumites as to how long it would take the Atlantic auto chemical to reach a fire in case one should start. Mayor Stone was consulted and he consented to give residents a practical demonstration. This demonstration took place Monday night.

The auto chemical from the Central Station was sent to Atlantic to cover that section, should a fire start while the speed trial was being held, and when one blow was sounded on the fire alarm circuit shortly after 6 o'clock, the Chief and Atlantic chemical started from the Atlantic station for box 82 at Squantum, which is located near the residence of Mrs. N. V. Titus.

Although the Atlantic auto chemical is geared down so that excessive speed is not possible, the apparatus made the run from the fire station to the box in just five minutes, which is considered remarkably good time.

Chief Litchfield started in his auto from the Atlantic fire station at the same time. Dick Williams was at the wheel and he let her out on the Squantum speedway and reached the box in 3 minutes and 55 seconds from the time the blow was sounded, which is going some.

The distance between the two points roughly estimated by the atlas is 9,450 feet or a little less than two miles.

AN AMERICAN TRAIT.

"A pronounced American trait is the rush and scramble for wealth. Our national life is weakened by this mad pursuit of money. Money is desired, not only for the luxuries it brings, but above all, for the power it confers. All classes and conditions of men bow before the golden deity. There is not much importance attached, in many quarters of our land, to the manner by which wealth is acquired. The advice the shrewd father gave his son is largely followed today: 'Get rich my son, honestly if you can, but, above all, get rich.'"—Suburban Life.

NEW ARRIVALS AT HOUGHS NECK

Two Sales of Cottages Reported This Week

The winners at the weekly whist at the Pandora hotel were Mrs. Alice Staples, Irving Serposs, Alfred Trott and Mrs. Eunice Johnson.

Alfred Trott and family of Worcester and Mrs. Ryder and daughter Annie will arrive at the Pandora, this week.

W. H. Jenness of Cambridge have taken the Torrey cottage on River road.

A. Bletzer of Roslindale is occupying the Lawrence cottage for the balance of the season.

The office of Phillips and Taylor reports the sale of the Willis property to Miss Jane McCallum of Worcester, and the Tucker property to Rev. Adolph Biewend of Roslindale. Both properties are on Rock Island road.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Taber are the guests of Mrs. Albert Taber on Bell street.

C. J. Clonan and family of Roxbury are at the Evanson cottage on River road.

P. H. Finneran of Jamaica Plain and Albert Mitchell of Somerville are at the "We Two" cottage on Winthrop street.

C. E. Densmore of Boston and family are at the Perry Bungalow, Parkhurst street.

New arrivals at the Pandora hotel are John Murphy and family of Dorchester, Mrs. Coleman and two daughters from Cambridge.

JAMES H. COLEMAN.

James H. Coleman of North Weymouth died Monday afternoon at St. Margarets hospital, Boston from pneumonia, following an operation for intestinal trouble. He was in his 38th year and well known in Quincy. He was employed at the American Agricultural Co. at Weymouth where he had charge of the lighters.

Mr. Coleman was taken suddenly ill following the fire which destroyed the plant a few weeks ago. He was operated upon and appeared to be recovering when pneumonia set in.

Mr. Coleman was the son of the late Mathew and Bridget Coleman and was unmarried. He was a member of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, and Quincy Lodge, B. P. O. E.

He was the brother of the late William Coleman who at his death was exalted ruler of the Quincy lodge of Elks. He is survived by a brother Matthew and two sisters. Miss Margaret Coleman and Mrs. Catherine Sweeney. mother of Dr. Mathew Sweeney and Dr. Michael Sweeney.

DISTRICT COURT.

The continued cases of Alto and Turnista Kalbe for assault on Edwin Buski at Quincy were heard and their cases placed on file on payment of $4.30 costs. This is the case that grew out of the racket near Wilson's quarry last June, about which a Boston paper printed a sensational story of Buski being thrown over into the quarry during the mixup. This was false as the injuries to Buski were received from falling on a pile of rocks.

The continued cases of George S. Hatch for violation of the automobile laws at Cohasset were again continued until Wednesday.

Frederick Hitchcock was sentenced to six months in the house of correction for larceny at Weymouth.

Kate McMannus was fined $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth. Harry Shaprio $3 costs, Matthew Long $5, and Thomas Carey $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Harry A. Harrington was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. A suspended sentence of two months in the house of correction was revoked and he was ordered committed. The new case was placed on file.

JOINED JESUIT ORDER.

Oswald Reinhalter, son of Mrs. Mary Reinhalter, nee Hurley, and the late Alphonse Reinhalter of West Quincy, has joined the Jesuit Order and is at the Poughkeepsie novitiate, where he will undergo a course of study covering 14 years.

Mr. Reinhalter was born in West Quincy and graduated from the Gridley Bryant school. He established a high standard after entering High school and was one of the honor pupils. At graduation he read an essay on Quincy.

His sister Miss Alice Reinhalter was also one of the honor pupils of her class at High school and his brother George Reinhalter attained a similar honor at Adams Academy.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Mrs. Frances Dunbar of Granite street is the guest of Mrs. Thomas Magee at North Scituate beach.

The elimination races for American sonders to meet the Germans will begin off Marblehead, Saturday. C. F. Adams, 2d, new Harpoon in entered. The boat has never been given a real tryout, but is supposed to be superior to last year's Harpoon.

George H. Kendrick, of Wollaston, who is summering at Germantown, had a narrow escape from drowning when he fell from the boat while attempting to step on the landing. A good ducking was the only result since he is an expert swimmer.

The annual ladies' night of the Quincy yacht club will be held at the clubhouse, Houghs Neck, Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock. A delightful program has been arranged for the entertainment of the ladies which will include music by Monk's orchestra.

The funerals of two Finnish children were held from the homes of their parents Monday afternoon, Rev. J. E. Lillback of the Finnish Congregational church officiating at both services. The funeral of Jrjo H., the six months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tikkannen was held at 64 West street, and that of Elizabeth M., the four months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Horkin, was held at 73 Copeland street. Both burials were in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

KNOTS PER HOUR.

Nine persons out of every ten will say that such-and-such a steamship is capable of steaming at "25 knots per hour." A nautical man would simply say "25 knots."

The mistake arises from the fact that the landsman thinks that a "knot" is just the nautical term for a "sea mile," which is, roughly, 6080 feet, or about one and one-eighth land or statute miles.

Now, a knot is not a distance at all. It is a speed. The word "speed" combines distance and time. For instance, if we wish to speak of the speed of a train we refer to it as so many miles per hour.

The sailor, has a language peculiar to himself, and he has invented a single word for a unit of speed. Thus a speed of one nautical mile per hour is called one "knot." Hence it is redundant to tack on another "per hour" after the word knot when the word already includes one "per hour."

Perhaps some will ask how the word "Knot" originated. The explanation is simple.

When a seaman wishes to ascertain the speed of his ship he does so by means of a log-line. This consists of a piece of wood called the "log" or "log-ship," to which is attached a length of line.

The line is knotted at regular intervals; the distance between two consecutive knots bearing the same proportion to a sea-mile that the time of a sand-glass used in connection with the operation bears to an hour.

Thus, for instance, if after the log is thrown overboard the line paying freely out lets out 15 of its knots in the time that the sand-glass takes to run down, then the ship is making 15-knots.—Straw Stories.

IT SPOILS THE FISHIN'.

Riding across the country one day, Dr. Blank noticed an old negro who had been for quite a while perched motionless upon a little bridge, fishing silently in the stream beneath.

For some time he watched him from a distance, but finally, overcome by the old fellow's unmoved patience, he rode up and accosted him.

"Hello, Wash! What are you doing up there?".

"Fishin', sah," came the reply.

"Not getting many, are you?"

"No, sah."

"Well, it seems to me you'd get tired fishing so long without a bite."

"I doesn't want no bite, cap'n."

"Well, that's funny. Why don't you want a bite, Wash!"

"Hits this-a-way, cap'n: when I gits a lot of bites, hit takes all meh time to git the fish off'n meh line, an' I doesn't haye no time foh fishin'."—Success Magazine.

—Georgia's homicidal record for the twelve months past is 1303 lives unlawfully taken and only 30 hanging fests—barring, of course, the lynching bees. It's getting to be "ping! ping!" in Georgia and its a fond farewell to the fellow who fails to reach his gun first. The chances to escape the noose of the law are more than forty to one to that of dodging your vis-a-vis's leaden pill if he gets there first. That's why the homicidal industry flourishes so in dear old Georgia.—Columbia Record.

TWO PRIZE ORATIONS.

All That Remain of the Many Works of Elijah Kellogg.

Generation after generation of our American schoolboys have declaimed "Spartacus to the Gladiators" or "Regulus to the Carthaginians" and probably never stopped to wonder what stenographer among the ancients took down these celebrated remarks. As a matter of fact, both were the work of a New England clergyman, Elijah Kellogg. "Spartacus" was written while he was a young theological student at Andover in 1842 for the rhetorical exercises of his class. "Regulus" was written three years later for a fellow student to speak in a prize competition.

What college youth of these days could write such forceful orations? These have never been surpassed, and in some schools it has become necessary to bar them from the list at prize speaking competitions, so invariably do they carry off the prizes.

Of all the work of Elijah Kellogg these alone remain known. Yet he wrote thirty wholesome books for boys, some of them tales of the woods and some of school, and was for years an eloquent pastor at the Seaman's church in Boston. He might have become a Talmage or a Beecher or a Brooks and gained fame in a more fashionable pulpit, but clung to the life work he had chosen.—Detroit Free Press.

CURIOUS ALASKAN BIRDS.

Male Ptarmigans Woo In Two Tongues and Bully Their Mates.

The ptarmigan, an Alaskan bird, is a wonderful imitator of man, if Belmore Browne, who contributes an article on Alaskan game to Outing, is to be believed. To begin with, the author finds that the ptarmigan is a linguist of no mean ability. The male does his wooing in mixed French and English:

"A pleasing side of their mating is the habit of the males of uttering their call while on the wing. They commence with a guttural cackle, which they utter faster and faster until they alight, when they end their song by repeating slowly a call that sounds like ged-up, ged-up, ged-up, ged-up or parlez vous? parlez vous? parlez vous? as they strut proudly about."

In addition to singing in two languages, the ptarmigan conducts his personal and domestic affairs in approved fashion. Could not the following observation apply to human beings as well as to this remarkable bird:

"The males fight constantly, and the hens seem to enjoy these battles and sit about clucking among themselves.

"But once a hen has decided on a mate she comes into her own share of troubles and is beaten and bullied by the mate she has promised to love and obev."

Inexpensive Monotony.

"When I got the order to design a big wholesale house for a firm that has stores in six cities I was elated," said an architect. "I'll plan a building that is bound to be satisfactory," I said to myself, "and then they will give me the commission for those new stores they expect to put up in those other five cities.

"Well, I did turn out a splendid store, a store that was admired by everybody in the wholesale trade. My patrons were pleased, too, but instead of giving me an order for those other buildings they simply used the same plans over again and built all their houses alike. That's what I call playing a low down trick on a fellow."—Philadelphia Ledger.

One Kind of Fame.

Authorities who have in charge some of England's ancient treasures try to discourage the habit of carving initials on these relics. A fine of $15 was recently imposed on a man who had chipped his name in letters six inches high on one of the stones in the "Druids' Circle" near Keswick. Close to the giant stone globe at Swanage a special slab is provided for the harmless reception of the names of all who are addicted to this self advertisement. On popular Alpine summits it is customary for names to be left on cards in emptied wine bottles.

Varying the Old Story.

"I had him right up to the side of the boat—a beauty—the biggest one I ever hooked—was just getting my landing net under him—he gave a flop, and"—

"Yes. I know the rest. He gave a flop—broke his hold—and away he went, and"—

"He gave a flop—cleared the landing net—and landed plumb in the boat."—Browning's Magazine.

No Encouragement.

"Gerald, have I ever given you reato think I would marry you?"

MADE THE MONEY FLY

Fred Hitchcock Sentenced For Six Months

A dispatch from Nashua, N. H., received by the Weymouth police announces the arrest at Hollis, N. H., by Constables Hayden and Howe, of Fred Hitchcock who is wanted by the Weymouth police for the larceny of $100 from an old friend. Hitchcock visited friends at Weymouth on Sunday and it is alleged that when he left he took the money. He accounts for the money found in his possession at the time of his arrest by saying that it was sent to him by the man for whom he worked. Officers from Weymouth went to New Hampshire for him.

Hitchcock was arraigned in court at Quincy this morning and pleaded guilty.

It was brought out in court that aftr Hitchcock got possession of $103 belonging to John Finlay a room mate that he made things fly, and that he was evidently trying to see how quick he could spend the money.

On Sunday morning after buying a paper from a newsboy he gave the boy a five dollar bill as he thought he looked hungry. He then hired an automobile for the day and did the beaches giving away five dollar bills as tips. When it came late in the afternoon he decided to take an automobile ride to Hollis, N. H., his old home and not wanting to go alone he took along six men whom he found sunning themselves in front of the garage Monday morning he called upon an old friend, who was a deacon of a church and gave him $25 as a little present. When the police finally got him, all the money had gone but about $11.

The owner of the money told the court he did not want to be hard on the boy and if he would pay him back the money a little at a time he would be satisfied.

The court however imposed a sentence of six months in the house of correction which caused Hitchcock to shed copious tears as he was led down stairs to the detention room.

Judge Avery then directed the Probation Officer to have a talk with him and it is possible that his sentence may be suspended to enable him to make restitution .

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

OFFICER AVERY TO BE REINSTATED

Exonerated by Mayor Stone Relative to Shooting of Francis Gilrain

Did Not Exceed His Authority As a Police Officer

Mayor Stone in his finding on the hearings held relative to the shooting of Francis Gilrain on the night of June 25, by Officer John J. Avery, finds "that Officer Avery did not exceed his authority and was justified in shooting at the ground to cause the man to stop." He directs the Chief of Police to reinstate him.

The shooting of Gilrain took place on the night of the graduation exercises at the High school. Immediately following the shooting Officer Avery was suspended from active duty pending an investigation. In the meantime counsel for the Gilrain family applied to Judge Avery for a warrant against Avery for assault, but his honor suggested that the application for a warrant be held in abeyance until after the investigation of Mayor Stone. Several hearings were held at which Mr. O'Connell counsel for Gilrain was present and everybody in anyway connected with the affair was examined at length. The hearings were completed last week when Gilrain was examined at the City Hosptial.

"On June 25, 1913, Frank Gilrain of Quincy, while attempting to avoid being arrested, was seriously injured by reason of a bullet discharged from the revolver of John J. Avery, a patrolman of Quincy, entering his right thigh.

On June 26, 1913, in consequence of information received by me I directed the Chief of Police of the city to temporarily relieve said Avery from his beat as patrolman.

On July 11, 1913 the following communication was filed in this office from Frank E. Burrell, Chief of Police of the city:

"On June 25, 1913, John J. Avery, a member of the permanent police force of the City of Quincy, while on duty, and attempting to arrest Frank Gilrain shot and seriously injured him. It appears Gilrain and a man named McDonnell had been engaged in a fight. Officer Avery's attention was called to the fight while he was attending the graduation exercises at the Quincy High School, by some one telling him a man was murdering another.

"When he reached the scene of the fight one man was on the ground, and another (Gilrain) was running away from him; the man who was running away was pointed out to him as the man who had fought with the man on the ground. Avery gave chase, and after calling on Gilrain to stop several times, shot to cause him to stop, not intending to hit him, but did so. I respectfully request a hearing to determine whether Officer Avery in shooting as he did under the circumstances, was justified, or did what as an Officer he should not have done.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) Frank E. Burrell,
Chief of Police, Quincy

Subsequent to date of said shooting, and prior to the 11th of July, I received a communication from James E. O'Connell, Esq., stating that he was attorney for Gilrain, and, in event of any investigation of said shooting held by me, he desired to represent Gilrain thereat.

On July 14, 1913, I appointed July 17, 1913, 7:30 o'clock P. M., at my office, City Hall, Quincy as the time and place when I would hear such evidence as the Chief of Police. Officer Avery and the attorney for Mr. Gilrain desired to have me consider in determining the matter submitted to me in the communication received from Chief of Police Burrell. I also instructed Chief of Police Burrell to investigate the circumstances of said shooting and have at said hearing all persons who were witnesses to the transaction, or whose testimony would aid me in passing thereon, and likewise to have in attendance the doctors who treated Gilrain after the shooting.

Due notice was given to Officer Avery and Mr. O'Connell, attorney for Frank Gilrain, of the time and place for the hearing.

A HEARING WAS HELD

Pursuant to said order a hearing was held on July 17, 1913, and another at the same place on July 30, 1913, at 7:30 o'clock P. M. At each of these hearings, there was present, Chief of Police Burrell, Officer Avery, James E. O'Connell attorney for Mr. Gilrain, City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, and representatives of the press.

The Chief of Police Mr. Avery and Mr. O'Connell presented testimony of witnesses to the shooting, and witnesses whose testimony explained what led thereto. The witnesses were permitted to testify fully and freely and at length as to any information they had relating to the occurence. Mr. O'Connell, as attorney for Mr. Gilrain, was permitted to cross examine the witnesses introduced by the Chief of Police and Officer Avery. The City Solicitor took no part in the hearing except to act in advisory capacity to me.

All parties interested, having offered all the evidence they had concerning the shooting of Mr. Gilrain and the circumstances leading to it, at the conclusion of the hearing of July 30, I declared the hearing closed with the exception of the testimony of Mr. Gilrain, who on account of being confined to the City Hospital was unable to attend, and it was arranged that I should hear his evidence at the Hospital.

Accordingly on August 8, 1913, in company with Mr. O'Connell, I visited the Hospital and received Mr. Gilrain's version of the transaction. and now after having heard all the evidence, and duly and carefully considered the same.

I FIND AS FOLLOWS:

On the evening of June 25th, 1913, Officer Avery in company with Officer Canavan was at the High School graduation exercises, being held in the High School building on Hancock street, Quincy. While there they were notified by a boy that two men were fighting outside of the building. Someone also said "Come down here, you officers, one fellow is killing another over there." The officers ran from the building, saw a crowd of fifteen, eighteen or more men and boys watching a disturbance on Bridge street at the corner of Hancock street. Officer Avery was informed that one man was killing another man on the sidewalk. He saw a man lying on his back, and as he ran toward the prostrate form, and when about ten or fifteen feet from it he saw a man start to run away from near where the man was on the ground. Someone shouted, "There is the fellow you want to get, running away." Officer Avery saw the man apparently lifeless and believing that serious assault, if not murder had been committed, and believing the man was trying to escape, started after the fleeing man for the purpose of placing him under arrest. Officer Canavan went to the man who was on the ground as he was nearer to him.

SHOT AT THE GROUND.

Officer Avery chased the man some distance calling on him to surrender himself. Finding the man was likely to escape. he notified him that he would shoot if he did not surrender himself, and as the man continued to flee, and gain on the officer, the officer drew his revolver and shot at the ground near the man. for the purpose

SHEPPARD--BATHER WEDDING

Former Quincy Man Married at Dover At St. Thomas Church

Quincy and Braintree were interested in the wedding at Dover, N. H., on Monday evening of Miss Frances Elizabeth Bather and Mr. Joel Fithian Sheppard, 2nd, both of Dover, who were married in St. Thomas Episcopal church by the Rt. Rev. Edward M. Parker, D. D., bishop coadjutor of New Hampshire at 8 o'clock. The church was beautifully and elaborately decorated with golden glow and golden rod.

St. Thomas Choir met the wedding procession at the entrance of the church and proceeded them up the aisle, singing to the Lohengrin wedding march. The choir was followed by the six ushers, Messrs. Richard Ordway of Brookline, Fred O. Booth, of Brookline, F. Everett Winslow of Exeter, Joseph L. Morrison of Exeter, Willard P. Sheppard of Braintree and Harold H. Bennett of Portsmouth.

Little Miss Edna Batchelder of Dover, the ringbearer, led the bridal party in a dress of yellow crepe de chene, and was followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Harold Hotchkiss Bennett of Portsmouth, who wore her wedding gown of ivory satin and point applique and carried a bouquet of golden glow.

Two little girls, Miss Rebecca Gallagher of Braintree, Mass., anh Miss Leslie Lincoln of Urbana, Ill., wearing dresses of white muslin, scattered flowers before the bride who came in on the arm of Mr. Edwin Spencer Booth of Brookline.

The bride wore a wedding gown of crepe de chene richly trimmed with Princess lace. Her veil, a present from Countess de Loze of Belgium, was fine Brussells net bordered with Venetian point and fastened with orange blossoms. Her train was carried by Miss Eleanor Dearborn and Miss Doris Ireland of Dover, wearing white muslin with yellow sashes, and she carried a large bouquet of lillies of the valley. The bride wore no other jewels than the gift of the groom a diamond pendant.

They were met at the chancel steps by the groom and his best man, Mr. Frank L. Baxter of Quincy, Mass. and the bishop proceeded with the betrothal service. The bride and groom accompanied only by the matron of honor and the best man, went to the alter rail for the final vows and the benediction and then left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn.

An informal reception was held at the home of the bride immediately following the wedding ceremony, only the out of town guests being present. Before leaving, the bride cut the beautiful wedding cake made by Bollard of Chester, England.

Among the out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Booth of Brookline, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Alvah H. Warner of Salem, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Joel F. Sheppard of Braintree, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard of Quincy, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gallagher of Braintree, Mass.; Miss Molly Brown of Quincy, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Warren W. Adams of Quincy Mass.; Mrs. A. H. Dearborn of Boston Mass.; Mrs. and Miss Gay of Boston, Mass.; the Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of Quincy, Mass.; Mrs. Melvin Hilburn of Brookline, Mass.; Mrs. Francis Lincoln of Urbana, Ill.; Mrs. Lincoln Filene of Weston, Mass.; Mrs. and Miss Ordway of Brookline, Mass. and Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Winslow of Exeter, N. H.

Mrs. Sheppard, the third surviving daughter of the late George Bather, Esq., of Wroxeter, Shropshire, England, is well known in Dover for her markedly efficient service in one of the city's most helpful charities, while Mr. Sheppard, a graduate of Cornell in 1907, who came here from Quincy, Mass., has brought a new vigor to one of the city's long established industries. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard of Quincy.

Many Entries in Ladies Handicap Tennis Tournament

The ladies' handicap tournament in singles under the auspices of the Quincy Tennis club for the silver cup offered by President George E. Pfaffmann, the first rounds of which were played last week, was finished Tuesday afternoon at the club courts on Greenleaf road, before an enthusiastic audience. One round of the semi-finals was played Tuesday afternoon and the final round between Miss Minnie Packard and Miss M. D. Ring, the former winning by a score of 6-2, 6-2, 6-1. The complete score of the tournament was as follows:

FIRST ROUND.

Miss R. Bass beat Miss Page, 6-0, 6-2.

Miss Minnie Packard beat Miss Marion Edwards, 6-3, 6-3.

Miss Priscilla Ring beat Miss Elizabeth Atwood, 6-1, 9-7.

Miss Minnie Packard beat Miss Priscilla Ring, 6-1, 2-6, 6-4.

Miss Minnie Packard beat Miss R. Bass, 7-5, 6-1.

SECOND ROUND.

Miss Marguerite Davis beat Mrs. J. H. Slade, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Miss Marguerite Davis beat Miss Catherine Saville, 6-2, 6-3.

SEMI-FINALS.

Miss M. D. Ring beat Miss Marguerite Davis 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.

FINALS.

Miss Minnie Packard beat Miss M. D. Ring, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1.

ANOTHER SPECIAL MEETING.

The call for a special meeting of the City Council for next Monday evening will probably be issued this afternoon by Mayor Stone. There are several matters that will be included in the call in addition to the public hearing on the tax limit.

These include the reception and action on report of the Finance Committee on the order for $1,500 for repairs to the Neponset bridge, to receive and act on the report of the Committee on Ordinances relative to an ordinance governing speaking in the public streets and places and of street parades.

As the venire which was expected for jurors for the meeting of Monday night did not arrive this matter will also probably be included in the call.

Whether the call will contain any other matters is not known although it is possible that some other urgent matters may be included.

SQUANTUM PERSONALS.

Mrs. J. R. Nelson and son Richard of Brunswick street, left Thursday for Caribo, Maine, where they will visit Mrs. Nelson's sister, Mrs. E. J. Levasseur. They were accompanied by Mrs. A. F. Ulrich and Miss Carolla Ulrich of Caribou, Maine.

Postals have been received from Mrs. Hegan, Bayside road, who is spending the summer at the White Mountains. Her many friends in Squantum are glad to hear she is having a delightful time.

SUDDEN DEATH DANIEL COLLINS

Stone Cutter by Trade and worked on N. Y. Capitol

Daniel Collins, a well-known resident of South Quincy, died suddenly on Tuesday at his home, 44 Madison avenue, aged 54 years. Mr. Collins had not been in the best of health for several months past, and gave up work in order to recuperate, but of late he had been improving so well that he looked forward to going to work again. Tuesday while working in his yard he was stricken with a fainting spell, probably caused by the rupture of an artery, and he became unconscious. His death occurred two hours later.

Mr. Collins was a stone cutter by trade, and at the time he was taken sick he was employed cutting stone for the State capitol at Albany, N. Y., which was partially destroyed by fire about two years ago. He was a member of Div. 5, A. O. H., and Quincy branch of the Stone Cutters' Union. He was married and is survived by his wife who was Miss Catherine Donovan, and several small children. One of his children, Daniel, is one of the Ledger's newsboys.

Mr. Collins is also survived by his mother and three sisters in this city, Mrs. John Callahan, Mrs. James T. Collins and Mrs. Annie O'Brien. He is survived also by a sister, Mrs. Johnson, wife of a sea captain, who lives in Cardiff, Wales. The funeral will be held Thursday morning at St. John's church.

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATORS.

A competitive examination for Investigators under the Industrial Accident Board will be held on September 2. The salary is to be fixed by the Governor and Council; it will probably be $1800 a year. From the eligible list established by this examination names of men will be certified to fill five places and the names of women to fill one place. From this list also names will be certified to fill other similar positions as they may occur.

ADAMS SHORE.

Mr. and Mrs. William Maughan of New York, with their baby are visiting Mrs. JoJseph Bertari of Albatross road

Miss Bertha Lamson of the Summer Villa cottage leaves this week for a trip up through New Hampshire.

Birney Sprague one of the Adams shore baseball nine has returned from a vacation spent in Connecticut.

Clarence Aston of Albatross road is back once more after two weeks spent in Maine.

Mrs. Thomas McKeagney of Adams shore expects to leave shortly on a trip through Canada and New Brunswick.

SOUTH QUINCY GROWING

Many New Houses and Large Tenements

Fine New School House

Building operations in the Third Ward are noticeable in various parts, particularly on the uplands to the south of Independence avenue. During the past ten years houses have been erected i nsuch numbers that a glance at either of the streets leading to the summit convinces one that the district is like a small township. There is plenty of opportunity for more construction, however, at the present time several cellars have been completed and the frame work will be immediately started.

The main operation in the ward is the new Adams school on Mt. Pleasant. About 30 carpenters are at work on the interior and some of the rooms are complete and ready for use. The basement is partly fitted and the immense heating and ventilating apparatus is ready for a good blizzard test. A pleasing feature of each room is the five windows, giving plenty of light, sun and air.

The grounds are tidy, only a few small piles of debris now being left and that is being gradually removed. The grading is next in order. Because of the interest that is being taken in the building visitors will not be admitted without a permit from Warrei Parker, inspector of buildings.

Close by, on Kendrick avenue, a new dwelling house, built and owned

WOMEN AS POLICE.

Of course it is a dry time for the cartoonists and the paragraphers. The bathing suit girl is overworked, the slit skirt not eternally available. Still, those eight policewomen just commissioned by the city of Chicago may not be quite so much of a joke as the journalistic funny men seem to think.

The popular conception of a policewoman was well expressed when the Los Angeles chief provided Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, one of the first women on a city force, with her badge. He remarked that the token ought to be ornamented with lace ruffles. But a star with lace ruffles was just what Mrs. Wells did not want.

The duties of the policewomen recently appointed in a number of cities are usually to inspect moving picture houses, penny arcades, skating rinks, dance halls, parks. It is a large field.

When dealing with slum Apaches, the average city policeman appears a St. George among dragons. In assisting strangers and adjusting clashing traffic, his urbanity coupled with force is the admiration of the world.

If external order prevails, if men and women pursue a calm current of business and pleasure, the average policeman concludes that all is well. Yet out of sight there may be poison viper heads of vice, while the erect and manly "copper" embellishes the street.

What can the policewoman do to guard the young girls that throng city streets, dressing to attract men, and who dance along the primrose path of cheap amusement? Good hearted, innocent girls at the start. But their parents permit them to be masters of their own fates. Few know the real stakes of the game they are playing. Can the policewoman do anything to guide and restrain? If so, her work is wanted. It is up to her tact.

CROSSING THE TRACKS.

Crossing a railroad track just ahead of a flying locomotive saves half a minute, which is very valuable in your business. Furthermore, it demonstrates to gaping spectators the velocity of your automobile, or the paces of your horse. It is a favorite rural amusement, and helps break the monotony of rural life.

The tendency to miscalculate the swift advance of an approaching engine is so common an incident that it gets only very modest publicity. But when a millionaire real estate operator and Arctic adventurer like S. Osgood Pell of New York dies from a crossing accident, it receives considerable newspaper space, not so much from the startling character of the event as from the prominence of the individual.

One suspects that a reason why deaths on grade crossings are numerous, is the fear of seeing over cautious to one's companions or to onlookers. Prudence is considered a more or less humorous quality.

An enormous amount of money is being spent by railroads and municipalities, to abolish grade crossings. Costly fills of earth are made, stone and cement are hauled enormous distances, and the bill appears in the railroad fares.

It never occurred to our grandfathers that this was necessary. When crossing a track, they pulled up with a gentle "Whoa, Dobbin." The driver looked both ways and listened anxiously. Dobbin always looked and listened. If there was a train a half mile away, the driver might proceed, though ready to jump at any unexpected speed. Overhead bridges and underpasses were not required in those times.

If the American temperament were not so goaded on by the hurry spirit, the locomotive engineer would lose his present involuntary task as a public executioner.

OFFICER AVERY

of frightening him or making him stop, but not shooting at him or intending to hit him.

It appears that the bullet from the officer's revolver did enter the thigh of the man causing him to fall. Officer Avery then came up to him and placed him under arrest, medical assistance was summoned, and he was taken to the City Hospital in Quincy, where he is still confined. from the injury received when the bullet entered his person.

I visited the place where the shooting took place and feel well satisfied from examination I made of the premises and medical testimony submitted to me, and the other evidence in the case, that the bullet after leaving the revolver, struck a stone, rock or other substance on the ground alongside of the fleeing man and was thereby deflected and rebounded from the object it struck, and so entered the person of Gilrain.

I further find, without however passing upon the question as to who was THE AGGRESSOR or to blame therefore, that before the officers came out from the school building, the man Officer Avery sought to arrest had been engaged in a struggle on a public street or way of the city, with another man; that he had knocked the man down, and the man was still on the ground when first seen by the police officers; that the men engaged in the fight were Frank Gilrain and Thomas McDonnell; that Officer Avery before placing Gilrain under arrest had not recognized either Gilrain or McDonnell.

In my opinion Officer Avery in his attempt to apprehend the man whom he believed had just committed a serious assault upon another, did not exceed his authority as a police officer and under the circumstances was justified in shooting at the ground to cause the man to stop.

I direct the Chief of Police to revoke the order made relieving him of his route as a patrolman, and direct that he be restored thereto. I regret the consequences of the shooting to Mr. Gilrain, but feel the shooting was accidental and that the Officer should not be held responsible therefore.

Mayor.

ITALIANS HAVE OUTING.

The annual outing of Cirolo Scacei Ampienri, an Italian social organization, was held at Braintree on Sunday with an attendance of over 100 men, women and children. A monster dinner was served and games were indulged in after the inner man had been satisfied. Throughout the day music was furnished by the Athena Musical club of West Quincy. A series of athletic games were run off. The winners in the 100 yard scratch race were Michael Bianchi and Angelo Cellini, and in the handicap dash, the winners were Julia Paoluzzo and Salvatore Lo Presti. Miss Rina Bizzozero and Miss Angelina Bizzozero won the 75 yard girls' race, and Angelo Giorgi and Antonio De Mato were the fastest fat men. The trip to and from the grounds was made in automobiles. The society is planning their annual ball which is held early in the season.

TRIAL OF RIVADAVIA.

Work on the Rivadavia is being pushed to completion at the New York navy yard in preparation for the trial trips which will commence about Sept. 1. A small army of men are employed in painting the bottom and repairing the turbine buckets which broke on the trip to New York.

The ship will anchor off Nantasket next week if there is no hitch in the plans and five days will be spent in coaling and tuning up. The trials will take place on the Rockland course The engine trouble has caused a postponement of about 10 days.

FIRE AT FOSS PLANT.

A storage building of the B. F. Sturtevant Company plant at Hyde Park, in which Gov. Foss is interested, was destroyed Tuesday night; loss $25,000; covered by insurance.

NOT THE CAT HE MEANT.

For a number of years a bitter feud had existed between the Browns and Perkinses, next door neighbors. The trouble had originated through the depredations of Brown's cat, and had grown so fixed an affair that neither party ever dreamt of "making up." One day, however, says Harper's Weekly, Brown sent his servant next door with a peace-making note for Mr. Perkins, which read:

"Mr. Brown sends his compliments to Mr. Perkins, and begs to say that his old cat died this morning."

Perkins, written reply was bitter:

"Mr. Perkins is sorry to hear of Mr. Brown's trouble, but he had not heard that Mrs. Brown was ill."

RULES FOR BIRD PROTECTION FATHERED BY GOVERNMENT

Interest of Birds Rather Than Hunters Is Given First Consideration.

Spring Shooting Prohibited, Also Night Slaughter While Feeding or Roosting.

LAST March a federal law was passed placing game and migratory birds under the protection of the department of agriculture and authorizing that department to form and publish such regulations as would assure the desired protection. The department has issued its rules and an explanation, so sportsmen need not go wrong.

Preparation of the regulations was intrusted to a committee of members of the biological survey appointed by the acting secretary of agriculture March 21, 1913. This committee consists of T. S. Palmer, assistant chief, chairman; A. K. Fisher, in charge of economic investigations, and W. W. Cooke, migratory expert. This committee went into the matter thoroughly, examined data on file, had maps prepared, collected special information and then made up their rules, which they duly reported to the secretary.

The committee went on the theory that regulatory laws heretofore enacted for the protection of game birds had provided long open seasons and had been favorable to hunters rather than to the birds. In the rules proposed the committee sought to reduce the open season to reasonable limits and to give the birds the benefit of the doubt. These regulations differ from the ordinary restrictions under state laws, since they take into consideration the entire range of the species and the condition of the birds at all times of the year, and not merely the local conditions when a certain species is most abundant in some particular state or region. The regulations will become operative on and after Oct. 1, 1913.

Birds Protected.

Regulation 1.—For the purpose of the regulations the following are considered migratory game birds:

(a) Anatidae or waterfowl, including brant, wild ducks, geese and swans.

(b) Gruidae or cranes, including little brown, sandhill and whooping cranes.

(c) Rallidae or rails, including coots, gallinules and sora and other rails.

(d) Limicolae or shore birds, including avocets, curlew, dowitchers, goldwits, knots, oyster catchers, phalaropes, plover, sandpipers, snipe, stilts, surf birds, turnstones, willet, woodcock and yellow legs.

(e) Columbidae or pigeons including doves and wild pigeons.

For the purposes of these regulations the following shall be considered migratory insectivorous birds:

(f) Bobolinks, catbirds, chickadees, cuckoos, flycatchers, grosbeaks, humming birds, kinglets, martins, meadow larks, night hawks or bull bats, nuthatches, orioles, robins, shrikes, swallows, swifts, tanagers, titmice, thrushes, vireos, warblers, waxwings, whippoorwills, woodpeckers and wrens and all other perching birds which feed entirely or chiefly on insects.

Closed Seasons at Night.

Regulation 2.—A daily closed season on all migratory game and insectivorous birds shall extend from sunset to sunrise.

Regulation 3.—A closed season on migratory insectivorous birds shall continue to Dec. 31, 1913, and each year thereafter shall begin Jan. 1 and continue to Dec. 31, both dates inclusive, provided that nothing in this regulation shall be construed to prevent the issue of permits for collecting such birds for scientific purposes in accordance with the laws and regulations in force in the respective states and territories and the District of Columbia, and provided further that the closed season on reedbirds or ricebirds in Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and South Carolina shall begin Nov. 1 and end Aug. 31 next folowing both dates inclusive.

Five Year Closed Season.

Regulation 4.—A closed season shall continue until Sept. 1, 1918, on the following migratory game birds: Band tailed pigeons, little brown, sand hill and whooping cranes, swans, curlew and all shore birds, except the black breasted and golden plover, Wilson or jack snipe, woodcock and the greater and the lesser yellow legs.

A closed season shall also continue until Sept. 1, 1918, on the wood duck in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, West Virginia and Wisconsin; on rail in California and Vermont and on woodcock in Illinois and Missouri.

Regulation 5.—A closed season shall continue between Jan. 1 and Oct. 31, both dates inclusive, of each year on all migratory birds passing over or at rest on any of the waters of the main stream of the following navigable rivers: The Mississippi river between New Orleans and Minneapolis; the Ohio river between its mouth and Pittsburgh and the Missouri river between its mouth and Bismarck, N. D.; and on the killing or capture of any such birds on or over the shores of any of said rivers or at any point within the limits aforesaid from any boat, raft or other device, floating or otherwise, in or on any such waters.

Regulation 6.—The following zones for the protection of migratory game and insectivorous birds are hereby established:

Zone No. 1.—The breeding zone, comprising states lying wholly or in part north of latitude 40 degrees and the Ohio river and including Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington—twenty-five states.

Zone No. 2.—The wintering zone, comprising states lying wholly or in part south of latitude 40 degrees and the Ohio river and including Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Nevada and Utah—twenty-three states and the District of Columbia.

Aim of Statute.

In carrying out the statutory requirement of "due regard to the zones of temperature, breeding habits, times and line of migratory flight," the following are some of the more important principles on which the regulations were based, according to the committee:

To limit the list of migratory game birds to species properly so called and to eliminate species too small to be considered legitimate game or too rare to be longer hunted for sport or profit. This list has been made to conform as closely as possible with the statutory definitions of game.

To prevent spring shooting.

To protect migratory birds between sunset and sunrise.

To provide protected flight lines along at least three of the great navigable rivers.

To make the seasons approximately equal in length in different parts of the country.

To limit the hunting seasons to a maximum of three or three and one-half months.

To regulate these seasons according to latitude and times of migration and to adjust them so that there may be reasonable opportunity of securing thirty days' shooting of any species at a given place.

To provide separate seasons for waterfowl, rail, shore birds and woodcock. The woodcock seasons are made to conform as nearly as possible with the seasons for upland game under state laws, so that there may be no opportunity in close seasons to hunt quail or grouse under the guise of shooting woodcock.

To curtail hunting at the end instead of the beginning of the open season, in the interest of both the birds and the sportsmen.

Effect of Regulations.

The probable effect of these regulations may be briefly stated as follows:

(1) Uniformity in protection of migratory and insectivorous birds in the several states.

(2) Protection of birds in spring while en route to their nesting grounds and while mating.

(3) Uniformity in protection of migratory birds at night.

(4) Establishment of protected migration routes along three great rivers in the central United States.

(5) Complete protection for five years for the smaller shore birds and other species which have become greatly reduced in numbers.

(6) Reduction of the open season on migratory game birds, but in most cases not more than 25 to 50 per cent.

(7) No change in existing conditions before Oct. 1, 1913.

Although the law names the more important game birds, a regulation defining groups is necessary to show definitely the kinds of birds included under the terms "all other migratory game and insectivorous birds." In framing these definitions the statutory definitions of the various state laws have been followed as closely as possible, in so far as they relate to migratory species; the birds have been arranged in natural groups and the common names adopted by the American ornithologists' union have been followed when the birds have more than one common name, since it is obviously impracticable to include all the local names.

Night Shooting.

The regulation prohibiting night shooting is intended to bring about uniformity in provisions now in force in most states, protecting water fowl and other birds at night or within certain hours between sunset and sunrise so that the birds may be unmolested on their roosting grounds and may have time to feed after sunset or before sunrise. It will make no change in existing law in about one-fourth of the states. It will make existing regulations clearer in nine states. It will add an hour's protection, more or less in the morning and evening in about one-fourth of the states, and it will regulate night shooting in fourteen states which now have no restrictions of this kind.

This regulation simply makes uniform the protection now accorded these birds in more than forty states. It protects the robin, the lark and other birds in the few states in which they suffer from an open season. It attempts no change in existing regulations regarding the issue of permits for collecting birds for scientific purposes.

Gives Greater Protection.

A closed season for several years is provided in an effort to harmonize the absolute protection already given some birds in certain states, the demand for five year closed seasons for shore birds and the necessity for greater protection for other birds which have been hunted beyond the margin of safety. The protection accorded woodcock and rail is already existing law; that on swans has been made uniform throughout all the states and that of woodcock extended from a few states in the northeast to most of the states in zone No. 1, east of the Mississippi river. The only important additions are the additional protection given band-tailed pigeons in a few states and the closed season placed on avocets, cranes, curlew, godwits, killdeer, stilts, upland plover, willet and the smaller shore birds.

The suspension for hunting on the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers allows waterfowl a safe highway from their winter feeding grounds in the lower Mississippi valley to their nesting grounds in Minnesota and the Dakotas and forms an extended refuge which is easily defined and can be generally recognized.

Only Two Zones.

More than fifty separate seasons for migratory birds were provided under statutes in force in 1912. This multiplicity of regulations or zones to suit special localities has apparently had anything but a beneficial effect on the abundance of game. The effort to provide special seasons for each kind of game in each locality merely makes a chain of open seasons for migratory birds and allows the continued destruction of such birds from the beginning of the first season to the close of the last. It is believed that better results will follow the adoption of the fewest possible number of zones and so regulating the seasons in each as to include the time when such species is in the best condition or at the maximum of abundance during the autumn.

For this reason the country has been divided into two zones as nearly equal as possible, one to include the states in which migratory game birds breed or would breed if given reasonable protection, the other the states in which comparatively few species breed, but in which many winter. Within these zones the seasons are fixed for the principal natural groups—waterfowls, rail, shore birds and woodcock. In no case does the zone boundary cross a state line, and except in very rare cases the seasons are uniform throughout the states. Deviation from this rule leads ultimately to the recognition of a multiplicity of local seasons, which had done so much to retard game protection.

Seasons In Zone.

Apparently few changes have been made in existing hunting seasons in zone No. 1 except in the elimination of spring shooting, and about half of the states in this zone now close the season on water fowl by the middle of December or the first of January. In most states in this zone the hunting season begins on some date in September, and these dates have generally been followed in the regulations. In two or three cases in which states have several different seasons for different counties it has been necessary to effect a compromise either by adopting one season or the dates which most nearly conform with the seasons in adjoining states. A slight change in a few of the state laws would make it possible to eliminate most of the exceptions and apparent inequalities in the seasons.

In most cases the close seasons in zone No. 2 end on the same dates as the seasons under the state laws, but eliminate spring shooting after Jan. 15. This avoids confusion in the opening of the hunting season and provides shooting in the autumn or early winter, when the birds are in the best condition. In four states—Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina—the seasons for water fowl do not open until Nov. 1, and the season is consequently extended to Feb. 1. The difference of fifteen days in the length of the season in these states as compared with the seasons elsewhere is more than offset by the fact that the birds are present practically throughout the open season, whereas in the northern zone and in some states in the southern zone they are present only part of the time.

Provides For Hearings.

The object of hearings is to afford persons interested an opportunity to present evidence showing the necessity for readjustment of some of the seasons so as to adapt them better to local conditions and to submit new data regarding local abundance of birds and times of migration. The department already has ample information regarding the seasons provided under existing laws and the changes which have been made from time to time. The desire to have the hunting seasons as long as possible is natural, but as such seasons have heretofore been too long the question is merely one of adjustment within certain maximum limits.

Consequently, if the birds are to be restored, some curtailment of the season in each state is essential. In such an effort general welfare should take precedence over private interests.

MURDERS HER YOUNGER SISTER

Woman Tells of Killing and Burying Body In Cellar

CRIME FOLLOWS AN ARGUMENT

Investigation by Police After Brother Becomes Anxious Over Disappearance of Sister—Occupants of House Thought Young Woman Was on Visit With Friends

West Rutland, Vt., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Eugene McCarthy, 55 years old, confessed, according to the police, that she had murdered her sister, Miss Alice Kerrigan, five years her junior, who had been missing since a slight quarrel between the two last Friday.

Following the direction given in the alleged confession the police found the body of Miss Kerrigan, with a bullet hole through the head, buried beneath a pile of dirt and covered by two wash tubs.

Beyond saying that there had been a trifling argument, Mrs. McCarthy, the police say, could give the officials no reason for her act.

They stated that she would probably be submitted to a mental examination after appearing in the local court on a charge of murder.

"Yes, I killed my sister. I shot her through the head while she was lying on a couch. She wouldn't agree with me, so I went upstairs and got a gun. Then I dragged her body into the cellar and buried it under a couple of tubs. You'll find it there."

This was Mrs. McCarthy's confession as given out by the police. Their investigation followed queries by William Kerrigan as to the whereabouts of his sister Alice and the receipt of a mysterious telephone call by Deputy Sheriff F. H. Patten. The call purported to have come from Miss Kerrigan, saying that she was all right, that she was visiting friends in Whitehall and that there was no need for alarm. It developed later that the speaker was Mrs. McCarthy who, the police believe, became alarmed at her brother's inquiries after his missing sister. Miss Kerrigan's absence was not known outside of her own home until her brother began his search.

Miss Kerrigan lived with her father, Michael Kerrigan, on the lower floor of a house on Pleasant street, while Mrs. McCarthy, Kerrigan's other daughter, lived upstairs with her husband, a marble worker, and eight children.

According to Mrs. McCarthy's story as given out by the police Miss Kerrigan laid down on a couch in the living room of her father's home, following a dispute, while Mrs. McCarthy went upstairs. Mrs. McCarthy came down again carrying a shotgun. Walking over to the lounge upon which her sister was dozing, she pressed the muzzle to Miss Kerrigan's head and fired.

Her father, who is 72 years old, was outside the house at the time, but knew nothing of what had happened. The police said that he still thought his daughter Alice was visiting somewhere, as Mrs. McCarthy had told. Mrs. McCarthy's children, who were playing nearby, were also in ignorance of the occurrences within the house.

TO LOCK OUT LABORERS

Pittsburg Builders Will Suspend Operation Rather Than Meet Demands

Pittsburg, Aug. 13.—An acute situation in the building trades developed here when a strike of laborers tied up work on three large business buildings. They were joined by other workmen, and early in the evening the demands of the men were met by the announcement that today the master builders would lock out all union men and suspend operations on structures valued at $67,000,000.

The laborers demanded 28⅛ cents an hour, 3⅛ cents more than has ever been paid for the same work in Pittsburg.

If the lockout is declared an army of skilled workmen, variously estimated from 30,000 to 40,000 will be thrown out of work.

CARSON SIGNS WITH PORTLAND

His No-Hit No-Run Game Gave Him Prominence

Carson of Milton, who pitched a no-hit, no-run game at Braintree Saturday and simply added to his string of pitching victories for the season, has signed with the Portland team of the New England league, where he will be given a tryout under the watchful eye of Hughie Duffy, whose base ball appetite was whetted by the newspaper reports of Carson's work. Scouts watched his Saturday performance and he was drafted immediately after the game.

Braintree is a fast base ball centre, due principally to the interest displayed by young and old alike. A good player is given his just reward in Braintree by his teammates as well as by the sporting public of the town. The Sunset League, organized to stimulate the pastime, is in its second season and many witness the evening games.

Saturday major league scouts will be on hand to see the White Six players handle the ball. A few in the lineup look promising to some of the judges of timber.

The unoccupied barn which for years has stood on Water street, near Brewers corner, is being remodeled into a four family house by Louis Grossman who has plans to build another house in the immediate vicinity.

The only mercantile building under way in South Quincy is being erected for John J. Gallagher, the cement and oil man in Quincy. It is a one story brick building and is situated beside the machine shop of Frank Kemp.

Alterations of a minor nature are being made in different sections and many houses are being painted. Some of the granite sheds are being repaired. The crane of the Smalley Granite Co., which floated onto the railroad tracks with the aid of a high wind and a severe thunder storm has not been replaced as yet. The damage was heavy and parts are now on the way.

WHAT THEY MUST SWALLOW.

Continued irritability is apparent in the circle of Democrats who are running things at Washington because of evidences that the proposed tariff will be injurious to business. Any mention of anything of that kind sends them up in the air.

One might think a consideration of a tariff would involve principally its effect upon the prosperity of the country, but that is one thing these particular Democrats get especially angry about every time anyone ventures to mention it.

From Wilson and Redfield down, their attitude is that of the bad man who said to the tenderfoot:

"Stranger, you've got to drink whiskey. You've got to drink it out of a tin cup. And damn you, you've got to like it."—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

WARD THREE SPORTS

Potato Races and Stone Throw the Events

Clean Record By Hartrey

The potato race and the stone throw brought out a fine lot of competitors for the weekly contest Tuesday afternoon at Ward Three. The events were all closely contested and several of the regular point winners were rather surprised to be shut out. Of the boys William Hartrey was the only one who made a "clean-up" in both events and it now looks as if he will be the prize winner in Class "A." Lillian Beaton won the stone-throw with ease and would probably have won the potato race also, but unfortunately she fouled picking up the last potato. She is far ahead of all competitors in Class "A" with 36 points to her credit.

POTATO RACE—BOYS.

Class A—1st, William Hartrey, 2nd W. Schwartz, 3rd M. Kerr, 4th L. Lubarskey.

Class B—1st, C. Carson; 2nd, L. Curtin; 3rd, C. Westberg; 4th, E. Collins.

Class C—1st, P. Jenkins, who was the only one to finish.

STONE THROW—BOYS.

Class B—1st, L. Curtin, 49 ft; 2nd, C. Carson; 3rd, C. Westberg; 4th, A. Dellicheesi.

Class C—1st, I. Anderson, 75 ft; 2nd and 3rd, tie between P. Jenkins and J. Opie; 4th, C. Carlson.

POTATO RACE—GIRLS.

CAN YOU ANSWER THEM?

A Washington correspondent protests that the questions propounded to candidates for admission to the Naval School at Annapolis are needlessly severe. As evidence he offers these, taken at random from a recent quiz:

What effect did the Battle of Crecy have upon feudalism and chivalry?

State the significance of Shay's Rebellion.

State concisely the achievements of De Narvaez.

What brought about the union of the two most important States of Spain.

What was decided at the Battle of Bannockburn?

Identify the Hussites.

What is meant by "the hegira?"

State concisely the chief significance of Plataea.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

LARGE REWARD FOR JAPANESE TORPEDO

Government Afraid Important Secret Will Become Known

London, Aug. 13.—Japan is afraid that one of her most important naval secrets will fall into the hands of a rival power through the lost of a torpedo from the new battleship Kongo on her trial trip recently off the Irish coast.

The Japanese government has offered a reward of $1000 for the recovery of the torpedo. This is five times the amount usually offered by the British government in similar circumstances. The explanation, according to the Pall Mall Gazette, is that the torpedoes of the Kongo are unique in construction and that they embody important secrets of construction.

A big fishing fleet is searching Belfast lough for the torpedo in the hope of earning the unusually large reward.

VOLCANO IS ACTIVE

Bogostof, the Freak, Disappears and Rises In New Place

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 13.—Bogostof, the famous freak volcanic island of Behring sea, is again performing contortions, and every volcano of the vast mountain range of western Alaska and the Aleutian islands is emptying smoke, steam or vapor, according to Captain C. O. Crisp of the revenue cutter Unalga, which returned to Seattle from her first cruise to Behring sea. Captain Crisp said that Bogostof island, which has interested scientists since its first appearance in 1906, had undergone another change since it was visited last year.

Natives told him that the island entirely disappeared for a time and when it reappeared above the surface its shape was different and it was several hundred yards from its former position.

"Mt. Katmai, which was in violent eruption in 1912, is sending out smoke, but there has been no discharge of volcanic ash this year, so far as I could learn," said Captain Crisp.

ATTACK DOCKYARDS

Savage Scenes In Genoa When Strikers and Workers Clash

Genoa, Aug. 13.—Savage scenes were enacted here in the course of an attack on the headquarters of the non-strikers by the strikers, who compose the majority of laborers in this city. The strikers also attacked taxicab chauffeurs and street car employes who had continued at work.

An attempt was made to raid the government dockyards where several Italian war vessels are under construction.

GIRL TESTIFIES AGAINST DIGGS

Alleged White Slave Victim Takes Stand In Trial

SENSATIONAL TRIAL IS ON

Marsha Warrington, Principal Witness In Notorious California Case, Kept In Seclusion Until Needed In Court—Hundreds of Spectators Are Refused Admission

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—Marsha Warrington, whose testimony was announced as the most sensational feature of the trial of Maury I. Diggs on a white slave charge, was kept in seclusion in the federal building during the trial yesterday until her turn on the stand.

She was taken to the building early, before the crowds gathered. Hundreds of men and women were anxious to get a glimpse of the girl, whose story of her trip to Reno with Diggs was declared to rival in sensations the Evelyn Thaw testimony in the Thaw trial some years ago.

Miss Warrington was called to take the stand late yesterday afternoon, and the crowd was so great that Judge Van Fleet ordered all but about fifty spectators excluded from the courtroom.

The ticket seller in Sacramento where Diggs and Drew Caminetti got the tickets for their trip to Reno with Miss Warrington and Miss Lola Norris—testified. Chief Hillhouse of the Reno police was on the stand, and other minor witnesses laid the foundation of the government's case.

Hillhouse told of arresting the four in a Reno cottage. He said that Diggs and Caminetti said the girls were their wives and that the four were living together in one cottage.

The government announced that it would call John L. McNab, former United States attorney, whose resignation brought the case into national prominence, as a witness. McNab had been sitting in court, listening to the evidence. He will be asked to identify certain exhibits, it was explained. Mr. McNab then took the stand.

Only forty-eight spectators were permitted at the trial.

Martin Besley, uncle of Miss Warrington, was the first witness called by the government when the trial was resumed.

Besley was with the officers who arrested the two couples in Reno last March.

The defence's plans were to have Diggs take the stand in his own behalf. It was planned to have Caminetti testify later.

When the trial was resumed a dead line was established and nobody was permitted within 200 feet of the courtroom after all the seats had been taken.

The case now bears every indication of being ready for the jury Friday, in the opinion of Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore Roche, special prosecutors, and Nate C. Coughlan and Thomas Devlin, the defenders of Diggs.

If the jury retires Friday, the case against Caminetti will be called as scheduled on Tuesday afternoon.

USE AN AUTOMOBILE

Bomb Throwers Employ Up-to-Date Methods In Their Work

New York, Aug. 13.—Police are seeking five supposed black handers who introduced the automobile into the bomb-throwing business and terrorized the East Side. Three stores were wrecked by bombs thrown from an auto, window panes were broken in a score of buildings, and dozens of families were sent scurrying into the streets in their nightclothes.

Charles Falco was hurled from his bed on the second floor when his store at 154 Mott street was wrecked, and fifteen minutes later two stores were partially wrecked at 371 East Seventy-sixth street.

Seven Injured In Auto Crash

Concord, N. H., Aug. 13.—Five young men and two young women were injured when a big touring car owned and driven by William Locke of Ware, Mass., ran away and crashed into a telegraph pole on the outskirts of this city.

MULHALL IS ILL

House Lobby Probe Adjourned Until Next Thursday

Washington, Aug. 13.—With its principal witness, Martin M. Mulhall, ill, the house lobby investigating committee was forced to adjourn until Thursday. In the meantime Mulhall, who says he has been literally worn out by the strain of continual examination before the congressional investigators, will rest under the care of a physician in an attempt to fit himself to resume his testimony.

Mulhall spent about two hours on the stand yesterday giving the details of his lobby transactions with men now in congress. During that time he complained frequently of feeling badly, and finally the committee was recessed for two hours to allow him to rest.

In a lengthy executive session the committee decided that the investigation could not proceed in an orderly way without concluding Mulhall's testimony, and an adjournment was taken until Thursday.

GIVES UP HOPE

Mrs. Rumsey Does Not Expect to See Jewels Again

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Charles C. Rumsey, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, whose pearl necklace and other jewels, valued at $75,000, were stolen from her summer home here about two weeks ago, announced that she had given up hope of their immediate recovery. She will return next week, she said, to her home in Westbury, L. I.

"We have abandoned the theory the robbery was committed by anybody connected with the household," said Mrs. Rumsey.

"The idea the robbery might have been done from the inside was simply a theory and a perfectly natural one in view of the mysterious absence of any clues and the absolute certainty with which the burglars went after and obtained exactly what they wanted. The detective bureau has let it be known that there is no definite clue in the case."

FEAR RUPTURE OF GREAT ALLIANCES

Alarm Over Disagreement of Powers Over Balkan Treaty

London, Aug. 13.—Grave alarm is felt in diplomatic circles over the Balkan situation. It is feared that the existence of both the triple alliance and the triple entente is threatened.

Russia and Austria-Hungary, siding with Bulgaria, want that nation to be not too greatly despoiled and humbled, while Germany and France want the treaty of Bucharest to stand as it is. The kaiser has honored King Charles of Roumania and King Constantine of Greece, and both Germany and France have expressed satisfaction with the treaty, while Russia and Austria-Hungary want it revised, and may put such a proposal up to the powers. Russia is dissatisfied with the attitude of France, her ally in the triple entente, and Germany is no less opposed to the attitude of Austria-Hungary, her ally in the triple alliance.

The powers also are not agreed as to the manner in which Turkey should be disciplined. The porte has positively refused to give up Adrianople, and the powers are jealous of any one power undertaking to coerce the Ottomans.

FIND STOLEN JEWELS

Part of Kennebunkport Loot Recovered by Servants

Kennebunkport, Me., Aug. 13.—A portion of the $9000 worth of jewelry stolen from the room of Mrs. M. H. Forrest Sunday morning was found hidden in the pantry of the house by servants employed by the Forrest family.

The articles found are said to be of such a character that they might easily be identified. The belief is that the thief or thieves feared to keep the articles in their possession or to pawn them.

Several detectives are still employed on the case. Members of the Forrest family, the local police and the sleuths refuse to give out any further information concerning the affair.

Suicide For Love

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 13.—Miss Nellie Garvey died from the effects of poison which, according to announcement made by the police, was self-administered. She was 25 years of age and is said by her friends to have had an unfortunate love affair.

Arkansas Jurist Dead

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 13.—Judge Uriah M. Rosel, an Arkansas jurist and representative of the United States to the second international peace congress at The Hague in 1907, died at his home here. He was 79 years old.

Miss Calliope's Cure

The Good Result of a Shock

By EUNICE DRAKE

"Poor Calliope!" murmured Hester Seton as she glanced up at the windows of the Delmore house on the hill.

"Lazy Calliope Delmore!" sniffed her mother, panting as her too abundant flesh trudged up the graveled path to the front door. "Did you ever see such a neglected dooryard in all your life?"

"You're her second cousin, ma. Why don't you try to give her a mite of a piece of your mind—kind of a second cousin's slice?" asked Hester sarcastically.

"And have my head bit off!" retorted her mother. "I spoke to Calliope fifteen years ago when Carrol Fenton went off and married that city girl. Says I, 'Cal, for the land's sake don't take to your bed' (she was acting all broken up about the matter); 'just turn your face to the world and act like you don't care.'"

"What did she say?" asked Hester curiously.

"Say? Says she: 'Emmeline Seton, I'd thank you to mind your own business! When the rheumatiz goes out of my legs I reckon I'll get up and walk with the best of 'em. I ain't a-grieving over Carrol Fenton. I'm suffering with rheumatiz! My advice to you is that if you've got any business of your own to tend to it and let mine alone!' So I don't never interfere with Calliope Delmore. She can lay abed till the judgment day."

"Well, she don't lay abed much, and you must admit that she's busy as a bee with her fingers from morning till night. She cuts and sells carpet rags enough to make a living for 'em."

"Humph! A woman forty years old ain't no right to be chair rid as I can see. Knock again, Hester, and if Isabel don't come I shall walk right in."

Hester rapped loudly and once more pulled the knob of the rusty bell wire.

A window sash screeched up, and a woman's voice called musically: "Come in, whoever you be. Isabel ain't to home."

Mrs. Seton and Hester tried the door and, finding it locked, walked around the path to the side entrance. They pushed open the screen door and walked into Calliope Delmore's sitting room.

"That you, Emmeline and Hester? How do you do?" Calliope looked up from her sewing and motioned them to comfortable cushioned chairs. "Give your mother that fan, Hester, and take off her bonnet. Lay aside your own hat, child, and if you'll go to the cellar you'll find some root beer. Isabel made it three days ago, and it's just right now."

"How be you, Calliope?" asked Mrs. Seton reluctantly, for she made it a point not to acknowledge that anything was seriously amiss with her second cousin. She always spoke impatiently to Calliope, just as if she would like to pick her out of the big Boston rocker and send her hurrying around the house in a healthy, normal manner.

"Well," said Calliope cheerfully, "it's dreadful hot, ain't it, Em?"

"Awful. You must appreciate this call. It's tuckered me out to climb the hill," said Mrs. Seton, fanning herself vigorously. "Who is the carpet for now, Calliope?"

"Lida Soper. She's been saving rags for years for this sitting room carpet."

"It's going to be real bright and pretty," nodded Mrs. Seton over the glass of root beer that Hester had brought to her. "Where's Isabel, Calliope?"

"Gone riding with Newton Deane," said Calliope hardily.

"Newton Deane!" exclaimed Hester jealously.

Mrs. Seton blinked rapidly. "Newton's half nephew to Carrol Fenton, ain't he?"

"You ought to know, Em," retorted Calliope dryly, "seeing that you almost married Newton's father."

Mrs. Seton bridled as she threw up her large pink hands.

"Don't get to talking to Hester about my beaus, Calliope. The child won't have any respect for her ma if you tell her what a madcap I was in them days."

Hester giggled. "You can't cut up much now, ma," she said wickedly.

"I have no desire to," said Mrs. Seton primly, suddenly remembering her great bulk. "We was speaking of Carrol Fenton, Calliope. I was over to Millerton last week, and I saw him. He's grown considerable old looking."

"Apt to. Don't get any younger with the years," rapped out Calliope in the crisp phrases she adopted when remarks became personal.

"Some say his wife's death broke him up, and others say it was a blessed relief and that he looks better than he ever did since he married her. She kept his nose to the grindstone always, so they say; extravagant and flighty—too flighty for a minister's wife."

"Minister's wives are only human. Churches don't pay salaries big enough to give 'em much of a good time. I guess Lena Fenton took what fun she could as she went along."

Mrs. Seton gasped. "I didn't expect you'd be standing up for Carrol Fenton's wife," she said acidly.

Calliope turned a white and resolute face to the other. "Why not? I don't owe her any grudge because she married Carrol. Most every girl in Little river was setting a cap for him."

Emmeline winced, and her double chin quivered.

"There ain't many of 'em gone to bed sick over it," she said hatefully, and without waiting for a reply she trembled to her feet and walked to the door. "Come, Hester; we got to be going."

"I wondered what brought Emmeline here," murmured Calliope, taking up her work again. "Of course after she'd visited in Millerton she had to come around and see how I took news of Carrol Fenton. What fiends women can be!" She bit off her thread with her strong white teeth and looked dreamily out of the window and sniffed the spicy fragrance of the cinnamon roses.

"Happened right here by the cinnamon roses," she whispered to herself. "I was so happy, and he said he was afraid he had made a mistake, and I gave him back the ring. Seems like all the strength went out of my legs that very minute. I s'pose, coming so soon after mother's long sickness and death, it upset me. If they all knew how I wanted to stand and walk around and be like other folks, only somehow there's no spring back of it all. Dr. Brown says he can't do a thing, and he talks about will power. I'm a useless mortal. But, there, Isabel says I ain't and if it wasn't for me she wouldn't have a home!" Calliope smiled through sudden tears. "Looks like she'd soon have a handsome home if she marries Newton. He's a fine fellow; but, Lord forgive me, it does rankle to think my girl should marry Carrol's nephew!"

She leaned back in the chair and closed her eyes. Her helpless feet rested on a hassock, and across her lap there rippled streams of bright colored carpet rags. From the rosebushes came the deep hum of bees, and the tall tops of the locust trees rustled a pleasant monotone.

Suddenly there broke into the sweet harmony of the summer afternoon other sounds—the sharp raps of a horse's hoofs on the hard oyster shell road, a man's voice shouting, then just the pounding hoofs and the rattle of carriage wheels.

Calliope leaned forward and looked out of the window. A sorrel horse with four white feet was plunging madly past the house. Behind him swung a low phaeton containing a man. Just beyond Calliope's front gate the phaeton swayed and caught upon a large rock. The horse tore himself loose from the shafts and disappeared beyond the turn of the road. The phaeton toppled and overturned and pinned the man underneath.

It was very silent after that. It was a lonely road, and from her window on the hill Calliope Delmore could see beyond the turn of the road, and she noticed that the runaway horse had stopped and turned into an open field to graze.

She felt very strange. Her heart was beating tumultuously, and her blood seemed to flow through her veins in a sustaining flood that gave strength to her weak body.

White lipped, she stared down at the wrecked phaeton and the still form beneath it. That was Carrol Fenton. She knew the minister's little carriage, but the horse was a strange one to her. Perhaps Carrol was dying down there alone in the road! Who would go for help? If only Isabel was there! The horse might return and trample him. Calliope was afraid of horses.

She closed her eyes and prayed for help. When she opened them she smiled oddly and placed her hands on the arms of her chair. She kicked aside the hassock and stood upon her feet.

She put out one foot, and it supported her weight. She stood upon the other. Then with sudden energy she picked up the untouched glass of root beer that Hester had poured for her, staggered across the room to the door and stumbled to the porch and down the steps.

Then Calliope Delmore, who had sat in a chair for fifteen years with helpless limbs, ran down the inclined path to the front gate and gained the road.

With the action came renewed life and a sense of buoyancy and youth.

Newton Deane and Isabel Delmore, driving slowly home through the golden afternoon, saw Calliope run down the path, and Isabel was so frightened that she hid her face on Newton's shoulder. It was easier to do it because his arm was already around her.

The horse stopped stock still, and they watched Calliope as they might have witnessed the ghost scene in a play.

She darted out of the gate and down the sloping path to the shattered phaeton. Carrol Fenton's eyes were wide open, and his face was white and drawn. The body of the vehicle rested on one of his legs.

"Calliope!" he gasped when she knelt beside him and held the root beer to his lips. "I was just coming to see you, dear," he whispered—"coming to ask your forgiveness, and you know the rest," he murmured.

"Of course I know it," said Calliope, practically not knowing that her eyes were full of tears. "Your coming this way has worked a miracle. I've run every step of the way, and I guess I can keep on my feet now. I s'pose I ought to be mad at you, Fenton, but how can I be when we all make such mistakes?" They were holding hands and smiling at each other with the deeper understanding of matured love, the woman who had just recovered her power to walk and the middle aged minister, suffering agonies from a broken leg.

Newton Deane and Isabel, watching them from the buggy, suddenly understood. They, too, smiled at each other.

"I guess we'll have a double wedding," whispered Newton, and Isabel nodded and murmured in reply:

"Isn't it beautiful?"

PROLOGUE

This humorous tale, written in McCutcheon's best vein, is faultless in its morals, despite its title, and cumulative in its interest. It may be stated in strict confidence that Edith did not actually have more than one husband; consequently the gentle reader need harbor no apprehenston on this score. Like all other estimable married women, Edith had only one husband, but circumstances arose through which it seemed necessary for her husband to be in two places at the same time, and how this was accomplished and what the outcome was— But wait a bit; let George Barr McCutcheon, the prince of story tellers, unfold the romance.

CHAPTER II.

Mrs. Medcroft.

FOR ten minutes Brock protested, his argument growing weaker and weaker as the true humor of the project developed in his mind. He came at last to realize that Medcroft was in earnest and that the situation was as serious as he pictured it. The Englishman's plan was unusual, but it was not as rattle brained as it had seemed at the outset. Brock was beginning to see the possibilities that the ruse contained. To say the least, he would be running little or no risk in the event of its miscarriage. In spite of possible unpleasant consequences, there were the elements of a rare lark in the enterprise. He felt himself being skillfully guided past the pitfalls and dangers.

"I shall insist on talking it over thoroughly with Mrs Medcroft before consenting," he said in the end. "If she's being bluffed into the game I'll revoke like a flash. If she's keen for the adventure I'll go, Rox. But I've got to see her first and talk it all over"—

"'Pon my word, old chap, she's ripping, awfully good sort, even though I say it myself. She's true blue, and she'll do anything for me. You see, Brock," and his voice grew very tender, "she loves me. I'm sure of her. There isn't a nobler wife in the world than mine. Nor a prettier one either," he concluded, with pride in his eyes. "You won't be ashamed of her. You will be proud of the chance to point her out as your wife, take my word for it." Then they set out for the Ritz.

"Roxbury," said Brock soberly when they were in the Rue de la Paix after walking two blocks in contemplative silence, "my peace of mind is poised at the brink of an abyss. I have a feeling that I am about to chuck it over."

"Nonsense! You'll buck up when Edith has had a fling at you."

"I suppose I'm to call her Edith?"

"Certainly, and I won't mind a 'dear' or two when it seems propitious. It's rather customary, you know, even among the unhappily married. Of course I've always been opposed to kissing or caressing in public. It's so middle class."

"And I daresay Mrs. Medcroft will object to it in private," lamented Brock good naturedly.

"I daresay," said her husband cheerfully. "She's your wife in public only. By the way, you'll have to get used to the name of Roxbury. Don't look around as if you expected to find me standing behind your back when she says 'Roxbury, dear!' I shan't be there, you know. She'll mean you. Don't forget that."

"Oh, I say," exclaimed Brock, halting abruptly and staring in dismay at the confident conspirator, "will I have to wear a suit of clothes like that and an eyeglass and—and—good Lord! spats?"

"By Jove, you shall wear this very suit!" cried Medcroft, inspired. "We're of a size, and it won't fit you any better than it does me. Our clothes never fit us in London. Clever idea of yours, Brock, to think of it. And, here! We'll stop at this shop and pick up a glass. You can have all day for practice with it. And, I say, Brock, don't you think you can cultivate a—er—little more of an English style of speech? That twang of yours won't"—

"Heavens, man, I'm to be a low comedian too!" gasped Brock as he was fairly pushed on to the shop. Three minutes later they were on the sidewalk, and Brock was in possession of an object he had scorned most of all things in the world—a monocle.

Arm in arm they sauntered into the Ritz. Medcroft retained his clasp on his friend's elbow as they went up in the lift, after the fashion of one who fears that his victim is contemplating flight. As they entered the comfortable little sitting room of the suit a young woman rose gracefully from the desk at which she had been writing. With perfect composure she smiled and extended her slim hand to the American as he crossed the room with Medcroft's jerky introduction dinging in his ears.

"My old friend, Brock, dear. He has consented to be your husband. You've never met your wife, have you, old man?" A blush spread over her exquisite face.

"Oh, Roxbury, how embarrassing! He hasn't even proposed to me. So glad to meet you, Mr. Brock. I've been trying to picture what you would look like ever since Roxbury went out to find you. Sit here, please, near me. Roxbury, has Mr. Brock really fallen into your terrible trap? Isn't it the most ridiculous proceeding, Mr. Brock"—

"Call him, Roxbury, my dear. He's fully prepared for it. And now let's get down to business. He insists upon talking it over with you. You don't mind me being present, do you, Brock? I dare say I can help you out a bit. I've been married four years."

For an hour the trio discussed the situation from all sides and in all its phases. When Brock arose to take his departure, he was irrevocably committed to the enterprise. He was, moreover, completely enchanted by the vista of harmless fun and sweet adventure that stretched before him. He went away with his head full of the brilliant, quick witted, loyal young American who was entering so heartily into the plot to deceive her own friends for the time being in order that her husband might profit in high places.

"She is ripping," he said to Medcroft in the hallway. All of the plans had been made and all of them had been approved by the young wife. She had shown wonderful perspicacity and foresight in the matter of details. Her capacity for selection and disposal was even more comprehensive than that of the two men both of whom were somewhat staggered by the boldness of more than one suggestion which came from her fruitful storehouse of romantic ideas. She had grasped the full humor of the situation, from inception to denouement, and to all appearance was heart and soul deep in the venture, despising the risks because she knew that succor was always at her elbow in the shape of her husband's loyal support. There was no condition involved which could not be explained to her credit; adequate compensation for the merry sacrifice was to be had in the brief detachment from rigid English conventionality, in the hazardous injection of quixotism into an otherwise overly healthful life of platitudes. Society had become the sepulcher of youthful inspirations. She welcomed the resurrection. The exquisite delicacy with which she analyzed the cost and computed the interest won for her the warmest regard of her husband's friend, fellow conspirator in a plot which involved the subtlest test of loyalty and honor.

"Yes," said Medcroft simply. "You won't have reason to change your opinion, Brock." He hesitated for a moment and then burst out, rather plaintively: "She's an awfully good sort, demme, she is. And so are you, Brock. It's mighty decent of you. You're the only man in all the world that I could or would have asked to do this for me. You are my best friend, Brock—you always have been." He seized the American's hand and wrung it fervently. Their eyes met in a long look of understanding and confidence.

"I'll take good care of her," said Brock quietly.

"I know you will. Goodby, then. I'll see you late this afternoon. You leave this evening at 7:20 by the orient express. I've had the reservations booked, and—and"— He hesitated, a wry smile on his lips, "I daresay you won't mind making a pretense of looking after the luggage a bit, will you?"

"I shall take this opportunity to put myself in training against the day when I may be traveling away with a happy bride of my own. By the way, how long am I expected to remain in this state of matrimonial bliss? That's no small detail, you know, even though it escaped for the moment."

"Don't shake hands," she warned.

"Three weeks."

"Three weeks!" He almost reeled.

"That's a long time in these days of speedy divorces," said Medcroft blandly.

The Gare de l'Est was thronged with people when Brock appeared fully half an hour before departing time. In no little dismay he found himself wondering if the whole of Paris was going away or, on the other hand, if the rest of the continent was arriving. He felt a fool in Medcroft's unspeakable checked suit, and the eyeglass was a much more obstinate, untractable thing than he had even suspected it could be. The right side of his face was in a condition of semiparalysis, due to the muscular exactions required. He had a sickening fear that the scowl that marked his brow was destined to form a perpetual alliance with the smirk at the corner of his nose, forever destroying the symmetry of his face. If one who has not the proper facial construction will but attempt the feat of holding a monocle in place for unbroken hours he may come to appreciate at least one of the trials which beset poor Brock.

Every one seemed to be staring at him. He heard more than one American in the scurrying throng say to another, "English," and he felt relieved until an Englishman or two upset his confidence by brutally alluding to him as a "confounded American toady."

It was quite train time before Mrs. Medcroft was seen hurrying in from the carriage way, pursued by a trio of facteurs laden with bags and boxes.

"Don't shake hands!" she warned in a quick whisper as they came together. "I recognized you by the clothes."

"Thank God, it wasn't my face!" he cried. "Are your trunks checked?"

"Yes, this afternoon. I have nothing but the bags. You have the tickets? Then let us get aboard. I just couldn't get here earlier," she whispered guiltily. "We had to say goodby, you know. Poor old Roxy! How he hated it! I sent Burton and O'Brien on ahead of me. My sister brought them here in her carriage, and I dare say they're aboard and abed by this time. You didn't see them? But, of course, you wouldn't know my maids. How stupid of me! Don't be alarmed. They have their instructions, Roxbury. Doesn't it sound odd to you?"

Brock was icy cold with apprehension as they walked down the line of wagons lits in the wake of the bag bearers. Mrs. Medcroft was as self possessed and as degagee as he was ill at ease and awkward. As they ascended the steps of the carriage she turned back to him and said with the most malicious twinkle in her eyes:

"I'm not a bit nervous."

"But you've been married so much longer than I have," he responded.

Then came the disposition of the bags and parcels. She calmly directed the porters to put the overflow into the upper berth. The garde came up to remonstrate in his most rapid French.

"But where is m'sieur to sleep if the bags go up there?" he argued.

Mrs. Medcroft dropped her toilet bag and turned to Brock with startled eyes, her lips parted. He was standing in the passage, his two bags at his feet, an aroused gleam in his eyes. A deep flush overspread his face. An expression of utter rout succeeded the buoyancy of the moment before.

"Really," she murmured and could go no further. The loveliest pucker came into her face. Brock waved the garde aside.

"It's all right," he explained. "I shan't occupy the—I mean, I'll take one of the other compartments." As the garde opened his lips to protest she drew Brock inside the compartment and closed the door. Mrs. Medcroft was agitated.

"Oh, what a wretched contretemps!" she cried in despair. "Roxy has made a frightful mess of it, after all. He has not taken a compartment for you. I'm—I'm afraid you'll have to take this one and—and let me go in with"—

"Nonsense!" he broke in. "Nothing of the sort! I'll find a bed, never fear. I daresay there's plenty of room on the train. You shan't sleep with the servants. And don't lie awake blaming poor old Rox. He's lonesome and unhappy, and he"—

"But he has a place to sleep," she lamented. "I'm so sorry, Mr. Brock! It's perfectly horrid, and I'm—I'm dreadfully afraid you won't be able to get a berth. Roxbury tried yesterday for a lower for himself."

"And he—couldn't get one?"

"No, Mr. Brock. But I'll ask the maids to give up their"—

"Please, please don't worry, and please don't call me Mr. Brock. I hate the name. Good night! Now, don't think about me. I'll be all right. You'll find me as gay as a lark in the morning."

He did not give her a chance for further protest, but darted out of the compartment. As he closed the door he had the disquieting impression that she was sitting upon the edge of her berth, giggling hysterically.

SIXTY MILES IN THREE HOURS

Quincy Homing Pigeons Fly from Provincetown

The Dorothy Bradford left Boston at the usual hour Sunday morning, carrying among her hundreds of pleasure seekers, three homing pigeons, belonging to John Minihan, of the Parkway, West Quincy. It had been planned to take them to the top of Pilgrim monument and there set them free; but as the boat was late in reaching Provincetown, it was found that the time on shore would be too short, and the upper deck was chosen instead. Many of the excursionists remained on board to watch the birds start on their long flight. The weather conditions were not ideal, being dull, foggy and sultry, with a threatening sky to the north-west; however all three of them were tossed into the air, and without circling about overhead, set out immediately in the direction of Quincy. Their arrival home was somewhat delayed, owing no doubt to a storm encountered off Nantasket. which carried them off their course; but in spite of the elements, the wonderful instinct of these little birds brought them to their own home in about three hours from a point, some sixty miles away.

NEW POLICE MANUALS.

Chief Frank E. Burrell distributed the new police manuals to the officers at roll call Tuesday evening. The manual takes the place of the one in force since 1901. It is patterned in many cases after that used in the Boston department. The manuscript was submitted to the printers early in June and was delivered last week. The book is about a quarter of an inch thick, is bound in morrocco and is of pocket size.

ASSAULT ON HIS WIFE

Randolph Man Fined and Sentenced to Jail

Charles B. Cushing of Randolph will spend the next few months as the guest of the county at Dedham jail as he was unable to pay a fine of $50 imposed upon him in the Quincy court this morning in addition to receiving a sentence of one month in the house of correction.

Cushing according to the story told by his wife in court, has been drunk for the past ten days. Tuesday afternoon, when she came home, Cushings welcome for the one he promised to protect, was a blow over the head which cut a gash on her forehead. This not satisfying him he picked up a bread board and threw it at her. His aim was poor and the board struck his young daughter Eugenie on the head cutting a deep gash. It also appeared that he had struck his daughter before the mother came home.

In consequence of the afternoons affair he was arrested on three complaints charging him with drunkenness. with assault on his wife Lulie E. Cushing, and assault on his daughter Eugenie Cushing.

Cushing in his own behalf said that he was not drunk. That all he had drank that afternoon was a half pint of whiskey and a bottle of beer. He acknowledged striking his wife but said he did it because he was provoked by her trying to take the beer away from him.

The court sentenced him to $50 fine for the two assaults and one month in the house of correction for drunkenness.

TOO MANY FOR ONE MAN

Dozen Tramps on Freight Train One Arrested

The freight train due at South Braintree shortly before midnight had more than its compliment of bumper riding tramps, for according to the railroad men there was fully a dozen men riding on the bumpers. When the train passed through Braintree. South Braintree was notified by telephone to have the police meet the train.

Officer John Shay was the only officer that could be reached. He was unable to cope with a dozen men alone, but he made the attempt. Taking Clifford Damon and John Thomas, two railroad men with him the trio started for the train. On their approach however the tramps beat a hasty retreat down the railroad tracks. Officer Shay succeeded in grabbing one man who when locked up gave his name as Joseph Quinn.

All of the tramps were husky looking fellows and it is thought that the train men did not care particularly about attacking them alone. Quinn told the court that he belonged in Charlestown and was going to Providence where he expected to get a job. He was found guilty of riding on a freight train and fined $15.

MRS. SULZER'S SACRIFICE

Takes Entire Blame and Declares Husband Innocent

Albany, Aug. 12.—The lobby gossip last night while the assembly was marking time waiting for absentees to arrive, produced the most sensational story in the Sulzer-Murphy war to date.

According to this rumor which was confirmed chiefly by the lack of any denial from those most intimately concerned, Mrs. Sulzer had made a supreme effort late yesterday to sacrifice herself to save her husband.

The climax came as the story is being told and retold here, in Mrs. Sulzer's remark, which was, in instance, as follows:

"I want you to know something which I have never told anyone before, but the fact is that I signed and indorsed all those checks and Mr. Sulzer did not know anything about it.

"I deposited the checks and I am the only person responsible. I felt that in the terrible strain of overwork with which Mr. Sulzer was then loaded I was better able to handle the money matters than he, so I took them into my own hands, without saying anything to him about it.

"He has never known about it, and does not know now."

Mrs. Sulzer's astonishing story was the chief topic of conversation here last night.

BREAKS STEEL CAGE TO LYNCH NEGRO

Mob Takes Man Who Attacked White Woman

Laurens, S. C., Aug. 13.—Protesting his innocence to the last, Richard Puckett, a young negro charged with attacking a young white woman of the community, was taken from the jail here and lynched. His swinging body afterward was perforated with bullets from the revolvers of more than 2000 men who composed the mob.

The sheriff declared Puckett had confessed his crime. The negro, just before he was lynched, protested his innocence. The mob overpowered the sheriff and his deputies, breaking down the jail door and tearing to pieces a steel cage in which Puckett was confined.

MONTREAL EXPRESS WRECK

Six Coaches Leave Rails and Pile Up Against Bank

Montpelier, Vt., Aug. 13.—More than 150 passengers on board the Central Vermont's fast train from Boston to Montreal, the New England states limited, narrowly escaped injury last evening when the six rear cars, including the three day coaches, two sleeping cars and the diner, were derailed at West Berlin, about seven miles from here.

Many of the passengers were women and fully a third of them were Boston people. One of the women passengers fainted from fright when the train was derailed.

The engine tore through an open switch while traveling at a rate of nearly fifty miles an hour, and struck, with the mail and express cars, safely on the tracks of a siding. The train broke in two just ahead of the first day coach, however, and the rear part of it jumped the rails, the car wheels tearing up the sleepers for nearly 100 feet before the cars careened and fell against the bank, bring it to a stop.

Only one person, R. I. Washington, a chef in the dining car, was injured seriously.

PAVING WAY FOR PEACE

Tension In Mexico City Is Reported Greatly Lessened

WILSON'S NOTE NEARLY READY

President Will Soon Declare Attitude of United States Toward Mexican Republic—Mystery Over Report That Felix Diaz Is Not Aceptable as Ambassador to Japanese Government

Washington, Aug. 13.—Definite progress is being made in Mexico City in the furtherance of the administration plan to secure peace in Mexico. That much was admitted at the state department. How far Envoy Lind has progressed in only known to himself, President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan. Lind is in communication with Washington by code and is keeping his superiors informed. But until something material has been accomplished the public will not be advised.

Charge O'Shaughnessy cabled the state department that the situation in Mexico City was peaceful and quiet. His message was gratifying to administration officials.

The presentation of a note representing the views of President Wilson is expeted soon, but the various steps in the American government's program will be carried out gradually. The first note will be transmitted in duplicate to all foreign governments represented here and will declare for the first time in formal terms the attitude of the administration toward Mexico.

Officials who are hoping the European countries will lend their moral support to the efforts to adjust the Mexican situation peacefully were favorably impressed with the statement of the British government that the recognition of Huerta had been only "a recognition of a provisional president, pending an election," and was done on the theory that it was "likely to assist in the restoration of order."

The tension in Mexico is reported as greatly lessened. There is now no longer fear that Lind is in danger. The friendly attitude assumed by Frederico Gamboa, new minister of foreign relations, has helped very much. He is scheduled to receive a visit from O'Shaughnessy in the immediate future. The latter planned to acquaint him with some of the views of Envoy Lind, and the attempt was to be made to pave the way for the adoption of the administration's plan to bring about peace.

There will be no attempt at present to make any demand or even suggestion to the de facto government. Such a move might precipitate a crisis.

There was much mystery here over the report that General Felix Diaz, accredited by Huerta as the new Mexican ambassador to Japan, would not be received in Tokio. The reason assigned, that the mikado is spending the summer away from the capital, is accepted as a diplomatic suggestion that Diaz is not wanted. As a matter of fact, the Japanese foreign office outdid itself in its welcome to George W. Guthrie, the new American ambassador. He was received in the capital with almost regal honors, being escorted from his hotel to the palace by a regiment of seasoned Japanese troops.

It was thought here that this is Japan's way of expressing its disapproval of the attempt on the part of the Huerta government to use Japan as a club to force recognition from this government. The demonstrations in Mexico City on the recent arrival there of the new Japanese ambassador, which were fostered by the Huerta followers, and were only prevented from being turned into anti-American demonstration by the decided protest of the Japanese embassy, were admittedly obnoxious to Japan. And the open suggestion made in Mexico City during the last few days that General Diaz had been commissioned to negotiate a secret treaty with Japan of an offensive and defensive nature has also angered Japan.

ASKS HEART BALM

Agnes Torrey Sues Millionaire For Breach of Promise

Carthage, Mo., Aug. 13.—Allen Hardy, Sr., millionaire mine owner of Jasper county, made defendant in a $50,000 breach of promise suit instituted by Miss Agnes Torrey, a Boston, Mass., milliner, branded the suit blackmail.

Hardy is 67 years old and the father of ten children. His wife died three years ago. Miss Torrey is 26, and is said to be a striking brunette.

In her suit she alleged Hardy first asked her to marry him in April, 1911, and she consented. The date for the wedding was set, she alleges, but Hardy had it postponed on several occasions, making various excuses.

Mrs. C. R. Cutler Dead

Warren, R. I., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Lydia Cutler, 73, widow of former Lieutenant Governor Charles R. Cutler, is dead.

WIVES AS SUBSTITUTES.

Following up the suggestion that frequently gets voiced that, if men are not interested enough in civic affairs to cast a ballot at the polls they ought to be disfranchised, the Milford Gazette sees in the situation of "abdicated kingly rights" a chance for partial woman suffrage in the substitution of "queenly" rights. How would it do, it asks, to substitute in case of a married man who lacks enough interest to vote, his wife's name on the poll lists? Thus the family would be represented, and better represented, the newspaper believes, than before.

But does the writer believe that a woman whose huusband is so lacking in civic interest that he won't go to the polls, would herself have the interest to go and cast a vote? Then he discounts the strength of woman's influence in the home. For ourselves, we should be sorry to believe that a wife who was interested in civic affairs could not arouse some sense of responsibility in the matter on the part of her husband. There are sluggish men enough and obstinate men enough, but as husbands we should like to believe them one and all amenable to the guidance of their wives. With this view of a wife's legitimate office of guide and guardian of refractory husbands, the failure at the polls leaves but the one explanation of indifferent wives, who would shrink personally from a responsibility they had not held their husbands to.

This may be charging with, or conceding to, them power beyond the rights of the case. But anyhow, such a system of partial woman's suffrage would never do in a world where family representation does not wait to fall to woman only through man's abdication of a natural right. Woman is forced to stand so much by herself and for herself that the "family" designation has no reference in a really amazingly large number of cases to any man in the house at all. In a block of families picked quite at random, for instance, a full third consist of women only. The present suffrage system takes no concern for family representation, and——though the suggestion in that direction must rank as a whimsicality—there would be no justice in any such attempt at partial family representation.

Unfortunately, no attempt at even complete family representation at the polls would satisfy the tendency to essentially individualistic political preferences on the part of people. On some points involved in the suffrage the question of the family good might prevail; but on some others, a vote to represent the family would be as impossible as attempting to guarantee a family taste or preference in matters outside the civic realm—and that no wise person would undertake. There can be no really satisfactory system of suffrage that is not essentially complete for men, and, to a wide view, also essentially complete for women.—New Bedford Standard.

FOR CRUELTY TO HORSE

James Quinn of West Quincy Fined Twenty Dollars

James Quinn of West Quincy received a fine of $20 this morning for beating and overdriving a horse of Michael Cross, and was also ordered to pay a balance of a suspended fine, amounting to $16 for assault on the station agent at West Quincy some months ago.

Tuesday he took without permission a horse and wagon of Michael Cross, and spent the afternoon driving about. He appeared in the park system in the late afternoon driving through the streets at a breakneck speed and all commands of Sergt. Garrett of the Metropolitan police to stop were unheeded. The sergeant was obliged to chase him in an automobile some distance before he could place him under arrest.

He was arraigned in court for larceny of the horse and for cruelty and overdriving. He was discharged however on the larceny charge but fined $20 on the cruelty charge. As noted above he was also ordered to pay the balance of $16 due on an old fine for assault. His address for a few weeks will be Dedham jail.

UP TO TAX PAYERS

Should Be Interested In Tax Limit Hearing

Taxes Are High Enough

The Brockton aldermen gave a public hearing Wednesday night on the question of tax limit and but little interest was shown in the matter, for according to reports but three attended the hearing, and they did not speak on the question. The hearing was called for 8 o'clock, at which hour no one was present and a recess was taken. Later three citizens came in and the hearing was held.

Brockton is working under a special act which allows them to raise $15 per $1,000 valuation, which may in a measure account for the lack of interest. It has been noticed however that in all of the cities where hearings have been held up the present time there has been a lack of public interest. Perhaps the fact that it being mid-summer may have something to do with it, and it would be better to hold the hearing later. The act however makes it necessary that the hearing shall be held before Aug. 28.

The hearing in Quincy will be held next Monday evening and from what can be heard the chances are that Quincy will have better luck than most cities. Business men say that taxes are plenty high now, and that this year's rate will probably be the highest in the state. They also argue that while some of the city departments, could, no doubt, use more money than can now be given them for current expenses, if the limit is raised it only means just so much more added to the tax rate. The more money appropriated for current expenses means more to be raised by taxation. It is up to the citizens to attend the hearing and express their views or else forever after hold their peace.

BACK FROM PANAMA.

William E. Hingston, the handwriting expert, and John L. Hamilton, president of the Board of Trade, returned this week from a trip to the Panama canal. After visiting the big ditch they journeyed on to South America. They report having had a fine trip. Mr. Hingston said that when he left the canal he told them they could turn on the water, now at any time they wished.

PARTIES AT SQUANTUM

New Arrivals and Personals of Local Interest

Another of the series of subscription parties given by the Squantum Women's Club was held Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. John Loughan, Bellevue avenue. Mrs. George Hersey, Mrs. Frank Anderson, Mrs. James Foster and Mrs. John Loughan did much to make this affair one of the most enjoyable of the season. Among those present were: Elizabeth Zottoli, Beatrice Zottoli, Helen Simpson, Mildred Hersey, Francis Bean, Matthew Callahan, Ethel Morse, Mrs. Hiram Morse, Charles McCloud, Jennie McCloud, Mrs. Joseph Hogan, John Jepson, Hazel Harvey, Anne Loughan, Helen Loughan, Francis Loughan, Mrs. Thomas Manney, Proivdence, R. I., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eagar, Preston Duff, Chesley Chisholm, Mildred Bean, Beatrice Wood, Lillian Wood, Ruth Bean, Jack O'Connor, Joseph Ryan, William Wilson and Lettie McCarty.

The first meeting of the Sunnyside Bridge Club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Ross, recently. Miss Anna Meade won the souvenir for having the largest score, a very pretty silver spoon being the gift. A collation was served.

Miss Edith Black of Fitchburg has been visiting at the home of her aunt Mrs. Helen McGowan, Orchard street.

Mr. Jack McCloud of Brooklyn, N. Y., has joined his family who are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Morrill, Gladstone street.

Mrs. Roger Mason and her two children, Hazel and Harold are expected home next week from England where they have been spending the summer.

Mrs. John R. Nelson and son Richard are visiting relatives in Maine.

LADIES' NIGHT.

The annual ladies' night of the Quincy yacht club will be held this evening at the clubhouse. The program is in charge of the House Committee, who promise a pleasing evening. Music will be furnished by Monk's orchestra, and there will be a lady singer. After the program, opportunity will be given those that desire to dance.

FAVORED $12 LIMIT.

At Malden on Tuesday evening a hearing was held in the high school hall on the establishment of a municipal tax limit, Mayor Charles Schumaker presiding. About 200 citizens attended, a majority favoring retaining the present $12 limit.

QUINCY RANKS TWENTY

Both in Valuation and in Population

The State Tax of Cities

Quincy makes a better showing in valuation than many suppose. The city ranks 20 in valuation in Massachusetts and is also No. 20 in population.

Three cities and towns which are smaller in population are larger in valuation, viz: Brookline, Beverly and Pittsfield.

On the other hand these three cities are larger in population, but have a smaller valuation:—Everett, Taunton and Fitchburg.

There are 13 cities which will this year pay a State tax of over $100,000:—Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Brookline, Cambridge, New Bedford, Fall River, Lowell, Lynn, Newton, Lawrence, Somerville and Holyoke.

There are also just 13 cities in the list which will pay a State tax of over $50,000 and less than $100,000. The population of 1910 and the amount of the 1913 State tax are given for these cities.

| | Population | Tax |
|---|---|---|
| Brockton | 56,878 | $94,800 |
| Malden | 44,404 | 77,200 |
| Beverly | 18,650 | 74,000 |
| Salem | 43,697 | 71,040 |
| Haverhill | 44,115 | 68,160 |
| Pittsfield | 32,121 | 65,680 |
| Quincy | 32,642 | 62,400 |
| Fitchburg | 37,826 | 62,240 |
| Milton | 7,924 | 55,280 |
| Everett | 33,484 | 54,960 |
| Waltham | 27,834 | 54,560 |
| Chelsea | 32,454 | 51,360 |
| Taunton | 34,259 | 51,200 |

If the State tax was paid equally per capita each resident of Quincy would be required to pay $1.91. A poll taxpayer at $2.00 therefore barely pays his individual share of the State tax and nothing toward the city expenses.

ACCIDENT TO EXPRESSMAN

William Nelson on Dangerous List at Hospital

William Nelson of Buckley street, driver of Carl Lilja express wagon, had his skull fractured Wednesday evening about 9.30 when his team was overturned by being struck by an electric car. The accident happened on Hancock street near the corner of Grant street. Nelson was driving toward Quincy, several long planks projecting from the rear of the wagon. As a car in charge of motorman John Raymond and conductor John Rooney came along the team turned slightly so that the car caught the planking overturning the wagon and throwing Nelson among the wreckage.

The car was stopped and willing hands soon rescued Nelson. It was seen that he was quite badly injured and the police ambulance was called. He was removed to the City Hospital. Here it was found that he had suffered a fracture of the base of the skull and his name was placed on the dangerous list.

Churches are now using electric sign advertising.

NUISANCE TO BE ABATED

Relief From Spectacle Island Is Promised

Positive assurance from Mayor Fitzgerald and L. K. Rourke, commissioner of public works of Boston ,that the odors coming from the city's garbage disposal plant at Spectacle Island are to be abated, have been made to the Squantum Improvement Association. This is good news to all sections of Quincy for Atlantic, Wollaston and Houghs Neck as well as Squantum have repeatedly protested against the odors that come from the garbage disposal plant.

At the regular meeting of the association Wednesday night at the Vacation house, C. E. Carlson, chairman of the Spectacle Island committee, read the following letter from Commissioner Rourke of Boston:

"Confirming our telephone conversation, I wish to say that the contractor who has the contract for disposing of the refuse of the City of Boston at Spectacle Island, has entered into a contract with the Spray Engineering Company of Boston for the installation of a spraying apparatus, which the Spray Engineering Company guarantees will terminate any nuisance which may have been caused by odors from this plant. This work will be completed within the next two weeks, and in the meantime, the contractor is taking every precaution possible to minimize the odors."

Mayor Fitzgerald wrote that he had ordered Mr. Rourke to "cancel the contract" if the nuisance was not abated at once.

There was a large attendance at the meeting and President Herbert A. Smith presided with all the other officers present.

Chairman W. N. Kenyon of the mosquito committee reported his investigations into the mosquito nuisance. He told of the work being done in Medford where 523 acres of swamp lands are being drained at the expense of the owners of the property.

Chairman Kenyon was of the opinion that the City of Quincy Board of Health could take the same action and condemn all the swamp lands of Quincy which are breeding places of mosquitoes and dangerous to public health. He said that swamp land could be drained at an expense of $15 an acre.

Squantum has been practically mosquitoless during this summer owing to the application of oil to the swamp lands adjoining.

C. E. Carlson, chairman of the street railway committee, showed an interesting map which Mayor Stone had secured of the city engineering department showing how a sharp curve could be made at the junction of Hancock and Sagamore streets, Atlantic and eliminate the obnoxious plan of having passengers on Squantum cars ride backwards from the Neponset Car barns to Atlantic station.

Mr. Carlson said he had been over the plan with Superintendent Gammons of the Bay State Street railway had been assured that the curve could be made. The matter will now be taken before the City Council for approval as to the re-location of tracks.

Perley Bostwick, chairman of the committee on fire protection, told of the trial run of the Atlantic chemical on Monday night.

Mr. Eager spoke of the grease house fire when one man responded to the alarm in charge of the chemical. He said that there were six men aboard on the trial run the other night. He wondered how many men would actually show up on a winters day or night.

There was a lengthy argument and some sharp wrangling over the payment of a bill of $5 for damages to a banjo owned by John Marden which was damaged during the recent Dutch supper. It was finally voted to pay for the damaged instrument.

Efforts of some of the members to have a banquet as a Wind-up of the summer season at Squantum and to invite the women of Squantum as guests was finally killed after various motions had been made.

AROUND BOSTON IN CANOE

Unique Trip of Two Quincy Boys

Took Thirty-Six Hours

The longest canoe trip ever taken by Quincy boys was finished at the Town River Yacht club last week when Edward Stewart of the Adams building and Harry Kemp of 32 Newcomb street hauled their White Guide from the river after paddling 75 miles in 36 hours. But two stops were made, once for rain and once for a seven hour sleep.

The trip took them through Milton, Hyde Park, Readville, West Roxbury, Dedham, Needham, Wellesley, Weston, Waltham, Watertown, Cambridge and Boston harbor. The inland waters followed were Town river, Neponset river, Stony Brook and Charles river.

The trip was taken for pleasure only and with no intention of establishing a record, and both declare they gained valuable experience. A camping outfit weighing about 90 pounds was taken along and added to the 75 pound, 17 foot canoe it made a heavy load to carry from one stream to another.

The outfit was carried at Adams shore Squantum, Milton station, Chocolate Mill dam, Mattapan bridge, Mattapan paper mills, and other places along the line. At the cotton mill dam at Readville they met with stern objection on the part of a man who threatened to enforce a "No Trespass" sign with a shot gun. A parley gained them the privilege of passing.

The boys camped on the Stony brook reservation and awakened with the birds to continue their journey. They reached Charles river and Waltham without accident and commenced the return trip. The officer at the sluiceway opened the gates and allowed them to take the short way to the navy yard and from there until they reached Quincy Bay they had their fill of tough experiences.

Passing ferries and other boats disturbed the harbor waters to such an extent that it was one continual pitch and roll and they did not escape this almost violent water fall until off Savin hill.

The start was made from the Town River Yacht club in early morning and they were loudly welcomed on their return. The trip is probably the forerunner of others and Quincy Pointers have mapped out a longer route to be taken next week.

WITH THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Piper of Quincy are prominent among the Knights Templar at Denver. A dispatch to a Boston paper says: "Wednesday evening St. Omer Commandery of Dorchester entertained in the Hotel West. There was an orchestra and refreshments were served. In the receiving line were Acting Commander Irwin and Mrs. Irwin, Acting General Issimo Sawyer and Mrs. Sawyer, Acting Capt. Gen. Pike and Mrs. Pike.

Eminent Commander Piper of Quincy Commandery and Mrs. Piper, besides members of Palestine Commandery of Chelsea had an opportunity to greet many of the guests.

LAWN PARTY POSTPONED

Elaborate Illumination Had Been Planned by T. L. Williams

The lawn party of the Quincy Women's Riverside club which was to be held at the home of Mrs. Thomas L. Williams on Newcomb place Wednesday afternoon and evening, was called off on account of the heavy rain which commenced as the afternoon guests were arriving. Those who had arrived scampered to cover and some received a good drenching. More showers in the early evening left the grounds in a wet condition and the committee decided to postpone it indefinitely. An elaborate illumination had been arranged by Mr. Williams, after nearly three weeks' work, but the large moon which had been set in a treetop could not shine because of the clouded sky. The affair was in charge of Mrs. T. L. Williams, Mrs. Mary E. Spooner, Mrs. W. A. Hayden, Mrs. E. E. Marnock, Mrs. Mary Jones, Mrs. George Sprague and Mrs. Annie Harmon.

FIELD DAY OF APPRENTICES.

The Apprentices of the Fore River are planning an annual outing which will take place at Glen Echo park, Stoughton, within a few weeks. Joseph Larkin, director of the boys, is today at the park, in conference with its managers. The affair is annual and is the premier social event of the younger employees. In past years Nahant or some other summer resort has been the scene of the festivities and a delightful ocean voyage usually preceded the program. This year it will take the form of a field day.

DES MOINES AT VENEZUELA.

Conditions along the west coast of Venezuela, the center of the Castro rebellion activity, are to be investigated by Commander Long of the cruiser Des Moines, which reached La Guayira Monday with Henry G. Tennant, the new secretary, in charge of the American legation. After landing Mr. Tennant the Des Moines, according to Tuesday's despatches, proceeded westward on a scouting cruise.

RESCUE MAN FROM DROWNING

John S. Lloy Taken Ill While Bathing

Saved By Two Women

John S. Lloy aged about 24 years of Halifax, N. S., came near being drowned this morning while in bathing off Adams shore. Lloy who is visiting at his brother's cottage on Oneida street. went in bathing this morning and was quite a distance from the shore when other bathers noticed that something was wrong with the man. Two ladies who were in bathing at the same time went to his rescue and succeeded in geting him ashore. A hurry call was sent for a physician and Dr. Burke and Capt. McKay of the police department hastened to the scene. Dr. Burke succeeded in restoring the man after which he was taken to his brother's cottage. He said that he was suddenly taken sick while bathing and lost control of himself.

But for the prompt assistance of the two ladies he would probably have been drowned. The ladies were very modist about the rescue and refused to give their names as they did not desire any publicity given their act.

WEYMOUTH.

THE STOCK MARKETS.

With some exceptional days of high speed, the past two months have been a period of exceptional dullness in the speculative markets. New York stock exchange seats have been at the lowest figure for years.

There will always be stock exchanges and speculation performs a necessary function. But a few cobwebs can grow over the ticker occasionally without any interest being the loser.

A legitimate broker, who buys for clients' investment, and sells by actual transfer, performs a public service. A certain amount of speculation is useful, as it helps regulate prices. But there is a great gang of floor traders and hangers on about the blackboards that produce nothing more valuable to the community than the bookmakers at the horse race.

A dull summer may tend to make some of these camp followers go to work. But the lure of the ticker gets into the blood. They'll all be back on the next million share day!

TIRED OF FROZEN WIND.

For years no evening function has been properly conducted, unless ices in some form appeared on the menu of the midnight supper. The argument in favor of the frozen dainties was that dancing young people demanded coolness for their panting palates. And so from time immemorial, vanilla, chocolate, and strawberry ice cream, and orange and lemon ice froze the "tummies" of society.

It is pleasant to note that at some notable social occasions this summer, the entertainers broke away from this refrigeration process and served instead, eggs and toast and coffee. Moreover this supper was really relished, as it followed hours of strenuous dancing of the popular athletic steps.

Recently a dance given by one of the most lavish entertainers in New York society, lasted so far into the morning that buckwheat cakes and sausage were served to the dancers loath to leave. The spectacle of men and women in the present style of evening attire, wrestling with syrup and gravy must have been edifying from the standpoint of "difference."

While it was not stated that the purpose of the hostess was to chase her guests, certain it is that even the most ardent devotee of terpsichore would not care to linger to indulge in the tango or the one step after such a meal at five in the morning. With considerable curiosity Society awaits the next development in its dietary regimen, provided by entertainers in quest of novelty.

JAMES FARLEY

Famous Strikebreaker Reported Near Death From Tuberculosis

One of the best known men in this country in recent years is James Farley, who has achieved fame as a strike breaker. He owns many race horses, some of which are at the Empire City track in Yonkers, N. Y. Although believed to be near death's door from tuberculosis, Mr. Farley caused himself to be taken to the race track, where, from a cot, he could watch the contests in which his horses were entered. He broke the Interborough railway strike in New York city, netting $300,000 for himself, it was said. He has also broken strikes in Chicago, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Waterbury and many other cities in this country and Canada.

SOUGHT FOR MURDER

Girl and Two Young Men Suspected of Killing Martin

New York, Aug. 14.—A girl and two young men, the last persons to rent the room in which the dead body of William G. Martin, a wealthy milliner of Toronto, Canada, was found, are being sought by the police.

Two pairs of corsets and two hats from which all identification marks had been cut were in the room in which Martin was found murdered, with his hands tied behind him and rubber gas tubing and a towel stuffed into his mouth, giving the appearance of suicide.

Investigation disclosed the fact that two young men, one of whom represented that the girl was his wife and the other that the young man was his brother, rented the room on Aug. 7, and the landlord was going to order them to leave when he found Martin's body, partly dressed on the bed.

AUTOPSY CONFIRMS WOMAN'S STORY

Doctor Finds Vermont Victim Shot Through Chest

West Rutland, Vt., Aug. 14.—Dr. B. H. Stone of the state laboratory at Burlington performed an autopsy on the body of Miss Alice Kerrigan, 50, which was found buried in the cellar of her home. Mrs. Eugene McCarthy, an older sister, told the police she murdered her sister and directed the police to the place where the body was found.

Dr. Stone found that the woman came to her death from a bullet wound in the chest. The sister had said, according to the police, that she shot Miss Kerrigan in the head, following a slight quarrel.

Mrs. McCarthy is still in custody but has not been called into court. It was stated that she probably would be examined as to her sanity before being arraigned.

FOR INLAND WATERWAY

Washington, Aug. 14.—Expenditure in the immediate future of $20,000,000 by congress to complete the inland waterway between Boston, Mass., and Beaufort, N. C., was recommended to the house by the general board of army engineers. Construction of a twelve-foot canal, ninety feet wide, is contemplated, with later improvement to a sea-level canal twenty-five feet deep.

That the government purchase the Chesapeake and Delaware canal for $2,500,000 and that the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania contribute $3,000,000 and $7,000,000, respectively toward the project between the Delaware river and New York bay are other recommendations.

Brothers Injured In Fall

BELLBOY IN PRISON

Isadore Bowman Gets 3½ to Five Years For Hotel Robbery

Boston, Aug. 14.—Claiming that much of the jewelry found in his possession was his own and honestly come by, Isadore Bowman, a negro and former bellboy at the Hotel Vendome, who was arrested charged with larceny of thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry from the rooms of guests, made a strong plea for clemency to Judge Pratt in the superior court. Bowman pleaded guilty to larceny. He was sentenced to not less than 3½ nor more than five years in the state prison.

While thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry is said to have been stolen by Bowman, he pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking and entering and receiving stolen goods valued at about $2000.

Girls In New Britain Firm Get Warning With Pay

New Britain, Conn., Aug. 14.—When they opened their weekly pay envelopes the stenographers employed by the big cutlery factory of Landers, Frary & Clark received a jolt. Nicely wrapped about the bills was a polite and decidedly diplomatic note from the factory management requesting the young women to take notice that the modern monstrosities in women's clothing were not wholly approved and that those who wore them might be liable to dismissal on slight pretext.

Landers, Frary & Clark typists are acknowledged as the fashion arbiters in this city. Any noon or evening the crowd they attract on the streets is positive proof of their leadership.

MARVELOUS HORSE A CROSS BREED

Is Result of Experiments Made With Zebras

Washington, Aug. 14.—Experts of the bureau of animal industry believe they have discovered a new cross breed of horse that will prove as tough and useful as the mule and yet have the intelligence and speed of the full blood horse. This decision has been reached after experiments made by breeding "Dan," the Greavy zebra from the national zoological garden, to a Morgan mare, at the Maryland experimental farm of the department of agriculture.

The resultant foal has been highly praised by horsemen and the breeders are urging that the government import as many more zebras of the same strain as can be procured for the purpose of establishing the new breed.

BUCKING THE MAYOR

"Strong Arm" Squad Will Enforce Curfew Law

New York, Aug. 14.—Mayor Gaynor's curfew order directing proprietors of liquor selling places to close at 1 o'clock in the morning brought on a deadlock between the police and the courts.

The action of a "strong arm" squad in ejecting sixty men and women diners from Thomas Healy's restaurant early in the morning was described by Police Magistrate Deul as "preposterous." The magistrate said from the bench that he would issue warrants against the restaurant, which has been visited by policemen each morning this week. Acting Police Commissioner McKay announced that the police would continue to close the place at the curfew.

BIBLES FOR NEW ENGLAND

Gideons Raise $25,000 at Convention At Old Orchard, Me.

Old Orchard, Me., Aug. 14.—Over $25,000 has been raised in three days by the Gideons at their first convention at Old Orchard, according to C. L. Drake of Boston, chairman of the Bible committee. Before the members of the association leave for their homes, Drake declared, he expects that $30,000 will be subscribed to pay for the 75,000 Bibles for New England hotels.

So enthusiastic did the convention become that contributions toward the cost of Bibles for New England poured in faster than the committee could handle them. One man gave $1000 an another $500.

Race Riot Threatened

Akron, O., Aug. 14.—A serious race riot may be the result of notices posted on the homes of North Side negroes by members of a "citizens' vigilance league" in that section of the city, warning the negroes that unless they sell their property and leave they will be forcibly evicted from their homes, which also are threatened with destruction.

Many Deprived of Milk

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 14.—Nearly 2000 families were deprived of their milk supply when the board of health notified the Peckham Dairy company its license had been revoked, after a clash with the board.

Three Soldiers Killed In Explosion

Rome, Aug. 14.—Three soldiers were killed and four were fatally hurt in an explosion in a powder factory near Montemarious.

WEDDING CAUSES SENSATION

Bride Says That Love Between Couple More Than Makes Up For Difference In Ages—Had to Go to Massachusetts For Ceremony as New Hampshire Laws Forbade

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 14.—This city received the sensation of it staid life Thursday afternoon when it became known that Cornelius H. Parslow, 70, a painter and decorator here, and for years sexton of St. John's Episcopal church, had just returned from Cohasset, Mass., where on Monday he was married to his 22-year-old adopted daughter, Georgiana Shattuck.

While intimate friends of the family had heard rumors that Mr. Parslow and his adopted daughter were planning to wed, their return home and subsequent announcement of their marriage was a huge surprise.

It had always been the opinion of friends of the couple that great love existed between the two, but assigned it as parental affection, and little dreamed it would lead to matrimony.

Mrs. Parslow was very much surprised at first to find the fact that their marriage had become known to the newspapers.

"Goodness sake, how did you find it out?" she exclaimed; "we thought we had avoided all publicity by getting married in Cohasset.

"But since you know of it I will tell you the whole story. We were married because we love each other and for no other reason.

"The difference in our age? What has that got to do with it? For sixteen years I have known Mr. Parslow, known him as very few brides know their husbands on their wedding day. Do you suppose that under such circumstances I was not sure of the step I was taking regardless of the discrepancy in our ages. I was adopted by Mr. Parslow and his first wife when I was a child. I grew up as a child of theirs. Up to the time of the death of my adopted mother, I loved her as much as any child ever loved a mother, and she loved me.

"When she died four years ago I became the head of the household of my adopted father and now husband, I guess we knew each other well enough to know what we were doing. Besides, what difference do years make?"

According to Mrs. Parslow, the wedding at Cohasset was not an elopement or done on the impulse of the moment. She went on a two weeks' visit to her aunt, Mrs. Victor A. Delamiere. She brought along her complete trousseau, which, by the way, was the product of her own skill with a needle. Mr. Parslow followed in a few days and arrangements were made for a church wedding.

The ceremony was held in St. Stephen's Episcopal church, Rev. Howard K. Bartow officiating, at 11 a. m., Monday.

FIGHT FOR POSTAL JOB

Burleson Considers Several as Superintendent of Delivery

Washington, Aug. 14.—The appointment of a superintendent of delivery at the Boston postoffice has brought about one of the liveliest rows that Postmaster General Burleson has yet been called upon to settle.

Mayor Fitzgerald and others influential in Democratic politics are backing John W. McGrath, a veteran postal employe.

William F. Curley also has considerable backing. Congressman Peters is said to sponsor his appointment. And Congressman Murray has a dark horse from his own district.

WAGE WAR ENDS

Official Statement Says It Is "Amicably Adjusted"

St Albans, Vt., Aug. 14.—Following a series of conferences between the engineers and firemen of the Central Vermont railway and officials of the company the officials gave out the following statement:

"The wage question between the Central Vermont Railway company and its engineers and firemen has been amicably adjusted."

Rubber Company Will Resume

Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

President Adams Mansion.

Presidents Lane.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Dorothy Q. House.

GRANITE MEN AND A. O. H.

Attend Funeral of Daniel Collins at St. John's

The funeral of Daniel Collins, a well known South Quincy resident who died suddenly on Tuesday was held this morning from his home, 44 Madison street with a large attendance of relatives and friends. Delegations representing the Quincy branch of the Granite Cutters Union and Div. 5, A. O. H. attended. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Casey. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. The bearers were John Callahan, John J. Callahan, Jeremiah Donovan, Michael Moynihan, Patrick Mitchell. There was a profusion of floral tributes.

LAWN PARTY TONIGHT.

Preparations were well underway Wednesday afternoon for the lawn party on the grounds of the Hall Place M. E. church when the thunder storm caused a hasty retreat to the church. However the children thoroughly enjoyed themselves indoors despite the handicap.

Although the rain ceased it was so damp it was decided to postpone the evening entertainment until Thursday evening, but so many people gathered in the vestry the committee arranged their wares and did quite a business. The Japanese lanterns were put up and gave the vestry a festive air.

The lawn party will be continued this evening weather permitting. There will be automobiles for those wishing to take a ride, and the band concert will begin at eight o'clock.

COL. KINCAIDE THE GUEST

Speaks at Outing of House Furnishers Association

Col. Henry L. Kincaide was the principal speaker Wednesday at the annual outing and dinner of the House Furnishers' Association of Massachusetts. The outing was held at Nantasket, the banquet being served at the Palm Garden. After the banquet, Col. Kincaide, a former president of the association, was introduced, and gave an interesting talk on the visit of the Chamber of Commerce party to South America.

Col. Kincaide emphasized the opportunities in commerce with the great cities beneath the Southern Cross. He paid tribute to the enterprising natives of Argentina, who have developed the resources of their country wonderfully in the last few years. He touched on the Panama canal and the result it is sure to have on Massachusetts. Careful study of the continent, he said, had shown him that the United States should maintain American banks in South America, should also pay a ship subsidy and secure legation buildings for its ministers.

TEAMSTER BITTEN BY DOG

Was Delivering Grain at House in Braintree

John McLane, one of the drivers for F. H. Crane & Son, was bitten in the arm and leg by a bull dog at Braintree Wednesday afternoon. McLane drove up to a house and was delivering a bag of grain when the dog rushed out at him and before he could defend himself the animal had bitten him twice. The dog was finally driven off and McLane went to a physician where the wounds were cauterized.

FIREWORKS A FEATURE.

Quincy Italians will celebrate the feast of their patron, St. Rocco on Sunday and Monday with elaborate eremonies. Commencing Sunday afternoon at Protection hall, the affair will continue all day Monday and terminate on that evening with an illumination and fireworks display at Merrymount Park. Sunday afternoon a street parade will be held in which out of town societies and invited guests will participate. The committee in charge of the arrangements is headed by Antonio Petta of Canal street.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

A new and interesting set of pictures is now on exhibition in the art gallery of the Thomas Crane Public Library. The set is entitled "Days near Rome."

The first mount is a good map of Rome and vicinity. Then the collection starts with Subiaco and includes Farfa, Mount Soracte, Vignanello, Nepi, Caprarola, Veterbo and Bagnai, showing the most interesting spots of each place.

Perhaps the most interesting and surely the most beautiful are the last sixteen pictures, which are of the Villa Lante in Bagnaia, the old residence of the Lante family. The villa is well preserved and is one of the most charming examples of Italian Renaissance landscape architecture. It was built in 1477 and remodelled about 1550. The gardens are exceptionally beautiful, as these views show, forming four terraces, the dwellings on the second, with a fine sculptured fountain in the center. The upper levels are occupied by trees, cascades, summer houses or loggias, and gardens. It would truly be worth any one's time to go to the Library to see just these last sixteen of the sixty pictures presented.

The whole collection follows the text of A. J. C. Hare's, "Days near Rome," call number 122.25, which may be had upon application at the charging desk.

NEW VICE PRESIDENT.

Frank J. Duffy, councilman from Ward Two, was elected vice president of the John Adams aerie of Eagles at a meeting in Electa hall Wednesday evening. Harry Powell, who resigned because he will make his home at Burlington, Vt.

Arrangements were also partially completed for the clam bake which will be held at Squantum on Labor Day. Brothers Kilroy and Walsh of Providence, R. I., have written the aerie that they will make the bake. James Mellen, past worthy president, who attended the national convention at Baltimore as the local delegate is in New York, visiting relatives, and it is expected that his report will be received next meeting.

The best financial report ever given at a meeting since the aerie was instituted was read by Henry Langelier, and it was received with great applause. A class initiation, at which ten applicants will be admitted will be held at the next meeting. President John J. Feeley presided.

LEG FRACTURED.

Owen Ready, a farm hand employed by B. F. Hodgkinson, had his left leg fractured above the knee about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the grain elevator of F. H. Crane & Son. Ready had driven to the elevator with a pair of horses for a load of grain. On arriving he took the horses by the head to back the team around. In doing so, however, he got caught by the pole and was jammed against the building. His left leg was fractured just above the knee. The police ambulance was called and he was removed to the City Hospital.

NO AUTHORITY TO COLLECT

Says Witnesses for Government in Beverly Case

The continued case of Charles Beverly, who is charged on two complaints with larceny, came up in court this morning. When the case was called last week it was continued until Thursday in order that Mr. Walker whom Beverly alleges gave him the badge and certificate might be present.

At the hearing Rev. G. W. Tillman of the Christian Nonsectarian Rescue Home for Old Ladies testified that Beverly had been employed by him as a collector at one time, but had not been so employed for several weeks. He also said that Beverly had no authority to collect in Quincy and that he had not given him the badge and certificate.

The main witnesses was Cyrus Walker, the man who Beverly alleges gave him the badge and certificate. Mr. Walker denied emphatically that he had ever given authority to collect for the home and that Mr. Tillman was the only person who had authority to give them out.

The first question that counsel for Beverly asked of the witness was if he was married. Walker said no, and in answer to further questions said that his wife had been dead twelve years.

Counsel for Beverly then started in to ask Walker about an alleged court record. This was objected to by Chief Burrell who claimed if there was any record it should be produced. This raised a snag and as counsel was determined to have the record go in, the case was again continued until Aug. 28.

BAND CONCERT ON PARKWAY

SOCCER MEETING.

The United States of America, Football Association, organized June 21, 1913, has been reorganized by the Federation de Football Association, which is the controlling body of the world. The U. S. A. F. A. has been given the right to control "soccer" football in the United States, and affiliation with the international body can only be obtained through it. The Football Association, Ltd., cannot grant affiliation to any league or club outside of England except its own countries or colonies.

A meeting has been called for Sunday, Aug. 17, at Hotel Dorrance, Providence, R. I., at 2 p. m. The purpose of this meeting is to organize New England in sections, one section to comprise New Hampshire and Northern Massachusetts and the other section Southern Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

NEW STATIONS.

Contracts have been signed and work is under way on three new stations on the Old Colony division of the Old Colony division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. These will be at Buzzard's Bay, East Bridgewater and Seaside. Work on the Buzzard's Bay and East Bridgewater stations is almost completed, while the construction of the new station at Seaside is about to be commenced. These three stations will be essentially of the new order of station architecture, of artistic resign and rather on the Spanish type, and as such will be in marked contrast to the structures of the old days. All of them will have landscape features which are intended to enhance their attractiveness .

WEDNESDAY'S RAIN.

Quincy had quite a shower Wednesday afternoon, and for a time it rained hard. For half an hour before the shower there was the sound of distant thunder, but the sharp flashes of lightning were absent, although for a time it looked as though there would be a hard storm. It commenced to rain shortly before 4 o'clock and for two hours it rained hard by spells. Although the rain stopped before sundown the evening was threatening. The sun set clear, however, giving promise of good weather.

NO SENSE IN EITHER.

Two Ways of Telling a Story, One of Which Pointed a Moral.

Two men entered a train at a small station out west and took seats facing an elderly gentleman. They fell to telling hunting stories with great animation and many, many oaths.

Noticing that the old gentleman was an interested listener, one of the men spoke to him and asked whether he, too, was not a hunter, with a story or two worth hearing.

The told gentleman thought he could tell one, and this is what he said:

"One day I thought I would go hunting, so I took my tin pan tinder box gun and went up into tin pan tinder box woods on the side of a tin pan tinder box mountain, and I waited a tin pan tinder box long time; and then I saw a tin pan tinder box fine buck coming toward me, so I put my tin pan tinder box gun to my shoulder and fired. And that tin pan tinder box buck fell right in its tin pan tinder box tracks, and it was the finest tin pan tinder box buck I ever killed." After a pause he said, "How do you like my story?"

"Oh, the story is all right, but I don't see what all that 'tin pan tinder box' has to do with it."

"Well," replied the old gentleman, "that is just my way of swearing."

"I don't see much sense in swearing that way," said the other, with manifest disgust.

To which the old gentleman responded, "There is as much sense in my way of swearing as there is in yours, young man."—Youth's Companion.

A SKELETON IN THE CLOSET.

Tragic Story of the Origin of the Familiar Expression.

"A skeleton in the cupboard" is a familiar expression which has a tragic origin. The story is that a certain widow in England had a son in India, but owing to his failing health his mother became very anxious for his return. One day she received a letter from him containing the strange request that she should find some one who had no care or trouble and ask her to make six shirts for him.

Anxious to accede to his wishes, the mother hunted long and finally found a lady who apparently fulfilled the condition. The lady listened in silence to the request and then invited the widow into her bedroom, and there she opened a cupboard, which contained a human skeleton.

"Madam," she said, "I endeavor to keep my trouble to myself, but every night my husband compels me to kiss that skeleton, which was once his rival, whom he killed in a duel many years ago. Think you that I am happy?"

Then the mother wrote to her son of the fruitless errand, and his reply was:

"I knew when I gave you the commission that every one had his cares, and you, mother, must have yours. Know, then, that I am condemned to death and can never return to England. Mother, mother, there is a skeleton in every house!"

Ysaye's Lost "Strad."

Of fiddles lost, stolen or strayed the most notable instance within recent times is the disappearance of the violin belonging to the great player Ysaye. It was a Stradivarius, made in 1732, and one of the violins shown in the loan collection of musical instruments at South Kensington in 1885. It was the practice of Ysaye, as of every other great player, to carry with him two violins, so that in case of accident he might have one to fall back upon. The stolen one was left unattended in the artist's room below the orchestra. It vanished, and in consequence of the hue and cry that resulted the instrument has never come to light again. Nor can the possessor of such a violin bring it to light while the present generation of experts is alive, for infallibly it would be recognized.—St. James' Gazette.

The Aged Hare.

About 500 years ago there lived in Agshelin, a little town in Asia Minor, an imam, or village parson, the Khoja Nasr-ed-Din Effendi. Harry Charles Lukach says that one day a camel passed along the street in which the Khoja lived, and one of the Khoja's neighbors who had never seen a camel before ran to ask him what this strange beast might be.

"Don't you know what this is?" said the Khoja, who also had never seen a camel, but would not betray his ignorance. "That is a hare a thousand years old."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Bitter Disappointment.

"What's wrong with that melancholy man you were talking to just now?"

"He has been disapointed in love."

"Too bad! Did some other fellow get the girl?"

"No; he got the girl, but she won't support him."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Nearness.

"I came very near doing what I set out to accomplish," said the man, with great self confidence.

"Yes," replied the cruel cynic. "But that's what the man said when he put the paste brush in the ink bottle."—Washington Star.

Appropriate.

"What do you think would be a nice present to give a lawyer friend?"

"Why not a new suit?"—Baltimore American.

The important thing in life is to have a great aim and to possess the aptitude and perseverance to attain it.—Goethe.

INCLINED TOWARD PEACE

President Huerta Will Adopt Conciliatory Attitude

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—Following the conference between Special American Envoy John Lind and Mexican Foreign Minister Manuel Gamboa, the belief prevailed here that President Huerta would adopt a conciliatory attitude against the United States, realizing the hopelessness of trying to combat the vast power of Mexico's big neighbor. Callers at the national palace declared that in substance President Huerta had said:

"While Mexico resents interference even from a friendly power in her domestic affairs, nevertheless we do not feel that we are in any way being coerced by the United States. We will make further protest against efforts of Lind to settle affairs in this republic if he attempts to do so, but such action on our part will not be of a bellicose nature."

DENIES REQUEST OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Mexican Rebel's Release Refused by Commissioner

New Orleans, Aug. 14.—Although requested by Attorney General McReynolds to release former Governor Brito of Mexico on $10,000 bail United States Commissioner Arthur Browne refused to order the Mexican rebel's release.

Brito is held on a charge of murder and robbery, preferred by the Mexican federal government. At the time of his arrest he denounced Ambassador Henry L. Wilson. Brito says he is ready to furnish cash bail up to $1,000,000.

WANTS HIS $20

Topaz Won Bet and Also Got Locked Up

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 14.—If Ignatz Topaz of 29 Denver street, this city, can prove that he did not lose the seat of his trousers while robbing the hen coop of one of his fellow countrymen he will undoubtedly win the suit for $20 which he is about to bring against Antone Wunnkz of 273 Detroit street.

Wunukz offered $20 to anyone who could rob his chicken coop and get by his prize bull without losing the seat of his trousers.

Topaz did the trick and when he acquainted Antone with the fact the latter got slightly peeved and swore out a warrant before Captain Feeney, charging Topaz with the larceny of several of his chickens. It was at this point that Topaz instituted civil proceedings to secure the $20.

$300,000 FIRE LOSS

Buffalo Warehouses Burned by Supposed Incendiary

Buffalo, Aug. 14.—Two fires on the waterfront here caused a loss of $300,000. The west end of the Mutual Transit company's 1300-foot warehouse was damaged to the extent of $50,000.

An hour after the firemen and a force of 400 dock laborers had checked the blaze there, a second fire broke out in the Knowlton Warehouse company's lake freight warehouse, a short distance away. The value of the building and contents is $250,000. Incendiarism is suspected.

Italian Strike Cost Millions

Milan, Aug. 14.—The "general strike" in Italy, which has now come to an end resulted in the death of three persons, the wounding of 165 and the arrest of 2478, while the financial losses to workmen and employers amount to several millions of dollars.

Shipbuilding Strike a Failure

Hamburg, Aug. 14.—The strike in the shipbuilding industry here and at Stettin and Kiel, which had been in progress for the past month, was officially declared off. The walkout was ordered against the wishes of the executive committee of the workers' union and was a complete failure as the employers granted none of the demands of the men.

FIGHT AGAINST IMPEACHMENT

Sulzer Will Carry Case to the Supreme Court

WILL FIGHT TO LAST DITCH

After All-Night Session Assembly Votes, Seventy-Nine to Forty-Five, to Oust Governor on Charge of "High Crimes and Misdemeanors"—First Time In History of New York

Albany, Aug. 14.—Formal notice of the impeachment of Governor Sulzer by the assembly was served on the senate when the upper body convened yesterday afternoon, and the second stage of Tammany's battle royal to remove the governor was on.

"I do not intend to enter into any physical contest with Mr. Sulzer over the office of governor. As far as I am concerned there will be no circus or military manoeuvres about occupying the executive chamber. The law is supreme."

With three votes more than the required majority, Governor Sulzer was impeached by the assembly for alleged "high crimes and misdemeanors" in connection with the campaign fund.

After an all-night session, spent by the majority in filibustering until Tammany absentees could arrive, the vote was taken, resulting seventy-nine for impeachment to forty-five against.

The first impeachment of a governor of New York state came close on the heels of the most sensational feature in the Sulzer-Murphy war, when Mrs. Sulzer told certain senators she was responsible for the Sulzer stock market deals and that the governor knew nothing about it. She sought to shoulder all blame.

Governor Sulzer took the news of his impeachment with equanimity and calmness and went to bed immediately after he heard the Levy resolution had passed.

His only statement was that he will fight the impeachment by applying to the supreme court for an order restraining the further proceedings. He said he would carry the case to the United States court of appeals if necessary.

The governor and his wife had remained up all night at the "peoples house," receiving news of the progress of the fight over the telephone.

That Sulzer will decline to step out is regarded as certain, and it is equally certain that the Tammany majority will declare Glynn acting governor immediately.

It is believed Sulzer will decline to surrender the executive office and seal, and some of the more radical of the Sulzer partisans declared the governor would call out the militia to aid him.

KANSAS WORKMEN QUIT

Not For Higher Pay But For Lower Temperature

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 14.—For the tenth consecutive day temperatures all over Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma were up close to the 100 mark. Light splashes of rain fell at one or two points, but these were of small value to withering vegetation and suffering mankind. In Kansas the record of a quarter of a century have been broken.

Several score of workmen on large buildings in Topeka put down their tools and announced they would do no more work until there came a change in the weather.

The big Arkansas river, near Wichita, is dry, and so is the Ninnesoah. From the bed of the latter stream thousands of fish are being scooped up.

SLASHED HIS PATIENT

Mad Surgeon In Ohio Hospital Killed Man on Operating Table

Cincinnati, Aug. 14.—The wife of Dr. William R. Dabney, a surgeon of Marietta, O., applying for his commitment to Longview hospital, said that some time ago while he was performing a surgical operation in a Marietta hospital, he slashed right and left with his operating knife, and attaches of the hospital had to take him in charge.

Hold I. W. W. Men For Rioting

Salt Lake City, Aug. 14.—Four I. W. W. men were arraigned charged with inciting the riot in which four bystanders were shot seriously in a riot, when a special policeman waved an American flag in the face of an Industrial Worker of the World. It was necessary to call out the fire department to disperse the crowd.

Highway Association In Portland

Portland, Me., Aug. 14.—One hundred members of the Massachusetts Highway association arrived in this city this morning for the regular quarterly meeting of the New England association.

SAYS FARMERS ARE NEGLECTED

President Is In Favor of System of Rural Credits

PROMISES FINANCIAL RELIEF

Matter Will Be Taken Up by Congress After Currency Legislation Passes—Systematic Study of Whole Problem Has Been Made by Department of Agriculture

Washington, Aug. 14.—In an official statement issued from the White House, President Wilson declared emphatically in favor of "a complete and adequate system to rural credits." The president explained that legislation of this character was not attached to the currency bill now under consideration because there had not been time to work out a perfect plan. He promised, however, to endeavor to secure early action for rural credits from congress.

After explaining at some length the necessity for this legislation and the investigation which has been made by the government commission recently returned from Europe, the president said:

"There has been too little federal legislation framed to serve the farmer directly and a deliberate adjustment to his real needs. We long ago fell into the habit of assuming that the farmers of America enjoyed such an immense natural advantage over the farmers of the rest of the world; were so intelligent and enterprising and so at ease upon the incomparable soils of our great continent, that they could feed the world and prosper no matter what handicap they carried. We have not exaggerated their capacity or their opportunity, but we have neglected to analyze the burdensome disadvantages from which they were suffering.

"One of the chief and most serious of these disadvantages has been that the farmer has not been able to secure the extended bank accommodations he every year stands in need of without paying the most burdensome rates of interest and saddling himself with mortgages and obligations of every kind which he fairly staggered under, if he could carry them at all. In other countries systems of rural credit have been put into operation which have not only relieved the farmer but have put his enterprises upon a footing of easy accomplishment. Our farmers must have similar means afforded them. They must be furnished these facilities before their enterprises languish, not afterward. And they will be.

"This is our next great task and duty. Not only is a government commission about to report the best method but the department of agriculture also has undertaken a serious and systematic study of the whole problem of rural credits. The congress and the executive, working together, will certainly afford the needed machinery of relief and prosperity to the people of the country-side, and that very soon."

GUILTY OF ASSAULT

Cushing Fined $50 and Given Month In House of Correction

Randolph, Mass., Aug. 14.—Found guilty of assaulting his wife and daughter, while intoxicated, Charles B. Cushing, a carpenter of West Corner, was fined $25 for assaulting his wife, $25 for assaulting his daughter and was sentenced to a month in the house of correction for intoxication. The case was heard in Quincy.

The trouble started when Cushing objected to the manner in which his daughter Virginia, aged 13, was mopping the floor. It is claimed he hit her. When the mother remonstrated she was also hit with plates and other household articles.

JAPAN PROTECTS REBELS

One Hundred Assassins Sent From China to Kill Sun Yat Sen

Tokio, Aug. 14.—One hundred assassins are reported by the Japanese newspapers to have been sent to Japan to kill Dr. Sun Yat Sen, Huang Sing and other Chinese revolutionary fugitives by Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai of China.

The Japanese government, in consequence of the reports, has arranged to give police protection to the leaders of the Chinese revolution who have sought asylum in Japan. It declares, however, that it will not permit Japan to be used as a headquarters for Chinese plotters.

Claims New Cancer Cure

Hobart, Tasmania, Aug. 14.—Dr. Roberts, senior surgeon of the general hospital here claims to have attained remarkable success in the cure of cancer by Roentgen secondary rays filtered through silver, copper or tin plate.

FLYING WIND

Her Illusions Soon Vanish

By JEFFERSON PORT

"You sure are a little wild Indian, Bess," reproved Phil Dawson as they rode away from the small circus that had pitched its tent on the outskirts of Red Brick.

Bess looked up quickly, and the moonlight was reflected in the bright pools of her eyes.

"You mean my entering the cowboy race?" she asked sharply.

"Yes."

"I won!" she exulted, flourishing the silver spurs that jingled from a twisted ribbon on her wrist. "Besides, Annie Larsen was in the race. I wasn't the only woman."

"I know, but Annie Larsen does lots of things that I don't want you to do when you are my wife."

"When I am your wife? I'll never be your wife. So there!" blazed Bess wrathfully. "I'm tired of your nagging, Phil Dawson. I'd rather be a circus rider than marry you."

"Do you mean that, Bess?" asked Phil in a queer voice.

"Yes, and we may as well part now. Here is your ring."

Two days later Phil Dawson learned that Bessie Madison had left home, taking her favorite pony with her. Her stepmother, who was about to be married again, was openly relieved by the girl's departure, and, while she affected to know that Bess had gone to Chicago, no one was certain what had become of their favorite.

It came early summer, and in an Ohio village the circus was in full swing. It was a small circus, but well equipped. The tent was roomy, the animals were sleek and well fed, and the performers were a well dressed, sober company.

A frock coated, silk hatted man came out and announced the opening attraction—the famous Buzon brothers, kings of the trapeze.

She wore a khaki divided skirt and blouse laced with a red silk cord, a leather banded sombrero, brown boots and leggings and fringed and beaded gauntlet gloves. In one hand she carried a Mexican quirt.

Bessie Madison looked older, sadder eyed. If she regretted her hasty action in flinging off Phil Dawson no one should know it; if her eyes hungrily scanned each audience the country over, hoping to see his keen, dark gaze searching for her, no one was the wiser.

"Of course he wouldn't be out here in Ohio with the spring roundup coming on," murmured Bessie, closing her eyes for an instant. Angry at her own weakness, she snapped out suddenly, "I wouldn't speak to him if he was here, either."

"What is it, dearie?" asked Mme. Hufla, the tight rope dancer, laying a carefully powdered hand on Bessie's shoulder.

"Nothing much," smiled Bessie. "That pink is the most becoming costume you've got, madame."

"Thank you, dearie; that's good to hear," laughed the other pleasantly. "Have you seen the new star attraction yet?"

"No. Has he arrived?"

"Joined the show this afternoon. Peterson says he is some wonder too! Can ride a bucking broncho to a finish and does some fancy riding. Callicoon is his name."

Bessie turned indifferently away. She was not interested.

It was her turn to go on after the Callicoon act. She mounted her little brown pony and waited near the entrance for her call. There was a little confusion behind her, and a great cream colored horse dashed past her with a man dressed in yellow standing on his back.

"Callicoon! Ain't he a wonder?" whispered Mme Hufla in her ear.

Bessie nodded. Her eyes followed the flashing yellow satin figure of the rider as it showed against the dark masses of onlookers, saw him enter the ring and witnessed his daring riding on the unsaddled horse. Never could she catch a glimpse of his face, for the lights were ill arranged, and always some head or shoulder of her companions blocked the way when his face was turned in her direction.

Suddenly he stripped off the yellow satin costume, flung it to an attendant and showed himself dressed in the costume of the plains. Some one tossed him a broad brimmed hat, and he crammed it on his head and with one graceful movement left the back of the cream horse and dropped lightly into the saddle of a vicious little broncho which had been led to the ring.

The ring was cleared instantly, and Callicoon was alone with the beast he was expected to conquer.

For an instant they stood motionless—the grizzled broncho and the dark eyed, keen faced man, his lean brown hand gripping the bridle.

Callicoon's knees gripped the wiry little shoulders. The man seemed part of the beast. The battle was on, and the onlookers watched breathlessly. Which would win?

There was a thunder of applause as Callicoon rode away on his conquered animal, and it was Bess' turn to go on. Her act was a thrilling one. The beautiful daughter of a rancher is pursued by Indians on the plains and is finally rescued by a cowboy. The daring riders on the fleet footed ponies always drew applause from the crowd.

Bessie felt dizzy as she rode into the tent. Her pony leaped forward at the word of command and raced around the grassy track. Behind her half a dozen Indians on sweating horses streamed after her, whooping madly and waving tomahawks. Twice around the track was the course, and then the rescuing cowboy would enter the chase.

Thump, thump, thump, went the hoofs on the turf. Bessie looked behind her at the painted Indians approaching so near. She felt, with a thrill of terror, that she was losing her nerve. Once as a little child she had been horrified at the sight of an Indian raid, a mock invasion of Red Brick by a band of drunken Apaches, and she felt the old terror creeping over her now at sight of the ugly painted faces so close behind.

Bessie glanced over her shoulder and saw coming up the track a bay horse with a white blazed forehead. On his back was a cowboy in swift pursuit of the Indians. Now was the time to crown her act with its most daring performance.

There was a flash of her slim, brown clad form, and she was standing on the saddle, her little brown pony tearing around the track in half crazed delight in the contest of speed and daring.

The Indians yelled. The gun of the pursuing cowpuncher barked up at the roof of the tent and lent excitement to the scene. Bessie turned her head again. There was a strange familiarity about that blazed sorrel horse.

Her foot slipped, the brown pony swerved suddenly, and Bessie fell heavily across the saddle, her foot feeling for the stirrup. Her need for help was desperate now. The crowd cheered wildly at what they believed to be a new deed of daring. The Indians screeched madly. But underlying the noise was the steady beating of the sorrel's hoofs, the baritone music of a man's voice calling over and over again: "Steady, there—just a moment! Steady, there, girl! I'll be there!"

Just when she felt herself slipping from the saddle, where she would fall under the rushing feet of the Indian ponies, there came the sweeping rush of the sorrel. A strong arm pulled her from the brown pony's back to a safe refuge, and Bessie Madison promptly fainted for the first time in her life, while the audience thundered applause at the daring rescue, not knowing that they were witnessing grim reality instead of an Indian play.

"Good for you, Callicoon!" cried Peterson, the manager, as the new rider gently handed down Bessie's unconscious form. "The girl has lost her nerve lately. I've been going to advise her to take a rest. Seems to be always watching the audiences. She is like a homesick cat. There, Hufla; give her another dose of the ice water. That's bringing her around! I've got to go on!"

He dashed away, and Callicoon was left alone with Mme. Hufla and Bessie Madison. There came a call for the tight rope dancer.

"I'll stay with her," said the new rider, and he picked up a fan and sat down in Mme. Hufla's vacant seat.

Bessie opened her eyes and looked sadly at him. Then the lids drooped, and tears fell from the long lashes and rolled down her thin cheeks.

Callicoon took out a handkerchief and gently wiped the tears away.

"Don't, Phil," whispered Bessie. "You are so good. It hurts me. I don't deserve it."

"You can't be blamed for being a foolish little girl," growled Phil, continuing to dry the tears and then to add familiar pats to the slowly reddening cheek. "If you're bound to stay in the show business, Bess, I'll stay with you, and the ranch can go to grass. But I wish you wanted to come home."

"You wouldn't want such a wicked, ill tempered wife," sobbed Bessie.

"I'll take a chance," grinned Phil. "Is it the show—or—what?"

"It's home, Phil, dear," whispered the disillusioned circus lady meekly.

PROLOGUE

This humorous tale, written in McCutcheon's best vein, is faultless in its morals, despite its title, and cumulative in its interest. It may be stated in strict confidence that Edith did not actually have more than one husband; consequently the gentle reader need harbor no apprehension on this score. Like all other estimable married women, Edith had only one husband, but circumstances arose through which it seemed necessary for her husband to be in two places at the same time, and how this was accomplished and what the outcome was— But wait a bit; let George Barr McCutcheon, the prince of story tellers, unfold the romance.

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

CHAPTER III.
The Sister-in-law.

THE garde listened to his demand for a separate compartment with the dejection of a capable French attendant who is ever ready with joint commiseration and obduracy. No, he was compelled to inform monsieur the American (to the dismay of the pseudo Englishman) it would be impossible to arrange for another compartment. The train was crowded to its capacity. Many had been turned away. No, a louis would not be of avail. The deepest grief and anguish filled his soul to see the predicament of monsieur, but there was no relief.

Brock's miserable affectation of the English drawl soon gave way to sharp emphatic Americanisms. It was after 8 o'clock and the train was well under way. The street lamps were getting fewer and fewer, and the soft, fresh air of the suburbs was rushing through the window.

"But, hang it all, I can't sit up at night!" growled Brock in exasperated finality.

"M'sieur forgets that he has a berth. It is not the fault of the compagnie that he is without a bed. Did not m'sieur book the compartment himself? Tres bien!"

As the result of strong persuasion the garde consented to make "the grand tour" of the train de luxe in search of a berth. It goes without saying that he was intensely mystified by Brock's incautious remark that he would be satisfied with "an upper if he couldn't do any better." For the life of him monsieur the garde could not comprehend the situation. He went away, shaking his head and looking at the tickets, as much as to say that an American is never satisfied—not even with the best.

Brock lowered a window seat in the passage and sat down, staring blankly and blackly out into the whizzing night. The predicament had come upon him so suddenly that he had not until now found the opportunity to analyze it in its entirety. The worst that could come of it, of course, was the poor comfort of a night in a chair. He knew that it was a train of sleeping coaches. Ah! He suddenly remembered the luggage van! As a last resort he might find lodging among the trunks.

And then, too, there was something irritating in the suspicion that she had laughed as if it were a huge joke. Perhaps even now she was doubled up in her narrow couch stifling the giggle that would not be suppressed.

When the garde came back with the lugubrious information that nothing, positively nothing, was to be had it is painful to record that Brock swore in a manner which won the deepest respect of the trainman.

"At 4 o'clock in the morning, m'sieur, an old gentleman and his wife will get out at Strassburg, their destination. They are in this carriage, and you may take their compartment if m'sieur will not object to sleeping in a room just vacated by two mourners who today buried a beloved son in Paris. They have kept all of the flowers in their"—

"Four o'clock! Good Lord, what am I to do till then?" groaned Brock, glaring with unmanly hatred at the door of the Medcroft compartment.

"Perhaps madame may be willing to take the upper"— ventured the guard timorously, but Brock checked him with a peremptory gesture. He proposed, instead, the luggage van, whereupon the garde burst into a psalm of utter dejection. It was against the rules, irrevocably.

"Then I guess I'll have to sit here all night," said Brock faintly. He was forgetting his English.

"If m'sieur will not occupy his own bed, yes," said the guard, shrugging his shoulders and washing his hands of the whole incomprehensible affair. "M'sieur will then be up to receive the customs officers at the frontier. Perhaps he will give me the keys to madame's trunks so that she may not be disturbed."

"Ask her for 'em yourself," growled Brock, after one dazed moment of dismay.

The hours crawled slowly by. He paced the length of the wriggling corridor a hundred times back and forth; he sat on every window seat in the carriage; he nodded and dozed and groaned and laughed at himself in the deepest derision all through the dismal night. Daylight came at 4. He saw the sun rise for the first time in his life. He neither enjoyed nor appreciated the novelty. Never had he witnessed anything so mournfully depressing as the first gray tints that crept up to mock him in his vigil. Never had he seen anything so ghastly as the soft red glow that suffused the morning sky.

"I'll sleep all day if I ever get into that d—d bed," he said to himself, bitterly wistful.

The customs officers had eyed him suspiciously at the border. They had evidently been told of his strange madness in refusing to occupy the berth he had paid for. Their examination of his effects was more thorough than usual. It may have entered their heads that he was standing guard over the repose of a fair accomplice. They asked so many embarrassing and disconcerting questions that he was devoutly relieved when they passed on, still suspicious.

The train was late, and at 5 o'clock he was desperately combating an impulse to leave it at Strassburg, find lodging in a hotel and then, refreshed, set out for London to have it out with the malevolent Medcroft. The disembarking of the venerable mourners, however, restored him to a degree of his peace of mind. After all, he reviewed, it would be cowardly and base to desert a trusting wife. He pictured her as asleep and securely confident in his stanchness. No, he would have it out with Medcroft at some later day.

He was congratulating himself on the acquisition of a bed—although it might possess the odor of a bed of tuberoses—when all of his pleasant calculations were upset by the appearance of a German burgher and his family. It was then that he learned that these people had booked le compartement from Strassburg to Munich.

Brock resumed his window seat and despondently awaited the call to breakfast. He fell sound asleep with his monocle in position, nor did it matter to him that his hat dropped through the window and went scuttling off across the green Rhenish fields. When next he looked at his watch it was 8 o'clock. A small boy was standing at the end of the passage staring wide eyed at him. Two little girls came piling, half dressed, from a compartment, evidently in response to the youngster's whispered command to hurry out and see the funny man. Brock scowled darkly, and the trio darted swiftly into the compartment.

He dragged his stiff legs into the dining car at Stuttgart and shoved them under a table. The car was quite empty. As he was staring blankly at the menu the conducteur from his car hurried in with the word that madam would not breakfast until 9. She was still very sleepy. Would M. Medcroft be good enough to order her coffee and rolls brought to her compartment at that hour? And would he mind seeing that the maid saw to it that Raggles surely had his biscuit and a walk at the next station?

"Raggles?" queried Brock, passing his hand over his brow. The other shrugged his shoulders and looked askance. "Oh, yes; I understand," murmured the puzzled one, recovering himself. For the next ten minutes he wondered who Raggles could be.

He had eaten his strawberries and was waiting for the eggs and coffee, resentfully eying the early risers who were now coming in for their coffee and rolls. They had slept. He could tell by the complacent manner in which their hair was combed and by the interest they found in the scenery which he had come, by tedious familiarity, to loathe and scorn.

Signals of Distress

Quincy People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Disordered kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions may be dark, contain sediment.

Passages are sometimes frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is often present day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells may occur.

Weakened kidneys should receive quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Quincy evidence proves their worth.

Mrs. Nellie A. Abbott, 33 Edison Park, Quincy, Mass., says: "I heard Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended and finally tried them. I had backache and disordered kidneys. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up all right."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

IN PATH OF THE MAD DOG

Cow and Two Dogs Were Among Victims

Several new cases of dog bites have developed along the route covered by the South Quincy St. Bernard which ran wild over Dorchester and Atlantic on Sunday and Monday and was killed by the local police off Adams street. A cow owned by Alexander Darr, 27 Walnut street is the latest reported, and is receiving the attention of Dr. Abele. A dog owned by F. J. Ripley, of Marlboro street which was bitten was killed Wednesday and the dog of George A. Thomas will meet a similar fate.

—Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools in Chicago, recently prepared a course on sex hygiene for introduction in the schools of that city. On submission to the board of education, that body, after due consideration, vetoed the proposition, recognizing and possibly sharing a widespread distrust of this innovation. It is a vexed question, with something to be said on both sides. If parents will not do their part some substitute must be found. But wholesale instruction by lectures can never take the place of home care, which is largely not a matter of instruction at all, but discipline, protection, and vigilant loving supervision. Any excess of precocious knowledge is to be deprecated, and evil should be made abhorrent but left vague unless explicitness becomes necessary. Too much talking about it is disturbing. The best precautions are a wholesome regimen, a careful supervision of habits, plenty of varied occupation, good books, good companions, and close relations between parents and children.—Milford Gazette.

NINE ITEMS IN CALL

For Special Meeting of City Council

Hearing on Tax Limit

Mayor Stone issued the call this morning for the special meeting of the City Council for next Monday evening. There are nine items in the call as follows:

To draw jurors.

To receive and act on a report of the Finance Committee on the order appropriating $1,500 to repair Neponset bridge.

To receive and act on a report of the Committee on Ordinances relative to public speaking and street parades.

To confirm the appointment of election officers.

To receive and act on petitions of the Telephone Company for relocation of poles and attachments.

To receive and act on a communication from the Mayor relative to an appropriation for expenses in the Catherine Buckley claim.

To hold a public hearing at 8 o'clock on fixing the tax limit for the city.

—There is this to be said of the lobby whether it operate at Washington, or whether it confine its labors to state legislature: The lobby can flourish only in proportion as it is encouraged or tolerated by the men who make laws, state or national. Whenever and wherever lobby activity, or the record of such activity, makes for talk, or downright scandal, then it is time for the electors to concern themselves more fully with the character of the men they choose to legislate for them.—Salem News.

Who Pays Taxes To Keep This Town Going?

By HOLLAND.

WHEN a new bridge is needed, a road must be repaired, a courthouse is to be built, where does the money come from? Do the mail order houses pay it? Hardly. They will not even send a contribution to help buy a bell for the new church or to help a Fourth of July celebration. They pay no taxes in this town, and they are not concerned in its prosperity.

This town must be supported by its residents and those who live in the immediate vicinity. If they insist on sending their money away then they are helping to kill their town, and they are making it harder for them to pay the taxes necessary to maintain local government and to make local improvements.

You owe something to yourself, and you owe something to your neighbors. You can help yourself by helping your neighbors. You can't injure your neighbors without injuring yourself. When you send money to mail order houses you are hurting your town, your neighbors and yourself.

SPEND YOUR MONEY
WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

CLOTHES FOR THE KDIDIES.

Pretty School Frocks A Joy To Make—Simple Embroideries and Contrasting Materials Used For Garnishment. The Waistcoat Waist.

No form of fancy work is so enjoyable and altogether satisfactory to taste and pocket book as the making of pretty, simple little frocks for the girls and blouses and suits for boys not yet in the tailor class.

EMBROIDERIES

Embroideries of exquisite patterns hand-wrought on handkerchief linen make gowns suited only to special wear by people who affect extreme luxury, but big simple scallops, easily and quickly accomplished, give a stylish individual finish to frocks of plain colored materials—the hand-wrought air always so attractive at little cost of time or effort. Big stuffed dots or various colors have been a favorite form of adornment for the collar and cuff sets that have added considerably to the style of pretty dresses this Summer. These will be equally modish, and appreciated for wear with school frocks next season, or as a means to vary the effect of blouse or coatee.

PEPLUMS.

Very many waists with peplum attachments are to be worn next season in place of blouses, and the very latest and newest idea in this direction, the Waistcoat Waist," has much the same lines since the vest extends down on the hips a bit, and the points drop down in front below the waist line. These sleeveless or vest waists are neither sleeveless in reality, nor vests properly speaking—imagine a man's vest made all of one material, worn as an outside garment, i. e., minus a coat, the man's shirt sleeves replaced by sleeves of silk or lace, velvet or net, contrasting well with the color and pattern of the vest, and you have an idea of this new French creation that has been copied and varied indefinitely.

ODD SLEEVES.

Sleeves of odd materials, contrasting with the waist, and usually having the same stuff repeated in a slash of the skirt, or in sash or girdle are a revival likely to be extremely popular. This affords great opportunity for replacing the worn sleeves of last year's school frock and of lengthening a skirt, since the sleeve material is often repeated in a simulated under skirt or band at the foot. Plaid silks are fashionable for all trimming purposes and wool tartans make some of the smartest one-piece dresses green and blue plaids in rather small blocks being exceptionally attractive. For separate skirts all the clan plaids and blocks are the latest thing and the vogue of plain coats with figured skirts is gaining, not losing ground.

CHILDREN'S TUB FROCKS

It is fascinating work to make pretty tub frocks for the children, now that smart, accurate patterns can be obtained so easily. The cost is considerably less than for readymades and one can secure at little cost just the right colors in the best grade materials, the kind used only for the most expensive made up garments.

Renfrew Devonshire cloth is the latest and best fabric to use for tub clothes. It outwears Galatea, is sunproof and tub-proof, and is yarn-dyed not printed, resembling linen closely in texture but does not muss like linen. It comes in a fascinating variety of stripes, checks and plain colors, affording opportunity for the fashionable combinations that constitute such an attractive feature of wash dresses. Its unusual width cuts to advantage and the name stamped on the selvage prevents the substitution of inferior goods.

In fact, the liking for washable school frocks is not confined to those for the smaller girls. A glimpse of one of the class rooms of a fashionable private school in New York would reveal an astonishing preponderance of wash frocks smartly cut and made after very simple models.

NECK FIXINGS

Pretty neck finishes, in turn-over collars and matching cuffs, with rather plain finishes in whatever frills accompany them, lend variety to frocks and blouses of colored washable cottons or plaided serges. With a dress of plain color the girdle or sash will be tartan, and where the dress is of the tremendously popular small shepherd's check these accessories are apt to be scarlet or Balkan Blue. Belts of patent leather in plain and fancy styles, and wide girdles of ooze leather are as stylishly worn by the Juniors as by their elders.

Advertisers Are In Good Company

By HOLLAND.

MR. BUSINESS MAN, have you ever thought that advertising puts you in good company? It is an old saying that a man is known by the company he keeps. When you join the ranks of the advertisers you join the ranks of the biggest and most successful merchants and manufacturers of the world.

How many concerns can you name in Chicago, in New York, in Kansas City, in Boston, in any large city in the country? Name them and you will notice that all are big advertisers and all are leaders in their lines. Ask your friends to name the most successful merchants they know in the big cities and in each case the name of a great advertiser will be mentioned.

The same rule is true of smaller cities and towns. The successful merchants are the advertisers. The advertiser stamps himself as one having confidence in himself and his wares, as one proud of his calling and seeking publicity and the test of patronage.

Tax Limit for City Purposes

Section 19 of Chapter 719 under which a public hearing must be held is as follows:

"Within ninety days after the passage of this act the City Council or other governing body of every city, except Boston, shall give a public hearing in regard to establishing a tax limit for that city.

"The time and place of holding such hearing shall be duly advertised, and, after the hearing, any city, except Boston, may provide by ordinance that the taxes assessed on property therein, exclusive of the state tax and other amounts assessed upon the city by the commonwealth, the county tax and sums required by law to be raised on account of the city debt, shall not in any year succeeding the adoption of such ordinance exceed an amount specified in the ordinance on every one thousand dollars of the average of the assessors' valuation of the taxable property therein for the preceding three years, such valuation being first reduced by the amount of all abatements allowed thereon previous to the thirty-first day of December in the year preceding said assessment:

"And the tax limit so established by ordinance shall have the force of law until it is annulled or modified by the action of the City Council or other governing body of the city. After such ordinance has been established it shall not be annulled or modified within one year thereafter, and then only after a public hearing, duly advertised, and by a two-thirds vote of the City Council or other governing body of the city."—Approved May 28, 1913.

CHILD LABOR LAW

Applies to Stores As Well As Factories

Of Far Reaching Importance

Secretary Manager McQuaid, of the Lawrence Chamber of Commerce, has prepared a summary of the new child labor law of Massachusetts which will go into operation on the first of September. Very few employers of labor where minors are engaged are exempt entirely from the working of the law, so that it is well for every one to familiarize himself with its provisions.

"These changes," says Secretary McQuaid, "are almost revolutionary. Those who believe in the new laws calls them the greatest forward step yet taken by an American commonwealth. Some employers— and some others—wish they had been given 'more time,' that the laws might have been passed in 1913 to become effective in 1914.

STORES INCLUDED.

After September 1, no boy under 18 and no girl under 21 can be employed more than six days in one week, more than 54 hours in the week, more than 10 hours in one day, before 5 A. M. or after 10 P. M. in any factory, workshop , manufacturing, mechanical or merchantile establishment, barber shop bootblack stand or establishment, public stable, garage, brick or lumber yard, telephone exchange, telegraph or messenger office, in the construction or repair of buildings, in any wage earning. industry carried on in tenement or other houses.

MINORS UNDER 14.

No minor under 14 shall be permitted to work in or about or in connection with any of the above occupations at any time, and no minor under 14 shall be employed at work performed for wage or other compensation, to whomsoever payable, while the public schools are in session or before 6 A. M. of after 6 P. M.

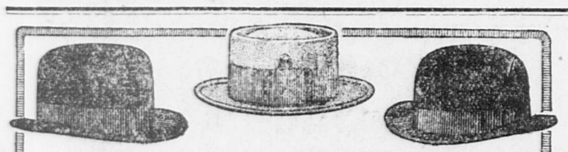

DANGEROUS OCCUPATIONS.

No minor under 16 shall hereafter be permitted in Massachusetts to work on circular or band saws, wood shapers, wood jointers, planers, picker machines or machines used in picking wool, cotton, hair, or any other material, paper lace machines, leather burnishing machines, job or cylinder presses operated by power other than foot power, stamping machines used in sheet metal and tinware or in paper or leather manufacturing or in washer or nut factories, metal or paper cutting machines, corner staying machines in paper box factories, corrugated paper or in roofing or washerboard factories, steam boilers, dough brakes or cracker machinery of any kind, wire or iron straightening or drawing machinery, power punches or shears, washing or grinding or mixing machinery, calendar rolls in paper and rubber manufacturing or other heavy rolls driven by power, laundering machinery, upon or in connection with any dangerous electrical machinery or appliances, adjusting any hazardous belt to any machinery, oiling or cleaning hazardous or unguarded belts, machinery or gearing while such machinery or gearing is in motion, on scaffolding, in heavy work in the building trades, stripping, assorting, manufacturing or packing tobacco, in any tunnel, in a public bowling alley, in a pool or billiard room; and the state board of labor and industries may, after public hearing, lenghten this list of dangerous occupations.

MINORS UNDER 18.

The law then again considers the minor under 18. No such minor under 18 shall hereafter be permitted to work in or about blast furnaces, in the operation of hoisting machines, in oiling or cleaning hazardous machinery in motion, in the use of any polishing or buffing machine, at switch tending, at gate tending, at track repairing, as brakeman fireman, engineer, motorman or conductor, as fireman or engineer on any boat or vessel, in operating motor vehicles of any description, where gunpowder, nitro glycerine or other dangerous explosive is manufactured, in the manufacture of phosphorous matches, in any distillery, brewery or any other establishment where malt or alcoholic liquors are

LOST HIS RIGHT LEG

John Donovan Runover At Dudley Street Station

Was Attempting to Board Car

John Donovan aged 56 years of 36 Union street, Quincy, is in a serious condition at the Boston City Hospital, as a result of being run over by a Quincy car at the Dudley Street Elevated terminal Thursday evening. Mr. Donovan was on his way home and was waiting on the lower level to take a Quincy car at 5.37. The section of the station was crowded with people at the time and as the Quincy car pulled around the corner he attempted to get aboard before it had come to a stop. In doing so, he lost his hold and fell between the trucks, the rear wheel passing over his right leg almost severing it below the knee.

Dr. S. H. Littlefield was summoned, but before he arrived the injured man was given treatment by Dr. Philip Carleton who happened to be at the terminal.

The police ambulance from the Dudley street station was called and Mr. Donovan was hurried to the Boston City Hospital, where it was found that his leg had been badly shattered and that amputation was necessary to save his life. The leg was amputated just above the knee at the Hospital.

The accident happened during the rush hour at the station and as there was a large crowd of people waiting for cars, it caused considerable excitement and all outward bound cars were delayed some minutes. No blame is attached to the crew of the car as the injured man was attempting to board it while it was in motion.

A similar accident is likely to happen in City Square any day, especially during the rush of the early evening Time and time again it has been noticed that when the Houghs Neck car pulls in there is a great rush opposite the Hancock building to get aboard and get a seat. These people are so anxious to obtain a seat that they never wait for the car to come to a stop and often those who desire to leave the car find it difficult to get off owing to the rush of the crowd to get aboard.

WILL ENTER COLLEGE.

Several of the graduates of the Quincy High school, class of 1913 will enter college.

Richard Ash will enter Dartmouth.

Elton Chase, Richard Larkin and Richard Crane will enter Harvard.

Harry Safford will attend the University of Maine.

Miss Mary Broughton is enrolled at Wheaton college.

Miss Beatrice Costello will enter Radcliffe.

The Daily Ledger would be pleased to hear from other young men and young ladies of Quincy who are going to college.

MICHAEL GALLAGHER.

Michael Gallagher, a well known and respected resident of Quincy, died at his home on Spear street Thursday night in his 68th year. Mr. Gallagher has been ailing for some time and a few weeks ago was obliged to take to his bed. He had been a resident of Quincy for 35 years. He was a granite cutter by trade but of late has been in the employ of the city.

He leaves a widow, one daughter, Margaret Gallagher, a soloist at St. John's church and four sons, Dr. Nicholas Gallagher, of Malden, Daniel Gallagher, a clerk at the Boston post office, James Gallagher, a fireman at the Ward Two hose house and Joseph Gallagher of Grafton, N. H.

ELKS TO HAVE CLAM FEAST

Sports Will Also Be a Feature of the Day

The annual clam-feast of Quincy lodge of Elks is announced to occur Aug. 31, at Elcock's grove, Braintree, and judging from the announcement it will be well worth attending. Special cars for the party will leave Quincy at 10.20 in the morning and on their arrival at the grove a lunch consisting of clam chowder and sandwiches will be served. This will stave off the hunger until the clam-feast which will come later in the day.

While waiting for Mike Shea and his corps of "huskies" to prepare the big eats there will be a series of sports. These will include a 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, mile run, high jump, pole vault, potato race, three-legged race, sack race, hop, step and jump, broad jump, bare-back race and 25 mile run. There will also be something doing on the diamond for two match games of ball are announced between the married men and happy fellows, the plump fellows and the splinters.

Then comes the feast, the menu of which will include lobsters, clams, green corn, peas, sweet potatoes, Murphy's Johnny cake, hen fruit, etc. etc.

After the feast if anyone feels the need of exercise to settle what they have eaten, and to aid digestion, there will be special matches on the athletic field. It is doubtful however if many will feel much like running races at this time, owing to the consumption of so many good things.

Mike Shea, the chief cook and bottle washer, has been busy with the preliminaries of the feast for some time and anyone who has ever partaken of one of Mikes bakes, will need no endorsement to assure them of its excellent quailty.

BURGLAR AT WEST QUINCY

Discovered in Rogers Street House But Escaped

Mrs. Arthur Ballou came face to face with a burglar in her home on Rogers street at 2.30 Thursday morning. She screamed and ran upstairs to her husband while the burglar escaped through an open window. A telephone mesasge brought three officers inside of five minutes but an hours search resulted in finding no one.

Mrs. Ballou was on her way to the ice chest for cooled milk for her baby when she made the discovery. She carried a lamp in her hands and could plainly see the man in front of her. In the excitement however she failed to secure a good description of him.

An examination showed that entrance had been gained by unfastening a catch on a piazza window after a small square of glass had been removed with a glass cutter. As far as is known no silver ware was taken although there was a quantity of it on the side board.

Patrick Cavanaugh, the night watchman on the Willard street sewer said that a young man ran past him about the time the burglar was discovered. He is known to the local police as a resident of Dorchester. At Station 11 several records appear against his name. He will probably be arrested and brought here for trial on a charge of burglary.

QUINCY GRANITE EXHIBIT

Will Be Feature of Boston Convention

Grand Banquet Wednesday

Quincy granite manufacturers are taking great interest in the convention of the National Retail Monument Dealers' Association of America, Inc., which is to be held in Boston Aug. 19, 20 and 21, and will be the largest gathering of retail monument dealers ever asembled in convention.

In connection with this convention an exhibition of memorial art, given under the auspices of the New England Memorial Convention Bureau, will be held at the Boston Arena, Aug. 19 to 22. Only designs of the highest type of artistic merit have been accepted by the exhibition committee. Many fine specimens of Quincy granite are included.

The convention will open at the Boston Arena at 10.30 where dealers and guests will be welcomed by Mayor Fitzgerald and addresses will be made by officers connected with the National and various State Associations.

There will be a business session at 2 P. M. at Hotel Brunswick, and also on Wednesday at 9 A. M. and 2 P. M.

Wednesday evening has been designated as ladies' night and a banquet will be held at the Hotel Brunswick. Trolley trips to Norumbega Park and sight-seeing automobile trips to Concord and Lexington have been arranged for the entertainment of the women during the convention.

An optional program for Friday has been arranged, including an excursion to Quincy and one to Barre, Vt.

Quincy has planned to take the visitors from the Boston Arena at 8 a. m. in automobiles through Boston's famous parkway system. This will be followed by a trip through the Fore River Shipbuilding plant, where our large battleships are built, then on to Nantasket Beach.

Barre, Vt. will have special trains leaving Boston Thursday night to convey the dealers to Barre, arriving there at 8 o'clock Friday morning, where breakfast will be served at Howland Hall. A special train of observation cars will take the dealers to the quarries.

THE TIME IS LIMITED

Nomination Papers Must Be Filed by Saturday

Saturday at 5 o'clock is the last time for filing nomination papers of candidates to be voted for at the caucuses in September. City Clerk Crane announces that although City Hall closes at noon on Saturday he will keep his office open until 5 o'clock to receive any nomination papers.

Nomination papers are being circulated today for Representative Michael T. Sullivan who is unopposed as Democratic candidate for reelection. Papers for the Senatorial nomination are being circulated for David I. Murray of Hyde Park. The latest candidates for the district attorneyship of Norfolk and Plymouth counties are H. H. McNeil of Brockton and William J. Good William T. Shea is circulating the papers of Frank J. Donahue, secretary of state.

LADIES NIGHT OF THE Q. Y. C.

Vocal and Instrumental Music and Dancing

The annual ladies' night entertainment of the Quincy Yacht club was held Thursday evening and was the occasion for the gathering of a large number of yachtsmen and their ladies. The bright moon made the water look very inviting, and while for the most part the guests remained at the clubhouse to enjoy the dancing, which followed the entertainment, quite a few could not resist the temptation to enjoy a moonlight sail, for the tide was just right for sailing and a light breeze furnished just enough air to fill the sails of the yachts.

The entertainment was of a very pleasing character and was of about an hour's duration. It consisted of selections by Monk's orchestra, who rendered not only many of the popular airs but some classical music as well. In addition there were vocal selections by Dr. A. R. Gould and Clement B . Nash. It was expected that there would be a lady singer but in this the committee were disappointed. The singing of Dr. Gould and Mr. Nash was very much enjoyed.

Following the entertainment program there was dancing until 11 o'clock at which time a special car left for Quincy.

TAX RATE LIMIT

Rate of 1913 May Not Be Known in Advance

Increase Is Not Favored

The Assessors were unable to announce the tax rate for 1913 this week as was expected. This means that the rate will not be made known until after the public hearing on the tax limit Monday evening.

From what can be heard upon the street the sentiment seems to be against placing the tax limit any higher than it is at the present time. That is $12 on $1,000 valuation, which has prevailed for 25 years.

It is understood that the City Solieditor has ruled that the Mayor or city

Mr. Mears has gone around the world in 35 days. Yet there are some American tourists who take as much as a fortnight to see Europe alone.

Even if the Interstate Commerce Commission reduces telephone rates, Central will probably continue to say "Line busy" with as much satisfaction as ever.

nn view of all the jobs the authors are getting under this administration, it would seem advisable for the office seekers to learn a few elementary principles of grammar and spelling.

Although the ballots at the New York primaries may be 18 feet long, the politicians are worrying lest some of the people will understand how to vote.

As Senator Bacon of Georgia has been re-elected at a cost of $78, it might be well for Billy Lorimer to write and ask how he did it.

The Japanese are tired of the complicated characters of their alphabet, and may adopt the Roman letters. This leaves only Chinese and college students using laundry check writing.

GROWTH OF PRIVATE SCHOOLS.

One of the most prominent features of the magazines nowadays, particularly previous to the opening of the fall terms of school, is the great number of advertisements of private educational institutions. People who formerly were satisfied if they gave their boys a college education, now feel that this must be preceded by some years at a costly "prep" school.

The growth of private schools reflects dissatisfaction with public education. In some cases the private school is preferred so that a child shall not associate with the sons and daughters of the grocer and butcher. But more often there is the feeling that public schools are too crowded, that a 40th or a 50th of a teacher's time is not enough.

This is a fair criticism on public school methods as usually found. The town that provides ample facilities and an abundant teaching force makes the most attractive appeal possible to the average American family.

THE "BAND BOYS."

The Americans have not been considered a musical people. If you wish to finance a first class concert, a platoon of society girls must commonly put on their most fluffy frocks and sell tickets. Usually their smiles are the winning consideration, rather than the technique of the artists.

But the custom of open air band concerts during the summer has become so general as to suggest the growth of a real musical feeling. Treasury watch dogs may look askance at providing the concerts at public cost, feeling that the choir's sonorous rendering of "Coronation" and the prattling melodies of the dance orchestra provide all needed artistic culture.

But there are few appropriations that slip though with less general opposition. In many of the smaller towns the band music is provided without any compensation.

No community can afford to deny encouragement to its musicians. It has been said that Americans take pleasures sadly. But the band concert is a democratic festival which brightens many lives. The town without a good band seems slow.

The most rustic hamlet may have fairly good music. Village wiseacres have been known to remark that it sounds "As if they were bilin' pertaters in them ere horns." At heart they enjoy even the discordant sounds of practice, as a relief from the monotony of silence.

Shall the "band boys" play classical or popular music, will be asked. No program is complete for an outdoor recital that does not appeal to all tastes. "The Racket at Gilligan's" will draw more hand clapping and motor horns than the overture to "Tannhauser." But no band ever grows in facility, rhythm, and imagination if it merely rehearses infant's food.

CHILD LABOR LAW

manufactured, packed, wrapped or bottled, in any part of an establishment where intoxicating liquors are sold (not including drug stores). This list may be lengthened by the board after public hearing.

NO PERSON UNDER 21.

No person under 21, the law reads further, shall be permitted to work in, about or in connection with, any saloon or barroom; and no person under 21, in any employment shall knowingly be taken, sent or caused or permitted to be sent to any disorderly house or house of prositution or assignation or other immoral place of resort or amusement.

No person under 21 shall be permitted to work as messenger for a telegraph, telephone or messenger company, in the distribution, transmission or delivery of goods or messages before 5 A. M., or after 10 P. M. (Except for the delivery of messages directly connected with the business of conducting of publishing a newspaper, to a newspaper office, or directly between newspaper offices).

STREET TRADES.

In any city of over 50,000 inhabitants no boy under 12 and no girl under 18 shall be permitted to sell newspapers, magazines, periodicals, or merchandise of any description, or exercise the trade of bootblack, in any street or public place.

Nor shall any boy under 16 be permitted so to do unless he has complied with all the legal requirements concerning school attendance and has secured a newsboy's badge from the officer authorized to issue employment certificates.

EMPLOYERS OF MINORS.

Every person employing any minor in any establishment mentioned shall post and keep posted a printed notice stating the number of hours such minor is required to work, the hours commencing and stopping work and the hours when the time allowed for meals begin and end for each day of the week. The employment of any minor at any time other than as stated in said printed notice shall be deemed a violation.

Restrictions concerning the hours of labor of minors 18 years of age or older are not to apply, the law provides, in "cases of extraordinary emergency or extraordinary public requirement," but in such cases no employment contrary to the provisions of the act shall be considered as legalized until a written report of the day and hour of its occurrence and its duration is sent to the commissioner of labor. (The commissioner is yet to be appointed).

THE PENALTIES.

Any person, acting for himself or for others or through agents, servants or foremen, who employs a minor contrary to the law shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than ten or more than fifty dollars, or imprisoned for not more than 30 days, or fined and imprisoned. For the second and subsequent offences the fine ranges from fifty to two hundred dollars, the prison term is not more than 60 days. After notification, the employment of a minor in violation of these laws shall constitute a separate offense for every day.

There are heavy penalties, further, for those who hinder or delay, or who refuse to admit or lock out, the officers of the law, or who withhold information from them. There is punishment, too, for all who furnish supplies to boys in the "street trades" contrary to the law.

PARENTS LIABLE.

Parents, guardians and custodians are not overlooked in the "penalty" section. One who permits a minor to work illegally, or who knowingly certifies to any materially false statement to obtain legal employment, is to be fined not less than two nor more than ten dollars, or imprisoned for not more than five days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. For subsequent offenses the fine is from five to twenty-five dollars.

As for the minor in the "street trades" he who violates the law is to get off the first time with a warning, while his parent or guardian is duly notified. Should such a lad err a second time, he may be arrested and dealt with as a delinquent child.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

So far, this chronicle has had to do entirely with "an Act to Regulate the Labor of Minors." There was passed with this bill, however, a correlative bill called "An Act Relative to School Attendance and to Employment of Minors."

In a "newsy" way it might be said that the most striking feature of this school law is the provision that children under 14—and children under 16 who do not read, write and spell in the English language—must attend a public day school "or some other day school approved by the school committee."

"For the purposes of this section," says the law, "school committees shall approve a private school only when the instruction in all the studies required by law is in the English language, and when they are satisfied that such instruction equals in thoroughness and efficiency, and in the progress made therein, the instruction in the public schools."

Truant officers are hereafter to be known as "attendance officers" and attendance officers shall have oversight of children admitted to shows or entertainments contrary to the provisions of law. They may apprehend and take to school without a warrant any truant or absentee found wandering in the streets or public places.

LIST OF MINORS.

Now, in its turn, the school attendance law takes up the employment of minors:

No child between 14 and 16 shall be employed in factory, workshop, manufacturing, mechanical or mercantile establishment until the employer procures and keeps on file the employment certificate issued to such child and keeps a complete list of the names and ages of all such children conspicuously posted near the principal entrance to the building. (Provided, however, that children who are over 14 but under 16 shall be permitted to work in mercantile establishments on Saturdays between the hours of 7 and 6 without such certificate.

CERTIFICATES.

And it is not going to be the easiest thing in the world to secure an employment certificate. The law provides that:

An employment certificate shall be issued only by the superintendent of schools, or by a person authorized by him in writing.

The person issuing employment certificates shall in each case, before issuing a certificate, receive, examine, approve and file the following papers, duly executed:

(1) A pledge or promise signed by the employer or by an authorized manager or superintendent, setting forth the character of the employment, the number of hours per day during which the child is to be regularly employed and the name and address of the employer, in which pledge or promise the employer agrees to employ the child in accordance with the provisions of the act.

(2) The school record of such child.

(3) A certificate signed by a school or family physician or by a physician appointed by the school committee, stating that the child has been thoroughly examined by said physician and, in his opinion, is in sufficiently sound health and physically able to perform the work which the child intends to do.

(4) Evidence of age, showing that the child is 14, which shall consist of one of the following proofs: A birth certificate, a passport, a baptismal certificate, a passport or immigration record, or a record of age as given on the school register .

ATTORNEY NEEDED.

It will undoubtedly be necessary for every employer of a minor, or of minors, to discuss the situation with his attorney. In no other way can he be absolutely certain of his ground. The new section 63, for example, declares that:

An attendance officer shall apprehend and take to school, without a warrant, any child under the age of twenty-one years who is employed in any factory, work-shop, manufacturing, mechanical or mercantile establishment in violation of the provisions of this act.

The wording of the present statute is that "a truant officer may apprehend and take to school, without a warrant, any minor under the age of 16 years who is employed contrary to the provisions" of the statutes.

The statutory provision referred to is that the minor must be able to read at sight and to write legibly simple sentences in the English language "with such ability as is required for admission to the fourth grade of the public schools."

It is of course, much to be regretted that the legislature, taking so important a step failed to provide for the printing of these laws in pamphlet form and their distribution chroughout the state. Such publicity has of course been further interrupted by the serious delay in appointing the new board of labor and industries. Had this board been named a month or two ago the people would by this time have been fully informed about the new child labor law.

Certainly, if everybody under 21, in every workshop, who is unable to read and write legibly in the English language is now to be pulled out by inspectors and hurried to school, it is well for parents, guardians, school officials and employers to be prepared.

The situation clearly is one that everybody will want to be informed and advised about. The Acts and Resolves of 1913 will soon be issued.

RECESS OPPOSED BY PRESIDENT

Would Clear Way For Anti-Trust Legislation

INSISTS ON CURRENCY ACTION

Wilson Does Not Want Legislative Agreements Between Democrats and Republicans In Congress—Thinks Early Action on Tariff Necessary Regardless of Vacations

Washington, Aug. 15.—President Wilson informed Democratic senators that he is unalterably opposed to any recess of the senate between the time the tariff bill is passed and currency is taken up. He made it plain to them that he believes it the duty of the Democratic party to dispose of the tariff and currency during the present session of congress so that the December session may promptly take up anti-trust and other important legislation carrying out platform pledges. The president communicated his views through Secretary Tumulty, who got in touch with most of the Democratic senators and came to the conclusion that a substantial majority was in favor of immediate legislation and no recess. Incidentally the president took a strong position on the question of legislative agreements between Democrats and Republicans in congress. He believes that the Democrats, as the dominant party, should proceed with determination and not trade with the minority. The fact that Republican senators had informally agreed to speed up consideration of the tariff bill if a recess were assured after its passage, prompted the president to urge that business throughout the country demanded early action on the tariff regardless of whether any vacation or recess was promised in return.

An attempt by Senator Simmons, leader of the Democratic tariff forces, to arrange for a vote on the tariff bill in the senate Aug. 25, was blocked by Senator Gallinger, Republican leader.

Democrats refused to say whether they would insist upon taking up the currency bill after tariff was completed and Republicans refused to say whether they would filibuster against the tariff until assured that the currency bill would not be pressed. Senators Simmons and James tried to get Senator Gallinger to tell the Republican plans, but he refused.

The debate led to an acrid discussion of the "secret caucus" by the Republicans and pointed references by the Democrats to former Senator Aldrich's leadership in the tariff fight of 1909.

Democratic senators were caucusing on the recess proposal at the time President Wilson's views were being made known. The caucus adjourned without getting to the question, because of an early meeting of the senate and because of time consumed in discussion of an unexpected resolution by Minority Leader Kern to open the caucus to the public.

Kern's motion was voted down, but he declared it would come up again with the question of recess and the whole question of legislative program. Senator James of Kentucky, who came directly from the White House to the caucus, outlined President Wilson's plan against recess or delay of currency legislation.

"The president is opposed to any delay on currency," said Senator James. "I think the Democrats will give him unanimous support. A few men who do not even represent the minority party are filibustering against the tariff and holding up progress. I am in favor not only of a continuous session but of a cloture rule that will shut off some of this filibustering and hold the senate down to business."

GAINS 100 POUNDS

Brockton Resident, Weighing 794 Pounds, Is Largest Living Man

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 15.—Charles Jackson, 35 years old and weighing 794 pounds, returned from a tour of the outdoor fairs which he has been making since April.

When he left home he weighed exactly 694 pounds and has gained 100 pounds during his trip. He attributes the gain to outdoor life.

Jackson sleeps in a specially made bed. He has great difficulty in traveling, as he cannot get into a cab. He is vice president of the New England Fat Men's club and is the largest living man.

Prince of Monaco at Halifax

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 15.—Prince Albert of Monaco, ruler of Monte Carlo, arrived here on the steamship Princess Alice. He is making oceanographic investigations in the North Atlantic a hobby.

On Way to Yellowstone Park

Billings, Mont., Aug. 15.—Secretary of War Garrison and his party passed through here en route to the Yellowstone National park. The secretary's stay in the park is indefinite.

Colonel H. P. Gore Dead

London, Aug. 15.—Colonel H. P. Gore, uncle of the Earl of Tempt, is dead.

MORE OPIUM FOUND

Third Successful Raid In Providence In Few Months

Providence, Aug. 15.—More than $7000 worth of opium, manufactured and in the process of making, was seized by federal authorities here in one of the most successful raids ever conducted in this state.

The place raided is located at 278 Fountain street, a stone's throw from the central police station and had evidently been in operation for a long time. William Lee, a Chinaman, was found in the house and was arrested as proprietor. He was at once arraigned before United States Commissioner Cross and held in $2500 for a hearing next Tuesday.

The raid was conducted by Inspectors William J. Sleeper and Owen J. McKenna, and Surveyor of Port Edward G. Graves. The inspectors found a complete equipment for the manufacture of opium on an extensive scale and asserted that the plant was capable of turning out $3000 worth of the drug a day. The raid was the third conducted by the federal authorities here within the past few months.

EXAMINATION BEGUN

Nurse Krill on Trial For Death of Dr. Tron

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The examination of Emma K. Krill, charged with causing the death of Dr. Stanley E. Tron June 22 last by giving him an overdose of an opiate, began before the city judge.

Dr. Tron died suddenly, and the intimation was that he had committed suicide. He and Miss Krill came here from New York several months ago and posed as husband and wife. The fact they were not married came out only after his death.

In the preliminary evidence of the coroner and police officers, it was shown that the case against the woman rests mainly upon the alleged fact that by the bedside of the dead doctor was found a bottle containing wine and also a glass containing a small quantity of the same liquid. Analysis showed, as alleged, that there was no morphine in the wine in the bottle, but that there was in that in the glass. The doctor died of morphine poisoning. Miss Krill stated at the inquest that she had brought him at his request certain portions of morphine, atropine and other drugs.

ALLEGED GRAFT BY MONTREAL POLICE

Investigation Being Made by Board of Control

Montreal, Aug. 15.—As a result of an independent inquiry carried on under the auspices of an organization high in the counsels of the board of control, a police scandal is about to break. Affidavits have been obtained averring that certain members of the police force have been levying a toll on vice under promise of protection. The inquiry, which is progressing in secret, has already involved twelve members of the force.

Affidavits have been prepared, it was said, alleging that these twelve members of the force made disorderly houses pay a price of protection. The men are charged also with forcing the proprietors of these places to give them free drinks. The men accused are said to include three detectives and several minor police officials. The affidavits are signed by private detectives employed by a committee of citizens.

"STRUCK IT RICH"

Special Representative Lind Has Large Iron Ore Land Holdings

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 15.—John Lind, special representative in Mexico of President Wilson, has "struck it rich" on the Minnesota iron range. Forty acres of rich ore land owned by Mr. Lind was leased to an iron company.

Royalties of 25 cents a ton, with a minimum of 30,000 tons, are provided. Twenty acres that have been drilled are said to show 4,000,000 tons of ore. A lease on the same land was cancelled by the United States Steel corporation a year ago.

Another Gangster Gone

New York, Aug. 15.—The list of gangster crimes was augmented with the murder of a man believed to be Joseph Rocke, a member of the "Sullivan street gang" who was shot and almost instantly killed while walking on Thirty-first street.

Nine Killed In Arizona Mine

Clifton, Ariz., Aug. 15.—Nine men were killed and one was probably fatally injured when a cable pin snapped at the Conorado mine and two ore cars carrying thirteen miners, dashed down a 38-degree grade for a distance of 3300 feet.

Oklahoma Negroes Lynched

Ardmore, Okla., Aug. 15.—Two negroes, Sanders Franklin and Henry Ralston, were taken from officers by a mob near Paul's Valley and lynched, according to reports reaching here.

Sylvia Is Out Again

London, Aug. 15.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst was again released from Holloway jail as a sequel to a "hunger and thirst" strike. She was in a condition of collapse.

William Sulzer Governor the Eighth to Be Impeached

But Seven State Executives Have Been on Trial In Years Past.

Of These Only Two Were Found Guilty and Removed.

WHILE the activities of the New York state legislature to impeach Governor William Sulzer were at their height, his friends were loud in their denunciation of the methods and means employed by the Frawley investigating committee, upon whose findings the action of the legislature is based. Had Governor Sulzer consented to submit to the domination of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, his friends assert, and had turned over the state to him and that organization to exploit as they saw fit, there would have been no hue and cry against him. On the other hand, it is pointed out, no question of the moral turpitude of Tammany Hall or its leader is now involved. Unbiased citizens are unanimous in declaring that whatever may be the guilt or innocence of those who oppose the governor, if the charges against him are true, his impeachment and his speedy withdrawal from the public life of the state are imperative. According to the findings of the joint legislative committee, headed by Senator James J. Frawley, upon which the impeachment proceedings are based, Governor Sulzer is declared guilty of swearing to a false report to the secretary of state as to the total campaign contributions received by him. At the same time the accusation is made that he converted these surplus contributions to his own private use, and that, while governor, during a period when he was vigorously pressing legislation against the New York Stock Exchange, he engaged in stock speculation upon that exchange.

To these statements Governor Sulzer has entered a general denial. What his real defense will be only the future developments of the impeachment proceedings will make clear.

Few Governors Impeached.

Not often has the chief executive of a sovereign state of the Union been impeached. In fact, only seven governors of states have been impeached since the adoption of the federal constitution, according to the information assembled by Roger Foster in his "Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States." Of the seven only two were found guilty and removed—David Butler of Nebraska and William H. Holden of North Carolina. The latter was removed by a hostile senate following his activities in putting down the Kuklux Klan in his state in the reconstruction days.

A third governor resigned on the understanding that the charges against him would be dropped. The term of a fourth expired before his trial was completed, and further proceedings were abandoned. The others were acquitted or the impeachment proceedings were abandoned before a vote was taken. The states represented in the list are Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, North Carolina and Kansas.

The first American governor to be accused in any proceeding analogous to the present day impeachment was Governor Seth Sothell of the colony of North Carolina, who was suspended by the proprietors of the colony in a letter dated Dec. 2, 1689, on charges made by the inhabitants of the county of Albemarle and approved by the assembly. One charge was that he had seized and imprisoned two persons coming into the county from Barbados with proper credentials on the pretense that they were pirates. One of them died in prison, and the governor took his property and converted it to his own use. Other charges of withdrawing for a money consideration accusations against persons charged with felony and treason and of unlawfully seizing land and cattle also were made against him.

Kansas Governor First.

The first impeachment of a governor of an American state was that of Charles Robinson, governor of Kansas, in 1862.

The first legislature of Kansas had authorized in 1861 an issue of $150,000 bonds to defray current expenses. Governor Robinson, the secretary of state and the state auditor were authorized to negotiate for the sale of the bonds. The only probable customer at the time, the beginning of the civil war, was the federal government, which held money in trust for Indians and was authorized to invest these in "safe and profitable stocks."

The secretary of state and auditor employed Robert Stevens, a Kansas politician of some prominence, to conduct the negotiations. Stevens was chosen because of business relations existing between him and Caleb B. Smith, the secretary of the interior.

Stevens failed to sell the bonds through Secretary Smith and finally got R. G. Corwin, a claim agent, who was connected by marriage with the secretary of the interior, to aid him. Corwin put through negotiations for the purchase of the bonds out of the Indian funds provided. The entire Kansas delegation at Washington approved of the purchase in writing. This approval was obtained except in the case of United States Senator Lane. He based his refusal on the ground of fear that if Stevens got his commission he would use the money to buy votes to elect himself in the place of Lane, who had a majority of only one in the state legislature.

Thereupon $1,000 was paid to Lane's private secretary, who procured the senator's signature through misrepresentation.

The state house of representatives impeached the three officials who had been authorized to sell the bonds. The secretary of state and the auditor were convicted and removed from office. Governor Robinson was acquitted.

Florida Case Dropped.

On Nov. 6, 1868, the Florida house of representatives impeached Governor Harrison Reed on charges of falsehood and lying in official matters, of incompetency, of unlawfully declaring vacant many seats in the legislature, of embezzlement from the state treasury and of corruption and bribery in his appointments.

This formidable series of charges was presented for trial to eight senators, there being so many vacancies that eight was a majority. The impeachment had automatically suspended Reed from office until the conclusion of the trial. Lieutenant Governor William H. Gleason issued a proclamation announcing that he had taken possession of the office of governor, and the assembly adjourned to the first of the following January. When the senate refused to take the same adjournment Gleason adjourned it himself to the same day.

Governor Reed meanwhile refused to surrender his office and asked the state supreme court to pass on the legality of the proceedings. The court upheld Reed's position and removed the lieutenant governor from office on the ground of ineligibility. The United States supreme court then upset the removal of Gleason as lieutenant governor, and with the incoming of the newly elected legislators on the 1st of January both houses, with vacancies filled, recognized Governor Reed, and the impeachment proceedings were dropped.

One of the most interesting impeachment cases historically was that of Governor William W. Holden of North Carolina in December, 1870. The Kuklux Klan had committed a number of whippings and murders in Alamanee and Caswell counties, and the local authorities had taken no action. Governor Holden, under act of the legislature, declared the two counties to be in a state of insurrection and sent militia to enforce order. The officer in command, Colonel George W. Kirk, arrested and imprisoned many civilians and refused to obey writs of habeas corpus obtained from the chief justice of the state on behalf of some of these military prisoners.

Habeas Corpus Suspended.

Chief Justice Pearson held that the writ of habeas corpus could be suspended only by the legislature, which had not authorized the suspension, but at the same time in an opinion dwelt upon the seriousness of the situation and the inevitability of more civil war if the writ were to be enforced by the county authorities against the state authorities and directed that the writ be sent to the governor. "If the governor does not honor it," he said, "I have discharged my duty; the power of the judiciary is exhausted, and the responsibility must rest on the executive."

The opponents of the governor thereupon obtained an injunction restraining the state treasurer and the paymaster from paying out money for the prosecution of military operations in the two counties. Governor Holden removed the paymaster upon whom the injunction was served and appointed another, who got the money from the treasurer and paid the troops.

The governor was impeached and tried. He was acquitted of any misconduct in declaring the two counties in insurrection and in taking military possession of them, but was convicted on charges of causing unlawful arrests, bringing troops in from another state and violating the writ of habeas corpus. He was removed and disqualified from holding office again under the state.

It was charged against Governor Clayton that he had conspired to deprive the lieutenant governor of his office, that he had removed certain judges illegally and that he had participated in election frauds and had unlawfully issued state bonds for the benefit of certain railroads.

Locked Governor Up.

The house of representatives suspended him pending the trial, and a resolution was adopted that he should be locked in the executive chamber and the door nailed up so that he could not get away to act.

Governor Clayton escaped and informed the house that he had been advised that it had no power to suspend him pending the trial.

When the articles of impeachment reached the senate that body adopted rules for the court of impeachment which were so stringent in the matter of time to be taken up in argument and in their details that the board of managers from the house reported it could not handle the case under such restrictions and was discharged. A second board of managers was chosen, which reported that it had been unable to find evidence upon which to base

Governor Butler of Nebraska was charged with appropriating some $16,000 of state moneys to his own use, with the acceptance of bribes, with unlawfully giving state lands to a railroad company—the Sioux City and Pacific—and with selling certain state lands and pocketing part of the proceeds. The governor was acquitted on all the charges except that of the misappropriation of the $16,000. On this charge members of both political parties united in finding him guilty, and he was removed from office.

In 1872 Governor Henry C. Warmoth of Louisiana was impeached on a long list of counts, which included the forcible expulsion from office of the secretary of state, various unlawful appointments, connivance in the forcible ejection of a judge from office in order to obtain possession of his court for use in setting aside an election board, the offer of a bribe of $50,000 to Lieutenant Governor P. B. S. Pinchback if the latter would organize the state senate in Warmoth's interest and a number of charges of intimidation of officials and offers of bribes.

Proceedings Dropped.

Before the trial was concluded the governor's term of office had expired, and the senate asked the advice of the chief justice regarding continuing the trial. "I question the policy of kicking a dead lion," Chief Justice Ludeling said in his opinion, and the senate agreed with him and dropped the proceedings.

In 1876 Adelbert Ames, governor of Mississippi, was impeached and tried by the state senate, but resigned before a verdict was rendered. Ames, a Republican governor of a southern state in the days of reconstruction, was charged with a long list of offenses, including the defrauding of the state of $33,750 by giving contracts for prison labor to personal friends without public letting, conspiring to slander a political opponent, unlawful removal of various officers and the unlawful retention in office of others. He also was charged with inciting race riots by inflammatory speeches and granting a pardon to a felon upon the payment of $3,000 to a third person.

Before the trial was concluded the governor wrote a letter to the house saying that on account of the embarrassment caused by the election of a hostile legislature he desired to resign, but that he would not do so while the proceedings were pending against him. So the house adopted a resolution, basing the preamble on this letter, withdrawing the impeachment, the senate approved, and Ames resigned.

In the same year the lieutenant governor, Alexander K. Davis, was impeached on a charge of selling a pardon to a convicted murderer while the governor was absent from the state and was convicted, removed and disqualified in spite of his attempt to resign.

SOCIAL LIFE IN PANAMA

Birthday Anniversary of Peter Hynes of Quincy

A number of Quincy friends working at Panama celebrated the 45th birthday of Peter Hynes in good style, presenting him with a beautiful panama hat. After William Dowell made the presentation Mr. Hynes responded amid great applause. The rest of the evening was spent in harmony. The following contributed; J. Wright sang "I am Lying on a foreign shore," J. Cahill sang "Let them all come," Mr. Hynes sang "If I had the wings of a bird I would fly." R. Carruthers gave several selections on the accordion. P. Owens sang "Please take me home." R. May and J. Fletcher sang a duet entitled "My love for Panama still remains." William Dowell rendered a recitation entitled "The bar room floor." The evening came to a close with all singing "Auld Lang Syne."

The committee on the birthday were William Dowell, R. Carruthers and R. May, who kindly forwarded this report to the Daily Ledger. Their post office address is Paraiso, Canal Zone, Panama.

"You cannot fail to admire and appreciate the fall styles shown in men's hats. The important question is "Where can I buy Lamson & Hubbard hats?" They are for sale by the well-known firms mentioned in their Ledger advertisement. Local dealers realize they cannot afford to carry anything but the best as their customers will wear nothing but the best. Inspect their stock and let the goods speak for themselves. Your verdict will take the form of a purchase. The manufacturers are proud to have their hats carried by these firms just as you will be proud to wear goods of Lamson & Hubbard's manufacture. Lamson & Hubbard are featuring Velours of their own manufacture as well as the Imported.

AMUSEMENTS

KINCAIDE THEATRE QUINCY.

Mighty good shows are the rule at Quincy's up-to-date playhouse, and the program now being presented is no exception. In fact it is extra good entertainment, and is drawing full houses nightly and afternoon audiences of several hundreds. The Tremont Quartet proved so popular the first three days this week that Manager Wardwell received many requests to hold them over, and gladly did so. These four boys in brown "bring down the house" with their melody and mirth, and you'll miss a musical treat if you don't go hear them sing.

Beginning with Monday's matinee is a great fun show, headed by Torelli's dogs and pony circus, and Bessie, the funny mule. This coterie of dumb graduates perform feats of almost human skill, and cause uproars of laughter with their droll doings. Children will go wild over this feature, which although a big show in itself, is only one of the many good attractions. Max Holden will give an interesting Black Art Novelty exhibition. Vere Sabina and Co., present a pretty little playlet entitled "The Old Man's Dream". Photo Plays will be all new, and with lots of lively music this will be a show worth while going miles to enjoy.

B. F. KEITHS.

A number of new attractions never before seen in Boston will be included on the bill arranged next week for B. F. Keith's Theatre. The Great Auas Troupe of sensational lady aerialists, who were brought to this country as a special feature with the Barnum & Bailey Circus during its engagement in Madison Square Garden, will make their first appearance outside of New York City in a spectacular aerial act that is described as a genuine thriller. Surrounding this great feature will be a number of turns new to Boston, among them being Kramer and Morton, two black dots as they call themselves, who present a really startling and unique series of dances and songs in blackface. Captain George Auger, the giant will appear supported by his novel company of midgets in "Jack, The Giant Killer," an adaptation of the old fairy tale of that name, and other excellent comedians with splendid voices, known as "those men in blue;" Burke, King and Walsh, dancers three, including a very pretty girl; Bell and West, another new team of funmakers; the Oxford Trio, fresh from Europe, who will make their first appearance in this country at B. F. Keith's Theatre and numerous features as yet unannounced.

The clergy participating in the Mass were all formerly residents of the parish and were baptized by Father Fitzpatrick. The celebrant will be Rev. William J. Duffy, of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

TAX RATE LIMIT

officials can not be questioned by citizens or members of the City Council at this hearing regarding the finances of the city, as the hearing is to furnish the members of the City Council with the views of the public as to what the limit should be.

This ruling is an important one, as it prevents anyone from making use of the hearing for political purposes, such as placing the Mayor on the carpet and propounding questions, calculated to place the city in an unfavorable light.

Many, no doubt, if opportunity offered, would delight in propounding questions to the Mayor and city officials which they would doubtless be unable to answer off hand, which would put them in a bad light.

Therefore citizens who speak at the hearing will be obliged to confine themselves to the question and give their reasons why the limit should or should not be raised from the present figure. Perhaps a reduction to $10 or $11 may be favored.

BAND CONCERT POPULAR.

Fully 2,000 men, women and children attended the band concert on the Furnace Brook Parkway, corner of Reardon street, Thursday evening by the Eighth Regiment band, under the auspices of the Metropolitan Park Commission. Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, D. D. of La Grange, Ill., will preach at Bethany Congregational church a week from Sunday. For fifteen years he was pastor of the Quincy church and is assured a hearty welcome.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide was unable to attend the reception at Worcester on Thursday evening to ex-Mayor James Logan, one of the tourists to South America, but sent a letter which was read.

Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic street will read a paper on "Pears" at Hillcrest farm, Weston, Monday afternoon. As a practical gardener and prize winner he is well qualified to speak on the subject.

Miss Susan C. Pope of 113 Elm street passed away this morning in her 84th year. When health permitted she was a regular attendant of the Universalist church and active in the ladies society. She is survived by a brother Asa A. Pope.

Good scores were made Thursday afternoon at the whist party of Maple Lodge K. and L. of H. at Electa hall. There was a large attendance. The high scores were: Mrs. Annie G. Grignon 44; Mrs. C. L. Lewis 44; Mrs. A. Boutilier 43; Mrs. Mary Jones 42.

Granite Conclave, I. O. H., met in Protection hall, Thursday evening and acted on several applications. Joseph J. Mullen, past archon, was chosen delegate to the State convention and Charles Hersey as alternate. A clambake and outing will be held at Elcock's grove in September in charge of James Giles, John Kalson, and William Ryan. The members are considering the organization of a bowling team to be entered in the Heptasophs league.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SAVE LIVES BY FORDING RIVER

Nearly $400,000 Loss as Flames Sweep Woodstock

SCORE OF BUILDINGS BURNED

Telegraph and Telephone Wires Are Burned Out and Roads and Bridges Blocked—Blaze Starts In Lumber Yards of Woodstock Lumber Company—No Fire Apparatus at Hand

Lincoln, N. H., Aug. 15.—Fire swept through the countryside at Woodstock yesterday and last night, practically destroying the plant of the Woodstock Lumber company with millions of feet of prepared lumber and burning down a score of buildings, including fifteen houses.

Many persons in these dwelling houses saved their lives only by fording the Pemigewasset river, which the flames crossed behind them. So far as could be learned, no one was injured seriously.

The postoffice was destroyed, but the mail was saved by the heroism of Postmaster Arthur Kinsman, who carried blazing sacks over his shoulders to safety.

A box shop, blacksmith shop and stables were among the other building burned.

The flames burned out the telegraph service, crippled telephone wires, blocked roads and bridges—threatening to burn out the latter—and the town was almost isolated from the outside world. There were no fire fighting facilities at hand, and lack of communication hindered securing outside help. The walls of fire led to reports of more extensive damage, but the estimate has come down considerably and varies from $100,000 to $400,000.

The blaze started in the extensive yards of the lumber company on the south side of the Pemigewasset river. Sparks from one of the company's locomotives are believed to have caused the first flame, which had been whipped into a growing fire when it was discovered.

Lacking fire fighting facilities, except such as could be contrived from buckets and soaked blankets, and without water to use except that secured at the banks of the river, those who endeavored to quench the blaze found themselves helpless.

Much of the property burned was owned by the Publishers' Paper company, which had leased it to the Woodstock Lumber company.

FIGHTING AT CANTON

Twelve Hundred Are Slain In Battle Among Rebels

Canton, Aug. 15.—Twelve hundred were killed in the fighting between the rebels in Canton and pillage is in progress everywhere.

Half of the soldiers have joined the rebels, and together they have looted the principal goldsmiths and silversmiths' stores. The local generals are powerless owing to dissensions among themselves.

A huge fire broke out destroying thirty barracks and as a result of the accompanying riots the exodus of the civilian population continued without abatement.

Traffic on the Hankow railway has been suspended.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY

Horse, Frightened by Automobile, Throws Women Out

Kennebunkport, Me., Aug. 15.—Mrs. B. Frank Eldridge and Miss Edith Bayes were injured, the former probably fatally, in a runaway accident.

Mrs. Eldridge, who is the wife of a former hotel keeper here, and about 70 years of age, was taken to a hospital at Biddeford, where it was said she could not recover. Miss Bayes sustained a broken arm.

The horse was frightened by an automobile on School street, between Kennebunkport and Cape Porpoise, and ran a quarter of a mile through fields and over fences before the two women were thrown out.

Missouri Miners to Strike

Flat River, Mo., Aug. 15.—A strike of the lead miners in St. Francois county was called to take effect Saturday morning. About 5000 men will be affected. The local executive committee of the Western Federation of Miners refused to compromise on a wage increase of 15 cents a day.

Body of Bath Man In River

Bath, Me., Aug. 15.—The body of Fred R. Cahill, a member of the Bath board of assessors, who has been missing since last Thursday, was found in the New Meadows river below Gurnet bridge by Postmaster E. W. Hyde. He was 45 years of age.

Killed In 100-Foot Fall

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 15.—Four men were plunged to death here when a temporary structure on which they were working in repairing the Mississippi river bridge gave way and they fell 100 feet.

LOCALS

The site of the express accident on Hancock street, near Grant street is said to be a dark spot, and the paving stops there causing holes which teamsters usually avoid.

Four were initiated to membership in the Quincy Lady Moose circle Thursday evening by worthy Matron Mrs. Albert Williams. A trolley party to Nantasket will be held Aug. 23 under the direction of Mrs. Albert J. Williams, Mrs. Ethel Bean, Mrs. Charles McCoombs, Mrs. Silas Perkins, Mrs. Christine Jardine, Mrs. Christine Lawton, Miss Elizabeth McKey, Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Bertha Weixler and Mrs. Mabel Gilbert. Dancing followed the meeting.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Quincy Point friends tendered Joseph Levangie, a popular young man of that ward, a surprise party at his home, 47 Stewart street, on Thursday evening. Charles Johnson, in behalf of those assembled, presented him with a sterling silver mounted clothes brush, wrapped in miles of paper and a large box. While Mr. Levangie unravelled his puzzle he was the centre of jests and a rousing cheer greeted him as he held it up for inspection. Games of all descriptions were played during the evening and dancing, singing, piano playing and refreshments added to the fun. The committee in charge were Miss Eliza Levangie, Miss Lillian Johnson, Charles Mattie and Charles Johnson.

SECOND GAME FOR WARD THREE

Defeat Quincy Point Boys Eight to Five

At South Quincy on Thursday the Ward Three boys defeated the Quincy Point lads in an interesting game by the score of 8 to 5. The game was one of the fastest played so far this season taking only one hour and thirty minutes for the full nine innings.

The Point boys started off like winners, getting 3 runs the first inning by bunching four hits and a base on balls. They scored again in the third, but after that only three men were able to get on bases.

The South Quincy boys scored two runs in the first and second and two in the third inning and until the eighth both teams played fine ball; neither being able to get a man across the pan.

In the seventh, Bassett pitched himself out of a tight hole by striking out two men after the first two batters had got on by means of errors. "Shrimp" Sheehan was almost knocked off his feet in right field by a hot liner from Ernest Wallace's trusty bat. Shrimp held on the ball however and received a warm reception from the crowd when he came in from the field.

Iver Johnson pitched a fine game after the first inning, striking out 14 of the Ward Two boys and allowing only six hits. He gave seven base on balls however, while Bassett the opposing pitcher allowed but three hits and struck out five men. He gave four base on balls. This victory make tshe second out of three games for the South Quincy boys, and one more win will give them the city championship: the fourth game will be played next week at Ward Two.

The battery for South Quincy was Johnson pitcher and McDonald, catcher. For Quincy Point, Frank Bassett was in the box with "Bone" Krogh behind the bat.

FOOTBALL SEASON.

Plans for the football season of the Quincy A. A. were discussed at a meeting held Thursday evening in the Johnson building. Next Thursday evening the candidates will choose their captain. William H. Flynn will act as manager this season and hopes to equal the showing of the past two years when the team was recognized as the fastest amateur team in the state. The team will be practically the same as last year. At present Manager Flynn is considering a schedule which will include the best teams in the state.

WANDERS TWO DAYS OVER MOUNTAINS

Baby Lost in Country Infested by Wild Animals

Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 15.—After tramping two days over the mountains without food, Oran Trammell, a 3-year-old boy, who wandered away from a construction camp at Woodstan, was found by James Payne, an old hunter. Payne declined the reward of $50 offered by J. T. Trammell, the child's father.

Payne trailed the boy over Eagle and Kiamichi mountains and came upon him fast asleep. The country through which the child wandered is infested with wolves and wild cats.

Pathetic Incident In Drowning of Arthur M. Caie

Amesbury, Mass., Aug. 15.—A pathetic incident of the drowning at Merrimacport of Arthur M. Caie, of this place, came to light when his young women companions on the fatal boating trip told how he had sung hymns on the evening of the tragedy, and how he died with the words of "Shall We Meet Beyond the River?" still on his lips. His body was not recovered.

Caie was accompanied by Miss Emily Evarts of Boston, and by Miss Esther Tuckwell of Merrimacport. Their boat capsized when they tried to change seats and Caie was drowned. Miss Evarts swam ashore and Miss Tuckwell was rescued by Fred Parker.

New York Man Had Salary Cut to Escape Paying Alimony

New York, Aug. 15.—G. L. Pinkham, 32, a bookkeeper of Flushing, sued by his wife for alimony, testified that he was receiving only $19 a week. His employer, A. M. Ryon, corroborated him.

"Is he worth more money?" asked the magistrate.

"He certainly is," replied Mr. Ryon, "formerly I paid him $18, but he asked to have it cut to $10."

The magistrate ordered Pinkham to pay his wife $5 a week.

TWO CLAIMANTS FOR OFFICE

Rival Governments Claim Right of Administration

DEMAND THAT SULZER VACATE

Some New York Officials Take Orders From Governor While Others Look to Lieutenant Governor Glynn—Senate Clerk Serves Notice of Impeachment at Executive Chamber

Albany, Aug. 15.—Two claimants to the office of governor of New York sat in the capitol yesterday, each asserting his right to the office and attempting o conduct the state's affairs from his own chambers.

William Sulzer, impeached governor, sat in the executive chamber on the second floor of the building. He is going to sit there every day, according to friends, disregarding the impeachment proceedings which he regards as unconstitutional.

Martin H. Glynn, lieutenant governor, laid claim to the acting governorship, on the grounds that Sulzer ceased to be governor when the senate received the articles of impeachment from the assembly.

The army of state employes is demoralized. Department heads are at a loss to know whose instructions to follow, and a general situation of confusion and disorder seems imminent.

Mrs. Sulzer, star witness of the impeached governor, is so seriously ill of a nervous disorder, that two additional specialists have been summoned by wire to attend her. Governor Sulzer asserted emphatically that he would not permit her to take the stand at his trial for impeachment, which probably will start Sept. 22. He is unwilling to have her face the ordeal of telling how she invested certain campaign contributions sent him last fall, in stocks.

A formal demand for the surrender of the executive chambers, expected to be made on behalf of Acting Governor Glynn, was anticipated by Governor Sulzer. On the advice of his counsel, Mr. Sulzer has prepared a letter declining to surrender the offices and outlining the reasons for his refusal. When Governor Sulzer entered the executive chamber to be served by Mr. McCabe with the summons and articles of impeachment, he faced a growing crowd of newspapermen and capitol attendants who had come to witness the ceremony. The governor shook hands with McCabe and took his stand behind his big flat-top desk, folded his hands and waited.

"I am directed by the president of the senate to serve upon you a summons and complaint and articles of impeachment," McCabe said, handing the governor a bundle of papers he carried in his hand.

Governor Sulzer took the papers, glanced at them, grunted and tossed them, unopened, on the desk.

"All right," he said.

The complaint and summons, so-called, followed the signature of the proper officials to the articles of impeachment. Glynn said:

"I shall exercise whatever functions of government may come before me. However, I shall use my own staff and not enlist the aid of the naval militia. I have no intention now of visiting the executive chambers, but will continue to use my own offices. In fact, I have no definite plans regarding anything, but will meet circumstances as they come and will hold myself in readiness to meet any emergency."

Someone had apparently given instructions overnight to the capitol guards. All who escorted visitors to Mr. Glynn's offices said:

"This is the office of the lieutenant governor. It is now occupied by Acting Governor Glynn, formerly lieutenant governor."

"A great floral horseshoe, sent by admirers to Mr. Sulzer, and placed in the outer chamber of the executive offices, bore this inscription:

"Our governor: Stand firm. The people believe in you. The attempt to overturn the head of the government is treason."

In the opinion of some of the governor's friends the court of impeachment will never sit in judgment on his case. They base their belief that the court of impeachment will never convene to try his case on the tentative plan of his counsel to have the courts review the constitutionality of the impeachment proceedings prior to Sept. 18. The review, they assert, probably will be started by mandamus proceedings to compel obedience to his instructions by the first department head who refuses to recognize him as governor.

ALLEGE $200,000 SHORTAGE

Roseville Trust Company of New Jersey Closed by Examiners

Newark, N. J., Aug. 15.—Bank examiners have closed the Roseville Trust company, a state institution in Newark's suburbs, and in so doing confirmed a report that Raymond E. Smith, secretary treasurer of the institution, is missing. He left behind him a shortage estimated at $200,000, according to inspectors of the state banking department who examined the bank.

The trust company opened for business in 1908, and had deposits at its last report, of nearly $800,000. William Fairlee, vice president, confirmed the shortage, but said that he could not say whether it would total $200,000 or more.

EXPLORERS FIRST IN PANAMA CANAL

Peary and Amundsen on Fram to Lead the Way

Buenos Ayres, Argentina, Aug. 15.—The whaler Fram, commanded by Captain Doxrud, left here for Colon, with the intention of taking on board there Robert E. Peary and Captain Roald Amundsen, discoverers respectively, of the North and South Poles, who will be the first to pass through the Panama canal on board ship.

Like the explorers, the Fram has made a name in polar exploration. It was the ship used by Nansen when he made his "farthest north" record of about ten years ago, and it will again enter the Arctic seas under Amundsen, who is to make a six years' investigation of the North Polar regions.

CASTRO IS LOCATED

Hidden on Island Which United States May Buy

Willemstad, Curacao, Aug. 15.—The exact whereabouts of Cipriano Castro, who is trying to overthrow the Gomez government in Venezuela, have been discovered.

Castro is not in Venezuela, but is directing his operations from a small island called Buen Ayre. Of its 7000 inhabitants fewer than 500 are white.

It so happens that at the present time the United States is negotiating for the purchase of the island on which to establish a naval depot.

Word has been communicated to the Gomez administration in Caracas of Castro's whereabouts and it is expected that steps would be made at once to have him sent away from the island.

LARGE OIL MERGER

Shell-Royal Dutch Combine Acquire Important Property

New York, Aug. 15.—A special cablegram from London to the Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin says: The Shell-Royal Dutch combine has acquired control of the California Oilfields company.

The latter is an important English concern whose production, amounting to more than 4,000,000 barrels per year, has hitherto been sold to the Standard Oil company of America under contract.

That contract is now expiring and the purchase by the Shell people is regarded here as a particularly important advantage in the fight against the American oil trust.

HEM BIDDLE'S HOBBY

It Lost Him His Bride

By KATHARINE GRAY

"Our fellow townsman, the well known aeronaut," was the manner in which the Finchville Banner always referred to Hemenway Biddle. Mr. Biddle was the editor of the Banner, and in the great shed back of the printing office was anchored his big balloon.

On clear days after the paper had gone to press Mr. Biddle might be seen tinkering away at his balloon or else in the act of soaring over the heads of his neighbors in the car attached to the gas inflated craft.

Hem Biddle himself soared skyward because he liked the strange sensation of hanging between earth and heaven with the ever present element of danger attached thereto. As a counter-irritant to editing a country weekly newspaper he believed there was nothing like it, excepting always Amabel Paine.

At this particular moment the Banner had gone to press and was in the hands of its eager readers. Hem Biddle was scaling the airy heights, and Amabel Paine was swinging in a hammock under the apple tree in her front yard.

Amabel's eyes, blue as the sky above, were fixed dreamily on the green canopy of leaves overhead. There was one spot where she could see the sky. Suddenly across this bit of sky there raced a black blot.

"Oh, bother!" pouted Amabel, all at once remembering that she was engaged to Hem Biddle. It was rather disconcerting to recollect it, for at that very moment she had been dreamily reliving a few delicious hours spent in the company of Peter Lamb the previous evening.

The gate creaked inward, and Peter Lamb's massive form plodded sturdily down the shell path to the apple tree. Amabel watched him, delighting in the glint of sunshine on his blond head and the answering gleam in his brown eyes when they met hers. She blushed and her eyes hid themselves under drooping lids as she sat up in the hammock and allowed her little hand to rest an instant in his big one.

"I accepted your invitation to call," he laughed rather awkwardly as he sat down in a big rustic chair and tossed his hat to the grass. "You can see that I haven't waited."

Amabel's mouth curved deliciously "I am glad," she murmured, soothing the seam of her white duck skirt.

"I'm that sort. When I want to do a thing I can't wait," he went on earnestly. "I don't believe I understand the pleasures of anticipation. I know what I want when I see it, and then I want it right away."

"Yes?" Amabel smoothed another seam.

"I'm going to shock you, Miss Paine," went on this startling young man in a determined tone.

"Please don't," she murmured.

"It sounds foolish on such short acquaintance, but you know I used to live in Finchville, and we played together when we were children. Why, we went to school together! The wonder of it all is that I should come back again and meet you at the schoolhouse dance last night and not remember your name. I suppose I used to call you Amy," he ended daringly.

Amabel said nothing, and Mr. Lamb, taking a fresh grip on his courage, leaned forward eagerly. His handsome face was quite crimson with embarrassment, but his brown eyes were pools of flaming determination.

"Don't laugh, please, but I love you, Amabel. I want to marry you," he said briefly.

The girl's eyes flashed up with a startled question in their blue depths. It was as if she were questioning his sincerity. His eyes answered her.

"I can't," she whispered sadly.

"Why not?" His voice was tense.

A shadow passed between them and the sun.

"That." She pointed upward.

"Why, what do you mean? It's a balloon, isn't it?" he asked in a startled tone.

She nodded. "There's a man in it," she explained.

His jaw tightened. "Ah! It's the man. I suppose?"

"I am engaged to Mr. Biddle," she said with dignity.

"Biddle! Hem Biddle of the Banner?"

"Yes."

He got upon his feet, and his white lips curved in a wry smile. "Just my luck to get here too late. I hope you will be very happy, Miss Paine. Is—it—to be very soon?"

Amabel reddened from brow to chin, but she held her head haughtily. "It—it is indefinite," she stammered. "Thank you for your good wishes."

He was holding her hand tightly and poking quite unconscious of that fact.

Something small and dark hurtled down through the branches and fell at Peter's feet.

"What's that?" he gasped.

"It's mine!" cried Amabel sharply. "Mr. Biddle often amuses himself by dropping messages down to me from the balloon as he circles above. His poetry is very good."

Peter Lamb read the lines distinctly, and it is to his credit that he did not smile, for the provocation was great:

"Sailing high in heaven's blue,
Dearest, now I think of you.
Are you thinking now of me
Swinging 'neath the apple tree?

She stood there looking half wistfully, half defiantly, at Peter Lamb when there sounded steps on the footpath beyond the thick screen of lilacs that hedged the fence.

"Hem Biddle's sailing around. What do you make of it, Anna?" The woman's sharp voice was eagerly curious.

Another voice beyond the hedge answered. "Pretty doings, I say, to go ballooning the afternoon he's going to get married!"

"There ain't many girls would wait any longer for Hem Biddle. He's been going with Amabel six years, and any one can see that the child is tired to death of him and his freakish ways. But she's got grit, and she'll stick by her promise."

"Is what they said true?" he demanded hotly.

"Every word."

"Why do you stand it?" he blurted out.

"I was quite fond of him, and I promised, you know, and he is always so sorry. I was wondering if we could signal to him now. Ah, here comes mother!" She clasped her hands and looked apprehensively at the little roly poly gray haired woman hastening toward the apple tree.

"Amabel Paine!" cried the lady in a shocked tone. "Here on your wedding afternoon entertaining company! Oh, how de do! Peter Lamb, did you say? Little Peter Lamb, bless your heart! The last time I saw you you were in knee pants and calico blouses. You'll excuse Amabel, won't you? She's going to be married at 6:30, and it's after 5 now. Come, Amabel."

She tucked her hand under the girl's arm and smiled, but it was plain that she was shocked at the unconventional behavior of the bride to be. "Have you seen Hem?" she asked quickly.

Amabel pointed upward where the balloon circled lazily against the blue sky.

Mrs. Paine's eyes narrowed, and her face flushed. "Amabel!" she cried, with tears in her eyes. "If he forgets again I shall die of mortification. I can't stand it."

Amabel's lips trembled in a smile that was near to tears.

"Mrs. Paine, if Hem Biddle isn't on hand at 6:30 the wedding can go on just the same if you will listen to reason."

"What do you mean?" demanded the puzzled lady.

Peter Lamb explained volubly, and Amabel added timid words of consent.

"If Hem isn't here at 6:30," said Mrs. Paine, "Peter, you can take his place. Come, Amabel!" And she bore the blushing bride away down the path to the house.

It was deliciously cool and pleasant up there in the evening sky. Delicate tints of primrose and pale rose flecked the blue and silver sunset sky. Hem Biddle, sunburned and frowsy with disheveled hair, leaned against the side of the car and dreamily scanned the green earth below.

Most of the afternoon had been spent in hovering over the vicinity of the Paine place, where a certain white speck in the garden represented Amabel. An uneasiness had prevailed in his mind the last hour. There was some task unfulfilled, some promise he had not kept. What was it? He gazed dreamily at the sunset and composed another poem.

The balloon drifted a little lower in the unstirred air. There came the tinkling sound of church bells from below. It was Wednesday evening. He glanced at the little calendar in the cover of his notebook as he closed it, and his eyes bulged with horror.

It was Wednesday, the 17th, and he was to be married this evening to Amabel.

For the third time he had forgotten it. Twice Amabel had forgiven him. But now!

He looked at his watch. It was half past 6, the hour for the ceremony. He leaned over the car in an agony of fear. There was much activity about the Paine place. Little groups of people dotted the lawn, some in white. Those were women, and the dark ones were men. He guessed they were gazing up at him, waiting for him. Poor Amabel! He snatched at the rope that released the gas, and the balloon dropped earthward. Again he looked over, and now he saw that the people had streamed into the house. There was a carriage before the gate!

At exactly 7 o'clock the balloon landed in the middle of Ebenezer Paine's cornfield and destroyed about 100 stalks of prized corn.

Within the house Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lamb were receiving congratulations and answering the questions of dazed wedding guests. Mrs. Paine was explaining matters to Hem Biddle's indignant relatives and friends.

Ebenezer Paine, stiffly garbed in his Sunday clothes, creaked across the lawn, through the orchard and into the cornfield. He frowned at the broken corn, and a quizzical look came into his eyes when he saw Hem Biddle crawling out from the folds of silk that enveloped the basket of the balloon. Hem was disgracefully untidy.

"Better late than never," he said apologetically.

Ebenezer Paine smiled grimly. "You've said that three times, Hem, and I reckon the proverb's worn out. This time 'it's better never come at all than be late.'"

"Amabel," remarked the bride's father thoughtfully—"why, Amabel waited till 6:35, and then she married an old sweetheart who was interested enough to be there on time."

The Husbands of Edith

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

PROLOGUE

This humorous tale, written in McCutcheon's best vein, is faultless in its morals, despite its title, and cumulative in its interest. It may be stated in strict confidence that Edith did not actually have more than one husband; consequently the gentle reader need harbor no apprehension on this score. Like all other estimable married women, Edith had only one husband, but circumstances arose through which it seemed necessary for her husband to be in two places at the same time, and how this was accomplished and what the outcome was— But wait a bit; let George Barr McCutcheon, the prince of story tellers, unfold the romance.

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

The actions of two young women near the door attracted his attention. From their actions he suddenly gathered that they were discussing him—and in a more or less facetious fashion at that. They whispered and looked shy and grinned in a most disconcerting manner. He turned red about the ears and began to wonder fiercely why his eggs and coffee were so slow in coming. Then, to his consternation, the young women, plainly of the serving class, bore down upon him with abashed smiles. He noticed for the first time that one of them was carrying a very small child in her arms. As she came alongside, grinning sheepishly she extended the small one toward the astounded Brock, and said in excellent old English:

She pushed the infant almost into Brock's face. He did not observe that it was a beautiful child and that it had a look of terror in its eyes. He only knew that he was glaring wildly at the fiendish nurse, the truth slowly beating its way into his befuddled brain. For a full minute he stared as if petrified. Then, administering a sickly grin, he sought to bring his wits up to the requirements of the extraordinary situation. He lifted his hand and mumbled: "Come, Raggles! I haven't a biscuit, but here, have a roll, do. Give me a—a kiss!" He added the last in most heroic surrender.

The nurse and the maid stared hard at him. The baby turned in affright to cling closely to the neck of the former.

"Good Lord, sir," whispered the nurse, with a nervous glance about her, "this ain't Raggles, sir. This is a baby."

"Do you think I'm blind, madam?" whispered he savagely. "I can see it's a baby, but I didn't know there was to be one. Its father didn't mention it to me."

"It's a wise father that knows his own child," said the nurse, with prompt sarcasm.

"I think they should have prepared me for this," growled he. "Is it supposed to be mine? Does—does Mrs. Medcroft know about it?"

"You mean about the baby, sir? Of course she does. It's hers. Please don't look so odd, sir. My word, sir, I didn't know you didn't know it, sir! I wasn't told, was I, O'Brien? There, sir, you see! Mrs. Medcroft said I was to bring Tootles in to you, sir. She said"—

"Tootles?" murmured Brock. "Tootles and Raggles. I dare say there's a distinction without much of a difference. Are you Burton?"

"Yes, Mr. Medcroft. The nurse. Won't you take baby for a minute, sir? Just to get acquainted and for appearance's sake." She whispered the well meant entreaty. Brock, now well into the spirit of the situation, obligingly extended his arms. The baby set up a lusty howl of aversion.

"For God's sake, take him back to his mother!" groaned Brock hastily. "He doesn't like strangers! Take him away!"

"It isn't a he, sir," whispered the maid as the nurse prepared to beat a hasty retreat with the Medcroft offspring. "It's a her, sir."

Brock's face was a study in perplexity as they hurried from the car.

"By George!" he muttered. "What next?"

That which did come next was even more amazing than the unexpected advent of Tootles. He barely had recovered his equanimity—with his coffee—when a young lady entered the car. That of itself was not much to speak of, but what followed was something that not even he could have dreamed of if he had been given the chance. He afterward recalled in some distress of mind that his second quick glance at the newcomer developed into little less than a rude stare of admiration. Small wonder, let it be advanced in his defense.

She was astoundingly fair to look upon—dazzlingly, it might be said, with some support to the adjective. Moreover, she was looking directly into his eyes from her unstable position near the door. What was more, a shy, even mischievous, smile crept into her face as her glance caught his. Never had he seen a more exquisite face than hers. Never had he looked upon a more perfect picture of grace and loveliness and—aye—smartness. She was smiling with unmistakable friendliness and recognition, and yet he could have sworn he had not seen her before in his life. As if he could have forgotten such a face! A sudden sense of enchantment swept over him, indescribable yet delicious.

"Good morning, Roxbury," she said.

She was coming toward him, still smiling shyly, her lips parted, as if she were breathing quickly from fear or another emotion. He set down his coffee cup without regard to taste or direction, his gaze fixed upon the trim, slender figure in blue. He now saw that her dark eyes were filled with a soft seriousness that belied her brave smile. A delicate pink had come into her clear, high bred face. The hesitancy of the gentlewoman enveloped her with a mantle that shielded her from any suspicion of boldness. Brock struggled to his feet, amazement written in his face.

"Good morning, Roxbury," she said in the most impersonal of greetings. Her smile deepened as the blankness increased in his face. In the most casual, matter of fact manner she appropriated the chair across the table from his. "Please sit down, Roxy."

He sat down abruptly. For a single tense, abashed moment they looked searchingly into each other's eyes.

"Are you Raggles?" he asked politely.

"You poor man!" she cried, archast. "Raggles is Edith's French poodle. Has no one told you of the poodle?" She half whispered this. He began to adore her at that very moment, a circumstance well worth remembering.

"No one has told me of you, for that matter," he apologized, thrilling with a delight such as he had never known before. "Would you mind whispering to me just who you are? Am I supposed to be your father—or what?"

"It is all so delightfully casual, isn't it?" she said. "I daresay they forgot to tell you that you are a man of family. Didn't they mention me in any way at all?" She pouted very prettily.

"No, they ignored you and Raggles and Tootles. Are there any more in my family that I haven't met?"

"You see, we got to the station quite a bit ahead of Edith. That's how you happened to miss meeting us. We saw you there, however. I recognized you by your clothes. You seemed very unhappy. Oh, I forgot! You wanted to know who I am. Well, I am your sister-in-law."

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

This little bungalow has a capacity of three chambers. The den in front can be used as a chamber if one desires. It has a good piazza, large living room and a good sized dining room, with built-in sideboard. The kitchen is complete and conveniently arranged for doing the work. There is a full basement under the entire house. First story, 9 feet. Red oak or birch finish in living room and dining room; remainder in birch, with birch or white maple floors throughout. Size, 28 feet wide and 42 feet deep. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,000.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains about 250 up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

ONLY TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING PAYS.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG IN FOLLOWING ADVERTISEMENTS.

ELKS SERVICE J. H. COLEMAN

Knights of Columbus Also in Attendance

The funeral of James H. Coleman, who died at St. Margaret's Hospital, Boston, was held Thursday from his home, 443 Bridge street, North Weymouth. Mr. Coleman was employed as an engineer at the American Agricultural Chemical works and did heroic work during the fire which levelled part of the plant.

Exalted Ruler Philip T. Sullivan of the Quincy lodge, B. P. O. E., conducted the Elks service at the home, assisted by officers of the lodge and a quartette.

A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated at the Church of the Immaculate Conception by Rev. Fr. James Allison, pastor. Rev. Fr. James McCarthy was deacon, Rev. Fr. Maurice Lynch, subdeacon and Rev. Fr. Howland Harkins, master of ceremonies. The Gregorian chant was sung by the choir and the soloists were Miss Marie Fennell and Miss Elizabeth Fraher.

A large delegation from Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, acted as honorary pall bearers and delegations were present from Boston lodge and Quincy lodge of Elks.

The floral tributes were many. Interment was in Calvary cemetery, West Roxbury. Rev. Fr. James W. Allison and Rev. Fr. Maurice Lynch conducted the services at the grave.

The bearers were Thomas Murphy, Michael Lane, Benjamin McDermott, John J. Lane, Charles Mullane, James Sculley, Stephen Monahan and Francis Gunville.

TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

Testimony That One Is Needed in Quincy

Quincy was mentioned at the hearing of the tuberculosis legislative committee at the State House on Wednesday. Dr. Lilienthal of the fourth medical district which includes Quincy said the city needed a tuberculosis hospital.

At the present time the Quincy Anti-Tuberculosis Association conducts a camp on Mt. Pleasant which has accommodations for ten people. There are 30 Quincy cases in institutions outside the city.

According to Dr. Fred E. Jones of the Board of Health, Quincy is not behind in its care of tuberculosis patients because it has been considering plans for the past two years to build a hospital and in the meantime has been doing all it could to isolate its patients. At the present time the death rate is 11 per thousand, a notable decrease in a few years.

Dr. Lilienthal stated that stone cutting did not cause tuberculosis but the stone dust is so aggrevating that it predisposes to the disease. He said the Quincy Board of Health have been advised by the State Board that they need a hospital.

The urgent need of more funds to carry on the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis Association in Quincy until such time as the city shall have taken over the fresh air camp at Mt. Pleasant was brought out at a meeting of the Association Thursday evening, held in the office of Henry M. Faxon on Granite street. All have recognized the good work which this camp is doing and the appeal for funds should not go unheeded.

At the meeting the bequest of $1,000 made by the late Mrs. George W. Morton was turned over to the association by Dr. N. S. Hunting, he having received it from Thomas Bixby, the executor of the estate. The check is now in the hands of Perry Lawton, treasurer of the association. Under the terms of the gift the income only can be used.

NEW GARBAGE HOUSE.

Another item was added to the call for the special council meeting for next Monday evening just before the calls were given to the police department to deliver. This was to receive a communication from the Mayor with enclosure from the Board of Health, relative to an appropriation for a new garbage house near the City stables. The buildings used for a garbage house collapsed a few days ago, since which time the garbage has been more or less exposed to the air. The Board of Health desires that the Council make an appropriation for a new building immediately.

NEW CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR

J. H. Shea of Milton Seeks Democratic Nomination

That John J. McDevitt is to have opposition in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Senator from the First Norfolk district is made certain by the filing of nomination papers with City Clerk Crane for James H. Shea of Blue Hills Pathway Milton. The papers were filed with the City Clerk shortly before noon today.

Aithough there have been numerous rumors that there would be opposition to McDevitt, who says that he is seeking vindication, it was not absolutely certain until papers had been filed.

A hot campaign for the nomination is now assured between the two candidates.

WORK OF FIRE DEPT.

Record of the Fire Department for May and June

Chief Engineer Litchfield reports the alarms and fire losses for May and June as follows:

MAY

Property at risk, $15,000
Insurance on same, $12,200.
Loss, $1,014.

The department laid 1,350 feet of hose, raised 32 feet of ladders, used 203 gallons of chemicals and worked 13 hours and 5 minutes at fires.

SEVERELY BURNED.

While little Ruth Helfridge ran around the yard of her home on Manet avenue Thursday afternoon with her clothing in flames, and the children who had playfully set her afire stood by terrified, a carpenter working on a nearby house heard her cries and ran to her assistance arriving in time to strip her of all clothing before she was burnt to death.

Ruth is the five year old daughter of Alfred Helfridge, and was playing with three other children, when one of them tossed a lighted match on her dress. It took fire immediately and wrapped in a sheet of flame Ruth commenced to run around, shrieking at the top of her voice.

The carpenter whose name has not been learned, after tearing off the burning clothing carried her to her home where she was treated by Dr. John H. Ash. She was severely burned about the body, but is doing well this morning.

DISTRICT COURT.

James Smith and Thomas Cain of Quincy and John Hawley of Milton were fined $5 each for drunkenness.

Thomas C. Haffenreffer was fined $10 on account of costs for exceeding the automoible speed limit at Milton.

The continued case of George F. Hatch for running his automobile on the wrong side of the street at Cohasset was heard and he was fined $25. Appealed.

Michael O. Connor was fined $5 on account of costs for drunkenness at Weymouth.

George A. Billings, Charles Clauson, Oscar Bosteels and John A. Murphy were arraigned for violation of the muffler motor boat law at Quincy. The cases were heard separately after which all of the defendants were found guilty. Their cases were placed on file.

TEAM STOLEN.

The horse and wagon of Max Gordon of Atlantic was stolen before daybreak this morning in Dorchester while he was delivering milk to a customer. He notified the police at Station 11 and at their request the Quincy officers searched the northern end of the city. They found no trace of the missing property.

AUTO RIDES AND A BAND

At Lawn Party of Hall Place Sunday School

The old proverb that "patient waiters are no losers" was exemplified at the lawn party of the Hall Place M. E. Sunday school Thursday evening. The party had originally been planned for Wednesday afternoon and evening, but the weatherman ahd planned to send some much-needed rain.

It was rather a disappointment but Thursday evening proved an ideal night for an outdoor party.

The automobile loaned through the kindness of the Wollaston Centre Garage, was kept busy. During the early hours it was sent to the various homes of people scattered throughout the community and brought them to the scene of festivities and after 9.30 it was used to carry people to their homes on payment of the regular carfare. This feature was a great hit especially with the children.

Another attraction of interest was the Finnish band. It did not in any way clash with the band concert given on the Parkway.

The grounds were prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns, a gift of five dozen having been received from a Boston party by Rev. T. C. Martin. These could be seen at a great distance some having been placed in the belfry of the church, giving an unusual illumination.

Everything was sold early in the evening, showing that in spite of the rain of the previous day and the postponement everything was a success.

LIVELY RUNAWAY.

A thrilling runaway occurred in City Square about 1.30 today and Dunham Dunlap, a conductor of the Bay State Street Railway was struck and thrown by an automoible as he started in pursuit. He received a strained left wrist and several cuts about the hands. The machine proceeded on its way without stopping.

The horse owned by the Eaton Ice Co. was hitched to a single ice wagon and became scared while feeding in the rear of the Thompson cafe. He ran into Saville street, dodged a Houghs Neck car, and shot across to the lawn of Dr. Bradshaw at Faxon avenue. He suddenly turned and ran up on the porch of the house, carrying away two posts on the porch.

Passing automobiles, electric cars and nearly 50 people were directly in his path but he managed to get through without causing any accidents. The damage to the house is estimated at about $10. The horse was uninjured.

FEAST OF ASSUMPTION.

The feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary was observed in all the Catholic churches of the city today with extra masses, followed by Bendediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The attendance was large at all the masses, particularly the early ones which were celebrated at five o'clock.

WOMAN'S BODY.

The body of an unknown woman about 38 years of age was washed ashore at Calf island Wednesday evening, and is now at Hull.

Tax Limit for City Purposes

Section 19 of Chapter 719 under which a public hearing must be held is as follows:

"Within ninety days after the passage of this act the City Council or other governing body of every city, except Boston, shall give a public hearing in regard to establishing a tax limit for that city.

"The time and place of holding such hearing shall be duly advertised, and, after the hearing, any city, except Boston, may provide by ordinance that the taxes assessed on property therein, exclusive of the state tax and other amounts assessed upon the city by the commonwealth, the county tax and sums required by law to be raised on account of the city debt, shall not in any year succeeding the adoption of such ordinance exceed an amount specified in the ordinance on every one thousand dollars of the average of the assessors' valuation of the taxable property therein for the preceding three years, such valuation being first reduced by the amount of all abatements allowed thereon previous to the thirty-first day of December in the year preceding said assessment:

"And the tax limit so established by ordinance shall have the force of law until it is annulled or modified by the action of the City Council or other governing body of the city. After such ordinance has been established it shall not be annulled or modified within one year thereafter, and then only after a public hearing, duly advertised, and by a two-thirds vote of the City Council or other governing body of the city."—Approved May 28, 1913.

BIDDING FOR DELEGATES

Quincy and Barre Both Have Attractions

For the Granite Men

Quincy granite manufacturers, and others who are to have exhibits at the Boston Arena during the convention of the Retail Monumental Dealers' Association in Boston next week, are busy getting their exhibits in position for the opening day next Tuesday.

Many of the Quincy manufacturers believe that the convention is so near home that they can get better results by having the delegates visit their plants. This does not mean however that Quincy will not occupy a large space at the exhibition for quite a number of manufacturers will exhibit.

Among the Quincy firms who are busy putting their exhibits in place are J. S. Swingle, the "Extra Dark Man," F. Barnicoat, H. C. Smalley Granite Co.; W. M. Adrian, Bay View Quarry Co.; Falconer & Co., Milne & Hector, Marshall & Kirkland; Golden Pink Quarry Co., R. & Benjamin Bishop and Hughes & Johnson.

John L. Miller, chairman of the convention is a busy man these days for he is giving all his time that the convention may be a success. Not only did he have charge of the space at the exhibition hall but he also had charge of the advertising souvenir which will be given to delegates.

Owing to the mix-up between Quincy and Barre, it can not be told definitely just how many will accept the invitation of the Quincy manufacturers and come to Quincy on Friday. The local committee hope however to obtain definite information early in the week.

The Quincy manufacturers have had registration cards prepared and on Tuesday some one will be in attendance at the convention and an effort will be made to get the delegates to register that they will come to Quincy. It is understood that the Barre manufacturers will also do the same thing, so that Tuesday bids fair to see some lively hustling for delegates. It is not often that delegates to a convention have two rival centers bidding to entertain them, but such is the case here.

It is believed that the superior attractions offered by the Quincy manufacturers will result in bringing a larger part of the delegates to Quincy on "Quincy day" Friday Aug. 22.

HORSE MISSING.

A horse owned by Abraham Gordon of Boston disappeared at Quincy Point Friday morning under circumstances which point to it being stolen. Although the police have conducted a vigorous search no trace of the animal has been found. The horse was left tied to a tree while Gordon unloaded some furniture on Silver street. The loss of the horse was not discovered until he had completed the job. A description has been sent to the surrounding towns.

ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Police Allage Patrick McGrath Attempted Arson

Patrick McGrath, aged 40 years of 32 Claremont avenue was arrested late last night by Inspector Goodhue and Officer Thorne on a complaint charging him with setting fire in the rear of one of the Fore River boarding houses owned by Mrs. Agnes McGrath and accupied by Mrs. Amelia A. Kennedy.

The fire in question took place last Monday night in the vicinity of 11 o'clock but the fact of the fire has been kept quiet in order that the parties alleged to have caused it might be apprehended.

It is alleged that McGrath soaked several boards with kerosene oil and placed them against the rear of the house and set fire to them. There were 29 boarders in the house and all were abed and asleep at the time. Mrs. Kennedy had just entered her room and lay down to sleep. There is a bow window in her room which was open. Her attention was attracted by smoke coming into the room and looking out she saw the flames. Her cries aroused the boarders who hastened out and pulled the burning boards away and extinguished the fire.

McGrath, the arrested man, is the husband of the woman who owns the house but they have not lived together for some time, and it is alleged that she is suing him for divorce.

After his arrest McGrath was put through the third degree but denied emphatically that he was near the building.

He was arraigned in court this morning and held in $1,000 until Aug. 27.

COW BITTEN BY DOG.

Max Gordon, an Atlantic milk dealer, has reported to the police that a cow owned by him was one of those bitten by the South Quincy St. Bernard dog which ran amuck over Dorchester and Quincy on Sunday and Monday. The cow was treated by Dr. Francis Abele who found that a large piece had been taken out of the ear but that there was no immediate dangers of the cow developing rabies.

SUMMER SCHOOL CLOSED

Kindergarten Conducted by Women's Club

Miss Burke Complimented

The Kindergarten school under the auspices of the Education committee of the Quincy Women's Club closed a very successful session of six weeks Friday morning, August 15. The little ones presented a very pleasing picture, all being dressed for the occasion of their last day of kindergarten work previous to entering the public schools in September.

The children with the expression of happiness upon their countenances were enthusiastic in their work and too much credit cannot be given Miss Frances Burke of Willard street for the painstaking and conscientious work which has characterized the entire session of the school.

This kindergarten work for the non-speaking English children of our city is an innovation in the work of the Women's Club, this school being the first of its kind to appear in our home city.

At the opening of the school, many children applied for admission from three to six years of age, but as the room in the Lincoln school which had been provided for this purpose was to be taxed to its limit, it was deemed advisable to confine the membership to those who were to enter the public school in the fall, thus helping to some extent the teachers of the first grade.

The children were each given exhibitions of their own work to carry to their homes, and favors were presented to them by Miss Burke. Refreshments were served to the children, their mothers and friends who were present.

Miss Burke introduced the chairman of the committee, Mrs. Carolyn B. Mellen, who spoke to the mothers and children upon the work undertaken and for what it meant to the city and also to those whom it had benefited.

Mrs. Mellen presented Mrs. Alice D. Sanborn and Mrs. Caroline Spear who also spoke to the children in words of commendation.

The committee interested in this most worthy cause is composed of the following ladies of the club: Mrs. Carolyn B. Mellen, Mrs. Alice D. Sanborn, Miss Emily Wilde, Mrs. George Pfaffmann, Mrs. Herbert Barker, Mrs. George Abele, Mrs. Frederick Barnicoat, Mrs. Eugene R. Stone, Mrs. Walter Pinkham, Mrs. Walter Brady, Mrs. F. W. Austin, Mrs. George Ryder, Mrs. Caroline Spear, Mrs. Ezekiel Sargent, Mrs. Arthur Foster, Mrs. T. B. Crane, Mrs. Frank F. Prescott, Mrs. Joseph Prout, Mrs. John R. Richards, Mrs. Francis F. Brewer, Mrs. A. F. Townsend and Mrs. James Young.

FUNERAL OF MR. GALLAGHER.

The funeral of Michael Gallagher, who died in his 68th year Thursday night, was held this morning from his home 72 Spear street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. John J. Coan, pastor Rev. Fr. Howland J. Harkins of Amesbury was on the altar during the mass. The music was the Gregorian chant. sung by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon. organist.

Among the floral tributes were a wreath of roses and ferns from the permanent men of the Quincy Fire Department and a wreath of roses, carnations and sweet peas from the members of Combination 2 at Quincy Point The bearers Dr. Michael T. Sweeney of Weymouth, Hon. Michael T. Sullivan, Philip D. Cook and Michael Sweeney.

John Bull does not have to advertise at San Francisco, and Uncle Sam does not have to trade at his store.

In view of the increased number of automobiles and motorcycles on the streets at this time of the year, it would be well for pedestrians to be more careful than ever. Motorists have some rights, all opinions to the contrary notwithstanding and persons who walk carelessly across or along the public highways certainly do so at their own risk. Of course it is well for all parties to exercise due care and caution and by so doing many an accident could be averted. Be careful yourself and don't expect the chauffeur to take care of himself and you, too.

THE TAX LIMIT.

Quincy's tax limit this year for "current municipal expenses" is $422,637.43. This is the amount that $12 per $1000 would yield on the net valuation of 1912, which was $35,219,786.00. It is not the limit of the total levy, as that is not limited, and will this year reach $800,000, or to $900,000.00.

Had $13 been the limit instead of $12, the limit for current expenses would have been $35,219.78 higher. At $11 per $1,000 it would have been $35,219.78 lower.

The facts are that Quincy's valuation has increased very rapidly—over a million dollars per year on an average. Yes over a million and a half per year since 1907. This increase has jumped rapidly the tax limit.

In 1903 the limit was $265,308.61. In ten years therefore the limit has increased $157,328.82, an average of $15.732.88 per year additional for current expenses. This is an increase of 51 per cent.

Quincy's increase in population was less than this. The census of 1910 showed an increase of 36 per cent in population in 10 years. The percentage of increase in tax limit should not be larger than the percentage of increase in population.

Cities like Fitchburg, Taunton and Everett, which have a larger population than Quincy, have a smaller valuation, and therefore cannot raise so much for current expenses. Pittsfield with 521 less population can raise a little more than Quincy. It is in this class that Quincy is located and must be compared and not with Milton, Malden, Brockton or Brookline.

With all this increase in valuation and tax limit. Quincy is not paying her current expenses but is running into debt over $100,000.00 per year. It seems unnecessary but nevertheless is too true; no effort being made to reduce the net debt.

When Hon. Charles M. Bryant became mayor in January, 1902, he found a net indebtedness of $1,566,635.00. For two years there was an increase, and in his third year a reduction, the net increase for his three years being $100,437.00.

During the three administrations of Mayor Thompson the net increase was $141,468.00, and during the four years of Mayor Shea $456,093.00.

During the first year of Mayor Stone the net increase in debt was but $22,263.00.

Here is the net debt of the city on Dec. 31, of each year, cents being omitted:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1901 | Mayor Hall | $1,566,635 |
| 1902 | Mayor Bryant | 1,650,840 |
| 1903 | Mayor Bryant | 1,741.628 |
| 1904 | Mayor Bryant | 1,667,072 |
| 1905 | Mayor Thompson | 1,740,330 |
| 1906 | Mayor Thompson | 1,785,350 |
| 1907 | Mayor Thompson | 1,816,540 |
| 1908 | Mayor Shea | 1,839,060 |
| 1909 | Mayor Shea | 1,858,005 |
| 1910 | Mayor Shea | 1,907,445 |
| 1911 | Mayor Shea | 2,272.633 |
| 1912 | Mayor Stone | 2,294,896 |

We believe it is possible to meet all current expenses and reduce the debt under the $12 limit, and an attempt should be made. It is possible this year to reduce the net debt by keeping down the new loans.

HIGH LIFE FILLED NATION'S COFFERS

Increased Smoking and Drinking Add to Revenues.

TOTAL OF $344,424,453.

Banner Revenue Year Is $22,809,000 More Than In 1912—Illinois First, New York Second, In Import Figures. Saloons and Wholesale Liquor Dealers Decreasing In Number.

The wealth of gold and silver and paper money filling the vaults of the federal treasury is due in no small measure to the record breaking drinking, smoking and card playing of the American people during the fiscal year 1913. Details of the sources of the $344,424,453 collected in internal revenue taxes during the year ended June 30—the greatest in the history of the country—have just been disclosed in a report to Secretary McAdoo by William H. Osborne, commissioner of internal revenue, whose headquarters are in Washington.

The 143,220,000 gallons of whisky and brandy consumed during the year brought in $157,542,000; the 65,246,000 barrels of beer, porter and ales profited the government $65,246,000; the 14,276,771,000 cigarettes smoked increased the revenues by $17,846,000; the 7,699,038,000 cigars puffed away benefited Uncle Sam to the extent of $23,097,000; the chewing and smoking of 404,363,000 pounds of tobacco gave him $32,349,000; taxes on 33,209,000 pounds of snuff amounted to $2,657,000, and the sale of 32,764,155 packs of playing cards, an increase of 1,952,475 over the previous year, brought $655,283.

Taxes on Oleomargarine.

Taxes on 4,172,000 pounds of artificially colored oleomargarine amounted to $417,000 and on 138,986,000 pounds of uncolored oleomargarine to $347,000. This showed an aggregate increase of 16,906,000 pounds in the consumption of oleomargarine compared with last year. The use of 38,742,000 pounds of process or renovated butter, a decrease of 8,276,000 pounds, gave the government $97,000.

The manufacture of "filled cheese" apparently has become extinct. While the treasury collected taxes on 33,000 pounds a year ago, none was collected during the fiscal year of 1913.

The aggregate number of saloons in the country this year was 194,590, a decrease, despite the increased consumption of intoxicants, of 21,554 as compared with the fiscal year 1912. Wholesale liquor dealers numbered 6,452, a decrease of 600 within a year.

Previous Records Broken.

Total internal revenue receipts of 1913 exceeded the previous high record of 1911 by $21,898,000 and the collections of 1912 by $22,809,000. To collect the enormous sum it cost the government $5,483,000. This was at the rate of $15.92 per $1,000, or 1.59 per cent, as compared with $17.14 per $1,000, or 1.71 per cent, in 1912; $16.80 per $1,000, or 1.68 per cent, in 1911, and a general average cost of collection of $25.52 per $1.000, or 2.55 per cent.

There was a decrease in the internal revenue receipts on articles imported from Porto Rico of $22,765 and an increase in the tax on Philippine products of $94,342.

Illinois heads the list in the amount of internal revenue collected, with $58,302,601. New York ranks second, with $46,661,853.

BOTTLED MESSAGE FOUND.

May Tell Fate of Missing Craft, the Lost "Christmas Ship."

A message supposed to have been written by Captain Charles Nelson of the Rouse Simmons, the "Christmas ship" which went down with all on board in Lake Michigan last November, has been found near Sturgeon Bay, Wis., by Frank Lauscher, the son of a fisherman.

The message is dated Nov. 23 and reads as follows:

"These lines were written at 10:30 p. m. Schooner Rouse Simmons ready to go down about twenty miles southeast of Twin River point, between fifteen and twenty miles off shore. All hands lashed to one line. Goodby. Captain Charles Nelson."

Young Lauscher was playing on the beach several miles north of Sturgeon Bay when he found the bottle. The note, written roughly in pencil, was inside.

Many are of the opinion the note is the last word from the ill fated ship, which sank during a terrific storm last winter when loaded with Christmas trees from the northern woods and bound for Chicago.

Negroes to Hold an Exposition.

Incorporation papers have been issued at Springfield, Ill., to the National Negro Semicentennial Exposition association, a body organized to promote an exposition of the negro's progress since emancipation. It is to be held in Chicago in August and September, 1914.

Swimmer Finds Big Pearl.

While swimming in South Fork, a tributary of the Sangamon river, Oliver Wolf of Edinburg, Ill., dug up with a handful of sand a pearl that weighed fifty-five grains, according to H. Fleming, a jeweler of that town. Fleming valued the pearl at $1,500.

ON WAY TO ITALY

Charlton to Stand Trial For Murder of His Wife

Boston, Aug. 16.—Porter Charlton, who is being returned to Italy to stand trial on the charge of murder of his wife, whose body was found in a trunk in Lake Como, in June, 1910, paid a brief visit to Boston, but saw little or nothing of the city, inasmuch as he was kept locked up aboard the steamer Re d'Italia.

Charlton who was a bank clerk, confessed in this country to having killed his wife on their honeymoon. During the past three years he fought against extradition, but on July 8 the United States supreme court decided that he must be turned over to the Italian authorities. His father, Judge Paul Charlton, will attend the trial. There is no death penalty in Italy, but Charlton may possibly be sentenced to solitary imprisonment for life.

STILL FIGHTING ON MONEY BILL

Democratic Caucus Can't Agree on Currency Reforms

Washington, Aug. 16.—After three hours of lively discussion between the administration forces and the currency "insurgents" the house Democratic caucus, adjourned until Monday.

The fight for amendments to the bill has been bitter and the prospects are that the caucus may run through all of next week, with a final contest on the floor of the house inevitable.

Representative Hardwick of Georgia attacked the bill as creating a great monopoly in money, establishing "a gigantic political and financial machine conferring greater power than any man or set of men should have."

He declared that the day was apt to come "when some mounted Roosevelt would get the government reins and perpetuate himself a Diaz, with all the powers of banks, railroads and other corporations linked."

PATTEN COMES BACK

Has Made Modest Sum of $500,000 In Chicago Corn Pit

Chicago, Aug. 16.—James A. Patten, whose deals in grain and cotton in the past decade have attracted world-wide attention because of their magnitude, and who some time ago announced his retirement, is once more the central figure in a speculation that is causing the corn pit on the board of trade to boil with excitement.

Patten started to buy corn when the first reports that hot weather and drought were damaging the crop began to come in three weeks ago.

His paper profits at the present time are said to be at least $500,000. According to reports circulated in LaSalle street, he is now in possession of contracts calling for the delivery of more than 5,000,000 bushels in September.

Think Farmer Was Slain

Webster, Mass., Aug. 16.—That Jonah Lawson, a farmer of East Woodstock, a few miles from here, was held up, robbed of $200 and murdered outside his home and then carried to his barn and placed in a horse stall to try and show that he was kicked to death, is the opinion of Dr. J. S. Spaulding, following an autopsy.

Hopedale Striker Is Released

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 16.—Joseph M. Caldwell, who was sentenced to three months in the house of correction here for uttering inflammatory speeches during the recent strike at the plant of the Draper company in Hopedale, was released on parole.

Refuses to Sell Ice, Fined $5

Taunton, Mass., Aug. 16.—For refusing to sell a piece of ice to Mrs. Arthur Townley, John Baxter of North Dighton was fined $5, while his assistant was acquitted of a similar charge.

GUESTS FLEE FROM FLAMES

Echo House at Hampton, N. H., Is Burned to Gronnd

TELEPHONE GIRL IS HERO NE

Forty Guests Lose Most of Their Belongings—One Woman Loses $3000 In Jewels—Baptist Parsonage Also Destroyed—Help From Portsmouth Prevents Greater Loss

Hampton, N. H., Aug. 16.—A fire, starting in a defective flue in the northeast corner of the Hotel Echo, reduced the hotel to ashes, destroyed the parsonage of the First Baptist church, considerably damaged the Hampton telephone exchange, and threatened to wipe out the entire section of the town.

One woman, an invalid, owes her escape from the hotel to the work of two Hampton young men. The damage done is estimated at $30,000 and before the blaze finally was extinguished the entire fire apparatus from Portsmouth and Exeter were at work.

That the assistance of the out of town apparatus was gained, was due much to the daring of Miss Alzita Hanson, an operator in the telephone exchange, who despite the fact that the exchange was aflame stuck to her post and observing the spreading of the fire sent in calls to the fire headquarters of all the neighboring towns and cities.

Forty guests were at the hotel when the fire first was noticed. Several of the more daring rushed to their rooms and secured their clothing and valuables. However, much personal property was consumed, including $3000 worth of jewels, the property of Mrs. Eliza Hubbard of St. Louis.

Dry as tinder, the wooden hotel was devoured by the flames within half an hour. Flames were shooting from the three floors when it became known that Miss Maria Gardner still was within the building. Fred Thereault and Albert W. Weeks were among the first to learn of this. They rushed to the woman's room through smoke-filled and blazing corridors, finally succeeding in locating her and at desperate risk carried her to the street below.

Scarcely had the blaze spread through the hotel when flying sparks set fire to the adjoining parsonage, occupied by Rev. C. M. Phillips and his family. Prior to the catching fire of his home the preacher had gathered together his family and taken them to the home of a neighbor.

In the meantime, the flames had spread to the telephone exchange. The operator, Miss Hanson, was besought to leave the building, but she bravely refused and her work in summoning assistance from Portsmouth and Exeter largely was responsible for the early checking of the flames.

FLIGHT AROUND NEW JERSEY

Bergdoll, In His Biplane, Starts At Mile-a-Minute Clip

Philadelphia, Aug. 16.—Grover C. Bergdoll, after several unsuccessful attempts recently, started in his biplane on his proposed trip around the state of New Jersey.

Accompanied by a mechanician, Bergdoll arose from the field near the Eagle hotel, Llanerch, southwest of here, and after passing over West Philadelphia, crossed the Delaware river below Camden. He flew over Hammonton, N. J., going at about the rate of a mile a minute.

Bergdoll proposes to make a stop at Atlantic City then to fly northward to Ashbury park. He will then cross over to Trenton and return to Philadelphia via the Delaware.

STILL PLYING TORCH

Suffragettes Fire Pavilion In King Edward Park

London, Aug. 16.—Militant suffragettes destroyed the pavilion in King Edward park at Willesden with fire.

Agents of the Women's Social and Political union are going through Wales establishing branches and inciting dissatisfied women to violence. A large quantity of inflammable materials and explosives were found in a vacant house. The women were using the house as an arsenal.

King Prorogues Parliament

London, Aug. 16.—Deep regret for the recent Balkan wars and hope for the permanency of the peace pact of Bucharest was the keynote of the king's speech of prorogation, read by the lord chancellor, adjourning the British parliament until Nov. 3. The king also expressed gratification at the amicable and successful co-operation of the great powers in the Balkan states.

Approves the Location

Concord, Mass., Aug. 16.—Brigadier General Emery of the quartermaster general's department has approved the temporary location for the regimental headquarters of Colonel Cyrus H. Cook of the Sixth regiment in the hall of the central fire station where they will be transferred soon from Fitchburg.

CUMMINGS — CHAMBERLAIN.

A wedding of interest to Braintree and Quincy people was solemnized last Tuesday afternoon when Miss Sarah May Chamberlain of Quincy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlain of Middleboro was united in marriage ot Charles Reed Cummings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Cummings of South Braintree. The ceremony was performed at two o'clock at 59 Pleasant street, Quincy, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. McInnis, the bride's uncle and aunt, with whom she has made her home.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. Norman McKinnon, pastor of the Congregational church at Middleboro. Ward Walker of Norfolk Downs was best man and Miss Flora Collins of Quincy, the maid of honor. The ushers were Frank Littlefield of South Boston, Roger Larkin of South Braintree, Ralph Chamberlain and William Chamberlain of Middleboro.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with flowers and palms and the bridal party entered to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Edith Ridder of Middleboro.

The bride's dress was of white satin with veil and she carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. The maid of honor was gowned in white satin trimmed with duchess lace. Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the bride's home from 2.30 until 4.30 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Cummings being assisted in receiving by Miss Flora Collins and Mr. Ward Walker. The groom's present to his best man and ushers were stick pins and the maid of honor's gift from the bride was a ring.

After a short stay at Boothbay Harbor, Maine, Mr. and Mrs. Cummings will occupy their new home, 70 Pleasant street, Quincy where they will be at home to their friends after November 1st.

Mrs. Cummings is a well known Quincy young lady with a host of friends and Mr. Cummings is equally well known and popular in South Braintree. He is associated with Bacon & Co., the wholesale steel and iron house on Oliver street, Boston and received a substantial wedding gift from his employers and individual remembrances from his fellow workers in the office. Mr. and Mrs. Cummings were the recipients of a large number of gifts expressive of the good will and esteem of the donors.

Their many friends are united in wishing them a long and happy voyage on the matrimonial sea.

IMPORTANT TO TAXPAYERS!

A public hearing will be held at City Hall

Monday Evening, Aug. 18

Under the New Law which permits Taxpayers to express their views relative to the

Tax Limit for City Purposes

Section 19 of Chapter 719 under which a public hearing must be held is as follows:

"Within ninety days after the passage of this act the City Council or other governing body of every city, except Boston, shall give a public hearing in regard to establishing a tax limit for that city.

"The time and place of holding such hearing shall be duly advertised, and, after the hearing, any city, except Boston, may provide by ordinance that the taxes assessed on property therein, exclusive of the state tax and other amounts assessed upon the city by the commonwealth, the county tax and sums required by law to be raised on account of the city debt, shall not in any year succeeding the adoption of such ordinance exceed an amount specified in the ordinance on every one thousand dollars of the average of the assessors' valuation of the taxable property therein for the preceding three years, such valuation being first reduced by the amount of all abatements allowed thereon previous to the thirty-first day of December in the year preceding said assessment:

"And the tax limit so established by ordinance shall have the force of law until it is annulled or modified by the action of the City Council or other governing body of the city. After such ordinance has been established it shall not be annulled or modified within one year thereafter, and then only after a public hearing, duly advertised, and by a two-thirds vote of the City Council or other governing body of the city."—Approved May 28, 1913.

NEW AEROBOAT TO GO OVER 67 MILES AN HOUR.

Stability and Speed Combined In Orville Wright's Latest Invention.

Orville Wright, the inventor of the aeroplane, has just turned out an aeroboat or flying boat which he believes will be an important factor in the development of the United States postal service. The invention is the result of two years of experimenting.

Mr. Wright himself has been reluctant to discuss the new invention, but the general superintendent of the Wright company, Grover Cleveland Loening of Dayton, O., recently consented to describe his chief's latest achievement in the world of air.

"Mr. Wright," he said, "expects that his aeroboat will demonstrate its usefulness especially in carrying mails, dispatches, etc., over inaccessible inland waterways such as are found in many regions of the west, in Alaska and along the coast."

"The consistent speed of the new boat will be sixty-seven miles an hour," he added, "and at all times it will be a faster vehicle for postal service than the fastest express train. Greater speed can be obtained on a spurt."

The aeroboat has also been developed to an unusual point of seaworthiness.

Mr. Loening also described a new hydroaeroplane, model C-H, which Mr. Wright has just put upon the market.

"The new hydro has been developed particularly for use over small inland rivers and lakes," said Mr. Loening. "It is provided with new features for stability and control on the water. The quick and treacherous air currents created by high banks will not upset the new craft.

"With only a sixty horsepower motor as many as four persons have been carried on this hydro, and frequently it has flown off the water from a standing start in less than ten seconds."

The consistent speed of the Wright hydroaeroplane will be fifty-eight miles an hour.

Mr. Wright has made several experimental flights in his air boat over the Miami river, near Dayton, and he has been able to demonstrate that hydroaeroplanes can be made as stable and easy to control in flight as the best land machines, according to Mr. Loening.

INVENTS TIPPING SYSTEM.

Banker Opens Account For Waitress Who Serves Him Daily.

Lee Moser, a St. Louis banker, has convinced himself that he has worked out the ideal tipping system.

Mr. Moser, who is young and good looking, thought he was so well taken care of by a young woman who waited on him in his favorite lunchroom that he obtained her name and went to the savings department of a trust company and opened a dollar account in her name. He kept patronizing the cafe, and none but the girl with the savings account could wait on him.

He never affronts her with a tip, but when he feels that the service is especially good a deposit goes to the credit of the waitress.

Aims at Stock Gambling.

A bill designed to stop gambling in stocks, bonds and warehouse receipts of all commodities, which has just been introduced in congress by Representative Hulings, Progressive, of Pennsylvania, would compel all those dealing in securities or acceptances representing commodities to effect a delivery of the material bought and sold at the close of each transaction. They would have to execute a bill of sale with government internal revenue stamps.

SULZER WILL NOT VACATE

Will Take Case Before Highest Tribunal In State

GLYNN DEMANDS PRVY SEAL

Lieutenant Governor Formally Demands by Letter That Impeached Governor Surrender Executive Office and All State Documents—Mrs. Sulzer's Condition Is Very Serious

Albany, Aug. 16.—The beginning of the end of the dual administration in New York appeared to be in sight.

Counsel for William Sulzer, the impeached governor, arranged a conference with counsel for Martin H. Glynn, lieutenant governor, who claims to be acting governor because of Sulzer's impeachment, to devise if possible a method by which the courts may give at least temporary title to the governorship to one or the other of the claimants.

An extraordinary session of the proper tribunal may be called at once to settle the dispute. Under the law the case could be taken at once to the highest tribunal in the state—the court of appeals.

The suggestion that the controversy be submitted to the courts was contained in a letter addressed to Glynn by Sulzer. This letter was in reply to a letter sent Sulzer by Glynn formally demanding that Sulzer surrender to him the privy seal of the state, the executive chamber and offices and all documents in his possession relating to the executive department.

In his reply Sulzer declined to recognize Glynn as acting governor, refused point blank to surrender anything, announced his intention to exercise the functions of the executive, and made the suggestion to place the matter before the courts, "for the purpose of preventing any unseemly struggle."

Frank A. Tierney, secretary to Glynn, left the lieutenant governor's office, for the executive chamber to serve Sulzer with Glynn's letter. William Lanborn of the executive staff met the secretary at the door and immediately went into the executive's inner office to inform him of Tierney's mission. Lanborn soon reappeared and said that the governor would see the secretary and Tierney was ushered into the presence of the impeached executive.

Lieutenant Governor Glynn on reaching his office at the capitol confirmed the report that he would call upon Governor Sulzer formally by letter to vacate his office. Preparations as if for a long siege were made at the executive chamber upon the arrival of Lieutenant Governor Glynn at the capitol. The locks on every door leading to the chamber and the governor's private office were changed and an attendant was stationed at each entrance.

A statement that Mrs. Sulzer's condition was very serious and that she had suffered a relapse, was issued from the executive chamber yesterday afternoon. It was declared her temperature was 102 and her pulse 118, and that she was partly delirious.

FISHER FOLKS STARVE

Expedition Finds Skeletons of 100 In Nova Zembia

Paris, Aug. 16.—A terrible narrative of death by starvation of more than 100 fishermen and their families in Nova Zembia is told in a telegram from St. Petersburg to the Petit Parisian.

The past winter was very severe and the fishermen were unable to secure fresh supplies of food at the usual periods and the sea being frozen it was impossible to obtain fish.

A scientific expedition visiting the islands found skeletons of the fishermen and their wives and children lying in the open. Three dead women with infants in their arms were found.

NOT AGUINALDO'S RELATIVE

Filipino Leader Denies Stories Sent Out From Tokio

Manila, Aug. 16.—General Emilio Aguinaldo denied the stories sent from Tokio that the Aguinaldo reported to be in conference with the Japanese government is a relative.

Interest was aroused early in June by rumors from Japan that General Emilio Aguinaldo, who led the Philippine insurrection following the close of the war with Spain, was in Tokio conferring with Japanese government officials. It was understood the subject of these conferences was the vulnerability of the Philippine islands to attack and the possibility of success that might attend a Japanese invasion.

Negro Prisoner Lynched By Mob

Morgan, Ga., Aug. 16.—A mob overpowered fifteen deputies battered its way into the county jail here and shot dead Robert Lovett, negro, accused of killing two white men.

Five Killed In Auto

Carrolton, Mo., Aug. 16.—Five passengers in an automobile were killed when an Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe train struck the machine at a crossing a mile east of here.

SLASHES WIFE'S NECK AND TRIES SUICIDE

McCue Attempts to Die Rather Than Submit to Arrest

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 16.—Patrick McCue, 65 years old, of Franklin, N. H., it is alleged, stabbed his wife, Mrs. Mary McCue, 58 years old, of this city, in the neck with his jackknife, and then, having vainly tried to escape, severed the arteries of his own throat.

Mrs. McCue, who, before her marriage to McCue at Pittsfield, N. H., in 1891, was Miss Mary Prentiss of Lowell, Mass., left McCue two years ago because of his bad habits.

At the Sacred Heart hospital it is reported Mrs. McCue will recover. McCue is on the dangerous list. From a letter found in his pocket after being taken to the hospital, it is thought that he came to Manchester bent on murdering his wife.

GUILD GIVEN DECORATION

Second Highest Honor In Gift of Russian Emperor

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16.—The decoration of St. Alexander, the second highest honor within the gift of the Emperor of Russia, has been conferred by Emperor Nicholas upon Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston, who was formerly the United States ambassador at St. Petersburg.

Announcement to this effect was made at the Russian summer embassy here by George Bakhmeteff, Russian ambassador to the United States, following the receipt of a cable from the Russian department of state.

Ambassador Bakhmeteff said that the former ambassador had received notification of the honor several days ago, and that he had complimented him upon it during a visit with Mrs. Bakhmeteff to the Guild summer home at Nahant, Mass.

Aeroplane Passenger Killed

Leipsic, Ger., Aug. 16.—Herr Ruetger, a passenger in an aeroplane driven by Aviator Roempler, was killed here when a sudden gust of wind caused the machine to turn over. Roempler was injured but not seriously. The aeroplane was flying at a height of thirty feet when the accident occurred.

ATTACK ON WILSON'S DELAY

Says President Hesitates While Americans Are Killed

NO MORE REPORTS FROM LIND

Penrose Declares Unless There Is Marked Change In Mexico He Will Lay Certain Information Before Senate—Refugees Pouring Into United States Are Being Cared For

Washington, Aug. 16.—Senator Penrose forced another debate on the Mexican situation by introducing a resolution calling upon President Wilson to inform the senate whether William B. Hale is in Mexico City as the agent of any executive department of the government; if so, by what authority he was appointed, and what compensation he has been given.

The White House explanation of Hale's presence in Mexico has been that he was there as a personal friend of President Wilson, forwarding information.

Senator Penrose declared that he had no desire to further complicate a delicate situation or to indulge to jingoism. He referred, however, to dispatches from Mexico telling of the serious plight of Shirley C. Hulzer, son-in-law of Lieutenant Governor Reynolds of Pennsylvania, who with his wife and little daughter are believed to be in danger from revolutionists near the city of Chihuahua. The senator declared that unless the mission of John Lind developed marked change in conditions in Mexico, he would address the senate next week laying before it certain information he possesses.

The state department has received no further reports from Special Envoy Lind in Mexico City. This is taken as an indication that while the former governor of Minnesota may be progressing in his mission, he has as yet taken no definite step in the program outlined for him. The veil of uncertainty that has shrouded the orginal purposes of Lind's mission and the part he is to play was lifted by the authoritative statement that while much is left to his discretion as to whether he will see President Huerta in person or submit his ideas through Charge O'Shaughnessy, he has with him for his own use carefully written instructions as to the position of the United States.

He has been advised that this position is not to be departed from in whatever negotiations may later be opened.

Refugees are pouring into the United States from Mexico, most of them being aided by the state and navy departments. As far as consular reports are concerned, there is little to indicate any improvement in conditions below the border.

The Mexican consul at El Paso has reported to his government that Colonel Jesus Carranza, a brother of Governor Venustiano Carranza of Coahuilla, head of the revolution, had asked the United States to intervene in Mexico.

IMMIGRANT ADMITTED

German Newspaper Writer Has Been Detained Since Aug. 8

Washington, Aug. 16.—Ernest Jemusen, a German newspaper writer, describing himself as a "Socialist Democrat," who has been held at the Boston immigration station since Aug. 8 on the ground that he might become a public charge, was ordered admitted to the United States by Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti.

Jemusen escaped from Russia, where he had been sentenced to five years' imprisonment for political activity. When he was held up in Boston Congressman Peters of Boston and Sabath of Illinois interested themselves in his case and supported an appeal to the immigration bureau.

"SHOOT TO KILL"

Soldiers Provided With Ball Cartridges at Londonderry

Londonderry, Ire., Aug. 16.—So dangerous has become the temper of Irish Nationalists and the Unionists here that the soldiers on guard were provided with ball cartridges and ordered to shoot to kill if rioting broke out.

Three hundred troops is en route here. A number of young girls were hurt in a riot.

New Motorcycle Record

Brighton Beach, N. Y., Aug. 16.—A new record for seventy-five miles was shot over the boards at the Brighton Beach motordrome, when Henry St. Yves of Paris and Charlie Davis of Brooklyn won the three-quarter century team race in 58m. 30s. The former mark for the distance was 1h. 1m. 47s.

Binghamton Orphanage Burned

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 16.—St. Mary's Catholic orphanage was destroyed by fire. All of the 160 children were out of doors at play or on the first floor and escaped. Rev. John Porubsky of St. Cyril and Methodius church was injured while working at the fire.

The Tabriz Carpet

And Its Wonderful Secret

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The three young men gloated over the beautiful, silky carpet from Tabriz John Fleming had spread it on the floor of his studio, and his two friends sat cross legged in the middle of its rich expanse while John pointed out its remarkable pattern.

"It's exactly as Billy translated from the old Persian manuscript," said John excitedly. "Here is the body of the mosque. All these little squares are the prayer rugs of the worshipers. Here in the niche facing the east is the altar. This mixture of peacock tints represents the altar itself, and beneath the altar, so the manuscript says, lie buried these famous emeralds of the great shah."

"Who has been dust these 200 years," solemnly added Billy Blake.

"Peace to his ashes," piously concluded Tom Pike. "By the way, John, what is your idea about discovering these emeralds? You've claimed that the purchase of this rug was only the first step toward making the three of us rich. We've put all our available coin into it. What next?"

"Well, the manuscript says that this famous rug is a replica of the floor of the rose mosque in Tabriz. Unfortunately, there is much discussion as to which of the modern mosques was built upon the old foundation and flooring of the ancient rose mosque. Now that we have the floor plan it is my suggestion that we take the rug to Tabriz with us, and when we find the mosque floor plan that matches up with it, why, we will find some way to burrow down and get those jewels. We'll have to pay something to the government, I suppose."

"Suppose we fail. We will be out our money and the trip we planned."

"Be a sport," said Tom disgustedly. "If we win we can take holidays and holidays. John, I'm with you. When do we sail?"

"The 22d—Prince Joachim," said John promptly.

"Engage my passage, too," groaned Billy.

"Done," said John Fleming, rolling up the rug. "Now, you chaps, clear out. I've got a lot to do in the next three days."

Fourteen days later the three friends and the Tabriz carpet landed in the Persian city and put up at a very indifferent hotel. John Fleming had gained for himself the reputation of being eccentric, for he traveled nowhere without a rolled and strapped steamer rug in his hand. He even appeared at the captain's table with it during the passage, and his plea that he needed it for a foot rest was not entirely acceptable to his table companions.

They did not know that carefully sewed between two steamer rugs was the carpet from Tabriz.

The morning after their arrival in the city they set forth on their search for the rose mosque, whose identity had been lost in many a pillaging and sacking of the city by infidels. Somewhere in the street of Sweet Incense was a rebuilt mosque whose floor would correspond with the pattern of the Tabriz carpet.

It was not until the second day that they stood in a small mosque wedged in between dark gray buildings. John Fleming did not unroll his rug. It was not necessary, for even to the unstudied eyes of Billy Blake and Tom Pike the floor of the edifice was similar in arrangement to that of the silky rug. As they stood there gazing, John Fleming pointing here and there through the gloom, there became visible, through the wear of centuries and the pressure of countless feet, traces of the beautiful marble floor. The altar, which might once have been that famous gem of peacock coloring, had been in a later day of restoration overlaid with gold leaf, but it was there.

"Beneath that, eh?" muttered Billy Blake, drawing a long breath.

"I think so," said John proudly.

"What's your plan now?" growled Tom.

"You two slide out, while I remain behind. I can conceal myself in one of the anterooms until dusk. Then you two return with tools, and I'll let you in. We can remove the altar in a jiffy and have the treasure out and away in no time."

"How about the guard? Isn't there some kind of a watchman on duty here?"

"Hardly. The priests have trouble enough in rounding up the sinners in the daytime. No danger of the rascals haunting the mosque at night. Most of them are drinking sweet coffee in some cafe until morning."

"Very well, John. Pick out your hiding place. Tom and I will go now. There, behind that carved screen in the corner. So long, old chap."

When John Fleming had dodged behind his screen and the footsteps of his friends had died away on the stone floor he saw a shaft of golden light pierce the gloom of the mosque and then vanish. He knew that the door had opened and closed behind the forms of his friends.

Hours passed. People came and went, and at the hour of sunset the place was crowded. A priest went up into the tower, and far below in his place of concealment Fleming heard the whining musical chant of the muezzin call to prayer.

After that all was quiet. He was entirely alone.

When it was dark, the thick, velvety blackness of an Asiatic night, he stepped softly to the outer door and, opening it gently, whistled softly.

A dark figure glided toward him. Lean fingers gripped his throat and choked him into silence. He struggled and tried to cry out, but he was powerless in the grip of a giant.

He was borne back into the mosque, and far away from the entrance in a tiny niche he was set down, and his captor produced a vile smelling oil lantern.

Then it was that Fleming saw his captor was a tall, fanatical looking individual, with a wisp of dirty green silk wound around his disordered head.

"Come to the altar!" hissed the man in French. "You will show me and I will dig for the emeralds of the great shah." He pressed the blade of a knife suggestively against Fleming's throat, and there was nothing to do save to obey.

With ill grace John Fleming consented and, going to the altar, directed its removal as well as the displacement of the great block of stone upon which it stood.

Together they worked in silence, using the rough tools the man had brought with him. When the altar had been removed from its bed of cement they pried up the stone slab beneath it and found nothing but a solid bed of cement.

Then it was that the fanatical priest flew madly at John Fleming and would have killed him had he not been the swifter of the two and managed to outrun his enemy in the dark corners of the mosque. Happily at this moment Billy Blake and Tom Pike appeared, and while John Fleming snatched up his precious roll of rugs they covered his escape to the street and followed him to the hotel.

"Dished!" said Billy Blake, disgustedly thumping the bundle of rugs.

"Say anything you like; I'll take it all!" groaned John, sitting on the edge of his lumpy bed in grim despair.

Tom Pike, who said little, but in his slow and cautious way did much thinking, removed his pipe from his lips and dragged out his suit case.

"I've got inside information that the emeralds of the great shah will be in America when we get there," he said mysteriously. "If you want to be in at the finish come with me and catch the next steamer for home."

It was significant of the subdued mood of the two younger enthusiastic treasure seekers that they merely followed his suggestion.

During the homeward voyage John Fleming did not display the same solicitous care concerning the Tabriz carpet. For him it had lost its value.

"Fellows," he said cautiously, "soon as we're through the customs get a taxi and beat it to John's studio."

Two hours later three excited young men flung themselves from a taxicab and dashed up the stairs to Fleming's studio. Once there, they locked the door and opened wide the closed windows.

"Well, Tom, what is it?" demanded Fleming and Blake in the same breath.

"Unroll your precious rug," said the silent one.

They obeyed, spreading the silky oblong on the dusty floor.

"Find the peacock altar," went on Tom.

"Here it is," said John, his finger on the rich mass of color.

"Take your knife and dig there, John, and I reckon you'll find the emeralds! That's my interpretation of the manuscript."

Ten minutes later three awed young men sat back on their heels and gazed at a handful of large uncut emeralds which they had released from the carefully tied knots of the peacock threads of the rug.

It was quite true. Beneath the skillfully woven pattern of the altar of the rose mosque the great shah had hidden his jewels. It had remained for Tom Pike to discover them.

John Fleming arose and, lifting a bronze laurel wreath from its hook on the wall, carefully placed it on Tom's tow colored hair.

"What next?" he asked gayly.

"I want to make plans for a hunting trip," said Tom Pike mildly.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Adams, the first Vice President and second President of the United States, Franklin street Quincy Adams house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Admission charged.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erected June 17, 1896 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

President Adams Mansion.

Presidents Lane.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Dorothy Q. House.

Hancock street, corner Butler road Quincy, Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Owned by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Open free to the public on Saturdays, from 11 A. M., until 4 P. M Other days admission charged.

Myles Standish Cairn.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept 30, 1621, guided by the Indian Tisquantum.

Myles Standish Spring.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

Squaw Rock.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

CHAPTER IV.

"I am Constance."

SHE ordered coffee and toast while he sat there figuring it out. When the waiter departed he leaned forward and said quite frankly:

"You'll pardon me, I'm sure, but I can't understand how I was so short-sighted as to marry your sister."

"Well, you see, you didn't catch a glimpse of me until after you were married," she railed. "I was in the Sacred Heart convent, you remember."

"Ah, that explains the oversight. I am considered an unusually discriminating person. Let me see: I married a Miss Fowler, didn't I?"

"Yes, Roxbury—four years ago in London, at St. George's, in Hanover square, at 4 o'clock on a Saturday. Didn't they tell you all that?"

"I don't think they said anything about it being 4 o'clock. I'm glad to know the awful details, believe me. Thanks! Do you know I decided you were an American the instant I saw you in the door," he went on, quite irrelevantly.

"How clever of you, Roxbury!"

"Oh, I say, Miss Fowler, I'm not such an ass as I look—really I'm not. I'm trying to look like"—

"'Sh! If you want me to believe you are not the ass you think you look be careful what you say. Remember I am not Miss Fowler to you. I am Constance—sometimes Connie. Can you remember that, Roxbury?"

He drew a long breath. "Oh, I say, Connie, I'd much rather be plain Brock to you."

"Please don't forget that I am doing this for my sister, not for myself by any manner of means," she said stiffly. He flushed painfully, conscious of the rebuke.

"Please overlook my faults for the time being," he said. "I'll do better. You see, I've been rather overcome by the sense of my own importance. I'm not used to being the head of an establishment. It has dazed me. A great many things have happened to me since I left the Gare de l'Est last night." He was considerate in not referring to his unhappy mode of traveling. "For instance, I've completely lost my head." He might have said that, but that would have sounded commonplace and earthy.

"One does, you know, when he loses his identity," she said sympathetically. "Edith says you are ripping and all that sort of thing," she went on hurriedly, in perfect mimicry. "You come very highly recommended as a brother-in-law."

"Are you to be with us until the end of the play?"

"Yes. The Rodneys are my friends, not Edith's. Katherine Rodney was in the convent with me. We see a great deal of each other. I'm sure you will like her. Everybody falls dreadfully in love with her."

"How very amiable of you to permit it," he protested gallantly. "I'm sure I shall enjoy falling in love. Which reminds me that I've never had a sister-in-law. They're very nice, I'm told. It's odd that Medcroft didn't tell me about you. Would you mind advancing a bit of general information about yourself—and, may I say, about my family in general? It may come handy."

"I feel as though I had known you for years," she said, frankly returning his gaze. She leaned forward, her elbows on the table, her chin in her hands. "I'm merely Edith's sister. We live in Paris—that is, father and I. I'm three years younger than Edith. Of course you know how old your wife is, so we won't dwell upon that. You don't? Then I'd demand it of her. I haven't been in Philadelphia since I was seven, and that's ages ago. I have no mother, and father is off in South America on business. So you see little sister has to tag after big sister. Oh!" She interrupted the recital with an abrupt change of manner. "I'm so sorry you've finished your coffee. Now you'll have to go. Roxbury always does."

"But I haven't finished," he exclaimed eagerly. "I'm going to have three or four more pots. You have no idea how"—

"It's all right, then," she said, with her rarest and most confident smile. "Well, Edith asked me to come to London for the season. The Rodneys were in Paris at the time, however, and they asked me to join them for a fortnight in the Tyrol. When I said that I was off for a visit with the—with you, I mean—they insisted that you all should come too. They are connections in a way, don't you see? So we invented. And here we are."

"You don't, by any chance, happen to be engaged to be married, or anything of that sort?" he ventured. "Don't crush me! It's only as a safeguard, you know. People may ask questions."

"You are not obliged to answer them, Roxbury," she said. The flush had deepened in her cheek. It convinced him that she was in love—and engaged. He experienced a queer sinking of the heart. "You can say that you don't know, if any one should be so rude as to ask." Suddenly she caught her breath and stared at him in a sort of panic. "Heavens!" she whispered,

"Heavens, you're not, by any chance, engaged, are you?"

the toast poised half way to her lips, "you're not, by any chance, engaged, are you? Appalling thought!"

He laughed delightedly. "People won't ask about me, my dear Constance. I'm already married, you know. But if any one should ask you're not obliged to answer."

She looked troubled and uncertain. "You may be really married, after all," she speculated. "Who knows? Poor old Roxbury wouldn't have had the tact to inquire."

"I'm a henpecked bachelor, believe me."

For the next quarter of an hour they chatted in the liveliest, most inconsequential fashion, getting on excellent terms with each other and arriving at a fair sense of appreciation of what lay ahead of them in the shape of peril and adventure.

She was the most delightful person he had ever met as well as being the most beautiful. There was a sprightly, ever growing air of self reliance about her that charmed and reassured him. She possessed the capacity for divining the sane and the ridiculous with splendid discrimination. Moreover, she could jest and be serious with an impartial intelligence that gratified his vanity without in the least inspiring the suspicion that she was merely clever. He became blissfully imbued with the idea that she had surprised herself by the discovery that he was really quite attractive. In fact, he was quite sincerely pleased with himself—for which he may be pardoned if one stops to think how resourceful a woman of tact may be if she is very, very pretty.

And, by way of further analogy, Brock was a thoroughly likable chap, besides being handsome and a thoroughbred to the core. It's not betraying a secret to affirm, coldbloodedly, that Miss Fowler had not allied herself with the enterprise until after she had pinned Roxbury down to facts concerning Brock's antecedents. She was properly relieved to find that he came of a fine old family and that he had led more than one cotillion in New York.

He experienced a remarkable change of front in respect to Roxbury Medcroft before the breakfast was over. It may have been due to the spell of her eyes or to the call of her voice, but it remains an unchallenged fact that he no longer thought of Medcroft as a stupid bungler. Instead he had come to regard him as a good and irreproachable Samaritan. All of which goes to prove that a divinity shapes our ends, rough hew them how we may.

NEWSY BRIEFS

But two weeks more of vacation for the schools. The fall term opens Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Miss Beal who has been nurse for Mrs. Lackey of Newbury avenue for the last three years, has gone to Nova Scotia for three months.

Ralph Risque, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Risque of Billings street, is recovering from infantile paralysis without any bad effects from the disease.

H. Arthur Smith of North street has gone to Arlington, New Jersey where he has accepted a position with a large manufacturing concern.

A strong attraction at the Kincaide Theatre beginning at Monday's matinee is Torelli's Dog and Pony Circus. The ponies are the admiration of the ladies and the delight of the children while the men will be greatly amused by the droll doings of Bessie "the funniest mule that kicks."

It seems too bad that some of the lot owners in our cemetery do not take better care of their property. We have a beautiful cemetery, but a few unkept plots spoils the whole appearance. Same means should be devised to compel all owners to have their lots under perpetual care.

SEVERAL NEW HOUSES.

..Inspector of Buildings Warren S. Parker issued the following building permits this week.

Elizabeth A. Morrissey, dwelling, Euclid avenue.

Boyden & Smart, dwelling, Staunton street.

BUMPER PEACH CROP

Connecticut Will Lead Country In That Fruit This Year

Glastonbury, Conn., Aug. 16.—No Connecticut peach crop was ever more fitly called a bumper crop than that which has just begun to be picked.

J. H. Hale, perhaps the leading peach grower of the country, says that Connecticut is leading the country this year in peaches and will ship thousands of baskets to other markets, especially to the Boston and New York markets.

This year Glastonbury will ship around 100,000 baskets and the quality is superior. The Hale orchards in Seymour will yield a complete crop, from 12,000 to 15,000 baskets. The recent drouth has had little or no effect on the fruit's quantity or quality.

INSANE PATIENT KILLED

Dalton Woman Fatally Injured In Worcester Asylum

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 16.—Mrs. Ida Crane, an inmate of the Worcester state asylum for the insane, who was committed from Dalton, was fatally beaten by another patient Tuesday. She died the followin day.

The death of Mrs. Crane, who was 61 years of age, was made known by the authorities of the asylum yesterday, but they refused to disclose the identity of her assailant.

Medical Examiner E. N. Hunt held an autopsy and found that death was due to a fracture of the skull. The jawbone also was broken.

It was said that Mrs. Crane was seated in a hallway, where an insane woman was mopping the floor. The latter suddenly attacked her with the mop handle, striking her over the head and face.

WARSHIPS WILL GO TO PACIFIC COAST

To Pass Through Canal After Official Opening

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16.—The men of the United States navy have an interesting program of travel before them within the next six months, as developed in a discussion of plans for the Atlantic battleship fleet by Secretary of the Navy Daniels during a visit of inspection at the naval training station here.

The entire fleet is to be sent through the Panama canal after the cut has been officially opened, Secretary Daniels said, and the battleships may make a short voyage on the Pacific coast immediately following. But the secretary took occasion to deny that there is, or ever has been, any intention by the navy department to divide the present Atlantic fleet between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts following the completion of the canal.

3,000 MILES OF TIES.

Some idea of what the maintenance of a railroad's line means may be gathered from the fact that in the year just passed a total of 1,983,296 new ties have been laid on the New York, New Haven and Hartford system. In the previous year the number of ties laid was 1,649,231. The 1,983,296 ties laid last year, if placed end to end, would reach across the continent.

The average life of an untreated railroad tie has been estimated by some authorities to be about seven years. While the deterioration of a cross tie is due in part to the wear of the rails, about 75 per cent, of it is caused by the decay of the wood itself. To prevent this decay a method has been devised of treating ties with a creasote preparation, which, it is now estimated will insure them against decay for a period of twenty-five years or more.

The New Haven some time ago decided to replace all worn out ties on its four-track main line between New Haven and Woodlawn and on the six-track Harlem River branch from New Rochelle to the Harlem River with creosoted ties exclusively, and in the year just passed there has been laid on this portion of its system a total of 123,672 such ties. This was almost twice as many as were laid in the previous year. This is the main stem of the system and has by far the heaviest traffic.

Not only have creosoted ties been used exclusively to replace old ties on this part of the line, but, as part of the same programme, wherever the new ties have been laid the latest and most improved method of fastening the rails to the ties has been resorted to, namely, that of using tie plates and screw spikes. The tie plate is a bed of steel upon which the rail rests instead of being fastened directly to the tie itself. The old method was to drive spikes into the tie to hold the rail in lace. Now holes are first bored in the ties and then the new kind of steel spikes are screwed into the tie through holes in the tie plat.

Recent experiments have demonstrated that, while more expensive, there is no more durable form of construction than this, and that it is almost impossible for rails so fastened to become loosened. The fact that on the New Haven's main line between New York and New Haven 181,600 new ties to which rails have been fastened in this manner have been laid within the last two years is fairly indicative to the present character of the great steel highway that unites New England with New York.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. # LESLIE WITHDRAWS A CANDIDATE

Ex-Representative Sandberg Is Drafted At Last Moment to Fill Vacancy

Sullivan and Piper Will Have No Opposition

Up to 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon it was supposed that Representative William J. Leslie would be a candidate for Representative from the Sixth Norfolk district. He had taken out nomination papers and had them all signed but at the twelfth hour decided he would not run. There had been rumors all day that he would not file his papers but it was not until 3 o'clock that official word was received from him that he was going to keep out of it.

This made it look for a few minutes as though the Republican nomination for Representative in this district would go by default. Councilman Edward J. Sandberg was in City Hall when the message came and he immediately took out papers and five minutes later was on his way to Wollaston to have them signed. He succeeded in getting the required number of signatures and filed the papers before the time expired at 5 o'clock.

City Clerk Crane kept his office open until 5 o'clock and was busy all the afternoon checking up papers. There were a large number filed for different candidates and it was a hard job.

Councilman Sandberg will be opposed in the Sixth district by Horace W. Richmond, Progressive, and Cornelius M. Duggan, Democrat.

In Fifth Norfolk district the race is between ex-Representative Watler E. Piper, Republican and Representative Michael T. Sullivan, Democrat as neither will have opposition for the nomination. The Progressives did not file any papers for Representative in this district.

A merry fight however is on for the Senatorial nomination both among the Republicans and Democrats. For the Republican nomination papers were filed by ex-Representative Louis F. R. Langelier of Atlantic and by ex-Representative William R. Thomas of Ward One.

For the Democratic nomination there is to be a three cornered fight, for papers have been filed by John J. McDevitt of Quincy, David J. Murray of Hyde Park, and James A. Shea of Milton. The Progressive candidate for the office is L. P. Winchenbaugh of Hyde Park.

Four are seeking the Democratic nomination for District Attorney for Norfolk and Plymouth Counties. They are Thomas Buttimer of Hingham, John P. Vahey of Plymouth, William J. Good of Randolph and Eugene F. O'Neil of Brockton. There is no opposition among Republicans to Mr. Baker the present District Attorney for renomination.

In addition to the above, papers were also filed for Republican, Democratic and Progressive candidates for

LOUIS F. R. LANGELIER
Candidate for Senator.

Governor and other state officers.

The Progressives also filed papers for Frederick H. Bishop for Councillor from the Second district. The Democratic candidate for this office is Edward O. Skelton of Boston.

For Registrar of Probate, J. Raphael McCoole and Alonzo B. Cook have filed papers for the Republican nomination. Mr. McCoole has also filed papers for the Progressive nomination.

EDWARD J. SANDBERG.
Candidate for Representative.

Dr. Everett M. Bowker filed Republican and Jeremiah O'Leary Democratic papers for County Commissioner, and

JOHN J. McDEVITT.
Candidate for Senator.

In all 99 papers were filed Saturday. This however, does not include all papers filed for some were filed several days ago and were examined and certified to and returned at that time.

There is considerable feeling in Wollaston over the action of Representative Leslie in withdrawing his papers at the eleventh hour many believing that citizens of the ward did not have a fair show and did not give other possible candidates an opportunity to enter the contest for the nomination.

MICHAEL T. SULLIVAN

In the matter of delegates to the state convention and ward committees the Republicans and Democrats filed full sets of papers in all wards. The Progressives however ,only filed delegates to the state convention papers in Wards One and Five and Ward Committee only in these wards.

WILLIAM R. THOMAS.
Candidate for Senator.

WALTER E. PIPER.
Candidate for Representative.

SHOOTING WILL PROBABLY RESULT FATALLY

Atavia Rizzio the Victim of Michael Russo Who Made Good His Escape

Deed Commited to Avenge Insult to His Girl

Atavia Rizzio of 38 Water street is dying at the Quincy Hospital from two bullet wounds and the police are searching for Michael Russo of 22 Granite street who is named as the man firing the shots. The assault occured about 8.30 Sunday evening while Rizzio, accompanied by a companion, was walking under the Granite street bridge.

Salvatore Marinelli and the wounded man were walking along Russo stepped out of the darkness and asked "What are wou doing here?" According to Marinelli he drew a revolver and fired three shots at Rizzio, two of which took effect.

The scene of the shooting is not far from City Square, but very few people were about. The news spread rapidly however, and a crowd gathered at the spot. Among those attracted was Officer Daniel Ford who found Marinelli trying to administer first aid to Rizzio who had fallen to the street.

Both men were taken to the station and Dr. Ash was summoned. He found that one bullet entered Rizzio at the naval and had ploughed through to the bowels and that the other had lodged in the buttock. A third bullet went wild.

Rizzio was removed to the Hospital and Drs. Hunting, Sargent and Bartlett after locating the bullets did not attempt to remove them because of the weakened condition of the man and their dangerous location. Rizzio was not expected to live through the night. Meagre hopes are held out for his living the day out.

Capt. MacKay and Inspector Goodhue were called out of bed and assigned to the case. They called at the boarding house of Russo but he was not at home. They later learned that he had called at the house of his father-in-law at South Boston.

Russo is described as 5 ft. 6 in. in height, weighs about 140 pounds, dark complexioned and wore when last seen dark gray trousers, black and white checked shirt and russet oxford shoes.

Mrs. Brown, with whom Russo boarded told the police that Rizzio and Marinelli had walked up and down Granite street opposite her home, several times during the day. She said that she had not witnessed the shooting Through an interpreter Marinelli said that while under the bridge the man supposed to be Russo stepped up and asked "What do you mean by insulting my girl? I am going to kill you."

Rizzio, when told late Sunday night at the hospital that he was likely to die refused to make any statement, merely remarking, "That's too bad."

At the City Hospital this noon it was said that Rizzio who was shot Sunday by Michael Russo was resting comfortably. No clew has been obtained as yet as to Russo's whereabouts.

To The Wearer of White Flannel Trousers

YOU know that it is almost impossible to keep flannel trousers from soiling. WE know that they are difficult to cleanse; still, if the stains on them can be removed by any known cleansing process, our method will surely make them look like new. Nearly all flannel trousers require more than one treatment to remove the different kinds of stains on them. At Warshaw's they are not limited to any one process; we do everything possible to make them clean. The new-like finish given them by our experienced pressmen brings out that standard of quality—"The Warshaw Crease;" it lasts.

This month we are cleansing and pressing MEN'S BUSINESS SUITS for $1.50; it's a discount of 25 per cent. Women's plain suits (linen, white or fancy suits not included) for $2; regular price $2.50 and $3.00.

ITALIANS CELEBRATE

Grand Parade Sunday and Outing Today with Fireworks

Italians from all sections of Massachusetts flocked to Quincy Sunday to assist the local society of St. Rocco Della Croce in its observance of the feast day of its patron, St. Rocco. The celebration commenced at 1.30 and consisted of a street parade, a grand reception at Electa anl Protection halls and open house all over the city. The festivities continue today and close with a fireworks display at Merrymount park this evening.

The parade consisted of five hundred men, many in uniform, and the route was Hancock, Water, Quincy avenue, Scammell, Sumner, Washington streets, to Electa hall. In the line of march was The Star of Italy sharpshooters of Boston, the Sons of Italy Society of Brockton, the Society of Santa Maria del Carmine of Malden and the local organization. The Malden military band preceded the parade headed by a platoon of police, Sergt. Bishop, commanding.

Among the most notable guests of the day was Sig. Antonio di Fabrizio president of the Brockton society, who wore a medal of honor awarded him by King Umberto III of Italy for bravery on the field of battle during the Abysian war. Others present were Sig. Vito Tenori of Boston, president of the sharpshooters, and Sig. Guisippe Tucci president of the Malden society.

Most of the men in military uniform are veterans of Italian wars, having seen service in the Garibaldian revolution, Abysinian and Tripolitan wars.

A liberal supply of refreshments awaited the return of the paraders and the good time continued until 9 o'clock The heat was oppressive but the ardor and religious patriotism of the hardy Latins was not diminished. Speeches of religious significance were delivered by Sig. Nunzfo Fiaelle and Sig. Vito Tonori of the local committee. They were assisted by Sig. Tony Petta.

KINGSBURY AND PHELAN

Will Run for Cup and the Championship

The all important question of the 440 yard championship of the city, claimed by Fred Kingsbury and Fay Phelan jointly, will be settled at the picnic of the Young Men's Hebrew Association at New Downer Landing on Labor Day.

At the Fourth of July games the event was the most important on the card, outside of the mile which went to Allen Connor. Dr. J. Gardner Smith after the judges disagreed, declared the race a tie, but a wide disagreement prevailed in favor of both men amongst the fans. Phelan renounced his claim to first and the award of the cup to Kingsbury followed. He accepted believing he had won and since then has been anxious to satisfy himself.

Phelan was in the same frame of mind and the match was quickly arranged. Neither man was in good condition on the holiday, but will be O K for the picnic. A loving cup has been offered the winner, in addition to the title of 440 yard champ.

JUMPED FROM CAR.

Mrs. Anna Mimiskern of 169 Willard street was injured Saturday night when she jumped from a car at Brewer's corner when a controler fuse blew out. The car was moving quite rapidly at the time and when the fuse blew out there was a report like a pistol shot. Mrs. Mimiskern with a scream leaped from the car and landed in a heap. Several other women on the car were badly frightened, but no one else was injured. The injured woman was severely bruised and shaken up. She was taken to her home in the police ambulance.

QUINCY'S HIGH RATE.

There is another reason why Quincy's tax limit should not be increased, and that is because her tax rate is the largest city rate in Massachusetts. It is a serious reflection on our Mayors and Councilmen when they are unable to finance the city as well as other cities.

If Quincy's net debt was being reduced each year, the criticism might not be warranted, but the Daily Ledger has already shown that the debt of the city is increasing rapidly.

Our tax rate in 1912 was $22 per $1000, and we believe it to be a fact that no other Massachusetts city had so large a rate. It was a record breaker for Quincy.

Since Quincy became a city in 1889 the rates have been:

| Year | Mayor | Rate |
|---|---|---|
| 1889 | Mayor Porter | $10.80 |
| 1890 | Mayor Porter | 13.60 |
| 1891 | Mayor Fairbanks | 13.60 |
| 1892 | Mayor Fairbanks | 16.00 |
| 1893 | Mayor Fairbanks | 15.80 |
| 1894 | Mayor Hodges | 17.60 |
| 1895 | Mayor Hodges | 16.80 |
| 1896 | Mayor Adams | 17.40 |
| 1897 | Mayor Adams | 18.80 |
| 1898 | Mayor Sears | 18.00 |
| 1899 | Mayor Keith | 19.20 |
| 1900 | Mayor Hall | 18.20 |
| 1901 | Mayor Hall | 17.60 |
| 1902 | Mayor Bryant | 17.40 |
| 1903 | Mayor Bryant | 17.30 |
| 1904 | Mayor Bryant | 18.00 |
| 1905 | Mayor Thompson | 18.30 |
| 1906 | Mayor Thompson | 18.60 |
| 1907 | Mayor Thompson | 19.70 |
| 1908 | Mayor Shea | 20.50 |
| 1909 | Mayor Shea | 20.40 |
| 1910 | Mayor Shea | 20.00 |
| 1911 | Mayor Shea | 19.50 |
| 1912 | Mayor Stone | 22.00 |

The tax rate of Quincy for 1913 is unknown, but every prediction puts it higher than in 1912. Some say $23.00 and some as high as $24.00.

There are 33 cities in Massachusetts and 20 have reported their tax rates for 1913. None of these exceed $21.80 as will be seen below:

| | 1913. | 1912. |
|---|---|---|
| Salem | $20.50 | $18.00 |
| Lynn | 20.00 | 19.40 |
| Lawrence | 18.00 | 17.60 |
| Springfield | 15.80 | —— |
| Chelsea | 21.80 | 21.40 |
| Fall River | 20.30 | 19.40 |
| Lowell | 19.40 | 19.00 |
| Everett | 21.00 | 19.70 |
| Melrose | 20.40 | 20.40 |
| Somerville | 19.80 | 18.80 |
| Malden | 19.20 | 19.20 |
| Haverhill | 19.00 | 19.20 |
| Cambridge | 20.40 | 20.40 |
| Marlboro | 21.90 | 21.00 |
| Waltham | 17.30 | 15.90 |
| Woburn | 20.50 | 21.20 |
| Medford | 19.00 | 18.00 |
| Gloucester | 19.40 | 19.40 |
| Fitchburg | 20.00 | —— |
| Taunton | 20.00 | 19.80 |

The general law relative to tax limit has been $12, and there have been only two or three exceptions allowed.

Considering these dangerous conditions in many factories and the frequent fire horrors, it is felt that the inspectors should be required to visit these places once a year and smoke a good cigar with the proprietor.

It is said that the New York harbor forts are unable to protect the city, but since Costa Rica signed the peace treaty the folks down that way are breathing easier.

A great many women are becoming farmers, and it is feared that they will spend too much time digging in the dirt instead of acquiring information on the town curbstones.

When all the factories shut down at noon the other day for the luncheon hour, Wall street felt great alarm and prices ran off from one to three points.

Many cities are announcing high tax rates, in spite of the fact that they can still borrow money.

THAW SAFE OUT OF NEW YORK

Murderer of Stanford White Flees From Matteawan

PLOT CAREFULLY CARRIED OUT

Noted Prisoner Fells Guard, Jumps Into Taxicab and Later Leaps Into Big Automobile, Which Speeds Away Toward Connecticut State Line—No Semblance of Hitch In Details

Matteawan, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Harry K. Thaw escaped from Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane by throwing a gateman to the ground as he opened a door to admit a worker and then leaping into a taxicab outside and speeding away toward the Connecticut state line.

A quarter of a mile down the road Thaw abandoned the taxicab while it was ging at a high rate of speed and leaped into a big six cylinder Packard touring car, which had been waiting for him.

With the taxicab trailing, the Packard speeded away at the rate of eighty miles an hour. Four men beside the chauffeurs of the two cars were involved in the escape.

Convinced that the escape was the development of a carefully laid plot engineered by Thaw and his family, the authorities of the institution have offered a reward of $500 for his capture and have suspended a keeper named Barnum. Dr. Kieb expressed the belief in offering the reward that Thaw was enabled to escape by assisance given him by guards.

Ten minutes after Thaw escaped scores of automobiles were on his trail along the route the big Packard followed, but not one of the pursuing cars could develop more than sixty miles an hour at the most.

They followed, though, hoping that a blowout or an accident might make it necessary for the big car to stop. It is believed that the conspirators ordered the taxicab to follow that it might pick Thaw up and carry him across the state line into Connecticut in case of an accident.

Once over the line into Connecticut Thaw is immune from arrest so far as the Stanford White murder is concerned, and even if the authorities should apprehend him on some pretext he could not be extradited. There is no clause in the extradition law, according to legal experts, covering Thaw's case. Outside of New York he will be able to enjoy perfect freedom.

The presence of the taxicab at the gate at the moment Thaw threw the guard to one side and sprang out, the Packard automobile down the street and other incidents of the escape made it obvious, Kieb said, that the slayer of Stamford White escaped as the result of a plot and that some of the employes were among the arch conspirators.

As Danbury is about the nearest point to Matteawan on the Connecticut state line the authorities are positive that Thaw and his friends reached there in less than thirty minutes.

David Belasco could hardly have staged a drama with better finesse than the aids of Thaw arranged his escape. There was no semblance of a hitch in the details which dove-tailed with perfection. It was all accomplished in a few seconds. By the time the guard at the gate had recovered himself the taxicab was speeding away with Thaw and two friends inside.

Thaw made his getaway at 7:45 Sunday morning. His actions up to the time of his escape conveyed no intimation that a plot for his escaping was on foot and about to be realized. After his breakfast Thaw went with the others out into the yard to exercise before going to the morning service in the asylum chapel. He walked around the yard by himself apparently unconcerned and cool and collected.

From 7:30 o'clock until the moment of his escape fifteen minutes later, Thaw confined his walking to an area within a short distance of the gate.

Presently a taxicab drew up at the door. It contained two well dressed men. Neither made an effort to speak to the gateman. They remained at the side of the machine and conversed with the driver, who had his engine running at the time.

At 7:45 o'clock, an employe of the institution appeared at the gate and gave the necessary signal for admission. The gate was opened. Whether this employe presented himself there at the psychological minute as a part of the plot is yet to be determined. At any rate his appearance at such a moment was considered a coincidence.

As the door opened the gatekeeper was hurled away from it by Thaw, who then emerged through the opening and literally threw himself into the machine as his companions held the door open. They were climbing in when the chauffeur started. The door was swinging open as he started down the road. The gatekeeper ran out and shouted but he had to slam the gate immediately, fearing that others would get out.

Because of the reports which were circulated at the time of the Russell-Anhut-Thaw scandal that a plot had been on foot for the escape of Thaw, Dr. Kieb, who was appointed superintendent of the asylum June 6 as the successor of Dr. Russell, took every precaution to prevent just what happened.

There had been several reports that Thaw had attempted to escape before, but emphatic denials had been made.

Thaw on a Yacht?

South Norwalk, Conn., Aug. 18.—It was learned last night that for two hours yesterday afternoon a large steam yacht was anchored opposite Roton Point, about half a mile off shore. She was said to be the Matchgard II. of New York. She steamed east late in the afternoon.

It is not a common thing for yachts to anchor at that point, and for this reason the incident attracted attention.

Police Guard Evelyn Thaw

New York, Aug. 18.—Uniformed police stood guard at every entrance to the hotel where Evelyn N. Thaw is staying. Always fearful of her husband, she showed her terror to a marked degree on learning that he was at large. Her mother, Mrs. Charles J. Holman, was frightened even more than she and urged Mrs. Thaw to go into seclusion until Thaw is found.

"One thing is certain," said Mrs. Thaw, "Harry won't stay in hiding long. He'll be heard from soon. A few drinks make him a raving madman, and when that happens he'll head straight for New York. He's crazy to get here and he won't be able to stay away."

Mother Glad Over Escape

New York, Aug. 18.—Harry K. Thaw's mother, Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, did not attempt to conceal her satisfaction over her son's escape when talking with reporters at a hotel here. "If this means that Harry is going off, that he is getting away entirely—I am not sorry," she exclaimed, when informed by her daughter, Mrs. George Carnegie, who was the first of the family here to receive the news.

GERMAN MURDERER LED TO THE BLOCK

No Sign of Repentance as His Head Is Lopped Off

Berlin, Aug. 18.—August Sternickel, the most notorious German criminal of modern times, was beheaded with an axe in accordance with the Prussian method of capital punishment, at Frankfort-on-the-Oder, near Berlin.

The particular crime for which Sternickel was executed was the murder of a farmer, his wife, and maidservant. But he confessed to another murder two years ago, and had been practically convicted of a third. Several unexplained murders in various parts of the country are now laid at his door.

He went to the block thoroughly impenitent, having refused the consolation of a priest and laughed ironically at the suggestion of confession.

Sunday Drowning Accidents

Herbert Siegel, aged 17, of Medway, Mass., was drowned in the Charles river.

William Brown of Worcester, 41, was drowned in Lake Quinsigamond.

Oscar Randall, 31, was drowned in Portsmouth harbor.

Horace P. Dodge of Beverly, Mass., aged 27, was drowned in Beaver pond.

Wife Slayer Dies of Wounds

Norwich, Conn., Aug. 18.—Albert A. Rogers, aged 82, who had lived with his wife in contentment for more than sixty years, and who shot and killed her during a moment of temporary insanity, died from wounds which he inflicted upon himself at the time.

WAITING FOR HUERTA'S REPLY

Mexican Head Carefully Considering Lind's Note

CONCESSIONS ARE PROPOSED

More Hopeful Feeling In Washington Because of Progress Made by Envoy In His Delicate Mission—Constitutionalists Watch For News

Washington, Aug. 18.—The Mexican situation continues apparently unchanged, with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan awaiting the Huerta government's reply to the preliminary note delivered by John Lind to Foreign Minister Gamboa, outlining the position of the United States. Bryan let it be known that he expects no answer for several days.

The presentment Lind has made is understood to be only of a preliminary character. The delivery of supplementary communications will depend entirely upon the reception the Mexican government accords the first communication. This is now under careful consideration, a fact regarded as of the utmost promise for the ultimate success of the negotiations.

It is understood that while there is nothing in the nature of a demand for the withdrawal of Huerta from the presidency or arbitrary fixing of a date for a general election, there is nevertheless a distinct intimation of the administration's belief that some concession should be made by the Huerta government to terminate the insurrection and insure the ascendancy of a truly popular government.

If these fundamentals are accepted the way will be open for conferences to define the means by which the desired results could be brought about.

The fact that Lind has established relations with the Huerta government through Gamboa, following reported declarations which almost threatened deportation of Wilson's personal representative, leads officials here to take a more hopeful view of the situation.

Representatives of the constitutionalists here are watching developments with keenest interest. If Huerta is disposed to accept that part of the American proposal looking to elections, that element may come into the negotiations.

As the Mexican constitution prohibits the holding of a general election during a period of insurrection, to comply with Wilson's desire for a free and fair election something would be done to induce the constitutionalists to consent to a truce.

So far, it is stated officially, the administration here has had no communication directly with the constitutionalists.

SAM RICHARDS' FEAT

Swims to Boston Light and Return In Thirteen Hours

Boston, Aug. 18.—Sam Richards of Boston set up a new long distance record for Boston harbor when he swam to Boston light and returned in thirteen hours and nine minutes yesterday. Richards reached the beacon in six hours and thirty-four minutes.

Richards was in great condition when he finished the long ordeal, and he walked up the incline unaided. The wind was against him all the way back, and off Long island he encountered a nasty chop. Despite the handicap the Boston natator continued to plow his way, and was rewarded for his hurculean efforts by setting up a record which should stand for years.

The last four hours of the swim were negotiated in almost complete darkness. Richards used the English overarm stroke all the way and never faltered.,

BRIDGE COLLAPSES

Forty Church Paraders Rescued After a Plunge Into River

Youngstown, O., Aug. 18.—Forty men, women and children were thrown into eight feet of water in the Mahoning river here when a footbridge which had replaced the Division street bridge, washed out in the spring floods, collapsed.

The heroic rescue work of onlookers who came to their aid in boats and of seyeral of those in the water prevented any drownings.

The persons precipitated into the river were members of an Italian Catholic church who were celebrating a feast day with a parade.

CLAIM OVER $1,000,000

New York, Aug. 18.—Edwin Gould and William N. Cromwell started separate suits in the supreme court against F. A. Heinze, the copper magnate, for sums aggregating more than $1,000,000.

Each suit is based on promissory notes alleged by the plaintiffs to have been given by Heinze.

HELD FOR BREAKING.

Edward M. Sweeney was arrested by the Dorchester police at Dorchester on Saturday, for Capt. McKay of the Quincy police, by whom he was wanted on a warrant charging him with breaking and entering the premises of Arthur Ballou on Rogers street Thursday morning. Mrs. Ballou had gone to the ice chest for milk for her baby when she saw a man in the house. An examination showed that entrance had been gained by unfastening the catch on a piazza window. A description was obtained of the party by Patrick Canavan, a night watchman, who it is said recognized the man as a Dorchester party. A warrant was issued and his arrest followed. In court he was held in $1,000 until Aug. 28.

ASSAULT WITH ICE PICK.

Francisco Di Ciserio was arrested by Officer Dahlberg Saturday night for assault on Herbert F. Caldwell with an ice pick. Caldwell, who drives for the Meadow Brook Ice Co., delivered Di-Ceserio a piece o ice, who complained of the size of the piece and during the argument which followed it is alleged that he struck Caldwell several times with an ice pick. Fortunately Caldwell was not seriously injured. DiCiserio was araigned in court and the case continued until Wednesday.

MOTORCYCLE RUNS INTO CAR

John Dixon the Rider Is Seriously Injured

John Dixon of 20 Broadway was seriously injured Saturday afternoon when he ran his motorcycle into a passing street car on Washington street near the corner of Broadway. A heavily loaded Nantasket car was bowling along toward Quincy Point, and according to passengers on the car, the motorman was sounding his bell. When passing the corner of Broadway Dixon came out of the street on his motorcycle. He evidently did not see the car until too late to stop for the first thing the passengers knew was when he banged into the car. He was thrown several feet and cut about the head. The front wheel of the motorcycle was smashed and a long strip was torn from the side of the car.

As the passengers saw that an accident was unavoidable the women set up a scream giving the impression that several had been injured. Dixon however was the only person injured. He was taken to the office of Dr. E. H. Bushnell by the crew of the car where his injuries were dressed and he was then taken to his home. The motorcycle was badly wrecked. No blame for the accident is attached to the car crew.

DISTRICT COURT.

Edward M. Sweeney was arraigned for breaking and entering at Quincy and was held in $1,000 until Aug. 28.

Francisco DiCiserio was arraigned for assault on Herbert F. Caldwell at Quincy. Case continued until Wednesday.

Nicholas Koury, Boular Koury and Simon Abe were fined $1 each on account of costs for being present at a game on the Lord's day.

Michael Zelenk was fined $5, Henry Jarwala $5, Dennis Shugue $5, Matthew Keenan $5, Edward Madden $15 for drunkenness at Quincy and Patrick Glossa $5 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

ON THE LORD'S DAY.

Officers Dhoogs and Thorn arrested three young men for ploying dominoes on the Lord's day and three others for being present at a game Sunday morning in a house on Germain avenue. The men arrested for playing were: Simon Abe, Abe George and Abraham Ayeez while the men arrested for being present were Galil Ealim, Boular Koury and Nicholas Koury. In court Simon Abe, Boular Koury and Nicholas Koury were fined $1 on account of Costs. The other men were discharged.

TAX RATE NOT READY

Will Probably Be Announced Tomorrow in Ledger

It was announced by the Assessors on Saturday that the tax rate for 1913 would be given to the press Monday morning, that the citizens might have the rate before the public hearing tonight on the tax limit.

This morning however, for some reason, there was a change of program, for Mayor Stone announced that the rate would not be given out until Tuesday morning. This means that the citizens who attend tonight's public hearing will not be able to use this year's rate in their argument against raising the tax limit.

The general sentiment of the citizens who have given the matter any study is that the $12 limit is plenty high. That while if the limit was raised the several departments would have more money in the annual budget, it would mean just so much more to be raised by taxation later on, and that the increase would be found in the tax rate.

That the rate this year will be considerably higher than last year is a foregone conclusion, and it would not be surprising if it was considerably over $23. Mayor Stone said this morning that he was preparing a statement which he desired to give out with the tax rate, which is probably the reason why it is held up for another day.

MRS. JOHN IRWIN.

Mrs. Nora Irwin, wife of John Irwin Foster street, and a sister of Rev. Fr. Thomas Hayes of Milo, Maine, died this morning, aged about 47 years. Early in October, Mrs. Irwin had a shock and despite the efforts of physicians she continued to fail. She took a bad turn Sunday evening and died suddenly this morning.

Mrs. Irwin was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hayes and was a respected resident of this city. She leaves a husband, and family of nine children, consisting of Mary, John, James, Howard, Harold, Joseph, Patrick, George and Thomas.

She is also survived by five sisters, Mrs. George Faircloth of Schenectady, N. Y., Miss Margaret Hayes of Boston, Mrs. Bridget Dunn, Mrs. John Byron and Miss Elizabeth Hayes of Quincy and four brothers, Rev. Fr. Thomas Hayes, Joseph, John and Thomas Hayes of Quincy.

TRIED TO GET HIS GOAT

So Declares a Brooks Avenue Man at Police Station

It fell to the lot of Reserve Officer Joseph Delorey, who is covering the South Quincy beat to make a humorous report to headquarters Saturday night. It was:

"Mr. Cellucci of 49 Brooks avenue reports that somebody tried to get his goat."

Officer Delorey who is a regular motorman in the employ of the Bay State street railway is known as a man who seldom uses slang and the officials were puzzled at first to learn if he was indulging in horned metaphors of the vernacular of the day. An investigation showed that he was literally correct in reporting verbatim as Mr. Cellucci asked him to.

Antonio Cellucci, to be fully correct, does own a goat. It is the pride of the family, and when the owner found someone trying to get it he became angered and drove the intruder off. In other words, the man did "get his goat."

A later visit to the Cellucci home showed that the real goat was the centre of attraction. On the piazza of the Cellucci home was the goat, tied to the railing with a rope and in the centre of the family. From now out Cellucci threatens to keep the goat in his house a small building in the rear where hens are raised.

UNNECESSARY NOISES.

A board of trade or chamber of commerce could not be more usefully employed than in abating the noises of its city. It is even more important, and far easier to do, than to abolish the smoke nuisance. With noises reduced to a minimum, city life would not only be more liveable, but there would be a decided improvement in the health of the inhabitants. A few among the many producers of unnecessary noises might be enumerated as:

Locomotive whistles that appear to be tied down so as to screech all the time, particularly at night.

Flat wheels on street cars and loose rails on street car tracks.

The worser sort of motorcycles.

Hucksters that shout at untimely hours.

Newsboys that cry their wares too loudly.

Factory whistles and church bells. —Buffalo Express.

STRUGGLE FOR GOVERNORSNIP

Rapidly Approaching a Crisis In the Empire State

POLITICAL WARRIORS ARE BUSY

Sulzer Determined to Hold Office, While Tammany Plans to Drive Him Out—His Friends Purpose to Raise Monster Fund For War on the Organization

Albany, Aug. 18.—With the leaders of both camps in conference perfecting bold schemes of defense and attack, the struggle for the governorship of New York state is rapidly approaching a crisis which is expected to break at any moment in a new series of political scandal.

Tammany is preparing to go any limit to evict William Sulzer from the governor's chair and drive him from the state capitol. In complete control, the legislature is expected shortly to summon Sulzer to the bar of the assembly and proceed against him for contempt. The legislative program is nearly perfected and the whole scheme is to take all executive power from Sulzer's grasp.

Apparently not daunted by the defeat he has met already at the hands of the legislature, Sulzer and his associates are laying schemes for holding the executive offices and redoubling his attacks on Tammany.

The capitol is filled with sensational rumors. The politicians of both camps are keeping close watch day and night on the operations of the enemy and planning counter attacks for each new move.

Both headquarters in the capitol are under heavy guard. The capitol watchmen on their regular rounds are excluded from the offices occupied by the governor and Lieutenant Governor Glynn.

The regular executive offices have been guarded closely for a week, but Saturday night additional guards were put on and Glynn retaliated by providing protection against invasion of his quarters.

Sulzer displayed his program of defense when announcement was made on his behalf, through The Knickerbocker Press, a newspaper which is fighting his battle, that a national committee is to be formed to raise a monster fund to aid in his fight against Tammany.

Announcement is made semi-officially that many men of national prominence have indicated their anxiety to join in the crusade. Sulzer and his friends will fight the impeachment to the last, but whether they win or lose are determined not to stop there. If they succeed in their effort to raise the fund needed they will carry the fight through the city campaign and into the next state elections.

The leaders are maneuvering for advantage in the next encounter.

LOWELL GIRL SHOT

Police Think Bullet May Have Been Intended For Her Escort

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 18.—Patrina Zanaryz, 18 years old, was shot last evening by Andrew Cyzanik, aged 24, and he is held by the police. The girl is close to death.

The Zanaryz girl was leaving her house in company with Frank Czkanski when the pair were approached by Cyzanik. The latter drew a revolver and fired a shot at one of the two. The bullet entered the girl's groin.

It is believed by some of the police, who are investigating, that the bullet was intended for Czkanski. The two men had a quarrel recently and the cause, it is believed, was the girl.

ACTOR BATES DROWNS

Perishes In Surf at Summer Resort Despite Efforts to Save Him

Hampton Beach, N. H., Aug. 18.—Despite the warning of the beach crew patrol from the Salisbury Beach life saving station that the high surf was dangerous, Albert M. Bates, leading man of the Augustus Perry Stock company, plunged into the ten-foot high waves and was drowned.

Desperate efforts were made to save him. In spite of three hours' work over the body and the use of a pulmotor all efforts proved fruitless.

Bates was a former member of the old Boston Museum Stock company and was 64 years old.

MISSED HOME COMFORTS.

It began with a gun play in Kentucky and the consequent conviction of the defendant for murder. Everybody knew everybody else—judge, jurors, lawyers on both sides. witnesses and all. The public prosecutor, at heart, was content with a nominal sentence, which stowed the offender away for a short term.

After the prisoner had had time to feel the hardships of the cell, his father called on the State's attorney. He began with a rambling plea for further consideration and was halted. Said the lawyer:

"Henry had a fair trial. I hated to prosecute him, but I had to. He got off easy--you know that. The best thing you can do is to let him go along. He'll be out in three or four years."

"Three of four years!" repeated the prisoner's sire. "He can't stand it. Henry has always been used to the best of food. Your institution doesn't provide it. He's always had a fine bed and he's got a hard one now. The place is damp, and he's rheumatic.

"He's had plenty of friends to keep him company, and now he's like an outcast on an island—dying of lonesomeness. He's dispirited all the time, all in—dejected. In fact I may say he's plumb dissatisfied."—Chicago Post.

OUR FRIENDS IN WOLLASTON

Give Added Praise. Their Statements Are Convincing.

It is gratifying for us to read such good news as the following, for it shows that the experience of our friends in Wollaston is the same as that of many Quincy men and women who have spoken out so heartily in these columns:

Richard W. Smith, painter, 14 Blake street, Wollaston, Mass., says: "I suffered from a painful back and kidney trouble for a long time. I was so stiff in damp and rainymornings that it was some time before I got limbered up enough to dress myself. There was a dull, heavy pain through the small of my back. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up all right. I have used this remedy off and on since, whenever I have needed a kidney tonic. Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to put me in good shape. In my present work, painting, I find Doan's Kidney Pills to be just the medicine I need for keeping my kidneys in good working order. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills before, and am glad to do so again."

The Easy Summer Meal

Has Grape-Nuts as its foundation

Ideal these hot days because Grape-Nuts food requires no cooking, and is at the same time a perfectly balanced food.

Try a hot weather breakfast of

Fresh fruit,
Grape-Nuts and cream,
A soft-boiled egg or two,
Slice of crisp toast,
Cup of Instant Postum in place of coffee.

Such a meal starts the day right, keeps the blood cool and the body and brain well nourished.

Compare the cool, contented Grape-Nuts-fed man or woman with your meat-fed neighbor who is sweltering and miserable.

A public hearing will be held at City Hall

Monday Evening, Aug. 18

Under the New Law which permits Taxpayers to express their views relative to the

Tax Limit for City Purposes

Section 19 of Chapter 719 under which a public hearing must be held is as follows:

"Within ninety days after the passage of this act the City Council or other governing body of every city, except Boston, shall give a public hearing in regard to establishing a tax limit for that city.

"The time and place of holding such hearing shall be duly advertised, and, after the hearing, any city, except Boston, may provide by ordinance that the taxes assessed on property therein, exclusive of the state tax and other amounts assessed upon the city by the commonwealth, the county tax and sums required by law to be raised on account of the city debt, shall not in any year succeeding the adoption of such ordinance exceed an amount specified in the ordinance on every one thousand dollars of the average of the assessors' valuation of the taxable property therein for the preceding three years, such valuation being first reduced by the amount of all abatements allowed thereon previous to the thirty-first day of December in the year preceding said assessment:

"And the tax limit so established by ordinance shall have the force of law until it is annulled or modified by the action of the City Council or other governing body of the city. After such ordinance has been established it shall not be annulled or modified within one year thereafter, and then only after a public hearing, duly advertised, and by a two-thirds vote of the City Council or other governing body of the city."—Approved May 28, 1913.

ORIENTS LOSE 3 TO 2

Redmen Capture the Ward Three Game

Many Lost Balls and Assault

One of the hardest fought amateur base ball games ever played in Quincy finished on the Ward Three playgrounds Saturday afternoon with the Redmen leading the Orients, 3 to 2. The losers, last years amateur champions were unable to pull across a victory. The winners are now claiming the championship but both managers have agreed to play on Labor Day morning.

The Reds scored their first two in the second inning. Pitcher Carlson crossed after getting on base by a pretty hit and Summers scored on an error by Ciardi. Veale completed the circuit from second base in the 7th with the winning run when Bradley threw wild in an effort to catch him napping.

The Orient seventh inning resulted in their two runs and it looked for a while as though the score would be tied. Ciardi secured a pass and Brown reached on an error. Anderson, a former Red who covered first for the Orients, fouled to Tiz Carlson. Ciardi and Brown scored on Cremmins hard drive through the pitcher's box which glazed off Carlson's finger tips and landed in centre field. Bob Mitchell was thrown out at first by Tiz Carlson, and his brother Henry was hit by a pitched ball and was forced out at second by Mattson's slow infield grounder.

It remained for an unscheduled incident to furnish the real excitement of the game however. Since ball teams have commenced using the playground there has been some difficulty in securing fouls which land on private property in the rear of the backstop. The owner, a foreigner, whose sporting proclivities have not developed to the point where he is willing to return balls that drop over the fence, assaulted Markham who entered the grounds. The assault occurred in the middle of the potato patch and closely followed an order to get out. Markham reached for the ball which was at his feet and the assault followed. Comrades called for him to desist from giving battle and he retired from the field thoroughly discomfited and feeling very much as though he had been handed a raw deal. The fans numbering nearly 300 heartily agreed with him and roundly hissed the appearance of the owner on the playground rocks a few moments afterward as he tried to deliver a speech which promised to contain threats of all kinds. He retired midst shouts of derision from the angered crowd who were obliged to see eight balls go over which were not returned.

It can also be said that in addition to heroically controlling himself from returning battle and becoming embroiled in what might have been a nasty fight, Markham played out his position at third for the Orients and secured eight difficulties assists, two hits and two putouts, a remarkable record in one game. The score:

PLAYGROUND NOTES.

If Ward Four had held up its end last week the attendance of the City Playgrounds would have undoubtedly gone to a record mark. Ward Three as usual had the largest number of boys and girls turning in the fine total 1760; Ward Two had 1038, while the West Quincy district had the small number of 676.

If the attendance at Ward Four does not increase during the next few days, there is a chance of the two directors being transferred to the Ward Three grounds for the balance of the season and the Ward Four grounds closed. This will mean of course that the boys and girls of Ward Four who have worked in the all-round athletic contests will have to forfeit prizes, so it "is up to them" to get busy to see that there is a larger attendance at the grounds.

The competition in the Ward Two baseball league is growing closer as now only one game separates the first three teams. The Senators are still leading with a percentage of .666, the Athletics and Naps are tied at .500 and the Red Sox bring up the rear with .333. Two games more will be played by each team and the chances are that a double tie will result.

POLICE LEAGUE.

The official standing of the Massachusetts Police Base Ball league shows the Quincy officers holding down fourth place with six games won and four lost. They have played ten games, from one to seven more than the other teams. A completed schedule and the same calibre of base ball they are now playing may bring them as high as second place. The next game will be with Lowell, the top liners, who are tied with the Mets. The contest has been postponed twice and the final date has not been agreed upon.

APPRENTICES LOSE.

It took the strong Filene's team ten innings to pin a 5 to 4 defeat on Joe Larkin's Fore River Apprentices at Franklin Field Saturday afternoon. The game was replete with sensations, particularly the last five innings in which the game was won. Cook was hit for eight safeties and Walter Williamson of the Apprentices allowed 11 and passed five. Cook fanned 10 and Williamson 12. O'Brine, the local first base man demonstrated the sharpest batting eye of the two teams getting three hits out of four times up. The score by innings:

| | |

MANCHESTER RACES.

Ted Keohane lost the century dash at Manchester, N. H., Saturday and Frank Bruce withdrew from the ten mile while leading the bunch at three quarters the distance. Bruce counted on the program being run off on regular time but the committee delayed two hours for some of the Boston runners. By this time Bruce's eating schedule had been upset and it sapped his strength. Both had been picked for winners.

SQUANTUM CLUB RUN.

Twenty boats of the Squantum Yacht club took part Sunday in the club run to Weymouth Back river. The skippers took lunch along and on arriving at Back river, moorings were sought and the party went ashore and enjoyed their lunch in the woods. Fleet Captain Bert Packard led the squadron in the Aryete, flagship of Commodore Drew, with Vice Commodore Sargent in the Little Haste, following. A fine time is reported.

WEYMOUTH TROT.

THROWN OVERBOARD FROM A STEAMER

Man Who Resents Insult to Woman Is Abused

Providence, Aug. 18.—Hugh Sullivan of Brooklyn, who was picked up from the waters of Long Island sound by the steamer Tennessee, told the Providence police he had been beaten over the head by a crowd of men on the steamer Priscilla and thrown overboard.

According to Sullivan he was talking with a young woman on the after deck of the Priscilla near a group of sailors and passengers who were quarrelling. He took exception to remarks which he thought were directed against his companion, and in the row which followed, he was knocked unconscious and thrown overboard.

The cold water revived him, he said, and he started to swim toward the lights of another steamer. This proved to be the Tennessee. His cries were heard, and the steamer halted, while somebody threw overboard a life buoy. Sullivan grasped this and fainted. Within a few minutes he was located by the Tennessee's searchlight, and was picked up. He was removed to the general hospital in Providence.

FIGHT FOR TEN MINUTES

Two Women In Desperate Knife Duel In Public Street

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 18.—A bloody battle with knives was fought in the middle of Hanscom street here between Mrs. Della Rohrers and Mrs. Carl Rayboult. The fight was fast and furious and continued for ten minutes before the police arrived and arrested both women.

Mrs. Rohrers received a knife thurst in the abdomen, which will probably cause her death. She also received several other severe cuts. Her opponent, while not fatally wounded, was slashed and carved in a dozen places.

The trouble started by each charging the other with circulating false stories.

Suicide In Police Cell

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 18.—Suspended by a rope which had been made of strips torn from his own clothing, Robert J. Fleming, 49, an upholsterer, was found dead in a cell at police station 4. Fleming had been arrested a little more than an hour before, charged with drunkenness.

Toads Overrunning Farms

Braintree, Mass., Aug. 18.—The farmers in this vicinity report that the warm spell of the last few days has brought thousands of toads, which flood the highways and the fields of crops, and are causing much inconvenience.

Sharp Battle In China

Shanghai, Aug. 18.—Advices from Nanking say a sharp struggle is proceeding for the possession of Purple mountain. A steady artillery duel is proceeding between the rebels on Lion hill and the northerners at Pukow.

"Consumptive" Hale at 101

Newburgh, N. Y., Aug. 18.—William T. Osborne of this city celebrated his 101st birthday in perfect health. When Osborne was 29 four doctors told him he was a hopeless consumptive and would not live six months.

DARTWELL AT WINTHROP

Outsails the Clara, Iris, Grayling and Dolly

Although the Quincy Yacht club held a race Saturday for all classes many of the yachts of the club took part in the annual open race under the auspices of the Winthrop club. In class D the Dartwell continued her good work of the season and carried off first money with the Clara second. In class H the Wanderer of ex-Commodore F. E. Dawes of the Wollaston club got second position. In class S the Matitiza won first position and the Zoe second. In class A the Nutmeg got first position and the Meemer second. The summary of class D:

| | |
|---|---|
| Dartwell, I. M. Whittemore | 1:55:09 |
| Clara, H. W. Robbins | 1:57:25 |
| Iris, F. F. Crane | 1:59:17 |
| Crayling, C. C. Nickerson | 2:23:20 |
| Dolly III, W. W. Arnold | 2:00:52 |

HARPOON WINS ONE RACE

Ellen and Sprig Also Win In Preliminaries

The first of the series of races to select the sonder boats which will meet the Germans for the President Wilson cup was held Saturday off Marblehead. The boats were divided into two divisions and three races were held during the day. Under the rules a boat which did not win one out of the first three races was eliminated from further trials. As a result of the series Saturday the Ellen won three in the first division, the Sprig two and the Harpoon one in the second division. All other boats therefore were eliminated from the races.

GLEAMER WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Nine Yachts in Weekly Race off Quincy Club

Four classes took part Saturday in the race for all classes under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club. In class B. the Lonaru had no competitor and had a walkover. In class C the Moondyne made her first appearance of the season and led on actual time but the Gleamer continued her winning streak and carried off first money. The race of Saturday assures the Gleamer the championship pennant in this class. In class F the Yarita won and in class E the Soukey.

The corrected time was:

CLASS B

| | |
|---|---|
| Lomaru, Winslow Bros | 1:51:18 |

FRIGHTENED OFF.

Thomas Smith opened the door of his room at 69 Penn street Saturday night in time to see a man disappearing through an open window. He gave chase but the man disappeared in the direction of Centre street. An examination of his valuables showed that nothing had been taken. He was able to give only a fleeting description to the police.

RAFFERTY MISSING.

Two men reported to Officer Shea of Braintree on Sunday that William Rafferty of Harrison avenue, Boston, fell from one of the late trains Saturday night after it left the Quincy station. The Quincy police were notified but have been unable to find any trace of him. The men who made the report were Harry Morrow of Braintree Highlands and Clayton Balance of Dorchester.

THOMAS GAMMON, Superintendent

A PAPER BULLET

It Was Fired With Great Success

By ALBERT KENYON

One evening during the war between the states, when we were lying in face of an enemy, I stole away from camp and in the darkness succeeded in passing the pickets. Climbing a tree, where I could hear if not see what the Confederates were doing, I heard so much going on that I believed they were preparing for one of those attacks just before dawn, the hour usually chosen for an intended surprise. I got down from the tree, choosing a moment when the coast was clear, and, crawling through underbrush, retraced my steps, got safely through the pickets and returned to my own lines. There I made myself known and, making for my captain's tent, told him the whole story.

He was too much impressed with the importance of getting it to the general to reprimand me for leaving camp without permission and hurried me to headquarters. It was midnight, and all were asleep there. But the captain called an aid, and the aid awakened the general, who gave orders that the command should be called (without beating the long roll) and formed in line of battle behind such natural defenses as the location afforded.

At 3 o'clock—dawn did not come till nearly 4—we heard the tramp of men and when their shadowy forms appeared astonished them with a storm of lead and iron that drove them back in confusion. They returned, but were again driven back, after which they retired to their camps.

This sally of mine gave me all the adventure I wanted for the rest of my term of service, for it made me the general's chief scout. I almost always went out for information in uniform. In the first place, I preferred being captured or shot to being hanged for a spy, against which death my uniform was a protection. I have ridden into the enemy's lines rigged as a Federal trooper, acknowledged myself to the people as such and was not believed. "You can't come that on us," they would say. "You're one of Mosby's men." When I would deny this they would insist that I had adopted the Yankee uniform for secret service.

After one of our fights, in which neither side seemed to have got an advantage, I was sent into Confederate territory with a view to determining whether the enemy were taking steps to continue the fight or withdraw. But a far more important object was to carry an order to General B., on our flank, to join in a simultaneous attack without command in case I found the enemy inclined to retreat. If I found them in good condition to renew the fight and preparing to do so I was to destroy the order, and if the reverse I was to deliver it. It was written on tissue paper, giving details of time of attack, etc., and rolled into a ball about the size of a pistol bullet. I carried it in my holster in order that I might have it ready to throw away or destroy in case of expected capture.

I went out, as usual, in my blue jacket with yellow cavalry facings, my carbine slung to my saddle and a revolver at my hip. I emerged from our lines into a wood, through which by the general's direction a skirmish line had been sent to determine whether it was occupied by the enemy. It was free, and after riding through it for half a mile I came to a clearing. Before entering upon it I looked over what was in front of me, for, being on an eminence, I could see quite a distance. There were no camps in sight nor any large force, only stray bands, mostly cavalry. So I started out, intending to ride forward, keep my eyes open and be guided by circumstances.

Descending a slope through a cornfield, I struck a road leading southeastward, the direction in which the enemy were supposed to be. I could see approaching bands or persons and directed my course so as to avoid them. One would have had to come near me to see that I wore a Federal uniform, for mine was by no means a new one—rather dingy, in fact—and needed close inspection to tell whether it was Confederate or Union. So, while I saw all I cared to see, no one saw me with sufficient distinctness to know that I was a Yankee soldier.

I rode on over low ground till I came to a ridge from which I could see the Confederate camps. A wagon train was headed southward. If it was loaded with supplies that meant that the enemy were preparing to retreat. If the wagons were empty it meant that they were engaged in hauling supplies to the army; that they had brought a load and were returning for another. I could see the white line of the road over which they would pass and that it made a turn not far from where they were. By riding across fields I could intercept them. I pushed forward and, taking them on the flank, rode along by them toward their rear.

"What yo' doin' in that uniform?" called a teamster.

"Took it from a Yank killed in the fight yesterday," I replied. "My butternut suit was ragged. And look at the boots! I never let a Yank git away with his boots, especially if he's dead."

"I'll give you a hundred dollars for 'em."

"Not much. I got all the money I want, but only one pair o' boots."

It was plain that the wagons were full of supplies, not only by the power required by the mules to haul them, but through the front or rear openings in the covers I could see the property stacked up inside.

Having learned all I wished to know, I continued my way to the rear end of the train, then turned into a wood, where I lost myself for awhile. It was now my object to ride northeastward to General B.'s corps and deliver my order. While I was waiting I heard a rumble and a creaking in the road and recognized sounds made by artillery. If I had needed further evidence of retreat this would have confirmed my opinions, for the next thing to supplies a retreating army moves is its heavy guns—that is, unless pressed so hard by an enemy as to need them for defense.

The direction I was now to take forced me to cross the road I had just left. Preferring to move through woods, I kept on among the trees as long as possible, then turned into the road, having a stretch of a quarter of a mile before me before striking other timber. While making this interval I heard the quick thud of horses' hoofs behind me and, turning my head, saw a troop of Confederate cavalry coming. I turned into the wood on the north side of the road, and, though I did not alter my gait, I continued my course. I heard a "Hello, thar!" from the troop, but, pretending not to hear, kept on. As I disappeared in the wood there came a sharp "Halt, you, thar!"

I must make a quick decision. In Federal uniform I could not expect to deceive an officer as I had deceived a teamster. I would be obliged to give an account of myself and would doubtless be detained. If the general's orders were found on me my Federal uniform might not save me from the gallows, for, although it was simply an order, it was evident that it was based on my observations of Confederate movements. I was certainly not on a direct line between the Federal general who had written it and the officer for whom it was intended. This would prove me a secret service man.

All this was but a flash in my brain. My decision was made upon the importance of getting the order through. If I succeeded it would give our troops a great advantage; if I failed a fine opportunity would be lost. I determined to run for it. Having passed out of sight, I put spurs to my horse and, though I was obliged to dodge the trees, made good progress. I was in hopes that those who had seen me would not consider me of sufficient importance to chase. But these hopes were blasted by hearing one or more horses crashing through the undergrowth behind me.

A lightning flash before me indicated that the wood had no great extent and I would soon be in the open. It was evident that I must soon fight or surrender. While I was thinking about it I came to the end of the wood and entered a field. Soon after doing so I looked back to see by how many I was pursued. But one man thus far had left the wood. I rode on at a breakneck pace for about half a mile, then looked back again. Only the one pursuer was in sight. This decided me. I determined to fight.

But, realizing that I was more likely to be taken alive than killed, after drawing my revolver I took the message from my holster. What would I do with it? If I threw it away the man chasing me would see it and look for it. I stuffed it in the muzzle of my pistol, then, reining in my horse, I faced him toward the Confederate. He was within a hundred yards of me at the time and, drawing his weapon, came on. My horse was standing still, which enabled me to take a good aim. When he came within range we both fired almost simultaneously. His bullet cut the edge of my ear, though I did not know it at the time. My bullet pierced his brain.

No sooner had the man fallen from his horse and I saw blood oozing from his forehead than I bethought myself of the situation. If no more Confederates came for me and I could find the dispatch I might yet carry it to General B. I calculated that on account of its light weight it had not gone more than a few yards from my pistol and, calculating the direction of the wind, began to hunt for it. Seeing a bit of paper, I took it up and found it to be the dispatch. It had been partially opened by pressure against the atmosphere. Had it not been for this I doubt if I should have found it, since in its globular form it was very small and blackened by powder.

My first act after finding it was to look to see if any more pursuers were emerging from the wood. None appeared. Noticing C. S. A. branded on the trooper's horse, I decided to take him instead of my own. I also took his hat and his belt, the latter having the same letters. He wore no coat or I would have taken that too. But I threw away my own coat and, mounting, rode away at a gallop.

The change of horse and belt served a good purpose. As soon as I got away from my dead enemy I slowed down and rode at a moderate pace. I took to roads and passed a number of citizens and soldiers, but the brand on my horse and the letters on my belt were a sure protection. I soon made ground occupied by neither army and by noon rode into General B.'s camp and delivered my dispatch. After reading the instructions General B. acted upon them at once and attacked the enemy in force. My own commander heard his guns, and, joining him, the two made a complete rout, capturing many prisoners and stores.

In my chest of war relics I have my paper bullet, which General B. afterward gave me, and it is of course more prized than any other of my souvenirs.

GERMANY CUTS BIG FAIR

Her Industrial and Business Circles Can See No Benefit

Berlin, Aug. 18.—The Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, the government organ, says:

The invitation to participate in the Panama-Pacific exposition was declined by the German government after inquiry had shown that an overwhelming majority in industrial and business circles in Germany could see no benefit accruing from representation. The government investigated thoroughly and sympathetically and reached its decision not to participate with the greatest reluctance.

As the exposition frequently has been mentioned in connection with the opening of the canal, it must be noted that Germany's attitude toward this historical event has not been affected by its decision with regard to the exposition. The formal dedication of the new avenue uniting the nations probably will give an opportunity to show worthily Germany's interest in this mighty achievement, for which the world is indebted to America's energy in its accomplishment.

MRS. PANKHURST IN FRANCE

English Authorities Appear to Be Glad to Be Rid of Her

Trouville, France, Aug. 18.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, arrived here to join her daughter Christabel, who has been staying at this seaside resort.

Mrs. Pankhurst traveled across the channel by way of Southampton and Havre. She had been out on "license" under the "cat and mouse act" and it was reported that the police authorities at the various channel ports had recently received from headquarters orders not to arrest her if she was seen going on board a steamship for the purpose of leaving England.

Mrs. Pankhurst is to take what her friends call a "rest cure," which they say may be extended to the United States.

The English police authorities, it is hinted, will not attempt to bar the egress of the leaders of the militant movement and would, in fact, be only too delighted to assist them to emigrate.

RUSSIAN COUNTESS PERHAPS MURDERED

Noted Woman's Body Found Hanging In Express Train

St. Petersburg, Aug. 18.—Countess Marie Tarnovska, who in 1910 was convicted in Venice of complicity in the murder of Count Kamarowsky and sentenced to eight years' imprisonment, was found dead on a St. Petersburg-Kiev express train. She had been hanged. The police are investigating in an effort to determine whether it is a case of suicide or murder. The countess was pardoned last year.

Countess Tarnovska, a beautiful Russian woman, was charged and found guilty of having persuaded a jealous youth, Nikolas Naumoff, to go to Venice from Vienna and kill Count Kamarowsky, in order that she might obtain $100,000 life insurance, the policy for which Kamarowsky had taken out in her name. The countess, it was said, was engaged to marry Kamarowsky.

It was charged at the trial that the countess had a mania for making men love her and then turning them against one another.

AFTER TWO SCORE YEARS

Man Thought Dead Reappears at Door of Wife's Home

Brookfield, Mass., Aug. 18.—For nearly forty years Mrs. Joseph Maxfield has thought her husband dead, and has been drawing a pension from the United States government as the widow of a Civil war veteran. She answered a knock on the door, and was confronted by her husband.

Maxfield, who is nearly 70 years old, said he had been drifting about the west for forty years, plying his trade of shoemaker. Recently he became homesick and decided to go home. With his four middle-aged children and his wife he is now holding a reunion and getting acquainted once more.

AMERICA AS ESCORT

Navies of the World Will Be Invited to Pass Through Canal

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—An invitation to all the navies of the world to meet at Hampton Roads in January, 1915, and pass through the Panama canal, accompanied by the United States navy, to the Panama exposition at San Francisco will shortly be issued by President Wilson.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels made this announcement here. The invitation will be in the form of a proclamation.

Rich Man Drops Dead

Kennebunkport, Me., Aug. 18.—George H. Couttes of New York, a member of the summer colony at Kennebunkport, and reputed to be a millionaire, dropped dead on the street. Heart failure is thought to have been the cause. He was 75 years old.

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

"I'm sure we shall get on famously," he said, as she signified her desire to return to the compartment. "I've always longed for a nice, agreeable sister-in-law."

"Her mission in life, up to a certain stage, is to make the man appreciate the fact that he has, after all, been snapped up by a small but deserving family," she said blithely. "It is also her duty to pour oil on troubled waters and strew flowers along the connubial highway, so long as her kind offices are not resented. By the way Roxbury, I am now about to preserve you from bitter reproaches. You have forgotten to order coffee and rolls for your wife."

"Great Scott! So I have! It's 9 o'clock." He ordered the coffee and rolls to be sent in at once. "I hope she hasn't starved to death."

"My dear Roxbury," she said sternly, "I must take you under my wing. You have much to accomplish in the next twenty-four hours, not the least of your duties being the subjugation of Tootles and Raggles. Tootles is fifteen months old. It may interest you to know. We can't afford to have Tootles scream with terror every time she sees you, and it would be most unfortunate if Raggles should growl and snap at you as he does at all suspicious strangers. Once in awhile he bites, too. Do you like babies?"

"Yes, I—I think I do," he said doubtfingly. "I daresay I could cultivate a taste for 'em; but, I say," with eager enthusiasm, "I love dogs!"

"It may be distinctly in your favor that Raggles loathes the real Roxbury. He growls every time that Roxy kisses Edith."

"Has he ever bitten Roxy for it?"

"No," dubiously, "but Roxy has had to kick him on several occasions."

"How very tiresome—to kick and kiss at the same time!"

"Raggles is very jealous, you understand."

"That's more than I can say for dear old Roxy. But I'll try to anticipate Raggles by compelling Edith to keep her distance," he said, scowling darkly. "Has it not occurred to you that Tootles will be pretty—er—much of a nuisance when it comes to mountain climbing?" He felt his way carefully in saying this.

"Oh, dear me, Roxbury! Would you have left the poor little darling at home—in all that dreadful heat?"

"I'm sure I couldn't have been blamed for leaving her at home," he protested. "She didn't exist until half an hour ago. Heavens, how they do spring up!"

The remainder of Brock's day was spent in getting acquainted with his family, or, rather, his menage. There were habits and foibles, demands and restrictions that he had to adapt himself to with unvarying benignity. He made a friend of Raggles without half trying. Dogs always took to him, he admitted modestly. Tootles was less vulnerable. She howled consistently at each of his first half dozen advances. His courage began to wane with shocking rapidity. His next half hearted advances were in reality inglorious retreats. Spurred on by the sustaining Constance, he stood by his guns and at last was gratified to see faint signs of surrender. By midday he had conquered. Tootles permitted him to carry her up and down the station platform (she was too young to realize the risk she ran). Edith and Constance, with the beaming nurse and O'Brien, applauded warmly when he returned from his first promenade, bearing Tootles and proudly heeled by Raggles. Fond mothers in the crowd of hurrying travelers found time to look upon him and smile, as if to say, "What a nice man!" He could almost hear them saying it, which no doubt accounted for the intense ruddiness of his cheeks.

"Do you ever spank her?" he demanded once of Mrs. Medcroft after Tootles had brought tears to his eyes with a potent attack upon his nose. She caught the light of danger in his gray eyes and hastily snatched the offending Tootles from his arms.

Miss Fowler kept him constantly at work with his eyeglass and his English, neither of which he was managing well enough to please her critical estimate. In fact, he labored all day with the persistence, if not the sullenness, of a hard driven slave. He did not have time to become tired. There was always something new to be done or learned or unlearned; his day was full to overflowing. He was a man of family.

The wife of his bosom was tranquility itself. She was enjoying herself. When not amusing herself by watching Brock's misfortunes she was napping or reading or sending out for cool drinks. With all the selfishness of a dutiful wife she was content to shift responsibilities upon that ever convenient and useful creature—a detached sister.

Brock sent telegrams for her from cities along the way—Ulm, Munich, Salzburg and others—all meant for the real Roxbury in London, but sent to a fictitious being in Great Russell street, the same having been agreed upon by at least two of the conspirators. It mattered little that she repeated herself monotonously in regard to the state of health of herself and Tootles. Roxbury would doubtless enjoy the protracted happiness brought on by these dispatches, even though they got him out of bed or missed him altogether until they reached him in a bunch the next day. He may also have been gratified to hear from Munich that Roxbury was perfectly lovely. She said in the course of her longest dispatch that she was so glad that the baby was getting to like her father more and more as the day wore on.

At one station Brock narrowly escaped missing the train. He swung himself aboard as the cars were rolling out of the sheds. As he sank, hot and exhausted, into the seat opposite his wife and her sister the former looked up from her book, yawning ever so faintly, and asked:

"Are you enjoying your honeymoon, Roxbury?"

"Immensely!" he exclaimed, but not until he had searched for and caught Connie's truant gaze. "Aren't we?" he asked of Miss Fowler, his eyes dancing. She smiled encouragingly.

"I think you are such a nice man to have about," commented Mrs. Medcroft, this time yawning freely and stretching her fine young arms in the luxury of home contentment.

Brock went to bed early in Vienna that night, tired but happy, caring not what the morrow brought forth so long as it continued to provide him with a sister-in-law and a wife who was devoted—to another man.

SQUANTUM WILL PROTEST

Object to Any Increase in the Tax Limit

Squantum people will turn out in force tonight to protest against any increase in the tax limit at the meeting before the Quincy City Council. A special car to leave Squantum at 7.30 o'clock has been engaged and it is expected that a delegation of at least 100 taxpayers will attend the hearing.

The regulr weekly dnce of the Squantum Women's club was held Saturday night at the home of Mrs. T. F. Callahan and was a very enjoyable affair. There was a large attendance and music was furnished by the Postal Clerks orchestra.

Jack McCloud of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has been a guest at the home of Mr. nad Mrs. George Morrill for two weeks, returned to his home Saturday. His family remains for the rest of the summer.

Mrs. Paul Waitt of Boston and Mr. Thompson of Lynn were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Reed at their bungalow on Bellevue road.

The regular meeting of the Squantum Women's club which was to be held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Helen McGowan, Orchard street, has been postponed to Friday evening at the same place.

AT ADAMS SHORE.

Miss Elise Akeroyd the Boston Venus whose swimming ability has won the esteem of all the sporting public, was the guest of John Hallahan at Adams Shore on Sunday. Miss Akeroyd's presence at the Hallahan home soon became known and at the earnest solicitation of the summer colonists she donned a bathing suit and demonstrated how she reached a niche in the hall of swimming fame. She modestly received the enthusiastic thanks and compliments of her audience after her fine performance.

UNKNOWN MAN UNCONCIOUS

Thrown From Train Near Granite Street Bridge

An unidentified young man was found alongside of the tracks near the Granite street bridge Sunday morning, shortly after 10 o'clock. The body was discovered about 150 feet south of the bridge by an outward train which was stopped. The body was taken aboard and carried back to the Quincy station. from which place it was taken to the City Hospital in the police ambulance. The man was suffering from a fractured skull. There was nothing about him to lead to his identity with the exception of a rebate ticket to Brockton.

Passengers on an outward train a little earlier report having seen a young man jump from their train between Quincy and Quincy Adams. It is possible however that he might have been thrown out of the door of the baggage car as the train rounded the curve.

The man was attended by Medical Examiner Jones and Dr. John H. Anderson. He is about 20 years of age and 5 feet 7 inches tall. He wore a dark suit.

The police of Brockton have been notified that the man probably belongs in that city for the rebate check shows that he had paid a cash fare from Boston to Brockton.

The man was still unconscious this morning and nothing had been learned as to his identity. It is expected however that some clew will be had today.

Inquiry at the City Hospital this noon brought out the fact that the unknown man who fell from the train near the Granite street bridge Sunday morning was still unconscious, and as yet no one had appeared to identify him.

LONG TRIPS BY AUTOMOBILE

President Whiton Averaged 150 Miles Per Day

In the six day's automobile trip of President Joseph L. Whiton of the City Council, which ended last Friday, he covered 930 miles. His average run for the trip was 150 miles although his longest day's run was 185 miles.

Stanley Cutter of Cleveland, Ohio, who is the guest of William E. Cooper of Goffe street has just completed a record breaking automobile run between Cleveland and Quincy covering the distance in two days and a half. The route which Mr. Cutter took showed the distance to be 690 miles, which would make his average run 138 miles a day. His best day's run however, was the first day out of Cleveland when he covered 275 miles.

MORE

George F. Spooner has returned with a party from a seven days' tour of the White Mountains, having travelled nearly 600 miles. The first day from home they reached Squam Lake, 165 miles, and Bretton Woods the second day, 90 miles. They returned via Newburyport. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Curtis who took the trip are both over 80 years of age.

Among the automobiles seen in Quincy frequently is that of C. H. Smith of Somerville, Mrs. Smith being a sister of Mrs. J. O. Williams of Goffe street. The Somerville Journal says: Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Smith and nephew, J. Sewall Smith, of 52 Sydney street, who started for Chicago on July 25, by automobile, arrived in that city, Tuesday, July 29, where they were finely entertained by Ex-alderman and Mrs. Amos W. Shepard of Somerville. They left Chicago, Tuesday morning, August 4, for the West. Starting on the Trans-continental route, they reached Perry, Iowa, where August 7, they reported they were starting for Omaha. The trip so far has been one of great pleasure and remarkable for the absences of mishaps which are likely to attend automobile tours. They found the roads from Boston to Chicago exceedingly good, and also from Chicago to Perry, Iowa. They have had only a few punctures caused by tacks and nails. One Wednesday, they crossed 202 bridges, large and small, and the trip is very interesting. They may continue to the coast.

AT POINT OF REVOLVER

One Man Arrests Another at Quincy Depot

Great excitement prevailed at the Quincy station at 12.35 today when one Italian ordered another to accompany him to the police station at the point of a revolver. He then marched his prisoner to City Square and turned him over to Officer Canavan who arrested both men.

At the station the man who arrested his fellow countryman gave his name as Peter Cozoy of Brackett street. His prisoner said he was Vinsenzo Quintilla of Brackett street. Mrs. Cozey who was at the railroad station accompanied the prisoners to the station.

The affair occurred in sight of nearly 30 people and the motive is said to rest on domestic trouble. Concizo Maritrindo of 29 Canal street and Tony Mobili, the station boot black both saw the affair.

Mobili said that Cozoy suddenly appeared in front of the man and placed the revolver against his stomach, ordering him to go to the station. Quintilla threw his arms over his head and said all right. Cozoy then grabbed him by the right arm, placed the point of the revolver in his right trousers pocket, and marched him to Officer Canavan. Maritrindo corroborates his story.

Both men surrendered to the officer without any display of force and Cozoy turned his revolver over willingly. The police are making an investigation.

It appears from investigation by the police that this noon Quintilla entered the home of Cozoy and insulted his wife. The wife broke away and ran to the lumber yard where her husband is employed and told him of the affair. Cozoy then rushed home and got his revolver and followed Quintilla to the depot.

On the way to the police station in one of Penniman's taxi cabs Quintilla reached over the side and dropped a razor into the street. This act was seen by Driver Cahill of the patrol wagon who was following the taxi, and Officer Cahill stopped and picked up the razor.

—Hingham's Board of Health has been busy of late caring for the swarms of small dead fish which have been cast on the shore at Crow Point. Team loads of the fish have been disposed of for use as fertilizer. A suggestion as to how the fish came to die in such numbers is that the escaping acids and other chemicals from the burned buildings of the Bradley Phosphate works is responsible.

Satisfying a Customer Carried to an Extreme

By HOLLAND.

A WOMAN who bought a dress which she found was not just what she wanted went with it to one of the biggest stores in the world and said it did not suit her. She wanted her money back, but explained that she had lost the sales slip. The sum she claimed was given to her.

Two days later she found the sales slip and discovered that she had not bought the dress at the store to which she had taken it, but had bought it at a rival establishment She went to the store and explained.

"We knew you had not bought the dress here," explained the manager, "but you were palpably dissatisfied with it, and our aim is to satisfy all our customers. If we have impressed on your mind the fact that we are more than fair we are satisfied. We covet nothing more than such a reputation as we are sure you will give us."

Many will think that this was carrying fairness too far. Perhaps it was, but it was done by the greatest retail merchant of this age, one whose name is known wherever the English language is spoken and whose expenditures for advertising run up to a million dollars a year.

Successful advertisers know that satisfied customers are an invaluable asset. You have an advantage in dealing with the liberal advertisers.

A Queer Marriage Ceremony.

A queer marriage ceremony was that in Queen Elizabeth's reign, before the deaf and dumb alphabet was invented, between Thomas Filshy and Ursula Bridget. Ursula could talk fast enough, but Thomas was a deaf mute, and as it was required that promises should be exchanged in spoken words nobody knew how to manage the thing. Finally the bishop of London helped to devise a service by signs, and Thomas proceeded thus: Having first taken Ursula in his arms, he took her by the hand and put the nuptial ring on her finger. He then laid his right hand significantly on his heart and afterward, putting their palms together, extended both his hands toward heaven. Having thus sued for divine blessing, he declared his purpose to live with Ursula till death should separate them by closing his eyelids with his fingers, digging the earth with his feet as though he wished to make a hole in the ground and then moving his arms and body as though he were tolling a funeral bell.

Curious Marine Tragedy.

On March 31, 1849, the pilotboat Coquette, cruising off Cape May, discovered a capsized schooner floating bottom up. A boarding party put off to the wreck, and some of the crew climbed up on the rounded bottom. Suddenly rappings were heard on the inside. Evidently some one was imprisoned in the hold. Saws and axes were brought, and a hole was cut in the schooner's bottom. But the attempt at rescue brought swift disaster. The imprisoned air that had sustained the captives rushed out, and the schooner began to sink rapidly. As the water rose on the inside one of the doomed sailors struggled near enough to the hole to cry out that they were five in all, one forward and four aft. The capsized vessel was the Russell, and they had been prisoners for five days. Then the water reached his lips, and the would be rescuers scrambled into their yawl as the Russell sank, carrying the five men down with her.

Early Sport on the Thames.

Sport on the Thames in London's early days was more exciting than boat racing. In the twelfth century, for instance, the young "bloods" enjoyed a kind of "tilt the bucket" pastime and delighted the spectators. Thus William Fitz-Stephens, clerk to Thomas a Becket, on the rules of the game: "In the Easter holidays they play at a game resembling a naval engagement. A target is fixed to a tree trunk, which is fixed in the middle of the river, and in the prow of a boat driven along by oars a young man who is in it strikes the target with his lance. If in hitting it he breaks his lance and keeps his position unmoved he gains his point and attains his desire, but if his lance be not shriven he is tumbled into the river." It is comforting to learn, however, that the rules then allowed his friends to pick him up.—London Spectator.

It Moved Dr. Johnson.

William Law's "Serious Call" was the work that converted Dr. Johnson.

"I became a sort of lax talker against religion," said the sage of Fleet street to Boswell, "until I went to Oxford, where I took up Law's 'Serious Call,' expecting to find it a dull book (as such books generally are) and perhaps to laugh at it. But I found Law quite an overmatch for me, and this was the first occasion of my thinking in earnest of religion."

Johnson once more pronounced the "Serious Call" to be the "finest piece of hortatory theology in any language." Law's masterpiece has also been highly praised not only by Wesley and Whitefield, but even by such avowed enemies of Christian orthodoxy as Gibbon and the late Sir Leslie Stephen.—Westminster Gazette.

Those Gift Cigars.

Hemmenhaw handed his best friend a cigar.

"Have a smoke," he said.

"Sure," said the friend.

"There. I'm glad that's off my mind!"

"Off your mind?"

"Yes. That cigar is the last of a box my wife gave me, and I will tell you in confidence I have been handing them out all day. You got the last. Ha, ha!"

"Well, the laugh is on you."

"On me?"

"Yes. I went with your wife to pick out those cigars, and they were the very best I could find in town."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Turkish Stamps.

Because of a passage in the Koran forbidding the making of images Turkish postage stamps have no picture, but bear instead the sign manual of the sultan, which is, in fact, an impression of his imperial hand. This signature is said to have had its origin with the Sultan Murad I., who on completing a treaty with the Italian republic of Ragusa in 1365 and being unable to sign his name applied ink to his open hand and stamped it upon the parchment.

Conscience.

Mrs. Knagg—Talk of conscience! I don't believe you have any idea of what conscience is. Mr. Knagg—Sure, I do. Conscience is that inward monitor that, when you're wrong, prompts you to think up an excuse for blaming some one else.—Counselor.

FELL FROM CAR.

Michael Wayshine, employed at the American Fertilizer works at North Weymouth, jumped from a moving street car near the corner of Hancock and Hunt streets about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon and fell unconscious in the street. The car crew did not see him fall and the car did not stop. The man however was picked up by a car bound for Neponset and carried to the car barns where he was attended by Dr. Littlefield who found him suffering from hysteria. He was removed to the City Hospital in the police ambulance.

WASTEFULNESS OF CONGESTION.

The surest way to bring about a change in this country is to prove that it will pay—in dollars and cents. So long as there is money in automobile races, we go on butchering chauffeurs to make a New York holiday, and shut our eyes to the fact that we are encouraging manslaughter.

The strongest argument against ex-President Roosevelt's efforts to enforce common honesty was the plea that it "would hurt business," while in many cities vice is allowed to flaunt itself on the theory that "a wide open town helps business."

In view of that fact there is hope for reform of the over congestion of parts of this city by some figures gathered by the congestion committee, showing that the overcrowding in our tenements causes an economic waste of some $41,000,000 annually.

If the loss of $41,000,000 could be piled up on the slum landlords for a single year, every double-decker tenement would come down and a municipal policy of healthful suburban dwellings, with adequate and cheap transit would be undertaken. But no such effective demonstration of our waste is possible.

The nearest we can come to it is proof that the loses which the poor cannot bear themselves fall upon the well-to-do, either through taxation for the support of public charities or through subscriptions for private relief.

SERIOUS FALL.

While Miss Flora McPherson of Adams shore was preparing to dive from the shoulders of a friend on the pier at Adams Shore Sunday afternoon she lost her balance and fell to the float, striking on her head,. She was stunned by the fall for a few minutes, but upon recovering was able to walk to her home on Mallard road. This morning Miss McPherson feels no ill effects and attributes her escape from serious injury to landing on her shoulder first.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

TAX RATE RECORD BREAKER

Increase in Levy and Decrease in Personal Estate the Principal Causes

Net Increase in Valuation Was $1,339,549.00

Quincy's tax rate for 1913 is $23.70, a record breaker for the city and the town, and the highest city rate in Massachusetts for 1913. It is an increase of $1.30 over 1912, and $4.20 over 1911.

The assessed valuation of the city is $36,716,260.00, an increase of $1,339,545.00 over 1912. The increase in real estate valuation was larger than this—$1,591,500.00,—but there was a decrease in personal estate, amounting to $251,955.00. In 1912 there was a loss of $1,313,625.00 on personal estate, making a loss of $1,565,580.00 in two years.

It was 12 M today when Assessor Mitchell gave the Daily Ledger the Assessors' figures, so that time is limited in which to make comparison and comments. It was announced this morning that the rate would not be announced today but the plans were changed, and it come unexpectedly.

The levy of 1913 however is compared with the levy of 1912, item by item; and the tax rate of 1913 is compared with all rates of the city since its incorporation. The increase in valuation is also shown year by year since 1888.

Opening of National Convention in Boston

Quincy Is Well Represented

The three days Boston convention of the National Retail Monumental Dealers' Association opened this morning at 9 o'clock with a meeting the executive committee at the headquarters of the convention at Hotel Brunswick .

Delegates to the convention from all parts of the United States began to arrive in Boston on Monday and by night many were in the city. Some however, were delayed by their trains and will not arrive until late today. It is expected that there will be fully 1,500 delegates present when the convention is in full blast.

The formal opening took place at the Arena where the exhibit is being held. It was scheduled to take place at 10.30 but owing to the lateness in the arrival of some of the officers of the association it was after 11 a'clock before the meting was opened by F. R. Stewart, President of the Association.

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston welcomed the 1000 or more delegates at the Arena, and there were addresses by representatives from several states.

A recess was taken at noon, and this afternoon an executive session will be held at Hotel Brunswick. Tomorrow, sessions will be held at the same place at 9 A. M. and 2 P. M. and at 6.30 P. M., there will be a grand banquet at Hotel Brunswick. It is expected the business will be completed at the sessions on Thursday at 9 A. M. and 2 P. M.

Friday will be "Quincy day" for the delegates, the Quincy Board of Trade uniting with the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association.

The Granite exhibit at the Arena is open to the public and no ticket is required. It is worthy the attention of all citizens of Quincy. It includes not only Quincy exhibits but others from Milford, Barre, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and elsewhere.

QUINCY'S TAX LIMIT IS HIGH ENOUGH

Citizens Unanimous at City Council Hearing Against Any Increase

Much Interest Shown by the Large Attendance

A representative gathering of citizens was present at the special meeting of the City Council Monday evening. Aside from the general matters of business in the call, the interest centered in the public hearing on the "tax limit." The meeting was unanimous against increasing the limit from what it now is, namely $12 per $1,000, based on an average valuation for the three previous years.

The ruling of City Solicitor McAnarney, making it impossible to ask questions of the Mayor or city officials doubtless kept the meeting within bounds. Had they been allowed to ask questions the meeting would have been turned into a political hot bed by disgruntled politicians looking for an opportunity to get a rap at the administration.

Quincy has been called the hottest political city outside of Boston, and it would not have mattered who was Mayor there would have been the same amount of fireworks. President Whiton promptly checked all attempts to get outside of the question in hand and the speakers were informed that they must keep strictly to the question.

JURORS DRAWN.

The first business on the call was to draw jurors, and the Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Beeman drew the following Charles C. Foster, Edward Finn, Peter Morton, Frank Hobart, Clarence A. Rogers and Felix Favorite.

THE TAX HEARING.

The taxpayers of the city were thoroughly aroused to the situation at the hearing on the "tax limit." Although held in midsummer when many are away on vacations, and on one of the most sultry evenings of the year, the attendance was large. The sentiment was remarkably one-sided, more so than expected. But how could it be otherwise! When an expression of the meeting was invited, everyone arose in opposition to any increase in the tax limit. All seemed to be of one mind, that it was time to call a halt in Quincy's tax rate.

The taxpayers wish that they might also be heard on the debt limit, and some of the special Quincy acts that have been railroaded through the Legislature. The public dock act, the 30-year street improvement act, the water and sewer acts, etc., might meet with a protest equally strong.

Twenty and thirty year loans are too long, particularly when made for current expenses. They require too much for interest. We understand it is a fact that water mains laid in recent years by the city, which have not yet been paid for, are being replaced with larger pipe. Such water and sewer extensioens as are now required should be made without special act under the 10-year limit, and many of the so-called improvement loans now made for ten years should be for three or five years:

More important, however, is the use of "receipts." At the meeting of the City Council at which the hearing was held, appropriations were voted to be charged to "estimated receipts of 1913." This is an unknown quantity, and is like riding a free horse to death.

Every $18,000 of "receipts" appropriated before the tax rate is announced, will cause the tax rate of that year to be $1 higher than it otherwise would be. Because, if these receipts are not appropriated they will be used by the Assessors' to reduce the tax levy. Every dollar of receipts therefore counts double.

It is because the Council of 1913 appropriated so many receipts in the annual budget and since that the rate of 1913 will be higher. It was possible for the City Council to have reduced the tax rate this year.

TILLMAN TALKS ON SUFFRAGE

Declares Lustre of Glorious Womanhood Is Menaced

FEARS UNSPEAKABLE HORROR

Says Demand For Ballot Growing So Fast It Will Be Granted, Though It Means Ultimate Injury—Vigorously Attacks Diggs and Caminetti In Discussing Divorce Evil

Washington, Aug. 19.—Senator Tillman, showing some of the old-time vigor that won him the sobriquet of "Pitchfork Ben," pitched into woman's suffrage in a senate speech.

"It is a beautiful dream," said he, "that female suffrage will purify politics. The vital and important thing for us to consider is the effect on women themselves. We had better endure the evils of corruption in politics and debauchery in our government, rather than bring about a condition which will mar the beauty and dim the lustre of the glorious womanhood to which we have been accustomed all our lives. We can better afford to have degraded and corrupt politics than degraded and bad women.

"To have both in ever increasing degree, as was the case in Rome, would make the world so unspeakably horrible, as well as so corrupt, that good men and women both would disappear from the face of the earth and civilization would be blotted out like it was in the dark ages after the fall of Rome.

"I am so thoroughly a convert to the belief that you cannot touch pitch without being defiled that I shudder to think of the consequences to the womanhood of America should suffrage become universal, taking in both sexes and all races. Yet the experiment is going to be tried, I fear."

Tillman said the demand of women for suffrage was growing too fast to be stopped by "old fogies" like himself, and that it was apparent the men of the country would give them what they demanded, even though it be to their ultimate injury.

"I believe women will improve politics," said he, "but ultimately politics will destroy her as we know her, and love her, and when our good women are no longer to be found and we have lost the breed the doom of the republic is near."

Tillman included in his speech a vigorous attack upon the divorce evil and referred to the Diggs-Caminetti white slave cases in California.

"If the California men had our southern customs," he cried, "Diggs and Caminetti would not be alive now, because they would have been shot like dogs and the fathers of the girls they have ruined would be acquitted almost without the jury leaving the box. The unwritten law is the best law to protect women's virtue that I have heard of.

"The more I think about the Diggs-Caminetti case the more outraged I grow at the state of morals and society which not only permits such crimes but encourages them."

The danger of woman suffrage, said Tillman, was increased by the "cowardice of public men everywhere."

WANTS STRONGER STATUTE

Asiatic Exclusion League Calls Alien Land Law "Ineffective"

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—California's alien land law is declared to be "meaningless and ineffective," in the report made by the executive committee of the Asiatic Exclusion league.

It was announced that the report would be sent to civic, political and labor organizations throughout the country, and if possible, incorporated in the Congressional Record.

The report favors the enactment of a federal statute excluding Japanese from the United States, and it states that a colonization of California by Japanese similar to that in the Hawaiian islands is imminent under present conditions.

SEVERAL ARRESTS MADE

Vermont Store Looted of More Than $1000 In Jewelry and Clothing

Barnard, Vt., Aug. 19.—Jewelry and clothing to the value of more than $1000 was taken from the general store of Chase & Gilfillam by burglars who entered the establishment by forcing a rear window.

Twenty men found in a camp at Wells River and four discovered at St. Johnsbury have been taken into custody on suspicion. Several burglaries have occurred in this section of the state recently and the authorities believe an organized gang is at work.

Old Man Hangs Himself

Washington, Aug. 19.—Charges that rotten food is given to immigrants at Ellis island, N. Y., will be investigated at once, Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti announced.

WILL BROOK NO INTERFERENCE

Mexico Sends "Midnight" Ultimatum to United States

MUST RECOGNIZE REPUBLIC

Lind Still Hopeful, but Doubt Is Expressed as to Government Again Opening Subject For Discussion—Mediation Even of Friendly Character Will Not Be Tolerated

Mexico City, Aug. 19.—The United States government has been given until midnight by President Huerta to recognize Mexico, it is officially stated. The government is not specific in the public announcement as to what course will then be pursued, but it is understood that it means the severing of all relations between the two countries.

Huerta, in his reply last night, told the United States that he would tolerate no interference, even though that interference might be characterized as friendly mediation. The character of the reply of Washington to President Huerta's note will determine the next action in the international drama.

At the embassy there was an evident desire to appear optimistic and one was led to believe that John Lind still hoped for a continuation of the negotiations. Those familiar with the workings of the Mexican administration expressed doubt as to the government again opening the subject for discussion.

Huerta's failure to live up to what was regarded as the spirit of his recent note, in which he said Lind would be regarded as persona non grata if he did not bring to Mexico proper credentials, together with recognition of the republic by the United States, has caused the public to believe there was a possibility that he intend to receive with favor, in part at least, the suggestions of the Washington administration.

It appears, however, that the Mexican government's unofficial reception of Lind by Minister of Foreign Affairs Gamboa and the acceptance of the foreign secretary of Lind's preliminary note was merely an example of international courtesy due, perhaps, to a desire of Huerta to make clear his record in developing events.

Those most intimate with Huerta expressed no surprise in declaring that, in their opinion, Huerta had voiced his sentiments fully and unalterably when he stated publicly more than a week ago that he would brook no interference in the work of pacifying Mexico.

It is believed here that Huerta's attitude is likely to result in the early adoption of a policy of absolute non-interference on the part of the United States government, which probably will involve the lifting of the embargo against the importation of arms and ammunition by the rebels.

Husband and Father Found Dying Beside Dead Bodies

New York, Aug. 19.—The bodies of Mrs. Mary Lake and her four children, Horace, 17, Walter, 8, Stella, 18, and Dorothy, 14, were found in their Brooklyn home, horribly mangled.

Beside them, dying, was the husband and father, Henry Lake, a restaurant chef. Apparently he killed all five and then fatally wounded himself.

The tragedy occurred as early as last Thursday. Odors from the rooms alarmed neighbors and at their request the police broke in.

LOCKJAW KILLS BOY

Doctor Thinks Disease Was Induced by Scratches of a Cat

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 19.—Arthur S. Laurillar, Jr., 5 years old, of Swampscott, died from lockjaw, following infection of a vaccinated arm.

Dr. Pritchard, the physician who vaccinated him, is of the opinion that a cat's scratches on the arm induced the disease.

The boy was vaccinated about two weeks ago, while visiting his grandmother in a neighboring town. Three days ago blood poisoning set in. Lockjaw was a later development.

Vienna, Aug. 19.—The 83d birthday of Emperor Francis Joseph, the oldest monarch in the world, is being celebrated throughout the dual monarchy with great festivities. The emperor, who is in excellent health, is at Ischl, surrounded by his family.

A special feature of the observance was the unveiling of a statue of the emperor at the Technical Military academy at Moedling, near Vienna.

WILL RESUME LECTURES

Bryan Intends to Take Platform as His Needs May Require

Washington, Aug. 19.—Denying that he had abandoned his lecture engagements for the year and declaring he would resume this work as soon as he gets a chance to take a vacation, Secretary Bryan dictated the following statement:

"There has not been the slightest change in my plans and I have no thought of abandoning lecturing. I expect to lecture just as soon as I said I would and for the reasons that I gave.

"I take it for granted I will have a chance to take a vacation and during my vacation I expect to lecture as my needs may require. The only reason why my lecture dates have been cancelled during the past three weeks is because I have felt I should remain here owing to the work that the department has in hand."

CARMODY'S OPINION IS AGAINST SULZER

Attorney General Says Clinch Is New York's Governor

Albany, Aug. 19.—Lieutenant Governor Glynn is the lawful chief executive of New York state pending the outcome of the impeachment proceedings against Governor Sulzer, according to an official opinion rendered by Attorney General Carmody to Secretary of State May.

Carmody holds that the assembly was within its rights in instituting impeachment proceedings at an extraordinary session.

"When the governor is impeached by the assembly," says the opinion, "all of his powers are automatically suspended until he has been acquitted or the impeachment proceedings dismissed by the court of impeachment.

LEE WAS A NEGRO

Claim of Woman Who Says She Was Wife of Chicago Publisher

Chicago, Aug. 19.—William H. Lee, head of a publishing firm who lived in Chicago as a white man and died apparently without heirs, was claimed in the probate court by Mrs. Lucinda Anderson, a negress, of Benton Harbor, Mich., as her husband.

Lee began his career in a small New Hampshire town, it is said, after serving as valet in the Civil war to a confederate officer.

In a petition filed for Mrs. Anderson, it is alleged the publisher's real name was William A. Anderson, that he was a negro, though of light complexion, and that he deserted Mrs. Anderson thirty years ago.

Parcel Post Record Shipment

Albuqueque, N. M., Aug. 19.—What is believed to be a record shipment by parcel post passed through this city when 240 crates of peaches in transit from Farmington to Gallup, this state, were transferred here. The fruit will have traveled a distance of 1000 miles.

Woman Commits Double Murder

Millen, Ga., Aug. 19.—Mrs. Edna Godbee, divorced wife of Judge W. S. Godbee, shot and killed the judge and his second wife in the postoffice here.

Drowns While Bathing

Auburn, Me., Aug. 19.—Leon P. Wiley, aged 21, was drowned in the Little Androscoggin river while bathing.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col. John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Adams, the first Vice President and second President of the United States, Franklin street, Quincy Adams house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Admission charged.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erected June 17, 1896 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668; Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

President Adams Mansion.

Presidents Lane.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Dorothy Q. House.

Hancock street, corner Butler road Quincy, Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Owned by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames. To The Wearer of White Flannel Trousers

YOU know that it is almost impossible to keep flannel trousers from soiling. WE know that they are difficult to cleanse; still, if the stains on them can be removed by any known cleansing process, our method will surely make them look like new. Nearly all flannel trousers require more than one treatment to remove the different kinds of stains on them. At Warshaw's they are not limited to any one process; we do everything possible to make them clean. The new-like finish given them by our experienced pressmen brings out that standard of quality—"The Warshaw Crease;" it lasts.

This month we are cleansing and pressing MEN'S BUSINESS SUITS for $1.50; it's a discount of 25 per cent. Women's plain suits (linen, white or fancy suits not included) for $2; regular price $2.50 and $3.00.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Why Newspaper Advertising Pays:

1. The newspaper advertisement is not buried—it is accessible.
2. The newspaper advertisement of a commodity continually or daily needed is read by the very people whose continual or daily need the advertiser desires to supply.
3. The newspaper advertisement may be seen thirty times a month—it is not limited to one appearance.

Through the daily newspaper the advertiser can make a local and intimate appeal to his prospective customer in his own community and in his own vernacular.

HARPOON WINS BY GOOD MARGIN

Will Probably Be Selected to Meet German Sonders

Two races were held Monday at Marblehead in the elimination trials to select the yachts that will meet the Germans. The first race was sailed in the morning and was won by the Harpoon of Quincy, which finished with a good lead over the Cima, the second boat. The air in the morning race was light and full of streaks and it was only by following these streaks that Charlie Adams was enabled to win. The Ellen which has been declared to be the best in a light wind evidently did not find these streaks for she finished in sixth position.

A second race was started in the afternoon, with a very light breeze. When the first mark was reached however, the race was called off, as there did not seem to be any prospects for a better breeze.

Two races will be held today and early news from Marblehead indicated that the yachts would have plenty of air and some to spare for the races today.

QUINCY'S TAX LIMIT

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the order appropriating $1,500 for repairing the Neponset bridge. Report accepted, order took second reading, rules suspended and order passed.

STREET PERMITS.

The Committee on Ordinances reported an order relative to speaking in the public streets and places, and relative to parades, regulating the same and providing that no public speaking or parades shall be held without a permit in writing from the Mayor. It also provides that the hour of the speaking or parade shall be stated in the perimt, and if a parade, the route of the same. A penalty of $20 is provided for violation. Order ordered to a second reading.

ELECTION OFFICERS.

The list of election officers forwarded to the Council at the special meeting last week were confirmed.

TELEPHONE WIRES.

Petitons were received from the Telephone Company for attachments on West Squantum street, Bradford, Hamilton, Holmes, Safford, Payne and Vassal streets, Bates avenue, Billings road and West Elm avenue and for a relocation for one pole on Sea street. Granted.

BUCKLEY CLAIM.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the City Solicitor relative to the claim of Catherine Buckley. The communication stated that a verdict for the city had been rendered but an expense of $416 had been incurred.

Councilman Hadlock offered an order appropriating $416 for the expenses of the suit charging the same to estimated receipts of 1913. Read and referred to Finance Committee.

APPOINTMENTS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Thomas H. Monahan a weigher of coal and a measurer of wood, and George E. Kramer a special constable on the premises of John Stuart. Confirmed.

The hour for the public hearing had now been reached but in order that the other business might be transacted on motion of Councilman Bryant the hearing was postponed for five minutes.

NEW GARBAGE HOUSE.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Board of Health stating that the garbage house near the city stables had collapsed and that the garbage collected was exposed to the weather, and asked an appropriation for a new garbage house.

Councilman Thompson then offered an order appropriating $1,000 for a new garbage house charging the same to the estimated receipts for 1913. Read and referred to the Finance Committee.

TAX LIMIT.

The public hearing on the tax limit was then held.

H. C. Lowe asked for the reading of the law that it might be known by the citizens just what it was. President Whiton then read the section of he law relative to fixing the tax limit, as published in the Daily Ledger.

Fred F. Green asked if the affirmative was to be heard first and those opposed next. President Whiton said that any one who desired to be heard would be given an opportunity to speak pro or con.

Mr. Green then wanted to know if the City Solicitor had furnished an opinion making the Mayor and city officials immune from being questioned. President Whiton replied that he had received such an opinion.

The first speaker was Timothy Moriarty. He started in to argue about the high taxes, but was told that taxes had nothing to do with this hearing. He thought it did with his high tax bill. He finally got down to business and favored a tax limit of $5.

On motion of Councilman Gilliatt it was voted that those in favor of raising the tax limit be heard first, and those opposed to raising the limit next.

EX-PRESIDENT NICHOLS.

Ex-President of the City Council, Walter F. Nichols, was the first speaker. He opposed raising the limit. There were reasons why the limit should not be raised, but it would take much time to go into detail. The City Council is limited to $12 for current expenses. What would be the result by raising the limit? There must be some reason. Is the city unable to raise enough for current expenses under the present limit? With an increased rate and the same financial management the tax rate would be problematical. It is fair to presume, however, that the rate would be much higher.

During his seven years as a member of the City Council he had found that with economical management the city could get along with the $12 limit, with the natural increase in valuation. He hoped that the City Council would not increase the limit.

PRESIDENT HAMILTON.

John L. Hamilton, president of the Board of Trade, said that the matter had not been brought to the attention of the Board of Trade, but he felt certain that if it was he would be instructed to oppose any increase in the tax limit. He believed the city was able to get along with the present limit under the present financial condition and that an increase would restrict the growth of the city.

SQUANTUM PROTESTS.

W. J. Kenyon, speaking for the residents of Squantum said they were opposed to raising the limit. We at Squantum feel that the city should get along with what can be raised under the $12 limit. They also felt that this would provide for the expenses of the city, if properly guarded.

Mr. Kenyon was asked by Councilman Cunningham if he thought that the $12 limit controlled the tax rate, to which Mr. Kenyon replied that the Councilman was better able to answer that question than he was.

He was also asked if as a financial man he did not think that it would be better for the city to proceed on the pay-as-you-go policy. That is if it was not better to have shorter loans.

Mr. Kenyon replied that if it was in the nature of a permanent improvement and would last for 25 years he did not see why it should be paid for immediately.

DELCEVARE KING.

D. King, representing the Quincy Real Estate Trust, told how his tax bill had been increasing and felt that in increase would have a tendency to increase the tax rate. In answer to questions by Councilman Cunningham he said that he did not know just how it would increase the rate but he thought that it would have a tendency to increase it. While the present rate was not an absolute check it had a tendency to check the increase.

FRED F. GREEN.

Mred . Green opposed any increase in limit. The present rate was sufficient to pay municipal expenses. With an annual increase in the limit, $15,000 to $20,000 should be able to keep pace with the growth of the city. If increased to $14 the same methods in vogue will be continued. The City Council was not entirely to blame for the debt. He also spoke of orders being framed down below and being lobbied through the council. You have been told that extra money will be spent for streets, but if you give then $2 more it will be spent for political purposes. To increase the tax rate means to retard the growth of the city. If increased to $14 it would mean a tax rate of $26.

At the speaker's suggestion all who were in favor of increasing the rate were requested to rise. Not a person stood up. When those opposed were requested to rise everybody in the audience arose.

The hearing was then closed and the Council adjourned at 8.37. Councilmen Bailey, Bass and Johnson were absent.

DISTRICT COURT.

Vincenso Quintilla, charged with threatening to commit assault and battery was fined $25 and placed under $300 bonds to keep the peace for three months.

Peter Kojoy, charged with carrying a revolver without a license, dismissed.

Michael Russo, charged with assault with intent to kill ordered to jail without bail for hearing on Aug. 23.

James Donavon and Adam Fenhaven, charged with drunkenness, placed on probatieon until Oct. 1, 1913.

—The operation and maintenance of a motor car is frequently a more serious financial problem than the first cost of the outfit. A wealthy Philadelphian who died recently recognized this fact, for he not only left his car to a friend, but he accompanied the bequest with an annunity of $1500 a year for its upkeep. On these conditions many persons would be glad to receive an automobile as a gift.—Milford Gazette.

SCHOOL HYGIENE CONGRESS.

Elaborate Plans by Committee for a Six Day Program—300 Speakers, ..Many of International Note.

"By far the most elaborate effort ever made in this country toward improving the health and efficiency of school children"——such in brief is the announcement of the Executive Committee organizing the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene which will meet at Buffalo the week of August 25-30th, and which will be attended by delegates now gathering not only from all the leading important communities of this country, but from all the leading nations of the world.

OVER 300 SPEAKERS.

Are little Johnnie and little Susie attending school in a sanitary class room? Are they spending too many hours in school? Are they hiding germs of diphtheria, or scarlet fever? Are they given plenty of fresh air? Are they given good drinking water? Are they given proper rest rooms, and suitable vacations? Are they suffering from poor eyesight; bad breathing apparatus, and defective hearing—these are a few of the questions to which the educators of today are giving a large amount of attention, and which will be taken up at Buffalo by experts from all over the world.

Altogether six days will be devoted to the Congress and over 300 speakers will tell the results of their experience and observations, and make known the best methods at hand for improving the health and efficiency of school children.

IN NEED OF HELP

An important feature of the Buffalo program will be a large number of papers dealing with the present condition of the twenty million school children in the United States, some fifteen million of whom according to recent statistics are in need of attention because of physical defects which are prejudicial to health and which seriously interfere with these children making the best of their time while in school.

At least 600,000 school children in the United States suffering from tuberculosis, and consequently an urgent need of open air instruction, will be one of the subjects taken up at Buffalo.

WHAT IS BEING DONE.

Not only will the various speakers call attention to the presence of bad conditions, they will also make plain what is being done to better these conditions, by the building of sanitary school houses, with arrangements for abundant lighting, good air, and proper heating apparatus. In connection with these papers there will be shown a notable scientific exhibit, representing the best that is being done in school hygiene throughout the world, together, with a commercial exhibit of a practical and educational value to school people. Motion pictures will be used by a large number of speakers for the purpose of illustrating their papers, and one of the special features on the program of sex hygiene will be a presentation of the socialogical drama "Damaged Goods."

BUFFALO'S CONTRIBUTION.

For the purpose of defraying the expenses of the Congress the citizens of Buffalo have contributed $75000. Boy Scouts will act as official guides and interpreters during the Congress, and elaborate plans are now being completed for the entertainment of visiting delegates. There will be receptions at the various clubs, automobile trips to the parks of Buffalo, where polo and tennis exhibitions will be given. There will also be an exhibition of folk-dancing interspersed by the combined choral societies of the city, together with trips to the scenic wonders of Niagara Falls.

COMMUNITY DELEGATES.

Since the object of the Congress is "to bring together men and women interested in the health of school children," Dr. Thomas A. Storey, Secretary-General of the Congress, in behalf of the organizing committee, has extended an invitation not only to those directly interested, such as school officials and physicians, but also to all persons and organizations interested in civic welfare, and accordingly one of the interesting features of the Congress will be the presence of delegates representing the community interest in this important health work; that is to say, delegates appointed by the mayors and governors, by women's clubs, by boards of health, by mothers' congresses, parents' associations, charity organization societies, city and state boards of trade.

In the list of contributors to the program will be found the names of a large number of speakers of international note, including college presidents and professors, commissioners of education, public school officials, public health officers, physicians in private practice, engineers, architects, and civic health workers.

DR. ELIOT TO PRESIDE.

The Chairman of the Buffalo Citizens Committee, is Dr. Roswell Park the surgeon who attended President McKinley in his last days at Buffalo. Dr. Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard University will act as President of the Congress. The Secretary-General is Thomas A. Storey, Professor of Hygiene at the College of the City of New York.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

A very large and, as usual, well pleased audience, last night enjoyed the new program at this attractive amusement house. And judging from the laughter and applause throughout the show, crowded houses will be on hand tonight and tomorrow night, and many hundreds more at the matinees both days.

Torelli's Dog and Pony Circus proved a star attraction. The beautiful ponies and trained dogs did many remarkable feats and their tricks and tumbling turned the audience into an uproar of applause. The climax of the circus came with the appearance of Bessie (Maud's Sister) the funny mule. Several unsuccessful attempts to ride this wise mule were made by several young men, greatly to the amusement of the audience.

Max Holden gave a splendid exhibition of Shadowgraph work that showed skill and caused lots of laughter. Campbell and Downey, the political Rubes, passed out a new line of patter that did not fail in its mission to please. In fact, even when they respond to an encore the audience was loth to let them go.

A FOX-TERRIER DEACON

A chance visitor to a church in Beechmont returned telling a wonderful story of a dog which performed the duties of a deacon with persistence and despatch.

When the visitor took a back seat in the building, inasmuch as the services had already begun, he suddenly became aware of the presence of a bright-looking fox terrier, which was sitting on its haunches and holding up an envelope in its fore paws. He took it and saw that it was an ordinary contribution envelope. Not appreciating the delicate point the dog wished to convey, he handed it back to the expectant canine, which quietly trotted away. A few minutes later, however, back the four-footed messenger came. He reared himself up again and held out the envelope. This time the visitor understood that a suggestion was being made to him to chip in his mite and so he pulled out a coin and dropped it into the envelope. Here the story might easily have stopped, but the contributor asseverated that before leaving that time the terrier gave a short bark of thanks and bowed profoundly.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—According to a Washington news dispatch, experts in the department of agriculture have set about the task of evolving a rooster which does not crow. It is a commendable undertaking, and if success should attend it only so far to do away with the crowing at unseemly hours in the morning, a grateful public will praise and bless the department without regard to political preferences or prejudices.

Advertising Is The Strong Arm Of Business

By HOLLAND.

THE strong arm of business protects you and all the other ninety odd millions of inhabitants of the United States against fraud and deception. It enables you and all other buyers to buy intelligently and with the assurance of getting goods that are just what they seem to be, just what they should be.

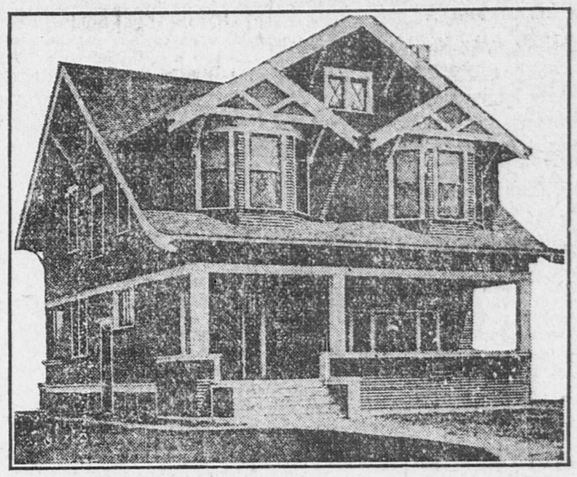

ADVERTISING IS THIS STRONG ARM OF BUSINESS.

Its tremendous power is exercised principally through the newspapers because in this way it reaches the greatest number, practically all of the people under Uncle Sam's flag. You can further the good work of this protective agency by reading the advertisements in this and in other newspapers regularly and closely. You owe it to yourself to do this because you thereby save time and money.

INDIVIDUALITY IN DESIGN.

Design 736, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The exterior of this house represents individuality in design. The roof treatment gives the appearance of a story and a half bungalow, yet all of the windows are full height. There are four good sized rooms in the first story, besides a large pantry and den. Size, 28 feet wide and 32 feet deep over the main part. Full basement. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet. Finish in first story clear quality of red oak, with birch or southern pine throughout second story. Maple or birch floors throughout both stories. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $3,500.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains about 250 up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

His Experience.

Pension Officer—Well, Michael, so you're living yet?

Michael (aged seventy-five)—'Deed, an' I am, sor, an' I always notice that anny year I don't die in March I don't die at all that year.—Punch.

OLD PLYMOUTH DESCENDANTS.

At the banquet at Hotel Samoset, Plymouth, recently of the Old Plymouth Colony Descendants of which Lysander L. Richards is president, there were three regents of different chapters of the Daughters of the Revolution present. The Society is increasing in numbers. Members are scattered over the country including Missouri, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, South Carolina, Alabama and many other states. The Society meets every year, where their forefathers landed nearly 300 years ago at Plymouth. This is the fourth year they have met and held a banquet at Hotel Samoset. No one is eligible unless their forefathers landed at Plymouth prior to 1640.

Any one who can trace their line of descent from their Old Colony ancestor to the present, on applying to the president, L. S. Richards, Marshfield Hills, and paying one dollar entrance fee can become a member. No further annual assessment is made. Quincy is represented in the Society.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Bert Brady, aged 25, of Natick, is at the police station for safe keeping following an attempt to commit suicide in the Bay View House on Washington street, Monday night. He will be detained for observation.

Lodgers in the house heard groans issuing from the closed room and on entering found Brady, semi-conscious from having swallowed an ounce of iodine. Dr. Bushnell was called and removed the poison with a stomach pump. Brady said that until a few days ago he had been employed at the Fore River yards.

ARRESTED IN BOSTON.

Giuseppe de Salvatore, 29 years old, of 9 Water street, South Quincy, was arrested by Patrolman Horgan of the Hanover street station Monday evening on a charge of a assault with a dangerous weapon on Cammillo de Mato on Henchman street, Boston. The police allege that Salvatore slashed de Mato about the left hand. The assault occurred early in the evening.

Lion and Locomotive.

A construction train was puffing along with a heavy load of material, near Gwelo, when a full grown lion was sighted stretched right across the line and basking peacefully in the sun. In reply to the whistle of the engine the brute looked up lazily, but did not attempt to move. The efforts of the driver and the stoker to drive him off the line by pelting him with billets of wood were no better rewarded. The train was on the point of coming to a standstill when the lion lost his temper. He took a sudden spring at the engine, seeking in vain for something on its smooth surface into which he could drive his claws and thus secure a foothold. Again and again the beast sprang, falling clear of the engine every time. The driver then realized that the best thing to do was to go full steam ahead and trust to the weight of the trucks behind the train on the line to clear the lion from its path. This was done, with the result that the lion, a magnificent specimen, was cut to pieces by the engine wheels. —"Cape to Cairo Railway" in Empire Magazine.

Rest Before Eating.

In the first place, never come to table with a mind full of worries and troubles or in an irritable state of temper, nor, again, should you attempt to eat when very fatigued. Both these states tend to diminish the blood supply to the digestive organs and therefore to hinder digestion. Do not read or study when eating, but also do not sit glumly silent. A little pleasant conversation is helpful and prevents one getting into the obnoxious and dangerous habit of bolting one's food. Masticate your food thoroughly. The preservation of the teeth depends largely on the use or misuse of them at meal times. To maintain them in health and strength they must be given plenty of work to do. Also in order that your meals may be properly digested they must be well masticated. Especially is this necessary in the case of farinaceous or starchy foods.—"Health In Business."

Sensitive Cheese.

"A cheese in the making is as sensitive to a cold as you are," said a cheese monger. "The finest cheese if it is left in a draft will catch cold and deteriorate. There will be no flavor to that cheese thereafter. You mustn't bruise a cheese either. Knock its face and it will discolor, like flesh, and the hurt place will spoil. A cheese, in fact, is flesh for the most part—a solid mass of living microbes—and that's why it catches cold and bruises. It's alive, you see, like you and me. Fancy cheeses are made by a secret process. Thus Gorgonzola, the Italian cheese, is made of goats' milk and ripened in caves, and its characteristic blue veins are the result of stabs from a copper wire. Dutch cheeses are coagulated by means of an acid. Swiss cheese by means of sour milk and English cheese by means of rennet."—Los Angeles Times.

Ships of the Unchanging Line.

Perhaps you have watched the evolutions of the battleship fleet in formation and have wondered whether those great ships, preserving that perfect alignment and distance, must not be parts of one single whole. If you are on board of them the illusion is still more striking. Perhaps you will not observe the slightest change in the line forward or aft in a day's time. One man in especial will never forget how, standing on the same spot on the bridge of the Rhode Island steaming northward from Peru, he saw the sun set three nights in succession over the identical funnel of the Maine, following behind. As the red ball sank into the South Pacific the smoke pipe split it evenly to the watcher's sight, three nights running!—New York Post.

Dress Trousers.

Wise men make a point of having two pairs of trousers to each evening coat, and one pair of trousers is of heavy cloth. Trousers of this kind are probably of the same thickness as those worn in the day. They last longer than trousers of thin cloth and look better all the time, because they are not easily knocked out of shape with continuous hard wear every evening. Knowing this, some men make a point of always having the trousers of their evening suit made of cloth a little thicker than that of the coat.—London Standard.

The Amende Honorable.

"So!" roared Bilkins, seizing Wiggles by the arm. "I've found you at last! You called me a jackass at the club the other day, and, by ginger, you've got to apologize."

"All right, Bilk," said Wiggles. "Anything to oblige. Lead me to the real jackass and I'll apologize to his face."—Harper's Weekly.

A Stern Censor.

An English censor once passed a play called "London Life." In the third act of the play the hero, entering a restaurant, calls for a chop and a jug of musty ale. Opposite this speech the censor wrote, "During Lent the order must be a glass of water and a plate of dry toast."

Man and His Muscles.

The total strength of all the muscles in the body of a strong man can be estimated at about 10,000 pounds. Apart from the voluntary muscles, which number over 500, there are infinite involuntary ones which are even too great to attempt to estimate.

Decorations.

"Why do you think so much of being decorated? It doesn't give you ability."

"No, but it makes people think I have some."—Pele Mele.

SUFFRAGIST'S VIEW OF MARRIED LIFE

Says It Is Too Often Idle Luxury or Drudgery For Women

Chicago, Aug. 19.—"Many of our women in the wealthy middle classes live in a state of sex parasitism, dependent on man and kept by him in a 'harem of one' in luxury and comfort without doing one iota of mental or physical work. With the other classes marriage simply means more work," said Miss Esther Dresden, president of the Young Women's Suffrage alliance, in an address before members of that organization.

"When women become economically independent," continued Miss Dresden, "they will marry only for love. Under present conditions they enter the industrial field until they can procure a life job of domestic work via a husband.

"Today, no matter what work women do before their marriage, upon marriage they are all reduced to the low level of kitchen drudges."

NAVAL ACADEMY EXAMS

Educators Are to Decide Whether They Are Too Severe

Washington, Aug. 19.—Whether the entrance examinations for the naval academy are so rigid as to be virtually prepositive is a question the navy department is to leave to the decision of a jury of educators.

The department, stung by repeated charges that the examinations were unfair and illogical, has determined to submit the matter to 2000 high school principals and college professors in every part of the United States.

Italian Lake Again Missing

Rome, Aug. 19.—Italian scientists and expert hydrographers are again puzzled by the sudden disappearance of the waters of Lake Canterno, while the population of the district is in mortal fear of some impending catastrophe. It disappears every twenty years.

Alleged $92,000 Bandit Caught

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 19.—Henry Enis, suspected of being one of the two bandits who robbed a train near Hattiesburg, Miss., and secured $92,000 from the Southern Express company safe, was captured near Carbon Hill, Ala. He was placed in jail here.

WARRANT OUT FOR HIS ARREST

Thaw Meanwhile Has Dropped Completely Out of Sight

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

Keeper Barnum and Five Men Who Managed Escape From Matteawan Are Included—Mother Happy Over Receipt of Letter From Fleeing Son —Ready to Fight Extradition

New York, Aug. 19.—The police of the United States and Canada have got picked up the trail of Harry K. Thaw. They seek him not as the slayer of Stanford White or as an escaped lunatic, but on a warrant issued at Poughkeepsie charging him with conspiring with the aged keeper, Howard Barnum, and the five men who managed the asylum delivery.

On such a technicality does New York base its hope of bringing about the fugitive's return. Both factions of the double-barrelled government at Albany have promised rigid investigation and the exertion of every effort to bring about his capture.

Thaw's seclusion is absolute. Out of the cloud of dust which swirled in the wake of the black automobile bearing him and his liberators from Matteawan Sunday morning nothing tangible has come except a letter from Thaw himself, assuring his mother in New York that he desired rest and would, in due time, join her at the Thaw country place at Cresson, Pa. In obedience to this plan, Mrs. Thaw purposes to start for Cresson today.

Happy, girlish almost, in her joy, Mrs. Thaw exhibited the hastily scrawled note from her son, whose escapades have cost the family a million, and added that whatever Harry did would meet with her approval. This, in view if his announced intention of entering Pennsylvania, gave basis to the belief that Thaw was preparing to take his case before the courts of that state and, relying on the kink in American laws relative to the insane charged with no crime, to oppose extradition.

It was in anticipation of such a move that the New York authorities caused the warrant to be sworn out at Poughkeepsie. Conspiracy, according to the district attorney at Dutchess county, constitutes an extraditable offense.

Close associates to the family indicated that the groundwork of a legal fight in Pennsylvania had already been laid. Dr. Britton D. Evans, the alienist who testified in Thaw's behalf at the murder trials, held a telephone conference with Mrs. Thaw and it was said he would accompany her to Pennsylvania. There are to be conferences with counsel and meantime, it is understood, Thaw is to remain in hiding.

Figuratively, as well as literally, Thaw left behind him only a cloud of Dutchess county dust. Rumors of his passage, descriptions of black automobiles, tales of yacht boardings in Long Island sound, speckled the news The yacht Endymion of George Lauder, Jr., a distant relative of the Thaws by marriage, found mention in the crop of rumors.

While there is nothing to support the theory that Thaw has taken to the seas, this seems to those who have followed the case to be the likeliest course. Leaving Matteawan, only two routes which did not double back into New York state, lay open to him. One lay north by land to Canada, thence northeast along the the border of the Great lakes, and across Lake Erie to a north-jutting nubbin of Pennsylvania. The other is is the water route. Aboard ship in the sound Thaw could bide his time in comparative safety and make his way to Philadelphia via Delaware bay and Delaware river.

MONEY BOUGHT RELEASE?

New York Papers Unanimous In Scoring Existing Conditions

New York newspapers comment on Thaw's escape as follows:

Times—What the rich Thaw family could not effect by a succession of legal proceedings, what it was unable to do by bribery of state officials, it has now accomplished by force.

Tribune—With the escape of Thaw the scandal is complete. The public needs no more proof that the murderer with money is safe.

Herald—Scandals in our state institutions have been so swiftly following each other that literally they "one another's heels do tread," but the latest may well cause the most serious thought. The state is without a governor, and, in sooth, it also seems to be without much law or order.

Sun—People have often wondered why, with his masterly pecuniary arguments and the easy collusion of inside and outside friends, he has not taken leg-bail before. What cafe is he in? Whom will he kill next?

World—There has never before been so shameless a devotion of great wealth to degrade justice on behalf of a worthless degenerate as in this case. It is not alone a demoralized state government which we have. It is a demoralizing state government, as this case shows, and no state institution can hope altogether to escape the consequences.

American—It may be only a coincidence, the escape of Harry K. Thaw from the Matteawan state asylum for the criminal insane at a time when the government of the state is hopelessly demoralized. But such an incident and more like it may be expected.

INQUIRY IS ORDERED

Prison Chief Will Personally Examine Officials at Matteawan

Albany, Aug. 19.—A sweeping investigation of the escape of Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan was ordered by Superintendent of Prisons Riley. In addition he will personally examine all officials of the asylum. A report that bribery had been used to free Thaw attracted the attention of the superintendent.

"It seems very strange to me that Thaw was able to get away in the manner he did," said Riley. "I am making no charges that money was used. But it is somewhat peculiar that events turned out as they have. The customary reward has been offered for his apprehension."

Riley said he did not care to discuss any steps that might be taken for the return of Thaw to custody. That was a legal matter for the legal officials of the state. He said he had reported the escape to both Governor Sulzer and Lieutenant Governor Glynn.

STRONGHOLD CAPTURED

Two of Castro's Leaders Reported Killed During Operations

Willemstad, Curacao, Aug. 19.—Coro, the town in the state of Falcon, where revolutionary followers of General Cipriano Castro, the former dictator of Venezuela, struck their first blow in an attempt to overthrow President Gomez, has been recaptured by government troops after a fierce battle, according to advices brought here by a schooner from the scene of hostilities.

The revolutionary leaders, General Gonzales and General Urbina, are said to have been killed in the fight.

A small force of government troops is reported to have been defeated at Cinamaica by rebels.

General Torres Castro, a relative of General Cipriano Castro, and his followers, who were captured at Macuro, have been incarcerated in the fort at Puerto Cabello.

THIRTY-TWO PERISH ON SUNKEN STEAMER

Goes Down Three Minutes After Striking an Uncharted Rock

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 19.—Twenty-five or more passengers and seven members of the crew of the steamer State of California perished in Cambier bay, ninety miles south of Juneau, when the vessel struck an uncharted rock and sank in three minutes with many passengers imprisoned in their staterooms.

The steamship left Seattle last Wednesday night for Skagway and way points. The purser lost all his records, and it is impossible to give a complete list of the missing. A great hole was torn in the bottom of the State of California. The vessel and cargo, mail and express are a total loss. The ship was valued at $400,000.

The steamship Jefferson heard the wireless call of the sinking vessel and turned back to rescue the survivors who had taken to small boats and life rafts.

AMERICAN GUNBOAT SAFE

Wind Blws 105 Miles an Hour During Typhoon at Hong Kong

Hong Kong, Aug. 19.—A typhoon which raged here attained a velocity of 105 miles an hour and when it was at its height caused the gunboat Wilmington, attached to the third division of the United States Asiatic fleet, to fire distress signals. A tug towed the warship to shelter.

When the typhoon had moderated the British destroyer Otter steamed out of the harbor in search of the pleasure yacht Truy, which had on board the officers of the British receiving ship Tamar. The officers were safely landed by the destroyer.

A number of small boats in the harbor itself. Lake died yesterday afternoon.

TO BUILD GOOD ROADS

Dillingham Would Thus Use Revenue From Federal Income Tax

Washington, Aug. 19.—Good roads to be paid for from the federal income tax is the idea of Senator Dillingham of Vermont as embodied in an amendment to the tariff bill offered by him.

The senator would retain such protective duties throughout as also to provide ample revenue and would devote the receipts from the income tax to road improvement, these to be apportioned among the states in proportion to population, each state to contribute a like sum.

Eccentric Swiss living in Moscow left $10 in his will to a Geneva editor to "drink to my death on Jan. 1 and Aug. 1 of every year." The editor never heard of the man, but will accept the bequest.

Ludwig Keisewetter

A Story Showing That It Is Better to Be Too Much Hated Than Too Much Loved

By F. A. MITCHEL

The Widow Keisewetter dwelt on the bank of the river Rhine in peace and comfort, having inherited from her husband a vineyard which produced one of those wines for which that region is famous. Frau Keisewetter was wrapt up in her only child, Ludwig, who had taken a degree at the University of Heidelberg and was an excellent young man. But Ludwig had one fault. He was so serious that no one ever came near him who did not become repelled by him. The only person who had ever seen him smile was his mother. When he was a baby she used to chirp to him just to see his face break into dimples and the roguish look in his eyes. As he grew older she found it difficult to produce this effect, and when he became a young man he very rarely smiled even at her.

Ludwig as a boy had played with a little girl, Lena Stieber, whose father owned the vineyard adjoining Widow Keisewetter's. As the children grew older the intimacy became love on Ludwig's part, but not on Lena's. She realized his worth, but could not endure his seriousness. Only once had she seen him smile, and then she was enraptured with him. But when days, weeks, months, passed and his face continued to wear the same gloomy expression the effect died away and association with him became depressing.

This defect in her son caused the widow great sorrow. She desired him to marry to perpetuate the family name and produce an heir for the vineyard, and when she found that Lena Stieber would not have him she endeavored to make a match for him with some other girl. She selected one girl after another. There were many girls who wished for just such a husband, but there was none who could stand Ludwig's seriousness. So long as he could not win Lena, he did not care whom he married and would have accepted any one his mother selected for him if he had been himself acceptable. But there was not a girl within a distance of fifty miles who would marry him.

Frau Keisewetter heard of Professor Coblesteiner, who was working wonders in Cologne about that time in hypnotism. It occurred to her that probably he might by hypnotic influence give her son a cheerfulness that would show itself in his countenance. She wrote the professor to that effect and received a reply that he could influence her son while in the hypnotic state in any direction, but that he doubted if the condition could be made permanent. He was making some experiments in securing permanent effects and should be glad to include her son in the number of his subjects.

So anxious was the good woman to get rid of Ludwig's defect that she begged him to go to Cologne and put himself under Professor Coblesteiner's influence. Ludwig, who knew something about hypnotism, had no faith in it. At least, he had no faith in his disposition being so changed as to alter the expression of his face. But to please his mother he consented to go. So he mounted his horse, and, kissing her goodby, promising her that he would give Professor Coblesteiner every facility to serve him, he started on his journey.

Now, Frau Keisewetter had been so diligent in hunting for a girl who would marry her son that she had tried every girl living both up and down the river. Since Ludwig traveled down the river, he passed the homes of girls who had been tried living in that direction. The fact had spread that young Keisewetter, who was so serious looking that he could not get a wife, was going to Cologne to have his disposition changed, and the girls who had refused to marry him were watching him from behind blinds as he went by.

"He would make an excellent model for a tombstone."

"'Tis better to laugh than to cry."

"Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone."

"I would rather marry an Egyptian mummy."

These were some of the remarks of the girls who were watching Ludwig.

So Ludwig gloomily journeyed on down the river, unconscious of the remarks made from behind the blinds by those who had refused him, hoping, though not expecting, that some good would result from his journey.

When Ludwig left home it was expected that he would remain under Professor Coblesteiner's care for a week or two. But at the end of that time the professor wrote Frau Keisewetter that he had found in her son a very peculiar patient, one especially susceptible to his influence, and he hoped that by hypnotizing him frequently for several months to break the lugubrious spell that rested upon him.

At the end of four months the widow received a letter from the professor stating that he had ceased to put her son under hypnotic influence. The young man had not yet relapsed into his former condition, but the professor could not tell how long this present one would last. He was sending Ludwig home to remain there while waiting developments.

Frau Keisewetter was so filled with hope and enthusiasm that she told all her friends that her son was coming home cured. The news traveled, and before Ludwig left Cologne it had reached even to that city. The young man had not ridden half an hour before he passed the house of Gretchen Hallub, who was watching for him. She went out into the road to congratulate him. He greeted her with a smile that she considered the most beautiful she had ever seen in a man's face. Clasping her hands in hesitancy, she said:

"Oh, Ludwig, how changed you are!"

"Ha, ha!" gently laughed Ludwig, but he did not stop, and Gretchen walked along beside him, talking to him, he looking down upon her with that heavenly smile and an occasional soft "Ha, ha!" Then another girl ran out of a house and added her congratulations to those of the first, taking the other side of his horse from Gretchen. So Ludwig was kept turning his head from one side to the other, smiling at each alternately, while now and then a musical "Ha, ha!" came from him like the soft piping of a bird.

As Ludwig proceeded one after another the girls who had watched him from behind blinds on his outward journey came forth to congratulate him, and it seemed as if the hypnotic spell that had been thrown upon him by professor Cobleteiner was communicating itself to each and every girl, for all the girls followed him, and none of them seemed to have the power to turn back to her home. But an old curmudgeon who lived on the road and saw the procession of girls led by Ludwig took his pipe out of his mouth long enough to grunt and say:

"Look at those girls! When the man went to Cologne none of them wanted him. Now they all want him, and no one will give way to the others."

Frau Keisewetter was informed of the hour her son would arrive and went out before her house to welcome him. Lena Stieber had always been her choice for her son's wife, and she asked Lena to be with her when he came. So Lena was there waiting with the widow.

Presently they heard a babel of sweet voices, above which sounded an occasional merry "Ha, ha!" and, looking up, saw Ludwig ambling along on his horse surrounded by every girl who lived between the vineyard and Cologne. Strange to say, there was not that bickering which might have been expected from so many girls who wanted the same man. It was held in check by the beautiful smile he gave each one of them, causing her to believe that she was the best beloved of all.

When Lena saw this procession she turned on her heel and went into the house. Ludwig, coming up to the house, dismounted and, taking his mother in his arms, kissed her, then asked for Lena. She came out looking like a thunder cloud. This at once broke the spell of Ludwig's charming good nature, and every girl was clamoring at every other girl, upbraiding her as bold and shameless, declaring that she, and she alone, was the first, the original one whom Frau Keisewetter had asked to marry her son.

The widow drew the young man into the house with Lena and slammed the door in the faces of the others.

"What shall I do?" asked Ludwig, wringing his hands.

"I will tell you what to do," said Lena decidedly. "Go back to Professor Cobleteiner and bid him remove the hypnotic spell and make you again what you were. Do this and I will marry you."

So Ludwig, when it was dark, stole out of the house and returned secretly to Cologne. In a few days he came back again to his home and married Lena Stieber. His disposition was much improved by marriage—that is, after some years, when he and his wife had got used to each other. He has never forgotten having been followed by so many girls and even to this day clings to his wife in the presence of other women for protection. He says that he prefers that all women, except his wife, should hate him rather than that all women should love him.

Our Rude Language.

There are great differences between the richness and poorness of words in the different countries. Japan is certainly richer in its words than England. Just for example we have more than nine words for the word "I." The emperor alone calls himself "Chin," and all his subjects call themselves "Watakushi," "Washi," "Ore," "Boku," "Sessha," "Sorogashi," "Yare," "Yo," etc., according to circumstances. The second or third person changes as much as the first person. "I," and all the verbs accordingly. When I started to learn the English first time, I asked my American teacher, "What shall I call myself before the emperor?" He said, "I."

"Then what shall I say before my parents?"

"I."

"What shall I say before my men friends? And before my women friends?"

"I."

I was quite astonished and said: "How simple, but how rude is the English language!"—Yoshio Markino in Atlantic.

Force of Short Words.

A man who acts as tutor and companion to a young boy wrote this indorsement on one of the boy's compositions: "Use shorter words. Follow the example of Horatio Seymour. This is part of an address delivered by him to students in 1878: 'Short words, like love, hate or zeal, have a clear ring which stirs our minds or touches hearts. They but tell of joy or grief, of rage or peace, of life or death. They are felt by all, for their terms mean the same thing to all men. We learn them in youth. They are on our lips through all days, and we utter them down to the close of life. They are the apt terms with which we speak of things which are high or great or noble. They are the grand words of our tongue. They teach us how the world was made. God said, "Let there be light, and there was light." Mark the words of more than one syllable.'"—New York Tribune.

Think Strangers Bring Disease.

The inhabitants of St. Kilda, like those of Niue, regard the landing of strangers as fraught with danger to their health. John Sands, who thirty odd years ago spent some months in St Kilda, writes that "the most extraordinary complaint that visits the island is called the strangers' cold. The natives firmly believe that the arrival of a boat communicates this disease. They say too the illness is more severe when the ship or boat comes from Harris and that they suffer less when the vessel comes from Glasgow or London. It is curious that every one caught this distemper when an Austrian vessel visited the island during my stay there. Not one St. Kildan escaped. The symptoms are a severe headache and pain and stiffness in the muscles of the jaw, a deep rough cough and rapid pulse."—London Chronicle.

The Word "Transpire."

Richard Grant White in his "Word and Their Uses" says: "Transpire means to breathe through and so to pass off insensibly. The identical word exists in French, in which language it is equivalent to our perspire, which also means to breathe through, and so to pass off insensibly. The Frenchman says, 'J'ai beaucoup transpire' (I have much perspired). In fact, transpire and perspire are etymologically as near perfect synonyms as the nature of language permits. The latter, however, has by common consent been set apart in English to express the passage of a watery secretion through the skin, while the former is properly used only in a figurative sense to express the passage of knowledge from a limited circle to publicity."

Child Marriages In England.

Child marriages were common enough in England a century or two ago. Wards of the crown in particular were frequently married before they reached their teens. Some children were married at the age of five, while from nine to twelve was considered quite a marriageable age for girls. Little Moll Villiers, daughter of the Duke of Buckingham, was not merely a wife, but a widow, at the age of nine, and there are descriptions of her romping in the garden and climbing cherry trees in her widow's veil.

A Record.

English Poultry Farmer—Yes, I assure you the weather was so hot here one summer that the water in the birds' drinking troughs positively boiled. American Ditto—That's nothing! Why, in New Jersey we sometimes have to feed our hens on crushed ice to prevent them from laying hard boiled eggs.—London Home Notes.

His First Love Affair.

Mrs. Rose—Did your husband ever have more than one love affair? Mrs. Pose—Oh, only one, I believe! Mrs. Rose—And that was when he fell in love with you? Mrs. Pose—Oh, dear, no! He had fallen in love with himself long before he had met me.

Mutual.

"I should think you'd be ashamed to sponge on Gotrox daily at lunch. The meals are always at his expense."

"Oh, it's a mutual arrangement. The jokes are at mine."—Exchange.

No Treat.

Mrs. Neighbors—Would you like a piece of bread and butter, Johnnie? Johnnie—Not me. We have that at home.—New York Globe.

It is a good thing to be rich and a good thing to be strong, but it is a better thing to be beloved of many friends.—Euripides.

CHAPTER V.

The Distant Cousins.

THE end of the week found Brock quite thoroughly domesticated—to use an expression supplied by his new sister-in-law. True, he had gone through some trying ordeals and had lost not a little of his sense of locality, but he was rapidly recovering it as the pathway became easier and less obscure. At first he was irritatingly remiss in answering to the name of Medcroft; but, to justify the stupidity, it is only necessary to say that he had fallen into a condition which scarcely permitted him to know his own name, much less that of another. He was under the spell. Wherefore it did not matter at all what name he went by. He would have answered as readily to one as the other.

He blandly ignored telegrams and letters addressed to Roxbury Medcroft, and once he sat like a lump, with every one staring at him, when the chairman of the architects' convention asked if Mr. Medcroft had anything to say on the subject under discussion. He was forced, in some confusion, to attribute his heedlessness to a lifelong defect in hearing. Thereafter it was his punishment to have his name and fragments of conversation hurled about in tones so stentorian that he blushed for very shame. In the Bristol, in the Karntner-Ring, in the Lichtenstein gallery, in the gardens—no matter where he went—if he were to be accosted by any of the genial architects it was always in a voice that attracted attention. He could have heard them if they had been a block away. It soon came a habit with him to instinctively lift his hand to his ear when one of them hove in sight, having seen him first.

"That's what I get for being a liar," he lamented dolefully. Constance had just whispered her condolences. "Do you think they'll consider it odd that you don't shout at me too?"

"You might explain that you can tell what I am saying by looking at my lips," she said. He was immensely relieved.

Considerable difficulty had to be overcome at the Bristol in the matter of rooms. Without going into details Brock resignedly took the only room left in the crowded hotel, a 6 by 10 cubby hole on the top floor overlooking the airshaft. He had to go down one flight for his morning tub, and he never got it because he refused to stand in line and await his turn. Mrs. Medcroft had the choicest room in the hotel, looking down upon the beautiful Karntner-Ring. Constance proposed, in the goodness of her heart, to give up to Brock her own room, adjoining that of her sister, provided Edith would take her in to sleep with her. Edith was perfectly willing, but interposed the sage conclusion that gossipping menials might not appreciate a preference so unique.

"M'sieur is very fortunate in being so afflicted."

of his bed was in close proximity to the upper mechanism of the lift, a thin wall intervening. A French architect, who had a room hard by, met Brock in the hall, hollow eyed and haggard, on the morning after their first night. He shouted lugubrious congratulations on Brock's ear, just as if Brock's ear had not been harassed a whole night long by shrieking wheels and rasping cables.

"M'sieur is very fortunate in being so afflicted," he boomed. "A thousand times in the night have I wished that I might be deaf also. Ah! Even an affliction such as yours, m'sieur, has its benedictions."

Matters drifted along smoothly, even merrily, for several days. They were all young and full of the joy of living. They laughed in scorn over the mishaps and perils. They whiffed and enjoyed the spice that filled the atmosphere in which they lived. They visited the gardens and the hofs, the chateau at Schonbrunn, the imperial stables, the gay "Venice in Vienna;" they attended the opera and the concerts, ever in a most circumspect "trinity," as Brock had come to classify their parties. Like a dutiful husband, he always included his wife in the expeditions.

"You are only a most exemplary wife, Mrs. Medcroft," he declared, "but an unusually agreeable chaperon. I don't know how Constance and I could get on without you."

But the dreaded ordeal was now at hand. The Medcheys were arriving on the fifth day from Berlin. Despite the fact that the Seattle "connections" had never seen the illustrious Medcroft, husband to their distant cousin, there still remained the disturbing fear that they would recognize—or, rather, fail to recognize him!—from chance pictures that might have come to their notice. Besides, Cyrus was always the possibility that they had seen or even met Brock in New York. He lugubriously admitted that he had met unfortunate thousands whom he had promptly forgotten, but who seldom failed to remember him. It is not surprising, then, that the Medcrofts, ex parte, were in a state of perturbation—a condition which did not relax by the least as the time drew near for the arrival of the 5 o'clock train from the north. Constance strove faithfully, even valiantly, to inject confidence into the souls of the prime conspirators.

"You have done so beautifully up to this time," she protested to the dolorous Brock, "why should you be afraid? I once read of an Indian chief whose name was Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Wife. He was a very brave fellow in spite of all that. You are afraid of Edith, but can't you be like the Indian? He—"

"That's all very nice," mourned Brock. "I wish he could cover his confusion with war paint. Don't forget that, my dear. Think of the difference in our disguises—war paint in daubs versus spats and an eyeglass! Besides, he didn't have to talk west end English. And, moreover, he lived in a wigwam and didn't have to explain a sky bedroom to strangers who happened along."

"That is a bit awkward," she confessed thoughtfully. "But can't you say that you have insomnia and can't sleep unless you are above the noise of the street?"

He looked at her with an expression that made a verbal reply to this suggestion altogether unnecessary.

"Nurse says that Tootles has forgotten the real Roxbury," she went on after a moment. "See how cleverly you have played the part."

Still he stared moodily, unconvinced, at the roadway ahead. They were driving in the Haupt Allea.

The funeral of Robert J. Cranshaw was held Monday afternoon from his home, Edison street. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Mr. Cranshaw died suddenly on Friday at the Quincy City hospital. He was an employee of Kidder, Peabody, Boston.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna M. Guynn, wife of Charles W. Guynn, who died Sunday was held today from her home 186 Atlantic avenue. Services were conducted by Rev. Joseph Walther and the body was taken to Waltham for burial in Mt. Feake cemetery. Mrs. Guynn was in her 40th year and well known in Atlantic.

CASE DISMISSED.

William Lyley of North Abington, now in Uncle Sam's Navy, was arraigned in Quincy court this morning on the charge of larceny of a watch from Victor Ericson of Whitwell street. The offense was committed in 1911, and the complaint was dismissed when Ericson stated he did not care to prosecute. The costs, $5, was paid by Lyley.

HEARINGS BY HEALTH BOARD

On Town Brook, Pigeons and Mosquito Nuisance

Monday night was a busy one for the Board of Health, for they had three hearings scheduled. The first hearing was in regard to the brook that runs through the Ward Three playground, and about which there has been more or less complaint because of the sediment which comes from the rusty water from the polishing mills and which clogs up the brook.

The hearing on this matter was given to the Granite Manufacturers and was quite largely attended. After more or less discussion it was agreed that the City Engineer should devise some plan whereby the water might be taken care of, or filtered before entering the brook.

The next matter was in regard to the complaint about the pigeons of Mrs. Kelley on Kent street. The complaint was that she kept a large number of pigeons and that they were a nuisance. This hearing was also largely attended and a peaceful solution was reached by Mrs. Kelly agreeing to keep her pigeons confined.

While these hearings were in progress there was a large delegation of Squantum residents waiting to be heard on the mosquito nuisance. Most of the residents took their departure, however, after waiting for some time, but W. J. Kenyon remained to express the views of the residents.

What the residents want is some way to drain the wet and soggy marsh which is a breeding place for the mosquitoes which have become a great pest.

The sting of the Squantum mosquito is also said to be unusually penetrating. Aside from that they were known to be the source of contamination and dangerous to public health.

After some discussion it was practically agreed that the best thing to do was to petition the legislature for relief, which the residents of Squantum decided to do. They however desired that the bill should be drawn up in proper form by the City Solicitor.

There was another hearing scheduled but which was not reached. This was in regard to the nuisance that is said to exist in the rear of the Quincy Mansion school.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY

Closes the Celebration of the Italian Societies

Approximately 2000 people, one half of whom were Americans, gathered at Merrymount park Monday evening to witness the fireworks display by the Society of St. Rocco Della Croce which closed a two days observance of their saints day. The display was set on about the same spot as that used by the Quincy Fourth of July Association.

The program was divided, the first half being the pin wheels and set pieces and the latter half the aerial bombs, etc. The fireworks in some instances excelled those given on the holiday, and unlike the final broadside of the Association on the Fourth the Italians arrangement went off without a hitch, and was as pretty an arrangement as one could wish for.

The color arrangements were prefect, particularly on the monster pinwheels which glowed in varied colors, and then alternately showered colored and white lights. A comic feature was introduced in the shape of a man in armor that ran along a wire in military fashion, and after a minutes patrol commenced to spout fire from every point of his uniform.

The spectacle was illuminating from different parts of the city and next years observance of the day will undoubtedly see 10,000 at the park. The weather was threatening for awhile but cleared with the final broadside, the moon just beginning to steal from behind a clouded sky. No accidents or disorderly events marred the evening. The Malden band played throughout the evening.

The expenses for the illumination were defrayed by the Italian members who contributed generously to make their first observance one of religious patriotism. The committee in charge were Sig. Antonio Betta and Sig. Nunzio Faielle.

NEW YORK TRIP.

A postal from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., postmarked 5 P. M. tells the distance J. F. Young and party of Quincy has travelled since they left here Sunday morning. The route included Springfield and Pittsfield which were reached on Sunday. The scenery along the route is most attractive writes Mr. Young and his party who are headed for Goshen, N. Y. No trouble of ony kind.

BIG SHRINKAGE IN THE CORN CROP

May Be Half Million Bushels Less Than Last Year.

RECORD IN SPRING WHEAT.

Government Report Points Out That Drought of Past Month Has Resulted In Decreased Production In Most of the Staples—Nation's Greatest Farm Crop Hit Hardest.

A loss of 300,000,000 bushels of corn, the nation's greatest farm crop, has resulted from the damage wrought by drought and other conditions since July 1, the department of agriculture estimates in its August crop report. A total production of 2,672,000,000 bushels of corn was predicted. This is 452,000,000 bushels less than last year's crop. The general condition of corn was placed at 75.8 per cent, compared with 86.9 on July 1. The estimated production compares with 2,531,488,000 bushels in 1911, 2,896,260,000 in 1910 and 2,552,000,000 in 1911.

A bright spot in the report was the preliminary statistics showing a production of 511,000,000 bushels of winter wheat. This is the greatest harvest of wheat ever gathered in the United States, exceeding the record crop of 1902 by 19,000,000 bushels. These figures exceed by 28,000,000 bushels the estimate made by the department in July. Spring wheat also increased, being given as 15,000,000 bushels more than the July estimate, the total being placed at 233,000,000 bushels.

Bumper Wheat Crop.

With the bumper winter wheat crop and a fairly good spring wheat production, the total harvest of all wheat is estimated at 744,000,000 bushels. A crop this size would place the year's production second only to the record crop of 1901, when 748,000,000 bushels were produced. Last year's production was 730,267,000 bushels; in 1911, 621,338,000; in 1910, 635,121,000, and for 1909, 683,000,000.

The harvest of white potatoes, it is estimated, will be smaller by 82,000,000 bushels than the crop of 1912. A total of 339,000,000 bushels is estimated.

The condition of oats was reported as 76.3 per cent of normal. The estimated production is 1,028,000,000 bushels, as compared with 1,418,337,000 last year.

Other Crop Estimates.

Barley condition was 74.9 per cent, and the estimated production is 168,000,000 bushels, compared with 223,824,000 last year.

Rye condition was 94 per cent, and the indicated yield is 35,000,000 bushels, compared with 35,644,000 last year.

The condition percentage in buckwheat is given as 85.5 per cent, and the yield is estimated at 17,000,000 bushels, compared with 19,249,000 last year.

Tobacco production is estimated at 896,000,000 pounds, compared with 962,855,000 last year.

The production of flax is estimated at 20,000,000 bushels, rice at 27,000,000 bushels, and hay at 64,000,000 tons.

ORGANIZE RAW FOOD CLUB.

Uncooked Vegetables Only Will Be Eaten to Prolong Life.

Minneapolis women will be liberated from the thralldom of the cook stove, the high cost of living will get a jolt and gastronomic laws will be put to a new test if success greets the efforts of a raw food club just organized in that city under the patronage of a physician.

Nothing but vegetables will be eaten by the members, and the herbaceous plants will not be cooked in any form before they are served on the fireless dinner table. Not even butter, eggs or milk will appear at a raw food banquet which will be served to the members at a date to be fixed later. Cocoa butter will supplant the bovine product, and eggplant will take the place of hen fruit.

A committee has formulated this menu:

Green oyster plant, with radishes, peanuts and walnuts, cabbage leaves, raw squash, sweet potatoes, beets, turnips, corn on the cob and cereals, raw carrots and watermelons.

A ten year addition to life, sweet temper and a good complexion unaided by artificial cosmetic preparations are the inducements held out to the cult.

Always False to Him.

George Morley, a farmer living near Versailles, Ky., is seventy years old, but has never had any teeth of his own except false ones. When, as a baby, he didn't develop teeth his mother wondered why. Years passed, and he was still toothless. Physicians called in to examine him declared that he would never have natural teeth, so, resigned to his fate, he went to a dentist and had two sets of teeth made.

New Use For Ultra Violet Rays.

It is stated that the French government is watching a series of extraordinary experiments at Havre with an invention of a man named Ulivi, who is said to have discovered means for projecting ultraviolet rays a distance of fourteen miles and exploding gunpowder contained in a metallic box. It is said that the rays also will explode torpedoes at the same distance.

THEY SAW THE LAKE FLY.

An African Phenomenon That Looked Like a Waterspout.

Crossing Victoria Nyanza, Messrs. F. H. Melland and E. H. Cholmeley, the authors of "Through the Heart of Africa," saw a phenomenon which, although common on the lakes of central Africa, seems rare enough.

The chief engineer on coming down late to luncheon told us that he had seen a waterspout near by. As we had finished our meal we hurried up on deck to get a glimpse of it. We saw near the southern horizon a gray smoke-like column arising from the surface of the lake and expanding into what looked like a cloud above. Thinking that it must be the engineer's waterspout, we approached Captain Gray and Mr. Akeley, who were also intently observing it, and asked them if we were right in our conjecture.

"Waterspout!" said the skipper, with a smile. "Flies."

"Flies?" we repeated and turned to Mr. Akeley in the hope of getting from him a more intelligible explanation.

"Quite true," he said. "Flies. You've seen the lake fly before?"

"No," we retorted, "we haven't, and we didn't know that it flew."

Assuring us that neither he nor the skipper had any intention of deceiving us, Mr. Akeley explained that he referred to the insect known as the "lake fly" and not to any spasmodic frivolity on the part of the waters of Victoria Nyanza. The apparent waterspout was nothing more or less than a huge cloud composed of myriads of tiny flies. They sometimes rise from the surface of the lake in such dense columns as to obscure the light of the sun like a pillar of smoke.

TRICKS OF LIGHT.

Why People Sometimes Feel Dull or Uncomfortable at Table.

How few people realize that they are actually suffering from snow blindness in miniature every time they read or work over a white surface on which a brilliant light shines directly. Half tone paper, for instance, which is the common medium for the majority of books we read, will throw a blinding glare into the eye of the reader if the light strikes it at the wrong angle, and it forms an excellent test for the selection of proper lighting for a room and for the placing of the lighting fixtures, for lighting diffusion should be such as to allow comfortable reading from half tone paper in any position.

A dome hanging above a dining table on which is white cloth causes the light to reflect into the eyes of those around the table at an angle that produces muscular strain. This has a peculiar effect upon the senses, and drowsiness and mental inertia are apt to result. People are apt to complain of a feeling of dullness at table or that they have indigestion when it is, in reality, the effect of the light.

A too brilliant light shining directly into the eye plays many curious psychological tricks. Deaf people, for instance, cannot hear so well if they are facing a brilliantly lighted room, and, as for being able to see better by a bright light than by a dim one, exactly the reverse is the case, for detail of objects become practically lost to the eye when too much light enters it.—Suburban Life Magazine.

Advice to Consumptives.

The only safe course for a person suffering from consumption is to select a good physician and be guided in all things by that physician's advice.

If a new cure is discovered during your illness your doctor will know it. If the cure is genuine he will know that and be the first to insist on applying the new remedy to your case. If the so called cure is a fake his caution will save you from wasting valuable time and strength pursuing will-o'-the-wisps.

Meantime, while waiting on new discoveries, he will keep you on the commonplace but effective prescription of rest, plentiful diet and all the fresh air there is. This regime has cured tens of thousands of cases of tuberculosis and will cure hundreds of thousands more.—Chicago Journal.

The Psychological Moment.

Frances is only a little girl, but she has a quick mind and the gift of language that sometimes distinguishes children who associate much with their elders. The other day Frances came home to her mother with cheeks like roses and eyes like stars.

"Oh, mamma," she exclaimed, happily, "I've had the best luck this morning! I got downtown just at the psychological moment!"

"Did you, dear?" was mother's pleased inquiry. "And what happened?"

Said Frances solemnly: "I saw a parade."—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Cleverness.

"Don't be so lazy. There's plenty of room at the top, and you're clever enough to get there."

"But," replied the lazy genius, "think how clever it is of me to find a place at the bottom, where there isn't so much room."

Such a Stupid Man.

Fair Customer—I tell you that I wear a No. 2. Clerk—But, madam, this shoe that you just took off is a No. 4. Fair Customer—Yes, I know, but it has stretched horribly.—Boston Transcript.

Many There Who Could Do It.

"It is said that the devil never takes a vacation."

"Well, if he doesn't it isn't because he can't find anybody to run the place in his absence."—Judge.

He who follows two hares is sure to catch neither.

PLACED UNDER $300 BONDS

Quintilla Also Pays a Fine of $25 in Assault Case

Enough evidence was submitted to Judge Avery this morning in the case of Vincenzo Quintilla, charged with threatening to commit assault and battery, to fine him $25 and place him under $300 bonds to keep the peace for three months. He was taken into custody at the Quincy station Monday noon at the point of a revolver by Peter Kojoy who marched him to officer Canavan in City Square. Both men were arrested. Kojoy pleaded not guilty to carrying a revolver without a license and the case was dismissed.

Mrs. Kojoy testified that Quintilla insulted her in her home Monday morning and threatened assault with a razor which he brandished before her face. The defendant denied that he had insulted her but admitted he dropped the razor out of the taxicab on the way to the station, which was picked up by officer Cahill who happened along in the police auto.

The original complaint was indecent assault but it was changed. Quintilla paid the fine and friends are now securing the money to bond him.

The evidence was submitted through an interpreter and at the completion of Mrs. Kojoy's testimony a rapid exchange of talk between her and the defendant resulted in his being told "he lied." Mrs. Kojoy pointed directly at him when she made the charge but the defendant maintained that he only asked for a match in her home.

RUSSO GIVES HIMSELF UP

Held Without Bond for Assault With Intent to Kill

Michael Russo of 22 Granite street, who has been identified by Atavia Rizzio as the man who shot him Sunday evening on Granite street, was arraigned this morning before Judge Avery charged with assault with intent to kill. The case was continued to Aug. 23 and he was remanded to jail without bail.

Russo left the city while the officers were devoting their attention to Rizzio who appeared to be fatally injured. This morning he is showing some signs of recovery.

Russo was arrested at the Quincy Police station Monday afternoon when he gave himself up. With him was Mr. Calabro of Hingham who met him at Salem Monday afternoon and who accompanied him to Quincy at his request. Russo was represented by J. Harley of Boston.

MUCH INTEREST TAKEN.

The welcoming committee of St. Mary's parishoners, who are planning to give their pastor, Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady a fine reception on his return from Europe, will complete their arrangements Friday night. The interest being taken all over the parish is enthusiastic and decidedly complimentary to Father Grady.

HOOTS VS. RECKLESSNESS.

What good will it do for two fast driving automobilists to blow their horns at a street crossing if they are both to continue on at a rapid pace. Too much stress is laid upon the necessity for horn tooting hereabouts. A driver of a motor may pass a road or street crossing at so low a pace that no tooting is necessary, and another may toot his horn and still continue at a rapid pace, yet the technical enforcement of the law would require the arrest of the former while the latter might be allowed to go without complaint, although really much more blamable. Reckless driving is the objectionable thing, and the dangerous thing. The laws are made to secure immunity from accidents to all travelers, not to bother automobilists. The automobilist is rather between the Scylla and Crybdis of those who object to so much tooting and those few who want it all the time.—Salem News.

USEFUL HINTS FOR SMOKERS.

Those who intend to cruise this season during their vacation should not fail to carry with them a lens to be used as a substitute for matches in lighting their tobacco. A lens used as burning glass for this purpose will be found most useful when one is crossing a large stretch of open water during windy weather says C. T. Coddington, in July Recreation. The writer and four others took a cruise of several hundred miles in an open gasoline launch last summer on certain lakes and rivers of northern Wisconsin and used a lens continually to great advantage in this way. With a lens and the sun, a pipe or cigar can be lit in spite of all the winds that blow. With a little practice, one can secure a light as quickly as if a match were used.

FLOWER CLOCK.

"With a little time and labor, it would be possible to construct a garden whose flowers would combine to make a first-rate clock," said the botanist.

"It is 5 a. m. when the sow thistle opens," he continued. "It is 5.30 when the dandelion opens. It is 7 when the white lily opens. It is 8 when the hawk-weed opens.

"At 11.12 a. m. the sow thistle closes. At noon precisely, the yellow goat's beard closes. At 2 p. m. the hawk-weed closes. At 5 the white lily closes. The dandelion closes at 8 sharp.

Since Pliny's time 46 flowers have been known to open and shut with great punctuality at certain hours of the day and night.

—With an annual crop of 27,000 hedgehogs, Vermont may easily claim the largest yeild per acre of these animals of any state in the Unoin. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. ## HANDSOME SPECIMENS OF QUINCY GRANITE

Shown at Boston Exhibit in Connection with the Granite Convention

Many Souvenirs Are Being Given to Dealers and Visitors

The Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association have every reason to feel proud of the exhibition of the Quincy manufactured monuments shown at the Arena, Boston, during the convention of the National Retail Monumental Dealers' Association, which opened Tuesday.

As will be noted by the title it is a convention by the retail manufacturers and the exhibitions made at the Arena are therefore by wholesale manufacturers. Aside from the handsome exhibits by Quincy firms the exhibition as a whole is one worthy of a visit. The entire floor space is occupied by the exhibit and some fine specimens of the stone cutters' art are seen.

When the exhibition and convention opened at 10.30 Tuesday morning practically all of the exhibits were in position. There were some that were a little late in arriving, but a score of workmen were kept busy and by afternoon all of the exhibits were in position.

Most of the exhibitors are giving souvenirs to callers at their exhibit, but these souvenirs are meant largely for dealers, although for that matter the line is not strictly drawn and most anybody can load themselves down with souvenirs.

For instance the Vermont Marble Co. are presenting granite men with a square box which upon being opened is found to contain a handsome marble bean pot.

The H. C. Smalley Co. of Quincy is giving useful ash trays made of pottery. At the exhibit of Marshall & Kirkland, leather cigar cases are being handed out. William M. Adrian of the Quincy Avenue Granite Co. is giving very handy memorandum books, to which a pencil is attached. They have two kinds, one for the gentlemen and one with a soft leather cover for the ladies. This company also has a lady stenographer and typewriter at their exhibit whose services are free to granite men visitors.

Birnie & Diack have a leather pocket diary for 1914. Other firms are giving away pocket bill books, steel foot rules, round disks of polished granite, etc. The Carborundum Co. are giving away a toy for the children and for the men a small piece of carborundum in a leather case upon which a fine edge may be put on the pocket knife. In fact there is hardly an exhibitor but what is giving away some souvenir.

It is generally conceded by visitors that the exhibit made by Quincy manufacturers is the best ever seen at an exhiibtion of this kind. One of the most striking exhibits shown is that of J. S. Swingle, known among the granite trade as the "Extra Dark Man." This exhibit occupies a prominent place in the centre of the exhibition floor and towers high above all other exhibits, so that it is one of the fisrt thing that meets the eye. This memorial is one which Mr. Swingle has manufactured to mark the last resting place of his father, and as soon as the exhibition is over it will be shipped to Nelsonville, Ohio, to be set up in the Swingle lot in Greenlawn cemetery. The job is of extra dark Swingle stock and all polished from top to bottom. It consists of three bases, die cap and is surmounted by a polished ball. On the second base in bas relief is the name "Swingle" while on the face of the third base in bas relief are crossed guns. The die is in the shape of a column and on the front face there has been cut a fac-simile of a Grand Army badge. Below this is the inscription.

The column cap and ball were turned and polished at the plant of the Quincy Column Turning Co. on Water street. It was noticed during the opening day that everybody stopped to gaze at this striking memorial, for it is certainly a handsome piece of work.

Nearby is the exhibit of Fred Barnicoat, who makes a specialty of carved work. Here are shown some portrait statues cut in granite, and samples of the Crum Westerly granite which is controlled by Mr. Barnicoat. Among the exhibits he shows is a three piece tablet job cut of Crum granite. The tablet part is highly polished while the cap is very elaborately carved. It is a very handsome job. Its proportions are unusually fitting and by many it is called one of the best jobs shown. He also shows a job of Hitchcock granite.

Over on the left is the exhibit of Marshall & Kirkland who make a specialty of the Golden Pink Westerly granite. Their exhibit is shown in a pretty canopy decorated in purple which shows off the exhibit. Aside from monuments cut of Quincy stock tney also show memorials cut from their Golden Pink granite.

At the further end of the hall is the exhibit of the Quincy Avenue Granite Co. They show several jobs of dark Quincy stock both fine hammered and polished. Here also there is a unique exhibit which attracts considerable attention. This is a park settee cut from granite and highly polished. In fact the job is all polished and the back is shaped so that persons sitting on it find it a very comfortable seat. On the opposite side is a single seat, also cut out of granite and all polished. It was noticed that nearly everybody who stopped at this exhibit, especially the ladies tried the seats and all pronounced them to be very comfortable.

Goldbranson & Co. have a good exhibit of extra dark and medium Quincy granite at their space on the left of the main aisle, showing the stock in both polished and fine hammered style. The work here is also finely executed and is a credit to Quincy workmanship.

R. and B. Bishop are showing some fine samples of monuments cut from their celebrated golden pink Westerly stock. There are several medium sized jobs showing both the dark and the light golden pink as well as the stock polished and fine hammered. It takes a beautiful polish and the polished tablet job shown is very handsome.

Milne & Hector also have a good exhibit. It represents a cemetery lot in the centre of which is a mausoleum cut of Green's Landing granite. It is an exact duplicate in reduced size of a job cut by this firm some time ago and which attracted universal attention, as does also the miniature mausoleum shown in the exhibit.

The exhibit of the H. C. Smalley Granite Co., is on the centre aisle and Mr. Smalley is kept busy giving out ash trays and matches. His exhibit consists of red and pink Westerly granite and the Souhegan blue granite from Milford, N. H. These jobs also show fine workmanship.

At the right of the main aisle is the exhibit of the Bay View Granite Co. which operates what was for years known as the Field & Wild quarry. Here samples of this famous stock are given to the trade and a tablet is shown upon which is a placard announcing that the tablet has been in a cemetery for eighteen years. The tablet looks as good as new and only goes to show the durability of this stock.

The Falconer & Co. exhibit on the same side of the hall shows memorials in fine hammered and polished work of the Blue Hill stock, and stock from the Falconer quarries cut by Prout Bros.

Further along on this side of the hall are two cutters from J. R. Richards plant hard at work on two monument dies with pneumatic tools. This exhibit not only shows the class of skilled workmen employed by Councilman Richards but the working of pneumatic tools.

Aside from the exhibits shown by Quincy men the most striking exhibit, perhaps, is that of the Vermont Marble Co. This shows a miniature cemetery with numerous graves at each of which is some memorial cut of the different grades of Vermont marble. In the centre background is a white marble mausoleum with bronze doors.

Another attractive exhibit is that made by the French Creek Granite Co. of St. Peters, Penn. This granite is very dark colored. In fact it is nearly black and its attractiveness is shown by scroll skim work on the polished surface, the skim work showing almost white when compared with the black polished surface.

There are also the Barre, Vt., and Milford, N. H., exhibits, but the granite men from the west with almost one accord said that there was nothing the matter with Quincy, and that they had al of the other granite centres beat to a frazzle at this exhibition.

It should also be mentioned that in addition to the exhibits of granite there are a number of exhibits of granite working pneumatic machinery There are also monumental designers, photographers, etc. In fact every branch connected with the manufacture of monuments is seen.

THE CONVENTION.

At the Tuesday afternoon meeting, the following committees were appointed:

Registration—H. P. Reiger of Baltimore, A. H. Luckenbill of Middletown, Penn., H. W. Potter of Gardner, Me.

CANDIDATES IN ATTENDANCE

Messrs. Duggan and Sullivan Address Democrats

The Democratic City committee met in the Johnson building Tuesday evening with Cornelius M. Duggan, candidate for representative in the Sixth Norfolk District and Representative Michael T. Sullivan, candidate for reelection in the Fifth Norfolk district, present. William Kelly presided.

The main topic of the evening was registration. The ward committee men have been making a study of conditions and report that one of the best opportunities ever offered to place new Democratic voters on the list is open for attention.

Cornelius M. Duggan of Atlantic gave a short address in which he touched upon the points of his campaign. He reviewed the situation in the district he has hopes of representing and dwelt at length on the record of Representative Leslie who retired from the fight at the last moment on Saturday. Mr. Duggan was loudly applauded.

Representative Sullivan in a short speech sounded the opening of what promises to be a rousing but friendly contest with Walter E. Piper, the Republican nominee. Both men have represented the district. Dr. Galen Vinton Bowditch, one of the most widely known Democrats in the state attended and spoke on Jeffersonian simplicity.

The members have decided to elect 20 men, instead of nine, to constitute the 1914 committee and papers have been filed with the required amount of signatures.

COMMITTEE SELECT SPRIG

Two More from Harpoon, Ellen Cima and Tern

Three races were held in the elimination trials of sonder boats at Marblehead on Tuesday, the Sprig winning two out of there. When the committee came ashore she was selected as one of the Yankee sonder team.

The third of the three races Tuesday was won by the Ellen the race being sailed in a dying out breeze that was little more than a drifting match.

Today the Harpoon, Ellen, Cima and Tern will compete in a series of races until two more boats are selected for the team.

THE BILLOW ON MAIDEN TRIP

Wave and Breaker Will Soon Increase Fleet to Nine

The Billow, the new steam trawler completed at the Fore River yard for the Bay State Fishing Co., was turned over to her owners on Monday and was immediately placed in commission. This morning, with Capt. Ralph Thomas in command she left for George's Banks.

The addition of the Billow increased the fleet of steam trawlers operating out of T wharf to seven. The Wave and Breaker, sister trawlers, will soon be added.

Her builders trials in Boston harbor on Saturday were satisfactory in every way and her crew of 22 men hope to establish a record catch of groundfish on the maiden trip.

EDWIN MORSE IN ACCIDENT

Seriously Injured When His Auto Turned Turtle

An automobile turned turtle on Bridge street, North Weymouth, this morning, and its owner and driver, Edwin M. Morse of Quincy and Rose Cliff was thrown about 15 feet, sustaining probably internal injuries.

The accident occurred as Mr. Morse was trying to pass another machine, while on his way to Boston. A forward wheel collapsed as it struck the guard rail of the electric car tracks and the machine turned turtle as its nose plowed into the street.

Mr. Morse was thrown and was unconscious when picked up by John F. Merrill and Thomas Swithin of Quincy. He was taken in their machine to the office of Dr. E. H. Bushnell, Quincy Point, who found that he had received a confusion of the forehead, severe bruises about the head and body, a strained back and probably internal injuries. He was taken to his home at Rose Cliff.

Mr. Morse is in the wholesale leather business at 48 South street, Boston and his permanent home is on Gould avenue, Malden. He is the son of the late Joseph C. Morse of Quincy and formerly lived on President's hill.

UNKNOWN IS FROM BROCKTON

But Man Is Still Unconscious at Hospital

The police have learned that the young man found on the railroad tracks near the Granite street bridge Sunday morning belongs in Brockton, but as yet have been unable to learn his name as he is still unconscious at the City Hospital.

From Arthur Roberts, conductor on the Cape train, which passed through Quincy express about 9.35 Sunday morning, it was learned that the young man was an Italian and was about 18 years of age. He boarded the train in Boston and intended to stop off in Quincy, for which station his ticket read. Finding that the train did not sop he paid his fare from Quincy to Brockton receiving a rebate check which was found on his clothing. As the train sped through Quincy he jumped off just as it had rounded the curve south of the bridge.

Now that it has been learned that he belongs in Brockton, the police will endeavor to locate his relatives or friends in that city.

BULLETS FOUND.

Within the past week, and at different times, three 38 calbre bullets have been found in different sections of City Square. In all cases the find was made while the sidewalk was being swept late at night.

The first bullet was found opposite the restaurant of Joseph Dennen and the others between there and the Hearn corner. Unusual significance is attached to the finding of the bullets. The law regulating the carrying of concealed weapons without a permit is strict and a conviction for such an offense carries a heavy penalty.

HOSPITAL ALUMNAE.

The Alumnae association of the City Hospital of Quincy met at the Nurses' Home on Tuesday afternoon. The meeting was opened by the President, Miss Meyer and the reports of the secretary, Miss Russell and treasurer, Miss Carey, were read, which showed an increased interest on the part of the nurses to make the alumnae a success. After the business meeting, Miss Hill, the superintendent was introduced, and gave an interesting talk on alumnae meetings. The next meeting will be held on the third Wednesday in February, unless otherwise notified.

WHY TAX RATE WAS INCREASED

Receipts Appropriated by City Council Which Should Have Been Left for Assessors

Water Income Also a Disappointment to Taxpayers

Have you made an analysis of the Assessors' figures to satisfy yourself why Quincy tax rate made such a jump this year?

The tax for "municipal current expenses" so called is only $9,526.50 larger. With the increase in valuation that would not have caused any increase in the tax rate.

But there were increases in all the items of the tax levy except two, and they were among the smallest,—maturing city park debt and State highway assessment.

The increases, item by item, were:

| | |
|---|---|
| Municipal expenses | $9,526.50 |
| City sewer, less receipts | 982.61 |
| City debt, | 5,033.46 |
| Interest, city debt, | 482.39 |
| Street Improvement debt, | 4,000.00 |
| Interest St. Imp. debt, | 565.00 |
| Park debt, | same |
| Interest, park debt, | decrease 20.00 |
| Interest, temporary loans, | 2,000.00 |
| State tax, | 13,025.00 |
| County tax, | 4,143.03 |
| South Metropolitan sewer, | 4.04 |
| Metropolitan parks, | 1,839.98 |
| Metropolitan water. less receipts | 13,345.68 |
| State highway tax, | same |
| Charles River Basin, | 596.26 |
| State Statistics, | new 2,053.03 |
| Refunding debt, | new 15,000.00 |
| Interest, refunding debt, | new 6,000.00 |
| Abatement of taxes in excess of overlay, | new 4,114.65 |
| | $82,631.14 |

The four new items—State statistics, refunidng debt, interest on refunding debt, and statement of taxes in excess of overlay—alone caused an increase of $27,164.68. If we add to this the loss of $7,163.69 in estimated receipts, the total is $34,328.37, which almost accounts for $1 of the increase in tax rate, as $1 per $1,000 on a valuation of $36,716,260.00 will net $36,716.26.

The State and county taxes and assessments appear to be $32,953.99 larger, but this is not a fact, as against the Metropolitan water assessments is placed the words "less receipts." The Metropolitan water assessment of 1912 was $54,558.24, and in 1913 it was $55,519.02, an increase of but $960.78.

Therefore there is a large loss in water receipts on income; to be exact $12,385.86. It was represented during the agitation for water meters that the Metropolitan assessments would be less, and the city income larger.

The number of water connections is larger but the receipts have not kept pace.

The opportunity to keep down the tax rate was lost, however, when the City Council seized every possible receipt and appropriated the same for current municipal expenses of 1913. If the Assessors of 1913 could have had $50,000.00 to $70,000.00 to have used to reduce the tax levy of 1913, the same as during the administrations of Mayor Shea, the tax rate of Quincy would have been from $1.25 to $1.75 less this year.

The amount of estimated receipts lawfully applicable to the payments of

From the present outlook the farmers must get out with their little waterpots if they are going to save the corn crop.

It seems strange that the ball teams do not provide calliopes and steam whistles for the rooters instead of cow bells and horns.

Although Mrs. Lind has gone to Mexico with her husband, Envoy Lind Mrs. Huerta somehow neglects to ask her to occupy the guest room at the palace.

The ammunition makers need not look so gloomy even if little Salvador has signed a peace treaty with this country.

President Huerta may be willing to see Envoy Lind if he will agree not to talk about anything more exciting than the weather.

The longer the trip you have to make with a heavy lunch basket, the more the picnic ground seems to appeal to those poetic feminine members of the party.

The Minnesota Women's Clubs are going to boycott the present styles of skirts, but how many of them can make their own clothes?

What a nice comfortable feeling they must have down in Venezuela now, with Cip Castro revoluting at the old stand!

If President Wilson does not know what to do with the troublesome situation, he can always find out by consulting his own works on government.

PUBLIC OPINION.

A Councilman informs the Daily Ledger that but for the emphatic protest of the tax-payers at the Tax Limit hearing this week that the City Council would have adopted an ordinance increasing the $12 limit, possibly to $14. After the feeling manifested at the hearing this will be out of the question. If the Council pays any attention to public opinion, it will also curtail the loan orders of 1913, and in future years use less of the "estimated receipts" in the annual appropriation order.

THE FRESH AIRERS.

In many railroad trains and stations at this time one may see that strange picture of glee, humor, and pathos, a group of city children on a "fresh air" outing. The little blossoms are so faded and droopy. Afterward the flower faces come back so stiff and perky, as if they were wired up.

The appeal for this charity gets wide attention. The Christian Herald's fund was recently swelled by $500 through a group of distant Rocky Mountain cow-boys. Most of them were unmarried men. Some newspaper story touched them, and they drove for days over the weary plains to advertise their benefit circus.

Bad air, lack of sanitation lack of sufficient or proper food kills about one fifth the tenement children before they are two years old. Ruddy faces can't be built up on coffee, coarse bread and green fruit. One New York mother, after losing five children was feeding the sixth infant on a big red tomato. When a settlement worker remonstrated, she spoke her contempt of the girl's inexperience. "This is a nice red tomato and it will make good red blood."

The benefit of the fresh air work is not merely the temporary stimulation of good nourishing food, fresh air, and a fortnight of joy. A desire to flee the unwholesome slums may be created. Of course many of them prefer the clattering crowds of the cities. When they quit for the beloved lights and odors of home, they nonchalantly yell "Good-by Reubens" to the rustic crowd at Lonesomehurst.

But the boy who asks the farmer where he buys the gum that the cows chew is developing an interest in rural economics. Afterward the scent of the hay field and the friendly companionship of the barn yard family is a fragrant memory. Some day he will quit the stitching machine servitude for the self mastery of the farm.

STOPPING AT HUB QUARTERS

"Holy Ghost and Us" Folks Leave Shiloh Yacht

INCLUDE SEVERAL CHILDREN

Aim to Attract as Little Attention as Possible as They Disembark—San Salvador Thought to Be Destination of Barracouta—Maine Authorities Investigating Death of Boy

Boston, Aug. 20.—Coincident with the beginning of a rigid investigation by the Maine authorities into the alleged death by starvation of a 13-year-old boy, who was a member of the Shiloh colony, the steam yacht Barracouta, flagship of the fleet owned by the "Holy Ghost and Us" society, came into Boston harbor and several boatloads of men, women and children were landed at the foot of State street.

The chief aim of the party appeared to be to get away from the wharf without attracting undue attention and with the least possible delay, and under the pilotage of Captain McKenzie, the yacht's skipper, all hands went to their Boston headquarters on Massachusetts avenue.

The ultimate destination of the "Holy Ghosters," whose high priest, Rev. Frank W. Sanford, is now serving a ten-year sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta, is believed to be San Salvador in the West Indies. It is understood that the schooner yacht Coronet will follow the Barracouta to Boston and that the mysterious colonists will leave here within a short time on a long expedition to the Spanish Main.

Shortly after the Barracouta came to an anchorage the United States revenue cutter Winnisimmet drew up alongside and Major Gleason, a boarding officer of the customs service, and Captain Manson of the cutter stepped to the yacht's deck and asked to see her papers.

Not a single unnecessary word was spoken by any person on the yacht while the officials were making their call, and later when newspaper men went alongside, not a soul aboard knew anything that they were willing to convey to the questioners.

Several small children are among those on the steamer, and it is believed that Charles and Hollis Jones, brothers of Hayden J. Jones, the boy who died at Shiloh, are on board. One of the young men, who was brought ashore in the first boatload, was presumably one of these. The charges that the youth died of starvation were made by a sister, Mrs. Roland Whittum of Brunswick, Me. County Attorney Hines has taken the initial steps to probe the entire matter, and he was due to reach Shiloh yesterday.

MANY DYNAMITE VICTIMS

Load of Explosive Blows Up in Suburb of Mexican Capital

Mexico City, Aug. 20.—An explosion on a gondola loaded with dynamite on the tracks of a street car company in a thickly settled portion of Tacubaya, a suburb of the capital, killed or injured more than 100 persons, chiefly women and children. Thirty bodies have been taken from the ruins of the houses. It is estimated that scores of others will be found.

The disaster is said to have been caused by a car loaded with iron pipe crashing into the dynamite car. For a radius of 500 feet from the scene of the explosion not a house was left intact, and not a vestige of many of the buildings remained. Most of the dwellings were of adobe, and those nearest to where the car stood were converted into heaps of clay and dust. The persons killed belonged for the most part to the laboring class.

PROTEST FROM BULGARS

Large Turkish Forces Are Advancing Toward Strategic Points

London, Aug. 20.—It is problematical what action the powers will take on the protest of Bulgaria against the advance of the Turks towards Kirjali and other strategic points along the Maritza river.

The Turks declare the advance is solely for the protection of the railway which runs along the river. It is evident the porte will not abandon Adrianople, for the Turkish army there, now numbering 250,000 men, will be increased to at least 400,000.

JUSTICE ROWELL RESIGNS

Head of Vermont Supreme Court Is Near Four Score Years Old

Montpelier, Vt., Aug. 20.—Chief Justice John W. Rowell of the supreme court of Vermont has resigned and the resignation has been accepted by Governor Fletcher. He was appointed chief justice on March 22, 1902, and has been on the supreme bench longer than any other man in the history of the state.

Rowell was born at Lebanon, N. H., seventy-eight years ago.

SHERIFF HALTS THAW'S FLIGHT

He Recognizes Fugitive on Train Bound For Canada

WAS HEADING FOR QUEBEC

Leaves Train Near Border and Attempts to Cross In Farmer's Wagon With New Hampshire Official In Pursuit—Now a Prisoner and Will Be Deported as an Undesirable

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—The immigration authorities declare that Harry K. Thaw will be deported from Canada under the immigration regulations.

The rule under which this action is possible provides that any person who, within five years of his incarceration in a penitentiary or insane asylum, enters Canada, may be sent back as an undesirable.

Twelfth hour developments presage that the fight for liberty will centre in the state of New Hampshire, although the New York officials and Matteawan heads will make every effort to forestall Thaw's removal to New Hampshire. The latter is just what they will expend every ounce of energy to prevent, knowing that it means endless litigation, whatever the outcome.

Once on New Hampshire soil Thaw can give legal battle which may ultimately mean his freedom. The officials hurrying from New York to Sherbrooke will endeavor to have Thaw given into their custody or returned to the state of New York instead of New Hampshire.

After a dash for liberty from the Matteawan asylum for the criminal insane, in which he is supposed to have been aided by New York gunmen, equipped with a high-powered automobile, Harry Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, was arrested crossing the Canadian border in a farmer's wagon, which he had hired to facilitate his escape from the New York authorities.

Thaw was later arraigned at Sherbrooke, Can., as an undesirable from the United States and was remanded to jail. He will appear before Judge Mulvena, extradition commissioner. He has engaged counsel for himself and his two companions.

While the police of New England were on the qui vive in regard to the whereabouts of the notorious Matteawan prisoner, and his mother, in response to the letter from her son, was preparing to join him at her country home in Pennsylvania, Thaw boarded a train at Portland, Me., and proceeded toward Quebec, where he purposed to take passage for Europe. The letter to his mother is now regarded as a "blind."

The arrest of Thaw was due to an indiscreet inquiry as the train was nearing the Canadian line. On the train was Sheriff Kelsey of Colebrook, N. H. When Thaw asked the location of the nearest county seat, he was referred to the sheriff for an answer.

The question struck the sheriff as odd and he took a good look at the questioner. Thaw shifted in his seat under the scrutiny. Finally he asked: "You don't know me, do you?"

The sheriff made a random shot that struck the bullseye when he replied: "Well, I can make a pretty good guess that you are Harry Thaw."

"You're right."

Thaw's friends took no part in the conversation. Thaw then told of the plan to reach Quebec from which he intended to sail for Europe.

Thaw told the sheriff he had no right to take him; that no charge had been launched against him in New Hampshire. The sheriff seemingly agreed with Thaw and left the train at Colebrook, N. H. He had some private business to attend to, but thinking better of the Thaw quest, Kelsey hired an automobile and together with Walter Drew, a press correspondent, and another man, entered upon a pursuit.

At Colebrook one of Thaw's companions got off the train, probably with the idea of hiring an automobile and picking Thaw up beyond the border. Thaw left the train at Hereford, where he called a farmer out of bed and persuaded him to drive himself and his companions across the line.

The farmer who drove Thaw said the latter offered him $9 to drive him about fifteen miles to any point where he could reach the Grand Trunk railway and so get a train for Quebec.

The sheriff's auto overtook the party at Hermenegilde-Garford, where, at Kelsey's request, a Canadian officer placed the fugitive under arrest. Hermenegilde-Garford is a village two miles south of Coaticook, Que., and Thaw was taken there. Though he had already admitted his identity to Kelsey, Thaw at first denied that he was the man who escaped from Matteawan. Later he freely admitted the facts of which the police were already convinced. He said, however, that he would fight any effort to extradite him and retained Attorney Shirtliffe of Coaticook to look after his interests.

Hector Verret, king's counsel of Coaticook, is acting for Kelsey, who is the actual complainant in the case. Kelsey charged that Thaw was a fugitive and demanded that he be held for the United States authorities.

Thaw shut up like a clam after he had seen counsel and nothing was learned by the police of his flight up to the time that Kelsey recognized him on a Maine Central railway train that was taking him from northern New Hampshire into Canada. Had he not made inquiries of the sheriff regarding the country through which he was passing, he probably would have been in Quebec and possibly aboard a steamer for England, without having his identity suspected.

HARRY THAW AND WIFE

Woman Fears Maniac Most When He Has Been Drinking

© 1913, by American Press Association.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of Stanford White's slayer, who escaped from Matteawan asylum, fears Thaw most if he is drinking. "There is danger that he will come when he begins drinking again," she said. "I was the only one who could ever do anything with him, but I was powerless when he was drinking. Here in New York there is little to fear, but I should be afraid to go on a tour with him free."

Mrs. Thaw also asserted that she had intended bringing her young son to America, but since Thaw has escaped he will now stay in England. The above picture of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was taken on her arrival in this country from Europe recently. The picture of Thaw was taken during the Anhut trial.

"HEALER" AND TWO ASSOCIATES HELD

Charged With Obtaining Money Under False Pretences

Framingham, Mass., Aug. 20.—Mrs. M. B. W. Woodworth-Etter, the "healer," and two of her associates, Earl W. Clark and C. W. Fockler, who have been conducting stirring revival meetings at Mt. Wait for three weeks, were given a preliminary hearing by Judge Kingsbury in court here.

Each was charged with obtaining $100 under false pretences. They all pleaded not guilty and were held in $300 bail, which each furnished, for a hearing.

It was while Mrs. Woodworth-Etter was preaching from the pulpit that Chief of Police Holbrook arrested her. Large numbers of sick and crippled persons have been attracted to Mt. Wait by her alleged assertions she could cure all manner of diseases through hypnotism inspired by reading the Bible.

THREE MEN DROWN

Believed to Have Gone Down In 250 Feet of Water

Westmore, Vt., Aug. 20.—Three young men are believed to have lost their lives in Lake Willoughby when their boat capsized. They were: Dana Tripp, aged 27, of Orleans; Monte Tripp, aged 24, of Orleans, and Clayton Badger, aged 25, of Harrison.

No one could be found who saw the accident. The first known about it was when three caps were found floating on the water. These were identified as belonging to the three men who had gone out sailing.

No trace of their bodies or of the boat could be found and it is thought they went down in 250 feet of water.

Morocco Manufacturer Fails

McDEVITT MAY NOT RUN

His Papers Not Filed on Monday at State House

The time for filing nomination papers at the State House expired on Tuesday at 5 P. M. Up to Tuesday morning the list did not include John J. McDevitt of Quincy. The only Democratic candidate for Senator was James H. Shea of Milton. The papers of Louis F. R. Langelier of Quincy and William R. Thomas of Quincy, as Republican candidates had been filed.

The only Representative candidates from the Quincy districts are: Walter E. Piper as Republican in the Fifth district and Michael F. Sullivan as Democrat; Edward J. Sandberg as Republican in the Sixth district and Cornelius M. Duggan as Democrat.

For Councillor from this district the only Republican is Guy A. Ham of Boston and the only Democrat Charles W. Guy of Quincy. Which Guy will be elected?

The only Republican candidates for Governor are Benton and Gardner; the only Democrat David I. Walsh and the only Progressive Charles S. Bird.

A. H. Goething is the only Republican candidate for lieutenant governor but the Democrats have a contest between Edward P. Barry and Richard H. Long. Daniel Cosgrove is alone as a Progressive candidate.

IMPROVEMENTS AT BETHANY

Interior to be Newly Decorated and Frescoed

Active work has been commenced renovating, redecorating and refrescoing the interior of the Bethany Congregational church. The work of refrescoing and painting the interior of the church is being done by P. Hollensen Co., of Boston, who promise to have the work completed before the pastor returns from his vacation.

The tresle work for the staging arrived early Monday and was set up on Tuesday. It is in the form of a series of short ladders which go together with bolts so that the tressle work may be as high as needed. There are four sets of these ladders running lengthwise of the church and heavy planking for the staging is held in place by the rungs of the ladders.

The aisle carpets have been taken up to be cleaned, as have also the seat cushions. Some changes are also being made in the electric wiring. That is the wiring is to be concealed work. Heretofore the wiring for the electric lights was on the outside of the walls covered with cleating which was painted so as not to be much noticed. Now however all of the electric lighting wires are being placed behind the wall out of sight.

DR. KENDALL ON PEARS

Reads an Instructive Paper at Hillcrest Farm

Several hundred men and women interested in horticulture gathered at Hillcrest farm at Weston on Monday afternoon as guests of Miss Marion Roley Case, to listen to a practical paper on the "Pear" read by Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic, who has won mang prizes for fruit. The paper will be of interest to all who raise fruit and is printed in full.

The pear is universally considered to be the most delicious of dessert fruits, and I do not question that exalted rank although I do think that there are more valuable because more wholesome fruits, for instance the apple, the currant, and the gooseberry.

The latter, one of the most popular of fruits in England, is not yet appreciated in this country but is gradually coming into its own.

The pear is not indiginous to this country, but originated in the far East, probably in Syria and Egypt, and, in time, made its way, through Greece and Italy into Western Europe, and thence to this country. As far as we can learn from the writings of those ancients whose works have survived, Virgil, Pliny, and Threophrastus, the pear known to them was a very different morsel from the fruit as we know it, probably not much better than out own choke pears.

In fact the pear as we know it, one of the most luscious of natures morsels, did not begin to improve much until comparatively modern times, and it is almost within the memory of people now living that those most luscious varieties, the Bartlett, Seckel, Bosc and Dana Hovey have been evolved.

Some of the varieties that I, as a youth thought to be almost ideal would now be considered only fit to be grafted with the products of the last half century, so rapid has been the progress of this delicious fruit. It is fortunate for our race, that on the route across the European continent, lay the country of Belgium, for there the pear found the ideal conditions, not only of soil and climate, but also of scientific cultivators, who, by hybridizing or crossing, produced many thousands of varieties, a large number of which have survived the natural elimination of the less valuable ones.

MANY VARIETIES.

For there are, probably, more varieties of pears than of any other fruit. One Belgian, Prof. Van Mons, alone raised 80,000 varieties and he was but one enthusiast among many.

I remember my father telling me, as a boy, that Marshall P. Wilder, a townsman of ours, then president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, had a thousand different kinds of pear trees growing on his estate in Dorchester, and this stupendous fact caused me to look at that grand old man with added awe on the only occasion I ever saw him.

This was at a town meeting, sometime in the sixties, and his act of removing his hat, when voting, as a mark of respect for the privilege of suffrage made such a lasting impression on the mind of a boy of ten, that I formed the habit with my first vote.

But Belgium is not the only country having the requisites for the production and development of this fruit in its most exquisite qualities for the one variety that is a accepted the world over as the Standard of excellence, the one by which all others are compared, the Seckel, originated in America, a chance seedling, and many other delicious varities that are frequently appearing are evidence that the newer soil and climate conditions of the Northern section of our country are particualrly congenial. to this fruit.

The tree is very long lived, there being several specimens in Europe that are known to be almost 500 years old, and it often grows to be of large size under favorable conditions there being one tree in Herefordshire, England that covers almost an acre of ground, the branches bending down, taking root and growing still other branches that, in their turn, have taken root.

The fruit from this particular tree is not of high quality, but is used to make perry, which is the fermented juice of the pear made exactly as cider is made but which is richer and a more delicious drink, very common in Europe but almost unknown in this country.

An idea of the size of the Herefordshire tree may be gained from the fact that 15 hogsheads of perry have been made from its fruit of one year.

Although the one great use of the pear is as a dessert fruit it is very valuable for preserving, baking, stewing, for marmalade, and in some parts of Europe is dried as we do apples.

While the pear has the faculty of adopting itself to almost any kind of soil it will do best on a strong loam with dry subsoil or in a loose, strong clay, well drained.

On sand it grows very fast, too fast, as the bark is apt to split and the tree die.

But such light soils can be put in condition by adding humus in the form of cover crops to be dug in, muck or peat or manure.

Very wet soils should never be used for a pear plantation but, where one has the choice, a naturally rich, dry, well drained soil should be selected and a situation preferably facing to the north or east rather than the south, that the tree trunks may be somewhat shaded from the scorching heat of our midday suns.

TWO CLASSES.

We divide pear trees into two classes, the standards and the dwarfs.

The standard it the true, original pear tree, pear stock grafted or budded onto pear roots while the dwarf is similar stock grafted or budded onto quince roots, dwarfing the resulting tree. For commercial orchards standards are almost universally used, leaving the dwarfs to the province of the amateur, or one whose orchard space is limited, or him who, like myself, has as chief object, the raising of fruit for exhibition, to show what beautiful specimens can be produced.

But, if I were starting an orchard as a commercial proposition, I would plant dwarfs rather than standards for several reasons. They are safer to transplant from the nursery, where they cost less, several can be planted in the space taken up by one standard, and they come into bearing in about half the time.

Being so much lower in height the fruit is less liable to be blown off and bruised in the strong winds of the late fall, a strong consideration, since the winter pears should be left on the trees as late as possible.

Again the dwarf trees must have good cultivation and respond to it by giving larger and handsomer specimens, and this is not the case with all varieties of the standards although a desideratum when one is growing fruit for so much per.

Another very important point in their favor is that they suffer from their favor is that they suffer easily sprayed.

In the orchard, standard trees should be set thirty feet apart and dwarfs twelve feet apart although, if one prunes as vigorously as I do everything the latter can be planted only ten feet apart.

As far as possible plant the trees so they will get the morning sunlight, and this is a good rule to follow when setting out any tree where color of the fruit is a factor, and, I may as well divulge here, is the secret of my exhibits of certain varieties of pears invariably winning the first prizes at the Mass. Hort. Societies shows, because of their blushing cheeks, even in varieties that, usually, are pallid.

Try to get stocky trees, not the slender, whippy ones often sent out by unreliable dealers and, when planting, allow to remain only those buds necessary to form a well balanced head, cutting back quite sharply.

Watch the tree closely for three or four years, rubbing off the suckers as fast as they appear, removing superflous shoots and keeping the head open to let in air and sunshine.

SEVERE PRUNING.

Each fall, for several years, at least one half that seasons growth should be removed, and the dwarfs especially call for severe pruning, the high culture that should be given them inducing rapid growth of which the removal of a large proportion will improve both the tree and the quality of its fruit.

Prune in the winter if you want wood growth, in the summer if you want fruit.

This rule applies to many other varieties of fruit trees and only this season I have brought into bearing through pruning last summer, several plum trees that should have given me fruit years ago, but have been hitherto, barren.

In pruning look at position of the buds.

If you want an upright short trim to an inside bud and to an outside one if a downward growing shoot is desired.

If you want a limb to grow in or out trim to a bud on that side.

Don't neglect the trees but go over them frequently in the summer tc remove the suckers that would rob them of their vitality and, eventually, ruin them.

THE PLANTING.

When the trees arrive from the nursery, in good condition, dig for each a hole deep enough to accommodate the tap root without bending, large enough for the side roots and deep enough to plant the trees as deep as they were in the nursery.

Cut the back roots quite sharply and you will get action in growth more quickly than if all the roots are allowed to remain.

Set the tree, seeing that the roots are well distributed, fill up one third of the hole with surface soil, not the sub soil removed to make the hole, tramp this down as tightly as possible, and then fill up another third of the hole, and tramp, and finish by filling up the remainder of hole and tramping.

You cannot get the soil packed too tightly about the roots of a transplanted tree.

If possible, mulch the trees, after planting with the best available material, but on no account, use green unfermented manure, either in planting or for mulching.

Coal ashes are an excellent mulch for the orchard, those from anthracite coal, but those from bituminous coal carry too much sulphur.

Old, well ripened manure, bedding from the stable, the leaves gathered in the fall, any litter, can be used for mulch, to retain the moisture about the tree roots, but I consider coal ashes the best of all.

As a rule, pear trees need little stimulation but there are a few exceptions for instance the Seckel which will well repay in tree growth and quality of fruit for more nourishment than naturally furnished by even the best soil.

Whatever commercial fertilizer is used, should contain salt and potash and the quantity used be governed by growth of the tree, care being taken that this growth is not so rapid and succulent that it can not ripen enough to stand the winter.

I have had very satisfactory results with all my fruits this season from using basic slag and the pears, especially, never had such beautiful color.

The pear has many diseases and pest enemies, among them the curculic and codlin worm which may be combatted with the usual arsenical mixtures, but the one great enemy is blight in its various forms and from as many causes.

This is treated in many ways, almost every cultivator has a different specific, but my own is merely to cut off every vestige of the disease, burn, and paint the wound made by the knife or saw.

THINNING OUT.

Of course, the trees will have been sprayed once or more times each season with some of the tested fungicides.

The fruit of most varieties is borne in clusters and a vigorous thinning out will well repay both the amateur and the commercial grower, as the remaining fruit, having a better opportunity to develop, will be larger and handsomer and will measure up in greater bilk than if all had been left on the tree.

A good rule is to take off all you think should come off and then take off half of those that remain.

The Seckel, for instance, sets in clusters of four and five, and, instead of allowing all these to remain and develop into the little nubbins such as are usually seen in the markets it is my practice to remove all but one, sometimes two, from each cluster, with the result that I have often had trouble persuading people to believe that the pears I was showing them were, actually, seckels.

Dwarfs, especially, require hand thinning.

EXCELLENT VARIETIES.

While more than one thousand varieties of pears, origination in Belgium, France, England and our own country, have been fruited here, only a comparatively few have proved of sufficient merit to justify their existence, but the list of excellent varieties is so long that the fruit may be had almost the whole year round as is the apple.

"What is one man's meat is another man's poison" is an adage found in every language and the selection of varieties for the home orchard should be governed by ones personal taste.

There are several varieties, universally popular with the multitude, that I have eliminated from my small collection, as being almost repulsive to my taste.

A Sheldon, for instance, is considered by many to be the most delicious of all fruits, but to me its peculiar flavor is very disagreeable. Another is the Anjou for which fancy prices are paid in the winter time and which, like the Sheldon, is an overflowing reservoir of juicy sweetness, but the beautiful large trees of these two varieties that were growing on my place when it came into my possession have been grafted over with what I consider infinitely better kinds—the Bosc and the Dana-Hovey.

I have tested, both from the market and from home growing, all the popular varieites and have gradually, eliminated all except the Clapp's Favorite for early, Bartlett for summer, Seckel and Bosc for early autumn. Dana-Hovey for late autumn and Lawrence for winter.

Such are the ones that best please my own taste but there are scores of others, delicious ones, that may better suit other fancies.

Clapp's Favorite is a large, beautiful fruit, highly colored, where exposed to the sunlight, but must be picked very early, long before the tyro would consider the proper time as it is worthless if allowed to become at all mellow on the tree.

The Bartlett is undoubtedly the most popular of all pears and I doubt if it is ever ousted from that proud position.

Large, handsome, juicy, aromatic, its vinous perfumed flavor is relished by most people and even if picked when only partly grown, will ripen into a delicious fruit.

It originated in England in 1770 and was brought to Massachusetts by Enoch Bartlett, after whom it was named, although he was not its propagator.

Some 25 years ago, it occurred to me to look up the original Bartlett tree of this country and I found it still alive on its original location in Roxbury, the estate having been converted into a Catholic insitution Little Sisters of the Poor, I think it is called.

The good Sisters kindly allowed me to take a few scions which I grafted into a wild stock on my place and several times since, the fruit from these scions have won first prizes at the Massachusttes Horticultural Society's shows in competition with the best produced in the State.

The story of the Seckel is almost a romance. Originating in a hedge in Penn., it has attained the position of the standard by which all other pears are judged for quality. When sent to Europe for comparison with all the best varieties there grown—it was pronounced to excel in flavor any autumn varieties there known.

The fruit is small but can be made larger than is usually seen—if the soil about the tree is well fertilized and cultivated.

Magnificent best describes the Bosc and it cannot be given too high praise.

Large, juicy, rich in flavor, distinctive in shape, ornamental in growing.

Dana-Hovey is the one variety that nearest approaches the Seckel for high flavor and is of such quality that I am surprised that it is not more generally known. It is the pear known to the fancy market trade as "the Thanksgiving pear," because of being as its best at that season, and selling at a fancy price is one of the three or four varieties that I would set out if raising pears as a commercial proposition.

Although about the same size as the Seckel, it can be made, like all other fruit to grow large by proper thinning out and has a rich, aromatic flavor, that must be tasted to be appreciated.

The Lawrence can easily be kept until the holidays under ordinary conditions and much later into the winter in a cold place and then becomes a Bonne Bouche with exquisite, aromatic flavor and aroma.

COMMERCIAL PEAR.

Such are the varieties that I would recommend for one's own table, but there is another story when we come to a selection for the commercial planter who must have varieties that not only are prolific but that will keep well, so as to prolong the selling season and through their attractiveness, will command the highest prices.

To them my advice would be to plant no early ripening kinds, that will come into the market when it is glutted with many other fruits and have to compete with them.

If I was setting out a commercial plantation, as I surely would if a younger man—it would consist entirely of Bosc, Dana-Hovey and Anjou.

The two former I have already mentioned and the Anjou is one of the many introduced into this country from France by Marshall P. Wilder.

It is a very popular variety for orchards, bearing enormous crops, with great regularity, of large, handsome fruit that sells for the largest prices in the winter.

The flesh is melting, very juicy, white and perfumed, and its season can be extended through the winter by use of cold storage.

As a commercial proposition—I would strongly advise against planting too many varieties—not more than three or our, would contract the picking season. A great advantage, and the varieties I have mentioned are the ones that would command the highest prices. Ripening, naturally, late in the season, they can be held back, as the mid-season fruit cannot be, and can be put on the market at the grower's convenience.

The pear is the one fruit that must not be allowed to ripen on the tree.

Picked at the right time and matured in the house it will color up better and devolop a finer aroma and richer flavor. This right time is, as a rule, when the seeds are brown in color, and the fruit will part cleanly from the limb at junture of the stem, without the stem breaking, when lifting to an angle of say thirty degrees above the horizontal.

Winter pears should be allowed to stay on the trees as late as possible to devolop their flavor but not so late as to ripen there or drop of their own accord.

When possible, pick on a cool, dry day and place the fruit at once in shallow layers in the place where it is to be stored, which should be dark and where a uniform low temperature can be maintained, else it will rot without ripening.

Cover it up to prevent shrivelling and above all, keep it in a dark place, until a week or ten days before you are to use it—then place it in a warm room to develop the flavor and you will have the pear at its best.

To The Wearer of White Flannel Trousers

YOU know that it is almost impossible to keep flannel trousers from soiling. WE know that they are difficult to cleanse; still, if the stains on them can be removed by any known cleansing process, our method will surely make them look like new. Nearly all flannel trousers require more than one treatment to remove the different kinds of stains on them. At Warshaw's they are not limited to any one process; we do everything possible to make them clean. The new-like finish given them by our experienced pressmen brings out that standard of quality—"The Warshaw Crease;" it lasts.

This month we are cleansing and pressing MEN'S BUSINESS SUITS for $1.50; it's a discount of 25 per cent. Women's plain suits (linen, white or fancy suits not included) for $2; regular price $2.50 and $3.00.

GOOD RECORD OF ATLANTIC A. A.

Have Won a Large Majority of The Season's Games

The base ball season is rapidly drawing to a close and a glance at the seasons record shows that the Atlantic A. A. a junior team of Ward Six, has won 20 out of 25 games, some of them extra inning contests. Most games have been on the Ward Six playground and always with a good attendance.

The defeats were administered by the City Point Blue Foxes, Norfolks, West Quincy, Rand Class and the Walnut A. C. The latter won the honers of the ward one afternoon but held them only a week.

Atlantic has beaten among others Revere, Victories, Neponset White Sox, City Point Red Sox, Tiger A. A., Tiger A. C., Chestnut Hill, Neponset Wanderers, Jr., Warlands, Norfolks, Winthrop A. C. and Atlantic, 2d. The Forest A. C. lost two and the N. E. T. and T. Co. lost three to the Sixers.

Batting ability has often turned defeat into a victory. The members are Chassion, short; Johnson, centre; Duffy, right; Pitts, left; Curtin, third; Duffy, pitcher; Creedon, second; McNally, first; O'Connell, catcher.

Organized for two years they blossomed into prominence a year ago by playing a tie 16 innings game with the St. Mary Juniors at the Letter Carriers picnic at North Weymouth. Its second base man, Pete Creedon, played that bag with Quincy High school. Early in the season he broke his thumb in practice and did not recover before the school season closed.

Duffy and O'Connell, the most promising battery in any junior team south of Boston, have performed splendidly and it was through their fine working that the players became encouraged to play the fast games of this year.

The Atlantics will play a few more games this year, but are earnestly considering the next season's outlook. A winter class on inside base ball rudiments will be conducted at the homes of the boys and everything that can be done to add to base ball knowledge will be given the members.

Lillian Beaton and Elsa Sword Win First

James Opie the Star Boy

A large and enthusiastic crowd of boys and girls took part in the final all-round tests at the Ward Three playgrounds Tuesday afternoon. The result in about one-half of the different classes in the tests were in doubt until after these last events were held and as a result the events were all hotly contested.

In the boys events, Class C, James Opie was the star performer, cleaning up two firsts. For the girls Lillian Beaton, Class A and Elsa Sword, Class C, succeeded in winning two firsts.

BUSINESS SECTION LEVELLED BY FIRE

Blaze Starts In Hotel Kitchen In a Maine Town

North Anson, Me., Aug. 20.—The entire business section of this village was blotted out by fire through lack of protection. Eight dwellings also were destroyed before the fire burned itself out. The loss is estimated at from $125,000 to $150,000.

The business section consisted of about twenty-five buildings, mostly frame structures. The fire started from an exploded lamp in the kitchen of Hotel Somerset, an old-time hostelry. There were few guests and all got out without accident.

LIQUOR CONFISCATED

Court Disposes of Wet Goods Valued at $3000 Seized at Revere

Boston, Aug. 20.—Confiscation by the state of $3000 worth of liquors, seized in a raid upon the Lynnway club by Chairman White of the Revere board of selectmen, over the heads of the other members of the board and the Revere police, was ordered by Judge Brown in the Chelsea police court.

The raid took place several weeks ago, and has been productive of considerable dissension in Revere. White's action was not approved by the other members of the board, and residents were divided.

QUICK LUNCH ON TRAINS

New Scheme Will Have a Tryout on the Pennsylvania Road

Pittsburg, Aug. 20.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company is going to make an experiment in the quick-lunch-on-wheels business. A steel passenger car is being fitted up and equipped for service as a quick-lunch car.

The company will try it out on trains that do not carry dining cars, believing that it will answer a long-felt need. The car is intended to cater to the wishes and tastes of the traveling public who do not wish an elaborate meal while traveling.

NO ULTIMATUM FROM MEXICO

Huerta Repudiates Statement In Press Dispatches

CONFERS WITH ENVOY LIND

Washington Believes It Indicates Disposition to Reopen Negotiations For Mediation, Which Had Been Turned Down—Great Tension Relieved by Reassuring Reports From Mexico

Washington, Aug. 20.—Belief that President Huerta, to a certain extent, has "backed down" from his original refusal to treat with this country on the question of mediation, was based on a communication received at the White House from the president's special envoy, John Lind.

This dispatch, detailing Lind's experience at a two-hour conference with the Mexican executive, stated that the latter was "very cordial" in his reception.

The conference was held after the formal reply of the Mexican government had been sent to Washington. This reply, it was assumed, had rejected the proposed mediation. Press reports had gone out from Mexico City stating that the reply had been in the nature of an ultimatum to the United States regarding recognition of the provisional government. At the conference Huerta, warned by Lind of the sober interest Washington is taking in the Mexican situation, expressed the hope a remedy for the tension existing between the two governments would shortly be found.

Lind's message followed that of American Charge O'Shaugnessy, dispatching the "war scare" caused by press dispatches from Mexico City apparently inspired by the Mexican minister of the interior. O'Shaugnessy stated that, through Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs Gamboa, Huerta had repudiated the statement that the Mexican government had sent an ultimatum for its recognition and delivered passports to O'Shaugnessy.

High tension of the Mexican situation was relieved by the two cablegrams. The president decided to take no further action and to issue no further instructions until more detailed reports reach here. The cordial reception given by Huerta to Lind was regarded as a most hopeful sign, indicating that Huerta had not finally and decisively rejected the mediation plan, but was willing to continue negotiations personally with Lind.

In his message Lind reported that he was summoned to Huerta's palace at 10 o'clock Monday night and remained in conference with Huerta until midnight. The midnight meeting followed a cabled report sent by Lind believed to have been that reporting Huerta's alleged rejection of the mediation plan. By inviting Lind to the conference the administration believes Huerta indicated a disposition to reopen negotiations, probably toward a modification of the original mediation proposal.

The president, Secretary of State Bryan and other high administration officials anxiously await further reports from Lind and O'Shaughnessy. But no trepidation is manifested. Because of the reassuring dispatches the situation was not deemed important enough for a conference between the president and Bryan or for a cabinet meeting.

The report that Huerta had severed relations—apparently authentic, since the statement was attributed to the minister of the interior, Senor Urrutia—created perturbation in official Washington. It was not until the American embassy at Mexico City had been communicated with and had forwarded the denial that officials here were relieved of their tension.

IN CHILDREN'S PRESENCE

Father Kills Their Mother and Later Takes His Own Life

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 20.—Frantic because he had heard unfounded reports reflecting on his wife's character, John Marshall fired five bullets into her body as they sat at the dining table in their home in Martin's Ferry, across the Ohio river from here.

Chief of Police Hyland, who lives next door, heard the shots and forced the door to the Marshall house. Marshall fled to the attic and finding escape cut off, blew out his brains.

Mrs. Marshall was killed in the presence of four of her six children.

Pat Crowe In Insane Asylum

Washington, Aug. 20.—The real Pat Crowe, kidnapper in the noted Cudahy case, is in the government hospital for the insane. The police doubted his sanity because he said he was Crowe. He has been positively identified.

Wet Skirt Conducts Electricity

New York, Aug. 20.—Miss Margaret Wesley, 24, was killed at Edgemere, L. I., when the wet skirt of her bathing suit caused a short circuit with the third rail of the Long Island railroad tracks.

Killed by Rat Poison

Boston, Aug. 20.—Harry Shattuck, 25, of South Boston, died from the effects of a dose of rat poison that he had taken. He had been despondent.

Experiments are being made now on a large British vessel that is under construction, with a gasolene electric plant that may be placed on the bridge deck. This set will not only supply the light, but the wireless telegraph apparatus as well, so that the occupants of the vessel may be supplied with light and the means for calling for assistance until the very moment of complete submergence of the vessel. This generating plant will be used only in emergencies.

RECORD OF THAW'S FIGHT FOR

If Captured, It Is Questioned Whether Extradition Proceedings Are Possible.

THE dramatic escape of Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, from the asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan, N. Y., promises to be the last chapter in the spectacular battle for life and freedom which Thaw has waged since the shooting of White on the Madison Square roof garden in New York city on the evening of June 25, 1906. According to many authorities, among them the New York district attorney, Charles S. Whitman, Thaw cannot be extradited, his escape into Canada or another state making him safe for all time unless he again places himself within the jurisdiction of the New York officials.

Meanwhile Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the wife for whom he killed White, is in fear of her life. "Harry will surely kill me," she is quoted as saying, and she has engaged detectives to protect her from possible attack.

Here are the principal events in the history of the spectacular case dating from the shooting of White on June 25, 1906, until the escape of Thaw from Matteawan in the early morning of Aug. 17, 1913:

June 25, 1906—Thaw shot and killed Stanford White at the Madison Square roof garden.

Jan. 22, 1907—Thaw's trial for murder started.

March 20, 1907—District Attorney William Travers Jerome halted Thaw's first trial to prove him insane. Thaw bitterly opposed this proceeding, desiring the trial to continue.

April 5, 1907—Commission pronounced Thaw sane.

April 12, 1907—Jury before which Thaw was tried disagreed and was discharged.

Feb. 1, 1908—Thaw acquitted by jury on his second trial on the ground of insanity. Justice Dowling committed him to Matteawan as a dangerous lunatic and sent him immediately to that institution for the criminal insane.

April 22, 1908—Thaw applied to Justice Morschauser for his first writ of habeas corpus.

May 6, 1908—Dr. Amos T. Baker, superintendent of Matteawan, in his return to the writ opposed Thaw's release.

denied Thaw's application to be transferred to Middletown State hospital.

June 20, 1908—Thaw demanded a jury trial to prove his sanity.

Sept. 16, 1908—Justice Mills denied application.

Jan. 4, 1909—Thaw appealed.

July 5, 1909—The appellate division denied Thaw's appeal.

July 14, 1909—Justice Mills at White Plains heard Thaw's application for release on the ground that he was then sane.

Aug. 12, 1909—Justice Mills ordered Thaw returned to Matteawan, dismissing his second writ.

Aug. 26, 1909—The court of appeals sustained the appellate division decision that Justice Mills was justified in denying Thaw a jury trial

Dec. 30, 1909—The United States supreme court refused to review the action of the New York state court of appeals.

July 26, 1912—Justice Keogh dismissed the third Thaw writ.

Nov. 22, 1912—Thaw gave $25,000 to J. N. Anhut to influence Superintendent Russell of Matteawan to obtain his release.

March 6, 1913—Thaw's counsel, ex-Governor William A. Stone of Pennsylvania, withdrew fourth writ on hearing before Justice Giegerich, explaining Anhut scandal prejudiced case.

May 15, 1913—Thaw testified against Anhut in the criminal branch of the supreme court in New York county, stating he hoped by his bearing and testimony to substantiate his claim to sanity.

Aug. 17, 1913—Thaw left Matteawan in a fast motorcar without legal formalities.

SEVEN YEAR LIFE AND LIBERTY

Escape of Stanford White's Slayer Ends Long Battle For Freedom.

OXYGEN CURE FOR INSANITY.

Injections Successful In Apparently Hopeless Cases.

Paris newspapers are giving prominence to an announcement made by Dr. Toulouse, senior physician of the Villejuif asylum, that he has cured incipient insanity by means of subcutaneous injections of oxygen.

Two inmates of the asylum who were suffering from "mental confusion" were treated and improvement was shown after the first injection. The condition of confusion disappeared in a few days, and lucidity, which it had been feared was lost forever, gradually reappeared. The patients were eventually able to leave the asylum cured.

From the meager details obtainable it seems that the oxygen injections are beneficial in cases of lunacy caused by overwork, the oxygen restoring the energy of the exhausted system.

Hope For the Childless.

Hope for childless women is held out in a remarkable claim by Dr. Voronoff of Nice, who described to the medical congress, just held in London, his experiments in transplanting vital organs from one animal to another. By this means he actually enabled a barren ewe to give birth to a lamb, which is still living. In an interview he said: "I assert my experiments can be applied to human beings. Indeed, it is easier to graft certain parts with humans than with animals."

EXPLORERS THROUGH CANAL.

Peary and Amundsen Will Cross Isthmus on the Fram.

The whaling steamship Fram, commanded by Captain Doxrud, is now on the way from Buenos Aires to Colon with the intention of taking on board there Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, U. S. N. (retired), and Captain Roald Amundsen, the explorers, who will be the first to pass through the Panama canal on board ship.

Captain Amundsen will afterward proceed in the Fram toward the north pole and, taking advantage of the arctic currents, will return on board of her to Christiania, Norway, traversing on the way the Spitzbergen archipelago.

Captain Doxrud purposes taking lessons in order to perfect himself in aviation at San Francisco, so that he may be able to make flights in the polar regions.

The expedition is expected to take six years for its completion.

Africa Is After Gorgas.

Colonel William C. Gorgas, chief sanitary officer of the Panama canal commission, recently received a cablegram from the chamber of mines of Johannesburg, South Africa, requesting his services in sanitation work for the betterment of the health conditions among the miners at the Witwatersrand mines. Colonel Gorgas cabled his will ingness to go in November.

EDITED BY GARDNER

Campaign Document Contains Speeches by Many Congressmen

Washington, Aug. 20.—Under the generous "leave to print" granted him by the Democratic leador, Representative Gardner appears in the Congressional Record as the editor of a campaign document entitled "Down East Industries and State of Maine Folks Where the Democratic Tariff Bill Hits Everyone of You."

This speech of the Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in Massachusetts is made up of remarks by Representatives Hinds of Maine, Senator Sterling of South Dakota, Representative Ainey of Pennsylvania, Representative Plumley of Vermont and others, and includes a short paragraph on fish by Gardner himself.

In this brief statement Gardner makes the point that in all the history of Gloucester never was anyone able to retire from business on profits made in the fisheries and scores the Democrats for putting fish on the free list while rice, which yields less revenue, remains on the dutiable list.

NOMINATION PAPERS FILED

Foss Not Among List of Candidates In the Bay State

Boston, Aug. 20.—Very few contests for nominations for state offices are disclosed by the filing of papers with the secretary of state.

The story of the direct primaries as shown by the papers is that contests within the party are avoided by candidates. The Benton-Gardner contest for the Republican nomination for governor is the only fight for head of the ticket.

The sensational candidacy of Governor Foss for the Republican nomination was ended finally with a statement by the governor that he would not sign the acceptance upon the nomination papers in his office after he received the news that he lacked sufficient signatures to get on the Republican ballot.

Lieutenant Governor Walsh will have no opposition for the Democratic nomination for governor, and Charles S. Bird will have no fight to be the Progressive candidate for governor.

WILSON'S SUGAR SCHEDULE WINS

All Amendments to Measure Are Defeated In Senate

Washington, Aug. 20.—President Wilson's program for free sugar in 1916 carried the day in the senate when Democrats rallied to the support of the tariff bill and defeated all amendments to the sugar schedule.

With all but Senators Randell and Thornton of Louisiana standing firmly for the administration measure, the Democrats defeated the Bristow amendment for a compromise duty, the Norris amendment against free sugar, and the Gallinger amendment against free maple sugar.

An amendment to abolish immediately the Dutch standard color test for sugar was adopted during the fight.

SULZER IS DEFIANT

May Decline to Bow to Opinion of State Attorney General

Albany, Aug. 20.—Official Albany believes that Governor Sulzer will decline to abide by the opinion of Attorney General Carmody declaring Lieutenant Governor Glynn to be the acting governor of the state and will seek a court decision to test the legality of his impeachment by the assembly.

Some of the state departments which have been wavering as to whether they should continue to recognize Sulzer as chief executive are expected to follow the advice of the attorney general and accept Glynn as the acting head of the state government.

SUFFRAGISTS WARNED

Cannot Advertise on Their Campaign Wagon In Hartford

Hartford, Aug. 20.—Three suffragists, Miss Elizabeth Freeman, Miss Elsie McKenzie and Vera Wentworth, who are conducting a campaign throughout the east, were ordered to the police station for violation of a city ordinance.

They had driven into town with their campaign wagon covered with signs, advertising the cause. At police headquarters they were informed that they must remove or cover up the signs, as the city law forbids any street vehicle advertising. The campaigners decided to keep the signs covered during their stay here.

SUFFOCATE WHILE ASLEEP

Gasolene Fumes Overcome Newly Married Couple and a Woman

Curling, N. F., Aug. 20.—A newly married couple and an elderly woman were suffocated by gasolene fumes while sleeping in the cabin of an auxiliary packet employed by the Canadian government on the Labrador coast.

No details and no names were known by those on the Newfoundland mail steamer which brought to the outside world the first news of the tragedy.

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

"I hope I haven't got Roxbury into trouble by that interview I gave out concerning the new method of fireproofing woodwork in office buildings and hotels. It occurred to me afterward that he is violently opposed to the system. I advocated it. He'll have a—I might say a devil of a time explaining his change of front."

As a matter of fact, when Medcroft, hiding in London, saw the reproduced interview in the Times, together with editorial comments upon the extraordinary attitude of a supposedly conservative Englishman of recognized ability, he was tried almost beyond endurance. For the next two or three days the newspapers printed caustic contributions from fellow architects and builders, in each of which the luckless Medcroft was taken to task for advocating an impractical and famous New York hobby in the way of construction, something that staid old London would not even tolerate or discuss. The social chronicllings of the Medcrofts in Vienna as dispatched by the correspondents offset this unhappy "bull" to some extent in so far as Medcroft's peace of mind was concerned, but nothing could have drawn attention to the fact that he was not in London at that particular time so decisively as the Vienna interview and its undefended front. Even his shrewdest enemy could not have suspected Medcroft of a patience which would permit him to sit quiet in London while the attacks were going on. He found some small solace in the reflection that he could make the end justify the means.

On their return to the Bristol, Brock and Miss Fowler found the fair Edith in a pitiful state of collapse. She declared over and over again that she could not face the Rodneys. It was more than should be expected of her. She was sure that something would go wrong. Why—oh, why was it necessary to deceive the Rodneys? Why should they be kept in the dark? Why wasn't Roxbury there to counsel wisely, and more, ad infinitum, until the distracted pair were on the point of deserting the cause. She finally dissolved into tears, and would not listen to reason, expostulation or persuasion. It was then that Brock cruelly but effectively declared his intention to abdicate, as he also had a reputation to preserve. Whereupon, with a fine sense of distinction she flared up and accused him of treachery to his best friend, Roxbury Medcroft, who was reposing the utmost confidence in his friendship and loyalty. How could she be expected to go on with the play if he, the man upon whom everything depended, was to turn tail in a critical hour like this?

"How can you have the heart to spoil everything?" she cried indignantly. He looked at her in fresh amazement. "Roxbury would never forgive you. We have both placed the utmost confidence in you, Mr. Brock, and"—

"'Sh! Say, 'Roxbury, dear,'" interposed the practical Constance. "The walls may have ears, my dears."

Then Mrs. Medcroft plaintively implored his forgiveness and said that she was miserable and ashamed and very unappreciative. Brock, in deep humility, begged her pardon for his unnecessary harshness, and promised not to offend again.

"The first quarrel," cried Constance delightedly. "How nicely you've made it up. And you've been married less than a week!"

"Roxbury and I didn't have our first quarrel until we'd been married a year," said Edith reflectively.

"Oh, I say, Edith," exclaimed Brock, with a dark frown. "I'd rather you wouldn't be forever extolling the good qualities of my predecessor. It's very bad taste. Very much like the pies mother used to make."

"Silly!" cried Medcroft's wife, now in fine humor.

"Besides, Rox is an Englishman. It would take him a year to produce a quarrel. The American husband is not so confounded slow. I won't live up to Roxbury in everything."

It was decided that Constance should greet the Rodneys upon their arrival. The Medcrofts were not to appear until dinner time. Afterward the entire party would attend the opera, which was then in the closing week. Brock with splendid prodigality had taken a box for the final performance of "Tristan und Isolde." It is not out of place to remark that Brock loathed the Wagnerian opera. He was of "The Mikado" cult. He took the seats with a definite purpose in mind to cast the burden of responsibility upon his wife, who would be forced to extend herself in the capacity of hostess, giving him the much needed opportunity to secure safe footing in the dark area of uncertainty. He believed himself capable of diverting the youthful Miss Rodney and his discreet sister-in-law, but he was consumed by an unholy dread of Rodney pere. Something told him that this shrewd American business man was not the kind who would have the wool pulled over his eyes by any one. Brock felt that the support of Constance was of greater value than that of Edith at any stage or in any emergency.

Besides, he was now quite palpably in love with her. "I've got it bad!" he reflected in sober consideration of his plight; "but," came the ironic justification, "I'm able to confine it to the immediate family. That's more than most husbands can say."

CHAPTER VI.

Freddie Ulstervelt.

THE Rodneys descended upon the Bristol at 5 o'clock, rushing down from the Nord-Bahnhof as if there was not a minute to spare. Constance pursued Katherine to her room, where they revelled in the delights of a reunion, gradually coming out of its throes as the hour for dressing approached.

"We dine early, dear," said Constance, "with supper after the opera. I must be out to dress."

"I am so eager to meet Mr. Medcroft. Is he nice?"

"He's the dearest thing in the world!" cried the other, her cheeks aglow.

"I'm so glad, on Edith's account. Most of these English matches turn out abominably," commented Miss Rodney, who was twenty, very pretty and very worldly. "Oh, did I tell you that Freddie Uistervelt is with us?"

"No!"

"We came across him in Berlin, and dad asked him to join us if he had nothing better to do, so he said he would. He was with us in Dresden and Prague and—don't you think he's awfully jolly?"

"Ripping!" said Constance with deplorable fervor.

"How awfully English! He said he'd seen you in Paris this spring."

"Yes," said Miss Fowler, her cheeks going red suddenly. "I told him you'd asked me to be with you in June." She could have cut out her tongue for saying this, but it was too late. Katherine laughed a trifle hardly after a stiff moment; then a queer light flitted in to her eyes—the light of awakened opposition. Constance was saying to herself: "She's in love with Freddie. I might have known it." Back in her brain lay the memory of Freddie's violent protestations of love, uttered during those recent days in Paris. He had threatened to throw himself into the Seine; she remembered that quite well—and also the fact that he did nothing of the sort, but had a very jolly time at Maxim's and sent her flowers by way of repentance. Knowing Freddie so well, it would not have surprised her in the least to find that he had become engaged to Katherine. His heart was a very flexible organ.

"Oh," said Katherine, "I believe he did say that you had mentioned us." Of herself she was asking, "I wonder if she is in love with him?"

And thus it transpired that Freddie Ulstervelt—addlepated, good looking, inconstant Freddie, just out of college—was transformed into a bone of contention, whether he would or no.

He was of the kind who love or make love to every new girl they meet, seriously enough at the time, but easily passed over if need be. Rebuffs may have puzzled him, but they left no jagged scar. He belonged to that class which upsets the tranquillity of inexperienced maidens by whispering intensely, "Heavens, it's grand!" And he means it at the moment.

DOVELL CASE A MYSTERY.

Nothing has been received at police headquarters that will aid in clearing up the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Paul Dovell, the Quincy ice man whose absence was discovered a few hours after part of his clothing was found on the banks of Echo lake.

All relatives have been communicated with and the police in various sections of the country possess information that should lead to his apprehension. Fellow employees at the Sheppard Coal Co. have received no word, neither has the family which continues to live at 38 Elm street.

PRESIDENT HILL TENNIS.

The championship tournament of the Presidents Hill Tennis club is nearing completion, with the following as semi-finalists. H. C. Hallowell vs. C. K. Allen and R. D. Wetherell vs. A. S. Townsend. The winner of the tournament will have the right to challenge A. H. Blanchard, the present holder of the title.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

RELEASE OF TAX FIGURES

Necessary to Telephone to New Hampshire First

Although Mayor Stone promised Monday that the tax rate would be given out Tuesday morning with a letter, it looked for a time Tuesday as though it would not be made public. Mayor Stone attended the special meeting of the Council, Monday evening and left town later in the evening for a few days. Chairman Adams of the Board of Assessors was also out of town, having gone to New Hampshire to attend a wedding.

There was no one at City Hall on Tuesday morning therefore to give out the rate, as it had been held back by the Mayor from Monday in order that he might prepare a statement to be given out with it.

Assistant Assessor W. W. Mitchell was in the Assessors' office, but as the Mayor had ordered the rate held back and the chairman was absent from the city he would not take the responsibility of giving it out.

A general idea however was had of the amount as Councilman Cunningham had let the cat out of the bag during his remarks at the Council meeting.

The figures were already for the newspaper men, but no one at City Hall would take the responsibility of giving them out. The Mayor's Boston office was called by telephone but he had gone. After a time the address of Chairman Adams in New Hampshire was obtained and he was reached by telephone.

As soon as the situation was explained to him he released the figures, and copies were given to the press. It was a few minutes after 12 o'clock before the figures were in the hands of the newspapers, so that it was a case of hustle.

WEYMOUTH OFFICIAL FINED

Charged With Operating Automobile While Intoxicated

Judge Avery put his stamp of disapproval on persons operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor when he imposed a fine of $75 and a sentence of ten days in the house of correction on Harley F. Carter of Weymouth for operating an automobile while intoxicated at Weymouth.

According to the testimony, Carter who is superintendent of wires for the Weymouth Electric Light Co., came down through Weymouth Square Tuesday evening driving his Ford car in such a way as to endanger people on the street. He eventually lost control of the machine which brought up with a bang against a tree. The tree was not much damaged, but the front of the car suffered considerable. Officers Fitzgerald and Walsh who were near by placed Carter under arrest.

Judge Avery in giving his finding said that he believed a severe penalty should be given in such cases. Here was a public official who in the course of his business was driving his car on the public streets frequently and it was extremely dangerous to the public to go about while under the influence of liquor.

Carter appealed and was held in $200 for the grand jury.

FORMER RESIDENT.

The death is reported of George W. W. Saville, formerly of Quincy at Malden Tuesday evening. Mr. Saville who was 80 years of age has been court officer, deputy sheriff and special sheriff of Middlesex county, for more than 20 years. Mr. Saville was born in Quincy and when 17 years of age moved to Medford and entered the grocerybusiness. Later he became secretary and treasurer of the Foster & Manning Lumber Co. He also served on the police and fire departments at various times.

MUTUAL RELATIONS AND INTERESTS OF THE BELL SYSTEM AND THE PUBLIC

The suit brought by the United States questioning the purchase of certain telephone properties in the northwest, as well as the pending Interstate Commerce Commission telephone investigation, have caused many inquiries. Without taking up anything going to the merits of these proceedings it has seemed to us proper to state generally what has been our policy and purpose in the conduct of our business.

We have found, or thought that we had, that our interests were best served when the public interests were best served; and we believe that such success as we have had has been because our business has been conducted on these lines.

We believe that our company has an interest as vital as that of the public in the proper administration of the problems of electrical inter-communication. The success and prosperity of our company depend upon a solution of these problems which shall be sound from both the standpoint of the company and the public which it serves.

Following our own best judgment, supplemented by the best obtainable advice, we have endeavored to do what would best serve the public interest; wherever possible our plans have been disclosed to the public in advance, and what has been done in carrying them out has been along ordinary business lines, with the implied and generally, with the expressed approval, authorization or consent of the municipal and state authorities directly interested. Our effort has been not only to obey the law, but to avoid everything which might even have the appearance of an attempt at evasion.

Our business methods and policy, and practically all of the details as to the transaction of our business, are matters of common knowledge and are, and for many years have been, well known to the government. We will willingly furnish the government any additional information which is in our possession or under our control, and will cordially co-operate with it in obtaining such further information as it may require. Every possible assistance will be given by us to the courts in their effort to determine whether our policy is or has been inimical to the public interest. We desire that anything wrong be corrected; we will voluntarily rectify any wrong that may be pointed out to us; and, so far as it may be determined that our policy or any act under it is against the public interest, we will promptly conform to such determination.

We believe that if each of our exchanges were made an independent unit and if each connecting line were put under a separate control, the effect upon the telephone service of the country would be a condition so intolerable that the public would refuse to submit to it and would immediately require such physical connection and common control of these various units as would amalgamate them into a single system. Physical connection in the case of telephone or telegraph does not mean transfer of messages from one line to the other. It means such a connection as will permit one person to have the actual possession of the particular line of communication from one end of it to the other and this can only be given efficiently by exchange systems and connecting lines under a common control; and that is what the Bell System is.

In this connection, and for general information, we will restate the policy which controlled the building up of the Bell System, and our belief as to what a telephone system should be, and what are its relations to the public.

We believe in and were the first to advocate state or government control and regulation of public utilities; that this control or regulation should be by permanent quasi-judicial bodies, acting after thorough investigation and governed by the equities of each case; and that this control or regulation, beyond requiring the greatest efficiency and economy, should not interfere with management of operation. We believe that these bodies, if they are to be permanent, effective and of public benefit, should be thoroughly representative; they should be of such character and should so conduct their investigations and deliberations as to command such respect from both the public and the corporations that both will without question accept their conclusions.

We believe that the public would in this way get all the advantages and avoid all the manifest disadvantages of public ownership.

We believe that centers of business and population exist for the convenience of the public as a whole, and that no such center can prosper without sufficient and efficient means of intercourse with other centers and tributary territories that such means can only be afforded by prosperous utility and service companies and that fair rates are essential to prosperous companies. We do not believe that any public either desires or can obtain, nor can any service or utility furnish, permanent and efficient service at less than cost, including capital charges. We believe that ultimately the public either directly or indirectly pays the losses involved in the efforts to furnish such service at less than its fair cost, either through the loss of the capital involved, the losses incident to poor service or the necessary increase in charges required to pay for duplication of capital.

We believe that the highest commercial value of the telephone service depends on its completeness—on the extent and comprehensiveness of the facilities for intercommunication, not only between individuals but between centers of population; that no isolated section can be considered independently of any other section or of the whole: that rates must be so adjusted as to make it possible to obtain the maximum development by making it possible for every one to be connected who will add to the value of the system, thus giving the greatest value to the greatest number; that the interdependence of the telephone service and the value of complete and universal intercommunication justify and require some services partly at the expense of the whole for the benefit of the whole.

We believe that the highest commercial value can only be attained by one system under one common control and that it cannot be given by independent systems unless they are operated under agreements which result in one common control and one common interest, in effect making them a single system.

We believe that rates should be so adjusted as to afford the company sufficient revenue to pay such wages and compensation as will secure the most efficient service; to maintain the very highest and most advanced standards of plant and apparatus, to carry on such scientific and experimental research and inventions as to apparatus and methods as to insure the highest standards, and to carry to reserve and depreciation such amounts as will enable the company at any time to replace old plant and old methods with new plant and new methods as fast as they may be developed and found to be to the advantage of the service. We believe that in addition, such fair charges should be paid upon the investment in plant as will enable the company at any time to obtain money necessary to provide the plant required to meet the continuing demands of the public; and in order that waste and duplication of effort may be avoided and uniformity of purpose and common control be enforced, that there should be a centralized general administration in close communication with and having general authority over the whole on matters common to all or matters of general policy.

We believe that any surplus beyond that necessary to equalize dividends on a fair basis should be used by the company for the benefit of the public and should be alienable for any other purpose, and should be either invested in revenue-earning plant until necessary to substitute plant which may become inadequate or obsolete, or should be used to make the service cheaper or better.

We believe that under proper governmental control and regulation the profits from promotion or operation allowed to be distributed should not be so large as to warrant or tempt complete duplication of plant and organization, with its duplication of its capital charges and its organization, operating, maintenance and depreciation expenses; and we do not believe that utilities giving at fair rates an efficient and sufficiently comprehensive universal service should be subject to limited competition, not giving such service. Competition which ignores the obligation to furnish a complete and comprehensive service is not competition, is not for the benefit of the public in that it does not reach the whole public interested.

If, therefore, complete duplication, with its dual exchange connection and dual bills for service, is a prerequisite to complete competition, government control and regulation cannot go hand in hand with competition.

We believe that the record of the Bell System will be accepted by the public as fully in accord with these declarations. Consistent adherence to this policy has given the public of the United States the best, most comprehensive and cheapest telephone service in the world and made the Bell standards the standards of all nations.

To remove any possible excuse for misapprehension on account of the many misleading statements which have been circulated as to the alleged unnecessary and over capitilization and excessive charges of the Bell System, the following statistics are given. Except where stated, the figures are for the Bell System; that is, the American Telephone and Telegraph, and its Associated Companies.

The entire Bell System on June 30, 1913, had outstanding in the hands of the public obligations (i. e., notes, open accounts, bonds and shares) to the par value of $776,000,000.

The book value of the total tangible assets, which is considerably less than their replacement value, amounted to $960,000,000. Many appraisals of property included in these assets have been made, and most of them under the direction of public authorities. In no case has the value as it stands on the books failed to be sustained, and in most cases it has been very largely exceeded.

The total dividends and interest paid during the year 1912 amounted to only 6.1 per cent on the average of its outstanding obligations, and to less than 5 per cent on the average value of its assets.

The actual cash which has been paid into the treasury of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on account of the capital obligations now outstanding amounts to $22,000,000 more than the par of such outstanding obligations.

The Associated Companies collected from the public and paid back in taxes over $10,000,000 during the year 1912.

The steadily increasing necessities of the public not only for additional but for new telephone service can only be met by new construction, involving capital outlay. To meet these demands during the six and one-half years from 1907 to June, 1913, inclugive, the increase in telephone plant was as follows: Toll line wire increased from 1,460,000 miles to 2,242,000 miles; exchange wire increased from 6,000,000 miles to 13,000,000; the number of exchange stations increased from 2,730,000 to 5,200,000; the number of stations of independent companies connected with the Bell System increased from 343,000 to 2,620,000. The number of independent companies connected with the Bell System is about 25,000. The number of employees in the Bell System, not including the employees of connected companies, on December 31, 1912, was 141,000.

During this same period the number of shareholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, not including either the associated or connected companies, increased from 17,000 to about 54,000. About 47,000 shareholders hold less than 100 shares each; 6,500 shareholders hold from 100 to 1,000 shares each; 347 shareholders hold from 1,000 to 5,000 shares each, while there are only 16 shareholders of 5,000 shares or over in their own right. A majority of the shareholders are women.

$25 FINE IN ASSAULT CASE

Trouble Was Over Size of a Piece of Ice

The continued case of Francisco DiCiserio, for assault on Herbert F. Caldwell at Quincy last Saturday, was heard before Judge Avery this morning. Caldwell testified that DiCiserio was finding fault with the size of the piece of ice which he received and that he, Caldwell, asked him if he wanted the whole ice house fo r ten cents. At this Disiscerio called him a bad name and grabbing up the ice axe made a strike at him.

Caldwell saw the blow coming nad ducked so that he did not receive the full force of the blow. He however got a blow with the side of the axe on the back of the head which raised a bunch and broke the skin. Caldwell was also thrown off the platform and injured his arm. He said that his head had pained him ever since and that he had been unable to sleep nights.

DiCiserio was found guilty and the case continued until December 31, to pay a fine of $25.

FUNERAL OF MRS. ERWIN.

Rev. Fr. Patrick A. Hayes of Milo, Me., was the celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem at the funeral of his sister Mrs. Nora E. Erwin which was held at St. John's church this morning. Rev. Fr. John J. Casey was deacon, Rev. Fr. Walter Quinlan, sub-deacon and Rev. Fr. John J. Coan the pastor, master of ceermonies.

The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon, organist. The soloists were Mrs. Mary Burns King and Miss Eva Rice.

The bearers, the six oldest sons of the deceased were John, James, Howard, Harold, Joseph and Patrick. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery where the committal prayers were read by Father Hayes.

The funeral was largely attended by relatives and friends and there was a profusion of floral tributes, among them being a standing wreath from the Boston Ice Cream Co. by whom several of the sons were employed.

Mrs. Erwin died suddenly on Monday and leaves a husband, Edward F. one daughter and eight sons.

RUSHING THEM OFF.

"Wat's Zeke Crossby doing rushing down to the barn in such an excited state for?" drawled Hiram Hardapple.

"Why, Zeke heard that one of his seven daughters is going to elope tonight with a summer boarder in Zeke's auto," whispered the hired man.

"Do tell And I suppose Zeke is running down to lock the machine up so they can't get it?"

Oh,! Zeke's running down to grease it up and put the motors in order so it won't break down and break up the elopement,"—Chicago News.

GRAFT IN RUSSIA.

A young Russian officer wished to be transferred to another regiment and took his request in person to one of the lights of the Russian general staff. That powerful officer shook his head and declared the matter very difficlut to arrange—almost impossible. Then his glance fell suddenly upon the shoes of the lieutenant. To the amazement of his visitor, the senior officer said that the lieutenant's shoes were not nearly good enough for an officer and that he would strongly advise him to buy new shoes of a shoemaker whose address he gave. Then, telling his visitor to return in eight days, he dismissed him.

The latter was clever enough to realize that he could not return without the new shoes, so he hurried to the shoemaker. On hearing who had sent him the shoemaker said that the lieutenant could have the shoes in five days for the sum of $259. Much astonished, the officer went to a comrade for advice. He was told to pay half of this sum at once and the rest when his shoes were finished. This the officer did, and, wearing his new boots, he duly kept his appointment with the general staff officer and learned to his joy that all the "grave difficulties" in the way of his transter had been successfully removed.

Although the sessions of the association are being held at the Brunswick, there are many men who accompanied the association members as guests and they for the most part spent the day at the Arena. There are also a number of ladies in the party and they also were at the Arena during the day and were having a grand time admiring the exhibits and loading themselves down with souvenirs.

Today the first entertainments for the ladies will be held. The program includes a trolley trip to Norumbega park, with entertainment in the open air theatre. In addition to this, sightseeing automobiles will leave the Brunswick both today and Thursday at 2.30 for trips to Concord and Lexington.

Tonight the grand banquet will be held at Brunswick and as ladies are also included they will be well taken care of. For those that tire of the exhibition hall and meetings of the associations there is plenty to amuse in the way of base ball games and trolley trips without number. Some have already made visits to Quincy.

Today's program included an address by J. Randolph Coolidge of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at 11 o'clock. The business session of the convention opened at 2 o'clock, the business including the question box and free discussion, reports from state associations by state presidents, etc.

"QUINCY DAY" TOMORROW

About 300 Delegates to National Granite Convention Are Expected

Will Tour City in Automobiles --- The Convention

There was a large attendance Wednesday at the exhibition which is being held in the Boston Arena in connection with the convention of the National Retail Dealers' Association. It was a constant moving crowd that was in attendance. That is delegates would steal an hour or so from the meetings at the Hotel Brunswick to visit the exhibition. In addition to this there were many visiting granite men, not members of the association from Quincy and other places.

Many of the visitors, especially those from the west were willing to buy anything that met their fancy, and the result will probably be that few if any of the monuments on exhibition will be brought back to Quincy, but will be boxed up and shipped direct to the purchasers.

In another column John L. Miller, the president of the New Englond Memorial Convention Bureau, extends an invitation to granite cutters and all others interested to attend the exhibit at the Boston Arena this evening, assuring them that it is worth while.

There is much talk among the delegates to the convention about the mix-up over the Quincy and Barre day and everybody regrets that the misunderstanding should have taken place. There are of course some who will will accept the invitation to Barre, for aside from the special train, looking good to them, there are many doubtless who have work under way at Barre, who will take the opportunity to see how things are getting on.

There has been an active campaign on ever since the convention opened to get delegates to register in favor of Quincy. The Quincy association have registration slips, and every member of the association has constituted himself a committee of one to get delegates to register.

In addition to this the Quincy association has a desk at the exhibition in charge of secretary Thomas Dunphy and with him is John P. Smoots, estimator for the Quincy Association. These two gentlemen are a sort of bureau of information about Quincy and the Quincy day. One of these gentlemen can always be found at the headquarters of the Quincy Association at the exhibition and they are also hustling among the visiting delegates.

In addition to this the Quincy Association has a number of attractive placards hung about the Arena, announcing the Quincy day. Pictures on these cards give some idea of the program, for there are pictures of lobsters and clams, indicating the shore dinner to be served at Paragon Park. Automobiles which hint at the beautiful ride through Boston's unsurpassed park system. Battleships, a hint of the visit to the shipyard, and quarry scenes, indicating a visit to some of the quarries.

On Tuesday, the opening day, it looked as though Quincy would come out at the little end of the horn as far as visiting delegates were concerned, for the Barre committee which had an office at the Brunswick were also busy registering delegates. This morning, however, Secretary Dunphy said that the indications were that Quincy would have a large delegation of visitors.

Up to Wednesday night about 200 had registered for the Quincy party. In addition to this there were many still on the fence, as for choice, between the two associations seeking to entertain them, and the chances are that the Quincy party will number fully 300.

The route of the party after leaving the Arena at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning has already been published. The visitors are expected to reach City Hall about 11.30. The stop here will not be long for after being welcomed by Mayor Stone, the party will continue on to South Quincy and thence to the shipyard.

It will be impossible for all, who have loaned the use of their automobiles for the party, to accompany them to the beach, and those that have to withdraw at the Fore River will transfer their passengers to the special car which is due to leave City Square at 12.05.

Wednesday's session convened at 9 o'clock. The morning meeting was given up to reports of committees, revision and adoption of new constitution and by-laws. At 11 o'clock the convention was addressed by J. Randolph Coolidge of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock with miscellaneous business, question box and free discussion and reports from state associations.

After the executive session there was an open social session to which wholesale manufacturers and manufacturers of machinery and supplies were admitted.

Wednesday evening there was an informal reception at the Brunswick at 6.30 which was followed at 7.45 by a grand banquet, Quincy being well represented.

The banquet was a strictly informal affair; the toastmaster was Seward Jones. Short speeches were made by Alexander Chauncey of Virginia, speaking for the retailers, and Patrick McCue of Chicago, who responded for the manufacturers and wholesalers.

Following the banquet the doors were thrown open and visiting retailers and wholesalers not members of the association and their friends were invited in. A vaudeville show from the various theatres in town was held which was thoroughly enjoyed by everybody present.

While the delegates were busy wrestling with the questions of importance to the trade, the ladies were not being neglected for their comfort was being well looked after. Mrs. J. S. Swingle of Quincy, the chairman of the ladies' reception committee and her headquarters were at the Brunswick. She was assisted by an efficient corps of ladies who have made the visit of the ladies one of pleasure.

During the day there were automobile trips to Norumbega park and through the park system, and in the afternoon quite a number of the ladies took the sight-seeing automobiles for a trip to Concord and Lexington. The same form of an entertainment has also been provided for the ladies to-day.

The convention will close with to-day's session. This morning the convention held an executive session to hear reports of committees, elect and install officers and fix the place for holding the next convention, and complete any unfinished business.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock there will be an executive session at which all uncompleted business will be cleaned up. There will also be the reading of papers on subjects of interest to the trade, addresses and adjournment.

INVITATION

TO THE

GRANITE EXHIBIT

THIS EVENING

The New England Memorial Convention Bureau, through its President, John L. Miller, extends an invitation to the Granite Cutters of Quincy and all persons interested, to attend the exhibit of Memorial Work at the Boston Arena this evening. All Free.

This exhibit is so great that any one will be more than amply repaid by attending.

KING AND LANGELIER

Pull Off Great Stunts at "Ad" Man's Outing

The irrepressible Delcevare King of Quincy was the guiling spirit of the day, at the outing of the Pilgrim Publicity Association at Bass Point on Wednesday, says the Post. He began the fun shortly after the steamer Sightseer left Otis wharf at 1.30 o'clock, by conducting the members of the party "across the equator," a ceremony they performed amid much noise and laughter under his guidance.

J. K. Allen came out the winner in the "gum drop contest," while George W. Coleman and G. D. W. Marcy took the prize in a new stunt, in which ears and noses were tweeked rather badly. Mr. Coleman was also the victor in the "drop the handkercheif" game. In the "pushing contest," Irving J. French proved he had the better equilibrium, while Earle L. Ovington showed that his experience as an aviator gave him good balance by coming out a close second.

The ball game was one of the hottest seen at Bass Point in some time. Captain Stearns had charge of one team and Captain French the other. At the nd of nine slashing innings, Representative L. F. R. Langelier of Quincy hammered the ball to an indefinite distance off in the fields and while the outfielders and infielders hunted for it he circled the bases for a home run. This broke up the game, the Stearns team winning by the score of 9 to 8.

At 6 o'clock the party sat down to a special shore dinner at the Brenton in the course of which Mr. King and Harry Curtis pulled off a continuous performance, in which singing, shouting and fancy dancing featured.

THREE DEATHS BY ACCIDENTS

Included in the 34 Reported During Month of July

The mortality statement of the Board of Health for July shows the death rate for that month based on a population of 34,670 to hav been .98. Number of deaths was 34 of wihch three were caused by accidents, three by tuberculosis and three by diphtheria. The remainder of the deaths were from as many different causes.

During the month 53 contagious diseases were reported namely: diphtheria 19, scarlet fever 1, measles 17, tuberculosis 10, whooping cough 5, and myelitis 1.

The death by ages were as follows: Under one year, 4, between one and two years, 2, four and five years, 1, five and ten years, 5, between 30 and 40 years 2, forty and fifty years 1, fifty and sixty years 5, sixty and seventy years 5, seventy and tighty years 6, over eighty years 3, a total of 12 males and 22 females.

Of the deaths 22 were American, 2 provincial, 9 foreign and 1 unknown. The total amount paid out for aid rendered outside in tuberculosis, typhoid and diphtheria cases was $759.05.

Work performed was as follows: 34 single and 30 double loads of ashes, 9,504 cubic feet of garbage, 62 tank loads of cesspool matter, 1,119 barrels of vault matter removed, 3 public dumps cared for, 164 clam permits issued, 59 hawkers and peddlars licenses issued, 64 plumbing permits, 97 plumbing inspections, 88 sanitary inspections and 49 meat and provision inspections.

MRS. JAMES H. PENNIMAN.

Mrs. Mary F., wife of James H. Penniman, passed away this morning at her home 853 Hancock street, Wollaston, aged 50 years. Mrs. Penniman has been in poor health since early spring and for the past few weeks has been confined to her bed under the care of trained nurses. Everything possible was done to restore her health but without avail. She has failed rapidly during the past few weeks.

Mrs. Penniman was the daughter of Mrs. Josephine V., and the late William N. Blair, and Mrs. Blair has been making her home with her daughter. She was the wife of James H. Penniman, who was the Democratic candidate for Mayor in 1912, who with a son Howard and daughter Ruth survive her.

Mrs. Penniman was a quiet unassuming woman who much preferred home life to more active social affair. She was however a member of the Quincy Womens Club.

DISTRICT COURT.

James L. Kelly was fined $15 for drunkenness at Weymouth. He was also arraigned for the larceny of $7 from William H. Mace an ice dealer, but was discharged on the latter complaint.

James H. Newton was fined $10 for drunkenness at Milton, and John Doran was sent to the state farm for drunkenness at Quincy.

Fred W. Piercy was fined $50 for having watered milk at Braintree. Appealed.

Joseph York was sent to the state farm for being a tramp at Milton.

John J. Mullens was arraigned for assault on James Ford at Quincy. He was fined $5 on account of costs.

Paul and Joseph Erania were arraigned for assault on Mark J. Landy at Quincy. Cases continued.

SMALLER BONDS.

It is no test of the popular municipal bond sale idea if there is difficulty in disposing of the securities in denominations of $100 and $1000. Let $10, $20 or even a $50 denomination be tried and takers will doubtless be found among the working people in all large cities.—Monitor.

RAPID INCREASE IN APPROPRIATIONS

Those for City Purposes Have Almost Doubled in Last Ten Years

Over $900,000 Appropriated in Annual Order Alone

The item of $9,526.50 for increase in municipal current expenses in the Assessors' budget, from 1912 to 1913, looks small, and is misleading as it does not tell the whole story.

The limit which under the law can be raised by taxation this year is $422,637.43, but the City Council actually appropriated in the annual appropriation order in March $503,352.00. In other words the Council went to the limit and then took $80,715.00 of the estimated receipts of 1913, which should have been left to the Assessors to reduce the tax levy.

The appropriations since 1903 have been as follows, the middle column being for municipal current expenses, —the school, police, fire, street and other departments,—and the last column the grand total of all appropriations in the annual order.

| Year | Current | Total |
|---|---|---|
| 1913 | $503,352 | $901,234 |
| 1912 | 485,903 | 844,844 |
| 1911 | 422,676 | 728,001 |
| 1910 | 404,738 | 683,357 |
| 1909 | 369,674 | 645,806 |
| 1908 | 351,842 | 627,666 |
| 1907 | 341,910 | 574,201 |
| 1906 | 333,360 | 566,763 |
| 1905 | 314,114 | 535,487 |
| 1904 | 307,649 | *594,514 |
| 1903 | 306,798 | 506,862 |

*Included one year loan of $80,000.

First, note the very rapid increase in current expenses. In ten years this increase was $196,554, but it has been most marked in the last four years—$133,678, an average of over $33,000 per year.

Little attention has been given to the grand total column as many of the items are now compulsory. That these items which are not included as current expenses may be better understood, the appropriations are published below in full, cents being omitted:

BONDS COMING DUE.

| | |
|---|---|
| City debt | $162,676 |
| Street improvement debt | 7,300 |
| Park debt | 2,000 |
| Refunding debt | 15,000 |

INTEREST COMING DUE.

| | |
|---|---|
| City debt | $27,895 |
| Street improvement debt | 2,840 |
| Park debt | 880 |
| Refunding debt | 6,000 |
| Temporary notes | 14,000 |

WATER DEPARTMENT.

To be paid from water receipts of 1913, and taxes to be levied.

| | |
|---|---|
| Water debt falling due | $57,500 |
| Interest falling due | 27,092 |
| Maintenance and office expenses | 16,450 |
| Care of hydrants | 1,000 |
| Clerical | 1,352 |

SEWER DEPARTMENT.

To be paid from sewer assessments and taxes to be levied.

| | |
|---|---|
| Sewer debt falling due | $29,000 |
| Interest falling due | 23,296 |
| Clerical | 780 |
| Maintenance and office expenses | 2,200 |
| Automobiles | 620 |
| Total | $397,882 |

Many would regard some of these items as current expenses, especially those for interest. It is only by comparison that the increases will be noted. The items of 1903 are therefore published:

BONDS COMING DUE.

| | |
|---|---|
| City debt | $70,540 |
| Park debt | 1,000 |

INTEREST COMING DUE.

| | |
|---|---|
| City debt | $16,776 |
| Par kdebt | 1,640 |
| Temporary loans | 7,000 |

WATER DEPARTMENT.

| | |
|---|---|
| Water debt falling due | $34,500 |
| Interest falling due | 23,087 |
| Maintenance | 10,000 |

SEWER DEPARTMENT.

| | |
|---|---|
| Sewer debt falling due | 12,800 |
| Interest falling due | 15,219 |
| Maintenance | 1,500 |
| Total | $200,062 |

It will be seen that the number of items has increased from 11 to 19, and the total from $200,062 to $397,882; just about doubled in ten years.

MILK MAN FINED.

Fred W. Piercy, a Braintree milk man, was brought into court on complaint of a State milk inspector for selling watered milk. The inspector and state chemist testified that the milk, a sample of which had been taken by the inspector, contained 20 per cent water. A fine of $50 was imposed. An appeal was taken.

INJURED MAN IDENTIFIED

Recovers Conciousness and Gives Name and Address

It has been definitely learned that the young man found unconscious on the railroad tracks near the Granite street bridge Sunday morning is Michael Rubino DiLucio of 64 Lubec street, East Boston. The young man who has been unconscious since the accident, partly recovered consciousness Wednesday and Chief Burrell with an interpreter interviewed him. They were not able to learn much as to how the accident happened only that he was on the train bound for Brockton. He however gave his name and address.

Later Chief Burrell visited the house on Lubec street, East Boston, and learned that it was occupied by the man's sister. She told the police that her brother was 17 years of age and that he had been in America but six weeks.

It was arranged that the family should come to Quincy today and go to the hospital to see the boy. The impression is gaining ground that he did not jump from the moving train but that he was riding in the baggage car and fell out as the train rounded the curve.

—Only 6 per cent of amputation cases result fatally at present, owing to the improvement in antiseptic surgery.

Owing to the absence of the stenographer on vacation, the boss is frequently confronted with the necessity of running his own business.

It is said that the express companies may transport garden vegetables direct from the farmers to the consumer. It would be such a popular move that the report seems inherently improbable.

Nothing ever makes the small boy feel so kinky as doing the September morn act at the bathing places in sight of the railroad train.

The President has accepted the gift of a bust of William Pitt, without stopping to think that it makes one more thing for Mrs. Wilson to dust.

The Johns Hopkins specialists say that the habitual acts as a preventive to appendicitis. Surgeons who perform the operation should be immune for a time after collecting their bills.

Unlike the funeral of the Haytien president, they don't thave to make it a sure thing by firing a volley through the coffin around here. The doctor and undertaker attend to that end of the business.

SCRUTINIZING PURCHASES.

One of the things that strikes a man when he is cajoled to go out on a shopping excursion with his wife, is the extreme care with which women examine the fabrics of the articles they buy. The average woman is an excellent judge of the value of textile products.

This tends toward good buying and wise use of household funds. It is singular, then, that so many people are persuaded by the handsome illustrated cuts of the mail order catalogs to buy goods on faith without examination.

Some women will visit several stores to find the best bargain to be had in 25 cent stockings, but will send away a $15.00 money order to buy a baby carriage in some distant city. In the picture it looks like a perfect article, yet the chances are even that examination would reveal defects in material and mechanical adjustment.

The housewife who buys near home sees the goods and has few bargains to regret.

MAKING FATHER WORK.

To the court reporter the non-supporting husband is a figure for mirth. Too lazy to shave, his stubbly beard and drooping mustache are a picture of pale flabby inefficiency. The irritations of litigation, even the possibility of jail bonds, seem preferable to the severe pain of ordinary manual toil. Perhaps no song ever struck the American people as more humerous than "Everybody works but Father."

To the fluttering creature whose timid plea can scarcely be heard by the listening judge, the subject is no joke. Non-support of family and wife desertion is growing so fast, that much attention has been given for a few days to the story of how 1,000 Chicago fathers are now being made to support their families under a new probation law.

Under the chaotic domestic relation laws of many states, neglect of family has been merely a misdemeanor, about like unnecessary whipping of a horse. Frequently it has not been an extraditable offence. Yet New York City alone has about 15,000 cases a year of these marital shipwrecks.

New agencies are springing up to trail Father when he drops the harness and takes to the tall timber. The Jewish people have a particularly efficient system. "Father's" picture is put in a gallery of missing husbands, and the cut is syndicated in the Jewish press. Resuming the harness may seem less laborious than running away from the police.

The older theory presupposed that the neglected wife should seek redress in the courts. But the possibility of being sued by a penniless and shrinking woman had little effect to make Father more diligent. The newer laws put the initiative on a probation officer. The domestic relations court of Buffalo, N. Y., working along this plan, collected in four recent months over $25,000 for neglected wives and children.

250,000 MEN AT WORK ON ROADS

Missourians Volunteer to "Pull State Out of Mud"

GOVERNORS LEAD BIG ARMY

Squads of Workers From Every Portion of State Begin Task Systematically and Without Confusion—Women Play Important Part In Good Roads Campaign

Kansas City, Aug. 21.—Thousands of volunteer road builders marched forth from every county in western Missouri to become a part of Governor Major's force of 350,000, which, in response to his proclamation, have begun a two days' campaign which is expected to add $1,000,000 in betterments to the public highways of the state.

This, the first state-wide movement in favor of better roads, was expected to be not only an epoch in the development of Missouri, but an example that would be followed by other states and thus lead to a general improvement of highways all over the United States.

A spirit of rivalry among the counties promised much for the general result. In the effort to "pull Missouri out of the mud" 8000 state road overseers have for weeks been assembling equipment and laying out the work to be done. Thus, systematically every squad of men was put to work without delay or confusion.

Every city, town and hamlet was represented in the movement and in farming districts nearly every able-bodied man enlisted.

Governor and Mrs. Hodges of Kansas came to Missouri to give their active support to the work. They were the guests of Goverhor and Mrs. Major. The two governors donned their overalls and were among the first to get on the field of action. Mrs. Hodges aided in serving to the workers fried chicken which had been prepared by Mrs. Major.

Women took an important part in the campaign. The 6000 members of the Missouri Federation of Women's clubs throughout the state aided the movement in every way possible and thousands of farmers' wives and other women prepared and served meals.

Local members of the Daughters of the American Revolution took advantage of the occasion to outline the route of the Santa Fe trail through Kansas City. Trolley poles were marked with red, white and blue stripes to show the route.

Good road workers marched out from Jefferson City to grade the road in Cole, Callaway and Boone counties. Governor Major, State Highway Commissioner Buffum and Congressman Shackleford headed the procession, taking with them a road grading machine, which the governor will operate.

Five hundred men were in the procession, 100 of them being convicts in the state penitentiary who are to receive a commutation of fifteen days for working on the roads.

SLUSH FUND OF $12,000

How Money Was Raised to Beat Federal "Loan Shark" Bill

Washington, Aug. 21.—George D. Horning, a Washington pawnbroker, told the house lobby committee the total slush fund raised to defeat the federal "loan shark" bill was nearly $12,000.

Three pawnbrokers put in $3750 and he raised $8000 from men in the chattel mortgage business in and out of Washington. About $5500 of the $8000 was unspent.

The $8000 was kept separate from the brokers' fund and both were raised in 1911 and 1912. Representative McDermott of Illinois is alleged to have arranged to get $7500 to work against the bill.

LIFTS BAN ON WEDDING

Gaekwar of Baroda Will Permit Princess to Marry Jitendra

St. Moritz, Switz., Aug. 21.—The Gaekwar of Baroda, who, with his family is taking a vacation here, announces that his daughter, Princess Indira, has gone to London, where she intends to marry Prince Jitendra. The gaekwar will not be present.

It will be remembered that Princess Indira was to have been married to Prince Jitendra at Calcutta on May 5, but at the last moment her parents refused to sanction the marriage owing to the difference between their caste and that of Jitendra.

Manchester Has $100,000 Fire

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 21.—A fire destroying or damaging half a dozen buildings is thought to have started from a lighted cigar at the office of the Finney Upholstering and Window Cleaning company. The total damage is estimated at $100,000.

Sun Sails For Canada

Tokio, Aug. 21.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen sailed from Yokohama aboard a vessel bound for Canada. Sun came to Japan several weeks ago from Formosa, whence he had fled from Shanghai.

REJECTION OF MEDIATION

Negotiations Between United States and Mexico Are Deadlocked

Mexico City, Aug. 21.—Further negotiations looking to a peaceful settlement of the Mexican problem, following Provisional President Huerta's rejection of President Wilson's proposals as submitted by his personal representative, John Lind, would appear now to depend upon Washington.

Frederick Gamboa, the Mexican foreign minister, says the negotiations between Lind and the Mexican government have not been entirely broken off, but that they are being continued confidentially.

Despite Gamboa's statement, however, it is known here that Mexico's reply to the United States, while couched in diplomatic language, was a definite rejection of Wilson's proposals as presented by Lind.

Unless the Washington government sees fit to submit new propositions, then, on its part, the negotiations, it is considered here, will be closed. What the Mexcan government may do appears largely a psychological problem.

DIGGS FOUND GUILTY

Jury Finds He Violated the Mann White Slave Traffic Act

San Francisco, Aug. 21.—Maury I. Diggs was found guilty of white slavery shortly before midnight.

The case went to the jury with no attempt by the defense to prove Diggs did not transport Marsha Warrington across the state line from Sacramento, Cal., to Reno, Nev., nor that they did not live there for three days as husband and wife.

These acts, it was admitted, had been committed, but it was claimed they did not constitute a violation of the Mann white slave traffic act because they had not been done with criminal intent.

If Diggs and Marsha Warrington, with F. D. Caminetti and Lola Norris, their companions, had not missed an earlier train they would have remained within the state, and though their offense against morality would have been the same, they would not have transgressed a federal statute.

HARRISON IS NAMED FOR PHILIPPINES

New York Congressman to Become Governor General

Washington, Aug. 21.—President Wilson sent to the senate the nomination of Congressman Francis B. Harrison of New York to be governor general of the Philippine islands.

Harrison was selected after months of personal consideration by the president, in which many applicants were eliminated. At least twice the appointment was considered as good as made, but neither of the men selected was Harrison.

The White House had no comment to make on Harrison's attitude toward the Philippines, except that he would carry out Democratic party pledges. A reorganization of the Philippine commission, however, is to be effected and some commissioners will be named within a few days.

NATIONAL LOBBY BILL

Provides For Registration of Agents Appearing Before Congress

Washington, Aug. 21.—Representative Peters of Massachusetts introduced a bill, similar to the Weeks bill in the senate, providing for the registration of agents and counsel appearing before members of congress in connection with pending legislation.

The Peters bill requires that persons employed to do work affecting legislation shall be registered with the clerk of the house or senate. In addition to the names of the agent or counsel and the corporation or individual employing them, it is required that there shall be stated the subject in which the parties are interested and that the amount of salary paid for such work shall be a matter of record.

OBJECT TO JOHNSON

Music Hall Stars Rebel Against His Appearance In London

London, Aug. 21.—English music hall performers are up in arms because of an announcement that Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, had been engaged for a month's engagement at one of the leading music halls of this city. The Federation of Variety Artists will take up the question.

Rev. John Clifford, president of the World's Baptist Alliance, protests through the press against "bringing this most disreputable individual before the public, degrading the amusements of the metropolis and imperilling the moral sentiments of the young people of London."

Italian Climbs 22,000-Foot Peak

Milan, Aug. 21.—Dr. Placenzo, an Italian Alpinist, succeeded in reaching the summit of Mt. Numzkum, a peak 22,000 feet high in the Himalayas, according to a telegram received here from India.

Nashua a Gretna Green

Nashua, N. H., Aug. 21.—Nashua is becoming a Gretna Green for elopers in spite of the five-day notice law, according to City Clerk Cyr.

PLANS TO AVOID PARTY WARFARE

Glynn Declares There Will Be No Political Earthquake

HE ANNOUNCES HIS POLICIES

First Official Act Upon Assuming Duties of Acting Governor of New York—Sulzer Still Holds the Fort as Chief Executive In Old Chamber—Clash of Authority Near

Albany, Aug. 21.—There will be "no political earthquakes and no factional reprisals" during the incumbency of Martin H. Glynn as acting governor. Glynn so declared in a statement outlining his policy.

The issuance of this statement was Glynn's first official act after taking possession of the new executive chambers on the third floor of the capitol, assigned to him by the trustees of public buildings.

On the floor beneath, Governor Sulzer continued to discharge the functions of chief executive in the old executive suite. He was surrounded by his clerical staff, the members of which were much perturbed over an announcement by Glynn that they would be requisitioned by him for service as they might be needed.

This promises an immediate clash of authority, as attempted dismissal may follow refusal of these employes to obey one of the two claimants of the governorship. Glynn's statement follows:

"Owing to the duties thrust upon me by the constitution, I wish to make clear the policy I purpose to pursue as acting governor.

"I do not intend to employ a temporary occupancy of the governorship for the purpose of partisan warfare.

"Under me, as acting governor, there will be no political earthquakes and no factional reprisals.

"I have no intention of removing departmental heads for mere political reasons.

"I propose to discharge my sworn obligations for the best interest of the public.

"I ask the hearty co-operation of all state officials and all good citizens to help bring order out of chaos in the state government until the court of impeachment shall have rendered a verdict.

"The duties devolving upon me I did not seek. They are imposed upon me temporarily by the constitution and I am determined to live up to the constitution.

"I believe in law and order, and the affairs of the state must proceed in an orderly manner according to constitutional provisions.

"I propose to discharge the duties of acting governor without fear or favor, without ostentation or advertisement, without factional purpose or personal motive.

"No act of mine will compound the present confusion. Official chaos must end and the affairs of the state proceed as if no impeachment proceedings were pending. Until the court of impeachment renders its decision, I intend to do only things as may be necessary for the smooth running of the business of the state."

COOK BECOMES INSANE

Pours Boiling Fat Over Four Persons and Flees From House

New York, Aug. 21.—Amelia Dilcher, a cook, made temporarily insane by the intense heat of the kitchen in which she was working, poured boiling fat over three women and a baby of the Staten Island household where she was employed, frightfully burning all four, who are in a hospital. The cook ran from the house and has not been caught.

The injured are Irving Ludwig, 18 months old, child of Berthold A. Ludwig; Mrs. Heloch, niece of Mrs. Ludwig; Mrs. Ulanish, a nurse, and Mrs. Hautfelt, a laundress.

FOUR HUNDRED HOMELESS

Fire In Jersey City Causes Property Loss Estimated at $700,000

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 21.—The fire in the Lafayette section of this city, which made 400 persons homeless and wiped out half a dozen manufacturing plants, is under control. The only injury reported is that of a fireman who was slightly burned on the foot.

The property loss is estimated at $700,000. More than two score dwellings and factories, covering a space equal to more than three city blocks, were destroyed.

Flowery Language Shut Off

Washington, Aug. 21.—"Honorable sir," and "Sir, I have the honor," which once graced correspondence between postoffice bureau chiefs, have been discontinued by Postmaster General Burleson, on the ground that flowery language should be sacrificed to speed.

Guard For Ex-King Manuel

Berlin, Aug. 21.—Extensive police precautions have been taken by the Sigmaringen authorities on account of the presence there of ex-King Manuel of Portugal, who is to marry Princess Augusta Victoria in September.

STATION OUTING CLUB DISBANDS

Base Ball Seems to be Petering Out in Quincy

Baseball interest in Quincy is petering out and another team, The Station Outing Club, has disbanded for the season after starting out at what appeared to be a whirlwind pace. The disorganization is due principally to the lack of support extended by fans who attend games. They act the part of the real enthusiastic but turn their head in the opposite direction when the ticket seller appears in aid of the expense fund. The situation does not vary in any part of the city and many incidents have occurred to mar the pleasures of a good game.

At Ward Three, balls that fall on private property in the rear of the back stop are not returned, and if prechance five or six float over the fence during a game there is a natural delay in securing a pillet to take its place. Then again the expense of furnishing base balls under such conditions is not inviting. It is not unfair to state that on an average three balls a game have been lost because the property owners would not toss them back after they landed in their garden.

The park commissioners claim they are powerless and point out that several teams pay a nickel for each ball thrown back and have suggested that all teams follow out this line, but some of the crowds that have attended would not contribute money enough to pay tribute to the owner if it were the last ball on earth. They prefer a postponement so they could start their weekly crap game.

Several committees have stated that they are going to appear before the Board of Park Commissioners and ask for an adjustment of the difficulty that will make it worth while playing on a public playground. The football season is rapidly approaching and if base balls can be taken at random just because they land on private property what can the boys expect when their foot ball goes across. Under such conditions it will take more than one pigskin to fill a seasons schedule.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Mary Mattie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mattie of Penn's hill, celebrated her birthday August 15, very pleasantly. The evening was spent in dancing and singing, and graphaphone selections, games and step dancing were also enjoyed. When refreshments were served there was a birthday cake. Miss Mattie received a gold bracelet and other gifts.

SEWER CONNECTIONS.

The Board of Health has issued notices to 35 property owners in this city which will require them to connect with the sewer. Most of the cases are in South Quincy and the remainder are divided between Wollaston and Quincy Point. Action in all cases was taken after an inspection of the premises.

GRANITE STREET FIRE.

The alarm from Box 322 at 5.05 Wednesday afternoon was for a slight fire on the house of John Wilson on Granite street, near Centre street. The house was being shingled and a bonfire had been built in the yard to burn some of the rubbish. Sparks from this bonfire started a slight fire on the roof of the house. Thus the alarm. The loss was slight, the fire being extinguished with a chemical stream. The all out sounded at 5.15.

SO DECEPTIVE

Many Quincy People Fail to Realize the Seriousness.

Backache is so deceptive.
It comes and goes—keeps you guessing.
Learn the cause—then cure it.
Possibly it's weak kidneys.
That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.
They're especially for weak or disordered kidneys.
Here's a Quincy case.

Mrs. E. H. Prouty, 85 North street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I had a backache and headaches and my kidneys acted irregularly. It took only a couple of boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills to completely cure me. Another of my family suffered from lame back and weak kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills were used in this case with equally good results. The benefit I got has been permanent. I will always be glad to publicly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, for they have certainly done me a lot of good."

OUTING OF APPRENTICES

Fore River Boys Going to Glen Echo Park

Final arrangements for the fourth annual outing of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation apprentices are completed. The affair will be held at Glen Echo Park, Stoughton, Aug. 26, and will consist of a program of sports and a catered dinner. It is estimated that fully 180 will be present.

Joseph M. Larkin, supervisor, is being flooded with entries for the 100 yard dash, rowing race, swimming races and tug of war contests. Three prizes are offered in each event and individual prizes will be awarded to the members of the winning base ball team.

The trip to and from the grounds will be made in a special car, leaving Quincy at 8.45 A. M. The outing is complimentary to the apprentices but there is a big demand by graduates for tickets. A far as is possible they will be accomodated at the actual cost.

DOROTHY BRADFORD.

The most popular day excursion from Boston on the salt water is to Provincetown. A great many of our citizens take the trip several times during the season and are very much invigorated by the cool salt air. The round trip of 100 miles only costs a dollar and the Dorothy Bradford is a safe steamship. She is built of iron, 249 feet in length, 38 feet beam and draws 22 feet. She is allowed by law to carry 1800 passengers, and on Sundays and holidays is taxed to the limit. Other days she carries a comfortable precious load. She leaves Rowe's wharf week days at 9.00 A. M. returning at 2.30. About an hour and a half is allowed to see quaint old Provincetown. We advise our readers to have lunch on board the steamer, for the salt air gives an appetite that is hard to satisfy, and all the time on shore is needed to see Provincetown.

—Heavy rainfall that washed away some ground back of the Court house at Conconully, Washington, uncovered a ledge of ore on municipal land, making the town the owner of a gold mine that has received favorable notice from mining men. Now the town council is in a quandary as they bought the land for a reservoir site rather than a mine.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The Thomas Crane public library has just added General George Gordon Meade's life and letters, written and compiled by his son Col. George Meade, and edited by his grandson, George Gordon Meade. This work is in two volumes, and will be interesting as well as timely reading. The call nos. are 415.151,152.

The first volume contains a set of letters written by Gen. Meade to his wife while he was actively engaged in the Mexican war, and the second volume contains a set written while he was engaged and commanding in the Civil war. These letters take the form of a diary, and relate his personal experiences, his views of men and affairs, and tell of the operations of the Federal army under Generals Taylor and Scott in the Mexican war, and in the Army of the Potomac in the Civil war.

The narrative opens with his genealogy and early life and nearly half of the second volume is devoted to the Battle of Gettysburg, giving minute details of the way Gen. Meade so successfully conducted this battle which is called the "turning point of the war."

There are several good, clear maps and plans in the first volume, and at the end of the second there are twenty-four maps of the battle of Gettysburg, giving the positions of the two armies, each day, the line of march, and the battle-field.

LAUNCHING OF THE GEM.

The Gem, a 165 -foot oil-burning steam yacht, was launched from Lawley's at Neponset, today for William Zeigler, Jr., of New York. This vessel is of steel construction and was designed by Cox & Stevens. Speed of at least 20 miles an hour is expected. The Gem has comfortable crusing accommodations and will be used principally in New York waters. She should be ready for service in about three weeks. The Gem is one of the largest yachts to be turned out by an American firm this year.

WILL BE INVESTIGATED.

A handsome black and white collie dog, wearing license No. 755 crawled onto the piazza of the house at 25 Farrington street this morning and died. The police were notified and they removed the body to the police station. It will be turned over to the Bureau of Animal Industry. The department talked with Dr. Abele about the dog and he said that it was rather early for any death to result from bites of the mad dog which ran amuck through Neponset and Quincy 10 days ago. There was considerable froth at the mouth of the dog.

—Prison records show that more female prisoners have previous records against them than males.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Camp No. 95, S. of V., is making preparations for its annual fair to be held in November. Those in charge are Frank H. Stoddard, Charles F. Stratford, Edward Prouty, W. R. French, A. G. Farnum and B. F. Hodgkinson, Jr.

Dr. Abele left this morning for his annual vacation. Before returning he will attend the fiftieth anniversary convention of the American Veterinary Medical Association to be held in New York, Sept. 1 to 5.

The body of Mrs. Clara B. Jenness, wife of Frank B. Jenness of 90 Billings street, Atlantic, who died Monday in her 56th year, was sent to Bellows Falls, Vt., this morning for burial. Funeral services will be held there.

The funeral services of Maria M. Fanning, widow of Reuben Fanning, was held this afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edgar G. Cleaves, 5 Hancock court. Services were conducted by Rev. Edward Norton, pastor emeritus of Bethany Congregational church. The body will be sent to Lubec, Me., for burial.

Herd 1, Benevolent Order of Buffaloes, meet tonight in Hibernian hall to make preparations for the class initiation which will be held during September. The candidates seeking membership have reached a record mark. The exercises will be held in Hibernian hall and the degree team will wear for the first time the new regalia recently adopted by the National convention. A social season is being considered for the winter months.

THE NOMINATIONS.

The Secretary of State reports no additional nominations to the list in Wednesday's Ledger which relate to Quincy districts, that is for representative, senator or councillor. Some papers however have not yet been examined.

POWER OF HABIT.

"The habit of looking under the bed for burglars," the young woman said, "is something that folks laugh at, but I have never been able to get myself out of it. I never feel perfectly comfortable unless I look, no matter where I happen to be. To my mind, there isn't any place except a safe deposit vault burglars are unlikely to be.

"In fact, the habit is so strongly ingrained in me that one night, when I was staying in a small country hotel, where there was nothing but a folding bed in the room, I took it down and then looked under it before I got into bed. "That's a fact. I laughed at myself the minute after."

APPLES IN NEW ENGLAND.

By George French.

Two or three years ago a man bought a farm not far from Boston on which there were about 400 Baldwin apple trees. They were about 25 years old, and had been conscientiously neglected. They were in bad condition, and the new owner debated whether he would try to have them doctored up or cut them down. He was strongly inclined for the axe, but he relented enough to consult a tree doctor as to the initial cost for necessary surgery and tonics. The tree man said about $700 to start. The owner declared for the axe. But there was a bit of parley, and at length, in a spirit of bravado, the owner offered the tree man all the first crop of apples after treatment and half of the two succeeding crops in lieu of a fee in cash. The tree man accepted. He put about $800 into the orchard at once. It was April. He sold about 1,000 barrels of No. 1 apples that fall, filled the owner's cellar with seconds, made a lot of cider. and had all the apples his firm could use, beside giving away many lots. He got back about two dollars for every one he spent, and had two half yearly crops coming to him. He turned the orchard back to the owner, having demonstrated what proper treatment will do for neglected New England orchards.

This is a sample. I could go on and fill a page with just such stories, all true all verifiable from data I have on file. And then I would not have begun to tell the tale about the apple possibilities of New England. The West or the Northwest have nothing that can compare with the possibilities of New England—the proved demonstrated possibilities—in the way of apple raising.

There is a reason. It is the land and the climate. God made New England the potential orchard of the world. The men of New England are beginning to realize what riches there are in the rocky pastures that they have hated to have assessed at a few dollars per acre. The scientific reasons have been stated by the Department of Agriculture and by many experts. I have not space to go into the matter, except to say that it is the rocks of New England that make the apple land. The rocks have made nearly all of the New England land. But little of it has come from other sections through the agency of water. But little of it has been blown from other regions by the winds. It has been slowly formed by the disintegration of the bottom rock formation that underlies New England. That rack has the chemicals that are necessary for good apple culture. Therefore the native soil of most New England sections has in it the essential salts and chemicals that must be present in the best apples. The rest is easy. It is easy to supply the humas to make the trees grow. It is not practicable to supply the chemicals to the soil.

Thus it happens that while the famous apple regions of the West and Northwest produce beautiful apples, and apples having a fine flavor of their own, they cannot grow the New England apples with the New England flavor and character. The best apple that the West can produce cannot compare with the best New England apple. That is a truism that does not have to be argued. The New England Baldwin, Rhode Island Greening, Roxbury Russet, Hubbardston, Nonesuch, Old Nonesuch, Spy, Porter, Gravenstein, Yellow Bellflower, Red Astrachan, and a dozen others that can be mentioned, do not come out of the West.

In New England also the crops far exceed those produced in the West. The trees are larger, and it is a fact that they bear barrels to pecks from the western trees. I remember a famous apple grower from the Middle West once told me, with great pride, that his trees averaged a bushel each, Bless him! How small that quantity seems to us New Englanders who have been reckoning our apple crops in terms of barrels per tree. And in New England the trees live and bear for a hundred years, if they have any kind of care, and many thousands have lived to that age, or longer, and borne good fruit every other year, that have had no care at all—just have not been cut down and burned in the kitchen stoves. The western apple tree has a very limited life in comparison.

But the proof of the pudding is in chewing the string," as they say in the New England classics, so let us see what has been done, by citing a few experiences. I won't give the names or towns, but I have them, every one, and can produce them if necessary. Your real New England farmer does not court personal notoriety. He likes to talk about his farm, and what he does on and with it, but he hates to be pointed out in print. Facts are pretty good arguments. It is what the land really does, rather than what it may be supposed to be capable of doing that establishes the standing of a section, for apples, potatoes, wheat, cattle, hogs, or anything else.

Let me say, right here, that no one in New England is so foolish as to claim or think that there is not a lot of good apple land in other states—in New York, the Middle States, some parts of the South, etc. But they do not raise New England apples anywhere but in New England, and there is no other section where the possible profit is as large. Land values are very low in New England, and transprotation is cheap. A car of apples from the farthest point in New England to market costs around $30, while from Oregon to market it costs about ten times that sum. In New England the good money for apples is now coming from renovated orchards—orchards rescued from poverty by a little common sense and cash. The state of Maine bought a farm with 3,100 apple trees. The first year's crop was 90 barrels. Eight hundred trees were cut down, and in 1912, three years after the purchase, the crop of apples totalled 3,200 barrels. At the Boston fruit show last year one man showed 11 barrels of apples from one 20-year-old tree. Another man showed 95 pounds from a 7-year-old tree (within a pound of two bushels and twice the average yield of the big Kansas orchards.) Another showed 129 pounds from a 9-year-old tree, while another showed 7,505 apples for a 15-year-old tree—which must have been nearly or quite 20 barrels.

A Massachustts man had a lot of high, woody Baldwin trees in his pasture, yielding but little fruit, and that little poor. He got an "Aggy" man to tell him what to do, spent $50 in pruning, but not a cent for fertilizers or spraying, and the second year sold 850 barrels and netted $1,500. A Vermont man gets 6,000 barrels of Rhode Island Greenings off of 100 acres, and sells them for better than $20,000. He has refused $50,000 for his farm, and no wonder. But a Rhode Island man goes Vermont several better, so far as money is concerned, as he gets 2,000 barrels of Greenings off of 40 acres, and sells them for from $6 to $8 per barrel. He has a cold-storage plant and keeps his apples for the top-notch market. A Maine man bought a near-abandoned farm for $650 and in two years sold one apple crop for $2,000. These trees were in the pasture, and were not considered as worth anything. A New Hampshire man with 553 trees sold $8,000 worth of apples during three years, practically all of this owing to pruning and spraying the trees in an old orchard. A Maine man took hold of a tree over 100 years old, 20 feet in circumference, pruned, sprayed and grafted it, and gets 20 barrels of fine fruit from it. A Rhode Island farm rented for $325 a year, and the tenant gave it up because he could not afford to pay the rent. Another man took it, and sells his apple crop, on the trees, for three times he former rent.

A man bought a Vermont farm with a 100-acre orchard, with about 3,000 trees. This was a "fancy" farm, reckoned worth $30,000. The new owner quickly made it earn big interest on five times that valuation, and within a few years of buying had refused $100,000 for it. This reminds me of the more or less well known Connecticut man who is said to have refused a million for his farm, off which he annually takes a gross income of about $85,000. One of his crops is apples; the others are sheep (or rather lambs, hay and peaches. A man in central Massachusetts, who has been a peach specialist, has gone into apples. When his 60 acre orchard was 7 years old he got $6,000 for the fruit, some of the trees yeilding four barrels. This is a very "tall" story, but it is strictly true, vouched for by one of the Amherst "Aggy" professors. The apples were fancy varieties, and packed and sold as fancy fruit. A Vermont man came into possession of an orchard 50 years old, on a rocky hillside that had never been plowed. Pruning and spraying brought the yield up to 10,000 bushels of perfect fruit, over 90 per cent. No. 1 stock, that was sold in New York for more than $12,000.

In Massachusetts a couple of years ago there was a contest for the best acre of apples, and the winner showed 227 barrels that sold for $715, with a net profit of $520. There is plenty of land in New England as good as this for apples that can be bought for $100 an acre; yes, there is plenty that can be bought for $25 an acre. I know one farm, almost abandoned, that is one of the very best natural fruit farms in the whole of New England that can be bought for a very small sum. It would make an energetic young man rich in twenty years.

Post Toasties

Are mighty handy to have in the house as well as mighty good to eat direct from the package with cream.

Besides being the most delicious ready cooked cereal food made of corn these crisp, crinkly flakes serve many another useful purpose in home cooking.

Rolled into crumbs and used as an outer dressing for breaded veal, lamb, chicken, pork or ham; they give a zest to the 'fry' that makes the home folks ask for more.

Softened with milk and used with usual spicing and fixing as an inside dressing for baked fish or fowl they impart a delicate flavor to the finished dish, remindful of the chestnut filling that cast a halo around the days of old-time cooking.

Post Toasties are sold by Grocers everywhere—and everywhere folks who relish good things to eat, appreciate the delicate Indian Corn flavor that makes

WARD TWO SPORTS

First Defeat of Season for Francis McDonnell

Two First for Ruth Dunham

Five events were run off Wednesday afternoon at the Ward Two playground, three for the boys and two for the girls. On Friday morning two more will be contested by the girls as they have had several postponements on account of bad weather.

Francis McDonnell suffered his first defeat of the year in the stone-throwing contest, being beaten by F. Turner and S. Miuse. "Little Mac" as he is called has had the most remarkable record of any of the boys attending the three playgrounds and his exploit of winning nine out of ten events will probably not be equalled for some time to come. For the girls, Ruth Dunham, Class "B", won two firsts.

TRIPLE TIE IN WARD TWO

Senators, Athletics and Naps in First Place

With the defeat of the Red Sox Wednesday afternoon by the Naps the baseball league at Ward Two comes to a triple tie for first place. The Senator, Athletics and Naps are all tied for the premier honors, with the Red Sox trailing along two games to the rear. The game was a hummer up to the 7th inning with the score at 2 to 2, but in this spasm the Red Sox went to pieces in the field, letting the Naps score 5 runs. Melville for the Red Sox and Bassett for the Naps both pitched fine ball but Bassett received the better support by far.

GOOD MARGIN FOR DARTWELL

Boston Yacht Club Opens Its Series at Hull

The midsummer series of races under the auspices of the Boston Yacht club opened Wednesday off the Hull station with a large fleet of yachts ready to participate. There was a good wholesail breeze from the east and a smooth sea which made ideal racing conditions.

Many of the Quincy club yachts were on hand to participate in the series, especially class D of the Quincy club of which seven entered for the opening race.

The Meemer for some reason did not enter Wednesday in the special rating class although her regular competitors were on hand. The race in this class was won by the Nutmeg with the Marie L second.

There was but one entry in the sonder class but now that the races at Marblehead are over the sonder class boats will probably be heard from in other races of the series.

In class D it was the same old race over again between the Dartwell, Clara, Dolly and other well known yachts. The Dartwell which has been winning almost everything in sight this year was a winner in Wednesdays race.

The corrected time of Class D:

SPRIG, ELLEN AND CIMA

Selected to Meet the German Sonders in September

As a result of the three races off Marblehead on Wednesday to select two more yachts which will meet the Germans in the series of races for the President Wilson cup, the Harpoon was eliminated, for the choice went to the Cima and Ellen.

There were four yachts in the first race, Cima, Ellen, Harpoon, and Tern and they finished in the above order. The Tern not having won a race she was eliminated. The second race therefore was between the Ellen, Harpoon and Cima. The Ellen won and she was selected for the second boat.

The third and final race was between the Cima and Harpoon, which meant that the winner of the race would be selected. This race was started at 4 o'clock and was as pretty a duel as one could wish for, the Harpoon lost by about 45 seconds.

The three boats therefore which will meet the Germans are the Sprig, Ellen and Cima.

FIREMAN MANY YEARS.

Timothy B. Collins died at the Collins homestead, 88 Quincy avenue, this morning, in his 55th year. He was the first driver of a hose wagon of the Quincy Fire department, after it was established on a permanent basis with headquarters on School street. After several years service he retired and has since been connected with the public works department. Mr. Collins was a very popular and well known man of the city. He was the son of the late Michael Collins, one of the city's earliest settlers, and is survived by a wife and family.

A PHILOSOPHER.

Some time ago there was a flood in Western Pennsylvania. An old fellow who had lost nearly everything he possessed was sitting on the roof of the house as it floated along when a boat approached.

"Hello, John."

"Hello, Dave."

"Are your fowls all washed away, John?"

"Yes, but the ducks can swim," replied the old man.

"Apple trees gone?"

"Well, they said the crop would be a failure, anyhow."

"I see the flood's away above your windows."

"That's all right, Dave. Them winders needed washin', anyhow."

ROUMANIAN FAVOR TO JEWS LIMITED

Thousands Had Expected to Secure Full Citizenship

Berlin, Aug. 21.—The Roumanian government, which is planning to confer full citizenship on Jews serving in the army in the recent campaign against Bulgaria, seems bent, according to a Bucharest dispatch to The Tageblatt, on restricting its action to the narrowest limit.

The Roumanian war office has served notice, according to the newspaper, that they were illegaly mustered in and that they will be sent home. The government's favor, therefore, if limited to actual soldiers, will affect only 15,000 regulars out of the Jewish population of 300,000.

PENNED IN BY FIRE

Workmen Trapped 440 Feet Under New York Streets All Escape

New York, Aug. 21.—Thirty-five workmen caught 440 feet underground in a section of the Catskill aqueduct in course of construction under Washington Heights here, when fire broke out in the shaft house overhead, were found unharmed two hours later when the fire was controlled.

Their chief suffering had been from lack of air, cut off by the pall of smoke overhead. The fire was a spectacular one and besides badly damaging the massive shaft building spread to apartment houses closely adjoining. Two of the apartment buildings were burned out and others damaged.

The men down in the underground workings fled 1500 feet to the end of the section and huddled there, terror-stricken, until the air began to clear.

FINDS PIRATES' TREASURE

Florida Contractor Comes Across Chest Containing Nearly $10,000

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 21.—Charles H. Villar, a contractor, found an iron chest buried in the shallow waters of Bayou Chico. The chest contained Spanish doubloons and silver pieces estimated to total between $7000 and $10,000.

It is believed the treasure was buried by pirates who made the bayou their rendezvous in early days.

Two Killed on Railroad Crossing

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Edward Asmuth, 25, was killed, and Miss Amy M. Grubb, 24, died two hours later, when their carriage was struck by an engine at a crossing on the road to Lake Colby.

Militants Burn Theatre

Chadwick, Eng., Aug. 21.—Militant suffragettes caused $60,000 damage here by burning down a theatre. The interior had been soaked with oil and grease.

DR. R. F. C. KIEB

Superintendent of Asylum From Which Thaw Made His Escape

©1913, by American Press Association.

Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the State Hospital For the Criminal Insane at Matteawan, who was in charge of the institution when Harry Thaw made his escape, is to conduct a rigid inquiry of his own in connection with any possible plot that may have existed between Thaw and any guards at the asylum. Howard H. Barnum, aged fifty, was keeper of the gate through which the prisoner made his escape. He has been connected with the Matteawan institution for seventeen years. He says efforts of Dr. Kieb to implicate him are unfair. The gate through which Thaw escaped is also shown.

DANIELS WILL KEEP NAVY "AD" PROMISE

Naval Recruits Will Enjoy Cruise to the Mediterranean

Washington, Aug. 21.—"If you advertise anything, make good," quoth Editor Daniels in his official capacity of secretary of the navy, and as a result there is rejoicing among the men of the navy who are assured of a pleasure cruise of a month in the Mediterranean.

Ten battleships and all the torpedo boat destroyers now attached to the Atlantic fleet will make the trip, departing Oct. 25, and returning to their home ports Dec. 20.

"There was some argument in favor of abandoning the cruise to permit of other work," said the secretary, "but I told the officers and men that either we would make good our recruiting advertisements that men can learn something and see the world or tear them up."

DARES NOT LEAVE STATE

Cruce Says Lieutenant Governor Would Clean Out Oklahoma Jails

Colorado Springs, Col., Aug. 21.—Governor Cruce of Oklahoma, in a letter received by the Chamber of Commerce, declined an invitation to attend the conference of governors next week. The letter continues:

"The lieutenant governor seems determined to overthrow all of my policies and make a wholesale delivery of criminals from the penitentiary.

"The criminal court of appeals in this state has joined hands with the leutenant governor in this raid on the penal institutions by holding that the moment I leave the state, even if my absence extends only five minutes, the lieutenant governor can do as he pleases. Under these conditions it would be a crime for me to leave Oklahoma."

RUNS AMUCK ON STREET

Razor Pedler Chased by Big Crowd After Slashing a Man

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 21.—Angered by a crowd of boys who were making fun of him, Nicholas Simon, a pedler of razors, ran amuck on Summer street last night and began slashing at the boys with a razor.

More than 1000 persons were attracted to the vicinity, and after the pedler had cut a man who attempted to stop him they chased him for six blocks, shouting threats of vengeance. Simon finally sought refuge in the Heavey House and was arrested.

At the police station fourteen razors were found in Simon's pockets. Simon is held on a charge of assault.

Finds Father a Suicide

Boston, Aug. 21.—Joseph Tassinari, 40, of East Boston, was found hanging to a closet door in a bed chamber of his house by his daughter. She cut him down and a doctor was called, but the man was dead. Business troubles are given as the reason for the suicide.

Because he never missed writing a letter to his mother each week of the fifteen years he has been in America a young Russian tailor in St. Louis is heir to $500,000 left by his bachelor uncle in Libau.

A Wife Proved the Perfidy of Her Husband's Friend

By EDITH V. ROSS

During that period in America when the colonies were struggling for their independence, when the "Swamp Fox," as General Francis Marion was called, was contesting the possession of South Carolina with Colonel Tarleton, commander of a British cavalry force, something like that led by the Confederate Colonel Mosby during the war between the states, there lived in Berkeley county of that colony one Edward Athol and his wife.

Athol, though he had not been long in America, was not, as might have been expected of a newcomer from England, a Tory. He was disposed to be neutral in his sympathies. He had married the daughter of one who had been born in America, and his bride was in sympathy with the colonists, but since her husband took sides with neither she desired to live peacefully on their plantation without being disturbed by the king's men or those of the Continental congress.

This required tact, for one day along would come riders wearing the blue and the buff and the next those wearing the red. Both sides expected sympathy if not aid from the people of the country they traversed and were inclined to be severe with those from whom they did not get it. This placed the Athols in an unpleasant position, for if they treated both sides as friends they would please neither. But Mrs. Athol was equal to the occasion, being a woman of rare diplomatic ability.

There was a man living on a neighboring plantation whom she feared. He was a bachelor, and his sympathies were with the redcoats. He and Edward Athol were bosom friends, and Mrs. Athol feared that the Tory might get her husband into trouble. One day she said to Athol:

"Edward, I wish you would be careful of what you say to Henry Pinckton. You know he is a Tory and may at any time consider it his duty to sacrifice his friend to his king."

"That is just like a woman," replied the husband. "Your sex cannot rely on each other's friendship; consequently you do not realize that men will be true to each other."

Had Athol known what his wife knew he would have realized the injustice of this thrust. Pinckton had been a suitor for her hand while Athol was courting her. Moreover, a woman's perceptive faculties are, when uninfluenced, more delicate than a man's. The wife knew instinctively that Pinckton had never forgiven her husband for succeeding where he had himself failed. Moreover, she was not sure but that the unsuccessful lover would be glad of an opportunity to get rid of his friend, hoping that if she were free he might persuade her to marry him.

One day some British troopers camped in the vicinity of the Athol plantation. Pinckton went to the commander and told him that there was a man in the neighborhood who was furnishing information of the movements of the British troops to General Marion. The commander asked if the man could be taken with documents on him to prove that he was a spy. Pinckton said that he would keep a watch on the rebel's movements, and if he found an opportunity to capture him carrying information he would let the officer know.

Pinckton went away and concocted a plan to entrap Athol. He wrote Athol a forged letter from a man in Charleston asking Athol to meet him in that town immediately since he had important news for him. Pinckton went to see Athol just as he was setting out on his journey and pretended to be much surprised at his going. Athol bid his wife goodby, and the two men rode away together. Mrs. Athol had noticed that Pinckton acted strangely. When Athol had said that he doubted if the trip were worth while Pinckton urged him to go. With woman's quick insight for danger to one she loves, Mrs. Athol suspected that her husband's pretended friend had laid a plan to get him out of the way. The two men were to ride together on the road to Charleston till they came to the branch road leading to Pinckton's plantation when they would part, Pinckton going home and Athol continuing his journey.

Mrs. Athol saddled a horse and followed them, intending to overtake her husband after he had left Pinckton and persuade him to give up his journey. She kept at a distance behind them, and when they were about to part she saw Pinckton drop a little behind her husband and drop something into his coat pocket. This confirmed her in her opinion that some wrong was intended. Nevertheless she could not at once follow her husband without running the risk of being seen by Pinckton, who left the Charleston road at an angle. Having waited till he had passed into a wood, she started again. She was nearing her husband when she saw some redcoats spring from a thicket beside the road and make him a prisoner.

Without wasting any time the soldiers took Athol to the British camp. Mrs. Athol followed and saw her husband led within the British lines, then reined in to think what she had better do. She had heard a man say that very morning that there was a troop of Continental cavalry at a little town not far from her home, and she resolved to ride there in the hope of finding them and inducing them to attack the British force and possibly rescue her husband.

Athol, having been taken before the officer commanding the British troops, was searched, and a bit of paper crumpled into a hard ball was taken from his pocket. It was opened and found to be a statement of the British forces in South Carolina. It was of course more of a surprise to Athol than the British officer, who had been informed by Pinckton that if he would conceal his men on the Charleston road that day he would be likely to intercept a man passing with information for General Marion.

The first impulse of the officer was to hang Athol without even a trial by drumhead court martial. Then it occurred to him that the man should have some time to make preparation for death, and he concluded to go through the form of a trial and leave the time of his execution to the court. The command was a small one, and there were but half a dozen officers connected with it. These were all convened to a court, and Athol was brought before them. There was no doubt that he had been caught carrying information, the penalty for which was death, but he was permitted to make an explanation. He said that he was on his way to Charleston when arrested in answer to a summons he had received from there; that he was neither Tory nor rebel; that he had no idea how the communication had come into his pocket. He asked to see it and was permitted to inspect it. The handwriting was very like his own, which added to his astonishment. Not a suspicion that his friend Pinckton had put it there entered his head.

Of course the case was plain to the court that tried him, though since they were convened to convict him this made little difference. They brought in a verdict of guilty and sentenced him to be hanged the next morning.

Meantime Mrs. Athol was riding to the camp of the Continental troopers she had heard of. Reaching the place where they had been, she found that they had moved. No one knew where, for troops in war time are not accustomed to tell where they are going. But the direction they had taken was known, and Mrs. Athol started after them.

While riding she thought of the trap that it was evident her former suitor had laid for her husband and wondered what it was that had been dropped in the latter's pocket. This she could not divine. She had no idea of the depth of degradation into which Pinckton had sunk, the treachery to one who trusted him implicitly and considered him a bosom friend. Tears came into her eyes as she thought of her husband's unjust speech to her when she had warned him.

Along the route she took she made inquiries from time to time of the troopers she was chasing and learned that she was gradually drawing nearer to them. Then they were but a few miles ahead, then a mile, and at last she came upon them as they were about going into bivouac for the night. She sought the officer in command and told him of his proximity to the British troops.

The officer knew of this force and, having superior numbers, was after them to attack and capture them, but he had been misinformed as to their whereabouts and was moving in the wrong direction. Mrs. Athol offered to pilot him to their camp, but begged him to send a few men to Pinckton's plantation to arrest him. To this the officer assented, and it was agreed that after supper and a rest the command would saddle up with a view to surrounding the Britishers before day.

It was 10 o'clock when they started, lighted by a half moon and piloted by Mrs. Athol. She described the location of the enemy so that the American force might be divided and approach from different directions. Before they reached the vicinity of the British camp it was near moonset, and the night had become dark from clouds. On reaching the place where her husband had been captured Mrs. Athol described three different routes by which they might come upon the British. The separate bodies started and were each given an hour to get into position. The signal for attack was to be two shots in quick succession from the troops accompanied by the commanding officer.

When those two shots rang out on the still night the British sentries gave an alarm, and the redcoats sprang to arms—too late! They were hemmed in, and it did not require a long time for their commanding officers to realize the fact. He was called on to surrender and did so without firing a shot.

Athol not only found himself liberated, but by his wife's instrumentality. She said nothing of Pinckton's treachery, but in the morning the latter was brought into camp, and Mrs. Athol made a charge against him and requested the American commander to convene a court martial to try him. The officer was not slow in granting the request of one who had given him a victory, and the court was convened.

By this time all knew that a forged document had been placed in Athol's pocket, and Pinckton was charged with having placed it there. He broke down under Mrs. Athol's testimony and confessed his crime.

The court would have inflicted any punishment Mrs. Athol named, but as long as her husband was convinced of his supposed friend's perfidy she requested that he be allowed to go free.

The incident, which had really become a tragedy, changed Athol from being neutral in his sympathies to an ardent patriot, and he enlisted in the American army.

A Tongue Twisting Name.

The mapmakers have agreed to call the big pond that lies in the town of Webster, where the boundaries of Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts join, by the last six syllables of what some insist is its full name. This saves space on the maps and provides a reasonable mouthful for the stranger to Webster's distinguishing natural wonder. There is, of course, no sort of authority for the popular corruption, "Lake Chawyermothersgingerbread." The name complete, according to one authority, contains forty-four letters, of which fourteen are g's. "For short" it has seventeen letters, with only three g's, which would hardly have made the town of Webster and its lake famed far and wide. The ascertainment of the full name is a perennial inquiry. The unwarned investigator is apt to be baffled because he will suppose that the amputated portion followed that which the maps retain instead of having preceded it—Char-gogg-a-gogg-man-chaugg-a-gogg-chaub-un-a-gung-a-maug—though it is not good form to separate the syllables by hyphens.—Providence Journal.

The First Hats.

Hats, we are told, did not become a well established custom until some 500 years ago. In the year 1449, when Charles II. entered Rouen after its recapture by the French from the English, the people there had never before set eyes on a hat. Their amazement, therefore, can be pictured as they gazed upon their king riding past them in pomp and on his head a gorgeous hat lined with varicolored silk and gayly bedecked with huge plumes. Of course every one followed his example. Hats began to make their appearance in shop windows, and women and men alike labored over the constructing of elaborate headpieces, each one attempting to surpass his neighbor if possible. But they were expensive, and it was a long time before they could be worn except by the prosperous classes. In the course of time, however, they became a more commonplace thing, and people of all classes were able to afford them.—Chicago Tribune.

Three Months Without Sun.

In the valley of the Lyn, in England, there is a quaint little hamlet called Middleham, where for three months in the year the sun is not seen. The cluster of houses forming the hamlet is surrounded on all sides by hills so steep and high that from November until February the sun does not rise high enough to be seen over their tops. The first appearance of the sun is eagerly looked for, and as it is first seen on Feb. 14 the inhabitants call it their valentine. If the day should be foggy or cloudy, so that it cannot be seen, there is great disappointment. For the first few days after the 14th the sun is only seen for a very short time, but as the sun rises higher in the heavens the time it is in sight increases daily until its height is reached, when it gradually begins to fade from view again until in November it entirely vanishes from sight for another three months.

Japanese Mirrors.

It is only during a comparatively short time that the Japanese have known glass as occidentals know it. When the first railroads were built passengers in the coaches often put their heads through the glass, supposing the frames of the windows to be empty, and the railroad company at length pasted pictures on the glass to call attention to the fact that a solid substance was behind them. The masses of the Japanese today do not know the mirror as it is known in the west. The richer people have one mirror, indeed, but usually the glass used in the mirror, sold to the populace is not quicksilvered, being merely well polished. As for cut glass, it is practically unknown in the island, and glass drinking cups are rare.—Harper's Weekly.

His Criterion.

A New York society woman of artistic tendencies said of an argument on art:

"We must not look at art too narrowly. We must not be like the famous London wigmaker. This wigmaker attended a very wonderful first night of Tree's. Tree said to him after the performance:

"'Glad you liked it, my boy. It's a fine play, isn't it?'

"'It's magnificent,' the other answered. 'I couldn't detect a join between a wig and a forehead anywhere.'"—Exchange.

Art Collector's Economy.

A good story is told of the great virtuoso and generoso, George Salting, says Mr. Thomas Seccombe in the New Witness. The collector hated spending money on anything save works of art. A friend met him once in a hat of unusual luster and remarked upon it. "Yes," said the millionaire; "my brother's widow found it among his things and thought it might fit me."

Foxy Pa.

Father—Young Dobson has asked me for your hand, and I have consented. Daughter—You dear, dear old dad! Father—So never mind going to the dentist's tomorrow about that crown and bridge work. Wait till you are married.—Kansas City Star.

Sign Language.

Constable—The prisoner used very threatening language, your worship. The Magistrate—What was the language? Constable—Took off his coat to fight.—London Globe.

Matched.

Suitor—I have no bad habits. I don't smoke or drink. Father—Neither has my daughter. She doesn't play or sing.—Brooklyn Life.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

Katherine Rodney was in love with him. He belonged to a fashionable New York family of wealth, and he had been a young lion at Pasadena during the winter just past. He owned automobiles and a yacht and an extensive wardrobe. These notable assets had much to do with the conquest of Mrs. Rodney. She looked with favor upon the transitory Mr. Ulstervelt, and believed in her heart that he had something to do with the location of the shining sun. But of this affair more anon, as the novelists say.

Brock was presented to the Rodneys just before the party went in to dinner. He managed his eyeglass and his drawl bravely and got on swimmingly with the elder Rodneys, until Constance appeared with Katherine and Freddie Ulstervelt. It was not until then that it occurred to Miss Fowler that Freddie, being from New York, was almost certain to know Brock either personally or by sight. She experienced a cold chill, the distinct approach of catastrophe. Brock had just been told that young Ulstervelt of New York was to be of the party. His blood ran cold. He had never seen the young man, but he knew his father well. He had even dined at the mansion in Madison avenue. There was every reason, however, to suspect that Freddie knew him by sight. Even as he was planning a mode of defense in case of recognition the young man was presented. Brock's drawl was something wonderful.

"I—aw—knew your family, I'm sure—aw, quite sure," he said. "You know, of course, that I lived in your—aw—delightful city for some years. Strange we never met, 'pon my soul."

"Oh, New York's a pretty big place, Mr. Medcroft," said Freddie good naturedly. He was a slight young fellow with a fresh, inquisitive face. "It's bigger than London in some ways, it's bigger upward. Say, do you know, you remind me of a fellow I knew in New York?"

"Haw, haw!" laughed Brock without grace or reason. Miss Fowler caught her breath sharply.

"Fellow named Brock. Stupid sort of chap, my mother says. I"—

"Oh, dear me, Mr. Ulstervelt," cried Edith, breaking in, "you shan't say anything mean about Mr. Brock. He's my husband's best friend."

"I didn't say it, Mrs. Medcroft. It was my mother." Brock was hiding a smile behind his hand. "She knows him better than I. To tell the truth, I've never met him, but I've seen him on the Fifth avenue stages. You do look like him, though, by Jove!"

"It's extraordinary how many people think I look like dear old Brock," said the false Roxbury. "But, on the other hand, most people think that Brock looks like me, so what's the odds? Haw, haw! Ripping! Eh, Mr. Rodney?"

"Ripping? Ripping what? Good heavens, am I ripping anything?" gasped Mr. Rodney, who was fussy and fat and generally futile. He seemed to grow suddenly uncomfortable, as if ripping was a habit with him.

Dinner was a success. Brock shone with a refulgence that bedimmed all expectations. His wife was delighted. In all of the four years of married life Roxbury had never been so urbane, so deliciously English (to use her own expression). Constance tingled with pride. Of late she had experienced unusual difficulty in diverting her gaze from the handsome impostor, and her thoughts were ever of him—in justification of a platonic interest, of course, no more than that. Tonight her eyes and thoughts were for him alone, a circumstance which, could he have felt sure, would have made him wildly happy instead of inordinately furious in his complete misunderstanding of her manner toward Freddie Ulstervelt, who had no compunction about making love to two girls at the same time. She was never so beautiful, never so vivacious, never so resourceful. Brock was under the spell; he was fascinated; he had to look to himself carefully in order to keep his wits in the prescribed channel.

His self esteem received a severe shock at the opera. Mrs. Medcroft, with malice aforethought, insisted that Ulstervelt should take her husband's seat. As the box held but six persons, the unfortunate Brock was compelled to shift more or less for himself. Inwardly raging, he suavely assured the party—Freddie in particular—that he would find a seat in the body of the house and would join them during the entr'acte. Then he went out and sat in the foyer. It was fortunate that he hated Wagner. Before the end of the act he was joined by Mr. Rodney, horribly bored and eager for relief. In a nearby cafe they had a whisky and soda apiece and, feeling comfortably re-enforced, returned to the opera house arm in arm, long and short, thin and fat, liberally discoursing upon the intellectuality of Herr Wagner.

"Say, you're not at all like an Englishman!" exclaimed Mr. Rodney impulsively, even gratefully.

"Eh, what?" gasped Brock, replacing his eyeglass. "Oh, I say, now, 'pon my word, haw, haw!"

"You've got an American sense of humor, Medcroft—that's what you have. You recognize the joke that Wagner played on the world. Pardon me for saying it, sir, but I didn't think it was in an Englishman."

"Haw, haw! Ripping, by Jove! No, no! Not you. I mean the joke. But then, you see, it's been so long since Wagner played it that even an Englishman has had time to see the point. Besides, I've lived a bit of my life in America."

"That accounts for it," said the tactless but sincere Mr. Rodney.

Brock glared so venomously at the intrusive Mr. Ulstervelt upon the occasion of his next visit to his own box that Mrs. Medcroft smiled softly to herself as she turned her face away. A few minutes later she seized the opportunity to whisper in his ear. Her eyes were sparkling, and something in her manner bespoke of bated breath.

"You are in love with my sister," was what she said to him. He blushed convincingly.

"Nonsense!" he managed to reply, but without much persuasiveness.

"But you are. I'm not blind. Any one can see it. She sees it. Haven't you sense enough to hide it from her? How do you expect to win?"

"My dear Mrs.—my dear Edith, you amaze me. I'm confusion itself; but," he went on eagerly, illogically, "do you think I could win her?"

"That is not for one's wife to say," she said demurely.

"I'd be tremendously proud of you as a sister-in-law. And I'd be much obliged if you'd help me. But look at that confounded Ulstervelt! He's making love to her with the whole house looking on."

"I think it might be polite if you were to ask him out for a drink," she suggested.

"But I've had one, and I never take two."

"Model husband! Then take the girls into the foyer for a stroll and a chat after the act. Don't mind me. I'm your friend."

"Do you think I've got a chance with her?" he asked with a brave effort.

"You've had one wife thrust upon you, why should you expect another without a struggle? I'm afraid you'll have to work for Constance."

"But I have your—I can count on your approval?" he whispered eagerly.

"Don't, Roxbury! People will think you are making love to me," she protested, willfully ignoring his question.

He returned to the box after the second act and proposed a turn in the foyer. To his disgust, Ulstervelt appropriated Constance and left him to follow with Mrs. Rodney and Katherine. He almost hated Edith for the tantalizing smile she shot after him as he moved away, defeated.

If he was glaring luridly at the irrepressible Freddie, he was not alone in his gloom. Katherine Rodney, green with jealousy, was sending spiteful glances after her dearest friend, while Mrs. Rodney was sniffing the air as if it were laden with frost.

"Don't you think Connie is a perfect dear? I'm so fond of her," said Miss Rodney, so sweetly that he should have detected the nether flow.

He started and pulled himself together. "Aw, yes—ripping!" He consciously adjusted his eyeglass for a hasty glance about in search of the easily disturbed Mr. Rodney. Then, to Mrs. Rodney, his mind a blank after a passing glimpse of Constance and her escort: "Aw—er—a perfectly jolly opera, isn't it?"

GOLDEN CROSS.

The Dorothy Quincy Commandery, United Order of Golden Cross, held its regular meeting in Electa hall, Wednesday evening, followed by short talks by visitors, dancing and refreshments. Six candidates wtre initiated under the direction of C. H. Finn, noble commander, and eight applications were received. The next meeting will dispose as quickly as possible of the business and commence an entertainment program which as been arranged by C. H. Finn, Miss M. Murray, Miss Adelaide Bernier, Daniel DiBona, Gordon Emslie, Mrs. Eaton and Pearl Brant.

CONTRACTS COMPLETED.

Two ships built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation will be delivered to the owners before the due date. The torpedo boat destroyer Duncan will be placed in the hands of the United States government on Aug. 25, although the contract does not call for her delivery until Sept. 6. The Richmond, an oiler, built for the Standard Oil Co., will leave the yard on Sept. 28.

ELECTRIC LIGHT HEARING.

On the return from vacations of members of the board of Electric Light and Gas Commissioners, the board has assured the Board of Trade Committee that they will be given a hearing on their petition for reduced electric light and power rates on or before Sept. 15.

CROQUET TOURNAMENT.

A girls croquet tournament is an interesting feature at the Ward Two playground. In the Girls senior class, Gertrude Vallee is first and Snea Wester second. In the girls junior class, Lillian Hendry is first and Ely Tucker second.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

ASSAULT CASE IN COURT

Men Bite Each Other As Well As Strike Blows

"He bit me, and I bit him," was what John J. Mullens testified in court this morning when arraigned for assault on James Ford, a driver for the Quincy Lumber Co. The alleged assault took place last Monday when Ford went to deliver a load of lumber at Mullens place at Houghs Neck. There were some words between the two men over the order in which a C. O. D. bill for the lumber figured.

Mullens claimed that Ford was drunk, but this Ford denied. Anyway Ford says that Mullens struck him and then the two clinched in a catch-as catch-can hold, and blows fell thick and fast. Ford claimed that Mullens sunk his teeth deep into his arm, and Mullens in turn exhibited an arm into which he claimed Ford had sunk his teeth.

Mullens asked Dr. Ash who was testifying to the wounds that Ford had received, if it was not better to be bitten by a man who did not chew tobacco and whose teeth were clean than to be bitten by a man with unclean teeth, for he said he never used tobacco.

Dr. Ash replied that a man's teeth might be ever so clean yet lurking about them might be many microbes.

After hearing the evidence the court placed the case on file on payment of $5 costs.

WANTED TEN DAYS.

Joseph York, a man without a home or country, who was picked up by the Milton police, was arraigned in court this morning for being a tramp. He denied that he was a tramp, but said that he was walking from Boston to Quincy when arrested by the officer in Milton. He further said that he was all in, and would like about ten days if the court would take the risk. The court took the risk and ordered him committed to the state farm at Bridgewater.

HEALTH BOARD SUMMONED

Mandamus Issued by Court in License Case

The members of the Board of Health have been summoned to appear before Judge Hammond of the Supreme court to answer the writ of mandamus brought by Ella C. Phillips, who seeks to compel the Board of Health to issue her a license as a masseuse, which she alleges the board has refused to do, because she practices healing.

Mrs. Phillips was hailed into court some time ago by the police for practicing medicine without a license and was found guilty.

According to the Board of Health she later applied to them for a license under Chapter 443 of the Acts of 1911 which provides that it shall be unlawful for any person to practice manicuring or massage, etc., or hold themselves out to do such business for hire without receiving a license from the Board of Health.

The act also provides that the Board of Health, in granting such license, may make such rules and regulations in regard to carrying on the business also upon such terms and conditions as they may deem advisable.

The Board of Health after considering the application voted to issue a license to Mrs. Phillips, but made a condition that she should not practice any other form of healing on the same premises.

This license according to the Board of Health, Mrs. Phillips refused and she filed a petition in the Supreme court for a writ of mandamus to compel the Board of Health to issue her a license. The hearing was set for Friday but has been postponed a week until City Solicitor McAnarney arrives home.

ACCIDENTS TO CARPENTERS

Two Fall from Roofs at South Quincy Today

Two carpenters were injured by falls from South Quincy roofs this morning and are now at the Quincy City Hospital. Walter Meehan fell from the roof of the stone shed of Prout Bros., on Brooks avenue and received a fracture of the right thigh. He was taken to the hospital in the police ambulance.

Carl Anderson of Glendale road fell from the roof of the house being erected at 134 ndependence avenue and received a compound fracture of the nose and minor bruises about the body. He was treated by Dr. McCauseland who removed him to the hospital.

Both men were injured at about the same time and as the police ambulance commenced to climb Whitwell street hill, Dr. McCauseland and his patient swung in behind.

FALL RIVER OPPOSED.

Many attended the tax limit hearing given by the aldermen Tuesday night. The proceedings were featured by the effort on the part of Robert C. Davis, president of the Fall River Chamber of Commerce, to convince the board of aldermen that it would be an unwise move at this time to increase the tax limit over the present rate of $12. The hearing lasted for upward of an hour and three quatrers and matter has been referred to the committee on ordinances.

QUARRY TRIP.

Luther S. Anderson, manager of the Granite Railway Co., has arranged for a special train to take the visiting granite men over the Quarry railroad when they are in Quincy on Friday. The special train will leave Boston at 8.30 and will make stops at Atlantic and East Milton and arrive at West Quincy about 9 o'clock. As soon os the deelgates arrive at West Quincy the train will be run over the Quarry railroad.

Printer's Ink to Make You Think

By HOLLAND.

MILLIONS of dollars are spent in this country every year to promote thinking. You are induced to think on all sorts of subjects at a vast expenditure of money. Some concerns want you to think about clothes, others want you to study the question of breakfast foods, while others want you to investigate the care of the teeth and think what sort of paste, powder or liquid wash is best for preserving them.

Advertising is the method by which these men are inducing you to think. They know that if you begin to think you will insist on the best, and each advertiser knows that his goods possess real merit. He knows it would not pay him to advertise something that would not stand the hard test of actual use.

If you will do the thinking the aim of the advertiser has been achieved, for you will in time try his goods. That is all he wants—just a trial. He will then depend on the goods to make a favorable impression. Advertising merely interests—makes you think.

THERE IS FOOD FOR THOUGHT IN OUR ADVERTISING COLUMNS.

CONTEND THAT THAW IS SANE

Shrewd Move of Counsel to Prevent His Deportation

GET HABEAS CORPUS WRIT

Argument on Merits of Petition Will Be Heard In Court—Case of Chauffeur Who Drove Car From Matteawan Will Figure Largely In Proceedings—No Haven In Granite State

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 21.—A writ of habeas corpus in the case of Harry Thaw was granted by Justice Globensky yesterday afternoon, and today will be brought before the court. At that time arguments on the merits of the petition will be heard.

Thaw's attorneys, determined to force the Canadian courts to pass upon Thaw's sanity, took the first step to this end in their defense of one of Thaw's companions. This companion, Roger Thompson, the chauffeur of Thaw's car, was formally charged with "aiding and abetting an insane person to cross the border of Canada."

Thompson's attorney was W. L. Shurtleff, and Shurtleff at once declared his defense would be that Thaw is not insane, and that, therefore, Thompson is not guilty.

This move, Shurtleff planned, would force the Canadian government to decide whether Thaw is or is not a lunatic. If Thompson be acquitted, then Thaw is sane and cannot be sent back to the United States, under the immigration act.

Thompson was identified by District Attorney Conger of Dutchess county, N. Y. He is said to be one of the five men who accomplished Thaw's rescue. He was born in Toronto, and went to the United States as a boy. He is now 33.

Thompson was arraigned before District Magistrate Mulvene. After a fifteen-minute consultation between Shurtleff and Thompson, the case was called.

D. A. Reynolds, inspector of immigration, presented the charge. As soon as Shurtleff indicated his defense would be that Thaw was not insane, the crown attorneys consulted and then asked a three-day adjournment to summon witnesses. Thompson's bail was fixed at $500, with a surety to that amount in addition.

The Shurtleff move in Thompson's defense was regarded as a masterpiece of shrewd maneuvering. In the first place, if Thompson is found not guilty it means that Thaw is sane. If Thaw is sane, he is safe in Canada.

If Thompson is found guilty the attorneys can still raise the question of Thaw's sanity when the escaped murderer is himself brought to trial.

Shurtleff thus accomplishes two ends. He made a shrewd legal point, and he also secured a delay that will be valuable to the Thaw forces.

No Granite State Haven

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 21.—"New Hampshire has no room for lunatics or others of the type of Thaw," said Attorney General Tuttle. He is backed in his statement by Governor Felker.

"If Thaw is returned to New Hampshire you can rest assured that New Hampshire will go the limit to get him back into responsible hands. We would rather Thaw would go through the state than stop here."

MUCH NEW LAND FOUND

Area In Appalachians and White Mountains Greater Than Supposed

Washington, Aug 21.—More land is actually tucked away in the peaks and valleys of the southern Appalachian and White Mountain regions than hitherto suspected, the forest service announces.

This declaration is based on reports from its surveying parties in the field. The surveys are being made with a view to the purchase of the lands by the government for forest reservation purposes.

Old methods of surveys by compass and surface measurements were so inadequate that the government surveyers found frequent underestimates of from 5 to 8 percent.

DUEL WITH CAVALRY SWORDS

Hungarian Count and Marquis Each Receive Serious Wounds

Budapest, Aug. 21.—Count Stephan Tisza, president of the Hungarian chamber of deputies, and Marquis Pallavinci, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador to Turkey, were both wounded during a duel here.

The men fought fiercely with heavy cavalry swords, both receiving deep gashes on the arms and body. After the duel a reconciliation was effected.

Count Tisza has fought many duels. His last encounter was with Count Karolil in January.

Pat Crowe Released

Washington, Aug. 21.—Pat Crowe, the kidnapper of Edward Cudahy, Jr., who was arrested here on a charge of vagrancy, was released on his promise to leave town. Crowe had been detained at the Washington asylum hospital for observation. Physicians pronounced him sane.

Anent Hay Fever

If you should live in Podunk
And cry "Achoo! Achoo!"
You seek to cure hay fever
The clime of Timbuktu.
And when you reach that haven
With wonder sweet and sure
Your troubles all will leave you
And you will find a cure.

Meanwhile a sneezing mortal
Who dwells in Timbuktu
Will seek the Podunk climate
To cure his dread "Achoo!"
And when his eager nostrils
Breathe in that happy clime,
Oh, miracle and wonder,
It cures him every time!

LIFTING WATER CAUSES INJURY TO FARM WIVES.

Special Federal Bulletin Gives College Professor's Views on Drudgery.

Water handling, not its use, is the reason why the wives of farmers lose their figures, their color and the sparkle of their eyes, according to President Joe Cook of the Mississippi Normal college, whose discovery is considered of sufficient importance by the United States bureau of education to make it the subject of a special bulletin just issued.

In the presence of water handling President Cook declares the rural school has little chance to improve conditions. He declares the average farmer's wife lifts a ton of water a day in conducting her housewifely duties.

"The getting of the water from the source of supply to the point of application requires more manual labor than any other item in housekeeping," says Professor Cook. "The water for the kitchen has to be lifted from the well, carried to the kitchen, poured into a kettle, poured out of the kettle into the dishpan and from the dishpan out of door. This makes six times the water is handled, and a bucket of water containing two gallons, with the containing vessel, will weigh twenty pounds.

"When this is handled six times the total lifting is 120 pounds. The cooking of three meals a day on a meager allowance of water will necessitate ten buckets, which will make cooking alone 1,200 pounds of lifting per day.

"When to this is added the water necessary for bathing, scrubbing and the weekly washing it will easily bring the lift a day up to a ton, and the lifting of a ton a day will take the elasticity out of a woman's step, the bloom out of her cheek and the enjoyment from her soul."

All this drudgery, says Professor Cook, could be obviated at an outlay of $250, even on the most isolated farm, through the installation of a pumping system.

The Mississippi educator specifies the machinery and the cost of each separate piece. The bureau of education makes no comment.

POWERFUL RADIO STATION.

Believed Its Waves Will Reach Buenos Aires From Panama.

One of the greatest naval radio stations in the world, even eclipsing in size the new station at Arlington, Va., is to be constructed by the United States at Caimito, in the canal zone. It will be known as the Darien radio station, and, whereas only one of the Arlington towers reaches the height of 600 feet, all three of the towers at Darien will be that height.

The Darien plant, it is expected, will be able to communicate with San Francisco, as well as with Arlington, and to reach into the southern seas as far as Valdivia, Chile, 421 miles south of Valparaiso, on the west coast of South America, and as far as Buenos Aires, Argentina, on the east side. Throwing its waves across the Atlantic, this new station should communicate with the island of St. Vincent, 500 miles west of Africa.

The Darien station will be used exclusively for government business, principally as a relay station for communicating with naval vessels in southern waters, and the present wireless stations at Colon and Balboa will continue to handle messages for ships using the canal.

HEN AS TREE PROTECTOR.

Farmers Turn Them Into Their Orchards to Destroy Worms.

Warren Farmer and T. W. Hubbard, farmers of Liberal, Kan., claim to have found a way of protecting orchard trees from worms. Their theory is that the worms work up close to the ground and all that is necessary is to fence the orchard and turn a lot of hens loose in it. They will save the trees and also provide a good income as well. Both claim to have proved the benefits of the theory.

Another theory is that the hen is a sort of farmer and keeps the ground from becoming packed by the ceaseless scratching, a sort of summer fallowing machine that results in keeping the surface of the soil stirred up and preserves the moisture beneath.

The plan costs nothing to try, is not patented, and in the cases mentioned has at least brought results.

New Use of X Ray In Cancer.

Roentgen rays filtered through silver, copper or tin plate have been used by Dr. Roberts, senior surgeon of the General hospital of Hobart, Tasmania, in the treatment of cancer, and the surgeon says he has successfully treated forty persons suffering from the disease.

WERE ROYALLY ENTERTAINED

Quincy Men Among Guests of John R. Graham

John R. Graham, the "live wire" of Maine, entertained his former associates, the members of the Rapid Transit Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature of 1893 and others on Tuesday and Wednesday. Mr. Graham a former resident of Quincy is now president of the Bangor Electric Street Railway Co.

Frederick H. Smith and Clarence Burgin, who were associated with Mr. Graham when he was president of the Quincy and Boston Street Railway Co. were among those present. Both state that they had the most enjoyable time of their lives, and that Mr. Graham never conducted a merrier party through the state of Maine.

The party left the North station on Tuesday at 1.15, in a special Pullman and arrived at Augusta at 7 o'clock. A special car transported the guest to the Augusta House where a sumptuous banquet was served. The guests of the evening were Gov. Haines of Maine and Mayor Newbury of Augusta F. P. Bennett of the 1893 ways and means committees was toastmaster. After the party had fraternized with the distinguished guests they retired at the Augusta House.

At 7 o'clock Wednesday morning an electric parlor car stopped opposite the hotel and the party boarded it for Tacoma lakes where they breakfasted. From there they went direct to Portland over what Mr. Burgin said was one of the prettiest bits of landscape scenery that ever met his eye.

Another banquet was served at Riverton Park, at which the toastmaster was J. J. McCarthy, ex-surveyor of the Port of Boston. In addition to the Mayor of Portland other distinguished guests gave short witty addresses.

Following the banquet there was more sight seeing and at 6.05 the party left for Boston in a special Pullman arriving at the North station at 9.05.

The program as arranged by Mr. Graham was carried out to the letter and could not have been improved upon. His guests accorded him one of the most enthusiastic farewells ever given a friend as they steamed out of the station.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 185 QUINCY MASS, FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 22, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

CLOSE OF GRANITE CONVENTION

Milwaukie Selected As the Place for the Next Convention

O. J. Hammell of Atlantic City New President

The three days' convention of the National Retail Monumental Dealers' Association came to an end with Thursday afternoon's session. The convention has been a most successful one and the 600 delegates from all parts of the country were all very much pleased with the hospitality that was shown them on all sides.

One of the most important actions at Thursday's meeting was to fix the place for the next convention. There was considerable missionary work done by delegates, who desired to secure the convention for their city and Milwaukee won out. This is the city that made Slitz famous, or rather the city that Slitz made famous, and as it is reported to be a great convention city. There will doubtless be a large attendance.

The principal business Thursday, was the election of officers and the following were elected:

President—O. J. Hammell of Atlantic City.

Vice President—Charles J. Hughes of Bridgeport.

Secretary—Frank Mallon of Boston.

Treasurer—T. R. Gaebler of Rockville, Ill.

Board of Managers—F. C. Black of Grand Rapids, Mich., Hugh Lar, Latrobe, Pa., and F. R. Stewart of Mannington, W. V.

There was a good attendance at the exhibition at the Arena all day Thursday and aside from inspection of the monuments shown, it became a kind of reunion place. Delegates met friends whom they had not seen for years. In one particular case a Quincy manufacturer met a western customer whom he had not seen for over twenty years. Thus it was all through the convention. Old acquaintances were renewed and the delegates from one part of the country met delegates from another part of the country on social ground and talked over old times and incidentally the granite business.

After the convention those of the delegates who had elected to accept the invitation of the Barre, Vt., association went to the North station and boarded a special train for Vermont and were due to arrive at 8 o'clock this morning.

Those that accepted the invitation of the Quincy association got a good night's sleep and were on hand at the Arena at 8 o'clock this morning ready to take the automobiles for a ride through the park system and a visit to Quincy.

As usual,in such cases the start was delayed some, but the party got away in good season. It was a beautiful morning for an automobile trip through the park system and one that will long be remembered as one of the most delightful rides that many had ever taken.

SHIPYARD ACCIDENT.

Buskaro Francis, 38 years old, of 114 Parker street, is at the Quincy City Hospital with a compound fracture of the right leg, received at the Fore River yards this morning. The accident occurred when a heavy piece of timber became dislodged and fell against his leg, fracturing two bones above the ankle. He was removed to the hospital in the police ambulance.

WHY DOES GOD PERMIT

Will Floods, Storms and Pestilences Ever Cease?

Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, there will be a free public lecture under the auspices of the I. B. S. A. in the Colonial hall, Quincy Square. Pastor R. E. Streeter, of Providence, R. I. will speak on "Why Does God Permit Calamities?" This question has been raised in connection with many disasters by storm, fire and flood, and it is said that in this lecture the Bible testimony will be carefully examined as to why God is permitting all these catastrophies.

The speaker has traveled extensively throughout the country and has frequently lectured to large audiences in our foremost cities. Press reports show that he has been well received wherever he goes, and that his free lectures have aroused much inteerst in Bible study. "The people," he says "have often asked me why God is permitting His children to suffer such unspeakable misery, not only in disasters, but also in sickness, pain, heart-rending experiences of all kinds, and even death. Will it always be thus? Why didn't God make earth like heaven? Could not God's plans have been improved upon? These and many similar questions which so burden our hearts, I propose, by God's grace, to answer definitely from His Word, in my address Sunday."

REUNION.

Four Thayer academy graduates of more than a score of years ago, Fred Holmes of Plymouth, May Simmons of Wollaston, Stella Pierce of South Braintree and Helen W. Arnold of Braintree held another reunion Thursday afternoon and evening at the home of the latter, 230 Middle street, Braintree. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, nee Simmons, now of Detroit, Mich., were accompanied by their sons Frederick and John, now in their teens. Mrs. James Kilbraith, nee Pierce was in care of her husband and Mrs. Eben Prescott, nee Arnold, besides her family had as guests during the evening Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Arnold, and Mr. and Mrs. John Emerson Arnold. It is sufficient to say that the reunion of classmates and old acquaintances was very much enjoyed.

HOUSE PARTY AT EMERY MILLS.

We quote the following from the Springvale, Maine, Advocate.

"Mr. N. E. Hollis has been entertaining a large house party at Koanneeta, and each day has furnished its share of pleasures in motor trips to the camp itself and its picturesque surroundings. Among the many delightful surprises was a party given to Miss Etta I. Simpson of Boston and Mr. E. Stanwood Hollis of Braintree, Mass. in honor of his birthday and the announcement of their engagement Both were the recipient of many gifts."

SERIOUS ASSAULT.

Charles F. Tirrell of Quincy was arraigned before Judge Avery on a charge of serious assault at Braintree. The case was continued until Aug. 23. He secured bail of $300.

MIDSUMMER WEDDING

Miss Ruth Lawrence Bride of Henry E. Williams

Boston University students and Quincy people were interested in the Williams—Lawrence nuptials at Groton on Thursday, as the groom, bride and best man were members of the class of 1909. Mr. Henry Ernest Williams, the groom, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams of Bigelow street, Quincy, and his bride, Miss Ruth Lawrence, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lawrence of Groton.

The wedding took place on the lawn at 3 P. M., the Rev. John P. Trowbridge of the Christian Union church, at West Groton, officiating. The house and piazza decorations were of clematis and golden rod, and the scene was a very pretty one. The bride was given away by her father.

The bride's gown was white messaline and Baby Irish lace, and she carried Bride's roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Sylvia Lawrence of Groton, was gowned in white French voile. Lester E. Avery of Plymouth was best man.

A reception followed the ceremony, and later Mr. and Mrs. Williams left for a wedding trip in New Hampshire Before going to their future residence at Burlington, Vt., they will visit Quincy.

Among the guests at the wedding were Howard A. Bridgman, D. D., of Brookline; Warren A. Seavey of Norman, Oka., and Quincy relatives and friends of the groom.

BURGLARS AT NANTASKET.

Nantasket cottagers have been receiving the attention of gentlemen burglars that work in the daytime, during the absence of the occupants. One of those entered was the cottage occupied by the Manet Club of Quincy. The members usually spend Saturday and Sunday at the cottage but are seldom there during the week. A recent trip to the cottage resulted in the discovery that clothing and other fixtures valued at $300 had been taken. Every member that left anything hanging in the closets is a loser. The burglary has been reported to the Hull police.

LARCENY OF PIPE.

Two employees of the Fore River yard were detected in the act of stealing galvanized iron pipe, Thursday night by Patrick H. Bradley of the yard police. He placed both men under arrest. They gave their names as John McGregor and Peter Chroner. Judge Avery found them guilty of larceny and fined both $15.

Bradley's attention was called to the men while they were hanging around the fence surrounding the property. A few minutes after he saw them trying to work the pipe through the fence The attempt was brought about through their desire to make a homemade couch and they had cut and threaded the pipe so that it could be used in the frame work. In court McGregor absolved Chroner from all blame. He had the pipe in his possession when arrested, however.

FINED FOR ASSAULT.

In the Quincy court this morning, Albert J. Adams pleaded guilty to the charge of assault preferred by William J. Thompson and was fined $15 by Judge Avery. He was also ordered to pay for the glasses which were broken when he struck the complainant. The assault occurred in the home of the defendant on Tyler street and according to Thompson was unprovoked. He said that he was friendly with the sister-in-law of Adams, and was at the house to visit her. When he took the stand this morning his right eye was discolored. The fine was suspended until Oct. 31.

MOONLIGHT SAIL.

The Wright Bros. of Weymouth, owners of the launch Jay-eye-see, conducted a moonlight sail to Bass Point on Thursday evening. The start was made at the Town River Yacht Club at 6 o'clock. The twenty aboard were served refreshments, and music was furnished by Mason's orchestra. They returned about 1 A. M.

PERCENTAGE OF DEBT HIGH

Only Seven Massachusetts Cities Are Higher

Charles F. Gettemy, the director of the bureau of satistics, in his annual report on municipal finances, shows that much progress has been made in handling the cost of municipal government in the State. He says that there has been seven years of steady progress in municipal accounting and that the reform is so much better understood and so popular that for the last three years the laws to correct abuses have been passed with practically no opposition. The work of bringing the accounts of cities and towns up to a given standard has gone on well though nothing can be done except upon voluntary petition from a city or town.

The practice of the certification of town notes has increased materially and in the two years and six months covered by the report since the law went into effect 4597 notes have been certified aggregating $28,719,275. The popularity of this system with investors was the cause of the extension of the act this year to include fire, water, watch, light and improvement districts.

Chief Gettemy is particularly proud of the fact that his bills were so well prepared for the legislature that he had 16 different reform laws in his line all passed by the legislature without a dissenting voice in either the Senate or House. This legislation is especially directed against borrowing for current expenses, for unrestricted borrowing in anticipation of taxes, diversion of trust funds and inefficient management of sinking funds.

The report is filed will well digested figures full of interest for officials, specialists and taxpayers who are interested in following out how the money of the public is spent and how one place compares with another of about the same population. or the miscellaneous public there are tables of percentages, based on the valuation of the assessors in 1910 —and the figures would stand about the same to-day—showing the percentage of the net debt to the assessors' valuation.

For the cities of Massachusetts, Cambridge has the largest per cent. of debt to valuation, being 7.02, and other cities down the scale in order are as follows: Gloucester 6.75, New Bedford 6.44, Taunton 6.44, Chelsea 6.43, Pittsfield 6.10, Brockton 6.02, Quincy 5.88, Holyoke 5.44, Fall River 5.35, North Adams 5.35, Haverhill 5.22, Boston, 5.14, Newton 4.66, Springfield 4.62, Marlboro 4.54, Chicopee 4.45, Newburyport 4.43, Lynn 4.33, Worcester 4.18, Everett 4.14, Lawrence 3.92, Woburn 3.78, Fitchburg 3.64, Melrose 3.59, Salem 3.41, Malden 3.26, Beverly 3.23, Lowell 3.00, Medford 2.41, Northampton 2.33, Somerville 2.26, Waltham 2.20.

WEYMOUTH ASSAULT.

John M. Lyons of the United States Government Immigrant Service and a recently admitted lawyer, was complainant and prosecutor in the trial of Dominico DeCendo, charged with assault at Weymouth, which was heard by Judge Avery this morning. DeCendo was fined $15 and ordered to give Mr. Lyons $3, the cost of the straw at broken during the assault.

All the witnesses testified in cross examination that DeCendo had been the aggressor. Mr. Lyons testified that while talking to friends he received several blows on the head, one of which struck under the rim of his hat, breaking it. A triangular scar on his right cheek was received he said from a lighted cigar when his hand was driven back by a blow.

The case was interesting from many points, particularly because the complainant was a lawyer. He is a resident of Weymouth and a popular young man.

SATURDAY GAME.

South Quincy and the Braintree A. A. will play on the Ward Four Playground Saturday afternoon. Both teams are primed for snappy base ball.

GRANITE DEALERS VISIT QUINCY

Many Surprised at Extent of Quarrying and Manufacturing

Delighted with Automobile Trip and Quincy Reception

Ideal weather was what the weather man handed out to the visiting granite men for "Quincy day" and a more beautiful trip than was provided would be hard to find. There was but little hitch anywhere over the arrangements as planned, although lack of time made it necessary to cut out some of the strictly Quincy trip.

It was but a few minutes past the appointed hour when the 65 automobiles containing nearly 350 visitors, which included a large number of ladies left the Arena. The delay in starting was due in a measure to the lack of cars. It was supposed that there would be cars enough, but at the ast minute some of those who had registered for the Barre trip came to the conclusion that the Quincy day would afford the most enjoyment, so the Quincy party was joined. It was therefore necessary for the committee to secure more cars, and four or five were rented from a near by garage.

The ride through the park system was a most beautiful one, especially to the ladies who were charmed with the scenery, the beauty of which is unsurpassed in these United States.

The ride through the park system consumed over an hour, Quincy being reached about 9.30. Coming through East Milton into Adams street, Quincy a run was made over Quarry street to the famous Hitchcock quarries. A stop of ten minutes was made there, when the bugles sounded for the start for the Railway quarry. B. F. Hodgkinson, Jr., the Boy Scout Master, was the bugler, and his services came in very handy.

From the Hitchcock quarry the automobiles made a short run to the Railway quarry in a few minutes. On arriving here they found a train of four cars waiting for them. The train was pushed up the hill by a big mogul engine. It was thought that the engine would be able to push all cars up at one time but it was unable to do so.

The grade of this road at its sharpest point is 4 per cent and is the steepest grade of a regularly operated road in the United States. There is a steeper grade railroad in Colorado, but the line is not operated regularly as is the Quarry railroad.

The train of four cars started up the hill at a good speed, but in rounding the curve by what is known as the big fill, it got stuck, and the engineer was

NEWS IN THE ADVERTISING.

This newspaper has often remarked that the test of effective advertising matter is found in the question, "Is i newsy?" In acordance with this principle, the present is a time when the advertising in these columns is particularly effective.

August is a month when things are happening in the retail stores. It is one of the two critical periods of the year's sales. No merchant can forecast six months ahad the currents of trade. He must always buy ahead of his wants. Some of his ventures will go astray, chiefly because he can not forecast popular whims. Consequently if he is to be a live one through the fall trade, he must clear his shelves, and turn goods into cash to pay for more seasonable goods.

The advertising columns of this newspaper tell the story of these doings. They report many bargains sold at prices below their real value to meet these inevitable conditions of retail trade.

The reader who fails to study the advertising, and to follow up the bargain news there reported, is much like the dealer in food stuffs who should fail to read the produce news in the daily papers.

No one can buy intelligently without acquiring information in advance, as to what merchants feel the pressure of the season most keenly, are enterprising in keeping their stock fresh, and will make the greatest sacrifices to clean out unseasonable goods.

Fortunately in these high cost of living times few people fail to realize this. To the women particularly, the advertising columns of a home newspaper seem more vital than the story the telegraph brings. The fact that boys' clothing can be had 25 cent off at a certain store, is far more interesting to a housewife than the feverish doings in far Mexico.

PENSIONS FOR MINISTERS.

The minister of course ought to ignore the money end of his job. He gets so much satisfaction out of souls saved, that obtruding the money motive on his consideration shows lack of tact.

But even the country parson on $500 a year is expected to appear in his pulpit in a fresh and neatly pressed frock coat. Furthermore, ministers frequently commit the imprudence of having children. They might know in advance, also, that these children would have literary tastes, and would demand college educations. Ministers are called passee at fifty, and superannuated at sixty. At that age poultry culture and selling life insurance are undertaken under a handicap.

Recognizing such conditions, the Episcopal Church recently appointed a committee on pensions, which has just reported in favor of half pay for ministers over sixty-five, with provision for widows and orphans. Baptists and other denominations are working on similar plans.

High clerical ideals seem easy enough when seen from the right side of a business office. But the calling does not prove attractive to the brightest college graduates. In the Episcopal church, while membership was increasing 66 per cent, clergymen increased but 29.

The clergymen must satisfy the younger set that his trouseres are properly creased and his stockings correct. He must not affront the more conservative by crossing his legs in the pulpit. He needs the executive gifts and grasp of human nature expected from a factory superintendent. He must be a skillful financier, an original thinker, a graphic writer, a forceful elocutionist, a graceful conversationalist. A larger allotment of bread and butter is needed for so inclusive a task. Some such pension scheme would be good business for the churches.

DELAY GRANTED IN THAW CASE

Important Point Scored by Counsel For Prisoner

GET TIME TO PLAN FIGHT

Thaw Would Have Been Immediately Deported Whatever the Outcome of Habeas Corpus Proceedings—Perfectly Safe While In Canadian Jail—Glynn Makes Demand For Him

Sherbrooke, P. Q., Aug. 22.—Thaw's counsel, under the resourceful leadership of F. J. McKeon, Canada's greatest and highest-priced lawyer, sprang a sensation when they got an adjournment until Wednesday of the hearing on the habeas corpus writ.

New York state officials who were at court for the hearing were dumfounded. They declared that habeas corpus proceedings could not be adjourned, but in spite of their protests, the case went over.

McKeon asked for delay on the ground that Attorney Shurtleff is on the way to Ottawa with a demand direct to the Canadian government that Thaw, guilty of no crime against the dominion laws, be liberated at once.

It is now regarded that Shurtleff's hurried departure was nothing less than a ruse by McKeon to get the delay he declares is essential for the success of Thaw's freedom.

McKeon declared habeas corpus proceedings in Thaw's behalf as a blunder of the gravest moment, in that, once disposed of, favorably or unfavorably, they would result in turning Thaw over to the immigration authorities, who would quickly deport him, and probably by the New York border.

McKeon announced his determination to abandon this line of procedure and emphasized the importance of delay. Subsequent developments indicate that Thaw's interests are now in the care of a master legal mind. The feeling is general that McKeon's coup has retrieved the early blunder. Thaw, it is said, is elated at the turn of affairs.

McKeon has been given full charge of the defense. He will fight the charge of conspiracy which now lies against Thaw.

New York at present has no claim on him that is recognized against Thaw, but if the contemplated habeas corpus plan had been carried out he would have been immediately arrested by the Canadian immigration officers and probably deported to New York.

The defense does not wish to hurry matters, but are taking the position that Thaw is perfectly sane, as far as New York authorities are concerned, in a Canadian jail, and they see no reason why any move should be made until they are satisfied that it is for Thaw's best interests. In fact the situation has resolved itself into a game of waiting, neither side being willing to give the other an opening.

It was learned that Shurtleff offered a promise from Thaw to the immigration authorities in Ottawa to leave Canada immediately if allowed to choose his destination. This destination would be either Europe or South America. The offer is under consideration.

Thaw will not be allowed to stay in Canada. This was made clear by officials of the department of immigration. But the department will not make a decisive move until the habeas corpus and extradition proceedings have beeen decided one way or another.

Barnum Held In $1000 Bail

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Howard H. Barnum, the attendant on duty at the entrance to Matteawan asylum grounds when Harry K. Thaw escaped last Sunday, was arraigned before Supreme Court Justice Morschauser and held in $1000 bail for examination Sept. 6, on a charge of bribery to effect Thaw's escape.

Barnum's arraignment was simply for fixing his bail. His lawyers said they would secure bonds for him.

WEARS X-RAY GOWN

German Woman Causes Near Panic on Her Arrival at Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—As she stood for a moment silhouetted against a bright midday sun wearing an "X-ray" gown, the appearance of Miss Maria Mayer of Stettin, Ger., caused a near panic among the passengers, immigration officials and interpreters who met the steamship Cassel, which arrived here from Bremen.

The inspectors took one look and Miss Mayer was ordered to be detained. The reasons were not given.

Can't Work "Sick Leave" Game

New Haven, Aug. 22.—New Haven railroad officials are no longer safe if they go to ball games while on "sick leave." The company has a gumshoe photographer to "snap" them when they're off.

No One-Cent Parcel Post Stamps

Washington, Aug. 22.—The 1-cent parcel post stamp has been discontinued. It was so much like the regular 2-cent letter stamp that many persons have been using it on first class mail.

RICHARD J. BUTLER

Accused of Aiding Thaw In Plot to Make His Getaway

Police think they have laid bare the plot which was successful in freeing Harry Thaw from the Matteawan asylum, although he only remained free for forty-eight hours. Ex-Assemblyman Richard J. Butler is said to have hired the big touring car in which the flight was made. The car was found near Rochester, N. H. It is asserted that negotiations for the plot were begun at least a month ago. Estimates of the amounts said to have been paid those who aided Thaw to escape range from $10,000 to $25,000.

POSTPONEMENT OF TRIAL OF "HEALERS"

Trio Charged With Obtaining Money by False Pretences

Framingham, Mass., Aug. 22.—The cases against Mrs. Marie B. W. Etter, the so-called "healer," and her associates, E. W. Clark and C. W. Feckler, all charged with obtaining money under false pretences, were brought up in court, but Judge Kingsbury postponed their trial to Aug. 26. Their bail, $200 each, stands.

The trio have been conducting revival meetings for the last three weeks at Mt. Wait. Large numbers of sick and crippled persons have been drawn there by Mrs. Etter's alleged assertions that she could cure all manner of diseases through hypnotism inspired by reading the Bible.

BOTH ON THE JOB

Sulzer and Glynn Doing State Business Each For Himself

Albany, Aug. 22.—True to the promise of Acting Governor Glynn, there were no "political earthquakes" at the capitol. An atmosphere of placidity pervades both suites of executive chambers.

Governor Sulzer remained in seclusion within his private office and had few callers. So far as disclosed, his only official act was to take a hand in the Thaw deportation matter by requestion the assistance of the federal authorities.

Glynn spent considerable time conferring over the same matter with the members of the attorney general's staff and sending messages to New York state's representatives in Canada, also to the federal and dominion authorities at Washington and Ottawa.

NOT IN VENEZUELA

Castro Is Not Directing the Revolution In That Country

Washington, Aug. 22.—News that Cipriano Castro, former dictator of Venezuela, who was supposed to have landed in that country recently to direct a revolution, has not been in Venezuela, was confirmed by a cable to the navy department from Commander Long of the cruiser Des Moines, who was sent down to investigate the situation.

"The fullest information," the commander reported, "indicates that Castro has never been in Venezuela; that the present disturbance has not been important and that it is practically finished."

CAPTURES AN 'APACHE

American Woman Displays Great Presence of Mind and Pluck

Paris, Aug. 22.—An American woman, Mrs. Ford Thompson of St. Louis, showed her mettle by overcoming an Apache who had snatched her purse. Mrs. Thompson was sitting reading in the Trocadero Gardens when the Apache sprang at her and made off with her wallet containing several hundred dollars.

Instead of stopping to scream, Mrs. Thompson pursued the thief and, after a brief chase, seized him by the collar and held him until the police arrived.

Three Killed In Gun Explosion

Vienna, Aug. 22.—Three men were instantly killed and five were seriously wounded by the explosion of a new naval gun being tested at Pola.

Brasses and Bronzes of the Hindus.

The brass and bronze trade is kept alive by the religious customs of the Hindus, who are not allowed to use wooden and earthenware vessels freely, and brass and bronze are to them as important as glass and china to the westerners. Almost all Hindu utensils are of brass, copper or bronze, and it is the custom to present the female portion of a Hindu family with a valuable batterie de cuisine, made either of brass or copper, and a still existing Hindu ceremony is that of carrying the utensils in a procession at the wedding. The result of this custom is that almost all the platters, trays, bowls, nutcrackers and all brass and copper utensils are most beautifully ornamented, and there are lovely combinations of brass and coppeer and silver and copper. All Hindu women used to have lovely brass caskets covered with ornamentations called chellams, manufactured in Malabar, in which they kept their jewels, but these are fast being replaced by the vulgar English japanned dispatch box.

The Pumpkin Planter.

A gentleman from New York city who had spent all his life in a 2 by 4 flat decided that before he reached the gray hair stage he would renew his youth in the country. He had for years been a devoted worshiper of the pumpkin when made into pie, so he decided that his ten acres should be devoted to this yellow "fruit." One warm day in May a neighbor, conscious of his superior knowledge and of the shortcomings of the back to the land converts, strolled over to the new farmer's place and leaned over the fence. Williams was peeled to his undershirt and was painfully manipulating a spade. He was working on the sixth of a row of holes that were about two feet in diameter and three feet deep. "Whatcha doin'?" inquired the neighborly one.

"I'm getting ready to plant those darned pumpkins," said the weary Williams, "and you just bet that next year I'm going to save smaller ones or buy a ditch digger to plant 'em with."—Country Gentleman.

Dr. Johnson on Pensions.

A pension that was made the subject of considerable criticism was that bestowed by George III. on Dr. Johnson. It was said that a man of Johnson's pronounced Jacobite leanings ought to have refused the pension. The doctor took these attacks good humoredly. "Why, sir," he said, "it is a mighty foolish noise that they make. I have accepted a pension as a reward which has been thought due to my literary merit, and now that I have this pension I am the same man in every respect that I have ever been; I retain the same principles. It is true that I cannot now curse the house of Hanover, nor would it be decent of me to drink King James' health in the wine that King George gives me money to pay for. But, sir, I think that the plensure of cursing the house of Hanover and drinking King James' health are amply overbalanced by £300 a year."—London Express.

Judging Weights.

In making observations on the capacity of different people for judging which of two weights is the heavier Dr. Demoor, a Belgian physician, "has satisfied himself," says the London Lancet, "that, while ordinary people, especially children, fail to appreciate a small difference, the reverse is the case with the imbecile idiotic and half witted. He prepared two bottles, differing in size, partly filled with a heavy mineral, but covered all over with black paper and exactly equal in weight. These he handed to 380 children of from six to fifteen years of age. Of these 370 judged one bottle to be the heavier. The other ten said the two were the same weight. These ten children were all abnormal or degenerates."

Sad Memories.

The curse of this life is that whatever is once known can never be unknown. You inhabit a spot which before you inhabited it is as indifferent to you as any other spot upon earth, and when, persuaded by some necessity, you think to leave it you leave it not. It clings to you and, with memories of things, which in your experience of them gave no such promise, revenges your desertion. Time flows on; places are changed; friends who were with us are no longer with us; yet what has been seems yet to be, but barren and stripped of life.—Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Puzzle of the Druidical Circle.

How many stones in the Druidical circle at Keswick, England? One antiquarian says forty-eight, but other mathematicians give different and varying estimates. A favorite number is thirty-eight. Superstitious natives declare that the lofty circle is haunted by fairies, who bring to naught the efforts of the profane to take a census of the megaliths. "They can't be counted," says the guide, "however long you try."

Generosity.

"But, George," protested the lovely girl, "your salary is only $20 a week, and we can't live on that!"

"Darling," exclaimed George, "you don't suppose I'd be mean enough to ask you to throw up your $10 a week job, do you?"—Chicago Tribune.

No Debate Admissible.

Gibbs—I never argue with my wife. Dibbs—Same here. I always plead guilty and take a light sentence.—Boston Transcript.

Opportunities are like flashlights. They suddenly reveal us to others and also to ourselves.

WANT SCHOOL SITE.

The matter of a school house location for Squantum will come up at the next regular meeting of the Squantum Improvement asscciation Tuesday evening and it is expected that there will be a large attendance. The association wishes to have the school house matter well in hand so that with the next City Council an order can be presented for the buying of a schoolhouse site. It is considered that it will be money in the pockets of Quincy tax payers to select a site before there is an increase in the price of land and before Squantum is so built up that there will not be as good a location as can now be obtained.

Squantum now has 100 children of a school-going age. They are now compelled to go to Atlantic to school and in the severe winter months this is a grave hardship for the smaller children who attend the primary grades. The children are also compelled through a ruling of the school committee to remain at school for their noon lunch or pay their own car fares home. In the case of several families where there are a large number of children this is a severe hardship.

It is hoped by the association officers and a large majority of the Squantum voters that the next city council will see a way to buy a site for a schoolhouse here and at least put up a temporary structure as a primary school which will meet the needs of Squantum for a few years.

DOANE FAMILY REUNION.

The biennial reunion of the Doane Family Association of America is to be held at the Atlantic house, Nantasket, Tuesday with the business meeting at 12 o'clock noon and dinner at two o'clock. Nantasket is a delightful place in summer. Travelling accommodations to and from the beach are good. The steamboats leaving Boston twenty minutes past the hour and steam and electric cars at frequent intervals. These reunions have become pleasant affairs and it will be worth while to attend. All Doane descendants and their families are cordially invited.

MAY PLAY AT PORTLAND.

Paul Mulligan of West Quincy, an outfielder of the Braintree team which proved to be the opening to big league ball for Carson the Milton twirler, is considering an opening offered by Hugh Duffy of the Portland, New England league team. Mr. Mulligan has practically agreed to join the squad in the spring. He is one of the best known West Quincy young men and commenced his base ball career with the Copeland Club. After a season with them he was a member of several teams of nearby towns and this summer came into prominence by playing fine base ball in the Braintree outfield. Mulligan's athletic inclinations are very pronounced, and he eagerly takes to any branch of sports. He has some standing in the amateur boxing world and has the reputation of being a gamey boy.

LOCOMOTIVE TOPPLED OVER.

Quincy people on the South Shore bound train, leaving Boston at 9.34 P. M., are congratulating themselves that they escaped being wrecked. At East Braintree, Thursday night, one of the driving wheels of the locomotive broke suddenly while the train was going 20 miles per hour. The engineer applied the emergency brakes and when the train stopped the engine toppled over. The engineers and fireman were saved by jumping from the cab.

BRIDGE FIRE.

The flying squadron of the Atlantic fire house were called to the Squantum bridge this morning. They found a slight fire which was promptly extinguished before any damage was done.

SAVED LIVES BY EATING PET DOG

Hardships of Danish Arctic Expedition Many.

WITHOUT FOOD FOR DAYS!

Explorers Suffer Agonies In Trip Over Greenland's Frozen Seas — Ponies Trained to Cannibalism — Captain Koch, the Leader, Lay All Winter In Hut With Broken Leg.

The story just told in Copenhagen by Captain Koch, the Danish explorer, of the crossing of Greenland in company with three hardy companions shows that the dangers and hardships to be encountered on the great inland ice field have not decreased since Rear Admiral Robert S. Peary and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen made their journeys over a portion of the same deserted wastes.

The Danish leader and his three companions—Dr. Wagener, a German; Larsen, a sailor, and Sigurdson, a native of Iceland—were reduced during their journey to eating a pet dog, the only animal left.

After landing from their ship on July 24, 1912, the first mishap encountered by the expedition was the loss of a number of ponies. Shortly afterward their motorboat disappeared through the thin ice, and the explorers were obliged to wait until nearly the end of September before the ice was sufficiently thick to carry their sledges and horses. When they were ready to start Dr. Wagener fell, with the result that one of his ribs was broken.

The expedition reached a place about ten miles to the east of Queen Louise Land on Oct. 13 and went into winter quarters there.

Ponies Become Cannibals.

The shortness of fodder necessitated the slaughter of all the ponies with the exception of five, which were gradually trained to cannibalism by being fed on the flesh of their brothers.

During a sledging trip Captain Koch fell forty feet into a crevasse, breaking his right leg, which accident kept him helpless in the hut throughout the winter in a temperature generally 30 degrees below zero.

On April 20 this year the four men broke camp and with five sleighs, each drawn by a pony, started on their 750 mile march to the west coast.

During the first forty days violent blizzards raged practically without cessation. The ponies became snowblind and so exhausted that the men were obliged to kill three of them. Later the sun's rays tormented the travelers. The skin was burned from their faces, which soon had the appearance of raw beef, while the temperature at night was 30 below zero.

Snowshoes were fitted to the feet of the two remaining ponies and proved of wonderful assistance to them in the loose snow. But for the ponies the expedition would have been in a worse plight.

Unfortunately for the explorers, it was found necessary to kill another pony on July 11, this year, because the fodder had given out. Next day the last pony was killed, much to the distress of the members of the expedition, as a few miles farther on splendid pasturage was found.

Rations Give Out.

The rations of Captain Koch and his companions had been meanwhile gradually reduced and on July 13 their provisions were finished.

A howling blizzard came on top of this misfortune, and for thirty-five hours the four men were compelled to take shelter under a projecting rock, where they remained without a morsel of food.

On July 15 they tried to push on to the coast, which was now visible, but they were so exhausted with hunger, cold and wet that they were scarcely able to move. Their only chance for life was to kill the pet dog which had tramped with them for about 800 miles. This was done, and its flesh was cooked and eaten. The meal was hardly finished when the explorers sighted a sailing boat in a fiord to the east of Proeven, on the west coast of Greenland.

By means of shots and signals the explorers succeeded in attracting the attention of those on board the vessel, and Pastor Chemnitz, who was on the ship, soon, with the assistance of the crew, had the famished and wornout explorers in safety.

UNIQUE CLOCK DIAL IN PARIS.

Monster Timepiece Makes Automatic Change Every Twelve Hours.

The first monster public clock keeping time in accordance with the new French computation has just been unveiled in the tower of the St. Lazare railway terminus in Paris.

The peculiarity of this timepiece is that it has two separate dials, which change places automatically on the strokes of midnight and midday. The first is numbered from zero to 12 and the second from 13 to 24. Even logically minded people who objected to the suppression of either zero or 24 o'clock in the ordinary double figured dials can find no objection to the St. Lazare clock. Five minutes before midnight will be as they wish to have it, "five minutes to 24," and five minutes after midnight, "five minutes past zero."

AMUSEMENTS

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Yesterday afternoon and evening, large audiences gathered at this popular playhouse to enjoy the mid-week change of program. And it is certainly a show that pleases the people as was plainly proven by the storms of applause each feature received.

George Brown brought down the house with his walking exhibition. He has two machines on the stage that plainly and correctly register the distance of the one mile race he has with his trainer. And when one sees him win that race there is no reason to doubt his claim of champion walker of the world. If more proof is desired, however, just take a look in the window of Thompson's Cafe, where more than a hundred prizes he has won are on display.

Torelli's Dog and Pony Circus was such a success the first three days that Manager Wardwell retained it for the balance of the week. Many new tricks were done by the well-trained animals and the attempts by four fellows to get and stay on the back of Bessie, the funny mule, set the audience screaming.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Victor Moore, the famous star of George M. Cohan's "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," "The Talk of New York," "The Happiest Night of His Life," and numerous other musical comedies, will make his first Boston vaudeville appearance in years at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of August 25th, assisted by Emma Littlefield and company in a grand revival of his famous travesty, "Change Your Act or Back To The Woods." As the original "Kid Burns" of "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," Mr. Moore is known the country over. His characterization of the couth but good natured New York race track tout has hung his name high in the annals of the American stage. His famous travesty on life behind the scenes is almost as well known in vaudeville as his "Kid Burns" is on the legitimate stage. This great comedy feature will be surrounded by a splendid all star vaudeville bill, practically every act on the bill being new to Boston audiences. Ben Deely and his company, including Marie Wayne, will present the uproariously funny farce, "The New Bell Boy," while a great European novelty is promised in the Three Bartos, an acrobatic turn that is said to surpass anything of its kind ever seen in this country. Other big features will be Goldrick, Moore & Klaiss in a novel conceit, "Camping;" Tom Mosher & Co. in a new comedy Doc O'Neil, the merry wag; Rae, Eleanor Ball, the violin virtuoso; Roser's Aerial Dogs in a canine offering; and Billy and Edith Adams, "That Effervescent Pair" in songs and dances. The Pathe Weekly will present its customary series of motion pictures news items culled from all over the world.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The sixth season of the Castle Square Theatre under the management of John Craig will begin next Friday evening, August 29th. The play will be the famous comedy, "London Assurance," which ever since its production many years ago has been one of the favorites of the American stage. Its author is Dion Boucicault, famous both as an actor and playwright, and in it he wrote a sparklingly brilliant comedy of the gay manners of English society of the period. It is brimful of action and life, and gay with witty dialogue, and its lively plot involving the adventures of Lady Gay Spanker, of Charles Courtley and of a dozen other actors, is entertaining in the extreme. It is no wonder that London Assurance, has lived on the stage so long, and its revival at the Castle Square will be especially welcome. The opening of the Castle Square is always a gala occasion, and the theatre will be crowded to the doors to see this play acted by Mr. Craig and his company. Mr. Craig will himself appear as Charles Courtley, with William P. Carleton as Dazzle and Miss Doris Olson as Lady Gay Spanker, while in other leading roles will be seen Walter Walker, Donald Meek, Frederic Ormonde, Carney Christie, Al Roberts and Florence Shirley. Mr. Craig is planning a popular season, among the plays to follow being "Under Two Flags," "The Ninety and Nine," "Baby Mine," "The Thief," "The Girl of the Golden West," Excuse Me," and "We the People."

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Florence Thayer attained her 20th birthday Thursday and in the evening 20 young men and women friends surprised her at her home on 59 Cleverly court and gave her a traveling bag. The presentation was made by Miss Catherine Yule. Games and an entertainment was the program of the evening. Among those that took part were Miss Amy Fallon who gave piano solos, and her sister Miss Marion Faloln who rendered vocal solos. Refreshments were served and the party adjourned at a late hour.

FOOTBALL TEAM.

An informal meeting of the Quincy A. A. football team was held in the club rooms Thursday evening. The selection of a captain was postponed until next week. The prospects are that most of the last year men will be on the line. New candidates have been in touch with Manager Flynn. Last years men who are available are Micke Danahy and Hunter on the end, Billie Gerstel and Harkins at tackle, Tocci and Savage at guard, Moberg at centre, Web McDonald at quarter, and Mattie Cummings, Monky Woods and Bernie Boyle in the back field.

TRIED TO BE TACTFUL.

Yet Little Glory's Scheme Didn't Work Out According to Rule.

"Children," said Mr. Timkins, who had been suddenly moved to deliver a little sermon as he swallowed his second egg at breakfast, "whenever you hear anybody say anything mean or unpleasant, act as though you hadn't heard it. Talk about something else and pretend you don't hear. That's what we call tact."

When Mr. Timkins got home that afternoon from the office he observed that somebody had strewn his favorite golf clubs and all his golf balls over the front yard. Summoning his six-year-old daughter Glory, he said sternly:

"Glory, did you get all dad's golf things out and put them here where anybody could steal them?"

"Dad," replied Glory with perfect composure, "isn't it too bad our ice cream freezer's out of order, 'cause Mary can't make any ice cream?"

"Glory, did you dig up all this turf knocking those balls around?"

"And Uncle Randolph came and took mother for a ride in his auto," continued the six-year-old. "When are we going to get an auto, dad?"

"But, Glory," said Mr. Timkins, "I want to know about these golf clubs. Did you strew them around here? Why don't you answer?"

"Well, yes, I did," said the young person, "but I was trying to change the subject, 'cause I didn't want you to know that I heard something mean and unpleasant."—New York Post.

MUNICIPAL PAWNSHOPS.

In the Mont de Piete the Parisian Has a Model Institution.

The story of the Mont de Piete, the great pawnshop of Paris, reads like a romance. It is the survival of an old bank conducted by a religious order established to fight usury. This benevolent enterprise was given up to be started afresh under the direction of the government in 1801, when Napoleon was near the height of his glory. The profits go to the state and to charity—to the public aid department and to the hospitals of Paris. These charities benefit about $70,000 a year.

The storage facilities of the Mont de Piete are admirable. The Frenchman may pawn his feather bed. When it comes back to him it, as well as mattresses, blankets and all bed furnishings, has been thoroughly disinfected. The rate of interest on loans is small, and it encourages by all means the redemption of the goods on which money has been advanced. As the Mont de Piete advances money only on a conservative valuation—as a rule to the value of two-thirds of the article pawned—there is generally a surplus to go to the pawner if the pledge is sold.

Municipal pawnshops in Berlin charge 12 per cent, in Brussels 7 per cent and in Madrid 6 per cent.

In London for small loans the pawn shop rate is from 400 to 1,000 per cent per annum.—Indianapolis News.

Too Numerous.

A darky employed as an office boy in Kentucky came to work one morning with a face that looked as though it had been run through a meat grinder.

"Henry," demanded his surprised employer, "what in the world has happened to you?"

"Well, suh, boss," explained Henry, "I got into a little argument las' night wit' another nigger, and one thing led to another twell I up and bit at him. Well, suh, it seemed lak dat irritated him. He took and blacked both of mah eyes and bit one of mah years mighty nigh off and split mah lip and knocked two of mah teeth loose, and den he th'owed me down and stamped me in de stomach. Honest, boss, I never did git so sick of a nigger in mah life!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Ancient Coffins.

The coffins of the ancient Egyptians were made of marble and stone. The Romans used similar receptacles for their dead, and Alexander the Great is said to have been buried in a coffin of solid gold. In parts of England glass coffins have been found. The Athenian heroes were buried in coffins made of cedar, owing to its aromatic and incorruptible qualities, while the first record of wooden coffins in England dates back to the days of King Arthur. This monarch was supposed to have been buried in the hollowed trunk of a gigantic oak tree.

CONFESSION OF A GIRL

It May Put Police on Trail of Professional Flat Workers

Boston, Aug. 22.—Mary A. Brady of South Weymouth, aged 17, lured away from home by the leaders of a gang of "chloroform burglars" by a promise of marriage, collapsed under the "third degree" and confessed to having personally committed a $1000 diamond robbery, for which she was given $20.

Instructed in all the fine points of picking locks, porch-climbing and jimmying windows, the girl explained in detail how she had entered the home of Mrs. Frances Tirrell, a wealthy widow in South Weymouth, made her way with her instructor, a burglar with a police record, and succeeded in escaping with a jewel casket from the bedroom.

Through her confession Raymond Hutchinson was placed under arrest in New York and an organized search was started for a gang of young flat workers who are said to have been reaping a rich harvest throughout New England.

GETS AWAY WITH $10,000

Bankers Deliver Bonds to Stranger In Exchange For Forged Check

Boston, Aug. 22.—Ten thousand dollars' worth of negotiable bonds were stolen from the banking house of Lee, Higginson & Co. by means of a forged certified check presented by a stranger.

The bonds included $5000 of American Telephone and Telegraph company 4s, due July 1, 1929, and $5000 worth of Illinois Steel company 4½s, maturing April 1, 1940. What purported to be the certification stamp of a Boston bank on the check allayed suspicion on the part of the salesman who made the transaction.

The police and federal authorities have been notified and notices have been sent to banks and brokerage offices here and in other cities. It is thought, however, that possibly the man who got the bonds sold them within an hour after obtaining them.

A. I. Glidden, general manager of the banking house, says the bonds could be as easily exchanged as a dollar bill.

MADE FRANCE THINK WAR WAS PLANNED

How Kaiser Got Out of an Unpleasant Predicament

London, Aug. 22.—A remarkable letter written by Bebel, the famous German Socialist, who died recently, which declares Germany and France were on the brink of war during the past year, is published by the Pall Mall Gazette.

It was Bebel's last letter. It said Emperor William, recognizing that the superior guns which won the war in the Balkans against the German Krupps would probably secure victory over Germany in the event of hostilities, bluffed France into believing Germany was making extensive military preparations to begin war, fearing that France would otherwise take the initiative.

BLOWING UP BIG DYKE

Will Soon Mark Step Toward Completion of the Panama Canal

Washington, Aug. 2.—Another important step toward the final completion of the Panama canal will be taken next Monday when preparations will be made to blow up the heavy earth dyke, now the only barrier between the Miraflores locks and tide water on the Pacific side, three miles away.

There will be nothing spectacular about the destruction of the dyke. Its base will be perforated by a number of holes heavily charged with dynamite, then for five days fresh water from the Rio Grande diversion, one of the rivers in the canal zone, will be turned into the canal prism, and when the water is near the leved of the sea water on the other side, the charge will be set off.

BANDITS ATTACK RULERS

Chauffeur Saves King and Queen of Roumania From Gypsies

Vienna, Aug. 22.—A special dispatch from Bucharest says the Queen of Roumania (Carmen Sylva) and King Charles had a narrow escape when gypsy bandits attacked the automobile in which they were riding.

They were saved, it is said, only by the presence of mind of the royal chauffeur, who turned on the full power of the machine and dashed through the band, knocking down several of the gypsies.

Hot Time In Oldtown

Oldtown, Me., Aug. 22.—Fire thought to have been caused by spontaneous combustion in the stock room of the Keith shoe factory caused a loss of $113,000. Six houses and several private individuals sustained losses estimated at from $150 to $2000 apiece.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col. John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

CONNECTICUT'S PEACH CROP.

Arrangements for handling the shipment of Connecticut's peach crop have been completed by the transportation department of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, and 125 ventilated cars and 40 refrigerator cars have been fitted up with shelves for this special rush traffic.

It is estimated that the peach crop of Connecticut this year will be from 750,000 to 900,000 baskets, and the New Haven Railroad will be called upon to transport about one-half the crop. In order to handlt the shipments as rapidly as possible, special trains on regular schedule have been arranged for, instructions have been issued to agents at loading points to keep in touch with shippers and to place orders for cars for the following day as early as possible, and chief train dispatchers, yardmasters and agents have received special instructions for the handling of equipment assigned to the peach service.

Shipments of peaches from points in Connecticut will be made to Providence, Boston, New Bedford, Fall River, Worcester, Springfield, Pittsfield, Bridgeport, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and points in Pennsylvania and west of the Hudson River. To some of these places special trains will run daily during the season, and to other points the peach cars will be attached to the regular rush service.

One of the features of this peach service is the shelving of the equipment assigned to transport the crop. As the peaches are shipped in baskets it is impossible to pack them in the cars one basket on top of another. It has been found expedient, therefore, to erect temporary shelves in the cars, thereby increasing their capacity about three hundred per cent.

Connecticut is the leading peach growing state of New England. The crop is valued at over $500,000, and although there are several other states that raise larger peach crops than Connecticut, such as Georgia and New York, yet on an acreage basis she is one of the leading peach growing states in the country.

—It seems strange that business men will carry large amounts of money with them or that wealthy people will have in their houses fortunes in jewels to attract thieves. The business man can just as well make all his payments by check or draft, and the person with money enough to sport jewels worth $75,000 or $100,000 can well afford to have an armed guard to protect them.—Waltham Free Press.

PECULIAR SWISS FARMING.

Farmers are usually considered a very stationary class of people not given to frequent removes; but in a little Swiss valley near the source of the Rhone River are about two thousand peasant farmers, who from the nature of their conditions are freuently on the move. There are groups of habitations wherever there is land to till or pasturage, and the farmers live wherever there is work to be done, leaving one house empty to move into another so that some families may own several houses.

At any season of the year entire families may be seen either ascending or decending the valley with their herds or household goods as though they were leaving the country. At the head of each procession is a mule carrying the farmer; the mother and children follow, and behind them come the cattle, goats, sheep and pigs. Throughout the valley, which is only thirteen miles long, are large unmber of houses and barns seemingly without a single tenant. In December and January the peasant farmers with their live stock are grouped in the lower pastures; in February they are living in their villages where the largest amount of hay is stored; they move down the valley in March to work in their vineyards near the river; and in April they move back to their villages to plant their fields and gardens; in May and June they move again to the pasture regions.

In summer part of them attend to live stock at the pastures; some work in the vineyards and others attend to their garden crops, etc. In the fall all the farmers go down to the vineyards by the river to harvest grapes and make wine. They move from place to place not only for convenience, but in order to take their live stock with them for enriching the soil. At each of the stations outside of the villages each family has a house and barn wth a stable under it, a granary and a cellar.

These pecular people are farmers of the old-fashioned type, raising everything nearly that they need on their own lands. The soil supplies them with bread, fruit and wine; they build their own houses, make their own furniture, spin yarn, weave cloth and make their own shoes from the hides of their cattle.

The women are hard workers, helping the men in summer and weaving garments and braiding straw hats in winter. They are simple, honest people, with primitive manners, and content with a ration of milk, cheese, coarse bread, and in winter dried meat, this simple fare they will set before strangers, never thinking of asking payment.

IRIS COMES TO FRONT

Close Race for Class D Yachts in Hull Series

There were 46 starters in the second day's race of the mid-summer series under the auspices of the Boston Yacht club off Hull on Thursday. In the sonder class the Cima, Ellen and Meave II were entered and they finished in the order named.

Local interest however was centered in the class D boats all of which belong to the Quincy club. Six of this class were entered and the race was won by the Iris. It was a nice southeasterly breeze which greeted the fleet, and reefs were required on all boats except those of the larger classes.

In class D it was a close race betwen the Iris and Dolly III, the former winning by 21 seconds corrected time. The Dartwell which has been winning, almost everything in sight this year finished at the bottom of the list, while the Clara which has also won several firsts, finished in the next to the bottom position. The corrected time of this class was as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Iris F. F. Crane | 1:36:19 |
| Dolly III, W. W. Arnold | 1:36:40 |
| Grayling, C. V. Nickerson | 1:37:58 |
| Mudjekeewis, E. W. Emery | 1:38:12 |

SENATE BACKS THE PRESIDENT

For Open and Peaceful Dealing With Mexican Situation

WAR TALK IS DEPRECATED

Point Raised by Resolution of Penrose, Who Would Send United States Troops Across the Border and Asks For $25,000,000 Appropriation For the Purpose

Washington, Aug. 22.—The senate is heartily in accord with the efforts of President Wilson to deal openly and peaceably with the Mexican situation.

The entire senate is in accord with those efforts—the Republicans as well as the Democrats. Moreover, the anti-war sentiment in the senate has developed such strength that it is plain that the senate will not tolerate the printing in the Congressional Record of any articles from newspapers, the result of which would be to inflame or misinform public opinion on the situation.

This is the attitude of the senate as it became manifest after a remarkable debate, in the course of which it was proposed that the president take the senate into his confidence in executive session.

During the debate, which centred around a resolution introduced by Senator Penrose asking for $25,000,000 to be placed at the disposal of the president to protect American life and property in Mexico, senator after senator rose on each side of the chamber and urged peace and the suppression of war talk.

Discussion opened over the question of the reference of the resolution, Senator Bacon, chairman of the foreign relations committee, maintaining it should go to his committee. In this contention he was supported by Senator Lodge, who stated that it is the feeling of that committee that all matters pertaining to Mexico should be considered by that committee.

To this Penrose agreed, but sent to the desk an article from the El Paso Times, presumably containing an account of depredations upon American property near Durango, in which neighborhood, Penrose stated, wealthy citizens of Pittsburg have invested many millions.

The amendment for the emergency appropriation, Penrose explained, was similar to a provision in an appropriation act just prior to the Spanish war, and he asked that the amendment lie on the table in the senate until the bill comes over from the house.

"The administration has asked for $100,000 to take Americans out of Mexico," said Penrose after announcing he would not discuss the resolution. "I think they have a right to be in Mexico under our treaties and under international law. We have no right to attempt to break up their homes and occupations. Rather than appropriate this pittance of $100,000 to make this wholesale removal, I would appropriate this $25,000,000 to keep them where they are and protect them."

The Penrose resolution draws attention to the Monroe Doctrine and to the possibility that continued destruction of property in Mexico would involve international complications and intervention by European nations. The resolution specially declares "it is not the policy of the government of the United States to recognize or assist any faction or factions in the republic of Mexico," and proposed:

"That the President of the United States be required to take such steps as are necessary to place a sufficient number of United States troops as a constabulary in the republic of Mexico wherever and at such points as, in his opinion, they may be needed, properly to police and protect citizens of the United States and their property, and it is hereby declared that such protection of the lives and property of American citizens is not made with any intent that such policing and protection shall be construed as an act of hostility or unfriendliness toward the Mexican nation."

Penrose said that in a day or two he would "make a few remarks" on the appropriation amendment and his resolution.

President Wilson is at work on a special message, which he will probably read to both houses of congress Monday, relating in detail the negotiations which have been conducted through his personal representative, John Lind, with the Huerta government in Mexico.

The decision to make a comprehensive statement on the situation to congress was reached after the president had about concluded that the negotiations between Lind and Huerta since the exchange of notes had developed no new basis for discussion.

With his message, the president will present the two notes, setting forth the American suggestions to the Huerta government and its reply.

NEW ROADS BLOOM FORTH IN MISSOURI

Great Work Is Completed by Big Citizen Army

Kansas City, Aug. 22.—Encouraged by the results of their efforts Wednesday, when, according to Governor Major's estimates, 200 miles of new roads were built, Missouri's good roads army yesterday completed the work so well begun.

Although the number of volunteers who engaged in the first day's campaign exceeded expectations, a large number wielded the picks and shovels yesterday.

In some districts farming operations were practically suspended, the farmers having decided the road improvement was the most important work in which they could engage.

Governor Major is elated with the success achieved.

HARRISON CONFIRMED

New Governor General Suits Philippine House of Delegates

Washington, Aug. 22.—The senate unanimously confirmed the nomination of Francis B. Harrison of New York as governor general of the Philippines.

Harrison called at the White House to thank President Wilson for the appointment and arrange for a conference on Philippine policies. With him went Manuel Quezon, delegate to congress from the Philippines, who carried a cablegram received from the speaker of the house of delegates in Manila, indorsing the selection of Harrison.

TO BE PAID FOR LABOR

New Law Affecting Ohio Convicts Into Effect Next Month

Columbus, O., Aug. 22.—Convicts serving terms in the Ohio penitentiary and their dependents will be given compensation for their labor on and after Sept. 1.

The amount of compensation to prisoners will range from 1 to 5 cents per hour, and the gradings will be based upon character, industrial efficiency and good conduct.

The law providing for this was passed at a recent session of the legislature.

Johnson Engagement Condemned

London, Aug. 22.—The engagement of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, by a London music hall was condemned at a meeting of the executive committee of the Variety Artists' federation.

Acrobat Killed In Mine

Mt. Pleasant, Pa., Aug. 22.—Harry Rowe, 20, gave up the life of a stage acrobat because his mother thought it dangerous. He went to work in a mine and was crushed to death.

PLOT AGAINST MAYOR GAYNOR

Dynamite Near His Office In New York City Hall

ENOUGH TO WRECK BUILDING

Death and Disaster Averted by Fuse Leading to Detonating Cap Being Too Tightly Rolled—Many Threatening Letters Received by Executive Since He Has Been In Office

New York, Aug. 22.—Mayor Gaynor was saved from death and the New York city hall from being blown to atoms by a deadly charge of dynamite only because a strip of cotton wool was wrapped so tightly about the fuse that the spark could not reach the detonator.

Three whole sticks and two half sticks of dynamite made up the charge, which, experts say, was sufficient to have wrecked the city hall. It lay on a basement door, within sixty feet of the mayor's window.

Close to the explosive was a piece of Chinese punk and several burnt matches. The only clue that might lead to the identification of the leaders in the dynamite plot is a piece of heavy cambric, in which the dynamite and fuse were wrapped. The cloth is blue, with red and white figures, and resembles fillets worn by Italian women of the working class.

Nearly one hundred bombs have been exploded in New York city this year by Black Handers and much damage has been done.

A partly smoked cigar found near the dynamite is thought to have been thrown there by a passerby, for hundreds of smokers pass the area way and many of them throw away cigar butts there.

Mayor Gaynor would make no statement regarding a possible connection with the finding of the dynamite and a threatening letter, of which he has received a number during his term of office. When he was notified of the discovery of the explosive he showed little concern, and remained working at his desk while police officers drew a cordon about the dynamite to keep back the excited crowd.

The bureau of combustibles found the explosive to be the regulation blasting dynamite. It was arranged in lattice formation, with the two small pieces resting on the three ten-inch sticks. A partly burned four-inch fuse, made of gunpowder tightly rolled in a paper cylinder, led to a detonating cap on one of the half sticks of dynamite. The cambric in which the explosive was wrapped was tied with red and blue twine.

Gaynor was shot in the neck three years ago this month, and was so badly wounded that for several days it was thought he would die.

An investigation is being made to determine whether some previous menace in the mayor's mail gave some warning of the attempt to destroy the city hall.

A DRAMATIC STRUGGLE

Governor of Jolo Kills Two Moros Who Treacherously Attack Him

Manila, Aug. 22.—Vernon, L. Whitney of Iowa, governor of Jolo, had a narrow escape when attacked treacherously by Moros. He received five barong wounds, but will probably recover.

Whitney had just completed an inspection of the scout camp at Bual Looc and had sent his interpreter to order his launch. The interpreter was attacked by Moros, but escaped.

Whitney heard of the attack, and as he ran to investigate he met two Moros, who approached in a friendly manner and then suddenly attacked him. Whitney clinched with one of the Moros while he shot and killed the other, and then after a struggle wrested the barong from the other man and finished him with it. During the struggle, however, Whitney received bad wounds.

BANDITS MURDER CASHIER

Take All Cash In Sight In German Bank and Escape In Auto

Hamburg, Aug. 22.—A robbery which culminated in murder occurred at the Communal Savings bank at Wilhelmsburg, a suburb of Hamburg.

Two men drove up to the bank in a taxicab and one, entering the building, leveled revolvers at two young clerks, who scurried for shelter. The cashier of the institution, an aged man, in an attempt to save the money in his care until help could be summoned, fought with the two men, but was shot dead.

The bandits then appropriated all the cash in sight and escaped in the automobile.

A Night Long and Happily Remembered

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Molly Dearborn's father signaled the trolley car at the corner of the village street and helped Kitty Baker up the high step to one of the front seats.

"Thank you, Mr. Dearborn; good night," cried Kitty, waving her hand as he swung off the moving car.

"Good night," he called back, adding to the conductor as the rear of the car passed him, "Please let that young lady off at Belmont street."

The conductor shouted back some answer, and the almost empty car whizzed away into the darkness of the surrounding country.

"Grandmother will scold," she thought, turning up the collar of her coat and lifting her face to the strong breeze that swept through the open car. "She will tell me that Bakers and Witherams always rode in their own carriages and that no lady returned home unescorted from any merrymaking. But we are quite poor now, and our days of splendor are past. As long as I work side by side in the same office as Molly I must use the same vehicle that she does."

Kitty smiled a little as she thought of the errand that had taken her to Molly's that August evening. Molly was to be married, and Kitty had gone out to Homedale to see all the dainty details of the trousseau and to discuss the simple plans. She was to be bridesmaid when Molly was married in the village church.

The conductor thrust a calloused, blackened palm under her pretty nose, and Kitty fumbled for a nickel and paid it. The bell jangled several times; then there was nothing save the flash of the car toward the city between walls of green trees on either side of the track.

Thinking of weddings reminded Kitty of one that might have been hers if her pride had not caused her to break troth with Len Thornleigh when the Baked fortune went to smash at her father's death. It had been Len's first year at college, and he had chafed bitterly because he must wait three years before he could leave and support her. He wanted to break off and go into his father's business without completing his college career, but the great magnate had demurred and held Len to a promise made years before.

Kitty had not seen Len since she had sent him that cruel letter that made him see light at last. Nothing but cruelty would have opened his eyes. She closed her eyes now, and a strangled sob rose to her lips as she thought of the last three years of waiting.

They stopped at a little hooded station and changed conductors. Kitty Baker never knew it. She sat there drowsily, her face very tender, thinking of Len Thornleigh.

The bell ringing up fares roused her a little, and she groped for another five cent piece. There was nothing left in her purse save a silver quarter. She held it in her gloved fingers, waiting for the conductor.

When he came she did not look up. He leaned across the intervening space and held out his hand.

Kitty stared down at the hand. It was very different from the hand of the other conductor. This was a clean, brown, muscular looking hand, with well kept nails and a plain gold ring on the little finger.

It was a familiar hand. A sudden horror smote Kitty Baker, and she thrust forward the silver quarter. Somehow it spun away out of her fingers and went into the darkness.

"Oh!" she cried sharply. "I haven't another penny with me!" Then she looked into his face and saw that if the hand was the hand of Len Thornleigh the face certainly belonged to the son of the great financier. His eyes met hers uncertainly, steadied and became bits of gray agate.

It could not be Len, for he did not recognize her. It was a wonderful resemblance.

"That was all the money I had," apologized Kitty. "What shall I do?"

"You can pay me another time," he said gravely and touched his hat. He rang up her fare and went away to the back of the car.

Kitty sat paralyzed with surprise. It was Len Thornleigh's voice she had heard too.

Her good sense told her that this was absurd—to imagine that this trolley conductor could be Len Thornleigh! Why, Len drove around in his own high power motorcars, and she had read only the day before that his father was building a great country house at Marblehead.

The car whistled shrilly as it went down the steep incline that approached a narrow bridge over the little river. As they rumbled over the bridge the car slackened speed and came to a sudden standstill at the same instant that the lights went out.

The conductor went forward and sat down with the motorman. They talked together in low tones. Kitty looked back through the car and saw one man sitting alone on the rear seat. He appeared to be asleep, although he stirred as she looked at him.

It was very quiet there waiting for the power to return to the trolley cables. Kitty yawned sleepily and wondered if grandmother would scold very much when she returned home.

She closed her eyes, and the wind blew little tendrils of her brown hair over her white forehead.

A hot breath on her neck roused her instantly.

"Might as well be sociable," said a thick voice behind her, and she turned to find that the solitary passenger had walked along the running board and taken a seat back of her. "Don't care how long we stay, do you?" He laughed recklessly, and Kitty sat there frozen with horror.

If the conductor or the motorman would only turn around!

"S'pose I might as well sit beside you," mumbled the man as he essayed to climb over the seat.

"Please don't!" cried Kitty, unaware of the sharp terror in her voice.

A dark form swung into view from the front platform, and the motorman thrust his head through the open front window.

The conductor pushed the loafer back into the seat and hustled him into the rear of the car. "Stay there," he ordered sternly, "or I'll put you off—understand?"

The loafer grumbled himself into uneasy slumber, and the conductor came up and stood at the end of Kitty's seat. Kitty could see his form outlined against the open end.

"I am sorry he frightened you," he said courteously. "I should not have left the car only I thought he was asleep."

"It is no matter," trembled Kitty. "Must we wait long?"

"I cannot say. There is something wrong at the power house. The service has been poor all day."

He sat down on the end of her seat and removed his cap, letting the wind ruffle his hair. He did not address her again.

Kitty knew that he was sitting there to protect her, and she felt a grateful stir of warmth at his thoughtfulness It was what one would expect from a man that looked so much like Len Thornleigh!

Suddenly he put up his hand and rumpled his hair in such a familiar manner that Kitty Baker overstepped the bounds of conventionality and exclaimed:

"Len!"

Like a flash he turned toward her and sat staring. In that instant the light flared up and revealed her face. Again they were in darkness, but he was sliding along the seat toward her. "Kitty! Is it really you?" he asked hoarsely.

"Why, Len, Len, it is you after all!" she half sobbed.

Somehow her hands were in his and he was holding them tightly, shaking them up and down.

"What are you doing here?" he asked brusquely, as one unaccustomed to seeing his womankind riding unprotected in public vehicles at midnight.

Kitty told him frankly, finding a delicious sense of relief in talking to him again.

"And you?" she asked at last.

"Working—earning my living," he said grimly.

"Then you are poor. Something has happened. Oh, Len, I am so glad!" Kitty's voice was betraying.

"Now that I am a wage earner you can tell me if you love me," he said gently.

"Oh, Len, of course I do!" sobbed Kitty on his shoulder, and the motorman discreetly turned his back upon them.

"And you will marry me?" he asked after an interval.

"Yes," she whispered, "if you can take grandmother too."

"Of course. I wish there were more of you to take, uncles and cousins and aunts," he chuckled gayly, then suddenly: "But how about my father's money? You hate the stuff."

"Yes, in a way, only I felt I could not hold you to your promise when I was so poor, and—and—I thought you were working for your living now." Kitty drew away from his arms.

"I am. When you drew that line against my money I went to father and told him if I went through college I would earn every penny myself. I couldn't let the girl I loved go out to work every day and be such a drone myself. He let me do it, and I've done all sorts of things, Kitty. This trolley work is fine and cool and healthy in the summer time!" He laughed a big, healthy laugh.

"Your—father—was disappointed?"

"Not in the least. Guess what his last words were when I took this job, Kitty?" There was laughter in his voice.

"Tell me."

"'Go out and grub for your living. It won't hurt you. And if you can find that little girl of yours—Dan Baker's daughter—just kidnap her and tell her there is a big, lonesome house waiting for her here.'" Len's voice was very tender when he concluded.

"And grandmother, too?" asked Kitty weakly.

"Room for a dozen like her. You know all our women folks have died," said Len in a hushed voice.

"Len, I believe you need us," whispered Kitty, and this time she did not resist when his arms went around her.

The lights flared up again as the power returned to stay now, and Len went back to his post while the car went on toward the city, leaving the bridge behind—that mystical bridge that had brought these two parted lovers so strangely together again.

The motorman glanced back into the car. He saw Kitty's happy, blushing face dreaming there on the front seat. He saw Thornleigh's beaming countenance on the back platform and sent him an understanding signal of congratulation and good fellowship.

"Thornleigh found his girl," he thought to himself, and he stared toward the approaching city, thinking of the girl waiting there for him.

THEIR EYES BELIE THEM.

Seals Are Ferocious and Devour Live Fish Inch by Inch.

Seals are still numerous and are disliked by Labrador fishermen because their skill is so much greater. Dr. Grenfell says that he has known a seal to haunt a net so persistently that to get any fish the owner had to watch all the while at one end of it, and even then the seal would almost snap off the fisherman's hand as he raced to be first to disentangle the salmon.

"The large, gentle eye makes the seal's appearance exceedingly attractive and those inclined to be sentimental have found in him a great scope for their effusions. As a matter of fact, he eats his prey alive. He will take a bite out of a fish and leave the rest to struggle away and die slowly. They are fierce fighters and will catch and eat birds swimming on the surface of the water.

One was seen devouring a salmon alive. The seal swallowed him by inches, swimming a mile while the struggle lasted. It seemed an open question whether he would succeed or not. Another seal was seen to capture a gull on the water, but the persistent harrying he got from the rest of the birds persuaded him to let the wounded victim go.—Chicago News.

MANAGERIAL ABILITY.

If You Think You Possess It Here Is a Test You Might Try.

Any one who has to manage men or things must be able quickly to bring order out of confusion. Test your friend's talent in this respect by writing on your paper five words of a special class, such as the names of five flowers or of five animals or of five famous poets, with the first letter always in the right place, while the order of the other letters is changed.

The person on whom you are experimenting knows only to which class the words belong—whether they are the names of animals or of flowers or of poets. See how long it takes him to write the five correct words in place of the misspelled ones.

The animal card may read, "Tetrul, etalenph, dyseno, serdip, galliro," and the vegetable card, "Velito, diloffad, melap, moroshnu, cuttnesh." Some persons will be able to read at once, "Turtle, elephant, donkey, spider, gorilla," and the other card, "Violet, daffodil, maple, mushroom, chestnut."

Others who have no talent for rearranging the elements of a confused situation will stare at the words, unable to make any sense of them.—Hugo Munsterberg in Youth's Companion.

Reasonable Mistrust.

"Now let us try," she said, "to keep the other passengers from discovering that we are a bride and bridegroom."

"All right, dearest," he replied. "How shall we deceive them?"

"Buy a couple of magazines, and we will pretend to be busy reading them and avoid noticing each other."

"That's a fine idea, sweetheart. I'll get them right away."

Twenty minutes later:

"Lovey!"

"What is it, dearest?"

"You are holding your magazine upside down."

"Oh, George! If you are going to begin being critical now how shall I ever be able to please you after we have been married for five years."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Oriental Gems.

All gems of the finest quality, irrespective of the part of the world from which they come, are generally spoken of as "Oriental," because the supply of precious stones came only from the east for many centuries; and when mines were discovered in the west, it was at first assumed that the stones were inferior. "Occidental" is the term applied to inferior stones to this day.

On the other hand, "Oriental topaz," "Oriental emerald" and "Oriental amethyst" are really all sapphires, and are given these names only on account of their color.

The Old School Slate.

Remember the old school slates, bound in red flannel to prevent the noise of slate rattling that used to become unbearable until manufacturers found how to muffle them? Stores selling school supplies used to carry great stocks of them, for it was a rare day in a room that did not see a slate or two broken; but where are they all now? Since the boards of health decided that they were insanitary and decreed against them the whole tribe has disappeared.—Columbus Dispatch.

On the Safe Side.

She—It's a wonder you wouldn't take a notion to use soap and water. He—I have though of it, mum, but there's so many kinds of soap and it's so hard to tell which is and which is not injurious to the skin that I didn't like to take any risks.—Puck.

Quite a Difference.

"Let's see. You live in a flat, don't you?"

"N-not exactly. We occupy a suit of apartments."

"What's the difference?"

"About $35 a month."—Chicago Tribune.

Keep Busy.

If you keep reasonably busy the chances are that you will get into little mischief. This recipe is good for either sex.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Fashion Hint.

If some women were wedded to their husbands as they are to fashion, how they would love, honor and obey!—New Orleans Picayune.

CHAPTER VII.

The Would Be Brother-in-law.

THE next morning, bright and early, Mr. Alfred Rodney, a telegram in his hand, charged down the hall to Mrs. Medcroft's door. With characteristic far west impulsiveness he banged on the door. A sleepy voice asked who was there.

"It's me—Rodney. Get up. I want to see Medcroft. Say, Roxbury, wake up!"

"Roxbury?" came in shrill tones from within. "He— Isn't he upstairs? Good heaven, Mr. Rodney, what has happened? What has happened?"

"Upstairs? What the deuce is he doing upstairs?"

"He's—he's sleeping! Do tell me what's the matter!"

"Isn't this Mr. Medcroft's room?"

"Ye-es—but he isn't in. He objects to the noise. Oh, has anything happened to Roxbury?" She was standing just inside the door, and her voice betrayed agitation.

"My dear Edith, don't get excited. I have a telegram from"—

She uttered a shriek.

"He's been assassinated! Oh, Roxbury!"

"What the dev— Are you crazy? It's a telegram from"—

"Oh, heavens, I knew they'd kill him; I knew something dreadful would happen if I left"— Here she stopped suddenly. He distinctly heard her catch her breath. After a moment she went on warily, "Is it from a man named Hobart?"

"No. It's from Odell-Carney. Hobart? I don't know anybody named Hobart." How was he to know that Hobart was the name that Medcroft had chosen for correspondence purposes? "We're to meet the Odell-Carneys today in Munich. No time to be lost. We've got to catch the 9 o'clock train."

"Oh!" came in great relief from the other side of the door. Then in sudden dismay: "But I can't do it! The idea of getting up at an hour like this!"

"What room is Roxbury in?"

"I don't know!" in very decided tones. "Inquire at the office."

Alfred Rodney was a persevering man. It is barely possible that he occupied a lower social plane than that attained by his wife, but he was a man of accomplishment, if not accomplishments. He always did what he set out to do. Be it said in defense of this assertion he not only routed out his entire protesting flock, but had them at the West-Bahnhof in time to catch the Orient express—luggage, accessories and all. Be it also said that he was the only one in the party save Constance and Tootles who took to the situation amiably.

"Dash the Odell-Carneys!" was what Freddie Ulstervelt said as the train drew out of the station. Brock looked up approvingly.

"That's the first sensible thing I've heard him say," he muttered, loud enough to be heard by Miss Fowler. "I say, who are the Odell-Carneys? First I've heard of 'em."

"The Odell-Carneys? Oh, dear, have you never heard of them?" she cried in surprise. He felt properly rebuked. "They are very swell Londoners. It is said"—

"Then, good heavens, they'll know I'm not Medcroft," he whispered in alarm.

"Not at all, my dear Roxbury. That's just where you're wrong. They don't know Roxbury the first. I've gone over it all with Edith. She's just crazy to get into the Odell-Carney set. I regret to say that they have failed to notice the Medcrofts up to this time. Secretly, Edith has ambitions. She has gone to the lord mayor's dinners and to the Royal Antiquarians and to Sir John Brodney's and a lot of other functions on the outer rim, but she's never been able to break through the crust and taste the real sweets of London society. My dear Roxbury, the Odell-Carneys entertain the nobility without compunction, and they've been known to hobnob with royalty. Mrs. Odell-Carney was a Lady Somebody-or-other before she married the second time. She's terribly smart, Roxbury."

"How, in the name of heaven, do they happen to be hobnobbing, as you call it, with the Rodneys, may I ask?"

"Well, it seems that Odell-Carney is promoting a new South African mining venture. I have it from Freddie Ulstervelt that he's trying to sell something like a million shares to Mr. Rodney, who has loads of money that came from real mines in the far west. He'd never be such a fool as to sink a million in South Africa, you know, but he's just clever enough to see the advantage of keeping Odell-Carney in tow, as it were. It means a great deal to Mrs. Rodney, don't you know, Roxbury, to be able to say that she toured with the Odell-Carneys. Freddie says that Cousin Alfred is talking in a very diplomatic manner of going to London in August to look fully into the matter. It is understood that the Rodneys are to be the guests of the Odell-Carneys while in London. It won't be the season, of course, so there won't be much of a commotion in the smart set. It is our dear Edith's desire to slip into the charmed circle through the rift that the Rodneys make. Do you comprehend?"

They were seated side by side in the corner of the compartment, his broad back screening her as much as possible from the persistent glances of Freddie Ulstervelt, who was nobly striving to confine his attentions to Katherine. Brock's eyes were devouring her exquisite face with a greediness that might have caused her some uneasiness if there had not been something pleasantly agreeable in his way of doing it.

"Yes—faintly," he replied after an almost imperceptible conflict between the senses of sight and hearing. "But how does she intend to explain me away? I'll be a dreadful skeleton in her closet if it comes to that. When she is obliged to produce the real Roxbury, what then?"

"She's thought it all out, Roxbury," said Constance severely, but almost inaudibly. "I'm sure Freddie heard part of what you said. Do be careful. She's going to reveal the whole plot to Mrs. Odell-Carney just as soon as Roxbury gives the word, treating it as a very clever and necessary ruse, don't you see. Mrs. Odell-Carney will be implored to aid in the deception for a few days, and she'll consent, because she's really quite a bit of a sport. At the psychological moment the Rodneys will be told. That places Mrs. Odell-Carney in the position of being an abettor or accomplice. She's had the distinction of being a sharer in a most glorious piece of strategy. Don't you see how charmingly it will all work in the end?"

"What are you two whispering about?" demanded Freddie Ulstervelt noisily, patience coming to an end.

"Wha-what the devil is that to"—began Brock furiously. Constance brought him up sharp with a warning kick on the ankle. He vowed afterward that he would carry the mark to his grave.

"He's telling me what a nice chap you are, Freddie," said she sweetly. Brock glared out of the window. Freddie sniffed scornfully.

"I'm getting sick of this job," growled Brock under his breath. "I didn't calculate on"—

"Now, Roxbury, dear, don't be a bear," she pleaded so gently, her eyes so full of appeal, that he flushed with sudden shame and contrition.

"Forgive me," he said, the old light coming back into his eyes so strongly that she quivered for an instant before lowering her own. "I hate that confounded puppy," he explained lamely, guarding his voice with a new care. "If you felt as I do you would too."

She laughed in the old way, but she was not soon to forget that moment when panic was so imminent.

"I—I don't see how any one can help liking Freddie," she said without actually knowing why. He stared hard at the Danube below. After a long silence he said:

AT EAGLES PICNIC.

Howard P. Drew ran 120 yards from 2 1-2 yards behind scratch at the Eagles picnic at Providence, R. I. Thursday in 12 seconds flat, a fifth of a second slower than the record. Fay Phelan wearing the North Dorchester colors was second. Phelan had a handicap of 1 1-2 years. W. L. Powell of the same club, whose home is in East Milton, was third in the 440 yard dash.

HOME-MADE BAROMETER.

Changes in the weather may be foretold by a very simple, home-made instrument, a water barometer, described as follows by a writer in the Scientific American: "It is composed of a two-pound glass jar and a glass oil flask. The jar is about half filled with water and the flask put head downward into the liquid. Placed in a shady spot where the temperature s farly even, it will be observed that the height of the water in the neck of the flask is constantly varying—in fact, it is acting on the same line an the more elaborate barometer. In order to obtain some idea as to the movement of the water, it is a good plan to mark the stem of the flask into lengths of an inch. A little experience will soon teach the owner as to how much importance to attach to the movement of the water barometer. However, a decided rise is a good sign of fine weather, while when the water is low in the tube stormy weather may be expected."

Damage by Rodents.

Rats are said to do damage estimated at $3,000,000 in Chicago every year.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

GRANITE DEALERS

unable to go further. The train was backed down the hill again to the scales and two cars taken up at a time.

The stop on the hill was made near the siding leading to one of the Railway Co. quarries and to the quarry of J. S. Swingle, "the Extra Dark Man." The party disembarked here and walked up the hill and took a view of these two quarries. They were especially struck with the depth of the Swingle quarry and the men at work 205 feet below the surface looked like little specks.

From this point the cars were pushed up near the Blue Hill and Lyons quarry, but owing to lack of time no stop was made. The trip down the hill was begun at 11.20 and when about half way down one of the driving wheels of the big mogul left the iron. The train was moving slowly at the time and it was quickly stopped.

This meant that the party had to leave the cars and walk down the tracks to the Railway yard. Here some of the party took occasion to look at the big power plant connected with this yard. In the plant is an Ingersol and Rand air compressor, which is capable of generating 2588 feet of air per minute. This compressed air plant operates all of the pneumatic tools operated by the company as well as two hoisting engines. The advantage of air over steam is that with air there is no steam to obstruct the view of the engineer.

From the Railway quarry the cars were taken for City Square. Some of the cars made the run via of South Quincy going past several of the cutting plants while others came direct to Quincy via Adams street.

All arrived at the rooms of the Board of Trade at noon which were prettily decorated with flags for the occasion. The men in the party were taken into the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers. Here the members of the Board of Trade headed by President John L. Hamilton, ex-President Charles C. Hearn, A. L. Whitman and others saw to it that the visitors were provided for. The lunch consisted of sandwiches and hot coffee and was simply to stay the hunger of the party until Nantasket was reached.

Here the visitors were briefly welcomed by Mayor Stone. His Honor was introduced by Alfred C. Diack, chairman of the entertainment committee. His Honor spoke briefly as follows:

WELCOME TO CITY.

In extending the freedom of the city to the visiting delegates, Mayor Stone said:

"It gives me great pleasure to welcome the members ot this association to the City of Presidents, the largest granite manufacturing city in the United States. As Mayor of Quincy, I welcome you and invite you to visit our public buildings, our granite quarries and other industries of the city.

The citizens of Quincy have every reason to feel honored that you have favored them with your presence here today. Meetings of this kind are not only instructive to the manufacturer himself, but are of great value to the customers to whom he sells his product, as by looking over the plants of the different places, and coming in contract with the business men, the ideas and experience gained are not only a benefit to the trade itself but to the people at large.

I am sorry that time will not permit of your remaining with us longer, for here in Quincy, there is much to see and enjoy. I sincerely trust that you will all enjoy yourselves in Quincy, and feel that you have been well repaid for your visit to our city."

After speaking to the men of the party His Honor went into the rooms of the Board of Trade and gave the same welcome to the ladies. He also said that he regretted that time did not permit their remaining longer for they would be sure to find the latch string out at all of the industries in the city.

While the party were in City Square a moving picture man took their picture and it will be seen later at Kincaide's theatre.

The assembling of 65 or 70 automobiles in City Square at one time made quite an imposing sight and gave the city an air of a busy place.

Leaving City Suare shortly after noon some of the cars made quick run through the South Quincy granite district and then went via Quincy avenue and Howard street to the Fore River shipyard.

About an hour was allowed for the visit to the Fore River yard and this was one of the most interesting places visited, outside of the granite quarries, in which most of the party were directly interested. At the Fore River yard they saw the battleship Nevada, which is about ready for launching and several other vessels in various processes of completion.

The working of some of the delicate and almost human like machinery at the plant was a marvel to many of the visitors.

Leaving the Fore River the run took the party directly to Nantasket, the ride to this point being a very pretty one and greatly enjoyed.

There were many who joined the party at Quincy and being unable to find room in the automobiles they took the special electric car which left City Square at 12.55. This party arrived at Nantasket about as soon as did the automobile party.

At Nantkasket opportunity was afforded to see some of the many interesting things at Paragon park until 2.30 when dinner was announced. It needed but one blast of the bugle to call the wanderers to the Palm Garden where the dinner was served.

The program after dinner included a short time for visiting places about the beach until 4 o'clock when a special steamer was taken for a sail in the harbor. It was planned that the steamer should take the party out as far as the lightship and from there it went directly to Boston which was reached early in the evening.

WHY, HOW VERY ABSURD.

The teleprone bell rang. A feninine voice came over the wire. "Can you tell me what car to take from Scollay Square so as to get to Salem by 11.30?"

"You will have to take the next car which leaves the Brattle Street entrance to the subway at 10.07. That will get you to Salem at 11.22,"

"What makes it leave then, I would like to know?" again queried the voice.

"Why, that is the regular schedule time,"

"The idea. Why, how absurd to have it leave at that time. I can't possibly get it. I can't take my cake out of the oven for fifteen minutes yet. It's disgusting. I don't see why they don't run the cars to suit people's convenience."

Then she rang off. The clerk pondered a moment, then with an air of martyred resignation, turned to other things.

—By the two orders recently issued Postmaster-General Burleson further simplifies the postage stamp system in reducing the number of stamps issued by the government by seventeen. No more of the ten-cent registry stamps and parcel-post stamps will be printed. When the existing supplies of them are exhausted the use of all other than ordinary stamps will be discontinued except for special-delivery and postal-savings-bank purposes. A uniform postage-stamp system will prove a further great convenience to the public.

—It is reported that one of the big express companies is to enter into a working agreement with farmers' unions in the West, and proposes to do the same in the East, whereby it expects to displace the middlemen in the marketing of farm products. Such a course may result in helping both the express companies and the farmers, and certainly the former are in urgent need of help at this time, when the government is making such havoc with express company business.—Banker and Tradesman.

Printer's Ink to Make You Think

By HOLLAND.

MILLIONS of dollars are spent in this country every year to promote thinking. You are induced to think on all sorts of subjects at a vast expenditure of money. Some concerns want you to think about clothes, others want you to study the question of breakfast foods, while others want you to investigate the care of the teeth and think what sort of paste, powder or liquid wash is best for preserving them.

Advertising is the method by which these men are inducing you to think. They know that if you begin to think you will insist on the best, and each advertiser knows that his goods possess real merit. He knows it would not pay him to advertise something that would not stand the hard test of actual use.

If you will do the thinking the aim of the advertiser has been achieved, for you will in time try his goods. That is all he wants—just a trial. He will then depend on the goods to make a favorable impression. Advertising merely interests—makes you think.

THERE IS FOOD FOR THOUGHT IN OUR ADVERTISING COLUMNS.

USING SUDDEN WEALTH.

What Would You Do if You Fell Heir to Three Hundred Millions?

Some time ago a man was "knocking" Andrew Carnegie for "the crazy idea of putting up all those libraries," and finally for lack of something else to say, I asked him casually: "Well, what would you do if you had 300 millions dumped into your lap?"

He gulped once or twice, went into a sort of trance, and finally said: "Why I'd—I'd—why, blamed 'f I know"—and then we talked about something else.

Since then the subject has crossed my mind many times, and I am not sure that the proper solution is any nearer. If you ask the question of ten of your friends, you will at first get a funny answer from each of them:

"Buy me a yacht and travel all the time." "Build the finest home in the country." "Buy all the pork and beans in the world and throw them to the fishes," etc., these being a few of the actual answers given me. Afterward, on reflection, each one will really try to say what he would do, but the human mind finds it difficult to comprehend such an amount, or even the interest on it, which at 5 per cent would be $15,000,000 yearly.—International Magazine.

ELEPHANT COURTSHIP.

Feats of Strength by Which the Lady Chooses Her Mate.

When two male elephants compete for the companionship of a female they do not forget their dignity so far as to fight for the lady. They simply face each other squarely. Then one of them pulls down a branch from a tree with his trunk and lays it at his feet. The other takes a larger branch or pulls up a big shrub by the roots and also lays it at his feet.

Number one then tackles a still bigger branch, and this strange competition goes on, turn and turn about, until at last the contestants try to pull down trees wholesale, and the one who fails to uproot his tree in turn is abandoned by the lady elephant, who has been an interested spectator of the strange duel. She goes off with the possessor of the largest tree, and the vanquished elephant retires shame faced.

This trial of strength species of courtship is very remarkable when contrasted with the ordeal of battle of most other animals and shows the highly developed intelligence of these enormous creatures.—Wide World Magazine.

"Good Luck" Amulets.

Mr. Edward Lovett, in a lecture to the members of the Folk Lore society, explained his collection of amulets for good luck used by fishermen on the coasts of the British islands. It was with no small difficulty that he secured his specimens and certified their history. Luckily here and there he met old men of the sea who had no longer any direct personal interest in the wares of Billingsgate; for it was an unwritten law among the fishermen that to communicate the nature of the charm was to destroy its efficacy for good luck. These charms were anything but charming in themselves—old dead fish, small stones with holes in them which were suspended in the bow of the boat, an old penny found in the stomach of a dogfish which, because one fish evidently liked it, would entice other fish as well, or a portion of a dried kingfisher, as this bird was believed to bring good weather.—London Standard.

Changes of Climate.

A scientist who recently investigated the causes of secular variations in temperature at the earth's surface thinks that they are more probably due to changes in the amount of carbonic acid in the atmosphere than to variations in the heat of the sun. If the amount of carbonic acid that the air now contains was diminished a little more than half the mean temperature all over the earth would, it is stated, drop about eight degrees, which would be sufficient to bring on another glacial period. On the other hand, an increase of carbonic acid between two and three times its present amount would raise the mean temperature 15 degrees and renew the hot times of the eocene epoch.—Boston Post.

The Fall of Rome.

Odoacer, the Goth, was proclaimed king of Italy A. D. 476. This ended the Roman empire of the west. The Byzantine, or eastern empire, founded A. D. 395, with the division of the empire by Theodosius, fell A. D. 1453 with the capture of Constantinople by the Turks. In truth it cannot be said that any, or even two, nations overthrew Rome. Rome was overthrown by the pressure of the whole barbarian world, assisted by the inherent corruption of the Roman people.

QUINCY GRANITE MEN GOOD ENTERTAINERS

Visiting Dealers and Ladies Were Enthusiastic Over "Quincy Day"

Shore Dinner a Big Treat for the Delegates

The annual outing of the Granite Manufacturers' Association Friday, will go down in the history of the association as one of the most enjoyable of the many similar outings held by the association. The association also established a reputation among the visiting delegates to the Retail Monumental Dealers ' Association as royal entertainers, for nothing was too good for the visitors and every member of the Quincy Association exerted himself, so that for conventions to come, Quincy Day will be one that will be recalled by the delegates as a grand good time.

It was very evident to the casual observer to note that the delegates who had accepted the hospitality of the Quincy association in preference to that of the Barre association had made no mistake in their choce, for there was something doing from early morning until late at night.

To some of the delegates and their ladies from western cities, where a view of the salt water is never had, nor an opportunity of enjoying a shore dinner, it was indeed a treat, and they made the most of it.

The entertainment provided by the committee called for a variety of things. First, there came an automobile ride through part of the beautiful park system, which is the boast of the state. Then, a ride over a railroad, whose grade is the steepest of any regularly operated railroad in the country. A visit to one of the largest ship building plants in the country. A visit to the famous Nantasket beach with shore dinner and lastly a sail in Massachusetts bay.

The early morning trip through the park system, the quarries, Board of Trade entertainment, and visit to the ship yard were told in the Daily Ledger of Friday but the entertainment at Nantasket remains to be told.

As the day was also the occasion of the annual summer outing of the Manufacturers' Association a large number of the members joined the automobile party at Nantasket. This year's outing was also an innovation from the fact that for the first time ladies were included and a large number took advantage of the opportunity to find out for themselves why it is that their husbands and sweethearts are always so anxious to go to the association outings.

For the Quincy party the committee had arranged for special electric cars which left City Square at 12.55. There were also two other special cars near the Quincy Point bridge to take some of the automobile party, for some of those who kindly loaned their cars for the morning trip were unable to finish out the day, and their passengers were transferred to the cars at Quincy Point. Several of the eight wheel cars of the street railway company were required for the party and these made the trip to Nantasket without incident. As the cars sped along through North Weymouth, the first of the automobile party began to pass them and there seemed to be an almost endless stream of autos, each being decorated with blue pennants, upon which in letters of gold, it was announced that they were the "Quincy Day" party of the Granite Manufacturers' Association.

The automobiles arrived at Nantasket some time before the special cars and the visiting delegates, and ladies had plenty of opportunity to enjoy some of the many amusement places at Paragon Park. Some took in the flying horses, others the human roulette wheel, bump the bumps and various other amusements until the time for dinner.

Dinner was announced to be served at 2.30 sharp and ten minutes before that hour the bugle call for dinner rang out clear and loud.

No second call was necessary for everybody was hungry and there was a rush for the Palm Garden where the dinner was served. Nearly the whole of this large dining room was reserved for the party numbered nearly 600 which sat down to dinner and at 2.30 prompt to the minute the first course on the menu was served. The menu was as follows:

Steamed Clams
Fish Chowder
Queen Olives Radishes
Fried Chicken Lobster, Tartar Sauce
Fried Duxbury Clams
Saratoga Chips Green Corn
Baked Bluefish
String Beans Delmonico Potatoes
Vanilla and Strawbery Ice Cream
Demi Tasse

During the dinner there was music by Mace Gay's Brockton Band, which alternated with the orchestra in the Palm Garden. Then there was the famous cabaret show, each number of which was freely applauded. One of the singers caught the crowd when for an encore she sang Annie Laurie, and the applause which greeted her rendition of this beautiful song was almost deafening.

While the dinner was in progress, Sewall Jones, one of the prominent granite manufacturers of Barre, Vt., came in and took a seat at one of the tables. He was immediately spotted and received a great ovation, for having selected Quincy in preference to the outing of his own association. For that matter, however, there were quite a number of Barre men who remained over to enjoy the Quincy outing rather than go home in the special train.

This was not all the applause there was, for every once in a while, some enthusiastic dealer would rise at his seat and shout "What's the matter with Quincy?" and quickly would come the answer, "Quincy is all right!" "Three cheers for Quincy!" and they were given with a will.

During the latter part of the dinner one of the committee visited the several tables with tickets for the harbor sail. The boat for the sail was scheduled to leave at 4 o'clock, but as it was nearly that hour before the dinner was over the sailing of the steamer was delayed an hour, so that it was 5 o'clock before the whistle sounded, and one of the Nantasket line boats steamed out into the winding weir river.

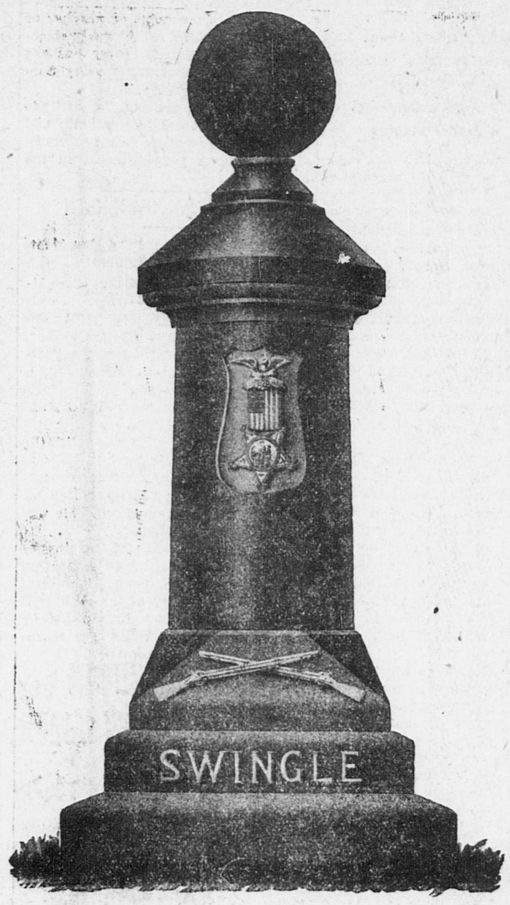

The program for the sail included a trip down the bay as far as the lightship, then back to Nantasket, in case any of the party desired to land there, after which the steamer proceeded to Boston.

It was an ideal day for a sail in the bay and many took the opportunity to enjoy it. Those however, who did not care for the sail remained at Paragon Park and enjoyed the band concert. As the committees' plans had now ended each person was left to seek his, or her own pleasure.

As many of the party had taken the sail on the steamer there were plenty opportunities to ride home in automobiles and for this reason the special cars were not very well patronized on the homeward trip.

Thus ended "Quincy Day" and it was with a sigh of regret that the visitors turned their faces homeward, but they carried with them pleasant recollections of the hospitality shown by Boston, and particularly by the members of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association, whose guests they had been during the day.

The only regret expressed during the whole convention was the mix-up between Quincy and Barre, and it was generally conceded that Barre was in the wrong and that Quincy should have been allowed the opportunity to entertain the guests first. This belief was evidently shared in by F. R. Stewart, of Mannington, W. V., President of the association and by Frank Malon of New Jersey, the secretary of the association, both of whom were guests Friday at Quincy Day.

BARRE PARTY SMALL.

A dispatch from Barre says 200 members of the National Retail Monument Dealers' Association, which Thursday closed its convention in Boston, arrived in the city Friday morning to be the guests for the day and evening of the Barre Board of Trade, the Granite Manufacturers' Association and the Quarryworkers' Association.

After breakfast the guests were taken through a stone-finishing plant.

Then the visitors were taken by automobiles to the Williamstown Gulf. In the deepest part of the "gulf" tables were set for a buffet lunch and it was after 1 o'clock when the trip through the Brookfield Valley was resumed. At night 400 men gathered in Howland Hall for a banquet. Ex-Public Service Commissioner S. Hollister Jackson acted as toastmaster.

McDEVITT WILL BE A CANDIDATE

Has Filed Papers for Renomination as a Democrat for Senate

Opposed by Shea of Milton and Murray of Hyde Park

There have been some doubts whether Mr. McDevitt had filed nomination papers at the State House, but when Democrats pick up their ballots at the primaries, three names will appear in the space reserved for the Senate candidates, and the most familiar name, familiar in more ways than one, will be that of John J. McDevitt, of Quincy, who was suspended from the Senate early in the spring after he failed to substantiate charges made against a member of the House of Representatives.

Mr. McDevitt has been away for some time, but has returned to Quincy, prepared his friends say, to wage another campaign which will be characterized by his old time energy. In some circles he recived a warm welcome, particularly in sections of Ward Four where the younger voters are in the majority. Most of the older heads shook sadly over the outcome of their Senator's fight which resulted in his suspension and it is hardly probable that they will unite under his standard as in days of yore.

They are shaking his hand personally, however, but very few are pledging themselves politically. The sentiment in other parts of the district has not grown to the point where a well determined opposition has developed, but the chances are the friends of Mr. McDevitt will find many against his candidacy this year who were out and out supporters last year.

They will have the opportunity of crossing the names of James H. Shea of Milton or David I. Murray of Hyde Park in the event of their dissatisfaction with the "vindication" policies of Mr. McDevitt.

Mr. Shea is well known in Milton where he has been active in town affairs. His home is in the Mattapan district and he practically organized the opposition which culminated in the defeat of Roger Wolcott in Milton. He is connected with a Boston brokerage office.

David I. Murray of Hyde Park, one of the best known attorneys in the district filed papers for the House and the Senate, but withdrew the former at the earnest solicitation of his friends, who want to see him a Senator. Mr. Murray has represented Hyde Park in the House of Representatives

RIVADAVIA IS EXPECTED

Will be at Nantasket Roads All of Next Week

The Argentine dreadnought Rivadavia left the dry dock of the New York navy yard on Friday, and will arrive at Nantasket roads late tonight or early Sunday morning, it was stated at the offices of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation today.

The monster fighting machine has had her bottom painted and scraped and the buckes which gave way disabling a turbine engine, have been replaced.

The ship will ride at anchor in the roads for about 10 days when she will be coaled and put in ship shape for the trials that will be held on the Rockland course about Sept. 1.

The boat is making the trip under her own steam. She is carrying a large number of men who will remain aboard until after the trials. The members of the Argentine Commission are also aboard.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE MEETING.

Through the courtesy of the executive board of the Quincy Women's club a meeting in the interests of Equal Suffrage wil be held at the clubhouse Friday evening, Aug. 29 at 8 o'clock. Mrs. George P. Morris of Cambridge will be the chief speaker.

It has to be conceded that Equal Suffrage is long past the experimental stage and Mrs. Morris will have much of interest to tell about its results in the states where it has successfully stood the test of many years.

Since not only the advocates but the opponents of Equal Suffrage admit that it is only a question of comparatively short time before it will be granted here in the eastern states, it is surely desirable that the women especially improve their opportunities to hear intelligent speakers on the subject.

All are welcome, men as well as women.

PRIZE FOR LOUISE.

The Louise, sailed by A. E. Whittemore, entered the Hingham open race yesterday and took first place in Class I, outsailing the Chercot, Dorchen II and Reina.

Rev. Edwin N. Hardy, D. D., will occupy the pulpit of Bethany Congregational church at the Sunday services. Rev. Mr. Hardy is a former pastor and was present at the installation services of Rev. B. A. Willmott, the present pastor.

PRAYING FOR RAIN.

People who scoff at the possibility and reality of prayer, ignore a vast array of personal experience as well as of recorded and well authenicated facts. Whether the currents of spiritual influence flow direct from one human mind to another, or touch the all encircling sea of the divinity around and above us, or both, is another question.

Persons of robust and circumstantial faith will perhaps question the action of Gov. Hodges of Kansas on this matter. When a petition was handed to him asking for the appointment of a day of public prayer for the relief of the drought in the corn country, Gov. Hodges declined, while still affirming his belief in the power of prayer.

No doubt i would often be highly convenient if storm and sunshine could be thus governed by human petition. But the Almighty would sometimes be embarassed if simultaneously the farmers were praying for rain, while the baseball managers were petitioning for fair weather.

Verily the heavens seem to many people to be of brass, when human hearts are lifting up their desire for relief from heat or storm. Still one should consider how the tasks of men would be aggravated, were it not for the stern uniformity of nature.

If it was necessary to hold a prayer meeting in order to make fire burn, railroad and factory operation would be irregular. Knowing nature's fixed and unalterable laws, the engineer can now be sure that when he applies the match to inflammable material, fire must result. All human enterprise are built on this iniformity, and move forward with order and security.

Similarly the great unknown of Nature contains forces that produce storm and sunshine. Some day these will be better known, and perhaps man can hen better adjust himself to their operation.

ARTIST IN ADAM'S GARB GOES TO LIVE IN FOREST.

Plans to Make Woods Furnish Food and Shelter Needed.

Joseph Knowles, a Boston artist, has begun a remarkable experiment to prove that he can live in the Maine forests twenty miles from a settlement, just as did prehistoric man. He will discard all clothing, will make the woodland furnish his food and shelter and will defend himself from animals or other foes only with the aid of his bare hands or with such weapons as he may fashion with them.

For two months he will make his home in the depths of the virgin forest that surrounds Big Spencer lake, in Maine. Twice a week he will go to the borders of the forest to leave communications inscribed on birch bark for his friends. He began his life in the woods Aug. 4, and word of the strange experiment has just been brought from him by a guide who accompanied him to the place where he left civilization behind.

Knowles is forty-four years of age, has never married and has always lived a life of adventure. He is one of the few white men who have mastered the art of making fire by rubbing sticks. That accomplishment, he says, is all that is needed for a life in the open by a man of his robust health.

Guides who are familiar with Knowles' plan say he can accomplish the feat he has planned. They say the methods he has worked out to gain food and shelter are practical and that with his knowledge of the forests he will suffer little from the life.

While he is in the woods Knowles will grind pulp on the rocks and press it on birch bark, thus making a paper on which he can depict the wild life of the forest. He will manufacture his water colors from the berries and roots and brushes from the skins and tails of wild animals.

TRIPLETS AND 22 TWINS.

All of Same Father by Three Wives, Each a Twin.

One of the most remarkable family histories on record was contained in a letter just received at Washington from Dr. William Warren of St. Joseph, Mo., by the commissioner of pensions, who had asked for data so that a readjustment in Dr. Warren's pension might be made under the new law.

"My father," Dr. Warren wrote, "had twenty-five children by three wives, who were sisters, and of whom the first two wives were twins. The third wife also was one of twins. My mother had triplets, three boys, of whom I was one. She had no other children. All the other wives' children were twins.

"In all, of the three wives, there were thirteen boys, all of whom were soldiers. All of the twenty-five children are dead but myself."

Dr. Warren is seventy-six years old. He will get a pension increase.

NEW TRIUMPH FOR RADIUM.

Cure of an Ailment In Which Surgery Was Helpless.

An important announcement has just been made at a meeting of the French Radium society in Paris to the effect that hypertrophy of the prostate gland is curable by radium.

In a case in which a surgical operation was impossible a platinum tube containing two centigrams of sulphate of radium was inserted on several ocrasions and allowed to remain for several hours. Under the influence of the radiation the prostate gland shrank little by little, and at the same time the hemorrhage which accompanied the affection in this case also disappeared.

This result opens up entirely new possibilities for the curative use of radium.

Nickel Coins For France.

It is now definitely stated that French bronze coinage will very shortly be withdrawn and replaced by small nickel 25 centime pieces. A further new departure will be made by the French mint, which at the same time will issue 2½ centime pieces, also a nickel corresponding to the English farthing.

CHARGE ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING

Police Also Allege Gambling at Popular Ferncroft Inn

MAKE RAID ON THE PLACE

Watch and Ward Society Agent Said to Have Posed as Duke to Secure Evidence—Action Follows Stories of Students and Girls Drinking and Dancing In Improper Manner

Salem, Mass., Aug. 23.—State police officers, assisted by agents of the Watch and Ward society, descended upon Ferncroft Inn, a popular Danvers resort for automobile parties, They made four arrests and confiscated two roulette wheels and 1000 chips, used, they allege, in gambling.

The raid was prompted by protests from many educational institutions in eastern Massachusetts, Secretary Chase of the Watch and Ward society said. Many students and girls, the protest said, remain at the inn till the morning hours and have been corrupted by drinking and improper dancing.

Protests have been coming in for eight months, he said. It is understood informal complaints have been lodged against the inn by members of the administrative board at Harvard.

"We could not interfere on the ground that young people drink and dance there," said Chase, "but alleged illegal sales of liquor after 1 o'clock at night and stories of gambling gave us something tangible on which to base the raid."

When the raiders reached Ferncroft Inn they were met at the door by Manager Johnson. They went at once to the second floor of the building, where, they say, they found a room equipped with gambling appliances. They took away two roulette wheels and 1000 chips, and immediately afterward made the four arrests.

Harry K. Mansfield, who is reputed to be the proprietor of the inn, was charged with maintaining a liquor nuisance, as was Charles R. Johnson, the supposed manager. Giles Morrill was arrested for maintaining a gambling nuisance and John D. Mitchell for making illegal sales of liquor.

The four men were brought here and Mansfield and Johnson were arraigned in court and held in $500 till Aug. 30. Court was not in session when the others reached Salem, and they were held until the same date, Morrill in $500 bonds and Mitchell in $600. Bail for all four men was furnished.

It is said an agent of the Watch and Ward society has been at the inn for several weeks, posing as a duke in order to discover whether or not the liquor laws and the statutes relating to gambling were being violated.

SUES FOUR NEIGHBORS

Doctor Falsely Imprisoned Asks For $100,000 Damages

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 23.—Wrongfully convicted on perjured testimony, Dr. Ethelbert Duncanson is suing four of his neighbors in Pomona, a suburb, for $100,000 damages.

His suit, on file in the superior court, accuses them of having concocted the charges brought against him involving his foster daughter, Helen Tyler, 14 years old.

Duncanson was sentenced to fourteen years in the state penitentiary at San Quentin and served three months before the girl, who in the meantime had left the state, repudiated her testimony. He was promptly pardoned.

WILL BE PRESIDENT LATER

Hustis Is Made Vice President of the New Haven Road

New Haven, Aug. 23.—J. H. Hustis, vice president of the Boston and Albany, was appointed a vice president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at a meeting of the board of directors. His appointment is effective Sept. 1.

Hustis will be in charge of all departments, with headquarters in New Haven. Later, when the bylaws of the company have been changed to permit Howard Elliott to become chairman of the board of directors, Hustis will become president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Dillon Axworthy Wins Big Stake

Salem, N. H., Aug. 23.—Dillon Axworthy, the Pennsylvania bay colt, won the $6000 American Horse Breeders Futurity at Rockingham park in straight heats. He took the lead in each of the two heats of the race and held it to the end.

Evening Dress Fools Gamblers

New York, Aug. 23.—Arrayed in immaculate evening dress, Detective Gillen walked unchallenged into a gambling house, got his evidence, called assistance and carted away a roulette layout.

Woman Dies In Quicksands

West Falmouth, Mass., Aug. 23.—Louise F. Orleans, 21 years old, of Boston, lost her life in the quicksands at the mouth of the Herring river.

ASKS FOSS' RESIGNATION

Democrat Questions His Right to Hold Office of Governor

Boston, Aug. 23.—In an open letter to Governor Foss, Whitfield Tuck, Democratic candidate for senator in the Sixth Middlesex district, calls upon the governor to resign on the ground that since he was elected as Democrat and has declared himself a Republican he is holding office under false pretences.

He says Foss should turn his office over to Lieutenant Governor Walsh.

Tuck raises the point of whether or not a governor of Massachusetts elected by the Democratic party has the right to switch to another party during his administration.

His viewpoint reflects the attitude of many Democrats in this state and his letter is one of the most interesting documents yet furnished in the campaign.

KILLED BY OWN GUN

Prominent New Hampshire Man Meets With Fatal Accident

Durham, N. H., Aug. 23.—Albert DeMerritt, aged 64, a representative to the state legislature from this town, a cousin of Governor Felker, was accidentally killed when a shotgun which he was carrying while climbing over a fence on his farm was discharged as he was about to start on a hunting trip.

DeMerritt has been politically prominent in this state for years, and a few years ago was seriously considered as the Democratic candidate for governor of New Hampshire. He was a wealthy lumber dealer.

With a wife, a son and two daughters, DeMerritt resided on a farm on the outskirts of this town. The farm became the property of the DeMerritt family in 1690 and has been owned by descendants of the family ever since.

WIRELESS HERO ON SINKING STEAMER

Insures Another Operator's Safety and Then Is Killed

Seattle, Aug. 23.—Another story of heroism was added to the annals of wireless telegraphy when forty survivors of the wreck of the steamship State of California arrived here on the steamer Jefferson.

Donald C. Perkins, who went as chief wireless operator on the State of California in hope of encountering adventure, was off duty and asleep when the steamer struck an uncharted reef in Gambier bay, Alaska.

Awakened by the shock, he rushed to the wireless room and ordered Walter Chamberlain, the operator on duty, to seek safety. Then he sat down at the key, but before he could send his first call for help a falling mast went through the wireless house and crushed Perkins to death at his post.

WILL FIGHT TO FINISH

Counsel Denies That Caminetti Intends to Plead Guilty

San Francisco, Aug. 23.—A rumor current that F. D. Caminetti, son of Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, will plead guilty next Tuesday and throw himself upon the mercy of the court, was positively denied by Marshall Woodworth, who will be leading counsel for the defense.

"There is not a chance in the world," said Woodworth. "We contend that Caminetti is not guilty of white slavery and will fight to the finish. We are also going to appeal the Diggs case immediately after sentence, Sept. 2."

SUFFRAGISTS HAVE A BAND

Music to Coax Men to Favor Votes For Women In Missouri

Kansas City, Aug. 23.—Music, not militancy, is to be used by Missouri women in their campaign for the ballot, according to Mrs. E. R. Curry, a local suffragist leader, who, with a group of her coworkers, met and welcomed the Missouri suffrage band of Maryville as it passed through here on a tour of central Missouri.

The attempt to "sooth the savage breast" of man and charm him through music to granting women the ballot will be conducted through a tour of country fairs. The band went from here to play five days at a fair in Higginsville.

ADMITS PAYING WATSON

Mulhall's Story as to Employment of Ex-Congressman Confirmed

Washington, Aug. 23.—Herbert E. Miles of Racine, Wis., testified to the senate lobby committee that acting for the Tariff Commission association he employed former Representative James E. Watson at a salary of $250 a week to work for a tariff board bill in congress in 1909.

He confirmed Martin M. Mulhall's testimony that Mulhall advanced the first $500 paid Watson, who was not then a member of the house.

Two Die In Suicide Plot

Indianapolis, Aug. 23.—Embracing each other, Roy Gross, 22 years old, and an unidentified girl, were found dead in his room. They had taken poison in a suicide pact.

CHILDREN'S GARDEN WORK

Annual Exhibition of Vegetables and Flowers Next Week

For some years past the Education committee of the Quincy Women's club has encouraged and supervised the work of gardens by the school children of the city. This year the work has been under the direction of the Civic committee of the club, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, chairman.

The annual exhibit of vegetables and flowers from the children's gardens will be held at the Women's clubhouse, the last Friday in the month, Aug. 29, and the following day the best of the exhibit for the State of Massachusetts. Last year the Quincy display made a fine showing at this exhibition, many prizes coming to Quincy children.

The vegetables and flowers at the clubhouse will be judged by Messrs. William Patterson, Charles Anderson and James Nicol and awards made for the best kept garden and finest specimens of vegetables and flowers.

A great many children bought seeds this year, the number being greatly in excess of other years. In Wollaston the increase of interest in gardening is very marked, although each school district is making a creditable display.

It is desired all persons interested in the children's garden movement will visit the exhibit Aug. 29 in order to encourage the children in their good work.

WILL BE A CANDIDATE

and was defeated by only a few votes last year. He is an able politician and has been active in the affairs of Hyde Park previous to its annexation to Boston.

Mr. Shea and Mr. Murray are brand new candidates for the Senate but both have had a legislative experience. The campaign will be opened right away and will probably commence in this city.

One of the strongest arguments in McDevitt's favor according to his supporters, is that he was not expelled from the Senate and therefore the voters of the district should return him.

The opposition will be very pronounced inasmuch as Mr. McDevitt accepted suspension rather than apologize after he didn't make good with his charges, and allowed the district to go without representation for the greater part of the time.

NOT IN QUINCY.

The papers which reported the opium raid as taking place in the Fore River district have a good imagination it seems the raid was in the city of Fall River.

SUBURBAN LIFE.

Although the September issue of Suburban Life—the Countryside magzine, is called the fall house building number, and contains a wonderful array of articles on house building subjects it is a big, broad, finely illustrated publication of general interest. Almost every activity of those who live outside of the crowded cities receives attention. Harold J. Howland, the contributing editor, who will be remembered for his notable work on the Outlook, has a strong article on Awakening Civic Spirit" that will create much interest in a live problem of the countryside.

The building articles present so many attractive types of houses that those who are planning to erect their own homes can scarcely fail to find something of suggestive value. For those whose interest is in growing things and beautifying the home grounds there are: "The Glorious Peony and How to Grow It," "Evergreens for Windbreaks and Screens," "Increasing the Size of the Home Grounds," "Plants as Gifts," "A Garden for Odd Seasons." It seems as if there is something for almost everybody.

MANY CASES OF TUBERCULOSIS

Six Quincy People Sent to Sanitariums this Week

Many will be surprised to learn of the large number of cases of tuberculosis that are constantly being brought to the attention of he Board of Health. Some idea of the number of cases may be had when it is known that during the past week the Board has sent away to the different sanitariums of the state six cases, and they have several more cases under investigation. There have been so many cases this year throughout the state that the board is having hard work to find room for the Quincy patients in the tuberculosis hospitals of the state.

The large number of patients means quite a drain on the appropriation of the Board of Health for contagious diseases. Some idea of the cost may be had when it is remembered that the report of the Board for the month of July showed that the sum of $759.05 had been paid out that month for aid rendered in tuberculosis cases.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Emil Gustafson of Granite street left for New York Friday night for a three weeks' visit to his brother.

Miles J. Burke of Greenpoint, Brooklyn, N. Y. arrived in Quincy this morning after motoring from his home.

The morning was rainy but the indications are that this afternoon will be pleasant. Very few stormy Saturdays and Sundays this year.

A handsomely framed picture of ex-Mayor James Thompson has been added to the group of pictures of ex-Mayors which adorn the walls of the Mayor's office at City Hall.

As it is impossible for the Greenleaf school to continue in the building which has been its home for so many years, the school when it reopens Monday, Sept. 22 will hold the first four grades at 32 Linden place.

FORTY HOURS DEVOTION.

The Forty Hours devotion will commence at the Church of the Sacred Heart on Sunday with the high mass which will be celebrated by Father Stephanus of the Franciscan Order. The Blessed Sacrament will be exposed until 8.45 in the evening and confessions will be heard Sunday evening and Monday. The services will close Tuesday morning with a high mass, and the sermon will be delivered by Rev. Fr. Howland Harkins of Amesbury. Masses will be said at 5 and 8 o'clock Monday and Tuesday. Father Stephanus is the son of the late Dr. Donovan of Quincy and lived here until he entered the preisthood.

DISTRICT COURT.

Michael F. Hayes was fined $15 and John Doran $25 on two complaints for drunkenness at Quincy.

Charles F. Wade was fined $15 for drunkenness at Holbrpok.

Joseph B. Sabal was fined $10 for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

John F. McGahey, who was arrested at Randolph for drunkenness and bailed, was defaulted when his case was called this morning.

Walter Williams was fined $15 for drunkenness at Milton.

Michael Rosa was arraigned for assault with intent to murder Atavio Rizzio at Quincy last Sunday. He waived hearing in the lower court. Dr. Sargent who is attending the injured man at the City Hospital said that he would probably recover. The court then held Rosa in $3,000 bonds for the grand jury.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

City of Presidents Has Much of Interest

Old historic Quincy settled in 1625 has much of interest to visitors. When Braintree was incorporated in 1640, the territory now known as Quincy, was a part. In 1792 Quincy became an independent town, and in 1888 was incorporated as a city.

Quincy was named in honor of Col John Quincy, descendant in the third generation from Edmund, 2d, who settled in Quincy, in 1634; grand-father of Abigail (Smith) Adams, the wife and mother of a President of the United States.

The city includes Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point, South Quincy, West Quincy, Montclair, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston Park, Squantum, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Germantown and Quincy Neck, comprising in all over 16 square miles, of which 2,530 acres are in public parks.

Birthplaces of Presidents.

Birthplace of John Quincy Adams the sixth President of the United States, junction of Franklin street Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

Abigail Adams Cairn.

Penns Hill, erected June 17, 1896 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of the old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

Burial Place of Presidents.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) at Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. The funeral of John Quincy Adams was held in this church. Beneath the entrance is the Adams tomb reached by stairways from the vestibule. Near the tomb is the box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams, also the old town hearse.

Hancock Cemetery.

Hancock cemetery across the street from First church contains many old stones. Among the old graves are those of Henry Adams founder of the Adams family who died Oct. 5, 1646; Rev. William Thompson, 1st pastor over the Braintree church who died Dec. 10, 1666; Rev. Henry Flint who died Oct. 11, 1668: Rev. John Hancock father of the Patriot who died May 7 1744, and many other notable people.

John Hancock Birthplace.

Adams street, junction of Dimmick and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

President Adams Mansion.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants Not open to public.

Presidents Lane.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Myles Standish Spring.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay

Squaw Rock.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

BURDETT COLLEGE

New Course

offers a new course in Applied Business and Management in which a practical training is given in Finance, Commerce, Industry, Accounting and allied subjects. Another new feature is the Business Laboratory Demonstration Practice directed by Nath'l C. Fowler, Jr. Other courses are Business, Shorthand, Combined Secretarial, Normal and Advanced Finishing.

During the past year all graduates and many past students were placed in good situations and more than 1600 positions were offered the College that it could not fill because all of its graduates were in satisfactory situations.

New students are admitted every Monday during the school year, and advance individually. Fall term begins Tuesday, September 2.

SOCCER MEN ARE WANTED

Offers to Harrison, Hendry and Meldrum

Represenatives of the Bethlehem Foot ball Club of Bethlehem, Penn., are in Quincy negotiating with Harrison, R. Hendry and Meldrum to join their soccer team, and it is rumored hat the three men are favorably considering the offers. Hendry and Harrison have singed with the Brockton team which is in the Greater Boston league, and affiliated with the American Foot Ball Association. The Bethlehem team is not in the association and no strings are attached to their going.

All are reckoned in soccor circles as the three strongest ployers in the state and the Fore River team, twice holder of the championship, centered a good deal of their strength on these men. Beverly has also been angling for these players, but Brockton's contracts arrived first and were signed accordingly. The Quincy representation has withdrawn from league soccor and will play independent ball. Definite arrangements have not been made to date.

THE DARTWELL WINS AGAIN

Iris Was Second Yesterday in the Hull Series

A fleet of 33 yachts took part in the third days race under the auspices of the Boston Yacht club off the Hull quarters Friday in the mid-summer series.

Four of the sonder boats entered but the Harpoon was not among them and the chances are that Mr. Adams will not do any more racing this season, on account of business engagements. In Fridays race the Elen won with the Cima second.

In class D, the Quincy boats, the Dartwell again came to the front and ments. In Fridays race the Ellen and scored another win with the Iris second. If Ex-Comodore Whitetemore of the Dartwell keeps on winning races he will have a house full of trophies by the end of the season.

The summary of this class was as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Dartwell, I. M. Whittemore | 1:49:53 |
| Iris, F. F. Crane | 1:51:51 |
| Clara, H. W. Robbins | 1:52:49 |
| Grayling, C. V. Nickerson | 1:56:47 |
| Mudjekeewis, E. W. Emery | withdrew |

JOINS NEW CLUB.

Fay Phelan of Quincy has resigned from the North Dorchester A. A. to join the new Irish American Club of Boston. Phelan became a member of the North Dorchester after he invaded the athletic field and has assisted in securing many honors for the club. He has been a reliable member of the relay team and has also been a consistent performer in meets throughout New England.

The Irish Americans who organized through the efforts of William Prout, well known in Quincy, and it is their intention to try to outclass he B. A. A. which has fathered some of the noted athletics of the country. Phelan has been picked as one of those capable of pushing the B. A. A. runners. At present he is in the best of form and has been cleaning up first and second places. He will race Fred Kingsbury Labor Day for the 440 yard championship of the city.

MADE WIFE AND SON DO WORK OF HORSES

Brutal Farmer Is Held In $200 Bail For Trial

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 23.—George H. Boyce, a farmer, lost his temper because his potato digger wouldn't work. It's a machine, and a team of horses couldn't make it go. Boyce then hitched himself, his wife and his 13-year-old son to the contrivance, and they couldn't do any better than the horses.

Then Boyce really was angry, and it is alleged that as a result of it he seized his wife, who is the mother of fourteen children, and threw her into a gravel pit.

This story was told in court by Mrs. Townel, a married daughter of Mrs. Boyce and stepdaughter of the farmer. Boyce was held in $200 bail by Judge Dodd.

DUEL IN MEAT MARKET

One Butcher Kills Another With Knife Thrust Through Heart

Kansas City, Aug. 23.—While the salesroom in one of the largest retail meat markets was full of customers Frank Mooney and Mark Hamilton, meat cutters, engaged in a death struggle across a meat block in the rear, while Mooney fell dead on the floor with the long blade of a butcher knife thrust through his heart. Women screamed and fled from the store.

Hamilton told the police he had stabbed Mooney because "he could not stand his cursing."

EMIGRATION BARRED

Galicians Liable to Military Service Cannot Leave the Country

Vienna, Aug. 23.—The governor of Galicia, a crown land of Austria-Hungary, has declared his determination to stop the emigration of adults from his country to the United States and Canada.

He ordered the police to arrest all male persons between the ages of 18 and 36 and liable for military service who attempted to leave the country and send them to their homes.

Norway's First Woman Judge

Christiania, Aug. 23.—Ruth Sorenson, 36, has been appointed the first woman judge in Norway and will hold court at Hammerfest.

Halberstadt, Ger., Aug. 23.—Lieutenant Schmidt, attached to the army aviation corps, met death here by a fall of almost a mile.

MEXICANS GET DUE WARNING

Molestation of Americans Will Not Be Tolerated

WILSON WILL READ MESSAGE

Will Disclose to Congress Purposes of Administration Policy, Which Is Already Believed to Be Bearing Fruit—Effect of Unyielding Attitude of United States Becomes Apparent

Washington, Aug. 23.—Curt warning to both the Huerta and constitutionalist commanders at La Boquilla, Chihuahua, Mex., that the United States will hold them personally responsible for any violence against Americans by "any one claiming civil or military authority," was sent by Secretary Bryan through American Consul Letcher at Chihuahua City.

Bryan instructed Letcher to dispatch his message to La Boquilla by courier and get an answer. His action was in response to a request by Senator Penrose for action to protect Americans at the plant of the Mexican Northern Power and Irrigation company. Bryan's telegram follows:

"Information having been received by this government that threats of violence and death have been made against Fuller, Hulse and others at La Boquilla, this government deems it proper to say that if any violence is visited upon any American citizen there or elsewhere by anyone claiming civil or military authority the United States will hold personally responsible the perpetrators thereof. Couriers should ascertain condition of all foreigners at La Boquilla and report what reply the officer in charge makes to this government."

The reference to the protection of American citizens "elsewhere" was taken as indicative of the attitude of the United States in the protection of Americans wherever their safety is threatened.

President Wilson will personally read his message on Mexico to both houses of congress Monday, outlining what has been done by the United States to bring about peace. The message will summarize the principal points made in the note presented by John Lind and on the contentions of the Huerta government in reply. The full text of both communications will be presented to congress as exhibits.

No recommendations for action will be made, but the president's statement is expected to reiterate the attitude of this government and indicate that only on the basis therein outlined can negotiations with the Huerta government be continued.

White House officials feel that the reading of the message will itself be a factor in the situation, serving perhaps further to emphasize that the United States will under no circumstances recognize any but constitutional government in Mexico.

The effect of the unyielding attitude of the United States is said to be already apparent. Dispatches from John Lind indicate that the Mexican administration would welcome further parleys. The Huerta government, it is said, is casting about for new ground on which to renew the negotiations.

Another factor which contributes to the optimism of administration officials is a reported disposition in Europe to deny the Huerta government any further loans pending the outcome of the efforts of the United States to bring about peace.

PITT BUST BARRED

Gift of English Women Cannot Be Placed In White House

Washington, Aug. 23.—Passage of a senate resolution authorizing President Wilson to accept a bust of William Pitt, a gift of women in England, was blocked by Republican Leader Mann because it specified the bust should be placed in the White House.

Mann declared the White House already was crowded and insisted there was room in the Smithsonian institution or other government buildings. He proclaimed a profound admiration for Pitt, but insisted on his objection.

President Wilson recently asked congress for authority to accept the gift.

SMUGGLING SUSPECT MUM

Wife of Illinois Millionaire Is Held In New York

New York, Aug. 23.—Awaiting a hearing on a charge of attempting to smuggle $10,000 worth of diamonds and clothing into New Jersey, Mrs. William L. Veile, wife of the millionaire automobile manufacturer of Moline, Ills., refuses to discuss any phase of the case.

The woman's attorney said he would not talk of the case until the woman's husband arrives here. Mrs. Veile arrived on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Every effort was made to keep the matter quiet.

HIS COACH

A Medieval Story In a Modern Dress

By F. A. MITCHEL

Edwin Etheridge, the novelist, had gone to the country to rest. He had been writing all winter and till late in the spring and resolved to go to the most secluded spot he could find and do nothing. He located at a cottage occupied by a worthy though poor family in the mountains.

Etheridge took walks in the clover, climbed the peaks and under the influence of the bracing air and change of scene was getting into condition when he met with one who changed the tenor of his summer outing. He was sitting one day on an eminence overlooking a beautiful valley when without the breaking of a twig or the motion of a bush he heard a voice directly behind him:

"Splendid, isn't it?"

The novelist turned and saw a tall, lithe figure of a man leaning on a staff. There was something both fascinating and repulsive about him. Though he seemed to be a mountaineer, his beard was cut to a point and his mustache grew upward. In his eyes were softness, cunning and withal a strange glitter.

"Yes," responded Etheridge, "it is indeed a fine picture."

"It reminds me of a time when I offered to exchange a—my friend, would you like to make a fortune?"

"I certainly would."

"What is your profession?"

"A novelist."

"A novelist. Well, you need a—well, a model. I will be that model."

"I do not use models in my work."

"But you should. I have made the fortune of more than one writer by posing for him."

"In what way?"

"In different ways."

"Thank you for your offer," said the novelist, "but I am not writing now. I am resting."

"Just the time for me to serve you. I take you when you have thrown off all predisposition. I can the more readily influence you."

FOR AN HOUR ETHERIDGE WROTE WHILE HIS COACH DICTATED.

"Influence me! What do you mean?"

"My dear man, do you suppose that you can write interesting stories without being influenced? What do you write but influences—influences to which all human beings are subject? It is this kindred interest that gives the story its interest. I have in me the power to infuse into you that which is commonly called genius."

"Do you mean to tell me that you can make a genius of me?"

"I do."

Now, Etheridge knew very well that no one can make a genius of another, and he would have laughed the man to scorn, but there was something like a challenge in the stranger's eye, an audacity, a mocking expression that seemed to say: "You think I am crazy. Try me." But Etheridge thought of his vacation and controlled himself.

"No," he said; "I will not work this summer."

"Not for one morning?"

"Can you prove what you say in that time?"

"Certainly."

"Very well. Come to the cottage below there tomorrow at 9 o'clock. I will give you till 12."

"I will be there."

The stranger turned and walked away. His going was far different from his coming. While his advent had been noiseless, his footsteps at his exit sounded plainly. And what astonished Etheridge was that he continued to hear them long after the man had gone a considerable distance. It was like the ticking of a clock that is being carried away from one amid otherwise perfect stillness. While the beats grew less in volume they did not diminish in distinctness. It seemed to Etheridge that the stranger's footsteps were resounding through the mountains, but that their distance from him gave them a faraway sound. When they had died completely he arose and descended to the cottage.

The next morning at the appointed hour Etheridge was sitting on the porch when he saw the stranger coming down the road. The house dog saw him, too, and set up a furious barking, which died gradually down to a whine as the man came on, and before he reached the porch the dog slunk away with his tail between his legs. The good woman of the house saw the man coming and involuntarily looked about for her children to see that they were all indoors.

Etheridge had pen and paper on the table, so, after greeting the comer coldly, said he was ready to proceed. He said he would use a motif that he had intended to use during the coming autumn and winter. To this his model or his coach or whatever he purported to be replied that he might use any motif or any plan he chose. Etheridge had already written the opening in a dialogue between his hero and the foil, who was to bring out the hero's strength of character, his manliness, his breadth of soul, his virtue. He handed it to his coach, who read it and tossed it back to him contemptuously.

"Write it over," he said. "I will start your story for you. Take my dictation."

For an hour Etheridge wrote while his coach dictated. As the dialogue between the two characters proceeded the villain of the story loomed up as a splendid man, while the hero perceptibly dwindled. Not a word did the hero speak that was not good, and not a word was uttered by the villain that was not evil, and yet the evil was beautiful as the blue heavens and the good sounded like a mockery of righteousness.

"Now," said the man who had produced this effect, "I have given you the pitch. You can sing the song yourself, only to keep you up to the key I will sit here and chat with you, as portrait painters do with those sitting for them in order to draw their souls out into their faces. Proceed."

Curious to discover whether this remarkable master in the art of writing could infuse genius into him according to his boast, Etheridge took his pen and began to write. The stranger rattled on, at times to himself, at times to the novelist. It seemed to the latter that he was sitting in a bower of flowers, each flower exhaling its own delicious perfume. The light seemed broken into its component parts, each color intensified in beauty. Thoughts—such thoughts as he had never known before—crowded in upon his brain. Evil was endowed with the attributes of the good; good was endowed with the attributes of the evil. The woman foil, too, was ravishing. She attempted to draw the hero from the pure woman he loved, and, although he resisted her seductions, he seemed despicable that he did so.

When noon came Etheridge desired to continue the work, but his coach declared that he had written enough for one day and must break off. Rising, the stranger bowed himself away, and as he receded Etheridge heard him talking and chuckling to himself. And as he was lost amid the trees growing on the mountain side there came back the echo of laughter.

The next morning the work was renewed under the inspiration of the coach, and the next and the next. As the plot developed it seemed that it could have been invented only by Satan. It was in itself a thing of genius. Etheridge became infatuated with it and with his characters. When the clock in the cottage struck 12 his coach would go no further. Once after he had gone Etheridge undertook to proceed with the work himself, but when he stopped to read what he had written he tore the paper into fragments.

When the story rounded to its close it seemed to Etheridge that all his characters had become evil and that evil was the great desideratum of human existence. The good and the bad were whirling before him in a merry dance. The hero and heroine, who had passed from the good to the evil, were making merry over their fall, and the others were clapping their hands and shouting, "What a waste of time to have been good!" And the chief feature of it was that the author found himself sympathizing with vice triumphant.

As he was writing the last pages Etheridge heard the creaking of a vehicle and, looking down the road, saw a hearse approaching surrounded by uncovered mountaineers. Glancing at his coach, he saw a sardonic scowl on his face.

"This is death," he said, "that men so much fear. It makes men cowards. But I shall overcome it in the end."

When the procession came opposite the cottage, suddenly, without warning, the stranger cowered. Slinking down like a whipped cur, he endeavored to get away from the hearse, but there was no way to do that except by first advancing. Trembling in every limb, he remained cowering till the funeral party had passed, then without a farewell darted away in the opposite direction.

As he did so the woman of the house threw up a sash and said:

"I knew it."

"Knew what?"

"He's the devil."

"The devil?"

"Yes. Didn't you see what drove him away?"

"No; what was it?"

"The cross on the hearse."

Etheridge sat for a few moments trying to collect his faculties. When he had succeeded he took the manuscript of his story into the house, threw it into the fire and watched it burn, with yellow and blue and green and red flame, till it was entirely consumed.

BRAINS AND HOUSEWORK.

"The business man who runs his office as the average woman does her kitchen work soon finds himself not only left behind, but his mentality has become so inelastic that, when he finally does wake up to things, he finds it next to impossible to adapt himself to the new order.

"You women must use your minds in your work. Use it to short-cut your steps; use it to increase the quality and decrease the effort. Above all, get away from that pernicious idea that kitchen work is drudgery.' So is office work, if a man allows it to work him, instead of working it.

"The more I see of that type of women who are so fond of posing as martyrs and calling themselves 'drudges' the more I am convinced that such women are 'too small for their job.' In order to get the best of anything, you must not only fill your position but 'fill it and running over.' Then it it that you can chase your work, instead of letting it chase you.'" —Suburban Life.

HOW MOTHERS FAIL.

"It is to the American mother that we turn for a solution of all moral questions. Who is better fitted than a good mother for discussing these vital but delicate issues with her children? Who can so well guide the little feet into paths of purity and righteousness? Who can better teach her sons areverence for womanhood, to be chivalrous to all women for the dear sake of the mother who bore them? Who can better mold her daughters into chaste womanhood?

Yet many mothers shrink from discussing with their children any matters pertaining to sex. They shroud the topic in an air mystery. They blush and change the subject if any questions are asked them. They appear as though the renewal of life were something to be ashamed of, and that any reference to the matter were coarse and vulgar. They excite a morbid curiosity in the child by evasion and a decided avoidance of the subject. They put the childish questioner off with pleasing little fictions which include storks, the family doctor, Santa Claus. These evasions work admirably for a time, but the sequel is disastrous, when the child awakens to the fact that a deliberate lie has been told him."—Surburban Life.

—Two strange men in an electric car from Boston, were coming up Old Colony Hill, Hingham recently when a lady who knows Hingham and its people well, heard one man say to the other, "This is the richest street of single women in Massachusetts," and pointed them out in this way: "Miss Barnes in this great home alone; Mrs. Blake, who built a million-dollar building and paid for it every Saturday; Mrs. Alfred Hersey in this palatial house alone, with the handsomest lawn in the state; Miss Edith Andrews, who owns all the islands in Boston Harbor—she, too, lives alone in this handsome house." And thus the women of Hingham were rated. He acknowledged them all to have brains.—Hull Beacon.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

"It's all tommyrot about its being blue, isn't it?"

She was also looking at the dark brown, swollen river that has been immortalized in song.

"It's never blue. It's always a yellow ocher, it seems to me."

He waited a long time before venturing to express the thought that of late had been troubling him seriously.

"I wonder if you truly realize the difficulty Edith will have in satisfying an incredulous world with her absolutely truthful story. She'll have to explain, you know. There's bound to be a skeptic or two, my dear Constance."

"But there's Roxbury," she protested, her face clouding nevertheless. "He will set everything right."

"The world will say he is a gullible fool," said he gently. "And the world always laughs at, not with, a fool. Alas, my dear sister, it's a very deep pool we're in." He leaned closer and allowed a quaint, half bantering, wholly diffident smile to cross his face. "I—I'm afraid that you are the only being on earth who can make the story thoroughly plausible."

"I?" she demanded quickly. Their eyes met, and the wonder suddenly left hers. She blushed furiously. "Nonsense!" she said and abruptly left him to take a seat beside Katherine Rodney. He found small comfort in the whisperings and titterings that came willy nilly to his burning ears from the corner of the compartment. He had a disquieting impression that they were discussing him. It was forced in upon him that being a brother-in-law is not an enviable occupation.

"Wot?" he asked almost fiercely after the insistent Freddie had thrice repeated a question.

"I say, will you have a cigarette?" half shouted Freddie, exasperated.

"Oh! No, thanks. The train makes such a beastly racket, don't you know."

"They told me at the Bristol you were deaf, but— Oh, I say, old man, I'm sorry. Which ear is it?"

"The one next to you," replied Brock, recovering from his confusion. "I hear perfectly well with the other one."

"Yes," drawled Freddie, with a wink, "so I've observed." After a reflective silence the young man ventured the interesting conclusion, "She's a stunning girl, all right." Brock looked politely askance. "By Jove, I'm glad she isn't my sister-in-law!"

"I suppose I'm expected to ask why," frigidly.

"Certainly. Because if she was I couldn't. Do you get the point?" He crossed his legs and looked insupportably sure of himself.

They reached Munich late in the afternoon and went at once to the Hotel Vier Jahretzeiten, where they were to find the Odell-Carneys.

Mr. Odell-Carney was a middle aged Englishman of the extremely uninitiative type. He was tall and narrow and distant, far beyond what is commonly accepted as blase. Indeed, he was especially slow of speech, even for an Englishman, quite as if it were an everlasting question with him whether it was worth while to speak at all. One had the feeling when listening to Mr. Odell-Carney that he was being favored beyond words. It took him so long to say anything that if one were but moderately bright he could finish the sentence mentally some little time in advance of the speaker and thus be prepared to properly appreciate that which otherwise might have puzzled him considerably. It could not be said, however, that Mr. Odell-Carney was ponderous. He was merely the effectual result of delay. Perhaps it is safe to agree with those who knew him best; they maintained that Odell-Carney was a pose, nothing more.

His wife was quite the opposite in nearly every particular except height and angularity. She was bony and red faced and opinionated. A few sillow years, with a rapid, profligate noldeman had brought her, in widowhood, to a fine sense of appreciation of the slow going though tiresomely unpractical men of the Odell-Carney type. It mattered little that he made poor investment of the money she had sequestered from his lordship. He had kept her in the foreground by associating himself with every big venture that interested the financial smart set. Notwithstanding the fact that he never was known to have any money, he was looked upon as a financier of the highest order, which is saying a great deal in these unfeeling days of pounds and shillings.

Of course Mrs. Odell-Carney was dressed as all rangy, long limbed Englishwomen are prone to dress—after a model peculiarly not her own. She looked ridiculously ungraceful alongside the smart, chic American women, and yet not one of them but would have given her boots to be able to array herself as one of these. There was no denying the fact that Mrs. Odell-Carney was a "regular tiptopper," as Mr. Rodney was only too eager to say. She had the air of a born leader—that is to say, she could be gracious when occasion demanded, without being patronizing.

In due course of time the Medcrofts and Miss Fowler were presented to the distinguished couple. This function was necessarily delayed until Odell-Carney had time to go into the details of a particularly annoying episode of the afternoon. He was telling the story to his friend Rodney, and of course everything was at a standstill until he got through.

It seems that Mr. Odell-Carney felt the need of a nap at 3 o'clock. He gave strict injunctions that there was to be no noise in the halls while he slept and then went into his room and stretched out. Any one who has stopped at the Hotel Four Seasons will have no difficulty in recalling the electric hall bells which serve to attract the chambermaids to given spots. If one needs the chambermaid he presses the button in his room and a little bell in the hall tinkles furiously until she responds and shuts it off. In that way one is sure that she has heard and is coming, a most admirable bit of German ingenuity. If she happens to be taking her lunch at the time, the bell goes on ringing until she returns. It is a faithful bell. Coming back to Odell-Carney, the maid on his floor was making up a room in close proximity when a most annoying thing happened to her. A porter who had reason to dislike her came along and turned her key from the outside, locking her in the room. She couldn't get out, and she had been warned against making a sound that might disturb the English guest. With rare intelligence, she did not scream or make an outcry, but wisely proceeded to press the button for a chambermaid. Then she evidently sat down to wait. To make the story short, she rang her own call bell for two hours, no other maid condescending to notice the call, which speaks volumes for the almost martial system of the hotel. The bell was opposite the narrator's door. Is it, therefore, surprising that he required a great deal of time to tell all that he felt? It was not so much of what he did that he spoke at such great length, but of what he felt.

"'Pon me soul," he exploded in the end, twisting his mustache with nervous energy, "it was the deadest nap I ever had. I didn't close my eyes, d'fend me if I did."

QUINCY MAN ABOARD.

The racing sloop Tyro recently purchased at Camden, Maine, by Hollis Burgess, returned Tuesday to Massachusetts waters and is at Hull. She is raced in Class A interclub and her re-appearance caused considerable speculation as to her performance with former rivals, like the Nutmeg and Marie L.

Wednesday, just after her stiff trip from Maine she came in third but on Thursday went over the line at the firing of the gun and kept the lead all through with the Nutmeg a close second. Friday, at Hingham in the spiteful southwester she was the only one of her class sailing. Today at Hull she will appear again.

Albert D. Parker of Presidents' hill who left last Saturday to join her crew returns tonight from Hull and starts for New York Monday.

CITY OF QUINCY

METROPOLITAN BAND CONCERT

Eighth Regiment Band Give Excellent Program

Upwards of a thousand people were attracted to the Quincy Shore Reservation near Beach street last evening to listen to the concert by the Eighth Regiment band, under the auspices of the Metropolitan Park Commission. They came from all parts of the city, and there were fully 100 automobile parties.

The program as advertised was as follows, but the applause was so generous that there were several encores:

March, "Might of Right" Boehlein
Popular Medley Evans
Cornet Solo Selected
Victor Beaudry.
Overture. "Beautiful Galatea" Suppe
Selection, "Sweethearts" Herbert
Fantasia, "Hungarian" Tobani
Melodies from "Robin Hood" De Koven
Potpourri, "In Days of Old" Rollinson
Excerpts from "Louisanna Lou" Jerome
Finale. "Star Spangled Banner."

SEA BREEZES AT HOUGHS NECK

Something Doing All the Time t Quincy Beaches

Miss Edith Johnson of Shellton road who is at Washington, D. C. is expected home within two weeks.

Miss Elsie Akroyd of Boston was the guest this week of John Hallahan and family of Shellton road.

Miss Helen Reardon of Shellton road has returned from North Attleboro where she has been visiting relatives.

Ernest Lloyd who was rescued from drowning at Adams Shore a few weeks ago has entirely recovered from his experience and plans to leave for his home in Nova Scotia in the near future

John J. Noonan of Manet avenue has returned from an extended European trip. Mr. Noonan is one of the best known settlers at the beach.

The members of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum are preparing to give a playlet in the early fall. It will be presented in their club rooms on Manet avenue.

The pupils of Miss Jennie Boutelier held a recital at her home on Rock Island road Thursday which was largely attended by their parents and friends.

Miss Delia Carlson of Adams Shore is visiting friends in Worcester.

Ernest Bedell who was operated on the Carney Hospital for appendicitis is reported as being on the road to speedy recovery.

William Newton of South Boston,, a former representative from that district, is summering at Germantown. Each morning Mr. Newton passes vehicles and cars of all description on Coddington street but never accepts the invitation to ride because he is out for exercise. Mr. Newton has evinced a strong interest in local affairs and has engaged in several discussions with local politicians in which he came off the winner.

Adelaide Sullivan of the Pearl cottage on Babcock street fell Thursday and sustained a severe scalp wound by striking against a broken blind. A physician dressed the wound and no ill effects are expected.

Miss Clara Carlson of Campello is spending the week visiting the Brockton families that are summering at Houghs Neck. Miss Carlson reports that there is a large colony of home friends at the beach.

Miss Hazel Smith who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKeagney of Adams Shore will leave for her home in Gloucester the latter part of September.

REV. DR. HARDY COMING.

Bethany church will welcome on Sunday its former pastor, Rev. E. N. Hardy, D. D., of La Grange, Ill., who will preach at both the morning and evening services. Unfortunately the church auditorium cannot be used because of improvements being made, but the chapel has a large seating capacity.

ABLE COUNSEL EMPLOYED BY THAW IN NEW FIGHT.

Harry Thaw says he has enough of American lawyers. In his fight against extradition or deportation to the United States from Canada Thaw, with his family's millions, has employed the most notable and able counsel that he could find in Canada. They will make a hard fight for their wealthy client. The attorneys are: (left to right) Colonel H. R. Fraser, Dr. W. L. Shurtleff and Charles D. White.

EXPERT RULES THAW IS SANE

Prisoner Wins Another Point In His Fight For Freedom

EXAMINED BY PRISON DOCTOR

Complete Report of Findings Will Be Made to Canadian Government—Thaw May Be Given Forty-Eight Hours to Leave Country—Said to Be On Verge of Breakdown

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 23.—Two important developments in the Thaw fight created a sensation here. The first came when a physician was ordered to examine Thaw on behalf of the government, as to sanity. The government expert declared Thaw sane.

The second development was the announcement that habeas corpus proceedings will be fought out, freeing Thaw; and that then the immigration authorities, instead of "deporting" him, will "reject" him—that is, give him forty-eight hours to leave the country by whatever route he chooses. Thus he may escape the New York officers.

Dr. Noel of Sherbrooke was the physician who examined Thaw. He is the regular prison physician. He received a command from the bureau of immigration, department of the interior, to see Thaw and make a complete report of his findings. The examination lasted nearly an hour. After its conclusion Noel was seen by the reporters.

"I believe Thaw to be a sane man," he declared. "So far as I can learn, he is chiefly concerned over what he can do in the event of the courts or the Canadian government deciding against him. His discussion on this point and on others I found to be rational in every way.

"I will make a complete report to Ottawa and will go fully into detail. But, summing up, my opinion will be that Thaw is a well and sane man."

Noel had an opportunity to see and converse with Thaw on numerous occasions since his arrest. He told Thaw he would make a favorable report on his case and Thaw's delight was tremendous.

W. L. Shurtleff made the announcement that Thaw will be allowed to leave the country as he chooses.

George S. Leish, who came here as an "an old friend of Thaw's" and was then discovered to be a Canadian, familiar with every foot of the territory round Sherbrooke, is the leader and brains of a plot to free Harry K. Thaw, according to accredited report here.

Leish has been the "Man of Mystery" in the case from the start. He came with Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie, yet was obviously of a different stamp from them.

It has been repeated again and again that there is $50,000 to "free Thaw." But none seemed ready to go into details as to how that money was to be spent. No one could say whether it was to go to lawyers, or to men who work by a more direct method. In Leish some believe they see the solution of the question of where the $50,000 is to be applied. It is believed that a daring scheme to free Thaw is under way. That is proved by their vigilance.

This is the plan in its general form. Through court proceedings Thaw will eventually be turned loose by the courts. Immigration officials will be waiting to arrest him.

In the interval between the time Thaw is released and the time the immigration officials can capture him, another high-powered automobile will be ready to snatch him away to safety.

A strong aid is the Canadian sympathy for Thaw. The Canadians believe he should be released. They have even urged him to buy property in Canada, become naturalized, and thus prevent deportation by becoming a Canadian subject.

Sheriff Aylmer and Jailer La Force, who are responsible for holding Thaw in custody, are taking no chances with their prisoner. The guards have been doubled. La Force insists on the strictest guard of the prison and of Thaw's jail cell.

Thaw is on the verge of a serious mental breakdown. His condition, brought on by worry over his capture and the excitement of his escape, became so serious that during the long conference of his counsel at the jail Thaw was allowed merely to be present but not to take part.

His condition is admitted by his own physician, while Deputy Attorney General Kennedy of New York, now in Sherbrooke in charge of the state's case, declares Thaw is suffering from acute organic insanity, resulting in almost complete deterioration of his mental faculties.

ARRESTS EXPECTED SOON

Detectives Have Clew to Those Who Engineered Thaw's Escape

New York, Aug. 23.—Burns detectives, armed with "John Doe" warrants, watched closely in the Tenderloin for the return of two of the three men accused of aiding the escape of Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan. They expect to make two or more arrests within twenty-four hours.

A positive clew has been obtained to those who engineered Thaw's escape. It is declared that only three of the five men who appeared in Beacon City prior to Thaw's escape are actually wanted as participants in the escape. It is believed the movement of this band was partly a "stall" to cover up the movements of men who arrived on the scene within a very few hours of the actual escape.

There is much activity among the Burns operatives, of whom fully a dozen are out in New York city alone. Three more are in the vicinity of Matteawan.

Jerome Again on Thaw's Trail

Albany, Aug. 23.—William T. Jerome, former district attorney of New York county, who has been a nemesis to Harry Thaw ever since the slaying of Stanford White, is again on his trail, having been appointed by Attorney General Carmody as a special deputy attorney general.

Jerome is specially designated by the state to represent it in procuring the return of Thaw to the jurisdiction of New York. He was selected because of his thorough familiarity with the Thaw case gained in the two murder trials and as special counsel in several attempts of Thaw to establish his sanity by legal procedure.

KILLED WIFE, THREE CHILDREN AND SELF

Wealthy Farmer Accomplishes Purpose With Fire

Dubuque, Ia., Aug. 23.—Charges that Henry Sternweis, a wealthy farmer, murdered his wife and three children, set fire to his farm property and then leaped into the flames were made by Coroner Voelker and other officials, after a day's investigation of the tragedy northwest of here.

Four of the bodies, burned beyond recognition, were recovered from the ruins of the house and barn. The missing body is believed to be that of the 9-year-old son.

Sternweis, who was said to be worth $100,000, had not lived happily with his wife for some time, according to the neighbors.

CRUISER SINKS GUNBOAT

Collision During Maneuvers of Swedish Naval Fleet

Malmo, Sweden, Aug. 23.—While the maneuvers of the Swedish fleet were in progress in the sound the cruiser Odin collided with and sank the gunboat Ulf.

The accident occurred at a point to the westward of Hven, a Swedish island in the sound. The entire crew of the gunboat was saved by the cruiser, which stood by after she rammed the smaller vessel.

Safe Robbed In Quick Time

Boston, Aug. 23.—A thief who evidently had been watching for the opportunity and was quick to see it stole $110 and a check for $2.50 from the safe in the office of The Four Brothers Independent Oil company at Allston while the clerk was absent for a few minutes.

Kind of Boy He Liked.

Mother—Is James a nice boy for you to play marbles with, sonnie? Sonnie—Sure. I can beat him every time.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

HIGH TAX RATE AT BROCKTON

Small Gain in Valuation and Loss in Personal

The tax rate of Brockton is $1.30 larger than last year, being $21.00 against $19.70 in 1912. It is the second highest rate of the city, the rate of 1903 having been $21.80. The gain in valuation was $936,465.00, the smallest for 20 years, the total valuation being $50,508,837.00.

For the first time in the history of the city the records show an actual loss in personal property to the extent of $128,880 and a loss in resident bank shares of $16,479.64. It is estimated that nearly $1,000,000 in valuation has been lost by property owners changing their personal estate into nonassessable property and by making oath to the extent of their property.

ROSA HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Waived Hearirg for Assault on Atavio Rizzio

Michael Rosa, the Italian who it is alleged made an unprovoked attack on Atavio Rizzio on Granite street last Sunday, was arraigned in court this morning for assault with intent to murder.

Rosa was represented by counsel in court who waived the reading of the complaint and pleaded not guilty. Dr. Sargent who is attending the injured man at the City Hospital was asked as to the condition of Rizzio, by the court Dr. Sargent said the man was doing as well as could be expected and that he would probably recover.

Council for Rosa then waived hearing in the lower court and was held in $3,000 bonds for the grand jury. Bail was not furnished and he was committed to Dedham jail. His friends in court immediately started out however in an effort to raise $3,000 for the bail.

WOLLASTON LADIES DAY

Power Boats and Yachts Take Out Parties

Music and Refreshments

A fair sky but a stiff southwesterly breeze greeted the yachts of the Wollaston Yacht club Saturday afternoon for its annual ladies' day event. Close reefs were necessary for the yachts, which took out the ladies for a sail and there were but few that participated in the sail. There were a number of power boats connected with the club however and these were kept busy all the afternoon taking out different parties.

After securing their complement of fair freight the power boats scooted about the bay for a time and then would come to the float and take out another freight. This method of entertaining the guests took the place of the usual review. The power boats to take out parties were as follows:

Gracilis, Capt. W. Ellis; Louise, Capt C. A. Richardson; Thordis. Capt. Fred Bursher; Sphinx, Commodore E. A. Bean; Ursula, Capt. J. Frank Merrill; Eagle, Capt. Irving Blossom; Skip, Capt. George S. Sherman; Curlew II, Capt. Charles W. Dill; Milo, Capt. Dan Miller; Icurez, Capt. Hamilton; Kickamuit, Capt. Guy Sass; Leisure, Capt. W. E. Reynolds; Pocohontas, Capt. Harold Bowker; Wanderer IV, Capt. Frank E. Dawes; M. L. R., Capt. M. L. Roberts; Coot, Capt. White; Viking, Capt. Smith.

The yachts that braved the elements with their guests were:

Nautilus, Capt. Q. A. Lathrop—Mrs. Lathrop, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Lathrop, Gilbert Lathrop, Mrs. Charles Murdock Mrs. Joseph Reinhalter, Mrs. L. O'Neill, Miss Alice O'Neill, Miss Gertrude Pletsch, Miss Ethel Nelson, Miss Ruth Gardiner.

Lithia, Capt. Nelson Gould—Mrs. Gould, E. S. Lyons, William H. Edgar, Mrs. Helen Goucher, Miss Dorothy M. Lavery, Miss Helen Ketchum Miss Louise Gunnidge, M. H. Twing.

Claytonia, Capt. C. A. Pinkham—M. O. Pinkham, Charles Howard, Frank Burgess, Jr., J. Lloyd Cranshaw, Charles Sayward, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Eleanor Jones, Miss Edith Chapman.

There would doubtless have been other sailing yachts had it not been for the fact that quite a few of the yachts were at Hull taking part in the midsummer series of the Boston Yacht club.

While the sailing parties were enjoying the water trip the House committee were busy entertaining those who remained on the piazzas of the clubhouse to enjoy the scene. This committee included Edward Cox, Carroll E. Bates, George Sherman and Guy Sass. There was music during the entire afternoon and after the sail light refreshments were served.

In the evening the clubhouse was brilliantly illuminated and there was dancing, the floor being in charge of Roy Lathrop, H. C. Seymour, Charles W. Dill, Harry Linnell, E. H. R. Gardner, Guy Sass, George Sherman, Carroll E. Bates, Edward Cox and A. N. Potterton.

All four sides of the clubhouse were gaily decorated with flags and bunting as well as with the flags of the international code and yacht club burgees, and made a very pretty effect which was made more so during the evening when the house was hung with colored lights.

ENTERTAINED AT SCITUATE.

Seldom is there seen a livlier, happier or more congenial crowd, than those entertained by Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Hewson of Newcomb place at their summer cottage at Planting island, Scituate Beach, over the week end. Saturday afternoon Capt. Frank Monahan of the yacht Victoria took two of the ladies for a sail. Landing at one of the islands for two hours. The ladies were kept busy picking huckleberries for they returned to the camp with fourteen quarts. Such a sight of berries were never seen before. Sunday while roaming around the camp, M. Lizzie Furnald found a rabbit kitten which certainly is a freak of nature and a great sight. She captured it and it can be seen at any time at Mr. Hewson's. All pronounced the outing one of pleasure, the only regret was the shortness of time to remain at the pleasant and quiet resting place. Two much praise and thanks cannot be given Mr. and Mrs. Hewson for they are certainly great entertainers.

DR. HARDY AT BETHANY

Speaks Earnestly at Both Morning and Evening Services

Large congregations greeted Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, D. D., for sixteen years pastor of Bethany church, when he supplied the pulpit on Sunday. He preached at both services. The morning discourse was a doctrinal one on life, in which the maintenance of relations was prominent. Dr. Hardy was never more earnest than on this occasion. In the evening, by request, he related his impressions of the great Middle West. He told of the great growth of Chicago and vicinity. Of its achievements, its big business enterprises and its future. The new American would not be a Pilgrim or a Puritan, a New Englander or a Southerner, but would combine the trait of the German and all the other races, for all were to be found in Chicago. It was at the same time the best city and the wickedest city, and while he was an optimist, he sometimes was fearful of the future. There was great need of money and men to carry on religious work.

At the close of both services Dr. Hardy held informal receptions and was greeted by hundred of his former parishioners. While in Quincy he was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus King of Adams street.

NEW POLICE AUTO.

Within 15 minutes after Milton's new police automobile was put in service Sunday it was called to the Randolph line. The four mile run was made and H. J. O'Rouke booked at the station for drunkenness in less than a quarter of an hour. He was arraigned in court and in less than five minutes was placed on probation and the actual costs of court, fifty cents, imposed.

The machine is 40 horse power and is capable of developing 50 miles an hour. Maurice Pierce, chief of the Milton police designed the body. The seats fold back in such a way that they give place to an especially constructed ambulance basket that swings in such a manner that it withstands practically all the jars of the road.

The machine will be used in police and ambulance service and takes the place of the horse drawn vehicle now in use. In some emergencies it has been necessary to send for the Quincy ambulance.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Elinor F. Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hill of 2 Gothland street, celebrated her seventh birhday on Saturday from 2 to 5 o'clock. The hours were pleasantly spent in playing games, singing, etc. The dining room looked nice to the little ones, and in the centre of the table was the birthday cake with its seven little candles, also ice cream, cake, etc. Miss Elinor received many pretty gifts. The party broke up at 5 wishing Miss Elinor many happy birthdays.

PRIZE DOGS.

Nimrod, owned by Miss Helen Elcock of Copeland street, sustained the reputation she had established at dog shows throughout the state by being 12 times a winner at the Rockingham Fair which closed Saturday. She was awarded five blues, two winners, two reserve winners, two specials and one for being the best fox hound entered. Nimrod Sarah, another entry of Miss Elcock secured a first and Comet took two blues and a winner's ribbon.

RIVADAVIA ARRIVES.

WOLLASTON BLAZE.

A slight fire was discovered in a hen house off Fayette street Saturday afternoon and an alarm was sounded from box 153 at 4.28 P. M. The fire was extinguished before it gained much headway.

TEACHER'S SUDDEN DEATH

Henry L. Upton of the Willard Passes Away

Very Successful and Popular

It is with profound regret that we chronicle the sudden decease on Sunday at Waltham of Henry L. Upton, principal of the Willard school, West Quincy. Mr. Upton was born in Stuben, Maine, in 1878.

After graduating from the Eastern State Normal school in Castine, Maine, he took charge of the department of natural science and mathematics at Gould Academy, Bethel, resigning at the end of the year to accept the principalship of the Rockport, Maine, grammer school.

After six years of successful teaching at Rockport, he was made master of he Apponaug public school in the town of Warwick, R. I., where he had general supervision of the building in which was located one of the training schools of the R. I., State Normal school.

At the end of the year, although offered a substantial increase in salary, he resigned to accept a better position as supervising principal of the Smith grammar school, Augusta, Maine.

Three years ago he came to Quincy to take charge of the Willard school. While there a vocational class for boys, and one for girls, were started and successfully carried on under his supervision.

His early educational training had been supplemented more recently by courses at Harvard in school administration and advanced English.

Mr. Upton was a general favorite among both pupils and teacher on account of his genial bearing and his devotion to the welfare of those with whom he was associated.

His interest and influence were not confined to the realm of pedagogics; wholeome sports and the training of pupils for a wider sphere of usefulness claimed a share of his attention. In the words of one of his colleagues, "he was one whom we had learned to look to and lean upon as a representative of all that was best in our school life."

Mr. Upton was married in 1901 to Miss Edna Lamb who survives him. The funeral services will be held at Camden, Maine, Wednesday afternoon.

DISTRICT COURT.

Samuel Goldberg and George Tone were discharged for assault and battery after both acknowledged satisfaction and paid $3 costs.

Charles F. Wade was fined $15 for drunkenness at Weymouth and ordered to pay an old fine.

TYPHOID FEVER.

Two cases of typhoid fever in Atlantic were reported to the Board of Health this morning and steps were taken to make an immediate investigation to trace the cause. About six months ago the board faced an epidemic of 12 cases which were traced to impure milk. It is expected that they will report the result of their findings within a few days.

ASSEMBLY AT SQUANTUM

Large Party Emphasizes Need of a Community Hall

The dancing season of the Squantum Women's club closed Saturday night with an assembly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Loughan on Bellevue avenue. The largest crowd of the season attended and it was by far the most successful and enjoyable of the many Women's Club affairs. The many enjoyable events of the summer have made the Squantum residents more eager than ever before for an adequate assembly community hall where such affairs can be held.

The dance was under the direction of Mrs. William A. Donovan, Mrs. E. H. Kokerda and Mrs. Herbert A. Smith. The Postal Clerks' orchestra furnished music.

Among those present were—Robert Hamilton, H. A. Dover, C. P. Maloney, the Misses Morrison, Harry Tobin, Miss Ernestine Shores, Miss Mildred Hersey. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson, Joseph Ryan, John Curley, Fred Dawson, Warren Fifield, Mr. and Mrs. E. Anderson, Eugene Rounds, Preston Duff, WiliamLoughan, Parker Reed, James Loughan, Irving Bickley, Miss Helen Loughan, Miss Anne Loughan, Miss Ethel Morse, Miss Doris Libby, Miss Mary Loughan, Miss Margaret Allen, Miss Jennie McLoud, Charles McLoud, Crawford Fales, Mr. Peters, Miss Frances Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Young, Mr. and Mrs. Glynn, Miss Mildred Bean, Miss Frances Bean, Russell Rich, Mrs. Vesta Hogan, Miss Viola Rich, Herbert Carn, Frank Travers, John Jepson, Miss Margaret Grady, Miss Story and Miss Hanson.

WOMAN DROWNED.

Mrs. Marjorie C. Marvin, wife of H. A. Marvin of South Hingham, was drowned in Hingham bay Saturday afternoon, while bathing with the 10 year old son of Frank Moore of South Hingham. The lad was rescued by William Donovan of Hingham. A week ago Donovan rescued Benjamin Young near the same place.

The body of Mrs. Marvin was promptly recovered and several physicians attempted to revive her. A hurry call was sent to Quincy for the pulmotor, and Officer Farrell and the machine was taken to the scene by Benjamin Johnson, who had the Ford car of Morrisey Bros., in use. All efforts failed and after an hour and a half of strenuous work Medical Examiner Peterson pronounced her dead. The boy responded to treatment and was taken home.

WATER SPORTS.

Two Quincy boys cleaned up many of the prizes offered for aquatic sports on Saturday by Cottage Park hotel at Winthrop. Henry W. Safford was first and Royal R. Safford second in the dash; in the two-men relay race, they were first; in the under water race, Henry was first; in the diving for form Royal was second; in the race with feet tied, Henry was second; in the race twice across the pool, Royal was third; on the plunge, Henry was third. There were in all 46 entries.

MRS. MARY F. PENNIMAN.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Frances, wife of Mr. James H. Penniman, was held Saturday afternoon from her late residence, 853 Hancock street. The services were largely attended and were of a simple nature. Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson of the First church officiated. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers.

GYPSY MOTH WORK.

Andrew Stewart, the efficient superintendent of the gypsy moth work in Quincy attended the meeting at the State House of the tree wardens and city foresters of the state. After the addresses there was a demonstration at the residence of Gen. Stephen Weld. Dedham.

DROWNING AT ECHO LAKE

John Grey the Third Victim This Season

John Grey, 28 years of 500 South street was drowned while swimming n Echo lake Sunday afternoon. He was the third victim there this season. Grey sank when about six feet from he ledge. His companion Charles Halpin, reached the bank before he discovered Grey had disappeared. He dove repeatedly, but did not recover the body.

Grey had been riding a log and started to swim to the ledge with Halpin when he sank without a cry or struggle. The body was recovered by the police who dragged the waters.

Grey was employed as an angle iron worker at the Fore River yard. He was born in Ireland and has a brother Edward Grey of Circus street, Roxbury who claimed the body.

AMBROSE F. WARNER.

Ambrose F. Warner died Sunday after a long illness. He was the son of the late William Warner and had many friends in the South Quincy section of the city. The funeral will take place Wednesday morning from his late residence, 45 Penn street. A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. John's church. He is survived by three brothers, John, William and David, and one sister, Mrs. Joseph Bruce.

DEATH OF MINUTE MAN

E. W. H. Nutting Responded at First Call

Re-enlisted in Civil War

Edward W. H. Nutting, one of the Minute Men of 1861, passed away late Saturday night at his home, 210 Liberty street. He was 20 years of age when in 1861 Co. H. of the 4th Massachusetts regiment responded immediately to the call of the government under the command of Col. Abner B. Packard of Quincy. They rendezvoused at Faneuil Hall and proceeded by Water to Fortress Monroe, where they were very welcome by Col. Dimmock the commander. A few weeks later they were placed under Gen. Butler. This regiment took part in first serious conflict of the war, the battle of Big Behel, when Francis L. Souther of Probably some people would attend church if the minister would announce the ball scores between hymns.

It is not clear whether Woodrow Wilson, Billy Taft, or Teddy Roosevelt, is to blame for the drought in the corn belt, but this question will be thoroughly threshed out in the fall elections.

If the senators don't hurry up with the tariff speeches, the Congressional Record will have to come out with boiler plate or patent inside.

Any town can give a historical pageant and sell seats for $1.00 or more each, but if you merely call it tableaus, you can get only 25 cents, and have to throw in a cold meat supper at that.

The theatrical companies having secured a few fellows who once carried spears in New York theatres, are now starting out on the road as the full original Broadway productions.

Ice supply gives out in many cities. This is a year when the icemen don't have to work their brains to find excuses for high prices.

One advantage of the prospective election in Mexico is that it will not be necessary to wait until after the voting before getting the returns.

The senate is now to talk tariff daily from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. That just about gives a senatorial orator time to warm up and get going.

In view of the well known fact that Tammany always uses political contributions for legitimate expenditures like hiring halls, printing, advertising, etc., it does seem as if Gov. Sulzer ought to be ashamed.

People change their politics with some freedom nowadays, and there are not so many men who examine the record of their great grandfathers before deciding how to vote.

George Ade went to Berlin to study night gayety, but did not find it. If George were a married man and his wife went along, this item would be more comprehensible.

The present system of baseball scoring seems highly defective, in that it takes no account of the work done by the players with their mouths.

Parcel post service enlarged. Perhaps before long Uncle Reuben will be putting a postage stamp on a cord of wood, and mailing it to your back door.

The magazine publishers have been adjudged not guilty of violating the anti-trust law, but there is a feeling among contributors that they restrain the trade in poetry a good deal.

It is proposed that each Chicago bride be presented with a cookbook. It is by no means certain, though, that the husbands will eat the product.

The Suffragettes now say "The ballot or death," but when they get it they may be like the men, who are usually willing to go to the polls when it doesn't rain.

COUNTY FAIRS.

There has been much complaint of recent years that the county fairs are not so educational as formerly. Uncle Reuben, getting gay in his old age frivolously follows the races and watches beseball when he ought to be inspecting the cattle sheds.

There is one sure way to make an agricultural fair truly educational. That is to rouse the spirit of rivalry. The farmer likes his holiday as well as anyone. But if he sees a chance to slip a blue ribbon over on his neighbor the grand stand will lose its interest.

Recognizing the basic appeal of the spirit of competition many county fairs conduct contests in handling draft animals correct judging of stock, ploughing, etc. A fair that has these features never lacks the educational element. The ambitious and successful farmers are found watching these rivalries with keen and critical eyes, rather than ringing canes or getting their fortunes told.

SOON BE BACK IN MATTEAWAN

Thaw's Period of Freedon Will Be Short, Says Conger

PRISONER HAS TEN LAWYERS

Will Combat Canadian Government's Intention to Deport Him to Vermont—Jerome Arrives at Sherbrooke to Look After Interests of the Empire State

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 25.—The arrival here of William T. Jerome, one time district attorney of New York county, armed with authority as a special deputy attorney general, caused E. A. Conger, district attorney of Duchess county, N. Y., to make the assertion that by the end of the week he believed Harry K. Thaw would be back in Matteawan.

"And this time he will find a difference there," said Conger. "He will be treated just like others and I believe he will regret he made this attempt to obtain freedom."

Thaw became quite nervous when he learned his prosecutor and the man who has succeeded in defeating his every attempt to get out of the Matteawan asylum was actually here and engaged with the representatives of New York state in mapping out a course of action.

While it is believed that the Canadian immigration department will obtain possession of Thaw on Wednesday and will immediately deport him to Vermont, Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney general of New York, Conger and Jerome are preparing to meet some unexpected move on the part of the numerous attorneys Thaw has engaged.

Sunday was a day of preparation on the part of the different attorneys. Thaw's array of counsel was augmented by William A. Stone, one time governor of Pennsylvania, and Harry Hirschfield of Newburg, N. Y., making ten lawyers he now has conducting his case.

Thaw's lawyers have intimated they have something in reserve to prevent the deportation of their client on Wednesday, but refuse to reveal it. However, the immigration authorities profess to feel sure they will be able to turn him over to the Vermont authorities without any trouble.

The reason for their confidence is that they have proof that Thaw violated the immigration law by entering Canada by stealth, irrespective of the charge that he is an "undesirable," as he is believed to be insane. By resorting to this statute, the immigration experts says, they will be saved the trouble of showing that Thaw is now insane.

Even if Thaw's array of counsel should insist that Thaw was on his way to a port of entry they are prepared to show that he approached a port of entry and then turned back and came into Canada by another route and under an assumed name, denying his identity.

When Thaw's numerous attorneys read the latest statement he had made to the newspaper men and the promise that he would write for them a full statement of his escape, they threw their hands in the air and pleaded with Stone to keep Thaw's mouth closed until his status in Canada has been settled.

However, Kennedy, Conger and Jerome are pleased to have Thaw talk and they read with pleasure his attack upon Jerome, on the friends of Stanford White, to whom he referred as a clique who had always followed him, and his charge that it was due to the Thaw family that Dr. Baker had been removed as the head of Matteawan.

"If he keeps on talking like this I don't think we will have any trouble in proving him insane to the satisfaction of the Canadian courts if such a thing should be made necessary," remarked one of the New York representatives.

HER BODY IDENTIFIED

Mrs. Sternweis Thought to Have Slain Husband and Children

Dubuque, Ia., Aug. 25.—It was positively determined that a body found in the burned barn at the Sternweis home was that of Mrs. Sternweis.

This was determined from false teeth discovered in the ashes. The authorities take this as proof that Mrs. Sternweis murdered her husband and three children, burned the farm buildings and then committed suicide.

The determination of which died first, husband, wife or children, will settle the question of the disposition of an estate estimated in value at $100,000.

In his fight to evade being returned to New York state from Canada, where he is now in jail, Harry K. Thaw has employed a notable array of physicians who, it is expected, will testify as to his sanity. Testimony of various alienists has always been an important factor in his different hearings in New York state. The physicians in the employ of the wealthy Thaw family are: (Top) Dr. R. H. # EXPRESS TRAIN HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

Engine Derailed by Tie Picked Up and Carried Four Miles

Newington, Conn., Aug. 25.—Derailed here by a railroad tie which it had picked up at Berlin and carried the four miles to this point, a big Pacific type locomotive drawing the Connecticut river special, northbound, over the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, narrowly escaped plunging with its train down a ten-foot embankment.

The locomotive stopped within three feet of the edge of the bank. None of the coaches left the rails, and, while the passengers were more or less shaken up, no one was hurt. Traffic on the line was blocked for some time.

Engineer Morris was running slowly at the time and but for this, it is believed, a serious accident might have resulted.

KILLED IN FRENCH RACE

Two Occupants of Hydro-Aeroplane Fall a Thousand Feet

Rouen, France, Aug. 25.—The French aviator, M. Montalent, and a passenger, M. Metivier, were killed by the collapse of their hydro-aeroplane.

Montalent was one of the nine competitors in the hydro-aeroplane race which started from LePecq, near Paris, for Deauville, a seaport in the north of France. He reached Rouen third, and was flying at a height of 1000 feet as he approached the town.

The waiting crowds saw the machine pitch violently and drop. The occupants were thrown out. Both were so badly mangled that they could scarcely be recognized. Montalent was a native of Rouen, where he was one of the largest land owners.

RIB PUNCTURES LUNGS

Providence Brewer Killed by Unknown Man at a Picnic

Providence, Aug. 25.—After expelling an unknown man for being disorderly at the picnic of the Consumers' Brewing company, the police officers returned to the grounds only to find the man they had just turned loose had killed Conrad Fuelner, a brewer employed by the company.

Fuelner was 43 years old and had been employed by the brewing company for many years. Some time ago he suffered an injury, breaking three ribs, and he had not fully recovered. The blow from the intoxicated man had broken one of the ribs, which was not fully healed, and driven one of the shattered ends through his lungs.

Woman President of Railroad

Atlanta, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Cora L. Williams, who was left a fortune of $10,000,000 by her husband, the late Jesse P. Williams, was elected president of the Georgia, Florida and Alabama railroad to succeed her husband.

Nell—I declare! That woman finds out everything. I never knew any one so inquisitive. Belle—That's right. I believe she would even pump an organ.—Philadelphia Record.

FINDS COUNTRY BACKS WILSON

Huerta Now Realizes Sentiment of American People

SHOWING CHANGE OF FRONT

Attitude of Great Britain, France and Japan In Support of United States and Bad Financial Condition of Provisional Government Believed to Have Influenced Mexican Ruler

Washington, Aug. 25.—Provisional President Huerta of Mexico has seen a new light. As a result he is rapidly changing front if all signs and latest reports from the Mexican capital are not misleading.

Huerta finds he has been misinformed regarding the sentiment of the American people and has awakened to the conviction that President Wilson has this country solidly at his back. The Mexican ruler now knows the attitude of Republicans in congress, particularly in the senate, upholding the president.

He knows also that Great Britain, France and Japan, among the great powers, are heartily in sympathy with efforts of the United States to restore peace and tranquility in Mexico.

Then Huerta finds the Mexican treasury depleted, and the greatest difficulties surround him in his efforts to raise more money abroad. His soldiers are clamoring for their pay, long overdue, and there is no money for them.

It is believed Huerta is now willing to resume negotiations recently interrupted after John Lind, President Wilson's special representative, had vainly tried to get him to accede to proposals made by Wilson for establishing peace.

Senator Root is the latest of the Republican senators to come out in support of Wilson's Mexican policy. Congress, for the present, is giving Wilson a free hand in handling the difficult situation.

Besides Great Britain, France and Japan, practically all the Central and South American countries are lending their support to the efforts of the United States to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Mexican revolution.

Unless satisfactory overtures are made by the Huerta government before tomorrow President Wilson will proclaim in person in a message to both houses of congress the principle that constitutional government alone can be recognized in Mexico. He also will outline the suggestions of the United States for the elimination of Huerta and the establishment of a legally constituted administration in the southern republic.

While Wilson has completed his message, which will embrace not only a summary of the proposals made by Lind and the reply of the Huerta government, but a statement of the policy to be followed by the United States, administration officials are reticent to discuss what course would be pursued.

They point significally, however, to the Latin-American statement issued by Wilson during the first fortnight of his administration and declare it will be the basis of what he would have to say Tuesday.

In that statement the president announced he earnestly desired "the most cordial understanding and cooperation betweeen the peoples and leaders of America," and said:

"Co-operation is possible only when supported at every turn by the orderly processes of just government based upon law, not upon arbitrary or irregular force."

TURN OVER NEW LEAF

More Than Fifty Vermont Convicts Become Salvationists

Windsor, Vt., Aug. 25.—The first Salvation Army corps to be formed among prisoners east of Chicago was organized in the state prison here by Salvation Army officials from New York headquarters and divisional headquarters, Hartford.

More than fifty men were sworn in to become soldiers of the organization and promised to live up to all the "articles of war" as required by the army. Each promised to be obedient to the rules of the institution of which he is an inmate, to endeavor to lead an exemplary life and to act in such a way as to be entitled to be called a good citizen.

Elliott to Live In New Haven

New Haven, Aug. 25.—Howard Elliott, the new president of the New Haven road, succeeding President Mellen, will make his home in this city. He has engaged quarters at the Hotel Taft for himself and family, commencing Sept. 1. It was previously announced he would live in Boston.

Aeronaut Killed In Fall

Cincinnati, Aug. 25.—George Augustin, a balloonist, was killed here when he dropped from an altitude of about 200 feet to the ground after an ascension at a local amusement park. To all appearances, he tried to utilize his parachute, but it failed to unfold.

NEW HOUSES.

Inspector of Buildings, Warren S. Parker has issued the following permits during the past week:

Mrs. Robert Davis, removal, Nut island road.

Augustine S. Purpora, alteration, Baxter place.

Annie S. Swithin, dwelling, Glendale road.

Carl V. C. Anderson, alteration, Curtis street.

A. Manda Olson, dwelling, Bennington street.

Assad Koury, mercantile and cottage, Sumner street.

Harold Small, dwelling, Elm avenue.

Frank C. Packard, alteration, Cottage avenue.

Richard R. Cole, dwelling, Tyler street.

Crowell T. Roberts, cottage, Jordon street.

Lorenze Caravaglio, alteration Willard street.

E. T. Walter, auto house, Brook street.

Charles P. Nowe, cottage, Winthrop street.

LITTLEFIELD—CREED.

A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday evening at seven o'clock when Miss Frances Lillie Creed, daughter of Mrs. George H. Creed, 336 Middle street, Braintree was united in marriage to Frank Cummings Littlefield, of Boston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Littlefield. The ceremony was performed at the residence of and by the Rev. J. W. Stephan, Boston, the happy couple making the trip by automobile.

When they arrived at their newly built house on Arnold street, Braintree they were very much surprised by a party of young people who somehow gained an entrance to the securely locked house. They had prepared refreshments and impatiently waited until ten o'clock for the happy couple.

The groom is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Cummings, South Braintree and the bride has a large circle of friends here. She has been a school teacher in North Attleboro, also at the Penniman school, Braintree.

DRY DOCK FOR BOSTON.

Bids for bulkheading about 20 acres of the South Boston flats, filling in, dredging approaches and a turning basin will be opened by the port directors on Wednesday. This is preliminary to building a large drydock at South Boston as agreed on by the port directors and steamship officials, who were in conference here yesterday. Plans also call for space alongside the drydock for ships.

WHAT KNOCKERS HAMMER.

The New York State Railways, Syracuse lines, has been having a series of heart to heart talks with its employees, by means of slips put in the pay envelopes. One of these talks, reprinted in the Aera is applicable to most everyone and is worth reproducing. Here it is:

Boost! Don't knock! Complaints when made to those who can remedy something that needs remedy, are all right. They help! But knocking helps nobody, least of all the man who does the knocking.

A 4-year old child can smash in two minutes a watch which it takes a man a week to make. A knocker can upset the plans of a better man than himself. But it gets him nothing.

Boost the company a bit. You get your living from it!

Boost your boss once in a while. You may be a boss yourself some day!

Boost your fellow employee occasionally. Who knows when you may need his help!

Help along! Knockers usually hammer their own fingers!

Think it over!

30,000 VOICES!

And Many Are The Voices Of Quincy People.

Thirty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney Pills for relief from backache, kidney and bladder ills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Quincy people are in this chorus. Here's a Quincy case.

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I had a lame back and weak kidneys for ten years. Nothing ever relieved me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They soon restored my kidneys to their proper working order and corrected the other ailments. I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills after they helped me so much, and I have watched their effect in other cases since. I have no reason to change my high opinion of them. I still use Doan's Kidney Pills off and on and I wouldn't be without a supply."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

CALAMITIES A BLESSING

R. E. Streeter Tells Why God Permits Them

Lecturing before a large gathering Sunday afternoon in the Colonial hall, R. E. Streeter of Providence explained to his attentive listeners the purpose of God in permitting calamities and sufferings wih loss of life. He called attention to similar troubles in the Lord's day and to what the Lord said of these:

"There were present at that season some who told Him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices. And Jesus answering said unto them, suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such Jerusalem? I tell you, nay; but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower of Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem? I tell you, nay; but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."—Luke 13:1-5.

Noble and praiseworthy in the sight of both God and man are the generous impulses of charity and sympathy, awakened by calamities and sufferings. Those bereaved of home and family are deserving of our deepest sympathy and ablest assistance, but is it not well to inquire at this time, what may be God's purpose in permitting all this suffering?

To comprehend this cause fully, we must go far back, to the very beginning of sickness, pain, death and sorrow to the Garden of Eden, where neither famine, pestilence, cyclone, earthquake nor death in any form was permitted; where man and his surroundings and conditions were pronounced "very good," even by God himself, and must certainly have been greatly appreciated by man, who had to be driven out and prevented from returning by the fiery sword which kept the way of access to the life-sustaining fruits of the Garden.

Adam and Eve, therefore, went forth from Eden convicts, under sentence of death; self-convicted under the most just of all judges, their Creator and Friend. The convicts esteemed it a mercy to be allowed to die gradually rather than suddenly; while to the Creator and Judge this was expedient because of His plan for their future, in which experiences with imperfect conditions would be of great value--a plan for the increase of the race, and for its discipline and final redemption and restoration.

But when it is seen that the Scriptures that teach (extinction), and not life in torment, was the penalty pronounced and inflicted, all is reasonable. God has a right to demand perfect obedience from His perfect creature when placed under perfect conditions, as in Adam's case. And the decree that none shall live everlastingly except the perfect, is both a wise and a just provision for the everlasting welfare of all God's creatures.

Calamities, then, are to be regarded generally as accidents, attributable to human imperfection and lack of experience, or to disturbances incidental to the preparation of the earth for its more quiet and perfect condition during the Sabbath, or seventh thousand years (the Millennium), and for its state of absolute perfection forever after the Millennium.

Man is exposed to these calamities and accidents, and not defended from them by its loving Creator, because, first, man is a sinner condemned to death, and is not to be spared from it, but must be allowed to pass through it; and secondly, by the present experiences with trouble and sorrow and pain, all of which are but elements of death, mankind is learning a lesson and laying up a store of experience with sin and its awful concomitants, sorrow, pain and death, which will be valuable in that Millennial Age, when each shall be required to choose between good and evil. The evil they now learn first; the good, and its blessed results and rewards, but dimly seen at present, will be fully displayed then--during the Millennium.

GARRISON IS MISSING

Process Servers Are Searching For "Press Agent" of Sulzer

Albany, Aug. 25.—It looks as if the efforts of the assembly judiciary committee to trace to Governor Sulzer responsibility for the stories charging that four assemblymen were bribed to vote for his impeachment will meet with failure at its session to be held in the city hall in New York. Process servers are diligently searching for James C. Garrison, who is to be the important witness.

Garrison is known as the governor's "press agent," and in an interview made the charge of bribery. However, the committee wants to know his authority for the statement and Aaron J. Levy, majority leader, has not hestitated to say he believes Garrison got his information from the governor.

Garrison has not been seen in this city since the assembly judiciary committee announced he would be subpoenaed.

The beginning of the third week of rival governorship camps at the capital finds acting Governor Glynn in practical possession of most of the machinery of state, so far as surface indications go.

SODA TANK EXPLODES

Five Persons Hurt and Property Damaged to Extent of $3000

Providence, Aug. 25.—Five persons narrowly escaped being killed when a large tank of soda in Liggett's drug store exploded and showered them with glass from the big window lights which were shattered. The store was damaged to the extent of $3000.

Four women and a man sustained injuries which necessitated their removal to a hospital. They left the hospital after having numerous lacerations and bruises dressed.

Two clerks who were standing near the soda fountain miraculously escaped serious injury. Just what caused the explosion is not known.

TAMMANY DOESN'T WANT GAYNOR AGAIN

McCall Named as Candidate For Mayor of New York

New York, Aug. 25.—Edward E. McCall, chairman of the public service commission, was designated as mayoralty candidate by the Democratic city committee.

McCall's selection by the 630 delegates as leader of the Tammany forces was unanimous, as the Tammany leaders had decided not to renominate Mayor Gaynor, who will be nominated by the "Gaynor League" with a complete independent city ticket of its own.

Herman A. Metz was unanimously designated for comptroller. Joseph A. Goulden was unanimously selected for president of the board of aldermen.

FATAL BOXING BOUT

Twelve Arrests Follow Death of Cowboy Heavyweight Fighter

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 25.—John W. ("Bull") Young, a cowboy heavyweight pugilist, died in a hospital here of injuries received at the Vernon Arena, when he was knocked out by Jess Willard, who is held in $5000 bail.

Immediately after his death warrants charging manslaughter were issued against Willard and eleven others connected with the fight, while legislators, clergymen and clubwomen revived the demand for an anti-prize fight bill in California.

An operation was performed on Young's skull to relieve the cerebral hemorrhage, which followed the knockout in the eleventh round of his scheduled twenty-round fight. Surgeons said death was due to concussion of the brain.

ROCKEFELLER WEEPS

Oil King's Heart Is Touched as He Addresses Deaf People

Cleveland, Aug. 25.—John D. Rockefeller wept as he shook the hands of members of the National Association of the Deaf at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church yesterday.

After the regular service Rockefeller was introduced to Mrs. Elmer E. Bates, official interpreter of the convention.

"My heart is greatly touched," said the world's richest man. "You are infinitely greater blessed than many, many people. Your sign language is beautiful and I wish I knew it. God bless you all."

Rockefeller paused betweeen each sentence, but, finally overcome with emotion, his voice became inaudible.

Water Claims Three Victims

Boston, Aug. 25.—Three drownings were reported yesterday near Greater Boston. Lieutenant James W. Nichols, a Civil war veteran, accidentally fell over the sea wall at Salem. John Gray, 28, of Quincy, was drowned in an abandoned quarry, and Leonard Mason was drowned near Keene, N. H.

Hamburg Places Ban on Football

Hamburg, Aug. 25.—Football has been forbidden in the public schools. The superintendent explains that "it is not provided for in the curriculum."

Society Man Placed Under Arrest at Atlantic City

ALLEGED ROBBER OF FRIEND

Charged With Stealing $5000 In Diamonds From Philadelphian—Prisoner Inherited $50,000 and Quickly Spent It—Suspected of Complicity In Thefts at Narragansett Pier

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 25.—Charged with jewel thefts which, it is said, aggregate $50,000, Harry E. Simonin, society man, was arrested in the surf at the foot of Virginia avenue.

William Oliver of Philadelphia, one of the alleged victims, pointed out Simonin, who was at the time in a bathing suit. Policeman Shaw, a sub in the detective bureau under Captain of Detectives Whalen, took the bather into custody.

While detectives have been searching in Newport, Narragansett Pier and elsewhere, Simonin has been living quietly at 207 Madison avenue, a reasonably priced and respectable house, appealing to the trade of street car men. He rarely left this house, in the three weeks he lived there, except to go bathing.

Sominin is 24 years of age and inherited $50,000 which he quickly spent. Oliver was his friend and picked him up in Philadelphia, taking him to his home. The charge is that Simonin eventually robbed the house of his benefactor, getting $5000 in diamonds. The prisoner admits his identity, but will make no statement beyond this.

Simonin had been recognized once or twice in the surf in the last week or so, and Oliver came here with detectives to locate him. Once before he was found here at the Dunlop hotel on the boardwalk, but escaped.

When his room was searched and Simonin's pockets examined, fifteen pawn tickets were found for jewels left with brokers in Philadelphia and New York.

All these diamonds will be recovered, and in this way it is expected that clues connecting Simonin with various mysterious society robberies will be obtained. He is suspected of complicity in such thefts at Narragansett Pier, Washington and Baltimore, as well as in Philadelphia.

TURN DOWN I. W. W.

Brockton Shoe Workers Reject Advances Made by Organizer

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 25.—Caleb F. Howard, the I. W. W. organizer who has been at work among the shoe factory employes of Brockton for some weeks past, has confessed failure.

Howard came here when sixty employes of the W. W. Cross Tack company went on strike several weeks ago. The men joined a metal workers' organization affiliated with the I. W. W., under the leadership of Howard.

Howard then tried to induce the shoe workers of Brockton, who are obliged to handle the output of the Cross factory in the making of shoes, to go on a sympathetic strike. They turned down the advances made by Howard, who will now try to enlist I. W. W. members in shoe factories in other shoe town nearby.

REAR END TROLLEY CRASH

Motorman Receives Injuries Which May Cause His Death

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 25.—Nearly a score of persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, in a rear-end trolley car collision at Green and Spruce streets, when the blowing out of a fuse on the rear car crippled it so the brakes would not work.

When the cars met the front end of the rear one was caved in, the controller being bent back over the first seat. Lewis Gaines, the motorman, suffered a fractured skull, which may prove fatal, and Peter Lambustis, a passenger riding in the front seat, had both kneecaps fractured.

No one in the first car was injured, and the only persons injured in the other car were those standing between the seats or on the platforms.

ESTABLISHES NEW RECORD

Girl Swimmer Makes Nahant-Revere Course In 2h. 2m.

Boston, Aug. 25.—A new record for the Nahant to Revere swim was set when 17-year-old Isabelle Lavary of this city swam the distance in two hours and two minutes, topping the record formerly held by Annette Kellerman by three minutes.

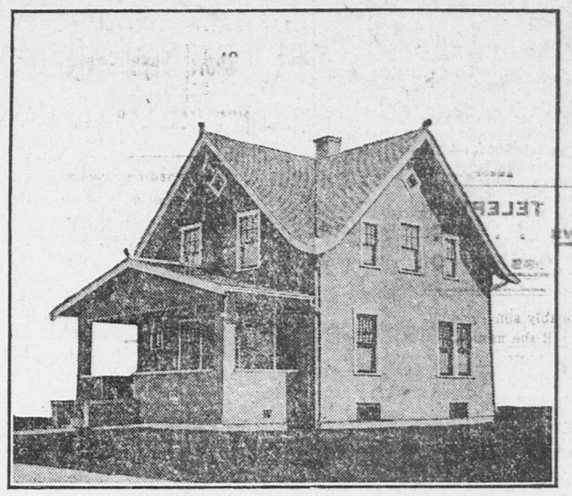

The distance across is three miles in a straight line, but wide detours have to be made on account of the current in the Lynn channel. Big fish weirs make the actual distance about three and one-half miles.

Roosevelt Won't Be There

Albuquerque, N. M., Aug. 25.—Theodore Roosevelt will not attend the birthday celebration of the Progressive party to be held in Chicago on Aug. 30. He so announced while here on his way to New York from an outing in northern Arizona.

A SIMPLE ROUGH CAST COTTAGE.

Design 757, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Here is a cottage plan that makes a very economical home to build. It provides for seven rooms and a bath. Size, 24 feet wide and 26 feet deep over the main part. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet. First story finish, red oak or birch throughout; second story pine to paint, with maple or birch floors in both stories. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,300.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will supply a copy of Saxton's book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains about 250 up to date designs of cottages, bungalows and residences costing from $1,000 to $6,000.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Miss Charlotte Donovan of Chubbuck street who was successfully operated on at the Quincy City Hospital about six weeks ago, is at her home on Chubbuck street where she is steadily improving.

The motormen and conductors of the local car barn are forming a bowling league. They are considering the preparation of a schedule that will be rolled on the Valgin alleys at Houghs Neck and Quincy.

Henry Magee has practically recovered from a severe wound on the knee received in an electric car accident at Adams shore. He was confined to his home on School street only a few days.

Miss Mary O'Neil, daughter of Officer Bernard M. O'Neil of the Metropolitan Park Police, was stricken with a severe atack of ptomaine poisoning Thursday and is at her home on Common street. Miss O'Neil has recently had appendicitis and was slowly recuperating.

Dr. H. Almon Jones of Faxon avenue owner of the Gleamer has decided to sell the trim little cat boat and purchase a much larger one. The Gleamer with Doctor Jones at the tiller has made a remarkable record this summer having six first and two seconds to her credit.

Patrolman Michael Devlin of the Dorchester police station and family are spending the remainder of the month at Houghs Neck, where he has a cottage. Patrolman Delvin writes Lieut. Charles Reardon that the fish are plentiful and that he is getting his share.

The chippers and calkers' local of the Fore River yard has been conducting an organization campaign among the workmen and have made preparations to initiate about 15 at the meeting to be held in the Johnson building Sept. 11. Several applications were acted upon Friday evening at the regular meeting.

RED MEN DEFEATED

But it Took Milton Gym Thirteen Innings

In a fast 13 inning game at Milton Saturday afternoon the Gymnasium boys slipped defeat across on the Red Men of Quincy, 2 to 1, after two men were out. The game was snappy and rated as one of the best ever played in the old town. Neilson, the Milton pitcher, allowed six hits and fanned five men. Carlson of the Reds was hit for four safeties and fanned eight men.

The score:

SOUTH QUINCY WINS 4 TO 3

Had as Rivals the Braintree A. A. Team

South Quincy defeated the Braintree A. A. on the Ward Four playground Saturday afternoon in the first of a series, 4 to 3. Both teams played good base ball.

South Quincy touched up DeYoung and Kalson, for eight hits. Connie Duggan, the winning pitcher allowed but six. Both teams made three errors apiece.

The game was full of hitting and Paul Mulligan, who has signed with Portland secured five putouts in left field. McKenzie's hit was the only one that went for an extra base.

Braintree tied the score in the sixth, when two runs scored on a wide throw to first by Gillis. Matty Niccols drove in the winning run. Braintree, failing to tie in the eighth when the opportunity was ripe.

Gillis made a pretty catch in back of the third and "Dode" Galvin ran from deep centre and dove in time to reach a fly which would have scored two runs for Braintree. The catch was very sensational. Gillis, Ericson and McKenzie figured in the only double play.

South Quincy played McKenzie, Fred Ericson, Byron, Gillis, Theo, Dode Galvin and Niccols. The Braintree team consisted of Sid Duggan, Davenport, Little, Mulligan, Joe McTiernan and Leary.

The attendance was slim and hardly encouraging for a continuation of the series at Ward Four.

The score by innings:

South Quincy 1 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 2 x—4
Braintree A. A. 0 0 0 0 0 2 0 1 0—3

WEYMOUTH TROT.

The winners in the several classes at the matinee meet of the Old Colony Gentlemens Driving club at South Weywouth park Saturday afternoon were as follows: Class B, Katherine; class C, Kaldar; class D, Charlie Morgan; class E, Fancy P; class F, Firebug; class G, Robbin S; class H, Katina's Comet.

15 INNINGS AT WINTHROP

Fore River Apprentices Lose by Score of 3 to 2

It took the Winthrop Athletics 15 innings to defeat the Fore River Apprentices at Winthrop on Saturday afternoon, 3 to 2 and about 1000 fans said it was the best game played at Winthrop for years.

Joe Larkins' boys had practically won the game when a batting rally in the ninth with two out, brought across the tieing run.

The excitement keg was then tapped and all sorts of sensations were sprung on the fans who were nearly frantic because of the stellar demonstrations.

In the 13th an Apprentice reached third and the next batter shot the ball at Monti at short. He stumbled and almost turned a somersault, reached and grabbed the ball and from a sitting position lined it to first in time to throw the man out.

The Fore River Apprentices at three different periods allowed three men to get on base but through fine fielding they stopped scoring.

Atchinson in the 15th singled and stole second. Cox crashed the ball to centre and Atchinson romped home with the winning run. The score:

COLONIALS DEFEATED.

The Crescent baseball club of Somerville won its 12th consecutive victory Saturday afternoon by defeating at Somerville the Colonials of Quincy, 9 to 5. Hebert was in the box for the losers and allowed nine hits and fanned seven men. Smith, the winning pitcher, allowed seven hits and fanned 10 men. The game was exciting in the fifth and sixth innings when the playing of the Colonials indicated a tie score. They failed to net more than five runs. The score by innings:

CLOSE OF SERIES.

A fleet of 67 yachts, including many from the three Quincy Yacht clubs, took part in the closing race of the Boston Yacht club off Hull Saturday afternoon. The race was sailed in a stiff southwest breeze which made advisable except on some of the larger yachts.

In the sonder class the Ellen was again winner.

In class A of the interclub yachts the Meemer of John T. Cavanagh was the winner, beating the Chewink the second boat by nearly six minutes. In class S of the interclub boats the Waweenock of Hayes and Sargent won first position with the Maritiza second, Zoe third and I. X. L. last.

In class D it was the same old story, the Dartwell still had her winning streak with her, and won the race with the Iris of ex-Commodore F. F. Chane second.

WANT FOSS' OFFER PUT IN WRITING

Strikers Not Yet Prepared to Return to Work

Boston, Aug. 25.—The refusal of the strikers at Hyde Park to accept any proposition toward a settlement of the strike from Governor Foss unless it is written and signed and the signature witnessed, featured the strikers' mass meeting Sunday afternoon.

This action followed the refusal of the 1000 strikers to accept or reject the proposition submitted to them by Foss, through Mayor Fitzgerald, that they return to work under the old conditions and their grievances would then be settled.

A special committee will place the answer of the strikers before Fitzgerald, with the request that he try and obtain a written proposition from Foss, and they are to report back to a special meeting next Wednesday.

ROSE STOKES STRANDED

Ohio Hotel Bellboy Steals Pocketbook of Wife of Millionaire

Lima, O., Aug. 25.—Rose P. Stokes, Socialist social settlement worker and wife of millionaire J. P. Stokes, is "stranded" in Lima because of a robbery which she refuses to report to the police. She will not ask friends or hotel people for money, preferring to wait for a reply from a message to her husband.

Shortly after she arrived her $90, practically all the money she had with her, was taken from her room. She believes she knows the bellboy who took it. She does not wish to have him prosecuted.

"What is my $90," she said, "compared with that boy's future? To report him would be against the precepts of my creed."

ASKS $10,000 DAMAGES

Lewiston Man Sues Maine Sheriff For Alleged False Arrest

Lewiston, Me., Aug. 25.—Fracois Frechette entered suit against High Sheriff Stevens for $10,000, alleging false imprisonment.

The action grew out of the arrest of Frechette on an old warrant in a liquor case. The penalty for conviction under the indictment was a fine of $410, or, defaulting in this, four months in jail. When arrested Frechette claimed he had settled the case against him.

Death In Dance Hall Gang Fight

New York, Aug. 25.—Members of a rival gang tried to break up the dance of the Midway Athletic club early Sunday, and when they were thrown out, returned in an automobile and opened fire on the dancers. William O'Shaugnessey was killed and another wounded. Two arrests were made.

Big Plant Resumes Operations

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 25.—The Fall River Iron Works company, owned by the M. C. D. Borden heirs, resumed operations today after fifteen weeks of idleness. This means that 8000 employes will share the weekly payroll of $49,000.

Kills Wife and Self

PRIZE WINNERS.

There will be music on Goffe street, for one of the big prizes in the Herald's street contest has been awarded to Henry P. Hayward. He was number three and will receive a $450 Stieff piano. Several other prizes came to Quincy. Everett McLaughlin of Goddard street, who was number 18, and William A. Fromm of Upland road who was number 25, each receive a Columbia regal graphaphone with five record album and container. Alice Lakin of Robertson street was number 36 and receives a toilet table; Carrie M. Simpson of Safford street, a lady's mesh bag; Frank P. Hill of Gothland street and Luther A. Bennett of Granite street, each a fountain pen.

FORTY HOURS DEVOTION.

The Forty Hours devotion opened at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic on Sunday, with a late mass which was celebrated by Father Stephanus of the Franciscan Order, who is the son of the late Dr. Donovan of Quincy. The Blessed Sacrament was exposed on the altar until 8.45 when prayers were said. A large body of communicants received at the masses this morning and confessions will be heard throughout the day and evening. The devotions will close Tuesday morning when Rev. Fr. Howland Harkins of Amesbury will celebrate the mass.

The Death Stone of Musu

"The Tale Has Served Its Purpose"

By JESSIE L. SHARP

Overhead was the Japanese sky of tender blue. In the far distance the snowy peak of Fujiyama seemed painted against the horizon, and below at the foot of the terraced hill the waters of the inland sea lapped the silver sands.

It was all very beautiful, very peaceful, a place to dream of love or a happy past or a sweet, beckoning future.

Yet Harrington stood there with a grim smile on his lips and murder in his heart. In the doorway of a tiny hillside temple his form bulked large beside the small Japanese guide.

"You are sure?" he asked Taki for the third time that afternoon.

"Of a most positive sureness," responded Taki, also for the third time.

Harrington turned slowly and went back into the temple. Six strides carried him across to the shrine with its image of the sitting Buddha, calm, peaceful and remote in its attitude of meditation.

He did not look up at the image. His eyes sought the small flat gray green stone set in the exact center of the votive table. It was round and polished as if with much rubbing.

"If you have lied to me, Taki," he said sternly to the guide, who had padded softly in his wake, "it will go hard with you. I am not to be taken in by ordinary tourist stories."

"That is a truth," assured Taki solemnly. "I have myself seen it with my own eyes."

"Seen what?"

"The action of the death stone, honorable sir."

Harrington suppressed a shudder, and his voice shook a little as he motioned to the Japanese.

"Go on, Taki. Tell me about it."

Taki drew a long, hissing breath and sat down upon his heels. Harrington leaned against the votive table and gazed moodily down at the green stone.

"A man from my village had an enemy. He wished him much evil, and he persuaded his enemy to come to Musu and to kiss the death stone; said it would bring much virtue. The enemy kiss the stone and fall dead on the table."

Harrington walked slowly to the door and went down the crooked path among the cryptomerias. Presently he came out on the seashore and made his way toward the picturesque little inn where he had been stopping.

His host came forward, rubbing his hands with ill concealed pleasure.

"My lord will not dine alone tonight," he said, smiling. "Other American gentlemen and ladies will honor my worthless house."

Harrington smiled absently, and then as a sudden thought blazed its way through the dark chaos of his mind he asked abruptly:

"These new people—what are their names?"

"Alas, it has escaped my wretched memory," lamented Chenyo, "but one is a tall gentleman of reddish hair and merry laugh."

"Grayson himself. At last!" muttered Harrington, and he hurried away to his tiny room, where a servant was in waiting with water for his bath.

When he emerged an hour later he was clothed in spotless white, and, cool, refreshed and handsome, he was warmly welcomed by the little party of Americans dining on the veranda.

"Dick Harrington, by all that's good!" shouted James Grayson, springing up and grasping Harrington's reluctant hand. "Priscilla, here is an old friend. You remember Priscilla, eh, Dick?" Grayson laughed heartily as his pretty wife arose and shook hands with the grave eyed man.

"Yes, I remember Mrs. Grayson," rumbled Harrington's deep voice, and the pretty color which had graced Priscilla's cheeks faded and left a startled pallor.

Priscilla Grayson had nearly loved Dick Harrington once upon a time. Then Grayson had come and swept her heart into his own keeping. She had never forgotten Harrington's white hot anger, his bitter despair and his denunciation of Grayson, who seemed quite unconscious of playing traitor to his friend.

Harrington had waited his time. Some day, he told himself, there would come the opportunity to pay back Grayson for his treachery. A kindly fate must bring them together, and then—let Grayson look out for himself.

So Harrington had nursed his hatred and jealousy through a bitter year of restless wandering from one country to another, nowhere finding comfort or peace for his troubled heart. A few weeks ago, when he first came to Japan, he heard that the Graysons were in Tokyo. When Taki, his guide, had told him the story of the death stone of Musu it had entered Harrington's mind to lure Grayson here, and—well, the death stone would do the rest.

It was something of a shock for him to find that the Graysons had come to Musu without a lure of any sort save the beauty of its sloping hillsides and the exquisite pictures of sea and land and sky at sunrise and sunset. James Grayson was a landscape painter, and Musu had drawn him to paint her loveliness.

Now, as they gathered round the table, Harrington, the two Graysons and a bride and groom from San Francisco, the Martins, there was little hint of the tragedy that lurked behind Harrington's pleasantries. Priscilla quite forgot her nervousness and laughed and jested with her old lover, never knowing that each light reference to the past was like a stab wound in his heart. His lips grew white, and there was a tense look about his mouth when they arose from the table.

An idle evening followed. They walked on the sands and stood speechless in the glory of the sunset. They saw the moon rise over the distant peak of Fujiyama, and they were dumb when the moon's rays fell on the sacred mountain and turned the crest to a lustrous pearl.

"What a wonderful country!" breathed Mrs. Martin. "It does not seem that anything wrong or wicked could ever happen here."

Harrington drew a sharp breath and looked away. Priscilla Grayson may have heard him, for she looked at his stern profile, and she seemed to find something ominous in its set expression, for she suddenly complained of the cold and urged her husband to return to the inn. The Martins soon followed, and Harrington was left alone with his bitterness of spirit.

The moon swung high in the heavens when a step sounded on the sand beside him.

"By Jove, I'd like to paint this!" cried Grayson's cordial voice.

"Wait until you see the temple," remarked Harrington deliberately.

Grayson sprang up. "Let's go there now."

Harrington got upon his feet and slowly led the way along the crooked path under the black shadows of the cryptomerias. On reaching the temple Harrington pushed open the polished cedar door and held it wide for Grayson to follow him. It was dim and fragrant in there. A candle was burning low before the altar. Some incense sticks were glowing red on the votive table. When their eyes had grown accustomed to the darkness they perceived the mighty image of the Buddha in the recess.

Presently they moved as by one accord and crossed to the votive table. While Grayson's eyes sought the face of the Buddha, Harrington's burning gaze was fixed on the death stone set in the table. The vase of incense sticks stood near, and the red glow from the burning sticks shone down and revealed the dull gray green stone.

"I wish—I wish I could paint this just as it is. But it isn't in my line, as you say," breathed Grayson, bringing his eyes down to meet those of the other man.

Harrington smiled stiffly.

"If you want to attain your desires, old man, all you have to do is to kiss the wishing stone there," he said awkwardly.

"Well, here goes, Dock! I shall wish for the genius to paint the temple as it is. Looks as idiotic as kissing the blarney stone, eh?" Grayson laughed, bent swiftly and would have pressed his lips to the death stone had not Harrington's hand snatched him back.

"Don't!" he cried sharply, placing himself before the table. "You don't know what you are doing, Jim."

Grayson smiled queerly.

"I happen to be acquainted with the death stone of Musu," he said quietly.

There followed a long silence. There was no sound save Harrington's deep agonized breathing. The smoke of the burning incense swirled upward and was lost in the darkness above the table. The face of the Buddha looked down upon them from the lotus leaf throne.

"I did not know. I never suspected until tonight, Dick. I am sorry," said Jim Grayson at last, and his hand rested on the shoulder of the man who had lured him to death and then snatched him away at the fatal moment.

Harrington slowly lifted his head and looked at his successful rival. Grayson read in his eyes all the pain and suffering he had undergone during the past two years, and a great pity filled his heart.

"I don't blame you, Harrington. I would have done the same thing under the same circumstances," he muttered. "Come down to the shore and tell me all about it."

Without a word they went away and sat down on the silver sands. They talked until the gray dawn pearled the east, and Priscilla came to the veranda of the inn, wan and frightened, looking for her husband.

She saw Grayson and Dick Harrington standing shoulder to shoulder talking as only intimate friends may talk. She saw them part with a long pressure of hands and her husband's affectionate slap on the other's shoulder.

"Harrington has been called home to put his shoulder to the wheel of business," he explained to Priscilla, but she guessed that somehow Dick Harrington had recovered his manhood, and she was glad.

Taki, the guide, came running to them. "My lord, Harrington has gone away," he said anxiously. "Perhaps he was offended that I could not tell the straight truth."

"You did not tell Mr. Harrington that the death stone had been stolen years ago and that the stone in the temple is merely a bit of old jade placed there to deceive the unwary?"

"I meant to undeceive him, sir; of a sureness I did."

"Never mind, Taki; the tale has served its purpose. You will never know how or why, but a good man has found himself again. Mr. Harrington bade me give you this." He tossed a silver coin toward the Japanese and went inside, where Priscilla was waiting for him.

CUTTING VENEERS.

Three Methods Are Used—Sawing, Slicing and the Rotary Cut.

Veneer is very thin lumber. The raw material is usually purchased in logs of random lengths. Some are cut into flitches and in turn sawed into thin sections called sawed veneer. In other cases the logs, after being steamed, are shaved to sharp knives. This method produces sliced veneer. Neither of these processes is as extensively used as the third, the rotary cut, although for certain purposes they are of importance.

The structure of the wood, the size of the logs and the use for which the veneer is designed largely determine the process employed. Some foreign woods are very hard and, like soft domestic woods—the conifers, for instance—often produce the best veneer when sawed, while for other woods the slicing method is preferred. Where the product is for fine exterior finish and has to be selected and matched according to the figure or grain, sawing is the favorite method.

The rotary cut process is similar in principle to the slicing process. The log, after being steamed, is revolved against a fixed knife the length of the log and wide sheets are shaved off.

Veneers are cut into a number of thicknesses. The domestic woods, rotary cut, range from five-sixteenths to one-fiftieth of an inch and the imported woods from three-sixteenths to one-thirty-fourth. In the sawed and sliced products the thickest veneer is five-sixteenths.—Indianapolis News.

FEATS OF MEMORY.

One Man Who Astounded Wesley by His Knowledge of the Bible.

One of the most astonishing mnemonic feats on record is recorded by John Wesley. "I knew a man about twenty years ago," writes Wesley, "who was so thoroughly acquainted with the Bible that if he was questioned as to any Hebrew word in the old, or any Greek word in the New Testament, he would tell, after a little pause, not only how often the one or the other occurred in the Bible, but also what it meant in every place. His name was Thomas Walsh. Such a master of Bible knowledge I never saw before, and never expect to see again."

Walsh had a close rival in Macaulay, who, according to James Stephen, could repeat "all Demosthenes by heart, and all Milton, as well as a great part of the Bible."

A strange instance of freak memory is recorded in the case of a servant girl in a Scottish manse. She was almost illiterate, yet when delirious in fever, surprised those around her by repeating long passages of the Bible in Hebrew. The kitchen where the girl spent her evenings adjoined the minister's study. He was accustomed to read aloud. The girl had not understood or consciously taken heed of the reading, yet her mind had seized upon and stored the phrases. — London Chronicle.

The Absentminded Man.

Two men met at a corner during a gentle shower. One had his umbrella up, the other carried his in his hand evidently oblivious of the fact that he had an umbrella.

"Hello," said the oblivious one, "what are you doing with that umbrella?"

"Me?"

"Yes, you. That's my umbrella."

"Your umbrella?"

"Yes, no doubt about it. I know it by the handle. There's not another like it in town."

"Oh, there isn't!" said the accused one, smiling extravagantly, "What's that you have in your hand?"

"Eh? Why, that's my umbrella," said the oblivious one. "I—I—forgot that I had it."—Indinapolis News.

Old Theories About Lightning.

Our forefathers had many theories about lightning. According to them no one could be struck by lightning while asleep, and no tree struck by lightning could be burnt. Splinters from such a tree, diligently chewed, were, of course, pleasanter to the taste than the dentists' forceps. And the old time schoolboy firmly believed that if he were rash enough to mention lightning directly after a flash the important part of his raiment would be immediately torn off. And many were his attempts to land his fellows in that predicament.—London Chronicle.

Bold Comparison.

A visitor from South Africa, on being asked for his opinion of Niagara falls, inquired of the questioner in his turn, "What do you think of Victoria falls compared with Niagara?" The Yankee's reply was, "Victoria falls compared with Niagara?—a mere frontal perspiration."

A Frequent Mistake.

"That man seems to think he is the voice of the people," said the carping observer.

"He does," replied Senator Sorghum "when as a matter of fact he's only one of the people with a voice."—Washington Star.

A Safe Choice.

As between taking a ride with a drunken chauffeur and being shaved by an intoxicated barber, we believe we would choose to walk and let our whiskers drag the ground.—Galveston News.

Point Not Well Taken.

Mrs. Timkins (to small daughter saying prayers)—A little louder, dear, I can't hear. Daughter—Yes, but I'm not speaking to you.—New York Post.

The Odell-Carneys.

WHILE Odell-Carney was studiously adjusting his eyeglass for a final glare at an unoffending bus boy who almost dropped his tray of plates in consequence, Mr. Rodney fussily intervened and introduced the Medcrofts. Mrs. Odell-Carney was delightfully gracious. She was sure that no nicer party could have been "got together." Her husband may have been excessively slow in most things, but he was quick to recognize and appreciate feminine beauty of face and figure. He unbent at once in the presence of the unmistakably handsome Fowler sisters. His expressive "chawmed" was in direct contrast to his ordinary manner of acknowledging an introduction.

"Where the devil did you get such ideas—eh, wot?"

"Mr. Medcroft is the famous architect, you know," explained the envious Mrs. Rodney.

"Oh, yes, I know," drawled Mr. Odell-Carney. "You American architects are doing great things, 'pon my soul," he added luminously. Brock stuck his eyeglass in tighter and hemmed with raucous precision. Mrs. Medcroft stiffened perceptibly.

"Oh, but he's Roxbury Medcroft, the great English architect!" cried Mrs. Rodney in some little confusion. Odell-Carney suddenly remembered. He glared hard at Brock. The Rodneys saw signs of disaster.

"Oh, by Jove! Are you the fellow who put those new windows in the Chaucer Memorial hall? 'Pon me soul! Are you the man who did that?" There was no mistaking his manner. He was distinctly annoyed.

Brock faced the storm coolly for his friend Medcroft's sake. "I am Roxbury Medcroft, if that's what you mean, Mr. Odell-Carney."

"I know you're Medcroft, but, hang it all, wot I asked was, did you design those windows? 'Gad, sir, they're the laughing sensation of the age. Where the devil did you get such ideas—eh wot?" His wife had calmly, diplomatically intervened.

"I hate that man," said Mrs. Medcroft to her supposed husband a few minutes later. There was a dangerous red in her cheeks, and she was breathing quickly. Brock gave an embarrassed laugh and mentioned something audibly about a "stupid ass."

The entire party left on the following day for Innsbruck, where Mr. Rodney already had reserved the better part of a whole floor for himself and guests Mr. Odell-Carney, before they left Munich, brought himself to the point of apologizing to Brock for his peppery remarks.

He was very sorry and all that, and he hoped they'd be friends; but the windows were atrocious, there was no getting around that. His wife smoothed it over with Edith by confiding to her the lamentable truth that poor Odell-Carney hadn't the remotest idea what he was talking about half of the time. After carefully looking Edith over and finding her valuably bright and attractive she cordially expressed the hope that she would come to see her in London.

"We must know each other better, my dear Mrs. Medcroft," she had said amiably. Edith thought of the famous drawing rooms in Mayfair and exulted vastly. "And Mr. Medcroft too. I am so interested in men who have a craft. They always are worth while really, don't you know. How like an American Mr. Medcroft is! I daresay he gets that from having lived so long with an American wife. And what a darling baby! She's wonderfully like Mr. Medcroft, don't you think? No one could mistake that child's father—never!"

Edith may have gasped and looked wildly about in quest of help, but her agitation went unnoticed by the new friend. From that momentous hour Mrs. Medcroft encouraged an inordinate regard for the circumspect. She decided that it was best never to be alone with her husband. The future was now too precious to go unguarded for a single moment that might be unexplainable when the triumphal hour of revelation came to hand. She impressed this fact upon her sister, with the result that, while Brock was never alone with his prudent wife, he was seldom far from the side of the adorable lieutenant. As if precociously providing for an ultimate alibi, the fickle Tootles began to show unmistakable signs of aversion for her temporary parent.

Mrs. Rodney, being quite an old fashioned mother, could not reconcile herself to this unfilial attitude and gravely confided to her husband that she feared Medcroft was mistreating his child behind their backs.

"Well, the poodle likes him anyway," protested Mr. Rodney, who liked Brock, "and if a dog likes a man he's not altogether a bad lot. If I were you I wouldn't spread the report."

"Spread it!" she sniffed indignantly. "Are they not my own cousins? Twice removed," she concluded as an after thought. "Do you imagine that I would spread it? He may be an unnatural father, but I shall not be the one to say so. Please bear that in mind, Alfred."

"Well, let's not argue about it," said Mr. Rodney, departing before she could disobey the injunction.

Of course, there was no little confusion at the Hotel Tyrol when it came to establishing the Medcrofts. For awhile it looked as though Brock would have to share a room with Tootles, relegating Burton to an alcove and a couch, but Constance, in a strictly family conclave, was seized by an inspiration which saved the day—or the night, more properly speaking.

"I have it, Roxbury," she cried, her eyes dancing. "You can sleep on the balcony. A great many invalids do, you know."

"But, good heaven, I'm not an invalid," he remonstrated feebly.

"Of course you're not, but can't you say you are? It's quite simple. You sleep in the open air because it does your lungs so much good. Oh, but I know! It isn't necessary to expand your chest like that. They're perfectly sound, I daresay. I should think you'd rather enjoy the fresh air. Besides, there isn't a room to be had in the hotel."

"But suppose it should rain!" he protested, knowing full well he was doomed.

"You poor boy, haven't you an umbrella?" she cried with such a perfectly entrancing laugh that he would have slept out in a hailstorm to provide recompense. And so it was settled that he was to sleep in the small balcony just off the baby's luxurious room, the hotel people agreeing to place a cot there at night in order to oblige the unfortunate guest with the affected lung.

"You are so dear and so agreeable, Roxbury," purred Mrs. Medcroft, very much relieved. "If ever I hear of a girl looking for a nice husband I'll recommend you."

"It's all very nice," said he with a wry grin, "but I'm hanged if I ought to be expected to remember all of my accomplishments." They were sitting in her room, attended by the faithful duenna, Constance. "First, the eyeglass, then the English language, with which I find I'm most unfamiliar; then a deafness in one of my ears—I can't remember which until it's too late, and now I'm to be a tubercular. You've no idea how hard it is for me to speak English against Odell-Carney. I'm an out and out amateur beside him. And it's horribly annoying to have Ulstervelt shouting in my ear loud enough for everybody in the dining room to hear. It's rich, I tell you, and if I didn't love you so devotedly, Edith, I'd be on my way at this very instant. There! I feel better. 'On my way' is the first American line I've had in the farce since we left Stuttgart.

"And, by the way, Edith, I'm afraid I'll have to punch Odell-Carney's confounded head before long. He's getting to be so friendly to me as Roxbury Medcroft that I can't endure him as Brock."

"I—I don't understand," murmured Edith plaintively. Constance looked up with a new interest in her ever sprightly face.

"Well, you see, he's working so hard to square himself with Medcroft for the break he made about the windows, that he's taking his spite out on all American architects. Confound him, he persists in saying I'm all right, but God deliver him from those demmed rotters, the American builders. He says he wouldn't let one of us build a hencoop for him, much less a dog kennel. Oh, I say, Connie, don't laugh! How would you like it if"— But both of them were laughing at him so merrily that he joined them at once. Burton and O'Brien, who had come in, were smiling discreetly.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

GREETING TO FORMER PASTOR

Rev. N. J. Sproul Preaches to Presbyterians

A crowded church greeted Rev. Mr. N. J. Sproul when he arose to preach at the services at the First Presbyterian chruch Sunday. Rev. Mr. Sproul resigned from the pastorate five years ago to go to Newport. R. I., and his work there is a continuation of his good work while here.

Rev. Mr. Sproul delivered two sermons. one of the themes being "The Prodigal Son." Music was rendered by an augmented choir and the soloists were Mr. Anderson and Everett M. Clark.

Rev. Mr. Sproul is staying at the manse and received many of his friends there Sunday, and this morning. He left at noon for his parish.

Just before Rev. Mr. Sproul started for Quincy he was apprised of a gift of $7,500 donated by a member of the Newport congregation toward the erection of a manse. He did not announce the name of the donor but expressed himself as being especially pleased.

BRIEFS

LOWER RATES IN THE PARCEL POST

Weight Limit Now Raised From 11 to 20 Pounds.

MORE PACKAGES HANDLED.

New Rule Presents Special Advantages to the Merchant Through Consolidation of Zones—Burleson Sends President Wilson Seventeen Pounds of Peaches.

The extension of the parcel post rule, just made effective, raising the weight limit on packages from eleven to twenty pounds and consolidating the first and second zones, thus making a single and cheaper rate for all localities within a radius of approximately 150 miles from any given post office, has already resulted in a marked increase in the number of packages carried by the government, and this number is steadily increasing from day to day.

The first day after the rule went into effect the government's parcel business, especially in the vicinity of the larger cities, took such a jump that it necessitated the sending out of a hurry call for help by the parcel post clerks, and in many cases postmasters found it necessary to transfer some of the other clerks to the parcel post department to tide over the rush.

This sudden increase in the parcel post business was not anticipated in most instances, as it was believed that the growth of new business would be slow and that the benefits of the reduced rates would not be taken advantage of by the public at once. The reason for the sudden jump in the number of parcels mailed under the new rule, it was explained by postal officials, is accounted for by the fact that many of the department stores of the larger cities had anticipated the rule becoming effective and had proceeded at once to ship their suburban deliveries by mail.

Arrangements are now being made by the postmasters of most large cities to augment their facilities for handling the additional business, a thing that most of them had not contemplated doing before the beginning of the autumn rush.

Advantages to the Merchant.

While the new rule obviously greatly benefits the public, it has in it even greater advantages for the merchant, as it enables him to send his merchandise to any point within a radius of 150 miles at a cost of 5 cents for packages weighing a pound or less and an additional penny for each pound over that weight. Prior to the rule becoming effective this rate applied to packages sent to points within a radius of fifty miles, but parcels sent to points within the second zone cost 6 cents for the first pound or fraction thereof and an additional 4 cents for each extra pound.

The following table shows the new rates of postage in the first and second zones:

| Weight. | First Zone. Local rate | Zone rate. | Second zone rate |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 pound | $0.05 | $0.05 | $0.05 |
| 2 pounds | .06 | .06 | .06 |
| 3 pounds | .06 | .07 | .07 |
| 4 pounds | .07 | .08 | .08 |
| 5 pounds | .07 | .09 | .09 |
| 6 pounds | .08 | .10 | .10 |
| 7 pounds | .08 | .11 | .11 |
| 8 pounds | .09 | .12 | .12 |
| 9 pounds | .09 | .13 | .13 |
| 10 pounds | .10 | .14 | .14 |
| 11 pounds | .10 | .15 | .15 |
| 12 pounds | .11 | .16 | .16 |
| 13 pounds | .11 | .17 | .17 |
| 14 pounds | .12 | .18 | .18 |
| 15 pounds | .12 | .19 | .19 |
| 16 pounds | .13 | .20 | .20 |
| 17 pounds | .13 | .21 | .21 |
| 18 pounds | .14 | .22 | .22 |
| 19 pounds | .14 | .23 | .23 |
| 20 pounds | .15 | .24 | .24 |

At the same time that the rule consolidating the first and second zones and increasing the weight limit became effective the "banking by mail" feature was introduced into the postal savings bank system. This now enables postal bank depositors living in remote districts to forward their contributions by mail instead of making deposits in person.

Sends Peaches to President.

Postmaster General Burleson, in order to demonstrate in concrete fashion the benefits of the new rule, immediately after it became effective sent President Wilson a seventeen pound package of peaches.

The postmaster general accompanied his gift to the president with a note, which follows:

My Dear Mr. President—I am taking advantage of the change in the parcel post rates and weight limit, effective today, to transmit to you at this moment a package weighing seventeen pounds, on which the postage charge is 13 cents.

This is an illustration of the opportunity which has been opened to the farmer, the horticulturist, the manufacturer and every citizen of the country who will avail himself of this valuable adjunct of the postal service in the promotion of the commerce and happiness of our people.

Very sincerely, A. S. BURLESON,
Postmaster General.

To this the president replied:

My Dear Mr. Postmaster General—It is with the greatest interest and pleasure that I have received the seventeen pound package of peaches which you sent me, not only because I shall enjoy the peaches, but also because the package illustrates a change in the regulations concerning the parcel post which I am sure will redound to the great advantage of the farmer, the horticulturist, the manufacturer and citizens of many classes. Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

JACK THE HUGGER.

With the arrival of a Jack the Hugger in Quincy the city may be treated to another series of scares which prevailed here a few years ago and resulted in many of the women refusing to walk some parts of the city wihout an escort.

Sunday night the Hugger opened his engagement by suddenly embracing a West Quincy girl in a shaded spot on Hancock street near Hancock court. She fought free of the man and ran to some friends who had walked ahead. They went back but could not pick the man out of the crowd that gathered.

The girl, whose name is withheld at her request, said the Hugger was evidently an Italian. She received a bad scare when the man wrapped her in his arms and sought to plant a kiss on her lips.

IN OLD JAPAN.

There, in the dim blue death of day,
Where white tea roses grow,
Petals and scents are strewn astray
Till night be sweet enow;
The lovers wander, whispering low,
As lovers only can,
Where rosy paper lanterns glow,
Through streets of old Japan.
—Alfred Noyes.

PROGRESS.

New occasions teach new duties.
Time makes ancient good uncouth.
They must upward still and onward who would keep abreast of Truth.
Lo, before us gleam her campfires. We ourselves must pilgrims be.
Launch our Mayflower and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea.
Nor attempt the future's portal with the past's blood rusted key.

PAID THE COSTS.

George Tone of 152 Main street and Sam Goldberg of Cyril street were arraigned before Judge Avery this morning on a charge of assault and battery. They were dismissed and paid $3 costs.

The case grew out of an incident that occurred on Sumner street Saturday in which a goose owned by Goldberg is alleged to have bitten a child of Tone. Goldberg accused Tone and the battle of words waxed warm and finally led to an exchange of blows. Friends separated the fighters and then the race to the courthouse commenced. Goldberg was the first to arrive and was just leaving the building when Tone walked in to make his complaint. The warrants were issued and the arrests were made by Sergt. Larkin. Both men were taken to the station and later secured bail. In court they acknowledged satisfaction. The goose was not presented in evidence.

LAUNDRY ENTERED.

When Hing Kee returned from Boston on Sunday evening he found laundry and the contents of suit cases scattered all over the floor of his laundry on Saville street. He immediately communicated with the police who found that entrance had been effected by forcing a rear window. A hurried inventory showed that three pairs of stockings had been stolen. A cash drawer containing about $3 defied the efforts of the burglar. The tools used were a silver knife, scissors and a jack knife, all of which were found on the premises.

The cutlery found in the laundry had been stolen from Dennen's restaurant.

BASSETT—ATKINSON.

Frank F. Bassett of Long Island, N. Y., and Miss Bertha A. Atkinson of Vine avenue, were married Saturday by Rev. Edward Norton, after Judge Avery had set aside the five day law, so they could immediately go to New York, where they will make their home The bride is a nurse and was born in Ireland.

TO CLOSE FORGE.

EXPLANATION FROM EX-SENATOR McDEVITT

Tells of the Lobby at the State House and How It Double Crossed Him

Looks As If He Had Made a Bad Matter Worse

John J. McDevitt, who accepted suspension rather than apologize to the Senate for unproven charges made early in the spring opened his campaign for vindication in his home ward Monday evening. He spoke from an open wagon at Cross and Copeland streets to about 300 people. Representative John Murphy of South Boston preceded him and Daniel Corcoran, councilman from Ward Four, presided.

Mr. McDevitt made a lengthy speech. He said," this I presume is the most important night in my life. In the past six months there has been a good deal of talk. From my lips shall fall the truth and there may be a torment rage in the state but I have good counsel and they demand that I speak out and spare no one. He urged those present to use Messrs. Shea and Murray, his opponents, respectfully when they appeared in the ward.

The fight is not between them and me but between the State House lobby and me for the control of the vote of the people of this district. My trouble started before the committee on public lighting. One day I saw a lobbyist of the Citizens' Gas Light Co., of Quincy going to Senator Timility and Representative Underhill of Somerville, and the thought struck me that both were members of the lighting committee. I went to Timility and said: "I saw a man talking to you, and if you dare kill my bill I shall show you up on the floor of the Senate." He did not vote for it.

One of my opponents was Underhill, and he made no answer when I told him what I saw. Then the lobby resolved to get me because I was a "bad man" for corporations. When President Hamilton of the Board of Trade spoke on my gas bill he said he was in favor of cheaper gas but would rather pay $2 for good gas than 80 cents for gas such as is furnished in some parts of Boston. You know Representative Dwyer of Weymouth opposed my bill which was to reduce the cost in his town and said the people did not want it cheaper.

Coming to the matter I am willing to stake my political career on. Mr. LaBrecque, Mr. Noonan and myself went to Wollaston. Representative Leslie and myself were invited to the platform, and I was invited to speak. After touching on cheaper gas and the elimination of grade crossings, I made the statement, and this is the truth and the only truth, "you no doubt will be interested in my duties in the Senate. To me political life has been a great disappointment. When you go up there for bills there is a strong lobby and there are many opportunities around a man if you desire to take advantage of them.

Mr. McDevitt then told of his conversation in the corridor with a man who subsequently told him there was $300 in it if he voted for a certain bill, but emphatically stated Monday night that he wanted to deny that he used the words "Boston Democrat."

He then spoke of going to a newspaper office where he told Mr. LaBrecque that he had not used the words "Boston Democrat" and cautioned him not to say he did. I went downstairs and a few moments afterward Mr. Noonan came down and told me the game was up, as Mr. LaBrecque had used the words.

The next morning, after the report had appeared in a Boston paper, Senator Mack came to me, told me he was a lawyer, and that he would fix it up. I asked him to raise his right hand, and I would tell him all. He replied that as a lawyer there could be no violation of confidence and I repeated my story.

Then Senator Horgan came running to me and said "Buckley has been to see me and is a nervous wreck, and if you mention his name he will die. Senators Mack and Horgan both appealed to me to save the man, and in the charity of my heart I offered to protect him to the best of my ability. We prepared a statement, and I submitted it, and the first one to go back on his word was President Greenwood.

Questions were hurled at me by him and others, and I declared I had been double crossed. Senator Timility told me to treat the matter as a joke and I replied it was no joke, and that I couldn't do as he could, out in his ward and send around 75 or 80 barrels of beer and fix things up. It resulted that I would not apologize.

After I confided in Senator Mack he was not man enough to register as my counsel. Then John McAnarney appeared and I told him the story, and he said he could not advise me legally because he was a friend of Buckley's. "Jim" Vahey stood by when I was being questioned and did not try to steady me at any time.

After some skirmishing the matter was fixed up, and the frame-up was that Senator Buckley should come into the committee and say that he was the man, but that he had heard I was a serious man and that there was no bill he tried to bribe me on. I was to let it go at that. I refused to do this. You all remember how the press abused me. They are feted and dined by Senators and the lobby O. K.'s it before it is released. And the committee that gave me a hearing committed an act of discourtesy by giving out to the press first what they intended to do in my case.

I retained Daniel O'Connell as counsel and on my way to his home in Dorchester I met Buckley at Geneva avenue. He asked me to let up on him and I told him to take a sneak, he was lucky to get out of it as easy as he did.

I sacrificed my office and have not yet apologized. The state lobby is bound to beat me at the primaries. Have confidence in me, you voters, and my friends. There are men who will leave my camp and will say I ought to have taken the bribes, but with me there is no friendship where there is no trust. I care not how much they are against me. I have physique and courage and I will cover the district.

I am the first Democrat to be elected from the district, and if I cannot win again none other can. I gave no man a bluff, and I fought them to gain my point. Meet me in the fight against the state lobby. I was denied a trial such as is given the worst criminal in the Commonwealth.

Mr. McDevitt then spoke of the bills he worked in favor of at the State House and mentioned his efforts which resulted in helping get a young girl out of the Danvers asylum. He also spoke of several difficulties he had with the probation system at Deer Island.

During the debate on woman suffrage Chairman Beasely said that if the amendment was passed the Senate would be full of McDevitts. I can look every married woman and every single girl straight in the eye and any one that attacks my moral character in this campaign, be it through the newspapers or otherwise, I will put him behind the bars for it.

BOSTON TO QUINCY

Land Takings for Metropolitan Parkway

To Connect Two Parkways

Engineers of the Metropolitan Park commission are making surveys and obtaining options on land for the construction of three boulevards, which will provide connecting links between outside towns and Boston and its suburban districts, says the Monitor.

The work in its initial stage calls for an expenditure of more than $500,000, which has been set aside by the Legislature out of an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the improvement and laying out of state highways.

Of the three roads now before the engineers the largest is that to be constructed between Columbia road in South Boston and Quincy. This road will start near the Plymouth division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad in Boston and follow the tracks practically all the way to Quincy. It will be built for automobiles and light vehicles only.

One of the principal reasons for building this boulevard it is said, is to open up territory in Neponset, Atlantic and other points on the route. For the development of this property the Legislature appropriated $475,000, and this was to be used for the acquiring of land only, the money with which to build the road left to be acted on at a later date.

Much of the work of mapping out this road and the purchase of property has already been done by the engineers.

Another proposition which the engineers are busy on is the establishment of a road from Bowdoin square in the town of Dedham to the Stony Brook reservation, a distance of about one mile. For the acquirement of property in connection with this road $10,000 has been set aside. Through the co-operation of citizens in Dedham and the engineers of the commission options on nearly two thirds of the property for this road have already been obtained.

The third road is in Woburn and is to cost $50,000. It will extend alongside of Horn pond and continue to Mystic Valley park, connecting with roads leading to the Middlesex Fells. This thoroughfare will be about 1 1-2 miles long. Already options on much of the property required for its construction have been obtained.

ENTERTAINED AT SQUANTUM.

The Rev. and Mrs. John Eckstrom of Worcester, who have a summer home at Squantum, entertained a party from the Gethsemane Swedish Lutheran church including the members of the choir on Sunday. After a delightful unch the party visited several interesting places about Squantum and later all congregated on the front piazza of the pastor's home and sang several songs and gave cheers for their host and hostess. The party made the return trip to Worcester leaving Squantum at 8. Among those in the party were: Ester Anderholm, Ellen, Mollie and Hilma Pearson, Signe Ogrne, Lillian Skarin, Elsie Lindstrom, Helen Winberg, Agnes Carlson, Agnes Larson Ann and Edith Johnson, Albert Winberg, Eskil Englund, Victor Dahlquist, Frank Lekeberg, George Nelson, Haskal and Fred Fahlstrom, Albert Anderson, Svea Nyman, Lillian Person, George Johnson, A. E. Fahlstrom and A. Carlson.

Harry G. Studley has located in New York city at the Hotel Albert, University place, for the coming two months. Mr. Studley is representing the Liability & Casuality Companies of Massachusetts in New York city.

A. L. MEAD NOW CAPTAIN

Passed Examination With a High Per Cent

Mayor Stone has appointed as captain at the Central fire station A. L. Mead for many years in charge of Hose at Quincy Point, being driver of that apparatus. To fill the vacancy in the Fire department caused by the retirement of Charles P. Costa, the Mayor has appointed as a fireman Charles L. Litchfield of 58 Quincy street.

Mr. Mead recently took the civil service examination for the position of captain, and was successful with a very high rating, higher the commission say than is usually obtained by Boston candidates.

Capt. Mead has had many years experience as a fireman. Before the incorporation of the city government in 1888 he ran with the Vulture hand engine, and under the city government was a member of Hose 4. On March 12, 1898, he was appointed by Mayor Sears as a permanent fireman and was stationed at Quincy Point, being the first permanent man there. For eight years he was alone at the station, but since then there have been two permanent men. He will assume his new position at the Central fire station on Wednesday at 10 A. M.

RECEPTION TO REV. FR. GRADY

Several Quincy Born Priests Will Make Addresses

The committee planning the reception to Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady, the returning pastor of St. Mary's parish who has been in Europe, completed arrangements Monday evening. The affair will be held in St. Joseph's Hall Thursday evening and an invitation is extended to one and all.

An orchestral concert will be given and speaking by Quincy and West Quincy born priests will take up a large part of the program. Among them will be Rev. Fr. Andrew J. O'Brighton, D. D., of Brighton Seminary, Rev. Fr. John Sheahan, Rev. Fr. Francis Hart of Canton, Rev. Fr. Edward Fegan of Mayward, Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, Rev. Fr. John J. Casey, Rev. Fr. Walter Quinlan, Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe and Rev. Fr. John McNiff.

SCIENTIST SERVICE.

The funeral of Loughlin McDonald, who died suddenly in South Quincy on Saturday, was held from the Hall undertaking rooms Monday afternoon. Services were conducted by John E. Sprague of the First Church of Christ, Scientist church and burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. A delegation was present from Quincy Loyal Orange Lodge of which the deceased was a member. There were many floral tributes.

HOUGH--COLLINS WEDDING

Miss Annie Collins Wife of George Arthur Hough

There was a pretty wedding reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Collins, 41 Grant street, Monday evening following the marriage of their daughter, Miss Annie, to Mr. George Arthur Hough of Hayward street, East Braintree, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hough. The Rev. Nelson Price of the East Braintree Methodist church officiated.

The bride was given away by her father. The best man was Alfred Hough, and the maid of honor, Miss Phillis W. Collins, a sister of the bride. The bride was married in a dark blue traveling suit. The house was decorated with white crepe paper.

The bride presented the maid of honor with a beautiful silver mesh bag.

Mr. and Mrs. Hough will visit the Slater estate at Webster on their wedding trip, and will make their future residence on Hobart street, East Braintree, and will be at home in September.

CONTRACT FOR MELVILLE.

The New York Shipbuilding Company of Camden, N. J., has received the contract for the construction of the torpedo boat destroyer tender Melville, authorized by the last session of Congress. The bid for the construction made by the concern was $1,310,000.

The Melville is to be used as a repair and supply ship for a flotilla of 15 destroyers and will have provision for quartering a flotilla commander so that the tender also may serve as the flagship of the flotilla. She will carry stores, spare parts and a large reserve supply of torpedoes and ammunition. She will be armed with eight five-inch guns for her own defense.

DECLINE OF AN OLD ART.

At this time of year the country bred housewife feels an uneasy sense of duty left undone, even though she is now living in a city, if she is not conducting exensive and fragrant enterprizes of canning and preserving fruit.

In her girlhood failure to provide this luscious store was regarded as indicating shiftlessness. Aunts and cousins dropped in unexpectedly for long visits. A housekeeper without a stock of appetizing jams and jells was much like a factory owner today who should have no advance provision ready in case of a breakdown of machinery. The store of canned goods in the cellar was a reserve against emergencies and future needs that gave the housekeeper a feeling of confidence.

Modern enterprise has almost made uneconomic this former enterprise. The factory buys fruit wholesale, it makes free use of child labor and other low priced help, and sells at a price almost as low as the fruit costs at the market.

The disappearance of this art is a loss. Canning day was a home festival that differed from the other seasonal asks. The rich fragrance of the fruit steamed through every room in the house, giving a preliminary taste of future epicurean joys. The translucent glasses with their amber and crimson fruit feasted the eye.

Pherhaps when the express companies begin to deliver fruit direct from the farm to the kitchen door, as has recently been suggested, the housewife can get her raw material at a price making posible the revival of this ancient art. Whatever may be said for the machine product of the factory, there are few families that would not prefer the product of the home kichen, concocted after traditional recipes handed down from former generations or given by friends, and done under the intelligent eye of the housewife.

STYLE AND EXERCISE.

Although the newspaper man may not be competent to pass on women's styles, he will venture the remark that prevailing fashions as seen at the summer resorts are unsuited to healthful exercise. Many men are saying that formerly their wives or women friends could keep well up with them on active mountain or country walks. Now the girls patter along with abbreviated steps in their narrow skirts. To keep up they need twice as many steps. That leads to a nervous pace, so most women relax to a slower and ineffective gait.

The white shoe fad also is seen not merely in the docorative costumes of the hotel piazza, but on rough tramps. The white shoe girl picking her way from stone to rock and out of the way of dirt or mut, seems as unsuited to her position as if she were trying to sweep the house in an evening gown.

The growing interest among women in athletics is producing a much more vigorous female type, which is of vital importance to the race. The modern girl is taller and broader, as the result of her tennis, her horse-back work, her golf, and her swimming. If women had always been as athletic as they are today, there is little reason to suppose that the epithet the "weaker sex" would ever have had any meaning. If the remark may be permitted, it does seem too bad when any styles come along that for the time being hinder this better physical development.

The Pennsylvania railroad some time ago warned its women passengers against narrow skirts. Now it tells its employees, if a woman slips on its property as the result of the hobble, to report the fact in print. The company feels that it is a dangerous style and one that causes accidents. If women were compelled by law to wear it, how they would parade the streets with their banners of protest!

WILSON'S POLICY TOWARD MEXICO

Is That of Real Friendship Rather Than Hostility

CANNOT RECOGNIZE HUERTA

Message Proclaims Sympathy of Americans For Neighbors In Rebellion-Torn Republic and Shows to the World Our Efforts to Establish Peace Which Will Be Lasting

Washington, Aug. 26.—President Wilson read last night to the members of the senate committee on foreign relations and the house committee on foreign affairs, Republicans as well as Democrats, the message on the Mexican situation which he will deliver in person today to a joint session of both houses of congress.

It is a message of friendship, not hostility, and precedes a policy of absolute non-interference. It proclaims to the world the sympathetic feeling the United States government and the American people have for their neighbors in the rebellion-torn republic south of the Rio Grande.

It records the views of the United States on constitutional government, its unalterable opposition to governments set up by the irregular and arbitrary acts of ambitious individuals and formally announces that the government of Victoriano Huerta shall not be recognized.

The efforts of the United States to bring about a peaceful settlement of the difficulty through the representations made by John Lind, special envoy of President Wilson, are outlined, as well as the answer of the Huerta government.

The United States had proposed that a constitutional election be held, and that Huerta should not be a candidate. To these suggestions, through which the United States believes peace could be restored, Huerta has replied in the negative. Foreign governments generally, since that rejection, have been active in support of the American policy to persuade Huerta to yield.

There still was some hope at the White House that word of concessions may be telegraphed from Mexico City before the president goes to the Capitol to read his message, a circumstance that would defer the reading of the message and perhaps result in an abandonment of the idea at this time.

The delivery of the message is an essential factor in the program of the American government before the world. It is not a preliminary to any drastic measures, however. It is merely the announcement of a policy which will be maintained for years, if necessary, until constitutional government shall be re-established in Mexico.

The effect of the message, it is hoped by administration officials, will be to convince the world of the sincere efforts of the United States to bring about peace, and forestall pressure that might otherwise have been exerted by foreign governments for a sterner policy toward Mexico.

Having exhausted every avenue of influence on the Mexican authorities, the administration does not feel compelled to intervene by force of arms to establish its views. Every opportunity will be given to American citizens to withdraw from the danger zone, and strict neutrality in shipments of arms will be observed.

Lind's Mission Fails

Mexico City, Aug. 26.—John Lind left for Vera Cruz this morning and will probably sail for the United States Thursday. The negotiations initiated by him have failed in their object.

Lind said he was not returning on a warship, but expected to sail on the Ward liner Morro Castle. He refused to prognosticate the developments in the international situation and would not say whether he had been ordered by the president to return.

CAMINETTI TRIAL BECINS

Son of Federal Immigration Commissioner Appears In Court

San Francisco, Aug. 26.—F. D. Caminetti, companion of Maury I. Diggs in the elopment from Sacramento, Cal., to Reno, Nev., with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris, which resulted in the conviction of Diggs last week for violation of the Mann white slave act, was brought to trial today.

Simultaneously with the second of the Diggs-Caminetti cases, the Western Fuel case was called for trial today. All three were bracketted in public notice when United States District Attorney McNab resigned, charging that prosecution was being delayed by political and personal influence.

Boy Killed In Auto Accident

Middletown, Conn., Aug. 26.—Edward Wessel, a young boy, was instantly killed and Niles P. Hough and Roswell J. Clapp were seriously injured when their automobile went over an embankment in Higganum, dropped fifteen feet to a brook and overturned pinning the occupants under it.

QUITS PHILIPPINE BERTH

Forbes Pays His Respects to Congressman Jones of Virginia

Manila, Aug. 26.—W. C. Forbes, governor general of the Philippines since November, 1909, sent his resignation to Washington. It is effective Sept. 1. Forbes will leave directly for the United States.

It was only Sunday, Forbes says, that he was apprised of the appointment of Francis B. Harrison as the new Philippine governor. His friends feel that he deserved more courteous treatment after so long a service.

Forbes publishes a reply to attacks by Representative Jones of Virginia, who, in pressing for the passage of a bill giving "independence" to the Philippines, urged the removal of Forbes. He declares the Virginian representative cannot persuade Americans that they are incompetent to manage a governmental enterprise and that he cannot advance his case by "unpatriotic and unwarranted assault upon the good names of the country's representatives."

HELD FOR EXTRADITION

Inquiry Being Made Into Recent Movements of "Baron" Simonin

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 26.—Harry H. Simonin, arrested here charged with stealing several thousand dollars' worth of jewelry in Philadelphia and who, the police say, posed as a society man, is being held for extradition to Pennsylvania.

Meanwhile an inquiry will be made into his recent movements to see if he had any connection with big jewel robberies in New England and other places. Simonin is accused of robbing the home of William Oliver of Philadelphia, who had befriended him after he had run through an inherited fortune of $50,000.

The accused man says he comes from a titled family and that he lost a baronetcy through coming to this country against the wishes of his mother. He has a reputation as a large and reckless spender.

YOUTHFUL LOVERS DIE IN MOTOR BOAT

Tragedy Believed to Be the Result of a Death Pact

Rockland, Me., Aug. 26.—A power boat drifting seaward, with the dead bodies of a young man and young woman lying in the bow, was a grim discovery made by Harry Dyer, a fisherman.

The ocupants of the death craft were Carl W. Perry, aged 20, and Misss Angie Spear, 19, both graduates of Rockland high school this year. They were engaged to be married.

No messages were found in the boat or on the persons of the young couple to tell the cause of the tragedy, but the position of the bodies and entire absence of anything resembling a struggle leaves strong ground for the belief that the two deaths are the result of a suicide pact.

The deed was committed with a 38-calibre revolver, which was found clutched in the right hand of Perry.

LAST OF CROW INDIANS

Death of Luke Metimop, Claimed to Be 120 Years Old

Saginaw, Mich, Aug. 26.—Luke Metimop, the "Last of the Crows," died on an Indian reservation near here. Metimop was said to be 120 years of age.

For many decades he was closely associated with the Crow reservation and for some time had been its only surviving founder. He was blind for the last three years. One of his sons is reported to have reached 90 years.

Metimop settled in the Saginaw valley before white men began to colonize that section. Although quite a leader, he was considered more of a farmer than a fighter.

VERDICT IS APPLAUDED

Factory Superintendent Convicted of Murdering Young Girl

Atlanta, Aug. 26.—Leo M. Frank was found guilty of the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan, an employe at the local National Pencil company's factory, of which Frank was superintendent.

All spectators had been excluded from the courtroom when the jury reported, but a large crowd which had assembled outside the courthouse received the news with noisy demonstrations of approval.

The jury had listened to the presentation of evidence and argument of counsel for more than four weeks.

Argentine Beef on the Way

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 26.—The first cargo of chilled beef for the United States has been sent by the steamship Vandyck. The cargo, consisting of 1000 quarters, is considered as an experiment. More will be sent if this shipment is favorably received.

Johnson's Appearance Delayed

London, Aug. 26.—Fearful of a riot, the management of the Metropolitan music hall announced that the engagement of Jack Johnson, the heavyweight pugilist, has been postponed. He was to have appeared last night.

ARNOLD'S OFFER TURNED DOWN

Wants to Testify Before Sulzer Probe Committee

SEES "FIENDISH FRAME-UP"

Claims He Has Evidence to Indict Murphy, Levy and Frawley For Conspiracy—Sulzer Supporter Says He Has Seen District Attorney In Regard to the Matter

New York, Aug. 26.—Declaring he was furnished by "ten prominent New Yorkers" with evidence sufficient to indict Tammany Chief Murphy, James J. Frawley and Aaron Levy for alleged conspiracy, bribery and "the most fiendish frame-up," Lynn J. Arnold of Albany called on the judiciary committee of the assembly to summon Murphy, Frawley, Levy and others to testify before it.

Because James C. Garrison was not present, the committee bluntly refused Arnold's offer to testify regarding alleged charges by Garrison that the impeachment of Sulzer was obtained through coercion and bribery.

Chairman Goldberg announced that because the assembly sergeant-at-arms had been unable to find Garrison, the subpoena issued for him Friday has not been served. To hear Arnold now, declared Goldberg, "would be unintelligent."

When Assemblymen Gibbs and Schapp, minority members, protested against "bottling up" Arnold and keeping him "jumping between Albany and New York" without hearing him, spectators who filled the room at city hall applauded.

In the statement Arnold prepared to deliver to the committee he declared he had seen District Attorney Whitman regarding the evidence. He claims it should be turned over to Whitman and the Albany district attorney and not the assembly judiciary committee.

"For several weeks," said Arnold, "serious charges have been made. The committee should subpoena Charles F. Murphy, Edward E. McCall, Norman E. Mack, William H. Fitzpatrick, Martin H. Glynn, Patrick E. McCabe, John H. McCooey, Victor J. Dowling, Robert F. Wagner, James Frawley, James A. Foley, Alfred E. Smith, Aaron J. Levy, Thomas Carmody and all others mentioned in these connections."

The Sulzer supporters offered no comments regarding the report that Bishop Broderick had evidence which would show that Sulzer was involved in dealings with a Cuban contracting firm while he was a congressman.

MILITANTS FOR TRUCE

Mrs. Pankhurst Advises Her Followers to Take a Holiday

London, Aug. 26.—Rumors which have been current of a truce between the militant suffragettes and the British government seem to find support in a letter written by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst to her followers, advising them to take a holiday for the present. She says:

"I am gathering up strength for a renewed battle when the holiday season is over. I hope that every one of you, also, will take advantage of the present lull in political activity to take the rest and change you have all so richly deserved."

Another indication that an agreement has been reached is the cessation by the authorities of the enforcement of the provisions of the "cat-and-mouse act." Out of forty-three suffragettes sentenced to imprisonment for various offenses only one is now in jail.

TOTAL FORCE OF 10,800

New York Police Department to Have 500 More Men

New York, Aug. 26.—New York city is to have 500 more policemen. Police Commissioner Waldo says provision has been made for the added expense and he will start appointing the new men at once. The addition will raise the police force to 10,800.

Waldo, who has just returned from studying European police methods, announced that he would adopt the system of gymnastics used by the police of Sweden.

TURBINE ENGINE BLOWS UP

Nineteen Men Hurt and Many Panes of Glass Shattered

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 26.—Four men were badly cut by flying glass and fifteen others were slightly hurt when an explosion of gas occurred at the Lynn Gas and Electric company.

A leaking gas pipe in the water gas department allowed gas to escape into a small turbine engine, which exploded, shattering every pane of glass in the three-story building and doing other minor damage.

Forced to Kill Faithful Dog

Poultney, Vt., Aug. 26.—Guarded by his pet dog, who refused entrance until officers were forced to shoot him, the body of Charles Beals was found in his rooms in the Driscoll block, death from hemorrhage having occurred about six hours before.

FESTIVAL AT PLAYGROUND

Public Invited to Closing Exercises on Thursday

The closing day exercises of the City Playgrounds are to be held on Thursday afternoon at the Ward Three grounds, and the public is invited to attend the very fine program which is to be presented by the children of the various playgrounds. There will be dancing, group games, athletic games, races, comic stunts and the presentation of prizes for the all-round tests. Mayor Stone is expected to present the prizes.

At the conclusion of the program a peanut scramble will be given for boys and one for the girls. These events always bring out more entries and occasion more merriment than almost any other, and from the large number of children that will be present they ought to be better and funnier than usual.

A full program of the events and prize winners will be published tomorrow.

The next to the last week of the city playgrounds brought out one of the largest attendance records of the season. Ward Three had the fine total of 1,859 girls and 875 boys. Ward Two had 489 girls and 420 boys while Ward Four had 350 girls and 249 boys. The total attendance being 3,357.

WHERE HE GOT IT.

A country politician in Pennsylvania managed to get elected to the Legislature at Harrisburg for one term.

When he came back he built himself a house, costing about $20,000. His old neighbors, who knew he had no money before he went to Harrisburg, and who knew the salary of a Pennsylvania legislator, were curious to discover where the returned statesman got means to build the house.

So one day the committee waited on the man who built the house and the spokesman said:

"Jim, we think you owe it to us who sent you to the Legislature to explain where you got the money with which you built this house. How about it?"

"Why," said the builder, "it's simple enough. You see, when we were in Harrisburg we didn't keep a hired girl."

CHILDREN'S GARDEN SHOW.

Quincy Children to Compete for Cash Prizes Amounting to $200 to Be Awarded in Horticultural Hall, Boston, Saturday.

The annual free exhibition of the products of children's gardens will be held at Horticultural hall, Boston Saturday, Aug. 30, from noon to 6 p. m., and Sunday, Aug. 31, from 2 to 6 p. m.

The competition for cash prizes, amounting in all to $200, which the State has offered to encourage agriculture among children, is open to all children in Massachusetts under 18 years of age. No entry fees are charged. All articles exhibited must be ready for examination by the committee in charge by 12 o'clock Saturday noon. The committee will be in attendance as early as 11 a. m.

The list of prizes offered includes cash prizes varying in amount from $6 to $1 for the best collection of vegetables from a school garden; from $5 to $1 for the best collection of vegetables from a school garden established since 1909; from $6 to $1 for the best collection of flowers from a school garden, and from $6 to $1 for the best collection of flowers from a school garden established since 1909.

Cash prizes are also offered for the best collection of flowers from a child's home garden, for the best vase of flowers from a child's garden, for the best potted plant grown by a child in the city of Boston, for the best bouquet of flowers from a child's home garden, for the best collection of native flowers berries, leaves, or grasses, for the best three vases of china asters, for the best three vases of dahlias, the best three vases of gladioli and the best six specimens of beets.

The Quincy exhibit will be held the day before the Boston show at the Women's clubhouse and the best vegetables and flowers selected for the Boston show.

WASHINGTON'S COUNSEL.

Observe good faith and justice toward all nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all. Religion and morality enjoin this conduct. And can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and at no distant period a great nation to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt that in the course of time and things the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue?—George Washington.

AUTUMN LIPPINCOTT'S.

An autumnal harvest of rich reading will be found in the September Lippincott's, which is undoubtedly one of the best issues of this sterling publication ever gotten out. Its contents are not surpassed by those of any of the other monthly magazines. The complete novel is from the deft pen of Grace Livingston Hill Lutz, who has "Lo, Michael!" "The Mystery of Mary," and other big-selling books to her credit. Mrs. Lutz has humor, sentiment, and skill in plotting; she is never dull, and is always interesting. Like most of her stories, this new novel, "The Best Man," contains a mystery. The hero is a secret service man, who is sent on a hazardous mission to New York. He succeeds in what he sets out to do. Among the short-stories we find a thrilling story of a South American revolution, entitled "The Master Stroke," by Hapsburg Liebe. A startling original humorous tale of Cowboy is "The Wooing of Kittie Bell," by Lowell Hardy. "The Open Door" is a pathetic tale of Jewish life, by Elias Lieberman. "The Everlasting Eve," by Mary Brecht Pulver, depicts the funny yet sad effects of a young girl's growing up to be a young lady against the express wishes of her father, who wants her to remain "Dad's little-boy person."

DO NOT PULL TOGETHER.

"The chief trouble with the suburban community is that its members do not pull together. This trouble arises out of the very nature of the suburb. It has two kinds of citizens—commuters and 'natives.' The relation of these two classes is far too commonly one of mutual antagonism and dislike. The commuter thinks he is better than the native, the native knows he is better than the commuter. The commuter, in his relation to the native, too often is a snob. The native, in his relation to the commuter, too often is suspicious of him and believes he is a snob whether he is or not.

"The two classes must get together if the town is to be saved. So, in selecting the group which shall begin to do things, ignore social lines, forget distinctions of wealth, neglect some of the 'prominent citizens.' Remember that the natives have even a larger stake in the community than the commuters, for their business interests are there, in addition to their living interests. They work there, while the commuters only sleep and play there. Make your movement democratic. If you fail to do so, you might as well shut up shop before you begin. Your fate will be the fate of every suburban community where the 'best people' have tried to decide what the community shall do, and have expected the rest of the community to accept meekly their decision."—Suburban Life.

Keep Your Blood Cool

by Right Kind of Food

and Enjoy Hot Weather

It's largely a matter of selecting the hot weather diet with reason.

Summer is Nature's season of activity—seed-time, growing-time, harvest-time—a time of expansion, energy—and Man is influenced to do his part—to put forth greater effort because activity is in the very air.

BUT—caution is necessary to avoid excessive heat from combustion (digestion) of heavy, greasy food, (Nature's way of generating body-heat in winter) in addition to the heat of the summer atmosphere.

Grape-Nuts

is the Ideal Food for hot weather because, being largely predigested (and concentrated) in the making at the factory, it is quickly absorbed, a small quantity affording great endurance with little effort in digesting it.

Grape-Nuts, made of Whole Wheat and Barley, contains all the natural elements of these cereals, including the phosphate of potash grown in the grain for rebuilding waste tissue cells, especially of brain and nerves.

Try for breakfast, lunch or supper:

A Little Fruit; Saucer of Grape-Nuts and Cream; A Soft Boiled Egg; Slice of Crisp Toast, and a Cup of Postum, hot—or iced with sugar and lemon.

Surprising how cool, yet full of healthy energy and "go" one feels on such a meal no matter what the weather.

"There's a Reason"

HIS RETURN BANQUET.

It Was a Grand Social Success and Cost the Major Nothing.

A veteran officer in the United States army recently told of the shrewdness displayed by a major in the old days. He had been appointed to the command of an army post on an island not a great way from San Francisco.

Soon after his arrival there a French fleet dropped anchor in the harbor. The commander invited the major aboard the flagship and entertained him royally.

The idea struck the worthy major the next day that he was in honor bound to return the compliment, but he was staggered by the expense involved.

To give a banquet befitting his dignity as a United States officer entertaining a distinguished representative of a foreign nation would mean bankruptcy, as the government had not authorized him to draw on its treasury for such a purpose, and the cost of the affair would have to come out of his own pocket. A bright idea struck him.

He invited the naval visitors to be his guests the third day thereafter at an "American picnic." Then he sent invitations to the best people of the neighborhood to join him in a basket picnic at a grove near at hand on the same day, "to meet our French naval friends now on our shores."

The people came with great baskets and hampers of provisions. A royal feast was spread in the grove, and the picnic was long remembered as one of the most notable social successes of its time.—Chicago Record-Herald.

COFFEE AND ITS EFFECTS.

Not Injurious When Used Moderately by Persons In Health.

In the light of the data that have been accumulated in respect to the physiological action of coffee it may safely be affirmed that it is not injurious when used moderately by reasonably healthy people. With the neurasthenic and the dyspeptic it is a somewhat different matter. While alarming symptoms have followed the ingestion of enormous quantities, there is no evidence that fatally toxic effects have ever ensued.

Coffee is a mild stimulant, and the effects are rather transient. The moderate use of coffee will not make a well man sick. Such moderate use will not occasion disagreeable symptoms in the healthy, such as insomnia, headache, nervousness, drowsiness, palpitation, dyspepsia, vertigo, etc. On the other hand, it will obviate or relieve fatigue.

We do not consider coffee a necessary concomitant of civilized life, which some extremists claim it to be. To our minds it is rather a luxury which it is not necessary to dispense with unless one is compelled to do so as a part of the attempt to combat the increasing cost of living. As to the moderate use of any of the things which we ingest the same principles apply. Even such a valuable substance as milk has to be imbibed within reason as to quantity, lest autointoxication ensue.—Medical Times.

Facing a Waterspout.

What it means to encounter a waterspout in the south seas is described by a writer: "First of all, a black trunk, like an elephant's, began to feel blindly about in midair, hanging from a cloud. It came nearer and nearer with uncanny speed, drawing up to itself as it came a colossal cone of turbulent sea until the two joined together in an enormous black pillar some quarter of a mile broad at the base and probably a good thousand feet high, uniting as it did the clouds and the sea below. Across the darkening sea, against the threatening copper crimson sunset, came this gigantic horror, waltzing over troughs of torn up water in a veritable dance of death, like something blind, but mad and cruel, trying to find and shatter our fragile little ship."

Wise Insects.

In his experiments to determine whether it is the color or the odor of flowers that attracts bees and other insects M. Plateau, the Belgian zoologist, bethought him of trying a mirror. He selected a flower of striking color and strong odor and placed it before an excellent glass in which the reflection was perfect. All the insects went straight to the real flower, and not a single one approached the reflection in the mirror.

Fast and Slow.

Redd—Did you have a nice automobile trip? Greene—Part of the way. The chauffeur went too fast going out.

"I suppose he reduced speed coming back?"

Angry Adjectives.

It was not a young woman novelist, but Charles Sumner, of whom the late E. L. Godkin, the New York editor, said:

"He works his adjectives so hard that if they ever catch him alone they will murder him."

The Chronic Meddler—You are extremely bald for one of your age. The Bare Pated Party—Yes; got this way by butting into other people's affairs.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Sleep and Longevity.

Sleep is as necessary as air or food. Those who shirk the sleep of life are only hastening unconsciously to the sleep of death.—Brussels Independance Belge.

WRECKED AT SQUANTUM.

A power boat was wrecked on the Peterson rocks, Squantum Bay Sunday afternoon, and William Carter of Roxbury, the owner, was rescued from drowning by Peter Curley of Squantum, who put out in a motor boat. The bow of the boat was stove in and the craft rapidly filled. Carter held onto the side and was in the water nearly 25 minutes before his plight was discovered. After stimulants had been administered he was able to go to his home. The wrecked boat was towed ashore.

DELIGHTFUL TRIP.

About the middle of September the daily trips of the steamer Dorothy Bradford to Provincetown will be discontinued and we are reminded that summer is over. The Cape Cod Steamship Co. has had a very profitable season and to Jabez S. Dyer, general manager is due considerable credit. orothy's daily trips have been very popular and on accidents have occurred. In fact the Dorothy is too good a sea boat, too well officered to permit of troubles. Many people who are unable to go away on a vacation have enjoyed the day trip to Provincetown and some people have taken several trips there this season. You should go to Provincetown, to see the place, "the pilgrim's first landing place," the pilgrim memorial monument, their beautiful town hall, the historic places of interest, and lastly for the trip itself. The Dorothy Bradford leaves Bay Line Wharf, 400 Atlantic avenue at 9 o'clock week days and on Sundays at 9.30 A. M. and arrives back at 6.30 week days and Sundays at 7 o'clock. This trip is quite inexpensive considering the distance, 100 miles for only one dollar. The last trip will probably be on Sunday, Sept. 14.

THE HEN IN NEW ENGLAND.

By George French.

Almost everybody knows all about hens, and how to raise them, but mighty few people really know how to run a hen farm, large or small. It is not so long ago that one of the largest hen men in New England told me, in all seriousness and conviction, that it is not profitable to use incubators for hatching chicks. He told me also that a net $1 a year per hen is all that good poultryers can expect to make. He has several hen farms, near one of the best New England markets, and near enough to a market that will absorb all the fresh eggs, coming from not over 100 miles, that can be offered. He is an old, or elderly man, and nobody can conivnce him that he does not know all about the hen business.

I knew another hen man, one who went into the business because he found that he had got to get out and dig in the ground or submit to rest in a bed in the ground dug for him. He has somewhere around 3,000 hens, and he makes over $3 a year, per hen, net. I know this to be true, because I had a look at his books, and I spent the better part of a day questioning him and figuring his replies. He thinks he makes more than a net of three dollars a hen a year, but I found that he was not quite fair to himself in his accounting methods.

I am willing to take the word of the dollar man, but not of the man who thought his hens were paying him over $ 6 year, so I went out to the hen farm and figured it for myself. Now, how much is a hen worth? They ought to be worth about $60 each to justify a profit of $3 a year. A hen that lays eggs for the market is a one-year proposition, if the hen man runs his business properly. Pullets destined to lay eggs for the market should be allowed to lay but one season, and then be turned into meat—and she should not be allowed to make the acquaintance of the male of her species. Her eggs should be sterile. If she is to become the mother of chicks, she should be allowed to lay eggs for the market one season, and then mated and allowed to lay for hatching; then she should be marketed.

But if a hen is worth no more than a dollar, let us say, for convenient figuring, what percentage does she pay if she makes a net of $3 a year? She pays 300 per cent., if I am that much of an accountant. That is a pretty good financial record. What business is there that pays better? Of course, hens will not pay like that unless there is a business made of them, and enough of them kept to allow the employment of about three men, with the proprietor to boss things, sell the product, make the plans and keep the hens good natured. In New England there are not one-tenth enough hens, and there are not 1 per cent. of the number there might profitably be. It is very difficult to get freshly laid eggs in any large place in New England, and at some seasons of the year it is practically impossible. The big hotels and the restaurants absorb about all of the native product, leaving but very few for the housekeeper.

There are better records of big hen successes in other sections than in New England, but that is because the farmers in other sections are accustomed to specializing in a big way. In New England the bulk of the poultry business is done as side lines. The farmer who keeps 50 or 100 hens does not consider that it costs him anything for labor or plant and reckons all that he receives over the cost of commercial feed as net profit. His wife, his boys or girls, take more of the hens, or he feeds them on his way in from milking, and attends to their quarters at odd half-hours. His labor expenses would be no smaller if he had no hens. He raises his own stock. He pays out nothing but for grain. His equipment he builds during the winter, or on rainy days. Really, the ordinary hen adjunct to the farm is a source of big profits.

But the New Englander might make a hundred times as much as hens now yield him, and all so easy! There are thousands of acres ideally fitted for the business, and there is an eager market.

A man down in the vicinity of Newport has several small farms which he devotes to poultry, and has always made a pretty good income. He is not in favor of incubators, and believes in many of the older customs and methods. He does not make as much per hen as some of the more modern men, but he has been making better than $1 a hen for a good many years.

A man in Masachusetts started a few years ago without a cent, getting his stock from obliging neighbors, and his small plant with borrowed money. Now he keeps from 1,000 to 1,200 hens though the winters, and nets $3 annually from each hen, not reckoning the roasters and broilers he sells. (Why do not farmers keep books in such a manner that they can tell just what they make?) Another Massachusetts man started as modestly and specialized on Rhode Island Reds. Now he sells breeders for $100 apiece, and sometimes as much as $3,500 to $4,000 worth of eggs for hatching. Another Massachusetts man started on nothing and now hatches 4,000 to 5,000 chicks every spring. He is too modest to say what he makes, or too canny, but his home tells the good story. A Maine man figures that he makes $106 one season from 50 White Wyandotes, or more than $2 a hen.

In Connecticut and Maine they have egg-laying contests, and the hardworking hens lay about 20 eggs a month. This is more than an ordinary product. Good industrious hens will lay about one egg every two days, the year round. Good hens, I say, not scrubs. And they must be well kept, and well treated. The high-bred pullet is the most sensitive thing on earth, and she will not lay as many egs if she is not on terms of intimacy with her owner as she will if she trusts and likes him. This is a fact. If a hen man chums with his layers he gets more eggs. If the pullets flutter and scurry out of the way when the owner or care-taker visits them they will not lay as freely as they will if he has their confidence and friendship. The most successful hen man I ever knew always speaks soothingly to his pullets before they can see him. "Hello, girls," he says as he comes near a house full o fthem. "How is everything this morning?" He keeps up a running conversation while he is in the house. And those hens never bat a feather. They rub against his legs and talk and croak with utmost unconcern. Not a fowl flutters when he visits them. He gets the eggs. He makes more than $3 a year per hen.

A New England woman makes a tidy income keeping hens and raising turkeys. She does not have big flocks, just enough to occupy her sparetime. A man in Connecticut left a factory position when he began to feel old age come creeping on, bought a little farm and began to raise poultry. He worked his farm and kept about 225 hens. He reckoned that the eggs and meat used balanced the labor of taking care of the chicks, and has figures to show that he has made, for a series of years, a net profit on his hens of $3.38 per hen. There is a man in New Hampshire who has the longest detailed record I have known of. For 25 years he has annually raised 1,000 chickens and he has the record for all that time, with every thing charged to the hens that can be charged and the eggs, meat and manure produced credited. He has made an average of $1.60 per hen a year for the entire period. Some years he has made as high as $2.50 per hen, and some years the credit was below a dollar.

Such records could be indefinitely extended. I have purposely omitted mention of the big experimental farms of the agricultural colleges, and the fancy plants of the rich connoisseurs, because they do not furnish fair comparisons. I believe that New England shows a high average profit per unit for the poultry business, and I believe that the opportunities in New England for the extension of that business are better than the opportunities offered by any gold mine in the world. The opportunities are vastly greater in New England than in any of the western states because the industry is in one's right hand and the market, always insatiable and unsatisfied, is in the left hand.

—The Lowell Courier thinks much suburban traffic in future, passenger and freight, will be done by motor vehicles. It suggests, however, that this raises the question of the maintenance of roads, which it says are going to be destroyed much faster even than now by the lighter motors. Why should not these great motor trucks pay a road franchise as the street cars do?

THE FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

Maybe It Was a Quince Eve Ate In the Garden of Eden.

Why and how it has happened that the apple has been spoken of as the fruit that was forbidden in the Garden of Eden is one of the great puzzles of biblical scholars. The fact is that in Genesis iii., where the incident of the eating of this fruit of the "tree of knowledge of good and evil" is mentioned, no name whatever is given to that fruit. All that is said is: "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat." (Verse 6.)

In fact, scholars doubt very seriously whether it was the apple at all. They suggest that all evidence points to it having been the quince, the fragrance of which was held in the highest esteem by the Orientals. Another point in favor of the quince is that it is the fruit which was sacred to Venus, the goddess of love, and in a great many of the ancient writings the quince is very frequently mentioned in this manner. In Babylonia Ishtar took the place of Venus in the Roman mythology, and it should be remembered that the story of the creation originated with the Babylonians. All evidence seems to point away from the apple having been the "forbidden fruit," and toward the quince as having been that fruit of the "tree of knowledge of good and evil."—Tit-Bits.

DREAMING OF FALLING.

What Happened In the One Known Case of Hitting the Ground.

Probably all of us have dreamed that we were falling down the back stairs or a high cliff, then gliding swimmingly off into space. This dream gives the same sensation as a rapidly descending elevator or a fast swaying swing. We are worried for the instant about what will happen when we strike bottom, but we never strike. Either we are off on another dream before that disastrous event happens or we awake.

There is an old superstition that if one ever hit the ground the shock would kill the dreamer, but this is difficult of proof, for, as our Irish neighbor might remark, the only way it could be proved would be to have the dreamer wake up dead and tell us about it.

Of the thousands who wrote letters a few years ago to an Englishman who had published an essay on the subject but one correspondent had dreamed that the fall continued clear to the ground. This woman dreamed she fell off a tall rock. When she hit the ground she was broken into small bits, but a sort of second self gathered up the pieces and glued them together, making a piece of humanity as good as new. This dream, however, is unique—Chicago Tribune.

Sarcastic.

He had just reached the philosophical stage when he slipped into a restaurant between bars for a bit to eat. He ordered. Then he sat staring ahead, quietly thoughtful in expression, and waited.

It is admitted that he did some waiting too. What happened to his order couldn't be understood outside the peculiar convolutions of a restaurant kitchen, but he spent half an hour sitting there, staring ahead of him.

At last it came. As the waitress put the order before him he started from his deep study as if he had forgotten he had an order coming. Then, looking up at the fair transporter of edibles, he said:

"You don't look a day older!"—Everybody's.

The Sleep of Horses.

When the horse sleeps, it is said that one ear is directed forward, why is not known. A writer in the English Mechanic thinks this is to guard against danger, being a survival of its originally wild habits. He says: "Watch a horse asleep through the window of his stable and make a faint noise at the front. That ear will be all attention, and probably the other will fly around sharply to assist. Now let him go to sleep again and make the same noise to the left. The forward ear still will keep guard, with possibly a lightning flick round, only to resume its former position."

The Lost Dime.

A man sent his neighbor's little boy to the drug store to buy five postage stamps. He handed him two dimes, the extra one being for himself. Some time afterward the boy came back blubbering and said he had lost one of the dimes.

"But why didn't you buy me the stamps?" asked the man.

"Because, mister," replied the boy, "it was your dime I lost."—Judge.

Poor Scheme.

Crawford—Why don't you try jollying your wife a little? It's easy to tell her she's looking younger and more beautiful every day. Crabshaw—I tried that once, and she nailed me for money to have her picture taken.—Judge.

GAEKWAR'S DAUGHTER WEDS INDIAN PRINCE

Powerful Ruling Families of British India Are United

London, Aug. 26.—Two of the most powerful native ruling families of British India were united when Princess Indira, only daughter of the reigning Maharajah Gaekwar of Baroda, was married to Prince Jitendra, son of the Maharajah of Cooch-Behar. The marriage followed a romantic courtship.

The bride's father and her brother, Shrimai Jalsingrao, are both well known in the United States, where the latter studied at Harvard. Her mother is a woman of advanced ideas and is the author of a book on the position of women in India.

HAS "CODE OF MORALS"

Mulhall Getting Salary of $100 a Week From Newspaper

Washington, Aug. 26.—Testimony in behalf of Representative McDermott of Illinois was heard by the house lobby committee when Arthur West testified that he was secretary to McDermott and that he had never seen M. M. Mulhall, agent of the National Association of Manufacturers.

When Mulhall took the stand counsel for McDermott asked: "Have you any code of morals at all?"

"More than you have," shouted Mulhall, "and I would like to tell you more of them on the outside."

Mulhall testified he was drawing a salary of $100 a week from a New York newspaper which first published his charges, and that he had received up to date about $5000 for his work.

Boy Killed In Train Collision

New London, Aug. 26.—John Niles, 13 years old, was killed when a Central Vermont passenger train from Palmer, Mass., collided with a coal train on a side track, about a mile north of New London.

Child Burns to Death

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 26.—Margaret Crowe, 6 years old, was burned to death near her home after her clothing had been ignited by a bonfire around which she was playing with a group of companions.

Adrianople Claim Relinquished

Constantinople, Aug. 26.—As the result of direct negotiations between Turkey and Bulgaria the latter relinquishes her claim to the fortress of Adrianople in return for compensation elsewhere.

THAW'S RETURN IS PREDICTED

Jerome Sure He Will Land Him Behind Matteawan Bars

ADDS TO HIS LEGAL STAFF

Also Secures Armed Guard to Prevent Any Attempt at Seizure of Thaw When He Is Released In Vermont—Stage Being Set For Final Struggle on Canadian Soil

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 26.—William T. Jerome is now in full charge of the attempt of New York state to take Harry Thaw to Matteawan.

Two new moves of the state against Thaw have already been ordered by the former New York district attorney, the man who has checkmated every attempt of Thaw to secure freedom.

One is the strengthening of the New York case by the engagement of two able Canadian attorneys to add to those already employed.

The other is the engaging of a strong force of armed men to combat any attempt of Thaw's friends to seize him and carry him away when he is released in Vermont on Thursday next.

"We will have Thaw back in Matteawan inside of a short time," said Jerome.

Nothing can exceed Jerome's confidence. He is sure he will land Thaw behind the bars of Matteawan again. One of Jerome's chief Canadian advisers said:

"Thaw will go back. New York will get him. Of that you may be sure. Canada has no sympathy with Thaw. It only wants to handle the case in such a manner that there can be no accusation of unfairness or injustice to Thaw."

The stage is being set for the final big fight in the Thaw case. The state of New York has engaged new attorneys—T. C. Casgran of Montreal and R. A. Pringle of Ottawa. The attorneys will take part in Wednesday's proceedings, when Thaw is to be deported from Canada.

The Thaw attorneys have announced their program. When Thaw is ordered deported, they will appeal to the board of inquiry, composed of Messrs. Robertson, Williams and Reynolds. The hearing will be in private, and there is no doubt that the board will order the rejection of the fugitive.

The two inspectors, who will be in a majority on the board of inquiry, have already expressed themselves in favor of the rejection of Thaw. His counsel will only ask that every formality be followed and they will scrutinize the decision of the board of inquiry for the purpose of detecting any error which could be seized upon for an appeal to the acting minister of the interior, C. J. Doherty.

Thaw is reconciled to the plan and has accepted the decision that he must make his next stand against the New York demand for his return to Matteawan in Vermont. He has an idea that the best way to influence the authorities of any community is to arouse public sentiment in his favor. Realizing that he must depend upon Governor Fletcher of Vermont, Thaw considered the ways and means of creating sympathy for him in that state.

SLAVERY IN PHILIPPINES

Human Beings Are Bought and Sold Among the Natives

Washington, Aug. 26.—Slavery, in the full meaning of the word, exists throughout the Philippines, even in the city of Manila, and peonage is general in the islands, according to a special report Commissioner Worcester has made to the insular government.

Worcester describes in great detail the different forms of traffic in human beings, the impossibility of suppressing the business under the present laws and the futile efforts at new legislation which has been made from time to time since the American occupation of the islands. The citations cover the entire period down to the present time.

BROWN STARTS ON TOUR

To Make Speeches For Men's League For Woman Suffrage

New York, Aug. 26.—Alfred H. Brown, a seasoned campaigner, started on a speechmaking tour of the state under the auspices of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage.

His present trip will consume about thirty days and he will visit over fifty towns. This is the first campaigning for equal rights that has ever been undertaken by men in New York state.

Five receptions were tendered Brown during yesterday afternoon by suffrage organizations, where tea and toasts were drunk to his success.

Windfall For Shoe Operative

Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 26.—George W. Lee, a shoe cutter, received a letter from a Chicago attorney informing him that he and a brother had been left $150,000 by William Lee, a publisher and author of Chicago.

MR. AND MRS. CARNEGIE

Extend Aid to Thaw In His Battle For Freedom

© 1913, by American Press Association.

Relatives of Harry K. Thaw are doing everything in their power to bring about the release of the slayer of Stanford White. Mr. and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, brother-in-law and sister of the captured fugitive, rushed to Sherbrooke immediately, following his arrest. They are extending valuable aid to Thaw in his supreme fight against extradition or deportation to the United States.

FOSS INFORMALLY ANNOUNCES PLANS

To Seek Another Term as Governor as an Independent

Boston, Aug. 26.—There will be a fourth gubernatorial candidate on the ballot next November—and the name preceding the designation "Independent" will be Eugene N. Foss.

Basing his hopes of getting a fourth term on a calculation of 160,000 or 170,000 votes, the governor has at last come to the conclusion that he should enter the fight.

Informal declarations of his intentions were made yesterday to various senators and representatives who came to see him, and he spent a number of hours on the preparation of a formal announcement of his candidacy.

ON WHITE SLAVE CHARGE

Bionzo Held In $10,000 and Jailed With Alleged Victim

Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 26.—After a hearing lasting two hours before Commissioner Woods, Antonio Bionzo of Brooklyn, arrested in Springfield, charged with violating the Mann act, was held in $10,000 bonds for trial in Boston.

Assistant United States District Attorney Shea of Boston charged that Bionzo had transported Catherine F. Bicking, aged 18, from Brooklyn to Connecticut and thence to Springfield for immoral purposes.

Woods found probable cause and ordered Bionzo held for trial. The girl was held in $500 as a material witness and, lacking funds, both were taken to the Middlesex county jail at Cambridge.

GETS $40,000 IN GIFTS

Thousands of Guests at Wedding of Princess of Little Hell

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Thousands of residents of the Italian quarter in the North Side flocked to the home of the "king" of "Little Hell" for the wedding of his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Kaplan. They showered her with presents to the value of $40,000 and drank wine which cost their host $2500.

Frank Kaplan, father of the bride, who is regarded by the Italians as their unofficial leader, gave a $10,000 check. He started in the district twenty-five years ago as a junk dealer.

Explosion Causes a Panic

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 26.—An exposion of a steam pipe at the M. J. Whittal carpet mills caused a panic among the 3000 employes and a damage of $3500. The force of the steam drove a hole in a brick wall.

MY PATIENT

She Didn't Like Doctors, but Confided In Me

By EDNA B. SMITH

When I began to practice medicine I resolved that when I went into a household to see an invalid I would put on a cheerful exterior.

One morning on opening my mail I received a letter written in a feminine hand as follows:

I have heard that you are so genial when you make your visits that one not knowing you are a doctor would not take you for one. My sister is ailing and I can't persuade her to consult a physician. Please call and I will introduce you as a friend. You may be able to elicit a knowledge of her case and treat her without letting her know your purpose. I will get the prescription and put it in her food. Come tomorrow when you are making your morning calls, before 11 o'clock.

I happened at the time to have a very important case which required my constant attention and was prevented from responding to the call till the next day; then I drove up to the address given and rang the bell. My ring was answered by a lady about forty years old. I didn't know whether she was the person who had written me, and I felt it necessary to be cautious.

"Is this Miss Pendleton?" I asked, giving the name of my correspondent.

"Yes?" was the reply in a querying tone.

"I received your note, but was unable to call yesterday, being engaged."

"What note?"

It occurred to me that the lady might have written other notes besides mine and I needed to make myself known, so I told her that I was Dr. MacKnight, whom she had asked to come to see her sister as a friend. She gave me a blank stare for a few moments, then said:

"Oh, yes. Now I remember. Your not having called yesterday quite put the matter out of my mind. Come in."

She led me into a reception room, where she left me and went upstairs. She was gone some ten minutes, when she came down, followed by a young lady about twenty years of age, to whom she introduced me as Mr. MacKnight.

"Mr. MacKnight," said the older woman, "is a friend of Aunt Marian. He has called to see her and, not finding her at home, needs, as I have told you, to be entertained for awhile. I dare say you will be quite willing to take Marian's place?"

"Certainly," said the girl, advancing and offering me her hand. "Any friend of Aunt Marian's is surely welcome."

We were left together by our introducer and began to chat on ordinary topics.

"Where did you meet my aunt?" she asked. "I am sure I've often heard her speak of you, but I can't exactly place you."

"Oh, I've known your aunt a long while. I've met her so often that I couldn't specialize any particular time or place."

How many more lies I perpetrated during the call I can't now remember, but whenever I told one like the above I switched off on to some other matter. Miss Pendleton now and again would return to the charge, firing more such questions at me, but did not force me to the wall. Presently I said:

"You're not looking very well. Aren't you a little under the weather?"

"I don't mind admitting to you that I am, but I wouldn't have you say anything about it. They're always worrying about me and bothering me to take medicine. I won't do it."

"You're right," I replied; "there's more harm than good done with drugs, and, as for doctors, most of them are humbugs. I don't take any of their medicines. I am my own doctor."

"Are you? Then you shall be mine. I'll tell you my symptoms. I wake up in the morning with a headache, which passes off after breakfast and a cup of coffee. I also have a good deal of trouble with my back. What do you suppose is the matter with me?"

"You need something to bolster you up. You're below par. I was affected that way last spring, and I went to a druggist and said, 'I want some kind of phosphates—one of those made up prescriptions.' He showed me a lot of them, with what they were printed on the label. I selected one and took the whole bottle. It brought me right up."

"Do tell me what it is."

"I can't exactly remember the name, but I'll look at the bottle, which I have at home, and bring you some of it."

"I'm ever so much obliged. When will you bring it?"

"Will you be at home this evening?"

"Certainly."

"I'll try to get in about 8 o'clock."

Since I was making my visits and several patients waiting for me, I didn't remain very long, making the engagement for the evening, when I might have more time, for there was something about the girl that pleased me greatly. I was a young man then and unmarried. The only thing that retarded me in my practice was my bachelorhood. It's a great disadvantage to a doctor, and I was looking for a wife. Before I had been ten minutes with Miss Pendleton it occurred to me that if I could get a girl like that I'd marry instanter.

I had a bottle of the tonic I proposed to give my patient on my shelves and in the evening after my office hours gave my housekeeper the street and number to which I was going with instructions if I was wanted to call for Mr., not Dr., MacKnight, then went around to visit Miss Pendleton. She insisted on taking a dose of the tonic at once.

I spent a very enjoyable evening, fortunately not being interrupted by a call from any of my patients. I found Miss Pendleton very entertaining, and we were at home in each other's company, for we both had a keen sense of humor, and that faculty draws persons possessing it together.

It required a month for Miss Pendleton to go through the bottle I had given her, during which time I made her semiweekly visits. I laughingly claimed the right to make them, since I was her doctor, whereupon she threatened to report me for practicing without a diploma or a license. She fell to calling me Dr. instead of Mr. MacKnight, and I scolded her for doing so, saying she might as well call me "humbug" and have done with it. It was all very funny and delightful. I wished I might play doctor with some of my more troublesome patients in the same way.

One evening when I called I was admitted by a maid and shown into the living room, which was but dimly lighted. I sat down to wait for my "patient," as I jocularly called her. The dining room was next the living room, and I saw the elder Miss Pendleton enter it, go to a sideboard, take up a bottle the exact size and appearance of the one I had brought her sister, pour out a spoonful of its contents and swallow it. She went out without having seen me, and as soon as she had gone I went to the sideboard and examined the label on the bottle. It was the article I had brought. She was taking my prescription as well as her sister.

Was she not taking it instead of her sister? I began to suspect something. When my patient came down I said to her:

"Have you taken nearly all the tonic?"

"Nearly all."

"I saw it on the sideboard and noticed that it was nearly all gone. You must have got another bottle, didn't you?"

"No. Why do you ask?"

"Because I saw your sister taking a dose just now. If you have both been taking it it must be like the widow's cruse of oil mentioned in the Bible."

She looked me in the face intently for a few moments, then burst into a laugh.

"Why so merry?" I asked.

"I have wished to keep the secret till Aunt Marian returns, which will be tomorrow. I was expecting lots of fun seeing you meet her. But Aunt Martha's taking that dose in your presence gives it all away."

"Gives what away?"

"I will explain. Aunt Martha has been ailing for some time. Aunt Marian couldn't induce her to call in a doctor, so she wrote you to call as a friend. Aunt Marian left the city at 1 o'clock the day she expected you, and you fell into the hands of the person you were to deceive. Aunt Martha came up to me much displeased at what her sister had done and wondering what she should do in the premises. I was much amused, and it occurred to me that it would be very funny for me to play the sick sister. I persuaded Aunt Martha to introduce me as such, and now you know it all except that I gave you the real patient's symptoms, and she has been taking your tonic. I am happy to say that it has done wonders for her. Her headache and her backache and all her other aches have departed. Aunt Marian will be ever so much obliged to you. She returns tomorrow afternoon. You must come and give her an opportunity to thank you."

"Not if I know myself. I have been so badly fooled that I can dispense with her acknowledgments. I'll make you pay for this."

I surely did make her pay for her fun, for I made her the wife of a physician. That means that she can never rely on her husband to take her anywhere, not even to church, for he is liable always to be called. He is not safe even in the middle of the night. She gains comfort, however, whenever we have friends in to dinner by telling how she played sick while the other person took my medicine.

SENT HIMSELF BY MAIL.

One Use to Which the Parcel Post In England May Be Put.

An Englishman wished to reach a customer living in a remote part of Balham, one of the suburbs of London, and it was very urgent that he find him quickly.

Knowing nothing of the locality, he called at St. Martin le Grand to consult a directory. Stating his case to a clerk, he was amazed to learn that he could be sent to the address by parcel post by paying a fee of threepence a mile. The gentleman had never heard of such a thing, and it is said that very few in England know that it can be done.

Accepting the offer, the gentleman was placed in charge of a messenger familiar with all parts of the city and was soon on his way. The boy carried a printed slip on which was written a description of the "parcel" in charge, under the heading, "Article required to be delivered," and before leaving the customer's house both the customer and the gentleman were required to place their signatures on the paper.

The limit in weight for anything delivered by parcel post in England is generally understood to be eleven pounds, but there is one clause which reads, "A person may be conducted by express messenger to any address on payment of mileage fee."—Argonaut.

BOUCICAULT'S PROFITS.

The Playwright's Fame Clung to Him Better Than His Riches.

Dion Boucicault received £300 for his share in the authorship of "London Assurance." The way in which he spent that sum was an indication of things to come. He bought two horses, a cab and seven new coats. His extravagance reached a climax over "Babil and Bijou," produced at Covent Garden in August, 1872. The money was found by Lord Londesborough, and Boucicault (with him Planche) was under contract to produce something that might be called dramatic.

What was produced was a gorgeous and incoherent spectacle, with red lobsters recumbent at the bottom of the sea. Boucicault, who had run up bills to the extent of £10,000 or so, did not stay for the production, but betook himself abroad. All that persists of this magnificent fiasco is the boys' chorus, "Spring, Spring, Beautiful Spring," which was retained almost by chance.

But Boucicault was better known by his Irish dramas that are fresh today, as "The Shaughraun," "Arrah na Pogue," "The Colleen Bawn" and the like. By these he became rich and famous, but his fame clung to him better than his riches.—London Post.

No Landlubber.

Young Jack Tabbs has only been in the navy for a few months, but there is not a more enthusiastic sea dog in the whole of his majesty's service. He recently made application for and received the usual leave and proceeded to London and his mother's house.

Mrs. Tabbs lives on the third floor of a house in Camberwell, and when he arrived at her address he stood in the doorway and bawled up the stairs:

"Mother, aloft there! Jack's come home! Open the window!"

"Why, Jacky, my dear," cried the old lady from the landing, "whatever's wrong with the stairs?"

"Stairs!" cried the weather worn tar, with ineffable contempt. "What do I know about stairs? Just you open the window and lower a rope to the main deck, and be quick about it!"—London Express.

"Females."

Our woman words have all experienced Avicissitudes of fortune. "Female," like the rest, has had its day. Chaucer introduced it under the guise of "femelle" and Shakespeare used it a few times instead of "woman." But it was the early novelists who clothed it with respectability by making all their women "females." So exceedingly respectable had it become in the time of Dr. Johnson that Fanny Burney called the princess royal "the second female in the kingdom." Even so late as the publication of Tennyson's "Princess" Mrs. Browning was able to write with perfect propriety that the poem dealt with "a university attended by females." Then decadence set in till now no shred of respectability is left to it.—London Standard.

Near Fame.

A young man, constant in his attendance in a cafe where the art students congregate in Paris, sat in his usual corner and surveyed the scene.

"Who is that chap?" asked a visitor. "Is he a painter or a sculptor, or what?"

"Oh, no; none of those," said a habitue. "He has a most engaging and important calling—he is the brother of a poet."—Saturday Evening Post.

Good Security.

Milligan—If I be afther laving security equil ter what I take away will yez thrust me till nixt wake? Sands (the grocer) — Certainly. Milligan — Well, thin, sell me two av thim hams an' kape wan av thim till I come agin.—Puck.

An Unreasonable Man.

"I should think you would like him."

"Why?"

"He has done so much for you."

"I know he has, but he wants me to acknowledge it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

From Her Standpoint.

Elsie—I didn't know he could afford to give you such an expensive engagement ring. Egeria—He couldn't—but wasn't it dear of him?—Life.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

"Come, Roxbury, what do you say to a good long walk?" cried Constance. "I must talk to you seriously about a great many things, beginning with egotism." He set forth with alacrity, rejoicing in spite of his numerous limitations.

Upon their return from the delightful stroll along the mountain side, she went at once to her room to dress for dinner. Brock, more deeply in love than ever before, lighted a cigar and seated himself in the gallery, dubiously retrospective in his meditations. He was sorely disturbed by her almost constant allusion to Freddie Ulstervelt and his "amazingly attractive ways." Was it possible that she could be really in love with that insignificant little whipper snapper? He seemed to be propounding this doleful question to the lofty, sphinxlike Waldraster-Spitze, looming dark in the path of the south.

"Hello!" exclaimed a voice close to his ear—the fresh, confident voice that he knew so well. "I've been looking for you everywhere." Freddie drew up a chair and sat down at his "good side." The young man appeared to have something weighty on his mind. Brock shifted uneasily. "I want to put it up to you, Mr. Medcroft, as man to man. You are Connie's brother-in-law, and you ought to be able to set me straight."

"Ah, I see," said Brock vaguely.

"You do?" queried the other, surprise and doubt in his face.

"No, I should say I don't, don't you see," substituted Brock.

"I was wondering how you could have seen. It's a matter I haven't discussed with any one. I've come to have a liking for you, Roxbury. You're my sort; you have a sort of New York feeling about you. I'm sure you're enough of a sport to give me unprejudiced advice. Hands across the sea, see? Well, to get right down to the point, old man—you'll pardon my plain speech—I think Constance ought to marry an American."

Brock sat up very straight. "I think that's—that's a matter for Miss Fowler to determine," he said coldly.

"You don't quite get my meaning," persisted Freddie, crossing his legs comfortably. "I was trying to make it easy for myself."

"You mean, you think she ought to marry you."

"That's it, precisely. How clever you are."

"But you are said to be engaged to Miss Rodney," ventured Brock, feeling his way.

"That's just the point, Mr. Medcroft. We're not really engaged—but almost. As a matter of fact, we've got to the point where it's really up to me to speak to her father about it, don't you know. Luckily I haven't."

"Luckily?"

"Yes; that would have committed me, don't you see. I've been tentatively engaged more than a dozen times, but never quite up to the girl's father. Now, I don't mind telling you that I've changed my mind about Katherine. She's a jolly good sort, but she's not just my sort. I thought she was, but—well, you know how it is yourself. The heart's a d—d queer organ. Mine has gone back to Constance in the last two days. You are her brother-in-law, and you're a good fellow through and through. I want your help. I've got money to burn, and the family's got position in the States. I can take care of her as she should be taken care of. No little old six room flat for her. But, of course, you understand, I can't quite carry the thing through with Katherine still feeling herself attached, as it were. The thing to decide is this: How best can I let Katherine down easily and take on Connie without putting myself in a rather hazardous position? I'm a gentleman, you see, and I can't do anything downright rotten. It wouldn't do. I'm sure in her heart Connie cares for me. I could make her understand me better if I had half the chance. But a fellow can't get near her nowadays. Don't you think you are carrying the family link too far? Now, what I want to ask of you as a friend is this: Will you put in a good word for me every chance you get? I'll square myself with Katherine all right. Of course, you'll understand, I don't want to actually break with Katherine until I'm reasonably sure of Constance. I'm a guest of the Rodney family, you see. It would be downright indecent of me. No, sir; I'm not that sort. I shouldn't think of ending it all with Katherine so long as we are both guests of her father. I'd wait until the end of next week."

Brock had listened in utter amazement to the opening portion of this ingenious proposal. As the flexile youth progressed amazement gave place to indignation and then to disgust. Brock's brow grew dark; the impulse to pull his countryman's nose was hard to overcome. Never in all his life had he listened to such a frankly cold blooded argument as that put forth by the insufferable Knickerbocker. In the end the big New Yorker saw only the laughable side of the little New Yorker's plight. After all, he was a harmless egoist, from whom no girl could expect much in the way of recompense. It mattered little who the girl of the moment might be, she could not hope to or even seek to hold his perambulatory affections. "He's a single example of a great New York class," reflected Brock. "The futile, priggish rich! There are thousands like him in my dear New York—conscienceless, invertebrate, sybaritic sons of idleness, college bred and underbred little beasts who can buy and then cast off at their pleasure. They have no means of knowing how to fall in love with a good girl. They have not been trained to it. It is not for their scrambled intellects to discriminate between the chorus girl brand of attack and the subtle wooing of a gentlewoman. They can't analyze: they can't feel! And this insipid, egotistical little bounder is actually sitting there and asking me to help him with the girl I love! Good Lord, what next?" He surveyed the eager Ulstervelt in the most irritating manner, finally laughing outright in his face. The very thought of him as Connie's accepted lover! She, the adorable, the splendid, the unapproachable! It was excruciatingly funny!

"Oh, I say, old man," cried Freddie when the disconcerting laugh came, "don't laugh! It's no joke."

"'Pon my soul, Ulstervelt," apologized Brock, with a magnanimous smile, "I haven't said it was a joke. You"—

"Then what are you laughing at? Something you heard yesterday?" with fine scorn. Brock stared hard at the flushed boyish face of the other. It was weak and yet as hard as brass, hard with the overbearing confidence of the spoiled child of wealth.

"See here, Ulstervelt," he said, with sudden coldness, "you're asking my help. That's no way to get it."

"I beg pardon. I don't mean to be rude," apologized Freddie. "But, I say, old man, I'll make it worth your while. My father's got stacks of coin, and he's a power in New York. Odell-Carney's right. American architects can't design good hencoops. What we want in New York is a rattling good up to date Englishman or two to show 'em a few things. They're a lot of muckers over there, take it from me. By Jove, Roxbury, you don't know how I'd appreciate your friendship in this matter. It will simplify things immensely. You'll speak a good word for me when the time comes, now, won't you?"

"You want me to do you a good turn," said Brock slowly. He found himself grinning with a malicious joy. "All right, I'll see to it that Miss Rodney doesn't marry you, my boy. I'll attend to her."

"Just a minute," interrupted Freddie quickly. "Don't be too hasty about that. I want to be sure of Constance first."

"I see. I was just about to add that I'll give Constance a strong hint that one of the most gallant young sparks in New York is likely to propose to her before the end of the week. That will"—

"Heavens!" exclaimed Freddie in disgust. "You needn't do that. I've already proposed to her five or six times."

"And she—she is undecided?" cried Brock, his eyes darkening.

"No, hang it all, she's not undecided. She's said no every time. That's why I'm up a tree, so to speak."

"Oh!" was all that Brock said. Of course she couldn't love a creature of Freddie's stamp! He gloated.

"'Gad, you're a lucky dog, Roxbury," went on Freddie enviously. "Money isn't everything. You're married to one of the prettiest and most fascinating women in the world. She's a wonder. You can't blame me for wanting your wife as a sister-in-law. Now, can you? And that kid! You lucky dog!"

TYPHOID FEVER.

Although the Board of Health has been trying to trace the source of the typhoid fever cases which have developed in Atlantic they have not been able to determine to their satisfaction the origin of the disease. Some of those reported have not been definitely diagnosed as typhoid fever as yet. No new cases have been brought to the attention of the board.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

NEW BRIDGE AT GRANITE AVE.

Will Have Lift Draw With Fifty Foot Opening

Plans for the new $70,000 Granite avenue bridge, drawn by F. H. Fay, Engineer of the bridge commission, were presented at a meeting of the commission last week. They were examined and approved. As soon as the necessary details of the plans and the specifications are completed they will be submitted to the United States War department for approval. When this is received the contracts will be let and the work will begin.

The plans call for a bridge with a wide roadway and a lift draw with a fifty-foot opening, wide enough to accommodate any vessel likely to come up the river. There will be suitable approaches built so as not to interfere with the river current. While the bridge is being constructed traffic will be accommodated by a temporary bridge.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

With the exception of a few seats in the rear of the balcony, there wasn't a vacant seat last night in Quincy's pretty playhouse and the big audience simply went wild with applause as each good feature of the splendid bill was presented.

The black-face comedians, Lander Brothers, kept the audience in a constant uproar of laughter with their witty sayings and good jokes. They are really the funniest comedians here for a long time, and their act was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Pelham Lynton, an English entertainer, cleverly imitated several characters of English life, and his songs and stories from across the water were given in a way that won him great applause.

Mitchell and Grand made many minutes merry with their musical act which was interspersed with a lot of good jokes and several songs.

Nothing seems to be better liked by Quincy audiences than a playlet, and that given by Ver Sabina & Co., entitled "The Old Man's Dreams" received a great ovation. Each artist played their part to perfection and the one-act play they produced was mighty pleasing to all.

"Alkali Ike's Gal" a comedy picture in two parts, proved a very amusing feature and one that was thoroughly enjoyed by the big audience. Pathe weekly and other splendid pictures competed the 2 hour program of pleasure.

Beginning on Thursday, Manager Wardwell will present the pictures he had taken of the Quincy Yacht club races and Ladies' Day events at the club house.

On the same reel will be seen the carnival and field day features of St. Francis church, Braintree. Also the departure from Boston of the Chamber of Commerce South American Tour party.

MANY DRUNKS.

Judge Avery disposed of nine complaints for drunkenness at court this morning and directed Francis J. Fahey probation officer to look after most of the cases. The list is the largest ever presented on a Tuesday.

Frank Kesner and William H. Gardner, both employed by John L. Sullivan at his Abington farm, were arrested in Weymouth Monday evening in an intoxicated condition. Officer Holbrook's attention was attracted by their unsteady swagger as they were moving in circles, and took them into custody. They lost no time in telling who their employer was and repeated the story at the court house. They were fined $10 by Judge Avery.

John Frazier of Weymouth had his case placed on file when he paid the balance of an old fine, amounting to $18.25. The fine has run over a period of months but was promptly paid when brought to attention.

The new auto patrol and ambulance of the Milton Police Department made its first appearance in Quincy today when it transported two Italians, charged with drunkenness to the court house. When arrested by Officer Travers Monday, they gave their names as Dominick Pupello and Tony Lombardo. Pupello runs a farm at Avon and Tony Lombardo is a farmhand. In court this morning Pupello paid both fines.

—A contemporary complains that science has not yet found a way to keep a horse from getting his tail over the lines. Oh, yes, it has. It dispenses with the lines, dispenses with the tail and substitutes a gasolene engine and a honk.—Haverhill Gazette.

BONNY BLUE BONNETS.

And the Towns In Scotland Famed For Their Manufacture.

Since 1590 the town of Stewarton, Scotland, has been noted for its manufacture of the "blue bonnet," famed in song. In the infancy of the trade Glasgow was its chief market, and was visited yearly at the great July fair by the bonnet makers with their year's manufacture of nightcaps and bonnets. A record of 1650 shows that the Stewarton corporation was penalized by the Glasgow trades because of the insufficiency of its yearly product.

In 1729 the Stewarton corporation consisted of thirty-five members, who were bound by very stringent rules to keep up the price of bonnets, by periods of compulsory desistance from trade. In one instance an offender was fined $20 for going to work at Kilmarnock.

The Stewarton bonnet makers held themselves and their goods superior to those of Kilmarnock, and a fine of $250 was imposed for the offense of selling Kilmarnock bonnets as Stewarton ones.

In 1750 a law was passed enforcing the use of indigo only as the dyestuff. In the early days of the industry the bonnets were knitted in the open air, when the weather was favorable.—Argonaut.

HE KNEW THE ENGLISH.

Consequently the "Heathen Chinee" Took No Chances.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon one of the first persons the newly wedded husband met was his celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman laughingly, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ha!" returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer. "Me no such big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakee in fire. Burn him up. He, he!"

"Oh, that's too bad!" said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the celestial, with the same cunning smile. "You owe me monee, sah; sendee poison cakee; I eat him; I die; you no payee up! Houpla! He, he, he! I know your Ingleesh!"—Exchange.

Karlsbad.

The question as to how to spell the name of a watering place in Bohemia was submitted by a New York woman to a resident of the spa. The answer did not decide the point, but it afforded those who were interested some amusement. "The place is naming after a name which by you is Charles," says the writer. "No person will be deceive if Carl or Karl is writen. Each one is entire right. So your letter with Carlsbad will come equal time as with Karlsbad addres. Us business people care us very little of the name how it is spelling." The evident desire on the part of the writer to be on both sides of the question was frustrated, however, by the printed letterhead, which had "Karlsbad" on the date line and contained in a corner also the legend, "English spoken." — New York Tribune.

Best Side of a Cemetery.

Probably few people know that there is a choice side to every cemetery. Thus in some parts of the world the eastern portion, without regard to its situation, is always deemed the most desirable. This preference arises from the old tradition that our Lord will appear from the east. It is also believed that the dead in the eastern portion will be the first to rise, then those in the southern, western and northern in order. In England it was once the custom of laying felons and other bad characters on the north side of the church. The custom of laying the dead in a certain direction is responsible for the Welsh designation for the east wind, "The wind of the dead men's feet."—London Express.

Caste and Diet In India.

The private secretary f the maharajah of Jhalawar gave a lecture on food in London. In the course of which he stated that the eating of onions is conducive to "darkness of spirit." He also averred that the caste system in India is largely regulated by diet. Thus, those of the highest caste only eat vegetarian meals in order to keep their souls pure. Members of another caste are allowed to eat meat so that they may become fitted to be warriors, while the lowest caste of all eat "stale, flat foods," which suit their unspiritual natures.

Natural Toothbrushes.

The American consul in Santo Domingo reports that the natives use natural tooth brushes called "chewsticks." They are made by cutting the green stems of the orange, lemon and the membrillo or quince tree, and those of a common plant known as guano, which they chew up and then use for brushing their teeth.

One Celebrity.

"Are there any notable people in your family?"

"Not now, but I used to have an uncle who could smoke a cigar longer without letting it go out than anybody else in our town."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Indiscretion, malice, rashness and falsehood produce each other.—L'Enclos.

DESIRE RIGID QUARANTINE

Five Cases of Infantile Paralysis Reported at Atlantic

For the first time Quincy is facing an epidemic of infantile paralysis as on Monday five cases were reported to the Board of Health. All those stricken are boys between the ages of three and eight years of age.

A rigid investigation is being conducted by the Board in an effort to determine the way in which it has been communicated. Medical science after much investigation has found that the stable fly is a carrier and in each case the homes of the patients are scituated within a short distance of a stable.

Today the board is addressing a letter to the families in which they suggest an immediate and rigid quarantine of the patient. The letter states that the manner in which the disease can be transmitted is not definitely known but that it is communicable from secretions of the nose and mouth.

The districts in which the homes of the stricken boys are located are clean and sanitary and as far as is known offer no opening for sickness of this nature.

The board recommends the absolute isolation of the patients and asks co-operation in checking further contagion.

This morning Dr. Fred E. Jones said that animals are affected with the disease and in some cases act as carriers. He stated however that the only known carrier is the stable fly which is a trifle smaller than the house fly and recognized because the probiscus extends directly from the head and not at right angles with the body as does the probiscus of the house fly.

ACCIDENT WAS FATAL

John Donovan Fails to Recover from Car Injuries

John Donovan of 38 Union street, Quincy Point, died this morning at the Boston City Hospital, from a shock following the amputation of his leg as a result of an injury received at the Dudley street terminal a few days ago.

The accident occurred when Donovan fell from the crowded running board of a Quincy bound electric car and the rear trucks passed over his leg. When admitted to the hospital his name was placed on the dangerous list and but little hope was held out for his recovery. The body will be brought to Quincy by Edward D. Barrett.

Mr. Donovan was well known in Quincy Point where he lived for many years. He leaves a family, among whom is Theresa, a daughter, and two sons; Timothy and Jeremiah a driver for the Adams Express Co.

BURIAL OF JAMES W. SMITH.

The body of James W. Smith who died at Rutland, Mass, was brought to this city Monday and taken to Mt. Wollaston cemetery where interment took place. Services were conducted by Rev. T. C. Martin, pastor of the Hal Place M. E. church. Mr. Smith is a former Wollaston resident, and lived on Berlin street.

THE ONLY EXPLANATION.

Old Mrs. Smith was a chronic complainer and was constantly sending for the family physician and giving him a list of her fancied ailments. He always listened quite patiently, but was getting a little tired of hearing the same things over and over.

One day when the old lady considered herself in an unusually bad way she sent for the doctor, and, after going over the usual list, ended by saying: "Really, doctor, I do not know what in the world is wrong with me. I can neither lay nor set."

The doctor looked at her a moment, then said in a solemn tone. "Madam, you must be a rooster."—Kansas City Independent.

Prospective Statesman.

"Your boy stole a barrel of apples from me the other day." "Dear me. I wonder where that boy will wind up?" "I think he'll wind up in the legislature. He talked me into believing that it was all right."

PICNIC FOR THE KIDDIES

All the Playground Children Invited to Merrymount Park

Next to the final day exercises the children are looking forward to the picnic which is to be held tomorrow at Merrymount park. This will be the first time that an event of this kind has been attempted and from all accounts the day will be full of enjoyment for the youngsters. A full program of athletics races and stunts has been arranged and it is possible that the boys will also have a few water sports.

The big events of the program will be of course, the two base-ball games. The boys game decides the championship of the city for the summer and that it will be a hummer from start to finish one can judge from the talk that is going around.

The girls are also looking forward to their game for it is expected that Ward Three will also "cop the bunting" in their battle. Ward Three girls have not been defeated this season and to put up a good game for them it has been decided to combine Ward 2 and 4 against the South Quincy team.

The full program is as follows: Boys races: 50 yd. dash for Class A. 75 yd. dash, Class B. 100 yd. dash for Class C. One lap on the track 352 yards, open to all boys from the playgrounds. One lap relay race, six boys from each ward, two from each class. Soccor football, Ward 2 vs Ward 3 and 4. Base-ball game Ward 2 vs 3. Special base-ball game between the two teams from Ward 2, the Naps an dthe Athletics, who are tied for the championship of the Playground.

The girls events will be: 35 yard dash for Class A. 50 yards for Class B. 75 yards for Class C. A relay race and a base-ball game as above. Slugball, quoits and other games will be arranged on the grounds.

LOSSES LESS THAN $10,000

But Fire Department Was Called Out 151 Times

The semi annual report of the Quincy Fire Department has been made by Chief Amos L. Litchfield. The number of bell alarms total 55, and the department responded on telephone calls 96 times.

The amount of property at risk in these fires was $177,583.71, of which $130,150 was covered by insurance. The loss reached $9,927.75. The time spent working on these fires amounted to 80 hours and five minutes, during which 13,570 feet of hose was laid 1,718 gallons of chemicals used and 1,071 feet of ladders raised.

BIG INCREASE FOR BOSTON

Tax Rate of $17.20 Against $16.40 in 1912

Boston's tax rate is $17.20 the largest in its history. This is an increase of 80 cents over 1912. Seven of the 25 wards show a loss in real estate, and nine of the wards a loss in personal estate, but there was a net gain of $39,154,606 in the city.

SHIPYARD BOYS ON OUTING

Entertained by Company at Glen Echo Park

Prizes Offered for Sports

The annual outing of the Apprentices, given by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, was held at Glen Echo Park on Tuesday and was attended by 175 boys and a few graduates. The weather was ideal and a merrier party never left Quincy in special cars.

Three cars transported the boys to the park, via Randolph and when they arrived, they found that another portion of the grove had been reserved for a Boston picnic. The Apprentices opened their program and most of them participated while the Boston picnicers formed a gallery that was both critical and appreciative.

But a few moments elapsed after the arrival of the boys before Joseph M. Larkin announced the first event on the day's card, a base ball game. The contesting teams were the Regulars, which lost to Winthrop Athletics in 15 innings Saturday and a team of boys that play on other fast teams throughout the South Shore. The Regulars handily defated the Volunteers, however, running up a score of 15 to 4, in six innings. Williamson and Creswell, the regular battery defended the honors of the Regulars, while the attackers depended on a battery consisting of Ernest Paradise and Henry Malnati.

When both opened fire the usual smoky coaching prevailed but after the game had progressed to the fourth inning the life and spirit of the Volunteers commenced to lag. The boys on the winning team were presented with gold watch fobs. The score by innings:

| | |
|---|---|
| Regulars | 3 4 2 1 3 2—15 |
| Volunteers | 2 0 0 1 1 0— 4 |

The water events were next in order, and in the rowing race on the placid waters of the lake, Charles Warner and Patrick McNamara took first place and the suit cases offered as prizes. Charles Nilssen and Chester Mayo won the cuff links and Frank Bruton and Arthur Doucette third place men were given safety razors.

In the swimming race the list of entries were large and Thomas Barry won first place and the travelling bag, Russell Cuffe received a silver handled umbrella and J. Mattson was awarded a bathing suit as the third prize.

By the time this portion of the program was completed the pangs of hunger were gnawing the inner man and all repaired to the dance hall where a roast turkey dinner was served by Whittemore, a Boston caterer. The tables were set in banquet style but the only formalities was the prompt and efficient service of a corps of waiters that insisted on fully testing the appetites of the boys. Over an hour was spent at the dinner following which the balance of the program was run off.

The century dash furnished one of the most exciting finishes of the day when Michael Arenburg sprung ahead a few feet from the finish and won the travelling bag, the first prize. J. Kay who got second received military brushes, and Arthur Doucette who dropped back to third place in the last sprint was given a jack knife.

The tug-of-war, one of the days interesting events, went to a team of huskies consisting of Verner Birnie, John Tully, Harry Malnati, Thomas Thompson, Patrick McNamara and Ernest Paradise. The fountain pen

RECEPTION AT WOLLASTON

Quincy Ladies Meet Mrs. Houghton Schumacher

Mrs. Frank A. Page of Grand View avenue was most delightfully at home Tuesday afternoon in honor of her guest Mrs. Schumacher of Iowa City, who with her husband Rev. Houghton Schumacher is spending the summer in New England.

The reception was entirely informal. Mrs. Thomas E. Lacy of Grand View avenue presided at the tea urn and young friends of the hostess served punch and assisted in serving.

The guests who were mostly from Quincy and Wollaston also had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Schumacher who has a wide circle of friends here, his former home for several years, as well as the home of his mother's family the Faxons. His mother was a sister of Mr. Frank A. Page. Mr. Schumacher is pastor of a Unitarian church in Iowa City, Iowa, and is popular with his parishioners.

Mr. and Mrs. Schumacher go to Maine for a week before leaving for the west.

GRAND ARMY SERVICE.

The funeral of Edward W. H. Nutting, a Minute Man, from Quincy in the Civil War and a charter member of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., was held Tuesday afternoon at his home, 210 Liberty street. Services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Thompson, acting rector of Christ church. The burial took place in Mt. Wollaston cemetery where three volleys were fired and taps were sounded. The casket was covered with an American flag and the body was escorted to the cemetry by members of Paul Revere Post who rode in carriages. There were many floral tributes.

The summer hotel landlords should let their guests keep money enough to buy a ticket home.

If the ball team wins Labor Day, it is felt that the holiday has contributed to the solution of the labor problem.

When the extradition laws were passed, did anyone foresee that they might be used to get Thaw back to this country?

After the governors, farmers, and business men worked their two days on the Missouri roads, no doubt their wives had the witch hazel bottle ready.

It is declared that the educational world will be startled this fall by some new plays at football.

Our twentieth century young people are now preparing themselves for the public school current events classes by reading up the Diggs-Caminetti cases.

It is claimed that a British aviator has a self righting biplane, but nothing of that kind will draw the crowds to county fair.

THE BOY AND DIRT.

As vacation days pass, the small boy seems more and more of a little savage. The mothers start out with hopes to keep them spruced and starched. But boy nature has an affinity for dirt.

Put a clean suit on an active boy, and turn him loose, the chances are that within an hour he has been rolling or tumbling. After a few days' struggle, the maternal standard of cleanliness becomes much more elastic. The average boy gang by the last of August is reduced to a dull uniformity of soiled overalls and khaki.

The last days of vacation are premonitory to a general period of boy cleaning. The new clothes purchased at this season give the youngster some slight pleasure, which is more than offset by the certainty of scrubbings to come. The prospective regular washings and hair brushings perhaps seem even more harassing to the little barbarians than the toil of the school room.

EXTRADITION LAW.

The first impression of the lawyers on the Thaw escape has been at the extradition statute furnishes no means for the return to New York; either from another state or from Canada, of a man held as an insane person. This defect if it exists may be avoided by the pending deportation proceedings. But in any case the episode calls attention to the weaknesses of the extradition procedure between nations, and even more emphatically between states.

Whether a man be sane or insane, he should be accountable to the laws and authorities of his own state. Thaw was given into the charge of the officials of a state hospital. To the layman it would seem strange if he must stop pursuing him when a state boundary stone is reached, that the cost and burden of proving him unfit for liberty must be assumed by officials of other states, who are unfamiliar with the case, and not responsible for the enforcement of another Commonwealth's laws.

While the statutes of most states extradite much more freely than formerly, the proceedings are so cumbersome and expensive that police officials often do not attempt them for minor offences. This does not promote the fear of the Lord among the underworld.

In some states if a criminal is taken out even on his own consent, without proper extradition proceedings, the officer removing him is guilty of kidnapping. Antiquated, surely.

International extradition treaties are also defective. Some governments trump up criminal charges against men obnoxious on account of political activity. This rouses indignation here, and would make it more difficult to get treaties providing extradition for all offences.

The American people would be willing to part with Harry. He could go to Europe and stay for all them. But the state of New York is naturally not satisfied with the resemblance suggested between Matteawan asylum and a rural lock-up.

MESSAGE HELD UP FOR A DAY

Huerta's Last Chance to Accede to Peace Proposals

LIND QUITS MEXICAN CAPITAL

Announces That Huerta Government Must Accept Mediation Plan or United States Will Announce Its Policy Without Further Delay—Supplementary Proposals

Washington, Aug. 27.—The dilatory attitude of the Huerta government gives administration officials hope that some concessions may be made to the American proposals for peace in Mexico, but indications point to a final ending of the negotiations today, when President Wilson is scheduled to read his message to both houses of congress, defining the policy which he thinks the United States should pursue toward its southern neighbors.

A twenty-four-hour postponement of the presentation of the message was agreed to after a joint request from Frederico Gamboa, Mexican foreign minister, and John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative in Mexico.

It followed repeated efforts on the part of the Huerta officials to have the reading of the document deferred indefinitely. Lind left the Mexican capital for Vera Cruz, however, with the understanding that the United States would announce its policy today unless the Huerta government receded.

Lind had made certain supplementary suggestions to Gamboa, the nature of which was not divulged, but administration officials declared these constituted no departure from the fundamentals of the American note. The original proposals were officially announced as follows:

1. Cessation of hostilities, and a definite armistice.
2. An early and free election.
3. Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate.
4. Agreement by all parties to abide by the results of the election.

Lind informed Gamboa that he would stop in Vera Cruz and could be reached there in case there should be any reply to his last suggestions. For several days Gamboa and Lind have been fencing, the former attempting to secure a new basis of negotiations, and the latter steadfastly declaring that under no circumstances would the United States yield any of its points or agree to any considerable prolongation of the negotiations unless Huerta withdrew his note of reply to the American proposals.

Officials disclaimed that Lind had gone to Vera Cruz to avoid any embarrassment in the Mexican capital following the publication there of President Wilson's message. It was said that Lind, having practically concluded his mission, went to Vera Cruz chiefly to impress upon the Mexican administration that this noon was positively the last moment the United States would wait before proclaiming to the world the position it has taken toward the Huerta government and the course which it is ready to pursue for years if necessary to uphold the principle of orderly and constitutional government in Latin America.

With the nature of the four proposals of the United States admitted officially, discussion centres chiefly on the absence of any demand for the immediate retirement of Huerta, which had generally been supposed was part of the American note.

It was suggested by officials, however, that this government could not logically call upon Huerta to resign a post which it never recognized him as legally holding. So far as the United States is concerned, Huerta is not the constitutionally chosen provisional president of Mexico, because of the irregularities attending his assumption of office.

Not only was there no quorum in the Mexican congress when Madero's resignation was presented, according to official reports here, but the resignation was accomplished by duress.

CAN EAT SOLID FOOD

Philadelphia Boy Suffering From Lockjaw Is Almost Cured

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—After suffering from lockjaw for two weeks, Frank McGonigle, 10 years old, who has been in the Methodist hospital for the past week, was able to eat solid food last night for the first time since his illness.

His jaws began to grow limber Monday. Prior to this time he had been fed liquid food through a hole where a tooth in his upper jaw was missing. Physicians say he will be discharged from the hospital in about a week.

Counterfeit $10 Banknotes Out

Washington, Aug. 27.—Two counterfeit $10 national bank notes have made their appearance. One bill is accredited to the First National bank of Chicago, and the other purports to have been issued by the Farmers and Merchants' National bank of Los Angeles, Cal.

Mistook Husband For a Hero

New York, Aug. 27.—Mrs. Eleanora McManus is suing her husband for a divorce, alleging she married him under the mistaken belief that he was a hero with a record for bravery.

TROOPS ON THE BORDER

Anticipating a Crisis, Soldiers Are Prepared For Emergency

With Harry Thaw in a Canadian jail and New York state progressing well with two governors, all eyes have now been turned to Mexico, where a crisis in the chaotic conditions is daily expected. The president's special message to congress is anticipated as a very important factor in determining the future policies of the United States. In the meantime American troops have been kept on the border and are equipped with all implements of modern warfare, including wireless outfits, aeroplanes and the latest model guns. The picture shows a new wireless outfit in operation.

PERRY SHOT MISS SPEAR AND HIMSELF

Conclusion of Coroner's Jury on the Rockland Tragedy

Rockland, Me., Aug. 27.—A verdict that Carl W. Perry shot Miss Angie Spear, his schoolmate and promised wife, and then shot himself was reported by the coroner's jury at the conclusion of an inquest on the finding of their bodies in the bow of Perry's motor boat, discovered drifting in Penobscot bay.

The time of the shooting was fixed at 7:50 Sunday night by William Flint, who was on Holiday beach and heard three shots at that time. The first two were close together and separated from the third by a brief interval.

LIBERTY HOLDEN DEAD

Owner of Cleveland Plain Dealer Amassed Large Fortune

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—Liberty E. Holden, proprietor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, hotel and mine owner, died of a complication of diseases. He was 80 years old. He was reputed to be one of the wealthiest newspaper owners in this country and was also interested in a number of other business enterprises.

Holden was born in Raymond, Me., June 20, 1833. He was a graduate of the University of Michigan in the class of 1858. He received his A. M. degree in 1861 and had been professor of rhetoric and English literature at Kalamazoo college and superintendent of the schools of Tiffin, O. He was admitted to the bar in 1862. He became proprietor of The Plain Dealer in 1885.

FIRST IN FIFTY YEARS

Marriage Ceremony Is Performed on the Isle of Shoals

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 27.—Twelve miles out at sea on the historic Isle of Shoals the first marriage ceremony in fifty years was performed when Miss Katherine Robertson of Attleboro, Mass., became the bride of Richard Hubert of Lynn, Mass.

The bride and groom were spending their vacation there. A search of the island was made for a minister and finally Rev. John H. Wilson of Wilton, N. H., was found. He agreed to unite the couple, and with many of the summer residents present the ceremony took place.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

Frank's Attorneys Make Motion For a New Trial

Atlanta, Aug. 27.—A sentence of death was pronounced upon Leo M. Frank, convicted of murdering Mary Phagan. His execution was set for Oct. 10.

Before sentence was pronounced, Frank's attorneys moved for a new trial on the ground that several popular demonstrations, said to have been heard by the jurymen, had prejudiced the case. Oct. 4 was set for argument on this motion.

Alcohol Leads to Insanity

Ghent, Aug. 27.—Neurologists representing twenty countries urged a vigorous campaign against the use of alcohol, on the ground that it is largely responsible for insanity.

Such a Stupid Man.

Fair Customer—I tell you that I wear a No. 2. Clerk—But, madam, this shoe that you just took off is a No. 4. Fair Customer—Yes, I know, but it has stretched horribly.—Boston Transcript.

MULHALL IN A RAGE

He Declares McDermott Ought to Be Tarred and Feathered

Washington, Aug. 27.—At times so overcome with rage that he raved, M. M. Mulhall kept the house lobby investigating committee's hearing in an uproar. The former N. A. M. lobbyist was under cross examination by Representative McDermott's counsel.

Under the lashings of the inquisitor, Mulhall yelled he would show that McDermott ought to be tarred and feathered. He declared he would "show up" the Illinois congressman.

Chairman Garrett several times had to order the witness to keep still, particularly when he insisted on telling about "ladies" he alleged McDermott entertained.

"This committee is not going to be a sewer for all this filth," Garrett declared. "It is not necessary for the public good and will only bring sorrow to innocent people."

SAID TO BE CONSERVATIVE

State Department Receives Another Note From Japan

Washington, Aug. 27.—Ambassador Chinda last evening delivered to Secretary Bryan Japan's latest note in the California anti-alien controversy.

Bryan and Chinda agreed to continue their understanding of making public nothing contained in the diplomatic exchanges on the question, and upon that all information of what was contained in the Tokio government's latest communication was withheld from publication.

It may be said, however, that the latest Japanese note contains nothing in the nature of an ultimatum or which might bring the negotiations to a finality. On the other hand it is couched in a vein to carry the negotiations along and preserve the issue without making any determination of the contentions of either government.

"LET PEOPLE KISS ALL THEY WANT TO"

Only Danger Is In Being Caught, Says Chicago Official

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Health Commissioner Young declares: "A kiss is dangerous only when indulged in so as to lead to observation by an angry parent." He defies any physician to prove the contrary.

C. S. Drake, who believes in hygienic kissing, had a warning written for the bulletin edited by Young. It told of the dangers of osculation, concluding: "Therefore kissing should be avoided—should not be indulged in."

"Cut it out," ordered Young. "Let people kiss all they want to."

IS STILL CHAMPION

McLaughlin Defeats Williams In Decisive Match at Newport

Newport, R. I., Aug. 27.—The lawn tennis championship record for 1913 was practically completed on the Casino grand court when Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco successfully defended his own title in singles and maintained the Pacific coast supremacy by defeating R. N. Williams of Philadelphia in the finals of the all-comers tournament, in a well fought four-set match.

As McLaughlin and T. C. Bundy of Los Angeles won their second championship in doubles last week, and Miss Mary Browne of Los Angeles is still the woman's title holder, the ascendency of California in the principal departments of tennis is assured for another year.

WILSON PRAISES FORBES

Resignation of Governor General of Philippines Accepted

Washington, Aug. 27.—President Wilson's letter accepting the resignation of W. C. Forbes as governor general of the Philippines, which has been cabled to the governor, says:

"I realize the amount of excellent work you have done in the islands, both as secretary of commerce and police, and as governor general, and I desire to thank you for your faithful and careful service. It is my desire that your successor should, if possible, reach the Philippine islands before Oct. 16, and I therefore accept your resignation, to take effect Sept. 1."

FOUND IN A HOSPITAL

Warrant Out For Cycle Rider Who Caused Boy's Death

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 27.—Thomas L. Sweeney of Woonsocket, who ran down and killed George Gibbons, aged 15, of Lonsdale while riding a motorcycle at that place last Sunday, was found last evening at the Woonsocket hospital with a broken nose and other injuries sustained in the accident.

The police say that Sweeney had no license to operate a motorcycle and secured a warrant for his arrest.

Daughter of Revolution Is 107

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 27.—Mrs. Louise W. Carpenter, a direct descendant of Roger Williams, and the oldest living member of the Daughter of the American Revolution, celebrated her 107th birthday here.

SQUANTUM ON NEW TACK

Appoints Committee to Consider Annexation to Boston

"Annexation to Boston" was the slogan started by Squantum residents at the regular meeting of the Squantum Improvement association Tuesday night in the Vacation House. The sixty members at the meeting voted unanimously that every effort should be made to have an act passed by the next legislature sanctioning the annexation. Quincy and its City Council were scored unmercifully by a dozen or more of speakers.

The concensus of opinion of the speakers was that if "you stick to Quincy you will get nothing but an exorbitant tax rate and nothing else." Some of the speakers advocated carrying the campaign throughout Quincy, but this was voted down as it was declared that Squantum had a better chance of annexation as the City of Boston owns a large tract of land in Squantum and it adjoins Moon island which the City of Boston owns.

Some of the speakers in favor of annexation were William E. Harvey, Edgar F. Eagar, Mr. Brophy, T. F. Callahan, W. H. Kenyon, William A. Reed and J. H. Loughan. Dr. Poole was opposed.

William A. Reed spoke in opposition to having Atlantic or any other section of Quincy join with Squantum for annexation. He said Squantum had a strong case. The City of Boston already owned about a fifth of Squantum and is paying taxes on this property to the City of Quincy. He believed Boston would welcome the chance to drop this tax bill and take over Squantum.

Dr. Poole spoke of the Hyde Park annexation, and said that while for a time Hyde Park was glad to be a part of Boston the sentiment as he now found it had changed.

J. H. Loughan said he lived in West Roxbury in 1873 when it was a township and was annexed to Boston and he said the residents there had never been sorry. He believed that Hyde Park people were delighted with their change and that certainly they had received more improvement under Boston than they would have received in years from their own city.

President Smith appointed the following committee to work upon the matter of Squantum being annexed to Boston—William E. Harvey, Edgar Eagar and a third member to be selected later.

WELCOMED BY FRIENDS

Pastor of St. Marys Church Returns From Europe

Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's church, after a three months tour of Europe, arrived on the Franconia this morning in the best of health and spirits. At the pier to meet him was a large party, among whom were Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy, William T. Shea, John C. Ballou, Miss Anne English, Dr. J. T. Reynolds and others.

Other arrivals on the boat were Miss Anna Z. White, of Furnace Brook parkway, Miss B. Theresa McDonnell, a teacher of the Willard school, and her sister, Mrs. Whoriskey of Cambridge, a former Quincy resident.

TWIN SONS.

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald J. Grassick of 40 Richie road are the recipients of many congratulations on the advent of twin sons on Monday. Mother and children are doing well. Mr. and Mrs. Grassick were married about a year ago, the bride being Miss Mildred Clapp of North Weymouth.

DISTRICT COURT.

Patrick McGrath, charged with attempt to commit arson, Quincy Point was held for the grand jury. Bail set at $1000.

The continued case of Joseph Karam for larceny from Peter Hajjar was called and continued until Sept. 31.

Richard A. Hull, arraigned for assault and battery at Braintree, was placed on probation until Dec. 31.

John J. McGuire of Weymouth and William Chapman of Quincy were fined $10 for drunkenness and sentence suspended until Sept. 30.

James E. Kimball and Andrew Conley of Boston were fined $25 for violation of the clam laws. Sentence suspended until Dec. 30.

Thomas F. Smith, charged with assault and battery at Weymouth, pleaded guilty and the case was placed on file.

FALSE ALARM.

The incessant ringing of the burglar alarm on the outside of the jewelry store of C. F. Petengill about 11.30 Tuesday night created great excitement in City Square. People coming from the train gathered in front of the store and others went looking for the police. Officer Charles Olsen was near the tool house, in the rear of the Hancock cemetery when the jangling commenced and he immediately ran across lots to the rear of the building. He found upon examination that no one had tried to force an entrance. Mr. Pettengill was notified and he came up and shut down the bell. He attributes the cause to a poor battery. Again this noon the alarm rang for 15 minutes.

NO NEW CASES.

No new cases of infantile paralysis or typhoid fever have been reported from Atlantic this morning and it was stated at the office of the Board of Health that they expected within a few days o be able to trace the origin of both diseases.

The five boys who have infantile paralysis and the two childern who have typhoid fever are all doing well. None of them are considered to be in dangerous conditions. As far as can be learned the parents are carrying out the quarantine recommended by the Board and have in most cases entirely isolated their patients from the members of the family.

REUNION OF OLD 18TH.

Col. William B. White of Quincy, the old commander of the 18th regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, was present on Tuesday at Needham at the annual reunion of the regiment and was given a warm reception. Fifty survivors attended. At the close of the business session dinner was served to the members of the 18th Regiment and all Grand Army veterans in town by the members of Galen Orr W. R. Corps, under the direction of Mrs. Samuel W. Wallis. In the evening a band concert was given on the Common by the Needham Millitary Band.

The next reunion will be at Middleboro.

WASTEFUL DAUGHTER.

"Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise."

Thus runs the old saw and there's more in it, probably, than many of us are willing to admit. Rushing things is all right if not carried too far, but some people in their mad desire to bag everything in sight, overdo it.

To this class belongs the old lady who went to the stairway and yelled upstairs to a grown daughter: "Sally! Sally! Git up! Here it is four o'clock Monday morning; tomorrow's Tuesday, next day is Wednesday; half the week's gone an' nothin' done yit."

EASY FOR AUNT MAHALY.

"These stockings are so full of holes that they are worthless, Aunt Mahaly," said a lady to an old colored woman with a large family, who was a pensioner of her family.

"No'm, dey ain't," replied Aunt Mahaly, calmly appropriating them. "'Rastus an' Verbena got such black laigs dat de holes won't show nohow, an' dem chillus what got yaller meat kin wear two pairs at de same time an' you knows, Mis' Jo, dat de holes in all dem stockin's ain't gwine hit de same places."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SHIPYARD OUTING

prizes were not decided until the third heat.

H. G. Smith, vice president and general manager of the company, was present most of the day and awarded the prizes, after acting as a judge in some of the events. E. B. Hill, the company's auditor attended, and Joseph M. Larkin, supervisor of the Apprentices, was in charge of the outing.

The return trip was made in the early evening, the boys arriving in Quincy about 6.30. Some of them were burned as red as broiled lobsters while others were tired from the day's fun. The boys were enthusiastic in expressing the delightful time extended them by the company and spoke highly of Messrs. Smith, Hill and Larkin, who were responsible for the fine results.

FUNERAL OF AMBROSE WARNER.

Friends and schoolmates attended the funeral of Ambrose Warner, son of the late William Warner, which was held this morning from his home, 45 Penn street. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. Walter J. Quinlan, and music was by the regular choir which sang the Gregorian chant under the direction of John Mahon, organist.

The floral tributes were many and filed an open baoruche which preceded the funeral procession to St. Mary's cemetery where intermnt took plac. Among them were pieces from Fore River employees and Quincy herd, Order of Buffaloes. The bearers were all young men friends of the deceased and were William Keenan, Geekie, David Curtin, James Erwin, John Malnatti, Frank Raymond, Joseph Kelly and Charles Hershey.

Mr. Warner died Sunday after a long illness. He was born in South Quincy and graduated from the Adams school. Before his sickness he was employed at the Fore River yards.

A Tragedy of Naples

By F. A. MITCHEL

I was spending some time in Naples. Nearly all the curiosities in that city except those of nature are contained in the museum, and when one has "done" the museum and the buried cities he must confine himself to looking out upon the beautiful bay. One morning I climbed the high ground back of the city to get a more comprehensive view, including Vesuvius and the islands of Capri and Ischia. Coming to a suitable spot, I threw myself on the grass to regale myself in what to me is the most attractive view in the world.

Presently I heard a voice behind me, which I took for that of a woman's deep contralto.

"Parley vous Francais, monsieur?"

I turned, and there stood a young man apparently about twenty years old. He was evidently not Italian, for his hair bespoke one of the north. I speak French indifferently and apprised him of the fact. He asked me to what country I belonged, and I told him America.

"You are the very man I wish to see," he said. "I am thinking of going to America, and you can tell me how to get there."

"The shortest way is to sail from this port for New York or Boston."

"Do steamers go from here direct without stopping at any European port?"

"I think not. Some of them go to Genoa before turning westward, and I think nearly all stop at Gibraltar. Then there are the Azores and Madeira, out in the Atlantic."

He seemed disappointed at this—at least he looked so, though he did not express his disappointment in words.

"When does the next steamer sail?" he asked.

"I don't know. One sails a week from today. I go in her myself."

"A week from today," he said, evidently thinking of something else besides the starting. "At what hour?"

I told him that I had not yet learned the sailing hour; he could find out by applying at the offices of the line. He asked what stops the steamer made, and I told him only one on the European mainland—Gibraltar. When I inquired if he would be a passenger with me he said he couldn't tell; he didn't know if he would be ready. After some information I gave him about America, to which he did not seem to be listening, he made an abrupt adieu, with thanks, and went on his way down the declivity.

The houses climb the steep hills back of Naples. Sometimes the front door on the street is in the second or third story. It made me dizzy to look down into the back yard of my pension. Beneath me was a hotel with a yard in the rear off the fourth story. A gentleman—evidently of high rank, judging from his attendants—used to walk every afternoon about 3 o'clock in this yard. He appeared to be an invalid and chose that hour because he got the sunshine, for the shade in Italy is very chilly. I noticed that he was quite regular in taking his outing, and I used to watch him and the attention he received from his servants.

The afternoon of the day I sailed I was sitting at my window enjoying the view of the bay when I heard a report as of a gun or pistol. Leaning forward and glancing down into the yard of the hotel, I saw the invalid lying on the ground. Then half a dozen persons ran out of the hotel to where he lay. Presently two servants took him up and carried him into the hotel. His fall, coming so soon after the report, caused me to think that he had been shot, as could easily have been done from any of the back windows of houses on the street above the one on which the hotel faced.

I sailed the same evening without getting an explanation of what I had seen. I was inclined to think that the gentleman had fainted. I could read Italian sufficiently well to extract the gist of an item and took a newspaper aboard the ship with me. Before getting into my berth I looked it over. One of the first articles I read stated that a Russian nobleman who had been the governor of Finland had been shot that day while taking exercise in the yard of his hotel. The assassin was supposed to be a Russian. The deceased had been proscribed by the revolutionists. Considering the position from which the shot was fired, escape for the assassin was easy. He had not been arrested.

I had seen a Russian political assassination without even suspecting it. Somehow the matter got on my nerves.

After passing the Azores, where we made our last stop, I noticed sitting in a steamer chair on deck a girl whose face was familiar to me. Where had I seen her? I was sure I had seen her somewhere, and that very recently. While passing her I scrutinized her, she returning my gaze with a stony stare.

The next morning, lying awake in my berth, when, after a good sleep, the brain is in perfect working order, it suddenly came to me that the young man with whom I had conversed on the heights back of Naples and this girl were one and the same person.

What should I do in the matter? Nothing. I had no relish for mixing myself up in a foreign affair that might bring me no end of trouble. When I passed the girl again I did not look at her, nor did I mention the occurrence to any one aboard the ship. She never knew that I could have sent her to Siberia.

MRS. BIRMINGHAM.

The funeral of Mrs. Sadie Birmingham (nee Perry,) was held at the home of her mother, Mrs. George W. Rhines at 72 Franklin street and was largely attended. Rev. Edward Norton officiated. There were several floral tributes. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Besides a husband and mother she leaves three sisters and two brothers.

SHORTHAND SCHOOL.

The Clark school of shorthand and typewriting is well known as an institute without an equal. It will reopen its day course on Monday, Sept. 8, and its evening courses on Monday, Sept. 15, at 338 Washington street, Boston. There is always a demand for good stenographers and the graduates of this school stand high.

ONE OF ERIN'S FAIRIES.

The story of the boy who was exhibited throughout Scotland as a genuine Irish leprechaun leads one to ask what exactly a leprechaun is, for, of course, each variety of fairy has its special characteristics.

The leprechaun is peculiar to Ireland and is in the form of a little old man, by profession a maker of brogues. He is only discovered by the sound of the hammering of his brogues, and any one capturing him can induce him by threats to reveal where his wealth is hidden.

But no one yet has laid hands on that wealth, for if you take your eye off the leprechaun for as much as a second he has the power of vanishing, however tight you may hold him. And his ingenuity in making you glance away is always successful.

Only once did that ingenuity fail, and even then the treasure escaped unpillaged. A careful peasant, proof against all temptations, kept his eye on the little brogue maker until the money was revealed in a field of ragwort. But he had no bag. So he tied his garter round the particular plant under which the money was hid and went to fetch one, only to find on his return that every ragwort in the field was adorned with a red garter.—London Chronicle.

FATHER OF ALL HOT SPRINGS.

Carlsbad's Famous Sprudel and Its White Robed Priestesses.

The Sprudel is the most ancient of all Carlsbad's fountains, the father of all hot springs, and still pours forth the greatest flood of all.

It rises like a geyser in its basin, a steaming, spouting column an inch and a half thick and from six to thirteen feet high. Around it stand priestesses, the spring girls, dressed in lovely white waterproof uniforms. They fix the drinking cups at the ends of poles and catch the water as it comes fresh from the earth's heart.

The geologists call Carlsbad's fountains virgin or volcanic water. They have their sources in no rainfall sinking to fill subterranean reservoirs. Created in those glowing inner laboratories of mother earth, the water here leaps to light and air for the first time.

Pagan memories seem to stir in one at the thought. It becomes easy to believe that the springs bring from recesses where it has lurked hidden since creation some magic, unspoiled, primeval energy and that the cheerful, smiling German peasant girls who toil so tirelessly are captive woodland creatures serving forces more ancient than the gods.—Harper's Magazine.

Eating Crow.

Although the use of the expression "to eat crow" in a metaphorical sense, meaning to eat one's words, may well have dated from the time of Noah, when the bird was first looked upon as unclean and not fit to serve as food for man, it seems to have arisen from the old tale of the officer and the private. A soldier, having shot a tame crow belonging to one of his officers, was discovered by the owner with the bird in his hand. Seizing the private's gun, the officer commanded him to eat the bird as a punishment. With the firearm pointed at his head, the soldier fell to, but no sooner had the officer laid aside the gun than the culprit grasped it and compelled his superior to join in the distasteful banquet. The private was court martialed the next day, and when he was asked by the examiners what had occurred he replied, "Nothing, except that Captain Bank and I dined together."

The Sausage.

The sausage dates back to the year 897. It has been asserted that the Greeks in the days of Homer manufactured sausages, but this prehistoric mixture had nothing in common with our modern product. The ancient so called sausage was composed of the same materials which enter into the makeup of the boudin of the French market and the blood pudding of the French Canadian. The ancient sausage was enveloped in the stomachs of goats. It was not until the tenth century that sausage made of hashed pork became known. It was in or near the year 1500 that, thanks to the introduction into Germany of cinnamon and saffron, the sausages of Frankfort and Strassburg acquired a universal reputation.

He Had Been There.

"Can you direct me to the best hotel in this town?" asked the stranger who, after sadly watching the train depart, had set his satchel upon the station platform.

"I can," replied the man who was waiting for a train going the other way, "but I hate to do it."

"Why?"

"Because you will think after you've seen it that I'm a liar."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Physical Geography.

The following answer was recently given in a geography examination in reply to the question, "From what direction do most of our rains come?"

Most of our rains come straight down, but some of them come sideways.

Told One Truth.

He (during the quarrel)—Then, by your own account, I didn't tell you a single truth before we were married. She—You did one; you said you were unworthy of me.—Boston Transcript.

No true and permanent fame can be founded except in labors which promote the happiness of mankind.—Charles Sumner.

MATTEAWAN IS AWAITING THAW

Jerome's Prediction Creates Scare in the Thaw Camp

HIS COUNSEL NOW DIVIDED

Considering Whether It Will Not Be Safer For Their Client to Remain In Canada—Fugitive Bitterly Scores His Nemesis as "Paid Attorney For New York Tenderloin"

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 27.—That William T. Jerome is the nemesis of Harry K. Thaw is now demonstrated more clearly than at any time since the murder of Stanford White.

Two days ago the high-priced camp of attorneys for Thaw was a unit in its defense plans. In jail Thaw was confident and sarcastic. Now the defense is divided. Thaw, extremely nervous and much excited, paces back and forth in his cell, issuing orders to every one who will listen. What the outcome will be no one can forecast. And all because Jerome made the following statement:

"Harry K. Thaw is headed straight back to Matteawan. He may fight here. He may elect to struggle in Vermont. But the end will be the same, and what difference does a few months make one way or the other?"

The moment Thaw heard this he sent for his lawyers and demanded they reverse themselves and keep him in Canada.

"Jerome is at last the paid attorney for the New York Tenderloin," he shouted, "and with his true colors revealed we must fight every step of the way."

The lawyers consulted again. The majority were still insistent that it was best to let Thaw go to Vermont. White and Shurtliffe, who were the original attorneys, changed their front. They urged a bold move which they said would afford delay. They wanted a writ of discontinuance of the habeas corpus proceedings filed immediately.

This would leave Thaw under the original commitment and they declared he would have to stay there until the regular October term of court. In the meantime, something might turn up.

But the other lawyers held that if any such action were taken the minister of justice at Ottawa would interfere. His power is absolute. With the attention of the world on Canada it was not believed that a technical commitment would be permitted to be used as an excuse for the law's delays.

However, they considered this plan and also a proposition that an agreement be reached whereby Thaw be ordered deported to New York via Montreal, and then a stay of execution granted permitting an appeal which would finally go to the privy council in London.

The basis for the appeal would be discrimination. The Canadian immigration law gives only Canadians the right of appeal from exclusion or deportation orders. The treaty between Great Britain and the United States grants citizens of one country equal rights in the other. The Thaw lawyers were considering whether this did not make the section refusing the opportunity of appeal to Americans unconstitutional.

It was believed the Ottawa officials might not oppose this plan. Canada would be the gainer. This one section of the law has caused divided opinions among lawyers. Canada could thus get a high court decision with the state of New York and the Thaw family paying the bills.

The cat and mouse game between the immigration authorities and Thaw has been still further drawn out through the decision of the mouse in the case to remain in his place of refuge for the time being in an apparent effort to outwit the cat. The result is there will be no court proceedings today and only Thaw knows where he is at.

Thaw's Canadian attorneys last night withdrew the writ of habeas corpus obtained last week in his behalf, and their action may prolong proceedings indefinitely. It will at least give them opportunity to perfect any plan of defense they may have in mind.

Thaw insisted again that while Jerome was nominally a deputy attorney general representing New York state, in reality he represented former associates of Stanford White. In incoherent sentences he denounced the New York lawyer, insisting that he was actuated by mercenary motives in his "persecution of a perfectly sane and innocent man."

Thaw continued to show little interest in anything except his publicity plans. He is mailing and telegraphing statements to papers in Vermont, where, notwithstanding all the theories of court delay here, he apparently expects to be deported.

He also insisted again that in view of Jerome's presence here he wanted his lawyers to reissue a statement quoting Jerome as saying in New York in 1908 that Thaw was sane.

AGED COUPLE KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Bodies Badly Mangled When Train Hits Their Car

South Deerfield, Mass., Aug. 27.—Sherman B. Porter and his wife, an aged Springfield couple, were instantly killed when their automobile was struck by an express train at a crossing near here. Frederick W. Bennett, their chauffeur, was thrown 100 feet, but escaped with minor injuries.

The automobile was proceeding along a wooded road and the chauffeur failed to notice the train as he approached a grade crossing.

The train struck the limousine squarely and threw Mr. and Mrs. Porter 100 feet away, terribly mangling their bodies.

Porter was president of the Kibbe Manufacturing company, with which he had been associated since he was 29 years old. He was born in East Longmeadow eighty years ago.

GLYNN NAMES ROOSEVELT

Says Ex-President Has Candidate For Governor of New York

Albany, Aug. 27.—The name of Theodore Roosevelt was brought into the gubernatorial controversy by Acting Governor Glynn, who charged that the true object of Judge Arnold, who is endeavoring to procure indictments of some of the men who are fighting Governor Sulzer, was to "land in the executive chamber" Stephen C. Clark, Arnold's associate, "with the aid of Theodore Roosevelt." Clark is a millionaire, with residences in New York and Cooperstown.

Tuesday was a field day for the acting governor in the matter of extraditions. Five requisitions for fugitives from Massachusetts were honored at the solicitation of Governor Foss.

ACCOMMODATIONS LACKING

100,000 Children Crowded Out of New York Schools

New York, Aug. 27.—Because there are no schoolhouses in which to accommodate them, fully 100,000 boys and girls will be forced to remain at home when the public schools open here next month.

The city authorities have neglected to appropriate enough money for the erection of new schoolhouses necessary to provide for fully one-sixth of the total enrollment.

Held For Father's Death

Deedham, Mass., Aug. 27.—Charged with assault with intent to murder his 68-year-old father, Richard J. Delaney, aged 33, of this town, was held without bail pending an autopsy upon the father's body when arraigned before Judge Grover.

KAISER BARRED BY THE MIKADO

When Latter's Pact With Great Britain Was Formulated

TRIPLE ALLIANCE IN EAST

Salisbury Was Anxious to Isolate Franco-Russian Alliance In Any Action It Might Take—Yielded to Hayashi When Hint of Japanese Alliance With Russia Was Given Out

London, Aug. 27.—Revelation that the diplomatic negotiations which finally resulted in the Anglo-Japanese alliance first contemplated an Anglo-German-Japanese triple alliance and that Germany was largely instrumental in starting them, but was shut out by Japan, is made in the diary of the late Count Tadasu Hayashi, former Japanese ambassador to Great Britain and twice foreign minister, part of which was recently published.

The Jiji Shimro of Tokio printed portions of the diary but the Japanese government prohibited further publication and the censor suppressed telegrams sent by foreign correspondents in Japan reporting details.

The diary showed that the British government, under the premiership of the late Marquis of Salisbury was in favor of the inclusion of Germany, but that Japan opposed it. Count Hayashi, in order to bring about the Anglo-Japanese alliance, hinted that Japan was ready to ally herself with Russia if Great Britain was unwilling.

Japan suggested that a third party should be omitted from the alliance because Anglo-Japanese interests were identical. Great Britain, however, for some time clung to the idea of a triple alliance, according to Hayashi, as she was anxious for an alliance with Germany in order to isolate the Franco-Russian alliance in any action it might take in the Far East or elsewhere.

The continuation of the diary, which might have shown why Hayashi opposed the inclusion of Germany, has not been published.

BISHOP BRODERICK WINS

With Sullivan He Gets Court Award of $18,901 In Contract Case

Hartford, Aug. 27.—In a decision handed down by Judge Holcomb Bishop Bonaventure Broderick of Saugerties, N. Y., formerly of Hartford, who has been assailing Governor Sulzer and is being accused himself in turn, is awarded $18,901.40 and commissions and interest from his brother, David Broderick of Farmington, Conn., and Hugh J. Reilley, Jr., of New York city.

Associated with Broderick in the suit, which has been on trial here for several months, is John A. Sullivan of Boston, and the complaint alleged failure by David Broderick and Reilley to pay to the plaintiff partners their share of a $571,000 contract made by the republic of Cuba for sewers and water works in Cienfuegos.

MICHAEL MAYBRICK DEAD

Composer of "Nancy Lee" and Many Other Popular Songs

Buxton, Eng., Aug. 27.—Michael Maybrick, the English musical composer, who under the name of "Stephen Adams" wrote some of the most popular songs in the English language, died here at the age of 69.

Among his compositions were "Nancy Lee, "The Blue Alsatian Mountains," "The Holy City" and "A Warrior Bold." He was a native of Liverpool, but had lived for many years in the Isle of Wight, where he devoted himself to municipal politics, serving five terms as mayor of Ryde.

MOLTEN METAL SPILLS

Five Men Dying From Burns Received In Ohio Steel Mill

Youngstown, O., Aug. 27.—Twenty men were seriously burned, five of whom will die, when a "ladle" car carrying over five tons of molten metal toppled over in the steel mill of the Republic Sheet and Tube company here.

The metal poured over the men and coming into contact with water on the floor of the plant resulted in explosions which added to the panic.

DE LUXE BOOK FIRM FAILS

Liabilities of Chicago Concern May Reach Quarter of a Million

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Tomlinson, Humes, Inc., dealers in de luxe books and pictures, are in the hands of a receiver. Liabilities, it is said, may reach $250,000.

A slump in the markets for de luxe editions, due to much publicity following many suits and federal investigations, is said to have been the chief factor in forcing the concern to the wall.

Tar Baby Whips Flynn

Boston, Aug. 27—Dan Flynn was knocked out by Sam Langford in four rounds of a scheduled twelve at the Arena last night. It was one of the poorest heavyweight farces that Boston has seen for years.

Chinese Rebels Lose Last Stronghold

London, Aug. 27.—A dispatch from Shanghai announces that Nanking has fallen, depriving the rebels of their last stronghold.

The Yellow Sampan

Narrow Escape of an American Girl

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It had been a hot day in Shanghai, and down at the end of the public wharf a faint breeze crept up from the mouth of the river. Harry Ames paused idly for a moment before entering his motorboat, bobbing lazily at the foot of the steps. He was watching the progress of a small yellow sampan hurriedly threading the maze of other water craft along the water front.

The brawny, amber skinned boatman poled the small covered craft dexterously in and out, closely shaving other sampans and leaving in his wake a staccato chorus of abusive shrieks at his recklessness. Soon it had passed beyond the crowded portion of the river and was headed upstream toward the ancient native city.

"I've seen that yellow skinned giant before, by Jove! He certainly resembled Wang Tao, Galbraith's runaway comprador! Mr. Galbraith said he had found a clew to his whereabouts and lost it again. Fancy a flat faced innocent like Wang Tao running off with 10,000 Mexican dollars! Some load!"

Harry Ames ran lightly down the steps and pulled the boat toward him.

FOUND WANG TAO'S SCARED YELLOW FACE NEAR THE VOTIVE TABLE.

He had unfastened the painter and was about to step into the craft when heels clattered down the wharf and a voice hailed him from above.

"I say, Ames, thank God you haven't gone!"

He looked up and saw the white, strained face of John Galbraith peering down at him.

"What is it? What is the matter, Mr. Galbraith?" he asked hastily.

In answer John Galbraith came panting down the steps. When he reached the foot he sat down and, removing his pith helmet, mopped his forehead with a silk handkerchief. His handsome old face was drawn with anxiety.

"Is it—has anything happened to Miss Rose?" demanded Harry quickly.

Galbraith nodded and held out a strip of red paper covered with Chinese ideographs.

"Can you translate that?" he asked grimly.

Ames slowly read the words aloud, his face growing ashen beneath the tan:

"When you cease pursuit of the worthy Wang Tao then the fair American devil will be restored to her parent."

"My God, Mr. Galbraith, do you mean to say that they have kidnaped Rose?" gasped Ames.

"It looks like it. She has been missing since tiffin. Chi Tung, our new comprador, last saw her driving down the road toward Speedwell's bungalow, but Van Ping, the house boy, declares she said I had sent for her to come down to this wharf to meet some friends on an American yacht just arrived. I found this letter on my desk in the office just now. And, I say, Ames, I can't find a soul who has seen her this afternoon on the wharf—and"—

"Wait a moment," interrupted Harry Ames. Then he briefly related the incident of the yellow sampan. "If that was Wang Tao, as I thought, there is no doubt Rose was concealed in that boat. The wharf has been almost deserted all afternoon, and Rose would not hesitate to enter a sampan because we all use them frequently, as you know. I will follow at once. The Lark can easily overtake that little tub. Will you come, sir?"

"Of course. Take these," and Mr. Galbraith entered the boat and tossed a couple of loaded revolvers into Ames' outstretched hands. "I've got mine safe," added the older man, grimly patting his pockets.

The yellow sampan had a good ten minutes' start of the motorboat and by this time, favored by the swift tide, might have effected a landing somewhere, although this procedure was doubtful. The fugitive Chinese would prefer to run a risk in gaining the water front of the native city, for within the maze of its crooked streets and alleys escape would be easy. Even if rumbered by a foreign woman no Asiatic hand would stop their flight. Public sentiment was against the foreign invasion.

Only a criminal, such as Wang Tao had proved himself to be, would dare to commit a second crime to conceal the first.

The two men in the launch were silent as the little craft sped upstream. Harry Ames' eyes were busy searching for a glimpse of the yellow sampan. His thoughts were chaotic. Only the week before he had asked Rose to marry him; she had consented, and Mr. Galbraith had refused to consider the question. Ames' minor position in the bank was not considered sufficient to support the beautiful daughter of the rich Galbraiths.

But John Galbraith had evidently forgotten that episode in his horror at the abduction of his daughter. Constantly he urged Harry Ames to make greater speed as the sun went down and left the river a dismal yellow path leading—whither?

"Im getting every inch out of her, sir," reiterated Harry patiently. "There, there! I believe it is beyond there, at the third flight of steps! See, they are half carrying some one wrapped in a long cloak!"

He turned the Lark toward the stone steps leading down from one of the water gates of the native city. Even as he did so there came a shrill warning cry from a nearby boatman.

"Ay, yah!" he shrieked shrilly, and the men about the yellow sampan turned, saw and melted through the adjacent gate.

Two minutes later Harry Ames and his companion scrambled up the slimy stone steps and plunged through the gate just before it slammed in their faces.

The crooked street was empty, but away to the left came the sound of muffled foot beats on cobblestones.

"Follow me, sir," cried Harry Ames, his fingers clutched about a weapon and his elbows pressed close to his sides.

He turned to the right, entering a winding alley that sprang apart into three branching alleys. At the end of the middle alley a confused group of people melted out of sight.

"Here!" shouted Ames, dashing down the thoroughfare.

The alleys and streets were strangely deserted. It was as if all the denizens of the closely shuttered houses had withdrawn from the street to allow a free passage for the abductors to make their escape.

John Galbraith soon fell behind in the chase. He could only glimpse Ames' flying white clad figure as it darted around corners and up and down deserted streets.

Twice they had doubled on their tracks, and once Harry Ames had heard a muffled scream for help. It was growing dark now in the city, and the occasional paper lantern hung before a doorway served to accentuate the gloom of the badly paved, filthy streets.

All at once, panting and breathless, Ames stopped at a corner. He was baffled. He had lost track of his quarry. Where had they disappeared? A moment before he had been almost upon them, and now they had been swallowed up by some forbidding doorway.

He looked about for one large enough to receive them in a body and saw the latticed gate of a temple.

He waited an instant for Mr. Galbraith to join him, pointed at the temple, and together they assailed the gate. It fell in at their first touch, and they hastened up the wide stone steps, where filthy mendicant priests scurried away like scared rats at their approach.

Inside the temple there was a muffling darkness, with the suffocating smell of incense.

There was a great silence. Not a sound broke the stillness of the place.

"They are not here. It is too late," moaned Mr. Galbraith.

"Wait," said Ames tersely. He pulled an electric torch from his pocket, and its needle-like light searched hither and thither through the smoke shrouded atmosphere. He heard suppressed whispers, shrill chatterings nipped in their first utterance and once the beginning of that weird Chinese cry of intense excitement:

"Ay, yah!" But it was silenced, and there followed an ugly gurgling sound and a girl's faint, frightened cry.

"Courage, Rose; coming!" called Harry Ames, and he dashed toward the sounds.

"Careful, my boy," cautioned Mr. Galbraith's agonized voice from the rear.

But Harry Ames had but one thought. The torch flashed hither and thither until it sought and found Wang Tao's scared yellow face near the votive table. Beside him was another smaller man. The third one of the abductors lay dead across the floor. Rose Galbraith was nowhere to be seen.

In three seconds the thieving comprador and his companion had vanished.

"Rose!" called Harry Ames.

"Coming," said the girl's voice unsteadily, and from behind the great bronze idol there crept a pale, pathetic little figure that found refuge in Harry Ames' arms.

John Galbraith openly wiped his eyes.

"My—my dear, you can come and kiss me afterward, but this is a good place to say that I guess you belong to Harry here. He has certainly won you!"

Then somehow Rose found herself in the arms of her father and her lover.

"I can never think hardly of Wang Tao after this," she sobbed.

PLANNING AUTUMN OUTFITS.

In School Clothes, Balkan Blouses, Peplums and Panniers are Extensively Used.

Late Summer shopping offers great possibilities for practical economies to the woman who must select her daughter's outfit early to be in readiness for the school opening. Left over summer dresses if becoming and not too mussy answer perfectly for the fussy frocks that will be worn at informal entertainments, and if one is near the larger cities it is possible to find advance models in suits and furs at more reasonable figures than prevail at the height of the season.

HOME MAKING.

With the help of a house dressmaker or without, if a woman is possessed of the knack, quite up-to-date frocks, blouses and fixings can be readily turned out at home, if a wise selection is made of reliable well cut patterns. It is wonderful how many variations can be made in one model by minor changes in trimmings, buttone, reveres etc. Simple lines and little drapery characterize the best Junior typs. Elaboration is out of place with dainty youthful grace, or with the robust athletic development characteristic of so many attractive children of this generation. Loose, easy fitting garments are most becoming, practical and modish whatever the type of the wearer, and though skirts remain narrow at the foot, there is nothing tight about the lines from the knee up.

5394

BLOUSES.

Blouses and dress waists of all sorts are decidedly baggy—and all the variations rung on these indispensable fixings during the Summer are repeated in Fall and Winter models. The Balkan blouse with its tight strap about the hips is to continue and will be worn in silk, woolen and corded velvet models as well as in the heavier cottons that have been so much employed for it by the girlish contingent this Summer.

A NEW COTTON.

A famous Fifth Avenue shop devoted to children's clothes uses great quantities of the new Renfrew Devonshire Cloth for Balkan blouss and for its best grade frocks and boys' suits, since this material has proved exceptionally satisfactory to its discriminating patrons. Dyed in the yarn, and woven with the greatest skill, this 32 inch cotton cloth, closely resembles linen in firmness and finish but does not crush as readily, and is so durable that it outwears Galatea. One can find it now wherever an up-to-date stock of wash fabrics is shown, in an almost endless variety of stylish patterns and colorings. All tub-proof and sun-proof and guaranteed by the name which is printed on the selvage, new goods being given for any piece that fails to meet the severest test of sun or laundering.

FASHION AND HYGIENE.

Fashion and hygiene unite in endorsing wash frocks for the school room, and economy and common sense commend their popularity for year-round wear, in these times when rather overeated rooms are the rule in Winter and warm outer garments give all needed protection outdoors. Another sensible idea that seems to be gaining adherents is the use of "Slicker" hats worn with long rain coats by both school girls and boys, which afford perfect protection and do away with the need of the umbrells, so apt to be lost, strayed or stolen.

CHAPTER IX.

The Friends of the Family.

BROCK discovered in due time that he was living in a lofty but uncertain place, among the clouds of exaltation. It was not until the close of the succeeding day that he began to lower himself grudgingly from the height to which Freddie's ill mannered confession had led him. By that time he satisfactorily had convinced himself that no one but a fool could have suspected Constance of being in love with Ulstervelt, and yet, on the other hand, was he any better off for this cheerful argument? There was nothing to prove that she cared for him, notwithstanding this agreeable conclusion by contrast. As a matter of fact, he came earthward with a rush, weighted down by the conviction that she did not care a rap for him except as a conveniently moral brother-in-law. He was further distressed by Edith's comfortless, though perhaps well qualified, announcement that she believed her sister to be in love. She could not imagine with whom. She only knew she "acted as if she were."

She Plainly Could Hear What They Were Saying.

"Besides, Roxbury," she said warningly, "it's a most degenerate husband who falls in love with his wife's sister."

They were walking in one of the mountain paths some distance behind the others. They did not know that Mrs. Odell-Carney had stopped to rest in the leafy niche above the path. She was lazily fanning herself on the stone seat that man had provided as an improvement to nature. Being a sharp eared person with a London drawing room instinct, she plainly could hear what they were saying as they approached. These were the first words she fully grasped, and they caused her to prick up her ears:

"I don't give a hang, Edith. I'm tired of being her brother-in-law."

"You're tired of me, Roxbury—that's what it is," in plaintive tones.

"You're happy, you love and are loved, so please don't put it that way. It's not fair. Think of the pitiable position I'm in."

"My dear Roxbury," quite severely, "if there's nothing else that will influence you, just stop to consider the child! There's Tootles, dear Tootles, to think of."

Of course Mrs. Odell-Carney could not be expected to know that Edith was blithely jesting.

"My dear Edith," he said just as firmly, "Tootles has nothing to do with the case. You know, and Constance knows, and I know, and the whole world will soon know that I'm not even related to her, poor little beggar. I don't see why she should come between me and happiness just because she happens to bear a social resemblance to a man who isn't her father. Come, now, let's talk over the situation sensibly."

Just then they passed beyond the hearing of the astonished eavesdropper. Good heaven, what was this? Not his child? Two minutes later Mrs. Odell-Carney was back at the spring where they had left her somnolent husband, who had refused to climb a hill because all of his breath was required to sm[illegible] cigarette.

Carney," [illegible] sternly, her [illegible] rigid, her eyes set hard upon his face, "how long have the Medcrofts been married?"

He blinked heavily. "How the devil should I know? 'Pon me word, it's"—

"Four years, I think Mrs. Rodney told me. How old is that baby?"

"'Pon me soul, Agatha, I'm as much in the dark as you. I don't know."

"A little over a year, I'd say. Well, I just heard Medcroft say that she wasn't his child. Whose is it?" She stood there like an accusing angel. He started violently, and his jaw dropped. An expression of alarmed protest leaped into his listless eyes.

"'Pon my word, Agatha, how the devil should I know? Don't look at me like that. Give you my word of honor, I don't know the woman. 'Pon me soul, I don't, my dear."

He was very much in earnest, thoroughly aroused by what seemed to be a direct insinuation.

"Oh, don't be stupid," she cried. "Good heavens, can there be a scandal in that lovely woman's life?"

"There's never any scandal in a woman's life unless she's reasonably lovely," remarked he.

"Whose child is she, if she isn't Medcroft's?" she pursued with a perplexed frown.

"Demme, Agatha, don't ask me," he said irritably, passing his hand over his brow. "I've told you that twice. Ask them; I dare say they know."

She looked at him in disgust. "As if I could do such a thing as that! Dear me, I don't understand it at all. Four years married. Yes, I'm sure that's it. Carney, you don't suppose"— She hesitated. It was not necessary to complete the obvious question.

"Agatha," said he, weighing his remark carefully, "I've said all along that Medcroft is a fool. Take those windows, for instance. If he"—

"Oh, rubbish! What have the windows to do with it? You are positively stupid. And I'd come to like her too. Yes, I'd even asked her to come and see me." She was really distressed.

"And why not?" he demanded. "Hang it all, Agatha, it's nothing unusual. She's a jolly good sort and a sight too good for Medcroft. He's a stupid ass. I've said so all along. How the devil she ever married him I can't see. But, by Jove, Agatha, I can readily see how she might have loved the father of this child, no matter who he is. Take my advice, my dear, and don't be harsh in your judgment. Don't say a word about what you've heard. If they are reconciled to the—er—the situation, why the devil should we give a hang? And, above all, don't let these Rodneys suspect." Here he lowered his voice gradually. "They're a pack of rotters and they couldn't understand. They'd cut her, even if she is a cousin or whatever it is. I'd give a year or two of my life to know positively whether Rodney intends taking those shares or not." He said it in contemplative delight in what he would do if it were definitely settled. "I can't stand them much longer."

"What great variety of Americans there are!" she reflected. "Mrs. Medcroft and her sister are Americans. Compare them with the Rodneys and Mr. Ulstervelt. No, Carney, I'll not start a scandal. The Rodneys would not understand, as you say. They'd tear her to shreds and gloat over the mutilation. No, we'll have her to see us in London. I like her."

"And by Jove, Agatha, I like her sister!"

SENATORIAL VOTE OF 1912

With Republicans Divided McDevitt Won by Plurality

By request, the Daily Ledger prints the senatorial vote of the First Norfolk district in 1912.

There were four candidates in the field:

William Litchfield of Weymouth, Soc
John J. McDevitt of Quincy, Dem.
L. P. Winchenbaugh, Boston, Prog.
Roger Wolcott of Milton, Republican.

But it was really a triangular fight between the Democrat, Republican and the Progressive, and the former won by a pluralty of 963. Over 14,000 votes cast for the three candidates so that it will be seen that Mr. McDevitt lacked over 1,500 of a majority.

The vote of the district was as follows:

| | McD. D. | Win P. | Wol R. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Quincy | 2184 | 1366 | 1532 |
| Hyde Park | 825 | 721 | 697 |
| Milton | 398 | 286 | 687 |
| Canton | 374 | 184 | 241 |
| Randolph | 427 | 144 | 166 |
| Weymouth | 812 | 593 | 667 |
| Holbrook | 136 | 193 | 143 |
| Braintree | 346 | 496 | 406 |
| | 5502 | 3983 | 4539 |

It will be seen that Milton gave the Republican candidate a plurality; that Braintree and Holbrook gave pluralities to the Progressive, while Quincy and the other four towns gave pluralities to the Democrat.

The precincts of Quincy were also divided among the three candidates, 2 going to the Progressive, 3 to the Republican and 7 to the Democrat as follows:

| | McD. D. | Win P. | Wol R. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Ward One, P. 1 | 147 | 132 | 165 |
| Ward One, P. 2 | 195 | 145 | 231 |
| Ward Two, P. 1 | 119 | 40 | 60 |
| Ward Two, P. 2 | 215 | 104 | 94 |
| Ward Three, P. 1 | 251 | 98 | 129 |
| Ward Three, P. 2 | 173 | 107 | 89 |
| Ward Four, P. 1 | 372 | 20 | 33 |
| Ward Four, P. 2 | 272 | 51 | 48 |
| Ward Five, P. 1 | 62 | 249 | 284 |
| Ward Five, P. 2 | 108 | 200 | 179 |
| Ward Six, P. 1 | 158 | 97 | 142 |
| Ward Six, P. 2 | 112 | 120 | 78 |
| | 2184 | 1366 | 1532 |

TAKES HIS BRIDE TO PANAMA

Doctor's Son and Minister's Daughter United in Marriage

A very pretty wedding of interest to Quincy residents took place Tuesday evening at the Main street Congregational church, Amesbury, the contracting parties being, Miss Ruth Merrill of Amesbury, formerly of Weymouth and Dr. Willis P. Middleton, formerly of Quincy, but now of Ancon, Panama.

The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Rev. F. G. Merrill. The wedding march was played by Mrs. George Batchelor. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers and made a pretty sight.

Caroline Maude Merrill, sister of the bride was maid of honor, and wore a becoming gown of pink messaline with lace overdress. There were six bridesmaids, Alice Leitch, Mildred Neal, Carrie Hollandar all of Amesbury, Marguerite Perley of Baldwinsville, Edith Middleton, sister of the groom and Lucille Smalley of Wollaston. The brides maids' dresses were pink and blue Dolly Varden dresses and they carried pink astors. The flower girl was Caroline Blanchard of Portland, Maine.

The bride looked charming in an exquisite gown of white satin and lace and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The best man was Dr. Ralph Brown, while the ushers, classmates of the groom at Tufts Medical School, were: Dr. Alfred Brown, Quincy; Dr. O. T. Brosius, St. Louis, Mo.; Dr. O'Brien, Boston and Roland Richmond of Amesbury.

A wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and was attended by many relatives of both the contracting parties, also many Quincy friends.

Dr. Middleton is a graduate of Tufts Medical school, Class of 1912, the bride being a graduate of Wheaton Seminary now Wheaton College.

The bride and groom received many pretty and costly gifts.

After a honeymoon trip through Maine, they will make their future home in Ancon, Canal Zone, Panama, where Dr. Middleton is house physician in the Ancon hospital.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Patrick McGrath Charged with Attempt at Arson

Patrick McGrath, charged with attempt at arson, was held for the grand jury by Judge Avery this morning. Bail was set at $1000.

McGrath was arested by Inspector Goodhue who investigated a recent fire in lumber piled against the Lawrence House at Quincy Point. The fire when discovered by Mrs. Catherine McKenna, who conducts the house, had communicated to the clapboards. Asleep in the rooms at the time were 29 men.

Inspector Goodhue testified that he had been given a partial confession in which McGrath incriminated himself. Mrs. McKenna testified to the circumstances surrounding the attempt and the presence of McGrath on the grounds.

The house is owned by Mrs. McGrath, husband of the defendant. The attorney who entered her petition for divorce was present this morning.

McGrath did not deny any of the testimony of Inspector Goodhue.

ADHESIVE TAPE.

Did You Ever Think How Useful It May Be In the Home?

A little forethought will provide adhesive tape for many emergency uses in the household outside of the sickroom. Labels for bottles and jars can be made of it, since the name is easily printed in ink, and the whole label may be removed with no effort when it is outgrown. A hot water bottle can be mended with adhesive tape; in fact, any rubber hose or container may have its life prolonged by it. Even a three cornered tear in a cloth or dark dress becomes invisible when pressed in place over a small square of it.

If any tacks are not at hand when the window shade is pulled off the roller adhesive tape will put it back strongly and neatly. "And when I have a corn or a tender spot on my foot," said the trained nurse who suggested some of these uses, "a little patch of adhesive tape is a great comfort and protection from chafing." A binding strip of adhesive tape is invaluable for sheet music that is much in use. Manuscripts, too, can be fastened together at the top with a broad band of it."

Strips of adhesive tape are splendid for training plants, such as ivy or other vines, against a house foundation, for fastening rose bushes or tomato vines to the supporting frames or for any use in the garden when string or wire would cut the tender, growing stalks.—New York Tribune.

AUCTION SALES.

Elisha Yale Held the First One In England In 1700.

The first auction sale in England was held in 1700 by Elisha Yale, who had been governor of Madras and who adopted that plan for selling the East Indian wares he had brought home. The sale attracted wide attention and was so successful that others immediately adopted the plan.

Before the close of the eighteenth century England began to place a tax on auction sales, and at times these duties have ranged as high as 5 per cent. In 1845 the tax was repealed, but a charge imposed on the license to be taken out by all auctioneers. The abuses at auctions, caused by combinations of brokers to bid up the offerings, led to the adoption of stringent regulation.

In America auctioneers of a certain class have also been guilty of many impositions on the public. Fake "auction sales" of alleged bankrupt stocks of merchandise, "fire sales" and similar schemes have long been used to impose on the credulous. At many such sales the auctioneer has confederates in the crowd who start the bidding and continue it until some legitimate bidder has offered a price that affords the promoters a handsome profit. The imposition of heavy fines and prison sentences has discouraged this class of auctioneers in most sections.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Thousand-year-old Castle.

Tamworth castle, which has had a thousand years of checkered existence, stands on the site of a Saxon fortress, built by a daughter of Alfred the Great, which was formerly the seat of the kings of Mercia. It will be familiar by name to all readers of Scott, who has made famous

Lord Marmion
Of Tamworth tower and town.

The present edifice is mainly a Jacobean structure, standing on a lofty artificial mound and chiefly remarkable for a multanguar ivy clad tower and a rather gloomy banqueting hall. It was sold to the corporation some years ago by the Marquis Townshend, who is on the distaff side a lineal descendant of the Marmions.—Westminster Gazette.

Ready For Anything.

The efficiency of the French system of highly centralized government, even in the face of the upheavals of nature, has been comically illustrated.

A slight earthquake shock having been felt in a part of the French provinces, the subprefect of one department, an important government official, telegraphed to the minister of the interior as follows: "On the first information of the seismic tremors I summoned the government attorney, the lieutenant of gendarmerie and the police magistrate. I have assumed my uniform and now await your orders."—London Mail.

When Everybody Gets Tired.

If everybody is to be tired, what will become of art, music, literature or anything else not predigested and placed in convenient tabloid form for gobbling? No gloomier thought has come upon the horizon in years than the picture of what this globe will be when the tired business man and the tired business woman have ranged wearily, flabbily, snatchingly over it, hand to hand, for a quarter century or so.—New York Tribune.

Even Worse.

He—Darling, don't you know that it is unlucky to postpone a wedding? She—I can't help that. My dressmaker is ill, and I'm afraid it would be more unlucky if I were to go and get married before having all the clothes I want made while my father is still willing to pay for them.

Escaped.

Sister (at the piano)—Where is Herr Braun? Little Sister—Oh, I got up to open the door for Fido and he slipped out at the same time.—Fliegende Blatter.

Nothing can be done at once hastily and prudently.—Publius Syrus.

MARDI GRAS AT REVERE BEACH.

Great preparations are being made for the Carnival which will take place at Revere Beach on Sept. 2, and continue until Sept. 13.

The Mardi Gras spirit will be rampant at the resort during the week commencing Sept. 8 at which time the famous Mardi Gras celebration will start in earnest. The parade will pass in review along the entire length of the Reservation and thousands will witness the display each evening. The Mardi Gras Committee have again retained Carl Reinhold as designer and constructor of the floats. The floats, ten in number, are symbolic of favorite flowers and it is said by those who have been fortunate enough to see the designs that their equal has never been seen in this country. A large force of artists have been engaged in the preparation of these masterpieces since last July.

The grotesque and horrible features of the Revere Beach Mardi Gras are always remembered with great interest and it is reported this year will outdo all others. Of course the riot of fun commences after the parade has been reviewed by the public. Then the battles of confetti commence and such fun, and the genuine Mardi Gras balls with real masqueraders, and the beautiful girls, all tend to make the evenings too short altogether.

PLAYGROUND PICNIC A GREAT SUCCESS

Ward Three Wins Most Points But Ward Two Was Close Second

Interesting Games for Both the Boys and Girls

About 500 enthusiastic youngsters of both sexes enjoyed the time of their lives on Wednesday at the first picnic for Playground children, and from all accounts this event will be the big thing of next season, for some of the boys are already planning for their events on the track. On account of the late tide it was impossible to hold the swimming events and these will not be counted in the point contest for the championship banner.

The boys' events on the track opened the program at 9.45 with most of the crowd on hand, 5, 3, 2, and 1 points were counted for first, second, third and fourth places respectively for each event:

50 YARD DASH—BOYS.

Class A—1st, F. McDonnell of Ward 2, 2nd; G. Ferrazzi of Ward 4; 3rd, W. Kelly of Ward 2; 4th, T. Sheehan of Ward 4.

75 YARD DASH—BOYS.

Class B—1st, L. Curtin of Ward 3; 2nd, F. Ryan of Ward 2; 3rd, M. Miller of Ward 4; 4th, C. Carson of Ward 3.

100 YARD DASH—BOYS.

Class C—1st, J. Gallagher of Ward 2; 2nd, H. Melville of Ward 2; 3rd, P. Jenkins of Ward 3; 4th, J. Maloney of Ward 4.

RELAY RACE—BOYS.

Won by Ward 2, Ward 4 was 2nd and Ward 3 last. Winning team as follows: F McDonnell, W. Kelly, F. Ryan, L. Crilly, H. Melville, J. Gallagher.

35 YARD—GIRLS.

Class A—1st, Lillian Beaton of Ward 3; 2nd, Mary Curtin of Ward 3; Anna Stevens of Ward 2; 4th, Angeline Ferrazzi of Ward 4.

50 YARD—GIRLS.

Class B—1st, Helen Mularkey; Ward 4; Myrtle Osborne, Ward 3; 3rd Violet Tucker, Ward 2; 4th, Lillian O'Brien, Ward 3.

75 YARD DASH—GIRLS

Class C—1st, Helen Mularkey, Ward 4; 2nd, Violet Tucker, Ward 2; 3rd, Elsa Sword, Ward 2; 4th, Elizabeth Cremmins.

RELAY RACE—GIRLS.

Won by Ward 3 with the following girls: Mary Curtin, Gertrude Osborne Lillian Beaton, Myrtle Osborne, Lillian O'Brien, Eleanor Hayden, Elizabeth Cremmins, Elizabeth Johnson and Elsa Sword. Ward 4 was second and Ward 2, last.

BOYS' BASE BALL.

The boys' base ball game was won by Ward 3 after three extra innings had been played. The score was tied in the fifth by Ward 2 by some sharp batting and no runs were made by either team until the twelfth, when the Point boys went up in the air and before the smoke cleared away the Ward 3 boys had piled up a lead of 3 runs. The South Quincy pitcher, Jenkins, refused to get rattled and as a result no hits or passes were made or given and the victory went to Ward 3. Capt. Teddie Barr of Ward 2 and C. McLeod of Ward 3 turned in some pretty clever plays. Anderson, Jenkins and Thompson were the batteries for Ward 3, while Burney, Bassett and Gallagher were in the points for Ward 2.

BOOTH--DUNN WEDDING

Reception Follows Ceremony at No. 5 Owen Place

Miss Grace Ripley Dunn of 9 Edwards street and Gilbert A. Booth of South Quincy were married Wednesday evening in the presence of many relatives and friends. The ceremony took place at the home of the groom 5 Owen place, and was performed by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of the Bethany Congregational church.

The bride was given away by Abel Gomez, an uncle, and the bridesmaid was Miss Christine Booth, a sister of the groom, Arthur Moorehouse was the best man.

The bride was dressed in white chiffon over white satin and carried a large bouquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in yellow messaline and carried yellow roses.

As the bridal party entered the parlor the Lohengrin wedding march was played by Mrs. James McIntosh of South Quincy.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and Mr. and Mrs. Booth were assisted in receiving by Mrs. William Gomez, the bride's grandmother, and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Booth, parents of the groom. The ushers were William Gomez, Robert Booth and James McIntosh. A buffet luncheon was served at nine o'clock.

The house was decorated with potted plants and cut flowers, and Japanese lanterns were suspended from the veranda and the trees in the yard.

Mr. and Mrs. Booth left for a trip to Portland, Maine, and on their return will reside in Weymouth. The groom has been employed as a stenographer at the Fore River shipyard for about five years. His bride is a popular resident of Quincy.

EAGLES TO HAVE CLAMBAKE.

Final arrangements for the annual clambake at Squantum were made at the meeting of John Adams aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, Wednesday evening. An invitation has been extended to every political candidate running for office in Quincy. William McKewin leaves Sunday for Providence to meet Bros. Kilroy and Welch who will make the bake.

Fourteen candidates were initiated and eight applications were received. The work was done by the degree team of the aerie. Visitors were present from Hingham, Brockton and Hyde Park.

The cup awarded the aerie for its float on Fourth of July was presented to the aerie and accepted by President John Feeley. All the members expressed themselves as being highly pleased with it. It was voted to extend the use of the North Dakota float to the Brockton aerie for use in the Columbus Day parade in that city.

The program arranged for the bake is long and includes base ball games, athletic events and tug of war matches between Hyde Park and Brockton aeries and a team of married and single men.

MILLER—HARNISH.

ARRAIGNED FOR BURGLARY

Girl Secures Arrest for a Weymouth Break

Raymond Hutchinson who was arrested in New York for the Weymouth officers on a charge of burglary was arraigned before Judge Avery this morning and held in $1000 until Saturday. Hutchinson is charged with breaking into the home of Mrs. Frances Tirrell on Pond street, Weymouth and the larceny of jewelry valued at $1000.

The arrest was the result of a confession from an Alice Brady of Pleasant street, Weymouth, who told the police that she entered the house where she had formerly been employed after being persuaded to do so by Hutchinson. It is alleged that the Brady girl consented after Hutchinson had promised to marry her.

According to William B. Watts, former deputy superintendent of the Boston police, whose detective agency is employed on the case, the girl said that she met Hutchinson in Boston. He claimed to be a travelling man living in New York. As their acquaintance extended Hutchinson made inquiries about wealthy people in Weymouth and the girl told him she worked for Mrs. Tirrell. In the meantime, the police say, they had become engaged. Later she became aware that he was a burglar and she declared that he showed her a bottle containing chloroform which he said he used to keep people quiet while he operated.

The girl did not appear in court this morning and it is probable that she will not be prosecuted. She told the police, however, that she and Hutchinson found that nobody but Mrs. Tirrell was at home. At the suggestion of Hutchinson, the girl's hat was hidden in the bushes to give the impression in case she was observed that she was working at the house. The girl said she went upstairs and secured the jewel box. The next day she was given $20 as her share of the loot.

In the meantime the girl had been living away from home and after the burglary the police decided to look her up, although at the time she was not suspected. Hutchinson, according to the police has been arrested before.

The extradition papers were honored by Acting Governor Glynn of New York.

ELECTRIC LIGHT STOCK

Sells at Auction at $200 Per Share

As required by the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners, one share of the new issue of stock of the Quincy Electric Light and Power Company was sold at auction on Wednesday, after being publicly advertised The price received was $200, which shows that this stock of the par value of $100 is selling high.

FUNERAL OF JOHN O'DONOVAN.

The funeral of John O' Donovan, who died at the Boston City Hospital Tuesday following the amputation of a leg, was held this morning from his home, 36 Union street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. Walter J. Quinlan. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

THE CUMMINGS SPEEDY.

The torpedo boat destroyer Cummings, broke another record in the 1000-ton class on the Rockland course Wednesday. In her builder's trial four hour endurance test she averaged 30.52 knots per hour. The requirements for oil consumpton in a four hour endurance run were also fulfilled. The Cummings was built at Bath, Me.

SCHOOLHOUSE REPAIRS

All Will Be Ready Next Week Except New Adams

The new Adams Schoolhouse with not be ready for occupancy until the last of September, according to Fred E. Tuper, commissioner of public works. All other buildings have been inspected and the necessary carpenter work done during the vacation.

Work has been done on the Cranch, Massachusetts Fields and Washington schools, particularly on the outside trimmings, which have been painted. The roofs of several of the building have been repaired. A bolt of lightening which struck the chimney on the High school caused a little work on that building.

This year the city has been extremely fortunate in having none of its heating apparatus or appliances condemned. They received an internal inspection however and are in good order. Last year three boilers were removed because they could not pass the state inspection.

There are 1500 feet of sewer main being constructed up Madison and Abigail avenues which must be connected with the new Adams school before its opening. The work was not commenced until the appropriation was made and this caused a delay of fully three weeks. The bed of the streets are pratically solid rock and considerable blasting has been done.

The approaches to the building are being put in good condition and a gang of men are at work on Abigial avenue The material taken off the street is across to the Adams school grounds where it is being used on the westerly side which is about 11 feet above grade.

The furniture for the new building has been purchased and some of it has arrived and is ready for installation. The interior has been completed and the building inside prevents an inviting appearance.

The School Committee has advised Mr. Tupper that the old Adams school will be used after the new building is occupied and he has made the necessary. The building will be used next week for the regular Adams school pupils and later for an industrial school.

ANNUAL ILLUMINATION.

The annual illumination of the Town River Yacht Club on Friday evening promises to be one of the most successful events ever held under the auspices of this organization. The cottage owners, in the immediate vicinity will decorate their houses with bunting, flags and Japanese lanterns and a valuable trophy will be awarded the prettiest decorative scheme.

One of the most attractive features will be the river parade in which all the club boats will be entered. They will be illuminated and the list of entries includes, sail and power boats and canoes. Several prizes will be awarded and already there is keen rivalry among the owners for the first prize.

The committee, headed by Thompson B. Crane, the genial commodore, is directing all its efforts toward making it the biggest night ever held and invitations are generally extended to the people of the city and Quincy Point, especially to join in the festivities.

HIGH TAX RATES.

Several of the towns have high tax rates this year as will be seen below:

| | |
|---|---|
| Merrimac | $25.50 |
| Stoneham | 24.80 |
| Belchertown | 24.80 |
| Hopkinton | 24.00 |
| Clinton | 23.80 |
| Orange | 23.00 |
| Whitman | 22.90 |
| Medway | 22.50 |
| Acushnet | 22.00 |
| Bedford | 22.00 |

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Next Monday, Sept. 1, is Labor Day, and will be generally observed as a holiday. There will be no issue of the Daily Ledger that day. As Tuesday is a busy day, new advertisements and news items should reach the office early.

GRAHAMS IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Thought to Have Escaped Without Serious Injury

A dispatch to a Boston paper from Augusta, Maine, reports an automobile accident to John R. Graham and son formerly of Quincy. The dispatch says:

John R. Graham of Bangor, electric raidroad magnate of Maine, figured Tuesday in an automobile collision in which J. W. Skeine of Lewiston received a severe shock and facial injuries.

Skeine, who was alone in his machine, found it impossible to avoid a big touring car on Western av. near Sewall street as the latter swerved sharply in front of him. In the crash that followed both cars were damaged.

At the wheel of the large automobile was the young son of Mr. Graham, with two other passengers on the rear seat.

Mr. Skeine was badly shaken up and Albert E. Folsom, who happened to be along in his automobile, took him to a doctor's office. Late tonight he was able to return to his rooms.

Mr. Graham and his party were enroute to Portland and Massachusetts. Skeine's left shoulder is badly wrenched. Mr. Graham shouldered the blame for the accident.

DROWNED AT PEDDOCKS.

The body of William McKane was found on the beach at the Quincy end of Peddocks island Wednesday afternoon. He was caretaker at the Drew estate.

MAD DOG SCARE

Animal Shot By Captain McKay

Several Dogs Bitten

Capt. Daniel R. McKay saved himself from a mad dog that sprang at him while he was riding in an automobile this morning by drawing his revolver and shooting the dog in mid air. He went to South Quincy after he learned that a mad dog was running amuck and biting other dogs.

When Capt. McKay reached Liberty square the dog lay near the steps of a store in Malnati's block. When he ran the machine toward the dog he became enraged and sprang for its operator and Capt. McKay lost no time in shooting.

The body was taken to the police station where it is held for examination. Officer Milford found that the dog was owned by Mrs. Vanilli, 194 Liberty street and that the owners of dogs that had been bitten were Joseph Wallace, 282 Libery street,

Thaw's automobile made 70 miles an hour, but that is a rate that has ceased to attract any attention.

President Huerta seems to be showing considerable self-restraint in not marching on Washington and dipping his reeking sword in the gore of the congressmen.

THE AFRICAN DODGER.

A citizen of Brooklyn, writes to the New York Times speaking of the common side show feature called by the above name, consisting of pitching baseballs at the woolly head of a negro. He protests against the same, as a "barbarous practice that would not be tolerated in other civilized countries."

The American people will be slow to believe that it is "barbarous." Scientific authorities on anthropology state that the negro has a very heavy and massive cranium. Its shape is long and narrow, which apparently would create a bony arch of great strength. One scientist refers to the common habit of negroes of both sexes in "butting like rams" while fighting, as evidence that the head bones have a defensive power unknown in th Caucasian race.

The prevailing impression is that the dodger does not find this occupation distressing. With mirthful derision he protrudes his flaming tongue, and chaffs his tormentors for their inexpert delivery. Perhaps it is much less painful to him than hoeing corn would be. He gets hit comparatively few times. The distance is always deceptive, and most of the balls drop too low.

Certainly there is no feature at the fairs more popular with the crowd. Every popular assemblage contains a large number of men who now or formerly have played baseball, and who are confident of their ability for accurate aim and swift delivery. Potting that shiny black pate looks easy. The presence of women friends stirs a desire for display of their powers. No wonder that the dimes and nickles flow in fast.

Until evidence is presented, therefore, showing cases of fractured African skulls, it is likely that the black dodger will continue to be a feature at out of door festivals. It appeals to the American senses of humor and competition.

MAN ALONE AGAINST NATURE.

Since Joseph Knowles, leaving behind him all clothes and every tool and implement of civilization, started for the Maine woods a few days ago, to demonstrate the superiority of man to the materials of civilization, his friends have probably imagined it a most dismal and hungry experience. Perhaps, though, he is quite as comfortable in his naked condition, in the kindly summer forest, as others in the perspiring office.

As a student of wild life, Mr. Knowles will demonstrate his proposition, that man has not lost his primitive powers, and can still be independent of civilized conveniences. The Indians never lacked fire, though without matches. The food question will be easily settled. Probably one of his first expedients will be the "dead fall." To lure an animal into some confined space over which a heavy rock is hanging, held up by a stick resting on a round stone, dislodged at the slightest touch—this must be a bit of primitive lore going back to the dusk of the stone age.

Mr. Knowles' two months alone with the forces of the forests may have no particular significance, except suggesting how man is the slave of clothes. Probably vanity had originally much to do with the custom of wearing garments. Tattooing satisfied the savage for a time. But decorated garments permitted change of style and led to the infinity and onerous burden of modern fashion.

Clothes are not so necessary for warmth as people think. While Mr. Knowles is stirring his blood by exercise, the rest of us keep warm in cool weather by putting on more garments, or getting up to a fire, thus dulling the inner sources of vitality.

In this athletic age a good many people are realizing this. Manufacturers say that men do not call for as thick clothing as they did somes years ago.

ARMOR PLATE BIDS OPENED

No Competition Among Three Big Steel Companies

Evidently there is to be no competition among the big steel companies for armor plate. When bids were opened at Washington on Wednesday on a large quantity of armor for the newest American battleship, now designated No. 39,, it was found that the bids of the Bethlehem Steel Company and the Carnegie Steel Company were identical on all classes, and also identical with the bids submitted previously by the same companies for armor for the Pennsylvania now building.

The Carbon Steel Company of Pittsburg, which last week was awarded a contract for 3000 tons of "special treatment" steal plates at $187.09 per ton, a reduction of $96.99 under the last accepted bid for such material, had bid for only one class of plate of which only 61 tons is to be purchased, its bid was $92 a ton under that of the three other companies.

Secretary Daniels held up all the bids and does not propose to let contracts until another effort has been made to secure competition. He asked the officials of the Midvale, Bethlehem and Carnegie companies to confer with him.

It was the similarity of the bids for the Pennsylvania armor that caused Daniels to suggest to Congress the construction of a Government plant, as the only means of forcing real competition.

MAD DOG SCARE

Thomas Douglas, 127 Liberty street, Stephen Hardos, 156 Liberty street, J. Scarboro, Trafford street, Nicholas LeCount, Trafford street and Guidici Guenninna, Trafford street.

He made a canvass of the houses in the district and learned that no persons had been bitten.

The news that a mad dog was running amuck spread through the neighborhood like wildfire. Mrs. Brussa of Liberty street hurried to a phone after the dog burst through her gate and attacked her dog. She called a doctor and summoned the police.

When they arrived they found the dog in full possession of the district. No one was on the street and doors and windows were closed. People were looking out of the windows watching the animal but none dared venture forth.

When Capt. McKay arrived there was no delay in pointing to the dog and all flocked around his machine after he had fired the fatal shot.

The dogs that have been bitten will be kept under a strict observation and in the absence of Dr. Abele, the local veterinary of the city, Dr. Souther of Milton will take charge of the situation.

Dr. Souther severed the head from the body and has taken it the labratory of the Harvard Medical School for observation. The police were informed this noon that the dead dog was bitten three weeks ago by the dog which ran wild through Neponset, Dorchester and Atlantic in its travels.

DOANE FAMILY.

Quincy was well represented at the Doane Family gathering at the Atlantic House, Nantasket, Tuesday, Aug. 26, Mrs. Emily Doane Kelly, Mrs. Emma M. # THAW REMAINS IN CANADA JAIL

Fugitive May Have a Jury Trial If He So Desires

HE WILL NOT BE DEPORTED

Proceedings Are Thrown Back Where They Started From—"Most Glorious Day of My Life," Says Thaw, When He Is Heartily Cheered by People of Sherbrooke

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 28.—Harry K. Thaw is again in Sherbrooke jail—to stay there until Oct. 14. Then the charge upon which he was arrested will be heard. Thaw gets a jury trial, if he wants it, and from the temper of the Canadian people he will be freed.

The fugitive won out on his habeas corpus proceedings, the petition for which is withdrawn on the court's order. The result of this is to throw the proceedings back where they started from, with Thaw in jail on an imperfect commitment and entitled to a jury trial. Only the minister of justice's interference can force action in Thaw's case.

The legal victory is of small moment as viewed from Thaw's standpoint. He was greeted as a hero on the way from jail to the court and on the way back to jail, both in the morning and in the afternoon. Women threw kisses at him. Men tossed their hats in the air and cheered. And Thaw was supremely happy.

"This is the most glorious day of my life," he declared. "I know now that the Canadians will do me justice."

Thaw may be admitted to bail if his counsel so desire—but they don't—not at present. The amount would be nominal, for the offense on which he is held is a minor one, but counsel for the prisoner stated that Thaw, determined to keep out of Matteawan, will choose to remain in jail.

The afternoon's court proceedings, piled onto those of the morning, when New York authorities were given no chance to speak before the court, constitute a grand slap at those who are seeking to send Thaw back to Matteawan.

Not only were the proceedings summary, but were all done in French, which very few of those connected with the prosecution speak fluently enough to follow a decision.

In his opening Judge Globensky rebuked severely the spectators for their conduct of the morning in cheering for Thaw. He then produced his decision, which he had carefully written out. He read it in French.

"A man charged with a crime has a constitutional right if he is too impetient to wait until acquitted by the ordinary process of law to ask for his freedom through a writ of habeas corpus, which insures him an immediate hearing," said he.

"However, a prisoner is not obliged to demand his freedom in this way and if he reconsiders his decision to ask for freedom through the ordinary process and await the vindication of a jury he can do so. Therefore the application for discontinuance of the writ of habeas corpus is allowed."

So riotous was the scene in the superior court when, at the morning session, Judge Globensky refused to allow counsel representing New York state to be party to the proceedings, that the court subsequently warned spectators that a repetition of the cheering, chair-climbing, handkerchief-waving and general hysteria would mean jail sentences for the demonstrants.

Speaking from the bench at the afternoon session, he said that never in his experience as a member of the bar and of the bench had he been a witness to "such a disgraceful scene."

It was carried out in the presence of court attendaants and four armed dominion police, who stood immovable while emotional women rushed toward Stanford White's slayer, crying: "Three cheers for Thaw!" "Three cheers for the British flag!" "We will give you justice, Harry!"

The immigration officials still declare they can take Thaw from the provincial authorities and Jerome and his conferees are now pinning their hopes upon the supremacy of the dominion over the provincial authorities in this matter, something that has never been tested because this is the first clash since the immigration act was passed several years ago.

LOOSE COINS BOTHERSOME

They Must Not Be Left In Letter Boxes on Rural Routes

Washington, Aug. 28.—Picking up loose money has grown to be such a hardship for the overworked rural free delivery carriers that the postoffice department issued an order warning reckless citizens against leaving loose coins lying around.

Hereafter coins must be tied in bundles or enclosed in envelopes whenever the patron of a rural route wants stamps from a carrier and leaves the necessary amount in the wayside box.

"Oldest Sneezer" Honored

Bethlehem, N. H., Aug. 28.—Richard Muckle of Philadelphia, who has suffered from hay fever seventy-five years, was banquetted as the "oldest sneezer" by twenty-five fellow feverites.

STORM PLAYS HAVOC

Many Persons In Southern New England Shocked by Lightning

Boston, Aug. 28.—Twenty-five persons were shocked by lightning, and more than a score of places struck when the most terrific electrical storm of the summer swept down on Boston and southern New England.

With the thunder and lightning came a veritable deluge of rain, while a gale close to forty miles an hour played havoc in the city and along the waterfront.

Twenty boys and girls were injured when a bolt of lightning tore through the roof of the Everett city bathhouse during the electric storm.

Peter Rosso, aged 9, was later taken to a hospital, paralyzed in the lower limbs, burned and shocked to the point of suffocation. A girl received severe burns and nine of the children were rendered unconscious or badly shaken up.

STABLE FLY EXONERATED

Assertion That It Transmits Infantile Paralysis Contradicted

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 28.—The stable or "biting" fly, which has been suspected by scientists of being a factor in infantile paralysis, was finally exonerated in a report to the state board of health by Dr. Sawyer, director of the state hygienic laboratory.

Sawyer's report is the result of a series of seven experiments, in which he and Professor Herms of the University of California were unable to transmit infantile paralysis to sick or well monkeys through the agency of the suspected insect.

MAN'S HEAD SEVERED FROM NAKED BODY

Police In a New Hampshire Town Suspect Murder

Tilton, N. H., Aug. 28.—The nude body of a man with the head severed was found beside the railroad track between Belmont and Tilton by the crew of an express train.

Three tramps who were asleep in the vicinity were arrested for drunkenness and an effort was made to learn the identity of the dead man.

The position of the body was such that the police believe it would have been impossible for it to have been thrown there by a train.

TROOPS AT RACE TRACK

Governor of Indiana Orders Soldiers to Prevent Gambling

Porter, Ind., Aug. 28.—Two companies of the Indiana national guard arrived here and immediately took charge of the Mineral Springs race track, where betting on horse races is said to have flourished since the opening of the meet.

The troops were ordered out by Governor Ralston after he had received information that the track officials were permitting gambling, and that the county authorities were doing little to stop it.

There probably will be no racing today with the soldiers camping in the enclosure.

GAYNOR DECIDES TO RUN

New York City Political Situation More Muddled Than Ever

New York, Aug. 28.—A muddled political situation which the city already faced was further complicated with the authorized declaration from Mayor Gaynor that he would run for re-election on an independent ticket.

New York thus finds itself with three Democrats as candidates for mayor. Tammany hall designated Edward E. McCall, chairman of the public service commission, after refusing Gaynor a renomination, while the fusionists selected John P. Mitchel.

GLYNN IS GOVERNOR

Decision of New York Assembly After Long and Bitter Debate

Albany, Aug. 28.—Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn was formally recognized as acting governor by the assembly this morning, after a bitter debate lasting until long after midnight.

The vote in favor of such recognition stood 48 for to 29 against.

Foxhall Keene Injured

Colorado Springs, Col., Aug. 28.—Foxhall Keene was seriously injured at the polo tournament of the Cheyenne Mountain Country club here. He was thrown during the play and his horse rolled over on him. His right shoulder was broken and he was badly bruised.

Dutch Medal For Carnegie

The Hague, Aug. 28.—The Grand Cross of the Order of Orange-Nassau was conferred on Andrew Carnegie by Queen Wilhelmina in commemoration of the inauguration of the Palace of Peace, which took place today.

Jockey Killed In Collision

Toronto, Aug. 28.—Jockey William Hall was killed at the Hill Crest race track when his mount, Tom Hancock, and Deal Loss, Moore up, were in collision and fell. Moore escaped with a few bruises.

No German Exhibit at 'Frisco

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Germany has no intention of changing her recent decision not to exhibit officially at the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco in 1915.

PLAYGROUND PICNIC

SOCCER GAME.

After 35 minutes of hard work on the Soccer foot-ball field neither of the two teams playing had scored and as the weather was rather hot the game was called off: Ward 2 played a picked team from Wards 3 and 4.

GIRLS' BASE BALL

The girls' base ball team resulted in a walk away for the Ward 3 team the score being 23 to 13 and the end of the seventh inning. Gertrude Eddy of Ward 3 proved to be the star of the game. Gertrude is not much bigger than a minute but she was in the game all of the time. She made three hits out of 4 times up, stole 3 bases and to put on the finishing touches she made an all-star catch in the seventh that save at least three runs. She was roundly cheered by her team mates at the close of the game. The battery for Ward 3: Elizabeth Hastings and Elsa Sword. For Ward 2 and 4, Ethel Anderson, Laura Wight and Mona Norris.

ONE LAP RACE.

The one lap on the track was run off immediately after dinner was eaten and was one of the prettiest events of the day's program. It was won by J. Gallagher of Ward 2 after a hot contest with J. Opie of Ward 3. The result was not sure until the tape was crossed as the race was a nip and tuck affair from start to finish. About 35 boys started at the word "Go," and until the turn in to the home stretch was reached the leaders were all bunched. Gallagher let out a little extra sprint that he had saved, but Opie was right after him and the rest of the fellows had to drop back as the pace was too hot. Gallagher pulled away about 5 yards from the tape and had only 3 yards to the good. Gurney and Melville of Ward 2 were third and fourth.

BASE BALL TIE.

The tie in the Ward 2 base ball league was then played off. It resulted in a walkover for Capt. Eddie Barr's, Naps, the score being 11 to 3. The winning players were Barr, Stitt, W. Haley, G. Haley, Moodie, Prime, Bassett, Ewell and Dougherty.

Much amusement was afforded the "bunch" at noon-time when Misses Elwell, Arnold, Cleaves and Connor, Messrs. Tirrell, Marsh and Robertson were caught in one of the heavy showers. The above named had decided to eat their lunch under one of the large trees on the lower field, while the rest of the crowd thought the pavilion was the proper place. They were right for after the grub had about half disappeared rain began to pour and the crowd under the trees had to hike for shelter. They were received with deafening cheers as they ran across the track. It was one of the best races of the day.

| | |
|---|---|
| Ward Three | 42 points |
| Ward Two | 39 points |
| Ward Four | 25 points |

There are eight events to be decided at the Festival today at Ward Three Grounds so there is a chance for either of the lower teams to win cut.

Only Perfect Baby.

The idea of picking out the perfect baby by means of a tape measure is all tommyrot. Might as well try to locate virtue by using a divining rod. Every baby is perfect. Its mother will tell you so.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

TEMPORARILY ABSENT.

A Clay Centre mother was in the house of a neighbor, visiting. The child was out in the front yard with several others, playing.

"Ruth, Ruth! Are you there?" called the mother.

"No, mamma; not now," answered the child.

"Well, when you do come," replied the mother, "let me know right away, for we must go home before it gets dark."

The visiting went right on, the playing went right on, just as if there had been no interruption.

Corruption.

Men are not corrupted by the exercise of power or debased by the habit of obedience; but by the exercise of a power which they believe to be illegitimate and by obedience to a rule which they consider to be usurped and oppressive.

FOR PARIS DEAD.

Foreign visitors to the cemetery of Pere Lachaise often wonder at the tributes of affection deposited on the graves. Many French people refuse to believe that their dead cannot enjoy the good things they used to like when alive. Mothers bring fruit and sweets and leave them on the tombstones of their children. The graves of the older people are frequently spread with wine, beer and tobacco and there is (or was last year) one affectionate father who leaves a potato salad on his son's tombstone every Sunday. Parisian street prowlers are of course well aware of this practice and despite the vigilance of the cemetery guardians manage to pilfer many a meal from the graves.—London Chronicle.

NEWSY BRIEFS

As usual on holidays the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. will not run certain trains on Labor day.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Corey and family of South Central Avenue, Wollaston have taken an apartment at Alden hall, Commonwealth avenue, Boston.

William Patterson, James Nicol and Charles Anderson are to be the judges Friday afternoon at the school children's exhibit of vegetables and flowers, at the Women's clubhouse. The exhibit is open to the public.

Mrs. George P. Morris of Cambridge is to speak on Equal Suffrage Friday evening at eight o'clock at the clubhouse of the Quincy Women's club. Every one is welcome to attend the meeting, men or women.

George T. Magee of the Daily Ledger and Mrs. Magee are in Maine and New Hampshire this week. On Wednesday they made the trip from Portland to the White Mountains and today the trip to Songo river.

Miss Alice F. Barry of Quincy and nine of her college chums leave Saturday morning for White Horse beach where they are to remain the coming week. They have the honor of having Miss Annabel Clark of Dorchester for their chaperon. Miss Clark is a teacher in the college.

Work has begun on improving Fairmount way, Presidents' hill for which the city appropriated money last spring. This road gets considerable use as Dimmock street and part of Monroe road are not usable. Presidents' hill although well built upon has received very little attention as to sidewalks and roads until this summer.

MODERNIZED THE ANGEL.

Mounted on Ball Bearings, It Now Acts as a Weather Vane.

There are many kinds of angels ranging in style from those we read about in the Bible to those who bring out talent on the stage. It has remained, however, for a writer in the American Machinist to discover a new type of the seraphic assortment. This angel is "ball-bearing" and entirely unlike the common or garden variety of angels. It stands on top of the famous tower known as the Campanile di San Marco, in Venice, and swings to the wind like a weather vane.

The statue of the angel San Marco, which surveyed the old city of Lagunes since the sixteenth century, was found but little damaged among the ruins after the collapse of the tower. It was repaired and now stands again on the lofty height, but is supported in a very different manner from the old, for it now rests on modern ball bearings.

This method of mounting allows the statue to be turned around a vertical axis by the wind, so that it swings automatically into such a position that the angel always presents the smallest surface to the wind or storm. If one considers that the large wings of the angel, which are eleven feet high, project straight backward, it may be imagined that the difference of the wind pressure is considerable, whether the wind blows against the small front surface or against the side exposing the large face of the wings.

THE DREAM CAME TRUE.

But Washington Warned "Light Horse Harry" to Dream No More.

The relations that existed between General Washington and his younger friend, "Light Horse Harry" Lee—the father of General Robert E. Lee—were exceedingly close and tender. It is an authentic tradition in the Lee family that Washington regarded the brilliant young cavalry officer almost in the light of a son.

Lee was inclined to be a spendthrift, and his lavish use of money often brought on him the paternal reproof of his older and more discreet friend—and the reproof was often followed by affectionate assistance in extricating him from his embarrassments.

Mrs. Washington was almost equally fond of the young officer, who often made long visits at Mount Vernon. During one of his sojourns there, Harry Lee remarked to his host at the breakfast table:

"General, I had a singular dream last night, which I must tell you. I actually dreamed that you made me a present of your Westmoreland place."

The next day, at the dinner table, Harry Lee found under his plate a document—nothing less than a deed to him of the Westmoreland estate. For some moments, dazed with astonishment, he stared at his friend.

"Now, Harry," said Washington calmly, "take good care not to dream Mount Vernon away from me!"

Juvenile Ideas.

A little girl once said to me, "Are there people on the moon?" I said I didn't know, but that perhaps there were. "Well, what do they do," she said, "when there's only a little bit? They must get very crowded. Don't they?" Which was almost as perplexing as the query put to me by another little maiden, who asked, "What do angels do with their wings when they lie down and go to bed?"

Very quaint was the idea of a little girl who was once visiting a house where a small child had died recently. She was asked to draw something. So she drew a grave with some flowers on it. Her mother, on seeing it, said, "Janie, you mustn't do that; Mrs. —— wouldn't like it. You see, it reminds her of very sad things." "Oh, well," said the child, "perhaps it was thoughtless of me, but I can easily turn it into a beehive." And she did, with all the bees coming out.—Hilda Cowham in Strand Magazine.

Time Enough.

"Some women make me very tired," said the first agitatress. "I asked one woman if she believed in woman suffrage, and she didn't know; she'd have to ask her husband."

"Did you find out how long she had been married?" asked the second agitatress.

"Yes. Three weeks."

"Oh, never mind; I guess she'll do to call on again in a year or so."—New York World.

An A B C Curiosity.

The following paragraph is made up of twenty-six words, each beginning with a different letter of the alphabet, their arrangement corresponding exactly with the sequence of the alphabet:

A boy certainly does enjoy fun greatly. He incites joy, keeps laughing, makes noises or plays quite riotously, seeming to unceasingly vibrate with x-cessive youthful zest! — New York World.

Mutual Worry.

Mrs. Call—It's too bad of you, Ethel, to worry your mamma so, Ethel (aged five, tearfully)—Oh, well, Mrs. Call, if you'd live with mamma as long as I have you'd know which of us was to blame.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Poor Jack.

Clara—Jack intends to have all his own way when we are married. Clara's Mamma—Then why do you want to marry him? Clara—To relieve his mind of a false impression.

Poor Man.

"Is the man your sister is goin' to marry rich?"

"Naw. Every time the marriage is mentioned pa says, 'Poor man!'"—Houston Post.

ROBBERS PLEAD GUILTY

Compelled Woman to Open Safe Which They Cleaned Out

Holyoke, Mass., Aug. 28.—Harold Potvin and Augustus French pleaded guilty to stealing money and jewels totalling $1622 from Mrs. Carrie LaPointe, and were held in $3000 each for the September term of the superior court.

The two men with another, masked, held up Mrs. LaPointe, and at the point of a revolver forced her to open her safe. They were arersted in Springfield, and the police say they found $217 in money, a diamond ring worth $400 and other jewelry in their room.

The police say the men confessed to pawning $250 worth of jewels in Worcester and $350 worth in Boston.

LONDON ELECTRICAL STRIKE SPREADING

Officials In Colonial Office Rely Upon Candles For Light

London, Aug. 28.—Strong pickets of strikers belonging to the construction and electrical trades tried to induce the workmen to lay down their tools at Buckingham palace, Marlborough House, the admiralty and Premier Asquith's official residence in Downing street, all of which are in the hands of repairers.

The strikers appear to be gaining ground and many firms have granted their demands.

Most of the public museums and government institutions are suffering from the absence of electricity. Candles were the sole means of illumination at the colonial office, where the elevators also have been put out of commission.

ALLEGED POSTAL FRAUD

Writers Said to Have Been Cheated by "National Authors' Institute"

New York, Aug. 28.—Eugene B. Watt, who for the past two years has operated "The National Authors' institute" here, was arraigned in the criminal branch of the United States district court on an indictment alleging fraudulent use of the mails, and put under $2000 bail for trial.

The postal authorities say Watt obtained about $20,000 by duping hundreds of inexperienced short-story writers and moving picture playwrights into the false belief that he could impart literary success to his pupils.

OBJECTS TO CHINAMAN

Leper Makes His Second Escape From St. Louis Quarantine Station

St. Louis, Aug. 28.—George A. Hartman, the leper, who recently was isolated at the quarantine camp, fourteen miles south of the city, has escaped for the second time since he was first taken to the camp less than three weeks ago.

After his first escape Hartman returned voluntarily, but he threatened to escape again if quarters were not provided for him separate from those occupied by a Chinese leper at the quarantine camp.

GUARDS FIRE ON STRIKERS

Two Men Probably Fatally Wounded In Tin Mill Strike Riot

Steubenville, O., Aug. 28.—Six men were shot and two probably fatally wounded in a riot at the Pope tin mill when the guards fired into 2000 strikers who threatened to rush the mill.

The most seriously hurt were Joseph Miller and John Doran, strikers. Chief of Police Hauser was hit in the head with buckshot.

Dynamite Subdues $1,000,000 Fire

Bay Point, Cal., Aug. 28.—Fire in the lumber yards of the A. C. Smith company here caused damage estimated at $1,000,000. It was subdued by dynamite and by a change of wind.

Train Kills Five Persons

Freeport, Pa., Aug. 28.—J. E. Rowan, his wife, two children and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ellen W. Smith, were killed when their automobile was struck by a train near here.

HAS REJECTED OUR FRIENDSHIP

Attitude of Mexico Has Created New Circumstances

POLICY OF UNITED STATES

Outlined In Message to Congress, In Which Wilson Recommends That Americans Be Urged to Leave Country at Once—No Armed Intervention—Huerta's Impossible Terms

Washington, Aug. 28.—President Wilson played his trump card in the Mexican situation when he appeared before a joint session of congress to read a message which advised:

That all Americans be earnestly urged to leave Mexico at once.

That Mexico must be informed that summary punishment will be made if American lives are outraged.

That he deems it duty to let the various Mexican factions fight out their troubles.

That he must prohibit shipment of arms to both federals and rebels, to insure strict neutrality by the United States.

That everyone in Mexico who assumes to exercise authority must know that this government "shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who cannot get away and shall hold those responsible for their suffering and losses to a definite reckoning. That can, and will be made plain beyond the possibility of a misunderstanding.

Accompanying the president's address was the reply of the Huerta government rejecting the American proposals. It was written by Foreign Minister Gamboa. It suggested the following alternative policy for the United States:

Reception of a Mexican ambassador in Washington.

That the United States send a new ambassador to Mexico without restraints.

Strict observance of the neutrality laws and "see to it that no material or monetary assistance is given to the rebels."

Unconditional recognition of the Huerta government.

Failure of the negotiations of Special Envoy Lind was reported by the president. But he said the door is not closed to resumption of peace overtures.

The president regards the situation as critical. His address breathed friendship for the Mexican people, but extreme pessimism as to the outlook for immediate restoration of peace, because of President Huerta's rejection of the mediation plan.

The message was distinctly pacific in tone and contains little in the way of recommendation for future policy except the single one that "this government must urge earnestly that all Americans should leave Mexico at once and that the United States should assist them to get out of Mexico in every way possible."

The president counsels delay before further action is taken, and says:

"Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

"So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization to the actual facts. We cannot thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary.

"The circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs.

"The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed."

President Wilson last night warned all Americans to leave Mexico at once. At the same time the American embassy and all consular representatives throughout the southern republic were instructed to "notify all officials, civil and military, in Mexico" that they would be held strictly responsible for harm or injury done to Americans or their property.

Within a day or two an announcement is expected of the mobilization of a large number of American troops along the southern frontier to enforce neutrality in the traffic of arms and munitions of war into Mexico.

President Wilson was in touch with Assistant Secretary Breckenridge of the war department last night, but the nature of his communication was not revealed. It is believed the president not only is preparing to strengthen the border patrol, but desires the strictest vigilance by troops already watching the international boundary.

MESSAGE IS PRAISED

President's Utterances Endorsed by Leaders of Both Parties

Congressional leaders of both parties declare that President Wilson's vigorous assertion of a definite policy towards Mexico would have the effect of staying in congress, for a time at least, open criticism of the administration and demands for information.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Three Principal Figures In Crisis Facing Two Nations

Photos of Wilson and Huerta © 1913, by American Press Association. Photo of Lind © by C. A. Zimmerman.

Those who discussed the message agreed in the general statement that it presented a frank and full statement as to the recent negotiations with the Huerta government, and at the same time definitely outlined the American policy for the future.

Sutherland, (Rep.)—I am in full accord with the spirit of it. We can safely take no other course than that suggested by the president.

Kenyon, (Rep.)—It is just good, sound, everyday sense.

Crawford, (Rep.)—Well poised and aimed right.

Warren, (Rep.)—The president is following the proper course unless his warning shall discourage Americans who have remained in Mexico.

BILL CUTTING OUT SUMMER CONGRESS

Proposes One Term a Year, to Begin In October

Washington, Aug. 28.—The tedious grind of a summer session of congress in Washington heat has had its effect on the new members of the house.

Representative Thompson of Illinois, a Progressive, indicated this by introducing a bill to prevent summer sessions. He proposes that congress shall assemble once every year, and that in the years of the long sessions it shall convene in October instead of December, thus preventing the extending of the session into the heated term.

SEES GALLINGER'S FINISH

Same Fate Awaits Other Senators of His Type, Says La Follette

Washington, Aug. 28.—In a verbal tilt marked by intense bitterness on both sides, Senator La Follette predicted the retirement of Senator Gallinger, the Republican leader, and others of "his type," because of their alleged failure to adjust themselves to changing industrial conditions.

The colloquy followed La Follette's declaration that Republican senators who were voting against a heavier income tax on big incomes included many who had "always opposed the establishment of any income tax."

Turkey May Keep Adrianople

Constantinople, Aug. 28.—The European powers have agreed to allow Turkey to retain Adrianople despite threats of Bulgaria to try to retake that city as soon as she can collect sufficient resources to declare war.

Explain a Mystery.

"It has always been my idea," remarked the man on the car, "that something jostled nature's elbow when she was pouring the seeds into the watermelon."—Toledo Blade.

An Old Time Romance

By F. A. MITCHEL

Carrie, my niece, has asked me to put the story of my life in writing. She says that it may save many a girl who is disposed to turn aside warnings of those who are older than she from yielding to a love which they can see is not for her good and may be for her ruin.

It is an old fashioned story, for it occurred in an old fashioned time and in an old fashioned country. The state where I was born—Georgia—was then a slave state, and conditions were adapted to that institution. There were three distinct classes—the planters, the poor whites and the negroes. My parents sprang from the poor white class, but my father was a very industrious man for one living in an enervating climate and accumulated enough means to buy a small plantation and a few negroes. Consequently I grew up between two classes. We were above the poor whites, but were not received by the planters.

It was said that at seventeen I was a beauty. Alas, no one would think it to see me now, a shriveled old woman with thin snow white hair. They did not tell me so, and I was unconscious of my good looks. Social life in those days was very different from what it is now. I suppose human nature is always the same, but it seems to me now that good persons—I refer to the higher classes—were better than now and the bad were worse. This was especially so with our young men. Many of them—most of them, I should say—were imbued with noble sentiments. With them to be a gentleman was to be honorable. But there were bad ones, who were especially unscrupulous in their dealings with women—men who regarded it the part of a gentleman to make a conquest even to the ruin of the object of his attentions. The atmosphere of that period has completely passed away, the good and the bad having been fused between the two. There are now few, if any, young men with the noble impulses of the typical gentleman of that day, nor are there any such evil characters as were portrayed by the novelists of that period.

It fell to my lot to be caught between two men who were representatives of these two classes. They were both gentlemen, the one of a kindly nature, who would consider that a mean or dishonorable act would not only disgrace him, but his family even back to generations long dead; the other without any conscience whatever.

When I was fifteen years old my father one day sent me with a note to Colonel Carroll, one of the wealthiest and most respected planters of our region. On the veranda sat a youth of about twenty at a table with books before him. He was Courtney Carroll, a recent graduate of the University of Virginia. As I ascended the steps he looked up at me and I saw admiration in his eyes. He rose and advanced to meet me, and I handed him the note. He called a negro, told him to take it to his father, and selecting a comfortable chair handed it to me. He refrained from his books while I waited, seeming to consider it incumbent upon him to entertain me while I waited for an answer to the note. Colonel Carroll brought it out to me himself and apologized for not sending one of his negroes with it, courteously thanking me for consenting to be its bearer.

Naturally I, a girl still in short dresses, was much impressed with so much consideration from such high grade persons. How remarkable that one whose father had but recently emerged from the poor white class should be an object of attention from those who owned a thousand slaves.

When I was seventeen years old I met another of the aristocrats of that day, who turned out to be the reverse of a Carroll. I was leaning on the fence of my father's plantation one day when a gay party of hunters came galloping by. They disappeared down the road, and presently a young man, also in the scarlet coat of a huntsman, came along and, reining up before me, asked me if I had seen the others. I told him they had just passed and if he rode on he would soon overtake them. But it was evident from the way his eyes were fixed on me that he was disposed to turn from the game he was pursuing to a different kind. I remember that my eyes dropped before his gaze and I felt a warmth in my cheeks.

This young man was Harry Du Bois, who had by the death of his father just come into possession of a large plantation. He asked me a number of questions, evidently for excuses to talk with me instead of riding on, and presently, on pretense of tightening his saddle girth, he dismounted and stood near me on the other side of the fence, chatting glibly and paying me compliments. This was the first time any one had told me that I was beautiful, and it gave me a thrill I shall never forget. It was the second time I had noticed admiration in a young gentleman's eyes, but young Carroll had not paid me a single compliment.

Since my visit to the Carroll plantation Courtney had dominated my thoughts, but now he was superseded by Harry Du Bois. The former seemed cold beside the latter. Besides, Carroll did not seek me, while Du Bois rode by our little plantation frequently and, if I was within hearing, would always stop to chat. These meetings were at once noticed by my dear parents, and I remember with pain their troubled looks whenever I had been talking with Du Bois. Then mother spoke to me about the matter, telling me that when a gentleman became devoted to a girl beneath him in station only trouble would come of it. But I turned a deaf ear to what she said, so infatuated was I with the man who was charming me as a snake will charm a bird.

I can only refer without particularizing to the courtship. I have wondered since that at so tender an age I should have resisted one so persuasive. Perhaps this was due to the influence of my mother, who, if she could not induce me to break with my lover, at least convinced me that if he was sincere he would ask me to be his wife. So at last he did, but said that his mother, who was living, would not consent to the alliance. She was very feeble and could last but a short time. So Harry persuaded me to marry him clandestinely.

When I remember that I was to be made the victim of a mock marriage I realize how far I am now removed from that age. Such weddings were then a common method of victimizing innocent girls. Now they are unheard of. The little church where I met Du Bois is still standing, though the persons who worship in it are much changed. The ceremony was to take place at night, for I was pledged to keep it a secret from my parents. I remember that I passed through a severe mental struggle before I could bring myself to deceive them, but I tried to think of how proud they would be when I was acknowledged as the wife of a wealthy and aristocratic planter. Yet in my heart I knew that I did not confide in them, for they would surely prevent the marriage if they knew it was to take place.

It was near midnight when I got out of my window on to the veranda and descended by the limb of a magnolia tree that overhung it. I can see now in the moonlight the manor house, the negroes' white cabins flanking it, the double row of moss covered trees leading to the gate. I had scarcely reached it when Harry clasped me in his arms. My legs seemed about to give way beneath me, and he carried me to a two wheeled cart, placed me in it and drove me to the church. It was dark, the reflected light of the moon only shining from a pane of glass.

Some one opened a side door and I was led in, the moonlight streaming through gothic windows, to the chancel. There stood a clergyman in his vestments. A lamp such as is used to throw a light on a sermon alone was burning low. He turned it up, its light falling on a prayer book. Then he began to read the marriage service. He seemed to be unfamiliar with it and constantly stumbled. But so far as I was able to take cognizance of this I attributed it to haste. He came to the part where an opportunity is given to enter a protest against the marriage, when a voice from behind said:

"Don't make a noise, gentlemen. I got word of your scheme this afternoon. You talked too loud at the St. Leger tavern. On the young lady's account this affair must be kept quiet. Du Bois, you are a villain of the deepest dye. As for you, Markham, you are beneath contempt."

These words sounded in my ears as if they came from a distance. Others were spoken, but I don't remember them. Then the same voice spoke to me, the light fell for a moment on the speaker's features, and I saw Courtney Carroll.

"Will you permit me to get you home? I will try to do so without your return being known."

I knew now that I had been tricked and that I had been saved. I put my trembling hand on Carroll's arm and left the church with him. When I got home I was too weak to ascend to my room as I had come down from it, and Carroll climbed the magnolia, went into my room, stepped downstairs and opened the door for me. I reached my chamber without arousing any one.

The next morning I deferred going downstairs till all had breakfasted. When I entered the dining room, pale and trembling, Susan, the servant, said to me:

"Laws a-massy, Missy Alice, hab yo' hearn de awful news?"

"No. For heaven's sake, what is it?"

"Dis mawnin' about sun up Marse Courtney Carroll and Marse Harry Du Bois fit a duel, and Marse Carroll done got pretty nigh killed."

How I bore this second blow I cannot conceive. It took Susan but a moment to hurl the shaft, but the pain I suffered is with me today, an old woman.

Courtney Carroll lingered for several days, then died. Shortly before his death he sent for me to come to him. I was carried there in a benumbed state of feeling and received by his father. I can see to this day on his face the look of loving sympathy and distress at his approaching loss. He led, or rather supported, me to his son's chamber and left me there, all others having gone out at my arrival.

"Pardon my interference in your affair," he said. "Had I not known you were to be made a victim I would have left you to do as you liked. I have sent for you not only to apologize for my interference, but to confess to you that ever since your coming here two years ago I have been battling with a desire to become a suitor for your hand. Why I was deterred from doing so need not be mentioned. I was about to yield when I learned that Du Bois had stepped in before me. That is all. I preferred that you should know that I had more than an ordinary reason for becoming your champion."

NO COMMENT BY MEXICANS

Refrain From Giving Opinions on Wilson's Message

NOTES WILL BE PUBLISHED

Huerta Administration Anticipates Views of United States and Expresses No Surprise—Will Be No Change In Attitude Which Mexico Has Taken For Some Time

Mexico City, Aug. 28.—The Mexican government is very silent on the message which the President of the United State read before congress.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Gamboa was advised by private messages of the delivery and the contents of the message. He declared the officials of the Mexican government had no comment to make.

"We are authorizing," said the minister, "the publication of the original notes exchanged, which I understand are contained in President Wilson's message, and the further publication of the two supplementary notes, the latest of which was sent to Mr. Lind at Vera Cruz Tuesday night. These speak for themselves. They are the only comment we have to make."

The government officials refrained from comment, reserving their expressions until after consultation. In no quarter did the message create great excitement, as the agents of the government, as well as the press dispatches, had forewarned General Huerta and his official family as to what to expect.

Mexico's counter policy has been well understood for several days, and officials join in declaring that the attitude of the United States will cause no change in the stand which Mexico has taken. For days rumors have been current that Huerta would resign or that he would at least accede to enough of Washington's demands to lead to a continuation of the negotiations.

A cabinet minister said yesterday afternoon that Huerta was determined not to quit office. Huerta appears to believe that the pacification of the country can yet be accomplished by him.

ELOPED WITH CHAUFFEUR

Lucius Tuttle Is Said to Have Practically Disowned His Daughter

Boston, Aug. 28.—Lucius Tuttle, former president of the Boston and Maine railroad, is said to have practically disowned his daughter, Mrs. Effie Tuttle Foster, because of her sensational elopement with David R. Brown, Tuttle's chauffeur, to whom she was married by Rev. Cortland Myers on July 23 in this city.

The story of their romance became public only yesterday. It is not known when Tuttle learned of the elopement and marriage, for yesterday, when a reporter questioned him at his estate in Magnolia, he made no attempt to conceal his anger at his daughter's action and refused to discuss the affair.

THROWN FROM HER HORSE

Jessie Wilson Found Senseless In Road In New Hampshire

White River Junction, Vt., Aug. 28.—As Dr. Worthen of this town was on his way to visit a patient at Plainfield, N. H., he came upon a young woman lying unconscious by the road.

It proved to be Miss Jessie Wilson, who, while out riding with her fiance, Francis B. Sayre, had been thrown from her horse. Sayre had been riding ahead.

Dr. Worthen applied remedies, and after about half an hour Miss Wilson regained consciousness. The scene of the accident was on the New Hampshire side of the Connecticut river.

VERSATILE YOUNG CRIMINAL

Taken Care of When He Threatens Other Children With Knife

Racine, Wis., Aug. 28.—Richard Tuclovsky, 6 years old, was committed to the state industrial school for boys. He is to remain there until he is 21.

Richard's crimes range from plain burglary to highway robbery, in which he used an unloaded revolver. Twenty times his name has been entered on the police blotter. Even criminologists have been astonished.

Threatening other children with a knife induced summary action. The commitment is the youngest subject in the state's criminal records.

QUITE A SNUG FORTUNE

Providence Policeman Saved $34,000 In Thirty-Eight Years

Providence, Aug. 28.—An inventory of the estate of the late Captain W. H. Lawrence of the Providence police force disclosed deposits of $34,000 in local banks, which he had saved during his thirty-eight years on the force.

As captain, which position he held since 1892 until his death on July 30, he received $2500 a year. His widow has been ordered by the court to file a bond of $45,000 as executrix.

Emperor "Shouts" on Steamer

New York, Aug. 28.—On a wireless order from Emperor Franz Josef 914 Hungarian and Austrian immigrants on an incoming vessel were treated to champagne on the emperor's birthday.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

"My dear, the baby is a darling."

"But what an ass Medcroft is!"

And thus is it proved that Mrs. Odell-Carney was not only a dutiful wife in taking her husband into her confidence, but also that jointly they enjoyed a peculiarly rational outlook upon the world as they had come to know it and to feel for the people thereof. It is of small consequence that they could not find it in their power to be in tune with the virtuous Rodneys—the Rodneys were conditions, not effects.

However that may be, it was Katherine Rodney, pretty, plump and spoiled, who pulled the first stone from the foundation of Medcroft's house of cards. Katherine had convinced herself that she was deeply enamored of the volatile Freddie. The more she thought that she loved him the greater became the conviction that he did not care as much for her as he professed. She began to detect a decided falling off in his ardor. It was no use trying to hide the fact from herself that Constance was the most disturbing symptom in evidence. Jealousy succeeded speculation. Katherine decided to be hateful. She could not have helped it if she had tried.

It was very evident, to her at least, that Freddie was not to blame. He was being led on by the artful Miss Fowler. There could be no doubt of it—none in the least, declared Miss Rodney in the privacy of her own miserable reflections.

Just as she was on the point of carrying her woes to her mother an astounding revelation came to her out of a clear sky; an entirely new condition came into the problem. It dawned upon her suddenly, without warning, that Roxbury Medcroft was in love with his sister-in-law.

When she burst in upon her mother half an hour later that excellent lady started up from her couch, alarmed by the excitement in her daughter's face. Mrs. Rodney, good soul, was one of the kind who always think the world is coming to an end, or the house is on fire, or the king has been assassinated, if any one approaches with a look of distress in his face.

"My dear, my dear!" she cried as Katherine stopped tragically in the doorway. "What has happened to your father? Speak!"

"Mamma, it's worse than that! I"—

"Merciful heaven!" The good lady blindly reached for her smelling salts.

"I've made a dreadful discovery," went on Katherine in suppressed tones. "It came to me like a flash. I couldn't believe my own brain. So I watched them from my window. There's no doubt about it, mamma. It's as plain as the nose on your face. He"—

"My darling, what are you talking about? Is my nose—what is the matter with my nose?" She vaguely felt of her nose, in horror.

"He's in love with her. There's no mistake. And, will you believe me, mamma, she is encouraging him! Positively! Why—why, it's utterly contemptible! Oh, dear, what are we to do?"

Mrs. Rodney looked blankly at her daughter, who had thrown herself in a chair. She gasped and then gave vent to a tremendous squeak.

"In love! Your father? With whom—who is she?"

"Father? Oh, Lord, mother, I didn't say anything about father. Don't cry! It's another man altogether."

"Not Freddie Ulstervelt?" quavered Mrs. Rodney, pulling herself together. "After all he has said to you"—

"No, no, mamma," cried her daughter irritably. "Freddie may be in love with her, but he's not the only one. Mamma!" She straightened up and looked at her mother with wide, horror-struck eyes. "Roxbury Medcroft is madly in love with Constance Fowler!"

Mrs. Rodney did not utter a sound for fully a minute and a half. She never took her eyes from her daughter's distressed face. The color was coming back into her own, and her lips were setting themselves into thin red lines above her rigid chin.

"I'm sorry, Katherine, that you have seen it too. I have suspected it for several days. But I have not dared to speak—it seemed too improbable. What are we to do?" She sat down suddenly, even weakly.

"She's not only leading Freddie on, but she's flirting with her own brother-in-law—her own sister's husband—her—her"—

"Her own niece's father! It's atrocious!"

"She's a horrid beast! And I thought I loved her. Oh, mamma, it's just dreadful!"

"Katherine, control yourself. I will not have you upsetting yourself like this. You'll have another of those awful headaches. Leave it all to me, dear. Something must be done. We can't stand by and see dear Edith betrayed. She's so happy and so trusting. And, besides all that, we'd be dragged into the scandal. I"—

"And the Odell-Carneys too. Heavens!"

"It must be stopped! I shall go at once to Mrs. Odell-Carney and tell her what we have discovered. It will prepare her. She is the best friend I have, and I know she will suggest a way to put a stop to this thing before it is too late. We must"—

"Why don't you speak to father about it first?"

"Your father! My dear, what would be the use? He wouldn't believe it. He never does. I wonder if dear Mrs. Odell-Carney is in her room." The estimable lady fluttered loosely toward the door. Her daughter called to her.

"If I were you I'd wait a day or two, mamma." She was quite cool and very calculating now. "It may adjust itself, and—and if we can just drop a hint that we suspect, they won't be so—so—well, so public about it. I know—I just know that Freddie will be disgusted with her if he sees how she's carrying on." Katherine suddenly had realized that good might spring from evil, after all.

In the mean time young Mr. Ulstervelt was having troubles and disappointments of his own. Persistent effort to make love to Miss Fowler had finally resulted in an almost peremptory command to desist. An unlucky impulse to hold her hand during one of his attempts to "try her out" met with disaster. Miss Fowler snatched her hand away and, with a look he never forgot, abruptly left him. "It's all off with her," ruminated Freddie, shivering slightly as an after effect of the icy stare she had given him. "She's got it in for me for some reason or other. Wow! That was a frost! I feel it yet. Medcroft has played the deuce helping me. I wonder if— Hello! There's Katherine."

Freddie did some rapid fire thinking in the next half minute, with the result that Constance Fowler was banished forever from his calculations, and Katherine Rodney restored to her own. So long as he could not possibly win Constance he figured that he might just as well devote himself to the girl he was virtually engaged to marry. Freddie's was a convenient and adaptable constancy. Miss Fowler out of sight was also out of mind. He descended upon Katherine with all of the old ardor shining in his eyes. It was soon after Miss Rodney's conference with her mother, and the young lady was off for a walk in the town.

"Hello, Katherine," called he, coming up from behind. "Shopping? Take me along to carry the bundles. I want to begin now."

It was Miss Rodney's fancy to receive his advances with disdain. She assumed a most unfriendly manner.

"Indeed?" with chilling irony. "And why, may I ask?"

Freddie was taken aback. This was most unexpected.

"Practice makes perfect," he said glibly." "Don't you want me to carry 'em, Kitty?" He said it almost tearfully.

Katherine exulted inwardly. Outwardly she was very cool and very baffling. "Please don't call me Kitty. I hate it."

"It's a dear little name. That's what I'm going to call you when we are—well, you know."

"I don't know. What are you talking about?"

"Oh, come now, Miss Rodney. Don't be so icy. What's up? Never mind—don't tell me. I know. You're jealous of Connie." It was a bold stroke, and it had an immediate effect.

"Jealous!" she scoffed, but her cheeks went red. "Not I, Freddie." She considered for a second and then went on: "She's not in love with you. You must be blind. She's crazy about Mr. Medcroft."

"By Jove!" exclaimed Freddie, stopping short, his eyes bulging. He looked at her for a minute in silence, realization sifting into his face. "You're right! She is in love with him. I see it now. Well, what do you think of that! Her brother-in-law!"

"And he is in love with her too. Now you may go back to her and see if you can't win her away from him. I shan't interfere, my dear Freddie. Don't have me on your conscience. Goodby."

GIFTS FOR MRS. JONES

Given a Linen Shower at Home of Mrs. Prout

A pretty linen shower was given at the home of Mrs. Roy Prout, 97 Putman street, in honor of Mrs. Carrie Jones of Rock Island, Wednesday night. Nearly a score of Mrs. Jonse's friends asesmbled and showered her with many useful and pretty gifts. Mrs. Jones was throughly surprised as was plainly shown by her manner when she was taken so much unawares. However she responded with a few well chosen words expressing her appreciation and thanks. During the evening vocal and piano solos were rendered by Miss Geraldine Dais, and piano solos by Miss Vera Leonard and Miss Hazel Carlin, which were delightfully rendered, and well received. Refreshments were served and all present agreed they had spent a most pleasant evening.

Those present were, Miss Carrie Dorman, Mrs. E. J. Butler of Waltham, Miss Ethel Ball, Mrs. A. F. Thomas, Mrs. H. A. Prout, Mrs. Mabel Jones, Mrs. Joseph Walsh, Miss Geraldine Davis, Miss Vera Leonard, Miss Elva Leonard, Mrs. Arthur Newton, Miss Gertrude Deane, Miss Agnes Deane, Miss Nana Fisher, Miss Hazel Carlin, Mrs. Roy Prout.

INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL.

The International Football Association has admitted provisionally to membership the United States Association. Recognition by this, the governing body of the world, makes it possible for this country to compete in the Olympic soccer games at Berlin in 1916.

It also means that the United States Association will conduct the international soccer competition at Panama Exposition at San Francisco in 1916.

The admission has been long delayed. It opens a fine opportunity for Massachusetts players to gain the prominence due them in the soccer football world. Employed now at the Fore River yard are men that have played on champion teams across the water, and are qualified to take their position on the line of the fastest games scheduled, but because the association was not a member of the International body their opportunity was blocked.

Massachusetts, particularly Boston and Quincy, will now be represented in organized soccer and a movement is afoot which may culminate in a reorganized Fore River team.

BOYS IN COURT.

Five Squantum young men were arraigned in court this morning on a charge of destroying signs advertising the Squantum Inn. Constable Hersey, who figured in a sensational arrest a few months ago was the officer in the case.

Three of the boys, Oscar Stone, Oliver Verrill and John Riley, were held for the juvenile session. The complaints against Joseph Gregory and Herbert Riley were dismissed on payment of $1.05 costs.

Frank Harriman, who conducts the inn, testified that his signs have been continually destroyed, and Constable Hersey testified to circumstances which he thought was sufficient ground upon which to make the complaints. Many witnesses appeared for the defence, some of them voluntarily. The disposition of the case was received with joy in Squantum, the preavailing sentiment being that the boys named were not the right parties.

BRIEFS

Miss Mabel Wentworth of Granite street, who has been spending several weeks at Ontario, returned today.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine McGrath who died at the Holy Ghost Hospital, Boston, on Monday, was held this morning from her home, 43 Field street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Casey. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

PLAYGROUND FESTIVAL.

The annual playground festival is being held this afternoon in the Ward Three playground. There is a very large attendance.

NERVOUS APPETITES.

It would surprise most people if they could know how much unnecessary strain they put on their stomachs by eating too much. A nervous invalid had a very large appetite. She was helped twice, sometimes three times, to meat and vegetables at dinner. She thought that what she deemed her very healthy appetite was a great blessing to her, and often remarked upon it, as also upon her idea that so much good, nourishing food mush be helping to make her well. And yet she wondered why she did not gain faster. Now the truth of the matter was that this invalid had a nervous appetite. Not only did she not need one-third of the food she ate, but indeed the other two-thirds was doing her positive harm. The tax which she put upon her stomach to digest so much food drained her nerves every day, and, of course, robbed her brain, so that she ate and ate and wept and wept with nervous depression. When it was suggested to her by a friend who understood nerves that she would get better much faster if she would eat very much less, she made a rule to take only one helping of anything, no matter how much she might feel that she wanted another. Very soon she began to gain enough to see for herself that she had been keeping herself ill with overeating, and it was not many days before she did not want a second helping.

Nervous appetites are not uncommon even among women who consider themselves pretty well. Probably there are not five in a hundred among all the well-fed men and women in this country who would not be more healthy if they ate less.

—Among the features of the benevolent assimilaton process now going on in the Phillippines is the attempt to teach good manners to the little Filipinos. The American board of education in Manila has issued a book on eitquette, and each pupil is to be provided with a copy of the simple and sensible rules for right living and acting. The youngsters are to be taught the necessity for keeping nails and teeth clean, hair combed and shoes polished; the glory of rising when their elders enter a room; the beauty of politeness to their mothers; the importance of dignity on the street. If the teachers enforce the book by the example of their personal practice, and the Filipino parents back up the instruction and example by their own encouragement, a society with a propensity to decent manners may be built up in the Phillippines.—New Bedford Standard.

—That they still have some sense left on the Pacific coast when it comes to the Japanese question is shown by the action of a board of censors of moving pictures in Seattle in forbidding the exhibition of a film depicting an imaginary war between the United States and Japan in 1920. There could have been but one object in such a picture and that to pander to the prejudices of the rabid anti-Japs. It would serve to stir up a feeling that is already strong enough and might be productive of real trouble.—Taunton Herald.

SCHOOLHOUSE IS WANTED

Squantum Selects a $5,000 Site on Huckins Avenue

A campaign for the purchase of a schoolhouse site and playground in Squantum has been started by the Squantum Improvement association. At the regular meeting of the association on Wednesday night it was unanimously voted that a site of 60,000 feet of land bordering on Huckins avenue and Mayflower street be recommended to the City Council of Quincy as the ideal site for a school house and playground. A petition will be sent to the next City Council asking for the purchase of this site by the city.

The School committee, consisting of John Holmes, chairman, Charles Watts, Peter Olson, Joseph Uppling and Hiram A. Morse, made a report as follows:

"The school committee has taken up the matter of the best location for a school house in Squantum. In conversation with several members of the Quincy City Council, we have been advised that the residents must be practically unanimous upon a location before any progress can be made in securing a school building.

"The first thing to settle is where the people of Squantum want a school located and then to stick to that decision. We were told by a councilman that an order for the purchase of a site should be offered at the first meeting of the City Council of 1914. He said that if the residents were unanimous on a location, and the matter was presented in a business-like way, that he believed that the city government would purchase a site for a school building and playground in Squantum.

"City officials say that there must be at least 60,000 feet of land for such a site. The school committee spent Sunday afternoon, looking over the various sites. The first visit was made to the land opposite the Seal Rock Inn on Ocean street where there is 27,000 feet of land for sale. As this site is too small for a school, the committee immediately decided that this location was out of the question.

"Mr. Nelson has reserved between 60,000 and 70,000 feet of land bordering on Huckins avenue and Mayflower street as a possible school site. The committee visited this tract and was unanimous in deciding that this was the best location in Squantum for a school house and playground. The land is nearly level; it is the geographical center of Squantum with the Burkhardt estate included, and is pleasantly located for a school. The committee did not think that a site on a hill was desirable owing to the high winds and severe weather in winter. The first building that will probably be built on a school site will be for primary and kindergarten grades. In selecting a school site it seems important that we take into consideration a site that is accessible for small children.

"We believe that if this association will make a unanimous vote in favor of any site that we have a fair chance of getting an appropriation of possibly $5000 from the next City Council. We have found Mr. Nelson very fair as he has offered this tract of land at 8 cents per foot. If the association acts favorably upon the committee's report, every effort will be made during the winter months to get an appropriation from the City Council for the school site."

Several speakers including C. E. Carlson, W. N. Kenyon, William A. Reed, William Harvey and Peter Olson spoke in favor of the site selected by the committee and upon motion of Mr. Harvey the committee's report was unanimusly accepted and the site selected was endorsed without an opposing voice.

W. N. Kenyon in his report, as chairman of the mosquito committee, said that the estimates he had expected from two engineering concerns to whom he had applied for figures as to the cost of draining the marsh land adjoining Squantum, had not been submitted. He hoped to have this date at the next meeting of the association.

A report of the executive committee recommending changes in the association's by-laws was read by Secretary James Foster. The committee recommendations were ordered printed for distribution before the next meeting.

It was voted that the deficit of $7.94 left from the expenses of the recent Dutch supper be paid out of the association's funds.

Committee reports were made by the following: street railway by Mr. Carlson; fire protection, Perley Bostwick; streets, J. H. Loughan; Moon island nuisance, John R. Nelson; entertainment, Edward Eagar.

There was an attendance of 60 members at the meeting and president Herbert A. Smith presided. Secretary James Foster and Treasurer Charles Bostwick made their regular reports.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Tilden Crooker has returned from a three days fishing trip.

Misses Edith and Helen Elrick of South Quincy are spending their vacation at Hampton Beach, N. H.

Miss Alice Lawrence and Annie Lawrence of Auburn, Maine are spending a week with Mrs. Fred Curtis.

Mrs. Maria McGregor and her daughter Blanche of Plainville, Mass. are spending a few days with her cousin Mrs. J. Tytler of South Quincy.

Miss Nellie L. Pinel of Quincy and Leonard P. Hunt of Braintree were married at Braintree Tuesday evening by Rev. John A. Mitchell, pastor of the Baptist church.

Fred C. Folsom of Braintree was the toastmaster at the after dinner speaking at the Folsom family reunion at Exeter, N. H., Wednesday. Among the soloist was Mrs. Fred C. Folsom, his wife. James E. Folsom of Braintree was chosen secretary.

The case of Edward M. Sweeney, held in connection with the recent breaking and entering of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Ballou on Rogers street, was called this morning and continued until Sept. 6. The bail of $1000, set at a previous hearing was allowed to stand.

At the urgent reguest of the Librarlan, the Trustees have decided to open the Main Hall of the Thomas Crane Public Library this fall twelve hours a day, from 9 A. M. until 9 P. M. The change goes into effect next Tuesday, Sept. 2. See notice of library hours in another column.

Members of the Quincy Women's club would appreciate a good sidewalk on Goffe street. In fact it almost seems a necessity between Dimmock and Saville streets as most of the original walk has disappeared and slopes so that it is dangerous in winter. As there is only one sidewalk on Goffe street it should be usable.

Miss Doris Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Oscar A. Johnson of Deldorf street had a very pleasant party of young friends on Wednesday afternoon from 2 to 5, to ceelbrate her eighth birthday. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in playing games, singing and a general good time, such as little folks know. Miss Doris received some very pretty gifts. During the afternoon refreshments were served.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Beginning Tuesday, Sept. 2, the main hall of the Thomas Crane Public Library will be open twelve hours daily, (Sundays and holidays excepted) from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M.

Children's room hours will be from 11.30 to 1.30, and from 3.30 to 6. On Saturday and during school vacations this room is open from 10 A. M. to 12 M and from 1 to 6 P. M.

The Branch reading-rooms at West Quincy and Atlantic are open from 3 to 5.30 and from 6.30 to 8.30 P. M. Closed Fridays at 6 P. M.

LARCENY CASE.

The continued case of Charles Beverly, charged with larceny closed this morning and Judge Pratt has presided at all the hearings that he would bring in a verdict Saturday. Beverly was arrested by Quincy officers on a charge of soliciting funds for a Boston home without authority. Rev. George W. Tillman, pastor of the church for which Beverly is alleged to have solitited has been a witness at each hearing. The parties concerned are colored.

—There is no reason to believe that the trolley car is the last word in city transportation any more than there was once reason to believe the happiest solution of the problem of getting about was the cable car or the horse car. The motor bus has already won a home in several American cities. Its chief advantage lies in the fact that it calls for no heavy investment of capital in the laying of tracks, rigging of wires and construction of power stations. Relatively small may be the initial costs. Then the bus can go where the trolley cars cannot, and so in time of heavy traffic can relieve the congestion by changing its route. Its flexibility in this regard would represent a distinct gain for any crowded city.—Taunton Herald.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Vol. 28 No. 201 QUINCY MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 29, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

PRETTY SCENES AT PLAYGROUND FESTIVAL

Parade, Folk Dancing, Sports and Presentation of Prizes for Season

Ward three the Champions With Ward Two Second

The season of supervised playgrounds closed Thursday afternoon with a grand demonstration on the Ward Three playground by the children and the closing contests in which the Ward Three representatives defended the title of champion with 73 1-2 points. Ward Two was second with 71 1-2 and Ward Four a low third with 37 points.

The day was ideal for an out-of-doors exhibition and among those gathered to see the "kiddies" play their roles was Mayor Eugene R. Stone who later presented the prizes to the winners in each class. The councilmen present were George Gautheir, John R. Richards and Edward J. Sandberg, George E. Pfaffmann and Ira M. Whittemore of the Board of Park Commissioners showed their interest, and several ladies were present, including Mrs. Chandler W. Smith president of the Quincy Women's club, Mrs. J. R. Mellen, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Mrs. Charles R. Safford, Mrs. H. G. Smith, Mrs. James H. Slade, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. Maurice R. Spillane, Mrs. A. M. Thompson and others.

The exercises opened with the grand entry of children who marched from the further side of the playground around the field to the enclosed square where the games were held. Flags were flying, children cheering and colored ponpons of tissue paper were gaily waving as over 350 children, browned from the summer exposure, paraded past the reviewing stand in which sat Mayor Stone and others.

Frank Tirrell, Jr., one of the instructors, was grand marshal and Helen Marshall of Ward Three led by her playmates who constituted the first division. The championship banner won in the 1912 season was carried by Isabel Rogers and Tommy, an Irish Terrior of Vinol McDonald, was in the mascot's position. For a moment, it looked as though Tommy was an out and out deserter, as he took French leave from his position of prominence and skirted the length and breadth of the field, close on the heels of another dog that managed to run just a little faster. Little Vinol gave chase and finally caught the runaway and settled him back in the line after considerable coaxing.

The Ward Three colors were orange, Ward Two, waved blue, and the Ward Four contingent carried red. After the parade the children formed in squads on three sides of the field and vented their pleasures throughout the afternoon as their favorites came off with the winning points. Ward Three was on the Water street side, Ward Two on the east, Ward Four on the south, while the west side was reserved for the guests.

The events on the program were directed by Louis L. F. LaRose, Miss Lucille Elwell, Miss Arnold, Miss Connor and Miss Cleaves, Allison Marsh, Frank Tirrell, Jr., and J. Robertson.

The girls of Ward Two performed their portion of the afternoon in a fine manner, particularly the tots that averaged about five years of age. They danced a baby polka that called for a general outburst from the 500 spectators present. The Junior girls danced the Highland Schottische as though they had been doing it for years and the Senior girls surpassed any dancing ever given on the playground by successfully carrying out the intricate steps of the Irish lilt.

The athletic program followed, after which came the presentation of prizes. The windup was a grand peanut scramble in which every child on the grounds joined and several bushels were scattered into lively bunches and then they hollered for more.

A moving picture machine and an operator was on the field all afternoon and the feature parts of the program were photographed and will be shown later at the Kincaide theatre. During the afternoon the swings, slides, sand boxes, etc., were in constant use.

The summary of the athletic games follows:

Peanut race for girls of Class A won by Mary Curtin of Ward Three; Lillian Beaton of Ward Two, second; Alice Knight of Ward Four, third; Anna Stevens of Ward Two, fourth.

Backward race for Class B girls, won by Violet Tucker of Ward Two. Myrtle Osborne of Ward Three, sec-

REV. ATWOOD IN MICHIGAN

Now Education Superintendent of Sabbath School Work

Rev. A. R. Atwood, one of the most successful pastors the Washington Street Congregational church at Quincy Point ever had, is now in a much larger field as will be seen by the following letter issued Aug. 28 by the Synod of Michigan to the pastors, superintendents and Sabbath School workers of the Synod of Michigan:

Dear Brethren.—It is with great pleasure that your Synodical Committee of Home Missions and Sabbath School Work announces that, in connection with our Board of Publication and Sabbath School Work, the Reverend Alfred Ray Atwood, M. A., has been elected Educational Superintendent of Sabbath School work for the Synod of Michigan. He will enter upon his duties September first.

Mr. Atwood comes to us with a thorough preparation for this work. After a preparatory course at Oberlin, Ohio, he graduated from the University of Vermont and then studied at Andover Theological Seminary and at Harvard University. He was an "honor" man in both college and seminary. He has had twelve years of successful ministry in country and city churches. The churches to which he ministered were greatly prospered in membership and in material improvements. He has been a constant worker in Sabbath School organization and development. For over two years he has been employed by The New York State Sunday School Association as a general organizer and as superintendent of the 'Teen Age and Adult Department, and was especially prominent as an institute worker. He is a pleasing and forceful public speaker, and brings to the Synod of Michigan the enthusiasm and knowledge gained from a thorough preparation and rich experience. He is an acknowledged authority in modern and approved methods and abounds in the practical.

Mr. Atwood comes to us most highly recommended for this work. Rev. Joseph Clark, D. D., Superintendent of the New York State Sunday School Association, writes: "Reverend Alfred Ray Atwood has been a diligent student of Sunday School Work on all sides and is an experienced Sunday School specialist. He is not only a hard worker and an acceptable platform and institute speaker, but he brings things to pass, which after all is the test of efficient service."

Mr. Alfred Day, general secretary of The Michigan Sunday School Association for 1900-1905, writes: "Mr. Atwood possesses an overmastering passion for Sunday School work, born of a sense of its significance and an ability to translate such passion into a force, justifying the utmost confidence and co-operation. I bespeak for him the most cordial reception through my former field, hallowed to me by precious associations."

Professor F. S. Goodrich, The General Secretary of The Michigan Sunday School Association, writes: "I extend to Mr. Atwood a hearty welcome. You can be sure that our State Association will assist him in every possible way."

Rev. Mr. Atwood resigned his pastorate in Quincy to go to Paterson, N. J. a few years ago.

DEATH OF MICHAEL J. SULLIVAN

Michael J. Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Sullivan of Montclair died Thursday evening in his 22nd year. The funeral will take place from his late home, 53 John street, Sunday afternoon. Services will be held in the Church of the Sacred Heart and Monday morning a high mass of requiem will be said for the repose of his soul.

CLAN McGREGOR INTERESTED

Will Send Large Delegation to Scottish Games

The members of Clan MacGregor, No. 5, will attend the twenty-fourth annual picnic and games of the clans of Boston and vicinity to be held at Caledonian grove, West Roxbury, on Labor Day.

The games this year are to be greater than ever. Those confined to members are always keenly contested. The five-a-side football competition will be very strenuous. Teams from all over this state will compete, but the Fore River team of Quincy seems to be the favorite.

There will be games open to the world and the best professional athletes of this country, Great Britain and Canada will compete.

The "skirl" of the bagpipes will be heard in reels, marches and strathspeys. Highland flings and Sword dances are on the program.

Clansman Walter Scott of New York City is to present special prizes to the winners in the bagpiping and dancing events, in the form of gold and silver medals.

Many of the best professional long distance runners of the world have entered for the great ten-mile race, and in the sporting parlance it will be a "hummer."

A set of amatuer games, sanctioned by the A. A. U. will be run off. Great interest is centred on the one hundred yards dash. Howard Drew of Springfield will no doubt be scratch man in this event. A great race is assured.

The prizes for the amateur events are of exceptional value and large entries have been made for each event.

Indications are that with good clear weather on Labor Day all previous records for attendance at the picnic and games, will be beat.

A special one-mile relay race between teams representing the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Order Sons of St. George and Order of Scottish Clans has been arranged.

TRAWL BILLOW WORKS WELL

Brought to Boston Large Fare on Maiden Trip

Capt. Ralph Thomas brought the new steam trawler Billow, built at Quincy, in from her maiden trip to the South Channel, Boston, on Thursday, with nearly 90,000 pounds of fresh mixed groundfish in the hold as the result of six day's fishing. The new trawler worked well, Capt. Thomas reported. Her sister ship, the Wave, went out on her trial trip Wednesday and will soon be in commission, while the third of the new trio, the Breaker, will make her trials very shortly.

AUTO SKIDDED.

The Lancier machine of Herbert Lawton of Munroe road, operated by a chauffeur skidded at Whitwell and Granite streets this morning and crashed into a tree. The machine was damaged considerably. The chauffeur, Homer W. Blanchard of 126 Glendale road, received a severe shaking up by being thrown against the wheel.

The accident occurred about eight o'clock and was witnessed by many people. The street has been treated to a preparation of oil and the rain which pooled in spots made its surface slippery. As the machine rounded the corner it commenced to skid and the ojerator lost controll. He applied his emergency brake but it failed to work before the machine struck the tree.

DEPOT MASTER FORTY YEARS.

Edward P. Osborne, for 40 years, station agent at Neponset died on Wednesday. He was a member of Union lodge of Masons and Neponset lodge of Odd Fellows.

RETURNING PASTOR HEARTILY WELCOMED

Rev. Henry T. Grady Back from Visit to Rome and Ireland

Clergy Unite With People of St. Marys in Greeting

Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's church who returned Wednesday after a three months' tour of Europe, was tendered a reception by 800 of his parishioners in St. Joseph's hall Thursday evening. The affair was honored by the presence of Rev. Fr. Francis Walsh, pastor of St. Agnes church of Reading; Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe, pastor of Sacred Heart church of Atlantic and Rev. Fr. M. J. Cudahy, of Dorchester, a relative of Father Grady. Seated beside the returning pastor was Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy, his assistant and Rev. Fr. William J. Keenan who has recently been appointed to the parish.

Ex-Mayor William T. Shea, was the presiding officer and delivered a speech of welcome which was a gem of sentiment and reverence. He closed by presenting a monster bouquet which he said contained all the love and good will of the parishioners.

A musical program was rendered by the St. Mary's Glee Club, assisted by Joseph Morrisette and John Hoey of Randolph as the soloists and Miss Julia Riley of Weymouth, as reader. All were well received, particularly Miss Riley, whose fine impersonation of characters was a true study of human interest.

Father Walsh, the first speaker, said occasions of this kind are the happy moments in the life of a clergyman. "The scene makes me feel proud that I am a boy of old St. Mary's. From the recollections of the events of the older days I have always proclaimed that the people of West Quincy were true and loyal to their priests, so good in fact that I am inclined to run off myself and try out mine own people and see if they are constituted as you are. We are glad that Father Grady took a well deserved vacation. We missed him—(Oh, I have been here several times since he went away,) and I think that one thing that can be attributed to his successful vacation is the fact that he knew everything was going well." And at this point, Father Grady vigorously nodded his head and smiled genially in approval. "I want to renew my friendship with your pastor of 25 years standing and pray that he may be spared for many a day to carry out the good work so nobly commenced. (Applause.)

Father Duffy took advantage of this opportunity to voice his feelings of joy at the happy return of his pastor. In relating the incidents preparatory to the Princesse Irene leaving the dock he spoke tenderly of the farewell wave of Father Grady as he passed beyond the range of vision. He thanked the people for their hearty co-operation and exposed to Father Grady the thoughts of the parishioners who never lagged in faith or devotion during his absence and willingly assisted at any and all times.

Father Cuffe, a personal friend of nearly all those present, preceded Father Grady and in his bright and kindly way stated his pleasure on the happy termination of the vacation. He lauded the West Quincy people for their finer instincts which were ably demonstrated by their presence in

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Next Monday, Sept. 1, is Labor Day, and will be generally observed as a holiday. There will be no issue of the Daily Ledger that day. As Tuesday is a busy day, new advertisements and news items should reach the office early.

Considering how easily Harry Thaw trotted out of the front door, it was very kind of him to stay in as long as he did.

Anyway the terms of the congressmen expire in March, 1915, so that they will have to stop talking about the tariff by that date.

It is hoped that that $26,000,000 reduction in express rates does not come out like the $29,000,000 fine.

Most people who own costly jewelry nowadays are dazzling the interior of the safe deposit box.

The freedom with which Ben Tillman handles the pitchfork again suggests that the old man with the scythe is not going to get him yet.

Maury Diggs says the girl was to blame. She should have felt more responsible for the good conduct of the weaker sex.

Some people think Thaw should be allowed to go the antipodes. That would be in the right direction, but altogether too near.

Pat Crowe proposes when he gets out of the workhouse to get out a patent to prevent steel rails from spreading. Perhaps a device placing the railroad ties at more convenient intervals would promte his own comfort to a greater extent.

LAUNDERED MONEY.

Laundered money is pronounced just as good as new bills fresh from the printer, according to a report just made to the United States treasurer. If so, much of the excuse for the circulation of dirty money disappears.

Leaving out of the consideration the chances for spreading diseases, what a sense of pleasure it gives one to receive payment in clean fresh bills; Any bank or mercantile concern that takes extra pains to distribute clean money whenever possible gives real pleasure, which may have some commercial value.

It has sometimes been said that the greater use of gold coins in Europe has a tendency to promote economical habits. The pieces make such a musical jingle and look so shiny that the money does not burn its way out of the pocket so fast. It seems too pretty to spend. Perhaps a greater use of clean bills would also have a similar effect.

THE CITY MANAGER.

This new officer is the unique contribution of the Dayton charter to the government of larger American cities. The choice of City Manager will not be confined to local talent, for he at the time of his appointment need not be a resident of the city and political considerations must not enter into his selection. He will hold office only so long as he gives satisfaction to the commission, which determines his compensation. Under the direction of the commission he will exercise control, through appointments and removals (subject to civil service regulations) of the entire administration, exclusive of the schools and courts, and will thus be the point of contact between the governing body and the operating organization by means of reports, recommendations and the budget. The city manager will thus correspond in a general way. to the general manager in a private corporation and to the burgomaster in German cities.

The mayor, under the Dayton plan, will be the commissioner receiving the highest number of votes and will be the political head of the city. He will preside over the meetings of the commission but will have no appointing or veto power.

Springfield, Ohio,, will vote on a similar plan on August 26. The same scheme of government is in successful operation in Sumpter, S. C.

BRAM BREATHES AIR OF FREEDOM

Liberated After Seventeen Years In Federal Prison

STILL DENIES TRIPLE MURDER

Says He Will Endeavor to Run Down Slayer of Captain, Wife and First Mate of Bark Herbert Fuller, of Which He Was Mate—Faultless Record While In Prison

Atlanta, Aug. 29.—Faultless behavior for seventeen years in the federal prison, during which he has been a great force for good, according to Warden Moyer, has convinced the government authorities that Thomas M. C. Bram, convicted of a triple murder on the high seas, is an innocent man, and as a result he was set free on the parole system. The government acted under the new law which extends the terms of parole to life men.

Bram was tried in the United States district court in Boston twice and both times was found guilty and was sent to the Massachusetts state prison, where he was kept for eight years and five months. In 1906 he was sent to Atlanta.

Bram was a mate of the American barkentine Herbert Fuller, which in 1896 left Boston laden with lumber for South America. One night the captain, his wife and the first mate were killed. A sailor, Charles Brown, and Bram were both under suspicion and were taken from Nova Scotia to Boston for trial. Brown declared that Bram was the guilty man.

Friends enlisted in Bram's behalf and a few days ago his application for parole was favorably acted upon. Everybody liked him and the warden was glad to aid in getting him his freedom.

"Brown accused me falsely," said Bram solemnly. "I do not know who committed the crime. But I hope to know some day. I know only that I did not do it. The aim of my life is to find the guilty man. I would be willing to suffer his own punishment for him in order to clear my name.

"The first thing I am going to buy is a bunch of flowers; and I'm going to send them to Warden Moyer. He has been kind to me. Then I am going to get me a room and go into it by myself and have a good cry. I've got to have that cry before I can realize it's true. Then I'll want to pray a little. And after that I want work."

SWIMS TWENTY-TWO MILES

Brown Goes From Battery to Sandy Hook In 13 Hours 38 Minutes

New York, Aug. 29.—After many unsuccessful attempts by long-distance swimmers for years past to swim the twenty-two miles from the Battery to Sandy Hook, Captain Alfred Brown of the Flushing bay life saving station corps accomplished the feat. He was in the water 13 hours and 38 minutes.

Marine men considered him lucky in having landed safely, as several sharks of man-eating size had been seen during the day in the vicinity of his course.

Brown had to be assisted up the sloping beach, as he was benumbed, but after walking about a short time he limbered up and declared he felt no bad effects from his long immersion. During his swim he ate but three small sandwiches and drank a small quantity of tea.

WOMAN FIGHTS ALDERMAN

Will Utilize Dead Husband's Ashes as Political Hoodoo

New York, Aug. 29.—"I shall strap my husband's ashes to my body, go forth and fight Gelbke."

So Mrs. Sarah M. Ruhlin, widow of Gus Ruhling, the prize fighter, has vowed. She will do her utmost to beat Alderman Gelbke, who seeks re-election in the Sixty-seventh district, Brooklyn.

"I shall take the stump against Gelbke and let the voters know what I think of him," declared Mrs. Ruhlin, a vigorous suffragist, who has made many speeches urging "votes for women." "I firmly believe he has lent political aid to those opposing my legal fight for my husband's estate."

AUTO TURNS TURTLE

Two Men Killed and Five Injured on "Jacob's Ladder"

Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 29.—Two men were killed and five were injured when the right rear wheel of the automobile in which they were riding collapsed on a sharp curve near the top of Jacob's Ladder, causing the machine to turn turtle. The accident took place while the car was traveling at a speed of thirty miles an hour, down grade.

The dead are Albert Williams, the owner of the car, a retired woolen merchant, whose chest was crushed, and David J. Garvin, a patrolman, whose neck was broken.

MENUS OF THE FUTURE WILL HAVE ODD SOUND.

Many New Foods With Strange Names, but Good Taste.

Boiled dasheens, fried ptesai, entree of jujube, udo salad and breadfruit pudding will be a fair sample of the menu of the near future, according to David Fairchild, chief agricultural explorer in charge of the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture.

According to Mr. Fairchild, his bureau within the last few years has experimented with more than 3,000 food products, none of which has ever before been produced in this country and many of which have never been produced before anywhere. In other words, the bureau of plant industry has out-Burbanked Burbank.

The most notable success of the bureau, Mr. Fairchild says, has been with the dasheen, which, according to the chief explorer's description, is a sort of cross between a potato, a cucumber and a Mexican hairless dog, looking a little like each.

The dasheen grows to about three times the size of a large potato. It is oblong in shape, with queer bumps here and there which might pass for caricatured legs. It is striped like a zebra and boasts a luxuriant crop of long, course hair.

But for all its queer appearance, Mr. Fairchild says, it can be served in many of the ways common to both white and sweet potatoes and that it tastes better than either. Also, properly tended, its yield is larger and lasts all the year round. The dasheen is now being raised extensively in the extreme south and has recently been served at several notable New York and Washington banquets.

The udo, the most successful freak vegetable after the dasheen, looks very much like asparagus. It possesses the advantage, however, of being edible either as a cooked vegetable, eaten raw as a fruit or being served as the chief ingredient of a salad.

Ptesai is a Chinese cabbage, larger than the domestic kind. Its novelty lies in the fact that it can be cooked without giving off any odor.

BOTTLES CAUSE FIRES.

Forest Wardens Now Bury Them When Found In Woods.

Beer and whisky bottles, carelessly thrown to the ground in timbered areas, are apt to cause forest fires, according to the opinion of E. W. Ferris, state fire warden of Washington.

Mr. Ferris recently said that fire wardens had been instructed to bury all bottles they saw in order that they may not act as a concentrating medium for the sun's rays and start fires in dry leaves and moss.

"I have had many reports of fires that undoubtedly started in this manner," said Mr. Ferris, "and I do not doubt in the least the opinion that there is danger from this source. It sounds odd, but undoubtedly it is true."

MORE FRIENDLY FEELING SHOWN

Lind Returns to Mexico City as Wilson's Special Envoy

TENSION SOMEWHAT RELIEVED

Huerta Will Not Be Candidate For Presidency—Questions Involving Pride and National Honor Expected to Soon Be Clarified—Americans Are Leaving Mexico

Washington, Aug. 29.—Strong hope prevails in official circles that the Huerta government and the United States will soon arrive at a mutual understanding leading to a peaceful settlement of the revolutionary disturbances in Mexico.

Administration officials express themselves as pleased with yesterday's developments. President Wilson regarded as hopeful the tone of the note sent by Frederico Gamboa, Mexican minister of foreign affairs, in reply to supplementary suggestions made by John Lind before leaving Mexico City for Vera Cruz last Monday.

The full text of the two communications was received here and while neither side, according to the official interpretation, yields any of the essential points in its contentions, the method of approaching the difficulties at hand is admittedly more friendly and framed with more regard for a practical solution.

Officials found encouragement, too, in Lind's decision to return to the Mexican capital, as they had left it to his discretion to go there if there was a prospect of renewing negotiations along tangible lines.

The two notes exchanged by Lind and Gamboa were published in full here and official Washington read them closely.

Much interest was manifested in the suggestion made by Lind that all proposals be laid aside for the present except that which asks Huerta not to be a candidate in the coming election.

Hope was found in the vigorous disclaimer of Senor Gamboa that anyone should have suspected Huerta of desiring to become a candidate, for this was regarded as a tacit implication that Huerta finally would not enter the presidential race.

The chief difficulties of the present situation, it is recognized by administration officials, are the questions of pride and national honor involved. Protestations by Gamboa that to yield to the contentions of the United States would be a surrender of sovereignty and would permit a foreign government to veto the candidacy of individuals in Mexican elections hereafter have been met by the statement of officials here that the United States has not the slightest desire to interfere with the sovereign rights of Mexico.

There is confidence in official circles that by the exchange of other communications, both Mexico and the United States will further clarify their positions on this point, imputations of dictation will be removed, and any changes brought about in Mexico, at any rate, will result from the voluntary acts of the Mexican administration.

So far as the Washington government is concerned, it has been made plain that it hopes merely that a peaceful settlement of the difficulties may be reached regardless of how the Mexican authorities are influenced to compose the situation.

Americans in Mexico are heeding President Wilson's warning to get out of the country and state department officials believe that two weeks hence there hardly will be a thousand of them left in the troubled southern republic.

Although many had refused to consider leaving before the word came of the president's urgent advice, hundreds have been starting for home or abroad daily during the past three weeks, and it is estimated that nearly 10,000, or about as many as are still in Mexico, have got away.

Of those now preparing to leave, 4000 will need help from the government, so the $100,000 appropriation asked for by Secretary Bryan some time ago to aid refugees will be needed immediately.

JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE

Coroner's Jury Frees Slayer Who Defended a Woman

New York, Aug. 29.—A coroner's jury acquitted William P. Cuff for slaying Joseph Borrandes while the latter was attempting to assault Miss Mary Burns, a telephone operator, on her way home from work in the early morning.

Cuff, a stranger to the young woman, responded to her cries for help and knocked Borrandes down. The man died later of a fractured skull. The jury brought in a verdict of justifiable homicide.

LOVE'S SUPREME TEST.

"Darling, I have something to tell you."

As she spoke, the young and beautiful girl looked searchingly at her lover.

"Are you prepared," she murmured, "for the worst?"

He stirred uneasily.

"Yes, dear."

"Before we can be married it will be necessary for you to submit to a test. Next week there will be in our house a family reunion. You must be there."

Suppressing an involuntary shudder the young man, as is usual with all heroes, controlled himself by a supreme effort.

"Must it be?" he asked.

"It must. There is no other way."

He paused, and then, his voice quivering with emotion, said:

"Your grandfather and grandmother will be present, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. As you must know, no family reunion is complete without them."

"There will be an orthodox aunt—one who will question me closely about my religion, my habits and my prospects?"

"There will."

"Also an uncle, one of the familiar curious kind, who will wish to know about the cost of my clothes, what my salary is and how many cigarettes I smoke a day?"

"Certainly."

"A cousin or so? The kind who will test my sense of humor, and make side remarks to your mother and father?"

"Naturally."

"Will I be asked to read aloud?"

"Probably."

"And romp with the children?"

"Of course."

"And possibly to carve—just to see whether I know how?"

"Very likely."

The young man arose.

"Darling," he muttered, "we have had many happy hours together. I loved you. I still love you, but this is too much. Tomorrow I will return your letters. Farewell, forever!"

And as he went out through the front gate he remarked it with a double cross, saying to himself with a glad smile:

"Give me liberty or give me death!"

HOOKWORM THE GREATEST MENACE TO HUMAN FAMILY

Activities of the Scourge and Methods Recommended For Extermination.

Preventable Disease if Proper Steps Are Taken In Early Stages.

FLIES, mosquitoes, roaches and other insects are responsible for the deaths of thousands of persons annually, but these pests combined do not constitute as alarming a menace to mankind as does the hookworm, according to Dr. Nelson Du Val Brecht, former assistant surgeon of the United States public health service, who is writing a series of articles dealing with public health questions.

The activities of this parasitic insect, for the eradication of which John D. Rockefeller has established a fund of $1,000,000 and methods which may be employed for combating hookworm disease, are described by Dr. Brecht in the following article:

"Hookworm disease has become a national public health problem in the United States since Dr. Charles Wardell Stiles of the United States public health service demonstrated in 1902 that it was endemic in many states and the cause of the common anaemia of the south. At about the same time Ashford, King and Igaravidez discovered that over one-fifth of the population of Porto Rico was infected with the disease. These discoveries were followed by the donation of $1,000,000 by John D. Rockefeller to be used for its eradication in the southern states.

Fund Largely Increased.

"Recently it has been announced that the sum of $100,000,000 has been subscribed by a number of wealthy philanthropists for the purpose of stamping out anaemia of native races over the entire world. As hookworm disease is one of the commonest causes and probably the greatest cause of anaemia in the human race, a large share of this fund will be employed for its treatment and prevention.

"Hookworm disease is known also as uncinariasis, ankylostomiasis, miners' anaemia, Egyptian chlorosis, Egyptian green sickness, miners' cachexia, miners' disease, Porto Rico anaemia, St. Gothard's tunnel disease, tunnel disease, tunnel anaemia, tropical chlorosis, tropical green sickness, dochmoisis, bricklayers' anaemia, mountain anaemia, besides a host of local names. It is one of the most ancient diseases known to man, for it was described by Egyptian scribes 3,500 years ago. It is one of the most widely distributed diseases, and its geographical range comprises practically the entire globe.

"Hookworm disease is found in Africa, North America, South America, Central America, the West Indies, Hawaii, Asia and the Philippine Islands. It is found in nearly all of the states of the Union as far north as New York. The original home of the hookworm was, in all probability, Africa, and it was first introduced to the West Indies and Atlantic seaboard of the United States by the importation of negroes as slaves from the dark continent.

Brought by Travelers.

"It has entered the Pacific coast states and Mexico through immigration from Hawaii, China, Japan, the Philippines and India and through transcontinental travel from the east coast. Soldiers, sailors and civilians returning from our insular possessions have brought with them their share of the disease.

"Hookworm disease is the greatest enemy of the human race in the tropics—greater even than cholera or plague. It has been the most disabling of all diseases in the Egyptian army, as well as the greatest cause for the rejection of recruits. In Egypt the parasite of the disease is found at nearly every postmortem. Upon arrival of many vessels at Pacific coast ports of the United States 100 per cent of the oriental coolie passengers (Chinese, Japanese and Hindus) have been found to be infected.

"These facts alone justify the exclusion of this class of people according to the immigration laws of the United States and partially explain the antipathy of the citizens of California to their presence.

"Hookworm disease has been found among the mines of Pennsylvania and has prevailed in Maryland and Virginia, has been especially prevalent in Florida and Georgia, and some cases have occurred in the District of Columbia. In portions of India 75 per cent of the population are affected, in Ceylon its ravages are said to be more serious than Asiatic cholera, and in Assam it is almost universal, 209 cases having been found in 300 necropsies. Alden states that 22.5 per cent of the total death rate of Porto Rico is due to this disease.

Poverty Caused by It.

"Osler states that in Porto Rico in 1903, among a total of 23,433 deaths, 5,736 were from hookworm disease. The mortality and financial loss caused by this disease are inconceivable. As the large class of poor whites and negroes of the southern states are infected to a great extent with this disease, the laziness, lack of ambition and poverty prevalent among these people are to be attributed to hookworm disease.

"Hookworm disease is caused by an animal parasite, the hookworm, which belongs to the family of round worms or nematodes. The worm is a strongyle, closely related to the sclerostoma, causing the verminous aneurisms and colic in the horse and to the gapeworm of fowls. The worms live in the small intestines of human beings, apes and other animals. Two species or varieties cause disease in man and are commonly spoken of as the old world and the new world hookworms.

"The hookworm enters the small intestine of man by two routes. It may infect man through the ingestion of infected water or food, the accidental ingestion of infected earth from soiled hands or the intentional eating of earth. There is a class of people found in the southern states (the geophagi, dirt eaters or earth feeders) who deliberately eat soil as a regular portion of their dietary, and when such soil is infected with hookworms they, of course, get the disease.

Causes Dirt Eating.

"On the other hand, there is another class of dirt eaters in whom this habit does not develop until hookworm disease has developed fully in them. In this latter case the earthy matter is eaten in obedience to an instinctive craving and brings relief by mechanically loosening a number of the parasites.

"The second portal of entry is through the skin, where the first manifestation of the disease is known as 'ground itch' of the south, 'pani-ghao' of the tropics or 'bunches' of the Cornish miners. The worms enter the skin, are carried by veins to the heart and lungs, crawl from the lungs up the air passages or tubes to the throat and then descend through the gullet and stomach to the small intestines. Entrance by the skin route is, of course, most common in people who go barefooted, as the poorer classes in tropical and subtropical lands and oriental coolies, who work in rice fields. Occasionally the disease is air borne.

"When the worm reaches the intestines it attaches itself to the mucous membrane by means of its hooks and sucks blood until it becomes engorged. It may then temporarily release its hold and become reattached, making a fresh wound in another place.

Causes Continuous Bleeding.

"The damage to the victim is accomplished through the loss of blood, the production of poisons by the worm, infection of the minute bleeding spots by other disease germs and direct impairment of the structure and function of the bowel wall. The parasite not only abstracts blood from the intestine, but it secretes a substance which prevents the clotting of the blood, and thus there is continuous bleeding and loss of blood from many small wounds. The parasites may live in the intestine for years.

"The principal symptoms of hookworm disease are progressive anaemia, dyspepsia, colicky pains, dropsy, perversions of taste, as dirt eating; lassitude, breathlessness upon the slightest exertion, dizziness, lemon white color of the skin and enlargement of the heart, liver and spleen. When the disease attacks children mental and bodily growth are stunted, and a fishlike, staring expression of the eyes is to be observed.

"Hookworm is a preventable disease. First steps in the prevention consist in an enforcement of proper sanitary conditions, the use of sanitary latrines in sufficient numbers and compulsory registration of all cases of the disease with the proper health authorities. All new miners should be compelled by law to undergo a careful medical examination, and infected miners should not be permitted to work. Such regulations are at present enforced in Hungary. Systematic examinations should be made of all cases of anaemia in laborers working in mines, tunnels and other large excavations in order to detect the disease as early as possible. Only boiled, well filtered or chemically treated water should be drunk.

Prophylactic Measures.

"Green fruits and vegetables should be washed carefully before being eaten. Miners should under no circumstances be allowed to work barefooted, and people, especially children, should be prevented from wading or bathing in water that may be infested. A 2 per cent solution of common salt is said to kill the larvae promptly, and an occasional salting of the ground or small bodies of water not utilized for drinking or culinary purposes is a useful prophylatic measure. Personal prophylaxis includes careful washing of the hands before eating and the wearing of sound shoes when working in suspected soils. The use of sound shoes is to be emphasized, as the embryo worms can penetrate cracks or even enter the eyelets for shoestrings.

"Curative treatment includes the use of cathartics; thymol, a mixture of chloroform, castor oil and eucalpytol or the latter two drugs in combination, followed by iron arsenic and manganese."

Putting the Sickroom In Shape.

Disfurnish the sickroom of every unessential. Leave nothing that can be knocked off or over or that clatters or rattles. Remove rugs from the bare floor, but keep a small one handy for the patient's feet. Cover a carpet with a smooth sheet of something washable. In case of contagion take away draperies and pictures. Have the bedstead light and firm standing, not too low, single or of three quarter size. Set it so there is free passage all round it, but not so light glares into sick eyes. Place the head at least six inches from the wall and set beside it a small solid table. A couch or single bed, a spacious dresser, a bigger table and at most three chairs are complete equipment. Give up the dresser to the patient's clothes, bedclothes, towels, table covers and so forth. Have three changes of clothes, a dressing gown a light shawl, slippers, many clean handkerchiefs. A dressing room attached is a godsend—next to it a bathroom easily reached. Lacking either, a washstand fully furnished is necessary also an alcohol or oil stove for hot water.—Harper's Household Handbook.

Selecting Men.

"Seeing" men is an art. It amounts almost to second sight. Often in a business "line" some man makes his way mysteriously and rapidly to the top or near to it. He does not seem to have greater trading ability than many others, nor has he been favored by a larger capital or a more magnetic personality. But he rises. His faculty of "seeing" men has been the magical force.

It is no trick at all to discover the man who has triumphantly made a record, who is already a personality in this trade or that. Unfortunately such a man is unfailingly costly. What he has done, moreover, is no positive guarantee as to his future exploits. Men of great reputation as lieutenants many times prove great disappointments when they shift. The chief who "sees" picks a man whose reputation is yet to be made and thereby gets the profits himself.—Harper's Weekly.

Roused the Judge.

When Judge Gaynor was on the bench in New York he had a case where the attorney for the defense was exhausting the patience of every one in asking absurd questions of a witness whose mentality was of extremely low order. He kept this up for half an hour to no purpose at all and at last explained:

"Now, of course, you don't know that the defendant here is a manufacturer?"

"Please don't address your questions to what this witness does not know," interposed Judge Gaynor. "It opens such a wide range of possibility. It is patent that if you persist in finding out what he does not know we will never finish this case. Please therefore try to find out something that he does know."

Learned by Experience.

A wolf and a fox and a lion, having banded themselves together, snared a goat and a stag and a hare. And the lion said to the wolf, "Divide these among us." The wolf said, "The goat is for thee, the stag is for me, and the hare is for the fox," and when the lion heard these words he became wroth and leaped upon the wolf and choked him. Then he said to the fox, "Do thou divide the spoil." And the fox said to him, "The goat is for thy breakfast, the hare for thy lunch and the stag for thy supper." And the lion said to him, "Whence hast thou learned to make such an equitable division?" The fox replied, "From the wolf which lieth before thee, O my lord and king."—From the Orient.

Familiar Talk.

A traveler who believed himself to be sole survivor of a shipwreck upon a cannibal isle hid for three days in terror of his life. Driven out by hunger, he discovered a thin wisp of smoke rising from a clump of bushes inland and crawled carefully to study the type of savages about it. Just as he reached the clump he heard a voice say, "Why in blazes did you play that card?" He dropped on his knees and, devoutly raising his hands, cried:

"Thank heaven they are Christians!"—Everybody's.

His Decision Stood.

"Who's chairman of the ways and means committee?" asked the boy who answers the telephone at the general bureau of information.

"My wife," answered the walking encyclopedia absentmindedly. And when he came to himself he decided not to change it.—Buffalo Express.

Would Not Be Noticed.

Applicant—Yes, madam, I wish to secure board, but I must inform you that I am a vegetarian, madam. Mrs. Slimdiet—Oh, that will be all right. You will not be expected to eat the meat. None of the others ever do.—New York Weekly.

The Hot Wind From the Desert.

"Khamsin" is the hot wind from the desert which blows out of the Sahara upon Egypt. The word means fifty, from the idea that it lasts for fifty days. The khamsin is terribly hot and dry and sometimes brings pestilence with it.

For a Starter.

"What would you advise me to do?" inquired the uncertain man.

"Well, to start with, I'd advise you to quit wasting your time asking people's advice."—Washington Star.

To be able to have the things we want, that is riches; but to be able to do without, that is power.—Macdonald.

Hoping On

They may get Sulzer out, but I'll
Attempt to still have cause to smile.

They may not capture Harry Thaw,
But I'll refuse to care a straw.

They may have rows in Mexico.
I'll try to keep on hoping, though.

They may not pass a money bill.
I'll try to cling to courage still.

Though cabinet salaries are too small,
That doesn't worry me at all.

As long as I can make ends meet
I'll try to think that life is sweet.

NEW KANSAS INSECT IS CHINCH BUG'S NEMESIS.

Parasite Found Which Destroys Wheat and Corn Field Pest.

A bug expert at the Kansas Agricultural college has discovered what entomologists long have sought—an insect which destroys chinch bugs. This insect makes a business of destroying chinch bug eggs by laying its own eggs inside those of the chinch bug. The parasite has been found in every wheat and corn field examined near Manhattan, Kansas. Of 3,101 chinch bug eggs collected between April 28 and June 10, 21 per cent were destroyed by the parasite. Of 116 eggs collected at Crawford, Kansas, 16 per cent were parasitized.

It is believed at the agricultural college that this is the first parasite on chinch bugs ever discovered. James W. McColloch, assistant entomologist, who found the new insect, sent specimens to the United States department of agriculture for identification. Reporting after an incomplete examination of the chinch bug destroyer one of the experts in that department gives it as his opinion that the new insect represents not only a new species, but also a new genus. Two hundred and seventy-five of the new parasites have been bred out at the college. The length of the life cycle has been found to vary from ten to eighteen days, depending upon climatic conditions.

The college entomologists will continue investigations of the parasite and will determine how widely it is distributed in Kansas. If it proves to be present only in certain regions, and if continued experimentation shows that it is an efficient destroyer artificial distribution throughout the state will be undertaken by the agricultural college. The new parasite is particularly promising, says G. A. Dean, state entomologist at the agricultural college, because of the high percentage of parasitism in the eggs already investigated. An insect which destroys 20 per cent of its host is very efficient. Under wider distribution it is likely that these parasites will destroy a larger per cent of chinch bugs.

TO CHRISTIANIZE GYPSIES.

Movement Afoot to Aid Europe's Million Nomads.

One million gypsies, with neither home nor country, move across Europe every year from east to west with the beginning of summer. Nowhere are they wanted, everywhere are they eyed askance, but still every year they wander, and the authorities of the countries they cross dread their coming and are relieved when they go.

There is always trouble at the frontiers. Here the wanderers are stopped, questioned and often imprisoned as vagrants. But there is nothing to do but finally let them go, and they invariably return the next year.

An effort to aid and protect these gypsies and incidentally the perplexed authorities is being made by a Swiss clergyman, H. Ecuyer. He has organized a society at Geneva, Switzerland, one of the purposes of which is to instruct the gypsies in the Christian religion, for these nomads are all pagans. The success of Mr. Ecuyer's efforts, however, is considered very uncertain.

THAT RIB STORY A FAKE?

Adam Came Long After Eve, Denver Scientist Says.

Eve came before Adam. Dr. Harvey Wiley said. Eve didn't spring from Adam's rib, and now comes Dr. Paul S. Hunter, secretary of the Colorado board of health, and goes still further to declare that Adam actually was the son of Eve.

"Eve came a long time ahead of Adam," said he recently, "ages and ages ahead of him. She was the only sex to inhabit the earth for centuries. She bred the race, just as she still does, cared for it, fed it, sheltered it and, in fact, was the whole thing in the world making business. Biology proves this absolutely and incontrovertibly.

"Adam, in point of fact, was created by Eve. Of course, man won't admit it. As he finally developed the stronger body and sufficient brute force to control things, he began to boss things and take credit for everything, even woman's creation."

Titanic Claims Now $16,804,112.23.

New claims for loss of life, personal injuries and loss of property aggregating $198,391.23, which, in accordance with a recent order made by Judge Mayer in New York city, have lately been filed in the federal district court, raised the total of the damage claims pending against the Oceanic Steam Navigation company, limited (White Star line), in consequence of the Titanic disaster, to $16,804,112.23.

such large numbers at the reception and brought his message to the people to a close by extending his well wishes to those present and his congratulations to Father Grady on his happy and loyal pastorate.

When Father Grady, the chief speaker, arose after a short presentation by Chairman Shea all in the hall stood and loudly clapped their hands. The scene was affecting, and Father Grady's eyes moistened as he received this tribute of appreciation from those among whom he has so earnestly labored.

He said he was glad to be back and after recounting the hustle and bustle at the ship before its sailing he said he recalled the stirring words of a clergyman who while bidding him farewell said "After all, Father, the pleasantest part of your trip will be the journey from Boston to West Quincy on the day of your return." And, he was right. Words of mine fail to pen the pleasures that thrilled me as I entered again my home place and I eagerly watched for familiar faces so that I could wave them a greeting of gladness.

Father Grady briefly sketched the important parts of the trip and said that the immense bouquets of flowers that banked his cabin when he sailed, the gifts of societies and friends, were by far the prettiest on board the boat. "They did not fade quickly and on Memorial Day, on the broad Atlantic ocean, they, with flowers from others on the ship were scattered on the waters in memory of the sailor dead, while the ship's band played the Star Spangled Banner. It was a solemn moment as we all thought of those at rest beneath the waves, and a prayer issued from the lips of the devout that their lot might be a happy one."

After touching on events and incidents he spoke of his entry to Rome and of the audience with the Holy Father. He said his joy knew no bounds as he stood inspired with the reverence and goodness that was depicted in his gentle countenance, and, if the newspapers correctly stated the condition of the Pontiff last spring he must have an unusual vitality, for his recovery apparently is nothing short of wonderful.

Father Grady then tripped across to the East, told of how his party decided not to invade Bulgaria, the seat of war, and then mentioned passing through the continent until he reached Ireland.

While talking about the wondrous beauties of the Emerald Isle, Father Grady wittily described scenes that were daily enacted. He spoke of the fine roads, equalled by none in the entire world, and told how he motored into the beauties of the country. He promised to fully tell the people at some future time what he wanted to tell them about Ireland, and after an hour's extemporaneous and interesting talk he thanked those who had attended, thanked them for their efforts to make the journey a happy one, for the evidence of a continuation of their past loyalty so certainly exhibited by the assistance to Father Duffy.

At the completion of the program all flocked forward to the platform and shook the hand of the returned pastor.

MRS JAMES CORBIN.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Corbin widow of James Corbin, was held this morning from her home, 17 Sumner street. Mrs. Corbin was one of the city's best known residents and was in her 80th year. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon, organist. The bearers were Hugh P. Tracy, Timothy F. Ford, Frank Whittemore and Dennis J. Ford Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

"THE REFINING OF FATHER."

Manager Wardwell of the Kincaide Theatre has secured for three days, opening next Monday afternoon, the musical farce "The Refining of Father" This is a farcial romance and tells the story how Miles Hawyard makes money in the provision business and later when they, the Hawyard family, become wealthy try and educate the old man. The daughter is sent West to a boarding school. While attending school she elopes with an ex-prize fighter. You can readily see the many opportunities that would arise from a plot of this character for good comedy business and situations that would keep an audience interested and amused.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Lovers of clean amusement are packing Quincy's pretty playhouse to the doors this week to witness the splendid show now being presented. An especially strong feature in the picture of local events of interest including the carnival and field day of St. Francis church, Braintree, and the races of the Quincy Yacht club. The Church Sisters do the daintiest dancing act seen for a long time. Paul Jappra is a slack wire artist big in ability and bodily also. Kelley and Fine are comedy entertainers who greatly please. The Four Ernestnoz have a bar and trampoline act that is inexcelled in Vaudeville. And the Photo-Plays are excellent throughout. Beginning Monday, Labor Day, Gorman's Musical Comedy will present "The Refining of Father" a jingling, jingling satirical musical farce written by Matthew Ott. Without question this is the strongest attraction ever offered hereabouts. There are Seventeen merry comedians and bewitching girls in the company, and the tuneful music, graceful dancing and many novelties they introduce will be immensely enjoyed by all. "The Refining of Father" is a wholesome laughable treat in every sense of the term.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

John Craig opened his sixth season at the Castle Square Friday evening. The house was crowded to the doors, and there was a cordial reception for all the players that make up Mr. Craig's famous stock company. The play was Dion Boucicault's brilliant comedy, "London Assurance," and it will be continued through the coming week. In the cast Miss Doris Olsson is introduced to the Boston public as Lady Gay Spanker, and she promises to become an immediate Castle Square favorite. Mr. Craig is playing the role of Charles Courtly, and with William P. Carleton as Dazzle, Donald Meek as Sir Harcourt Courtly, Florence Shirley as Grace Harkaway, and Frederic Ormonde, Carney Christie, Al Roberts and Mabel Colcord in the other parts, Mr. Craig's season is starting off very auspiciously.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

B. F. Keith's Theatre will open its regular fall and winter season on Labor Day with one of the finest array of all-star feature attractions ever arranged in one vaudeville programme. William Hawtrey, the famous English actor, whose success in "A Message From Mars" is theatrical history, will make his first Boston appearance in years in a brand new comedy written especially for him, and to be presented for the first time in this country at B. F. Keith's on Monday, September 1st. Mr. Hawtrey is one of the finest actors on the modern stage. As a high-class comedian he easily takes rank with the best in all England, and all who remember him in "A Message From Mars" will want to see the great English actor in his new playlet. He will be surrounded by a splendid company of English players. The spectacular and sensational feature of the week will be supplied by May Wirth, the greatest bareback rider that ever lived for the past two seasons the star attraction of the Barnum & Bailey Circus. Miss Wirth, who is but 17 years of age, is the only living woman who has ever turned a forward somersault on a galloping horse. She will be assisted by the Great Wirth Family of Australian equestrians. Other big features of a great show will be Jesse L. Lasky's "Three Beautiful Types of American Girl," Howard, Ratliffe & Co., "that happy combination"; Williams & Wolfus in "Almost a Pianist;" the Eight Berlin Madcaps; Valentine Vox, the European ventriloquist; Flo and Wynne, two pretty girls who sing and dance; Tuscano Brothers, sensational Roman battleaxe jugglers; and the Pathe Weekly in the world's pictured events in motion.

PREVENT TYPHOID BY USING VACCINE

Method Insures Immunity For Three Years at Least.

NO UNTOWARD RESULTS.

Health Commissioner of Baltimore Urges All Medical Men to Immunize Their Patients From Dangerous Disease—Thousands of Persons Treated Have Suffered No Harm.

Health Commissioner Gorter of Baltimore has just sent out a circular to physicians in that city urging the use of anti-typhoid virus, which is of interest to the public everywhere. According to Dr. Gorter, "within a few years about 250,000 enlisted men in the British, Japanese and United States armies and navies have been injected with this vaccine with no untoward results and with the reduction of typhoid morbidity more than 95 per cent."

Dr. Gorter recommends that "all members of a household in which there is a case of typhoid fever (save those who have had typoid fever within the past five years) be urged to submit to immunization in order to protect the other members of the family not only from the case within the household, but also from the primary source of infection."

Text of the Circular.

The circular is as follows:

"The results obtained by the use of this vaccine in reducing the usual number of cases of typhoid fever in armies and navies of various countries have been published broadcast and with these all physicians are acquainted. We wish to remind you, however, that within a few years about 250,000 enlisted men in the British, Japanese and United States armies and navies have been injected with this vaccine with no untoward results and with the reduction of typhoid morbidity more than 95 per cent.

"This vaccine is now being used as a preventive in many large cities, and it is a common practice among physicians to immunize members of families in whose household a case of typhoid fever exists. Since early in 1912 the department of health has been distributing free anti-typhoid vaccine to any citizen, provided the application is made through the family physician, because it must be administered by him. Thus far about 2,000 individuals have been immunized in Baltimore, who have suffered no harm therefrom and now are immunized against the fever for a period of not less than three years. The vaccine can be safely administered to all healthy individuals. Children particularly stand the vaccine very well. We see no reason why this vaccine should not be used as extensively and as freely as the preventive vaccine for smallpox.

"It is recommended that all members of a household in which there is a case of typhoid fever (save those who have had typoid fever within the past five years) be urged to submit to immunization in order to protect the other members of the family not only from the case within the household, but also from the primary sources of infection.

Injection Quite Harmless.

"If it should happen that one of a household is already in the incubation period of typhoid fever the injection will do no harm, and, according to the small number of such cases reported in the literature, the opinion is held that such inoculations tend to shorten the duration of the disease and to prevent the more distressing symptoms.

"Persons who are especially exposed to typhoid fever in institutions or who intend to travel or change their residence during the summer should also be urged by you to submit to anti-typhoid vaccination. Travelers and summer residents of country districts are exposed to a number of different supplies of water and milk, the source of which they know nothing, which multiplies the chances of infection, and frequently they return home with 'vacation typhoid.'

"The value of anti-typhoid vaccine as a prophylactic in avoiding and controlling epidemics you are already acquainted with, and I merely call your attention to its successful use in Maidstone, England; Dublin, Ireland; Cedar Rapids, Ia., and Memphis, Tenn. In the latter city 30,000 inhabitants, including 517 children between the ages of one and five years, were immunized during the floods of 1912, after typhoid fever had made its appearance, thereby preventing what threatened to be a widespread epidemic of fever."

PATRICK TO PRACTICE AGAIN.

Lawyer Convicted of Rice Murder Will Live In Oklahoma.

Albert T. Patrick, who spent ten years in the death cell at Sing Sing (N. Y.) prison after his conviction for the murder of William Marsh Rice, will engage in the practice of law in Tulsa, Okla. For several months Patrick has been engaged in oil field work as superintendent of the Milliken Oil company of St. Louis, of which his brother-in-law, John T. Milliken, is president.

According to Colonel Newell, secretary of the company, Patrick has made good. He is now in fine health. It is said he will specialize in oil field law.

QUEEN MARY PAYS PRINCESS' DEBTS

Five Percent Interest on $15,000 Advanced to Alexander

London, Aug. 29.—It came to Queen Mary's knowledge that her sister-in-law, Princess Alexander of Teck, was being sharply pressed by tradespeople, including her modiste, for payment of long outstanding accounts. In one instance the princess was threatened through a lawyer with proceedings.

This vexed Queen Mary greatly and she insisted on the princess giving her a list of all trade debts, afterward advancing her $15,000 to pay them up.

Princess Alexander is to repay the loan by monthly instalments of $500, plus interest of 5 percent from date.

DYNAMITE FOR FOOT REST

Milwaukee Policeman Finds He Unconsciously Took Big Chances

Milwaukee, Aug. 29.—For two days William Paulus, station keeper at the central police station, rested his feet on a neatly tied package beneath his desk. For two days he lighted his pipe and threw the matches beneath his desk. Now he says he is the luckiest of mortals.

This state of mind resulted when Paulus investigated the package and discovered that it contained 300 dynamite caps and eight pounds of dynamite.

A woman had entered the station and handed the package to an officer, saying she had found it. The officer, not wishing to spoil the appearance of the station keeper's desk, placed the package beneath it. Paulus is trying to ascertain which one of the officers was so kind and neat.

ENFORCING OLD LAW

Federal Funds For State Militia Are to Be Restricted

Washington, Aug. 29.—Federal funds are not to be used after Jan. 1 next for the organized militia of the states unless the citizen soldiery comply with the law that their organizations "shall be the same as that which is now or may hereafter be prescribed for the regular army of the United States."

This order has just been issued by the war department. The law was passed several years ago, and Secretary Garrison expresses the belief that "a sufficient time has now elapsed to enable the states more definitely to conform in organization with the regular army."

TRIES TO FORCE THAW'S RELEASE

Jerome Pays Visit to Ottawa For That Purpose

INVESTIGATION IS ORDERED

Government Will Look Into Situation at Sherbrooke—Thaw Confident of Ultimate Freedom—Secret Service Men Ready to Seize Prisoner For Immigration Officials

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 29.—The dominion government determined to take a hand in the Thaw case after Attorney Jerome had spent several hours in conference at Quebec.

Mr. Marechal, a Montreal attorney, has arrived here with a commission from the minister of justice, directing him to investigate the situation and make an immediate report. Marechal would not say what his visit may lead to. But in connection with Jerome's purpose to induce the government to force the release of Thaw, it was considered vitally significant.

Louis St. Laurent, a Thaw attorney, has gone to Quebec in an attempt to block Jerome's moves.

Thaw himself is still active with statements and telegrams. In discussing the arraignment of "Gentleman Roger" Thompson, the chauffeur who it is charged drove the car in which he escaped, Thaw said:

"We must take advantage of this chance to prove my sanity. If we prove I am sane they cannot convict Thompson. I want my lawyers to demand that the prosecution try to prove I am insane. Then we will show I am sane and the court will have to find Thompson not guilty."

Thaw is so confident of his ultimate release that he is already planning the route of his return to Pennsylvania. He expects to have his friends provide a yacht, by which he could travel down the St. Lawrence and Lake Erie to Cleveland, and from there take a train to Pittsburg.

Fourteen secret service inspectors have taken up a strict vigil about the jail where Thaw is confined. They are acting for the immigration authorities of the dominion. Their purpose is to sieze Thaw the moment he leaves the jail on any pretext, and whisk him away to the Vermont line.

This new development is taken to mean that the immigration officials have definitely taken sides with Jerome and the New York officials, who are trying to get Thaw back into the United States.

The immigration men are angered at Thaw's successful attempt to avoid seizure by them. If Thaw is allowed to leave the jail on bail, or is released, they will deport him instantly.

"If we once get hold of him," said one of the inspectors, "no sheriff, no habeas corpus writ or anything else will ever get to him. He'll be in the United States and we'll be rid of a peck of trouble in the shortest possible order."

HEARING ON PINKHAM

Opposition to His Nomination as Governor of Hawaii

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 29.—Lucius E. Pinkham, who was nominated as governor of Hawaii by President Wilson, received notification, while on a visit here, that a protest against his nomination has been filed with the senate committee on Pacific islands and Porto Rico by certain Californian and Hawaiian Democrats.

Official notification of the protest came from Senator Shafroth, chairman, who informed Pinkham that a hearing on the protest would be held at Washington next Tuesday.

Pinkham said he had known of the opposition to his confirmation, but would be able to explain it satisfactorily before the senate committee.

CHARLTON REACHES ITALY

Lawyer Says Self-Defense Will Be Plea of the Wife Slayer

Naples, Aug. 29.—Porter Charlton arrived here from America on the steamship Re d'Italia to be tried for the murder of his wife at Lake Como three years ago.

John Palmieri, formerly of Calabria, but now a lawyer of New York, says he has been retained as Charlton's counsel. He says he will plead in defense of Charlton that he was intoxicated and that he was legitimately defending himself.

BABY BURGLAR SENT HOME

Too Young to Be Admitted Into Wisconsin Reform School

Waukesha, Wis., Aug. 29.—Six-year-old Richard Tuolovsky of Racine, recently sentenced after a career of various crimes to the reform school here until he reaches his majority, was returned to his parents.

Were he two years older the industrial school could receive him, but the law makes no provision for burglarious infants.

Meteor Churns a River

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 29.—The falling of a meteor into the waters of the Seaconnet river, churning up the waters in the most novel manner, is reported from Tiverton, six miles from here. Steam arose from the water in great volume and the explosion that accompanied the fall sounded like the firing of a twelve-inch gun.

THAW'S JAILER

Boisvert Is Ready to Foil Any Attempt to Secure Freedom

© 1913, by American Press Association

Canadian authorities have taken every precaution to guard Harry Thaw while he is in jail at Sherbrooke. It was rumored that force would be used to free him. Thaw's lawyers are very hopeful now, however. Ex-Governor William A. Stone of Pennsylvania is quoted as saying, "Snow will be deep before Thaw says forewell to this city."

IS RECOGNIZED AS ACTING GOVERNOR

Glynn's Messages Accepted by New York Senate

Albany, Aug. 29.—Formal recognition of Lieutenant Governor Glynn as acting governor, pending the issue of the impeachment proceedings against Governor Sulzer, was completed by the legislature when the senate accepted three messages sent in by Glynn.

The day's proceedings in both houses were characterized by sharp denunciation of Governor Sulzer's close friend, Lynn J. Arnold, who is seeking to procure indictments for felony against Senator Wagner, Senator Frawley, Speaker Smith and Assemblyman Levy.

Levy was charged by Arnold, through his newspaper, with receiving a $5000 bribe from former State Engineer Skene for influencing legislation.

KEPT DOWN TO MINIMUM

Loss From Forest Fires This Year Is Unusually Low

Washington, Aug. 29.—The forest service declares that loss from flames among the growing timber so far this year has been kept to a minimum.

"Only two states, Masachusetts and Maine," says the report, "have thus far found it necessary, because of extra serious fire hazards, to call upon the emergency provisions of their agreement with the federal government."

The long drouths in various sections of the country, the forest service officials declare, have made this a season of unusual danger. The fact that so few disastrous fires have occurred is accepted by them as proof of the efficiency of the present fire fighting organization.

CONVENIENT PARCEL POST

Ever Increasing Mailing of Products From Farm to Table

Washington, Aug. 29.—Fruits, fresh laid eggs and other farm products are being forwarded by mail in ever-increasing quantities from the suburban producer to the urban breakfast table, according to Postmaster General Burleson.

The parcel post system, likewise, is being increasingly used for the transportation of manufactured articles, and postoffice department officials express their pleasure at the manner in which the public is taking advantage of the innovation.

KILLED BY CAT'S BITE

Philadelphia Woman and Her Son Succumb to Hydrophobia

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—John Miller, 11 years old, died last evening of hydrophobia caused by the bite of the family cat six weeks ago. His mother, who was bitten by the mad animal at the same time, died Aug. 10.

The cat attacked her when she went to the boy's aid, and her husband had to choke the animal to death.

A BOUQUET OF FLOWERS

It Told a Story Without Words

By EMILY WESTBROOK

Mrs. Van Tromp of New York was a globe trotter. She was a widow with one daughter, Madeline, who was obliged to trot with her mother, but would rather have remained at home, for Miss Madeline was a sensible girl and, although not averse to seeing foreign lands, was not minded to spend her life in circling the world.

In their wanderings the Van Tromps found themselves in Bombay, India, having done that country so far as women tourists could. Mrs. Van Tromp was much impressed with the display of wealth of the rulers and especially the jewels with which they decorated themselves, for ornaments are dear to the feminine heart. It is quite likely that if a rajah, covered from his waist up with gems, had asked for the hand of her daughter she would have given her consent instanter.

But a globe trotter cannot remain in one place or the term would be a misnomer. The Van Tromps left the city of Bombay to sail across the Arabian sea and pass through the Red and Mediterranean seas to London. Such a journey in a single vessel requires a great deal of time, and those cooped up together in her are apt before the end to become pretty well acquainted.

Mrs. Van Tromp was sitting one day on deck in a steamer chair reading an erotic novel when the wind blew her veil off her head and sent it sailing astern. It was picked up by a gentleman with a tawny, drooping mustache, who handed it to her with a profound bow. He was so distinguished looking that instead of giving him the conventional thanks that she would have accorded an ordinary person she bestowed them with her most charming smile. The gentleman assured her that she was welcome and further remarked that since the day was a trifle windy perhaps he had better find a more protected spot for her. She accepted the offer, and the gentleman removed her chair and rugs to the lee side of the wireless telegraph office, where she was more comfortable.

Now, Mrs. Van Tromp was a woman of fifty, while the gentleman could not have been much over thirty. There was therefore no impropriety in her entering into conversation with him about the weather, the ennui occasioned by so long a confinement within such narrow limits, and other small talk incidental to shipboard. The gentleman spoke with an English accent such as Mrs. Van Tromp had heard among certain swell acquaintances she had made in London. While they were chatting Miss Madeline came up breasting the wind and joined her mother.

"My daughter, Mr. ——," said Mrs. Van Tromp by way of introduction, stopping for her new found friend to supply the deficiency of his name.

"Mackridge."

"Mr. Mackridge has been kind enough to keep my veil from going overboard and to move my chair out of the wind."

The gentleman bowed, and Miss Van Tromp inclined her head in recognition. He provided her with a chair that stood near and received an invitation from her mother to occupy one himself in their company.

This was the beginning of one of those tourist acquaintances that, informally made, often ripen into strong friendships. Mr. Mackridge was especially attentive to Mrs. Van Tromp, who was especially gratified at being an object of consideration from one so much younger than herself, and she regarded it a proof that he had been brought up by some aristocratic family who had not broken away from the tradition of respect for age. This view was confirmed by Mr. Mackridge himself, who when accused of it confessed it, stating that he was the next younger brother of the Marquis of Goldingay, one of the oldest families in Ireland. He furthermore let it be known that the marquis was a bachelor and in ill health.

This was quite enough to induce Mrs. Van Tromp to lay plans for a union between Mr. Mackridge and her daughter. The mother cast off her regret that she couldn't marry Madeline to a rajah and became interested in the more practicable scheme of marrying her to a man who was likely to become a marquis. The first time after having received this information that Mr. Mackridge joined her and her daughter on deck she made an excuse to go below in order to leave them together.

Miss Van Tromp had become such a traveler that she was not averse to picking up acquaintances during a voyage, but she seldom became familiar with them. Mr. Mackridge evinced a desire for her companionship, but found as the journey proceeded that he was not permitted to come to terms of intimacy. Mrs. Van Tromp watched his attentions to her daughter and could not understand why Madeline gave no more cordial response.

"My dear," said the politic mother, "if you would be more civil to Mr. Mackridge it might be of great benefit to us. He tells me that his brother has a house in London and is usually there during the season. We may be invited there and meet many persons of rank."

"I thought his brother was a bachelor. Bachelors don't usually entertain."

"Oh, Madeline, you don't grasp things as you should. You will never take the position you should because you have no push. The fact that Mr. Mackridge's brother is a bachelor should lead you all the more to cultivate him."

"I have thought, mother, dear, that you preferred I should cultivate Mr. Mackridge himself."

Mrs. Van Tromp made a grimace, but accorded no reply to such stupidity, for she certainly considered any girl stupid who would encourage a younger brother of a marquis, even though the marquis himself was in bad health.

During the passage of the Red sea Mr. Mackridge continued his attentions, and Mrs. Van Tromp was pleased that Madeline seemed more disposed to accept them. This acceptance could not be construed to mean encouragement, but Mrs. Van Tromp felt more hopeful, and Mr. Mackridge took advantage of it to be more attentive He gained a point with Mrs. Van Tromp by letting out the fact that he was a captain in a British regiment stationed in India, all the officers of which were noblemen. He had procured a leave of absence to go home, having been informed that his brother, the marquis, was failing rapidly.

After receiving this additional information Mrs. Van Tromp conceived the idea of going ashore in Captain Mackridge's company on the ship's arrival at Gibraltar. He, being a British officer, would doubtless be hand in glove with the officers of the garrison and would be able to secure for the Van Tromps special privileges. She hinted to Mackridge that she would be pleased to have him with her and her daughter when they visited Gibraltar, and he accepted the invitation with alacrity. But when they reached the port the captain was confined to his stateroom with a severe indisposition and was unable to leave the ship.

All went well with the trio who were performing this little comedy during the latter part of the voyage. Just before leaving the steamer Captain Mackridge managed to obtain a large bouquet of flowers. Whether he bought them from a bumboat or they had been cultivated aboard the ship does not matter. The important feature is that he presented them to Miss Van Tromp. The gift was made while the mother and daughter, accompanied by the captain, were about to pass down the gangway. The young lady inhaled their perfume and started down for the dock with them in her left hand, carrying a piece of hand baggage in her right. On reaching the dock she suddenly remembered leaving some article in her stateroom.

"Please take these," she said to Mackridge, handing him the hand baggage and her bouquet, "and keep them till I return. I'll be back in a few minutes."

Mackridge took the articles, a certain whiteness appearing about his mouth and an anxiety in his eyes as he did so. Miss Van Tromp ran up the gangway, passing with difficulty those coming down, and disappeared within the ship. A customs inspector, who was watching for smugglers, noticed a gentleman standing with a large bouquet in his hand and pondered. Had a lady been carrying it his attention might not have been attracted. Suspicious as all custom house officials are, he thought it odd that a man should be carrying flowers, and possibly it might be used as a means of concealing dutiable goods.

"I'll look into that, sir, if you please," he said to Mackridge.

The whiteness about the latter's mouth turned to a sickly pallor as the inspector took the bouquet from his hands. Pulling it apart, several articles wrapped in white tissue paper fell on the dock. The inspector picked them up, unwrapped one and a large diamond glistened in the sunlight.

"Where's Captain Mackridge?" she asked.

"Gone under arrest for smuggling." And she recounted the discovery of the jewels.

"And all he wanted of me," said Madeline, "was to carry the bouquet ashore for him. I suspected something of the kind and turned it back into his hands on purpose."

CHAPTER X.
The Disconsolate Freddie.

SHE left him standing there in the street. With well practiced tact he darted into a tobacconist's shop.

"Another shakedown," he reflected ruefully. "They're all passing me up today; but, great hooks! What's all this about Medcroft and Constance?" He bought some cigarettes and started off for a walk, mildly excited by this new turn of affairs. It occurred to him as he turned it over in his mind that Mrs. Medcroft was amazingly resigned to the situation. Of course she was not blind to her husband's infatuation for her sister. Therefore if she were so cheerful and indifferent about it it followed that she was not especially distressed. In fact, it suddenly dawned upon him she was not only reconciled, but relieved. She had ceased to love her husband! She could be a free lance in Love's lists, notwithstanding the inconvenience of a legal attachment. "She's ripping, too," concluded Freddie, with a certain buoyancy of spirit. "If she doesn't love Medcroft she at least ought to love some one else instead. It's customary, I wonder"— Here he reflected deeply for an instant, his spirits floating high. Then he turned abruptly and made his way to the Tirol.

It came to pass in the course of the evening that Mr. Ulstervelt, supremely confident from the effect of past achievements, drew the unsuspecting Mrs. Medcroft into a secluded tete-a-tete. It is not of record that he was ever a diplomatic wooer. One in haste never is. Suffice it to say Mrs. Medcroft, her cheeks flaming, her eyes wide with indignation, suddenly left the side of the indomitable Freddie and joined the party at the other end of the entresol, but not before she had said to him with unmistakable clearness and decision:

"You little wretch! How dare you say such silly things to me!"

The rebuff decisive! And he had only meant to be comforting, not to say self sacrificing. He'd be hanged if he could understand women nowadays, not these women at least. In high dudgeon, he stalked from the room. In the door he met Brock.

"For two cents," he declared savagely, as if Brock were to blame, "I'd take the next train for Paris."

Brock watched him down the hall He drew a handful of small coins from his pocket, ruefully looking them over "Two cents," he said. "Hang it all, I've nothing there but pfennigs and hellers and centimes."

In the course of his wanderings the disconsolate Freddie came upon Mrs. Odell-Carney and pudgy Mr. Rodney. They were sitting in a quiet corner of the reading room. Mr. Rodney had had a hard day. He had climbed a mountain—or, more accurately speaking, he had climbed halfway up and then the same half down. He was very tired. Freddie observed from his lonely station that Mr. Rodney was fast dropping to sleep, notwithstanding his companion's rapid flow of small talk. It did not take Freddie long to decide. He was an outcast and a pariah and he was very lonely. He must have some one to talk to. Without more ado he bore down upon the couple and a moment later was tactfully advising the sleepy Mr. Rodney to take himself off to bed—advice which that gentleman gladly accepted. And so it came about that Freddie sat face to face with the last resort, at the foot of the chaise-longue, gazing with serene adulation into the eyes of a woman who might have had a son as old as he—if she had had one at all. She had been a coquette in her salad days—there was no doubt of it. She had encountered fervid gallants in all parts of the world and in all stations of life. But it remained for the gallant Freddie Ulstervelt to bowl her over with surprise for the first time in her long and varied career. At the end of half an hour she pulled herself together and tapped him on the shoulder with her fan, a quizzical smile on her lips.

"My dear Mr. Ulstervelt, are you trying to make love to me? You nice Americans! How gallant you can be! I am quite old enough to be your mother. Believe me, I thank you for the compliment. I can't tell you how I appreciate this delicate flattery. You are very delicious. But," as she arose graciously, "I'd follow Mr. Rodney's example if I were you. I'd go to bed." Then, with a rare smile, which could not have been more chilling, she left him standing there.

"By Jove!" he muttered, passing his hand across his eyes as if bewildered. "What was I saying to her? Good Lord, has it got to be a habit with me? Was I making love to—her?" He departed for the American bar.

Mrs. Rodney had but little sleep that night. She went to bed in a state of worry and uncertainty, oppressed by the shadows which threatened eternal darkness to the fair name of the family, however distantly removed. Katherine's secret had in reality been news to her; she had not paid enough attention to the Medcrofts to notice anything that they did, so long as they did not do it in conjunction with the Odell-Carneys. The Odell-Carneys were her horizon—morning, noon and night. And now there was likelihood of that glorious horizon being obscured by a sickening scandal in the vulgar foreground. Inspired by Katherine's dreadful conclusions, the excellent lady set about to observe for herself. During the entire evening she flitted about the hotel and grounds with all the snooping instincts of a Sherlock Holmes. She lurked, if that is not putting it too theatrically. From unexpected nooks she emerged to view the landscape o'er; by devious paths she led her doubts to the gates of absolute certainty and then sat down to shudder to her heart's content It was all true! For four hours she had been trying to get to the spot where she could see with her own eyes and at last she had come to it. Of course she had to admit to herself that she did not actually hear Mr. Medcroft tell Constance that he loved her, but it was enough for her that he sat with her in the semi-darkness for two unbroken hours, speaking in tones so low that they might just as well have been whispering so far as her taut ears were concerned.

Moreover, other persons than herself had smilingly nudged each other and referred to the couple as lovers; no one seemed to doubt it, nor to resent it, which is proof that the world loves a lover when it recognizes him as one.

Mrs. Rodney also discovered that Mrs. Medcroft went to her room at 9 o'clock, at least three hours before the subdued tete-a-tete came to an end. The poor thing doubtless was crying her eyes out, decided Mrs. Rodney.

And now, after all this, is it to be considered surprising that the distressed mother of Katherine did not sleep well that night? Nor should her wakefulness be laid at the door of the tired Mr. Rodney, who was ever a firm and stentorian sleeper.

CHILDREN ON OUTING

Mrs. John R. Richards Entertains About Forty

Fortunate are the children who live in the neighborhood of Mrs. John R. Richards for on Thursday about forty were her guests and enjoyed an outing at Nantasket. The trip was made in automobiles leaving Quincy about 9 A. M. At the beach the children enjoyed the surf and sand. After lunch they visited Paragon park and were in time to see the balloon ascension. Those who kindly loaned their cars for the trip were: Dr. N. S. Hunting, Walter Deacon, W. G. Spargo, Benjamin Bishop, Miss Hulda Johnson and John R. Richards. Mrs. Richards was assisted by Mrs. Fannie Bruce, Miss Hulda Johnson, Miss Frances Burke, Alfred Hanson and J. Harold Richards. On the return Mrs. Richards was agreeably surprised by the mothers, who presented her a handsome bouquet.

LED DANCE WITH MAYOR.

The Around the Town man of the Globe says:

Mayor Larabee of Bath, who is a long-time acquaintance of Mayor Fitzgerald, is no less a social favorite, although his specialty is dancing rather than singing. At the Southport Casino the other night Mayor Larrabee welcomed a number of people from Boston, with whom he tripped the light fantastic. The party from Boston and vicinity included Miss Edna Thomas of Wollaston and she and the Mayor led the grand march.

DISTRICT COURT.

John Lavine, charged with larceny at Milton, withdrew his plea of not guilty this morning and entered a plea of nolo. His case was continued until Sept. 6.

John Moody and Percy Ryan pleaded nolo for violation of their permit to dig clams at Houghs Neck. Placed on file on payment of costs. John Medios, pleaded nolo to a similar offense and his case was continued to Aug. 30.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DENIES NEPOTISM

Poindexter Says He Secured Position For Only One Relative

Washington, Aug. 29.—Senator Poindexter of Washington read to the senate a formal denial of the charges, made by a Seattle newspaper, that he had secured government positions for eleven relatives. He declared the article in question constituted criminal libel.

Only one of the charges was true, Poindexter stated, namely, he had secured a job for his brother in the folding room of the senate. As to the others, he said several of the individuals mentioned were entire strangers to him.

Lieutenant Fielding Poindexter, the senator said, entered military service before Senator Poindexter came to Washington. Gale Poindexter, the senator's son, received his Annapolis appointment through his congressional representative in congress.

MELLEN WILL STAY WITH NEW HAVEN

His Knowledge of New England Conditions Is Valuable

New Haven, Aug. 29.—Charles S. Mellen will not leave the service of the New Haven road on Aug. 31, but will remain in an advisory capacity for several years at a salary which is small in comparison to that paid to him as president. His present salary is said to be $60,000.

In spite of all that had been said of Mellen's management it was argued by some directors that it would be a mistake to allow him to go and lose his services at a time when they might be needed.

The plan is that President-to-be Elliott will make use of Mellen's knowledge of the New England railroad situation in the constructive work of building up the road into a paying proposition.

WON'T BE ABNORMAL

Prices of Wheat and Potatoes Are Not Likely to Rise

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Leading commission men and grain dealers scoff at the prediction of the Orange Judd Farmer, a farm paper, that dollar wheat, corn and potatoes are in sight for the winter, and that prices of other farm products are to be boosted.

Chicago is the corn, wheat and potato centre of the United States. A leading commission merchant says:

"I'm willing to gamble that potatoes will be lower than they are right now—60 to 65 cents—before the snow flies."

September wheat is quoted at 86⅞ cents, and assuming that crop conditions the world over remain the same as at present, there will be no marked advance, according to grain merchants.

"HAS TOO MUCH MONEY"

Famous Painter Jilts Widow With Income of $10,000 a Year

Vienna, Aug. 29.—Because of circumstances which bear a close relation to the plot of "The Merry Widow," the projected marriage of Mrs. Gustave Mahler, widow of the composer, who was formerly conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra, and the famous painter, Kokoschka, has been broken off. Kokoschka says in explanation:

"I have just learned that Mrs. Mahler has an income of $10,000 a year from the estate of her late husband. I think this is too much, so I won't marry her."

WILL BE A FARMER

Pedestrian Weston Intends to Settle Down In Minnesota

Minneapolis, Aug. 29.—Edward P Weston, after a lifetime of walking on many famous trips, will become a Minnesota farmer.

Returning from a trip to the Lake of the Woods he announced he had purchased a farm five miles from Warren, in Roseau county, and that next spring he would take up his residence there.

Marksman Accidentally Killed

Camp Perry, O., Aug. 29.—Francis C. Ballon, a Peruvian, was killed when a rifle in the hands of Juan E. Zegarra was accidentally discharged. This is the first fatal accident that has occurred at the shooting matches held on the Camp Perry ranges.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Ernest Lindberg of Elm street is enjoying a vacation visiting friends at New York City, Rhode Island and Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. James McNamara are the parents of a daughter, born Thursday afternoon. Mr. McNamara is a member of the police force and is at present assigned to the West Quincy beat.

Deputy Game Warden Eribou served summonses on three men Thursday for violations of the conditions of their permit to dig clams on the Houghs Neck shores. They were arraigned before Judge Avery this morning.

Tupper Miller is still confined to the house as the result of injuries received at the Boston Arena. He was at the top of a derrick being used in shipping granite when the derrick fell. Mr. Miller's arm was jammed and bruised.

DOG QUARANTINE.

Unless owners in all parts of the city rigidly quarantine their dogs Quincy may face an epidemic of rabies. This became known this morning when it was reported to the police that the dog shot by Capt. Daniel R. McKay in South Quincy on Thursday had a fully developed case of rabies.

The report confirmed the suspicions of Dr. Souther of Milton, the veterinary, who was called because of the absence of Dr. Abele from Quincy, and who took the head to the Harvard Labatories for examination.

The poilce will enforce all recommendations for the restraint of dogs in the territory covered by the crazed St. Bernard which ran amuck from South Quincy to Dorchster three weeks ago, biting persons and other dogs. It is definitely known that the dog shot Thursday was bitten by this dog when he started on his mad career.

CASE CONTINUED.

The continued case of Charles F. Tirrell, charged with a serious offense at Braintree was heard this morning by Judge Avery and continued until March 26, 1914. Tirrell was the flag man at the Union street crossing, Braintree, where the police allege the offense was committed. Sureties of $300, furnished after the first hearing, were allowed to stand.

INDIAN MEAL TIMES.

In the colonial times there was but little of either fresh meat or wheat flour, the chief food being Indian meal.

Benjamin Russell, the veteran Boston printer, who walked from Boston to New York to buy material for his press, says that he was freely entertained by the farmers along the route, but that the only food he saw was sappawn and milk, or "Hasty pudding," as it is often called.

Joel Barlow wrote a poem on this simple but substantial diet, which he apostrophizes thus:

"My father loved thee his length of days,
For thee his friends were shaded o'er with maze.
Thy constellation ruled my natal morn
And all my bones were made of Indian corn."

We do not expect the present generation to follow the poet's example, but it would certainly be well if more of such food were in use. One of the oldest and most prominent clergyman in New York has declared:

"I count it one of my advantages that most of my boyhood was passed in a place where either johnny cake or "rye and Indian" was the only bread, and where fresh meat was rarely seen. General good health was one of the results, and both men and women did hard work on this simple mode of life."

When your food is simple and natural in kind and quality and mode of preparation, there is little danger of eating too much. Simplicity of food is a condition of health, and promotes longevity.

The quantity of food which enables a man to do his daily work without loss of weight is precisely what he requires. He supplies the daily waste—no more and no less.

After all, what is better than a sound stomach and serene spirit.

BOLD HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Frank Cardoni Held Up by Three Men

Three men, with caps drawn so that their faces were hidden, held up Frank Cardoni of Filbert street at 10.30 Thursday night and at the point of a revolver forcibly robbed him of a gold watch and $25 in bills. The robbery took place on Cemetery road which runs throug the St. Mary's cemetery. ,

Cardoni, whose home is in Lawrence came here two days ago. He is employed as a driver by Rouleau Bros., who conduct an oil and express business. Most of the money taken had been collected during the day.

Cardoni was on his way home when the men sprang out of- the shadows and demanded his money. He objected and they grabbed him and pointed the revolver in his face. He continued to struggle but was soon relieved of his valuables.

The spot where the hold up occurred is but a short distance from Reardon street and the Furnace Brook Parkway. The latter is constantly patroled by Metropolitan officers. Cardoni was able to furnish but a meagre description of his assailants.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK.

A man at a country fair saw a jockey and a doctor haggling dreadfully over the sale of a mare. It interested him to see two such tricky and shrewd characters opposed, and at the end of the sale he approached the jockey and asked him how he had made out.

"I sold her," said the jockey, and he held up a $5 note.

"But, is that all you got for her?" asked the man.

"It 's enough," was the reply, "she's dead lame."

Chuckling, the man sought out the horse doctor and said:

"See here, friend, do you know you have given $5 for a hopelessly lame mare?"

The horse doctor wagged his thin, gray beard and retorted:

"Lame she is, I grant you. But not hopelessly lame. In fact, she is as sound as a dollar. She's badly shod, that's all's the matter with her. I saw it at a glance."

The man whistled at this news, and went back to the jockey and told him what the doctor said.

But the jockey only smiled and explained:

"That mare is as lame as a duck. I had her shod badly on purpose to take some easy-mark in."

At this the man laughed, and hurrying back to the horse doctor again, he said:

"My dear sir, with all your cunning, the jockey has proved too much for you. The mare is incurably lame. He had her shod badly on purpose to take you in."

On receipt of this news the old horse doctor shook his head gravely, and retorted:

"Well, anyway, it was a counterfeit $5 note I gave him.

—There is no getting away from this fact: If we eat the veal we can't have the beef. Moreover, veal is a luxury and beef is a necessity. If we insist on trading the ncessities of life for its luxuries we must expect to pay the penalty. Veal isn't good eating anyway. It is hard to digest and lacks the nutritive qualities of mature meat. Besides most of the calves are killed too young. As long as the consumers demand veal, though, the butchers feel compelled to supply it. There must, it seems to us be a campaign against his form of extravagance and the command against veal must come from the public in the shape of abstinence from this kind of flesh. Three years of such a program would make a vast difference in the beef supply of this country.—Haverhill.

While the metropolitan papers were teeming with big head lines from "Albany" (N. Y.) about Sulzer and Thaw, the Maine papers had their own private sensations from "Albany" (Me.) Here is one in Wednesday's Portland Express: "David Jordan has traded cows with Austin Hutchinson." And here's another equally exciting: "Will Newcomb is cutting bushes on Mrs. Kate Grover's farm."—Salem News.

CHILDREN INTERESTED

Exhibit and Prizes for Flowers and Vegetables

An exhibition of flowers and vegetables from children's gardens was held at the Quincy Women's club Friday afternoon, under direction of the Civics committee, Mrs. Kitson, chairman.

Early in the spring Mrs. John Mackay of this Committee took orders for and distributed more than $105 worth of seeds at one cent per package. More than nine hundred children bought seeds and started kardens.

The club bought the seeds of Miss Edna Thayer of Worcester, who, on account of ill health was obliged to give up teaching. The arrangement therefore was of mutual benefit to the club and Miss Thayer.

During the summer, Miss Anna Holmes Ruggles, Mrs. Kitson, Mrs. Charles R. Safford, Miss Mary Hinkley, Miss Harriet Pierce and Mrs. George S. Bass visited and inspected the gardens. Miss Ruggles visited over four hundred gardens.

On the afternoon of the exhibition red, blue, green and yellow ribbons signifying first, second, third and special prizes were awarded for excellence of flowers and vegtables exhibited. The judges were William Patterson, James Nichols and Charles Anderson.

Later, prizes of money, garden tools and books will be awarded to those children who had the best kept gardens.

This exhibition has been entered in the Horticultural exhibition of Children's Gardens of the State of Massachusetts and will be a part of that exhibition in Boston, today, Aug. 30:

Prizes were awarded as follows:

SENT TO THE FULL BENCH

Mrs. Phillips Asks for Writ of Mandamus on License

Justice John C. Hammond of the Supreme court, sitting in equity in Boston, on Friday, heard the petition of Mrs. Ella C. Phillips of South Quincy for a writ of mandamus compelling the Board of Health to grant her a license to practice as a masseuse. With the consent of both parties he referred the matter to the full bench, which has never passed on Chapter 443 of the Acts of 1911, as amended by Chapter 155 of the Acts of 1912 under which action was taken.

On June 5, Mrs. Phillips applied to the Board of Health to practice massage and chiro-practice healing. After an investigation the board decided to grant a license as a masseuse with the condition attached that she should not practice on the same premises where she practiced as a masseuse any other form of healing. She declined to accept the license on the conditions claiming that it was unconstitutional and derogatory to her rights.

Mrs. Phillips brought a petition for a writ of madamus against the board compelling them to grant a permit without any conditions attached. She was represented by John C. Johnston of Boston. John W. McAnarney, city solicitor, represented the Board of Health.

Mrs. Phillips testified to her qualifications for massage work and claimed the right to have the license granted as she wished it.

Evidence was introduced as to her qualifications and Dr. Fred E. Jones of the board testified to the reasons why the board felt it to be its duty to attach the conditions.

At the conclusion of the evidence Judge Hammond said he would find that the board acted in good faith after investigation in attaching the condition to the permit it was willing to grant her. He was ready to give a decision if both sides desired it but they agreed to a reference to the full bench.

The petitioner claims that the statutes did not vest the authority in the board to impose any such condition, and raised the question as to her constitutional rights. Judge Hammond thought it would be satisfactory to all concerned to have the full bench render a final and formal decision on the questions. The case will be submitted on briefs to the full bench in the coming October term.

City Solicitor McAnarney, when interviewed this morning said that he had not the slightest doubt but what the board was within its rights in treating the petition in the manner it did, and there is no question but what the Supreme court will deny her petition for the writ of mandamus.

The Board of Health is not at all disturbed over the outcome of the case.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

A new announcement of services is required each week. No notices accepted to run indefinitely. When possible the subject of sermon should be given, also special services. Generous space will be given in the news columns for church news, music and week day gatherings.

SPORTS AT HOLBROOK.

An athletic meet will be held at Holbrook on Labor Day, beginning at 10 A. M. with base ball, pigeon shoot, basket ball and tennis. In the afternoon there will be track and field sports. The All Stars of Quincy are entered in the relay race, Frank Bruce in the five-mile run and Joseph Phelan and Fred Kingsbury in other events.

TOWN RIVER ILLUMINATION

Pretty Scene Near Yacht Club Houses -- The Prizes

Guests swarmed over the piers and verandas of the Town River Yacht club last evening to witness the annual illumination, and while the committee postponed the fleet review because of rain until Labor Day night they appeared to be happy and contented with the opportunity for dancing and partaking of refreshments.

Threatening weather throughout the day caused many to abandon their plans for house illumination, but a general indication of clear weather about 6 o'clock resulted in nearly all of the residents near the club stringing their lanterns and bunting.

A brilliant glow hung over each house as the reflections penetrated the mists that blew inshore about 9 o'clock, and approximately 500 were entertained at the open houses throughout the district.

The principal guests of the evening were Commodore and Mrs. Thompson B. Crane, and the committee in charge was: George Jaques, George Szibinski, W. C. Luther, W. C. Newcomb and James Matheson of the house committee, and Charles C. Foster, William Caldwell, William Irwin, William Kemp and W. C. Luther of the regatta committee.

The first prize for the best illuminated house was awarded to A. N. Varney of Edison Park whose home was hung with Japanese lanterns and clusters of electric lights.

The second prize was given to Erhard Schlenker of Edison street, whose neat arrangement was very niviting. The approaches to the clubhouse seemed to be veritable midways because of the general illumination and it was with difficulty that the committee chose the winners.

Dancing was enjoyed in the clubhouse which was decorated with colored stringers of electric lights and bunting. Music was by Brook's orchestra. It was midnight before the revelries closed.

QUINCY EXHIBIT IS WANTED

Manufacturers Invited to Meet Exposition Chief

The Board of Panama-Pacific Mgrs. of Massachusetts invite manufacturers of Quincy to meet Charles R. Green, chief of the division of Manufacturers of the International Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915 at their Boston office on Tuesday morning next, Sept. 2.

He is particularly anxious to meet all representatives of manufacturing concerns, which are considering exhibits at the exposition. He hopes to hear from the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, the granite manufacturers, the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., and other industries which make Quincy famous.

Mr. Green is in charge of the exhibition of manufacturers and has formulated the rules governing the department, so that he is thoroughly equipped and disposed to impart all needful information to prospective exhibitors.

Mayor Stone and Water Front Commissioner Crane hope that Quincy will be represented among the exhibitors.

WHIST PARTIES.

Three matinee whist parties will be held the coming week. Tuesday afternoon, the amusement committee of the George L. Gill club, Mrs. Kate Prout, chairman, hold one in Odd Fellows hall, Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Fannie Grignon of Bradford street will give one under the auspices of the Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corps, and Thursday one will be held in Electo hall by Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, Mrs. Sarah Williams, chairman.

SPORTS AT FORT POINT.

The Fort Point A. A. will hold a field day on Labor Day. The events begin at 10 A. M. with race for Hingham yachts and power boats. Water sports will take place at 11 A. M. and land sports at 2.30 P. M.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Next Monday, Sept. 1, is Labor Day, and will be generally observed as a holiday. There will be no issue of the Daily Ledger that day. As Tuesday is a busy day, new advertisements and news items should reach the office early.

Dayton, Ohio, is to have a city manager. Grave fears are entertained that he will ruin the city by running it as a business proposition.

If the motorist can figure one chance in two of getting across in front of a fast train, he should take the risk, or his record for the run will be spoiled.

It is claimed there isn't room in the White House for that bust of William Pitt, but probably a place could be found for it in the woodshed.

Now that the corn crop is going to be larger than was expected and everyone will have his johnny cake as usual, the stockmarket bears feel pretty gloomy.

Thaw's attorneys seem to be getting some valuable points on law from the versatile Harry.

LABOR DAY.

The first Monday in September was originally made a holiday on the initiative of the trade unions, to promote public discussion of the labor problem.

As the thing has worked, for every one who hears such discussion, there are hundreds or thousands who simply throw off the harness of toil and kick up their heels.

To be sure there are the Labor Day parades, and the sight of solid phalanxes of carpenters or mill operatives is interesting as a study of human types, and gives themselves and their friends great gratification, from the good appearance made by the American workingman when on show. But the men thus on parade look so substantial and happy that it does not constitute an effective argument for the wrongs of labor.

But anyway, a holiday is needed at this time of year. The worker is exhausted by the heat of summer, and any pretext that takes him out into air and sunlight is good.

THE COST AT COLLEGE.

There exists a comfortable sort of feeling that any wide awake boy or girl can go through the best colleges. If his parents can't sign the checks, he can earn his way.

A great many parents who have young folks to go to college this fall do not find the problem so easy. The thing they are up against is suggested in a report just made, giving carefully prepared statistics of student expenses at Williams college. The figures show that the average cost per student in 1887 was $682, while now it is $927. It is said that Cornell University average student costs have increased 50 per cent, and many other colleges even more.

A certain student known to the writer takes care of a furnace, visiting it five times a day. He waits on table, and serves as assistant in a library two hours per day. His class room work takes three hours a day. He has to study at night, and averages four hours sleep. He is reported as "hollow-eyed." Such grit is admirable. But these rigors are unwholesome, and threaten a student's health.

Heavy expenses are by no means necessary. The University of Missouri, which has made a study of student costs, has a dining club that cuts board to $2.40 weekly. Good and attractive food is presented. Anyone can take that course very comfortably on $300 to $400.

College eating and dormitory systems are favored by many. A boy of moderate means should be able to take a four years' course in the best colleges in a comfortable way for $500 a year. There is a great field of popularity for a college in which the faculty shall work positively for more simple living. It would attract men of scholarship who will make their mark in after life, and will draw many promising athletes who will give it immediate prestige.

Contends He Would Be Most Acceptable Leader Under Present Conditions—Hale Returning to Washington With Notes Exchanged In Negotiations—Lind In Vera Cruz

Vera Cruz., Mex., Aug. 30.—William B. Hale, who, under instructions from the state department at Washington, has been helping John Lind in negotiations with the provisional government of Mexico, embarked on the steamship Moro Castle on his way to Washington to lay the situation before President Wilson.

Hale said the most discussed point of President Wilson's proposals to General Huerta was the one eliminating the provisional president from being a candidate in the presidential contest this fall.

Huerta contends, Hale said, that although the constitution apparently prohibits a provisional president from succeeding himself in office, he can resign and be a candidate. He further contends that he would be the most acceptable leader under the present conditions.

Hale carries with him to Washington all the notes which have been exchanged in the negotiations, including Lind's personal suggestions for the consideration of President Wilson.

Hale gave the impression that negotiations were continuing satisfactorily, but said it was hard to see how the Huerta government could afford to go against the unanimous view of the country and press that he should not allow outside interference.

Lind has decided to make his headquarters here because he is in easier and more reliable communication with Washington than when at Mexico City.

When Huerta's latest note, expressing a desire for renewed negotiations and the possible acceptance of the American proposals, was brought here by a messenger, Lind undertook to conduct further negotiations from Vera Cruz, preferring direct cable and wireless communication with the United States rather than land wires and Mexican operators.

Huerta notified Lind that his government is willing to resume the conferences and that he is disposed to accept, at least in a large part, President Wilson's proposals, for the sake of bringing about internal peace and recognization from the United States.

The nervous tension of the natives was shown when those on the waterfront were thrown into consternation by a report that many war vessels, looking like American ships, had been seen without the harbor. A pilot reported the ships, saying they had disappeared again when they received wireless instructions from Admiral Fletcher aboard the Louisiana.

SITUATION MORE HOPEFUL

President Leaves For Cornish After Hearing Encouraging News

Washington, Aug. 30.—President Wilson left Washington last evening for the summer capital at Cornish, N. H., still hopeful of a favorable culmination of the negotiations undertaken by this country to bring about peace in Mexico.

Although no affirmative action on either side had been reported up to the time of the president's departure, encouraging dispatches were received from Nelson O'Shaughnessy, in charge of the American embassy at Mexico City, bearing on the general situation. These reached the president a few hours before train time and led him to determine upon a short rest over Labor day.

Reports to the state department tell of the exodus of Americans from Mexico. From Tampico came news of large numbers gathering from San Luis Potosi and adjacent states.

Consul Letcher at Chihuahua reported that a train left that city bound for El Paso, carrying fifty-four men, twenty-eight women and seventeen children, all Americans.

Many American refugees are arriving at Vera Cruz. Some are appealing to Consul Canada for aid. Some families of means have arrived and a great influx is expected there during the next few days.

WEDDING POSTPONED

Groom-to-Be Locked Up on Forgery Charge Involving $20,000

New York, Aug. 30.—The wedding of Robert G. Norton, a real estate dealer of Savannah, Ga., and Miss Edna Robinson of Brooklyn, set for today, has been postponed by the action of the police.

Norton, arrested at the home of his fiance, is in a cell. He was arrested upon telegraphic request of the chief of the Savannah police, who said that he was wanted in Savannah to answer a charge of forgery involving $20,000.

Disaster Feared at Messina

Messina, Sicily, Aug. 30.—The seismic instruments here have registered during the past twenty-four hours continued earth disturbances. The populace fears that these conditions foretell a fresh disaster.

STRIKERS STORM FACTORY

Wreck a Room After Attacking Proprietors and Stenographer

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—Striking cloak makers stormed the factory of Singer Brothers, on the fourth floor of a building in the wholesale district, attacking two members of the firm who attempted to keep them from entering and choking a young woman stenographer who was telephoning to the police for assistance.

Windows were broken, machinery damaged and furniture strewn about the room when a squad of police arrived.

Three men who are alleged to have been members of the attacking party were arrested and held in $1200 bail each for a further hearing. Three others were so badly injured when the police charged the strikers that they had to be removed to a hospital.

POLITICAL FIGHTS IN FOUR DISTRICTS

Congressional Committee Plans For Fall Campaigns

Washington, Aug. 30.—The Republican congressional committee organized and outlined its general plans for the coming campaigns. Representative Woods of Iowa, who is regarded as a Republican-Progressive, was elected chairman.

Attention will be given at once to the pending contests in the Third Maine, Twentieth New York, First West Virginia and Third Maryland congressional districts.

The committee is preparing, too, for the first time in its history, to take part in a senatorial election—in Maryland, where a successor is about to be elected to succeed Senator Jackson. Next year there will be thirty-one United States senators elected in the various states.

AT SALARY OF $30,000

SAW WHITE ESKIMOS FIRST

Trappers Claim Credit Which Has Been Given to Stefansson

Edmonton, Alberta, Aug. 30.—Three Fort Simpson trappers, G. L. Deschamault and Joseph and William Hudson, who have just returned from a long journey to the far north, deny the claim of Viljhalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, that he is the discoverer of the tribe of blonde Eskimos.

They declare that in penetrating the wilds of the far north with an Eskimo guide, they heard stories of a strange tribe and that, guided to the camp, they found Eskimos whiter than the white men who have spent years in the cold and winds of the far north. They say they spent three weeks with the tribe, which numbered 300, and obtained many valuable skins.

When Stefansson arrived, they declare, they were already there and the members of the tribe thn told of the members of the tribe then told of themselves on the shores of the Arctic.

JUGULAR VEIN SEVERED

Eye of Murder Victim Also Gouged Out by Assailants

Unionville, Conn., Aug. 30.—With the throat so deeply slashed that the jugular vein was severed, the left eye gouged out by a boot heel, a deep stab in the breast and a bullet through the heart, the body of a young, well dressed man, who is thus far unidentified, was discovered in a lot in the northern part of this village.

The local authorities, co-operating with the state police and detectives, have not been able to pick up the slightest clue to the murderers, who are believed to have been three in number. A straw hat near the body bears an address on Boylston street, Boston.

Medical Examiner Ripley says death was caused by the gash in the man's throat.

TO MEET JOHNSON FOR WORLD'S TITLE

Langford, Boston Negro Heavyweight, Will Fight In Paris

Boston, Aug. 30.—Sam Langford, the Boston negro heavyweight, has been matched to clash with Jack Johnson in a bout for the heavyweight championship of the world. The contest will be staged in Paris in December. Final arangements for the match were closed by cable.

Langford has been seeking a match with Johnson for many years, but he has been unable to get the Galveston man to meet him. Johnson is now in need of funds and it is believed that this is the chief reason why he consents to battle with Langford.

DENIAL OF HYPNOTISM

Court Withholds Decision In Trial of Pentacostal Disciples

South Framingham, Mass., Aug. 30.—Though she admitted having told patients to "clap their hands, make a joyful noise, give up their minds and not let reason get the better of them," Mrs. M. B. Woodworth-Etter, principal defendant of the three leaders of the Pentacostal Disciples charged with obtaining money through false representation that they can cure physical ills, denied in court that hypnotism had any part in the alleged healing performed at the disciples' meetings in Montwait.

Judge Kingsbury reserved his decision until Tuesday. In the meantime the Pentacostal meetings will continue at Montwait.

TREASURY GIVES WARNING

Dangerous Counterfeit $20 Gold Certificate Is In Circulation

Washington, Aug. 30.—A dangerous $20 gold certificate is the subject of a special warning issued by the treasury department.

That the new issue of "queer" money is probably being turned out by the same band which operated a short time ago is indicated by the fact that the latest issue is identical with the first note except that the check letter has been changed from "D" to "C" and the number from 40 to 132.

Notice of the existence of the counterfeit has been sent broadcast by the department.

SPANISH CONSUL KILLED

Wife Also Perishes In Their Apartments In New York

New York, Aug. 30.—Thousands of curios, gathered in many lands and stacked high in the apartments of Hipolito Uriarte, for fifty years a Spanish consul, fed a fire kindled in lighting a cigar and blocked the way of the aged diplomatist and his wife to safety.

Uriarte was found dead, leaning across a window sill. His wife mistook a window leading to an air shaft for one opening on a fire escape and plunged four stories to her death. Uriarte was 82 years old.

HYDROPHOBIA IS FEARED

Board of Health Regard Dog Situation Serious

The frequency with which mad dogs appear in this city is receiving the attention of the Board of Health and today Dr. Fred E. Jones, chairman of the board, addressed a letter to Chief of Police Burrell asking that immediate steps be taken by his department to shoot all unlicensed dogs.

The present conditions point to an epidemic of hydrophobia which if steps are not taken will present as complicated an epidemic as the city has ever faced.

The dogs bitten by the South Quincy dog shot Wednesday by Capt. McKay are under a strict quarantine and in some cases will be shot by the police. Every effort will bend toward a prevention of further spreading of rabies in Quincy. More than the normal number of cases have been prevalent in South Shore towns this year and Quincy dogs are beginning to show the effects of infection, due possibly to the dogs' daily visits over boundary lines.

MILTON

A band concert will be given Sunday afternoon at the foot of the Great Blue Hill by the First Corps Cadet Band, John B. Fielding, director. The concert commences at 4 o'clock.

This Institute Is Without An Equal

It is not a money-making scheme ; it is a school honestly conducted, with but one end in view,—the complete and proper equipment of its pupils. No useless studies are enforced to prolong completion of work but from the first day of school to the last, every energy is bent to make the pupils fit for the world.

The results obtained by this school are the greatest in the country.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Letter Carrier John T. Cain is planning to spend most of his vacation at Goffs Falls, N. H.

Charles Murphy of Safford street and Anthony Kane of Wollaston have returned from Brant Rock, where they spent a week.

Unity Circle of Kings' Daughters will hold the first meeting of the season Tuesday, Sept. 2 in Bethany chapel.

Meetings of the Quincy Day Nursery association are to be resumed in September, a meeting being announced for Tuesday afternoon at half past two at the Women's clubhouse.

Miss Purchase, Secretary of the Associated Charities, has returned from a pleasant vacation spent in North Conway, N. H., Quebec and Montreal, Canada. The office of the Associated Charities will be open every week day from eleven until one o'clock beginning September first.

The new hours at the Thomas Crane library cannot fail to please the patrons of the library, especially the hour of closing which is nine instead of eight. The hours are now more in keeping with those of other libraries and an improvement that has been demanded for some time. Now if the books can be made a little more accessible the library will be giving good service.

A bread made after a fixed formula, carefully baked, and wrapped in waxed paper for delivery.

SPORTING FOR HOLIDAY

Base Ball, Picnics, Clambakes and Trotting

The Red Men and the Orients play the second game of the series on the Ward Three playground Labor Day morning. The Indians won the first game Aug. 16. Both teams are in good condition. C. Carlson and Bradley will be the opposing pitchers.

Saturday afternoon the strong Giants of South Weymouth and the Colonials meet for the first time this season. The Colonials are desirous of arranging a game with the Red Men for Labor Day afternoon. The Colonial manager is Francis L. McPherson, Common street, West Quincy.

Entries from athletic clubs in all parts of the state are being received for the picnic of the Young Men's Hebrew Association at New Downers Landing on the holiday. The interests centers in the 440 yard dash between Phelan and Kingsbury for the championship of the city and a valuable silver cup. The issue is at stake, both men being in top form and sworn rivals. The John Adams Aerie of Eagles, holds its annual clam bake at Squantum on Labor Day and have invited every known political candidate to attend and present his platform. A series of athletic events are carded.

A special event of interest to horse lovers will be given Labor Day afternoon by the Old Colony Driving Club at Weymouth when nearly 50 horses, divided into 15 classes, race for extra prizes.

The South Quincys and the Braintree A. A. that played on the Ward Four playground last Saturday are billed on the Old Colony playground on the holiday morning in the second of a series of games. A snappy game is anticipated.

BRAINTREE

Miss Florence Bent and Miss Sylvia Storrs are at Portland, Maine on their vacation.

Letters remain in the post office for Chioppini Ottavio, John Matthews, James McAlorn and Wayne McMichael.

Rev. and Mrs. D. Roy Freeman and son Paul of Mt. Vernon street are expected to return today from Boothbay Harbor, Maine.

Mrs. E. G. McGill and daughter Esther of Washington street who have been stopping at Kearsarge, N. H., will go to Maine before returning to Braintree.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Cass and sons Harold, Edwin, and Wallace of Roxbury are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cass of Vine street.

Miss Ardele Walker of Sherbrooke avenue, returned this week from Marshfield Hills where she has been spending three weeks with Miss Lucille Joyce at their summer camp.

Miss E. P. Harlow of Jamaica Plain, who has been spending eight months in East Jaffreys, N. H., was visiting Mrs. William G. Tuck of Arnold street on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Woodworth of Washington street visited her brother F. H. Crowell of Providence a well known Braintree boy. Mr. Woodworth has also gone to Bradford, Vt., to visit his son Rev. F. A. Woodworth.

Misses Edith, Mary, Margaret, and Master Allen Arnold returned yesterday from Braintree Highlands where they have been spending two weeks with their grandmother, Mrs. Daniel Cain.

Miss Irene Murphy of River street returned last Monday after visiting friends in Warren, Conn. During the holiday she will be the guest of friends in Webster, returning next week to resume her duties in the public schools.

Mrs. M. P. Frazier of Elm street was taken to the Quincy hospital for treatment on Wednesday. Her many friends hope for news of her immediate recovery. Dr. F. Herbert Gile is the attending physician.

Miss Ruth Urann of Vine street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus L. Urann, gave a dinner party to a dozen of her neighbors last Wednesday. It was a merry occasion and each of the guests received a souvenir. Those present were Charlotte Young, Louise and Hazel Cass, Sarah Patten, Priscilla and Gordon Kirkpatrick, Sidney Johnson, Leonard Rhoades, Russell Patten, Frederick, Edward and Richard Hunt.

HALDANE IN NEW YORK

First Lord High Chancellor to Leave England In 400 Years

New York, Aug. 30.—Viscount Haldane, the first lord high chancellor of Great Britain to leave his country for 400 years, arrived here on the Lusitania. A reception committee, consisting of representatives of the United States government and of the American Bar association, whose guest he will be during a five days' visit in this country and Canada, met him at the pier and welcomed him to the United States.

Lord Haldane and his party were escorted to the Hotel Plaza, where he received newspaper men.

A sightseeing tour of New York yesterday afternoon was the first event of the many arranged for his entertainment. Last night he was the guest at a dinner given by C. A. Severance of St. Paul. This morning J. P. Morgan's yacht Corsair took him to West Point, where he will review the cadets.

MENACES OTHER CRAFT FOR HOURS

Blazing Oil Ship Finally Sinks In New York Channel

New York, Aug. 30.—With a mighty hiss the oil steamer Bergermeister Hachmann sank to the bottom of the channel. Clouds of steam rose above her and hovered a moment over the spot where she went down. The channel is shallow there and the superstructure remained above the water when the ship settled, but did not burn.

The steamer, with 600,000 gallons of crude oil and benzine in her hold, was a flaming torch for fourteen hours after her cargo had been fired by a spark struck by two tin cases.

Blazing blocks of wood, dislodged from her steel frame, floated down the river, menacing other craft.

MUCH DAMAGE BY STORM

Lightning Causes a Death and Destruction of Powder Mill

Boston, Aug. 30.—A severe electrical and rain storm swept through New England yesterday, leaving behind it scores of damaged and burning buildings, uprooted trees, flooded streets and crippled telephone, street car and fire alarm service.

In Massachusetts the storm was most severe in the central portion of the state. Vacura Lopes was struck by a bolt and killed while working in a cranberry bog at Nantucket.

Many Middlesex county cities and towns were jarred severely when one of the powder mills of the American Powder company at Acton exploded after being struck by lightning.

GUEST OF MRS. ASTOR

Russian Grand Duke, Brother-In-Law of Czar, is Visiting Newport

Newport, R. I., Aug. 30.—Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch of Russia, brother-in-law of the czar, arrived here incognito last night. He will remain for a few days on a social visit. His time will be divided between the Russian ambassador, George Bakmetieff, and Mrs. John Astor.

The ambassador went to Wickford Junction to meet the grand duke, and accompanied him here. They were met at the boat landing by the first secretary of the Russian embassy and were driven to the embassy. From there they went to Mrs. Astor's home for dinner.

WITHOUT POLICE FORCE

Dover Cannot Pay Monthly Salaries of Its Peace Guardians

Dover, N. H., Aug. 30.—This city is legally without a police force and the policemen cannot legally draw their monthly salaries Monday, according to City Solicitor Sherry.

Sherry declares a special meeting of the city council will have to be called to authorize the paying of the policemen. Under the new police act the commissioner and police officers were retired Aug. 1.

Petersburg Mine Exploder Dead

Shamokin, Pa., Aug. 30.—William Laubenstein, who, while a member of the Forty-eighth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, in the Civil war, personally prepared the magazine and aided in exploding it under the rebel forts at Petersburg, Va., preceding a union advance, died here.

BULLET GOES THROUGH BODY

Defender of Woman Slain In an Apartment House

STATEMENTS ARE CONFLICTING

Boston Police Inclined to Believe Woman Who Says Man Who Had Been Rebuked When He Kicked Her Fired Fatal Shot—Alleged Slayer Has Eluded Arrest

Boston, Aug. 30.—The police have not found Stephen C. Adams, the chauffeur whom they believe can give them considerable information concerning the death of Charles J. Hoff, linotype machinist, who was shot in the back with a revolver while in the apartment house at 84 West Rutland square.

According to stories told the police by five persons who allege they were present at the time of the shooting, Adams was in the house when Hoff was shot, and disappeared directly afterward. Their stories flatly contradict the assertion of Mrs. Carrie Adams, wife of the missing chauffeur, who said that he went to Portland on Wednesday and has not returned yet.

Conflicting statements have been made regarding the trouble that resulted in Hoff being shot, but the police state that they believe the story told by Mrs. Anna Phillips is the correct version of the affair.

Mrs. Phillips stated that her daughter Lillian was in the Adams suite, and that when she went to the suite to have her daughter leave Adams pushed Mrs. Phillips out into the hallway and attacked her.

She alleges that Mrs. Adams joined him, and that when Adams was kicking her Hoff rebuked him. The shooting, it is alleged, happened directly after the trouble between Mrs. Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Adams.

The police found an unused 32-calibre cartridge on the steps of the house, but have not found the revolver. Medical Examiner Leary, in his autopsy report, states that Hoff was shot in the back with a bullet from an automatic revolver; that the slug had entered the back, going entirely through the body and causing internal hemorrhage and death.

Lillian Phillips alleges that she saw a revolver with a gun metal handle in Adams' apartments a few days ago, and that he told her that he had bought it to shoot deer in Maine, where he soon was to visit. Miss Phillips told the police that Adams attacked her mother, that she ran out of the house for a policeman, and that she was out when the shooting took place.

AFTER TEN YEARS' DELAY

Appraisal of the Blaine Estate Is Filed In New York

New York, Aug. 30.—The appraisal of the estate of Mrs. Harriet Stanwood Blaine, widow of James G. Blaine, the statesman, has just been filed in this city.

According to appraisers' report, it was worth $137,658 on July 15, 1903, the day Mrs. Blaine died. The report did not explain why there had been a delay of ten years in appraising the estate.

At the time of her death Mrs. Blaine lived in Augusta, Me., and the assets of her estate taxable in New York amounted to $20,508.

OLD STRIKE ENDS

Baltimore and Ohio Machinists Walked Out In December, 1910

Washington, Aug. 30.—Announcement was made here of the amicable adjustment, through the department of labor, of differences between the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and the machinists in all the shops of the system between Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis, that have existed since December, 1910.

The adjustment deals particularly with working conditions, although the minimum wage scale is increased 1 cent an hour and provision is made for a nine-hour working day.

TWO MILITANTS JAILED

Asquith's Black Eye and Bruises Testify as to Their Militancy

Aberdeen, Aug. 30.—The two militant suffragettes, Winnie Wallace and Flora Smith, who attacked Premier Asquith while he was playing golf at Elgin, were committed to jail in default of $50 bail each and held for trial.

The premier is suffering from a black eye and numerous cuts and bruises inflicted by the two women.

Former Sheriff Killed by Son

Rushville, Ind., Aug. 30.—William Price, 60 years old, former sheriff of Rush county, and marshal of this city, was killed in a quarrel with his son, Erbie, aged 25. Witnesses say the father was the aggressor.

Frisco Is Choice of Foresters

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 30.—The Foresters of America, in national convention here, decided to hold their 1915 triennial meeting in San Francisco.

Death of Mrs. Stallings

Buffalo, Aug. 30.—Mrs. George T. Stallings, wife of the manager of the Boston National baseball team, died at a local hospital after a long illness.

"THE REFINING OF FATHER."

Imagine an honest hard working man whose knotty, caloused hands give unmistakable evidence of the roughest kind of manual labor, suddenly falling heir to a fortune. How he gets busy sending off the daughter to a recognized boarding school where her hastily acquired knowledge gives her a longing for breaking into society. She realizes she will be handicapped in this unless a way can be found for polishing off the rough edges of her father's manners. She gets herself into the meshes still further by falling in love and eloping with an ex-prize fighter.

Any one who has sat through any of Matt Ott's earlier creations in the field of musical farce can easily imagine the wealth of opportunity a subject such as this affords him and how this partially schooled girl gives Mrs. Malaprops cards and spades in distorting, "The Kings pure English," songs, dances, pretty figures, novel numbers, flashy costumes? Why certainly! See the refining process and be convinced. It will be at Kincaide Theatre afternoons and evenings next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Noah's Ark

It Needed a Mrs. Noah

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The houseboat was moored under the willows by the river bank. It was a blunt nosed, bargelike craft, its upper deck gay with red striped awnings and boxes of scarlet geraniums. A hatless young man garbed in white with his shirt sleeves rolled above brown arms was peeling potatoes in the doorway of the galley.

Every now and then the man lifted a pair of fine brown eyes and scanned the red bridge that crossed the river a hundred yards above the houseboat. Occasionally a farm wagon creaked across or a touring motorcar flashed by.

The river was uneasy these days. Successive spring rains had swelled it until it was now rising beyond its highest water mark. Almost imperceptibly the brown waters crept to the level of the banks, and the old bridge was alarmingly close to the surface of the stream.

But the country folk were slow going and not given to borrowing trouble. The Willow never had overflowed its banks, and it never would. Often it had reached the floor of the bridge, only to subside when its tributary springs and streams had spilled out their surplus share of the spring rains.

It had rained for weeks during this June, and when the houseboat crept up the stream and cast anchor under the willows the weatherwise predicted a wet vacation for the luckless voyager. They had watched the young man spread his easel on the shady deck and paint the slanting rain on the wheatfields or the sun peeping through the dripping willows or the boggy coolness of the farther shore.

Noah Parker was enjoying this vacation as he had never enjoyed one before. But there was a feeling of uneasiness in the gradual rising of the river, together with the newspaper accounts of the devastating floods in the adjacent states.

"Hey, there!" called a voice from the bank. And Noah set down his potatoes and went to the rail.

"Hello, Simon!" he called to the towheaded farm lad, who held forth a basket of eggs. "Come aboard."

Simon timorously set one bare foot on the narrow landing plank, placed the other before it and finally reached the deck, where Noah promptly yanked him aboard, skillfully relieving him of the basket at the same instant.

"Two dozen for 30 cents, Simon. I feel like a robber," said Noah, diving into his pocket and bringing up a fifty cent piece. "Take this and keep the change if there is any way of spending 20 cents in this benighted hamlet."

Simon caught the coin, grinned delightedly and took the empty basket.

"I'm going to treat Miss Molly to ice cream," he confided blushingly.

"Ah, ha! Who is Miss Molly?"

"Schoolteacher. She's going to stay all summer and teach again in September. She ain't got any folks to go home to, and she's boarding at our house. I wanted to treat her to something all winter, but, gosh hang it all, I couldn't seem to save enough. When ice cream sody was 5 cents a glass I got 10 cents all to once, and on my way home to ask her I saw a sign in the store saying it had gone up to 10 cents. So I jest gave it up. But, by cricky, if you wait long enough you can get hold of anything!"

"You like your teacher, eh?" asked Noah.

Simon's eyes shone. "You betcher life. Why, what do you think she's doing, mister?"

"Give it up."

"Why, jest because me and Lem Peters and Susie Anderson couldn't sense fractions and didn't pass our examinations last week, she's fixed up the old boathouse yonder for a schoolroom, and she helps us every afternoon with them fractions. She wants to help us on grammar, but I tell her I don't need it. Grammar don't bother me none; do you tlfink so, mister?"

Noah suppressed a smile.

"It doesn't seem to, sonny."

"I'll tell her that, by gum. There she is now! I'm going to ask her right off. I wonder what kind she'll take, what say?" Simon paused on the plank and looked anxiously through the torn brim of his hat at Noah.

"Probably she'll choose strawberry," responded Noah gravely, as man to man, and Simon nodded solemnly and capered away toward the bridge where a slender, blue gowned figure was crossing toward the town.

Noah saw her stop and wait for the lad, and he noted even from that distance that her hair was dark beneath her white hat and that her face was softly oval. She put one hand on Simon's shoulder and swung her parasol to the other side. Together they went away. Once they paused, and Simon pointed back at the houseboat, but Noah ducked into the kitchen, where he proceeded to put the neglected potatoes to boil.

"She must be a nice girl," he said to himself as he washed up his dishes after the meal, and then he realized, with a hot blush, that unconsciously he had been thinking of Miss Molly for an hour and a half.

That night it rained heavily after a severe thunderstorm, and as morning dawned Noah, lying wide awake, realized that the Ark, as he had named his pleasure boat, was scraping bottom. He tossed on some clothes and in the pale gray light found that the river had risen until the hull of the Ark was resting on the muddy bank. He examined the motor and found it in order for an early start if it should be necessary.

It seemed vastly important that he should get the Ark out of the main current and into some safe inlet before the red bridge broke away, as it must under the pressure of the swollen river. Even now he could hear the dull roar of water against the timbers.

But daylight brought a gathering of skeptical farmers, who reluctantly fastened the shaking bridge to the willows by heavy logging chains at the four corners of its thirty foot span.

"She'll stand all right now. We've seen it worse'n this," grunted Ezra Bead, with a quizzical squint at Noah's disturbed face. "Want any help pushing your boat off the bank?"

"If you can spare time," returned the young man. "If the bridge should break away"—

"It won't break away; the water's falling already," interrupted Ezra, examining the two inches of river that had overflowed the meadow where they stood.

By noon the Ark was moving downstream with the current. The red bridge was straining at the chains, and wagons were going around by the new cement bridge at the upper falls.

Noah made fast to a bending willow and cooked his dinner. Just as he had concluded the meal there came a grinding crash from upstream, mingled with the roar of coming waters. A little island protected the Ark from the main current, and Noah watched keenly from his safe harbor for anything that might come with the flood.

First came the red bridge end on like some queer, crazy raft teetering up and down in the strong current. Behind it bobbed one of the willows pulled from the bank by the wrecked bridge. When bridge and tree had disappeared Noah got into his skiff and rowed around the island to wait for further floating objects. Here and there along the river banks were boathouses or occasional springhouses where the farmers obtained their drinking water. In any one of these riverside houses, which must come down with the flood, might be a human being caught unawares.

At last there was a sound of voices, and there came riding down the current a small boathouse with its gabled roof pointing downstream, and sitting around the open doorway with feet swinging inside the little building were four people.

Noah did not attempt to catalogue them by name or identity. He simply reached out his handy boathook and pulled gently at first and then with all his strength until the house swirled heavily around and crashed to a momentary anchorage on the shore of the almost inundated island.

"I'll take you off in my boat. Hold on there for a moment!" cried Noah, and in five exciting minutes he had transferred the four voyagers to the safe deck of the Ark, where they all gazed breathlessly at each other before bursting into exclamations of surprise and joy at their rescue.

Noah looked curiously at them. There was Simon Bead, sunburned and dripping wet; there was undoubtedly Lem Peters, whose cranial contour indicated that fractions and he would never come to a definite understanding; there was Susie Anderson, fat and flaxen haired and good naturedly stupid looking, and last because she was not the least was a blue gowned girl with raven hair and starry blue eyes and cheeks quite pink with excitement.

"Well, Simon, suppose you introduce me to your teacher and your schoolmates," he said at last.

Miss Decker looked encouragingly at Simon, who twisted his fingers in his hair and shot an agonized glance at his rescuer.

"That's her," he stammered, pointing a finger at his teacher. "That's Miss Molly, I mean; and that's Susie, and she never bawled once, mister, when the river floated us while we was saying grammar; and that's Lem; he hollered some, and so did I; and say, mister, we had that ice cream last night!" he ended, with shining eyes.

"I'm very glad," said Noah kindly, as he shook hands with Molly Decker and her two bashful charges. "Now that you're safely on the Ark—yes, this is really Noah's Ark, my name is Noah Parker—suppose we find something to eat. Perhaps Miss Decker will take you below and rummage in the kitchen while I go out and watch for more castaways."

While Noah waited around at the end of the island, Molly and the children found materials and prepared an appetizing meal for the weary Noah when he should return to the Ark.

As they gathered around the table in the pretty dining room, Molly Decker poured the tea with charming grace. Perhaps that was what roused Susie Anderson to enthusiasm.

"Oh, Mr. Noah!" she cried excitedly. "Let's play this is the real Ark, and you are Mr. Noah and Miss Molly shall be Mrs. Noah, and I will be the dove! The boys can be animals if they want to," she added generously.

"We won't play it today, dears," said Miss Molly gently, but for some unaccountable reason her cheeks flushed deeper.

"The Ark will return some other day," added Noah gayly, "and take all of you for a sail down the river—the whole school."

"And Miss Molly, too?" asked Simon jealously.

"And Miss Molly if she will come," assented Noah softly, and in his heart he added that he would try to persuade her to remain forever, for at last the only girl had come to him, and he told himself that every Ark needed a Mrs. Noah.

DECIDED LULL IN THAW CASE

Thrown Back to Where It Was at Start In Canada

THOMPSON IS OUT ON BAIL

Prosecution Fails In Effort to Press Charge of Immigration Officials—Jerome Fails to See Premier at Quebec—Carmody Asks Government to Return Prisoner

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 30.—Roger Thompson, the New York chauffeur who whirled Harry K. Thaw away from Matteawan in an automobile, walks the streets of Sherbrooke a free man. Police Magistrate Mulvena admitted him to $500 bail after he had appeared for trial charged with aiding Thaw, a lunatic and therefore an undesirable, to enter the domininon.

F. Campbell, for the immigration department, announced to the court that he wished to press first the charge that Thompson entered Canada by stealth. Thompson's counsel, Louis St. Laurient, acting with the Thaw counsel, objected to proceedings on this charge, and at their request the adjournment was granted.

William T. Jerome, District Attorney Conger of Duchess county, Deputy Attorney General Kennedy and others here trying to get Thaw back were in court. The courtroom was packed.

With Thaw in jail for an indefinite period, probably till the session of the king's bench in October, and the Thompson case postponed, indications are that there has set in a decided lull in matters pertaining to Stanford White's slayer.

Jerome's unproductive visit to Quebec, where he had hoped to see the premier and attorney general, brought the case back to where it was when Thaw was first committed to the Sherbrooke jail. Jerome and Kennedy are still here, but what move if any New York will make next they will not say.

Thompson's bail was supplied by the Thaw family. They have done all in their power to ease his position following his veiled threat to reveal who was behind the plot that resulted in Thaw's liberation.

Carmody's Petition to Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—Attorney General Carmody of New York has petitioned the Canadian government for the return of Harry K. Thaw to the authorities at Matteawan.

Carmody cites the deportation of a dozen or more insane persons from Canada under the immigration act, and sets forth that in their cases no question was raised and that they should be taken as a precedent in the Thaw matter.

THROWS AWAY AMBERGRIS

Providence Girl Casts Lump Valued at $3000 Into the Sea

Providence, Aug. 30.—Helen A. Moffitt of this city tossed $3000 worth of ambergris into the ocean at Pleasant View, Watch Hill. She did not know what the ball of gray matter was.

Miss Moffitt returned to her hotel and told some guests about the object. She went back to the beach and found a small portion which had been detached from the large lump, and took it to her home. Her father had the substance analyzed. It proved to be gray ambergris of the best quality, and is worth $28 an ounce. The lump she threw into the sea weighed about ten pounds, she says. The small lump saved is worth about $50.

ASKS $5000 DAMAGES

Spinster of 60 Sues Old Flame For Alleged Breach of Promise

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 30.—Miss Etta Colby of Grasmere has brought suit for $5000 against Wesley L. Wheeler of Bow, charging breach of promise to marry her. It is said that both are more than 60 years old and Miss Colby says they have been friends from childhood.

Miss Colby says that Wheeler proposed to her during the summer of 1909 and that she accepted. He was married to another last year, according to the plaintiff.

The case will come before the next sitting of the Hillsboro county superior court.

REVOLUTION CRUSHED

Conditions Are Restored to the Normal In Venezuela

Washington, Aug. 30.—The cruiser Des Moines left Venezuelan waters for Norfolk, in a message to the navy department Captain Long reports that Venezuela is quiet and normal conditions have been restored.

This is considered at the department to mean that the Castro revolution has been crushed.

New French Army Scandal

Paris, Aug. 30.—An army scandal of wide scope was scented when it was reported that Sergeant Dieu is under arrest, charged with having sold to Austria the plans of the latest French gun.

Typhoon Kills Hundred Persons

Tokio, Aug. 30.—One hundred persons were killed and 15,000 houses were submerged in a typhoon which struck this section of Japan.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Chapter 1 of this story appeared in the Daily Ledger of Aug. 12. Back numbers can be obtained at Ledger office.

Morning came, and with it a horseback ride for Brock and Miss Fowler. That was enough for Mrs. Rodney, she would hold in no longer. Mrs. Odell-Carney must be told. She, at least, must have the chance to escape before the storm of scandal broke to muddy her immaculate skirts. Forthwith the considerate hostess appeared before her guest with a headful of disclosures. She had decided in advance that it would not do to beat about the bush, so to speak. She would come directly to the obnoxious point.

They were in Mrs. Odell-Carney's sitting room. Mr. Odell-Carney was smoking a cigarette on the balcony, just outside the window. Mrs. Rodney did not know that he was there. It is only natural that he held himself inhospitably aloof. Mrs. Rodney bored him to death. He did not hear all that was poured out between them, but he heard quite enough to cause him something of a pang. He distinctly heard his wife say things to Mrs. Rodney that she had solemnly avowed she would not say—things about the Medcroft baby.

It goes without saying that Mrs Odell-Carney refused to be surprised by the disclosures. She calmly admitted that she had suspected Medcroft of being too fond of his sister-in-law; but, she went on cheerfully, why not? His wife didn't care a rap for him—she said rap and nothing else. Mrs. Medcroft had an affair of her own, dear child. She was not so slow as Mrs. Rodney thought, oh, no. Mrs Odell-Carney warmed up considerably in defending the not to be pitied Edith. She said she had liked her from the beginning, and more than ever, now that she had really come to the conclusion that her husband was the kind who sets his wife an example by being a bit divarticating himself.

"I won't hear of a divorce."

Mrs. Rodney fairly screeched with horror when she heard that Tootles was "a poor little beggar," and "all that sort of thing, you know."

"My dear," said Mrs. Odell-Carney, hating herself all the time for engaging in the spread of gossip, but femininely unable to withstand the test, "your excellent cousin, Mrs. Medcroft, receives two letters a day from London—great, fat letters which take fifteen minutes to read in spite of the fact that they are written in a perfectly huge hand by a man—a man, d'ye hear? They're not from her husband. He's here. He cannot have written them in London, don't you see? He"—

"I see," inserted Mrs. Rodney, who was afraid that Mrs. Odell-Carney might think she didn't see.

"Mind you, Mrs. Rodney, I'm terribly cut up about all this. She has"—

"Oh, I knew you would be," mourned Mrs. Rodney, her heart in her boots. "You must just hate me for exposing you to"—

"Rubbish!" scoffed the other. "It isn't that. I've been through a dozen affairs in which my best friends were frightfully—er—complicated. I meant to say that I'm terribly cut up over poor Mrs. Medcroft. She's a dear. Believe me, she's a most delicious sinner. Even Carney says that, and he's very fastidious—and very loyal."

"They are married in name only," said Mrs. Rodney, beginning to sniffle. She looked up and smiled wanly through her tears. "You know what I mean. My grammar is terrible when I'm nervous." She pulled at her handkerchief for a wavering moment. "Do you think I'd better speak to Edith? We may be able to prevent the divorce."

"Divorce, my dear," gasped Mrs. Odell-Carney incredulously.

At this juncture Mr. Odell-Carney emerged from his shell, so to speak. He stalked through the window and confronted the two ladies, one of whom at least was vastly dismayed by his sudden appearance.

"Now, see here," he began without preliminary apology, "I won't hear of a divorce. That's all rubbish—perfect rot, 'pon my soul. Wot's the use? Hang it all, Mrs. Rodney, wot's the odds, so long as all parties are contented? We can stand it, by Jove, if they can, don't you know. We can't regulate the love affairs of the universe. Besides, I'm not going to stand by and see a friend dragged into a thing of this sort"—

"A friend, Carney," exclaimed his wife.

"Well, it's possible, my dear, that he may be a friend. I know so many chaps in London who might be doing this sort of thing, don't you know. Who knows but the chap who's writing her these letters may be one of my best friends? It doesn't pay to take a chance on it. I won't hear to it. If Medcroft knows and his wife knows and Miss Fowler knows, why the deuce should we bother our heads about it? Last night I heard the Medcroft infant bawling its lungs out—teething, I dare say—but did I go in and take a hand in straightening out the poor little beggar? Not I. By the same token, why should I or anybody else presume to step in and try to straighten out the troubles of its parents? It's useless interference, either way you take it."

"I think it's all very entertaining and diverting," said Mrs. Odell-Carney carelessly. She yawned.

"Do you really think so?" asked the doubting Mrs. Rodney. "I was so afraid you'd mind. Your position in society, my dear Mrs."—

"My position in society, Mrs. Rodney, can weather the tempest you predict," said Mrs. Odell-Carney, with a smile that went to Mrs. Rodney's marrow.

"Oh, if—if you really don't mind"—she mumbled apologetically.

"Not at all, my dear madam," remarked Odell-Carney, carefully adjusting his eyeglass. "It's quite immaterial, I assure you."

VERMONT WILL MAKE CRUISE

Battleship Fleet to Sail From Hampton Roads Oct. 25

The battleship Vermont is the only Quincy built ship selected for the Mediterranean cruise, leaving Hampton Roads, Oct. 25. Only nine battleships of the Atlantic Fleet will make the Mediterranean cruise this Fall and they will not be accompanied by the torpedo flotilla, as the original program proposed.

Secretary Daniels announced Thursday that it had been determined it would be incurring an unnecessary risk to have the destroyers make the return trip across the Atlantic in midwinter, and that they would be sent to the Mediterranean at a more favorable season.

It had been intended to send a larger number of battleships, but four of the big vessels are being kept in Mexican waters and four others are in readiness to relieve them. This relief policy was adopted in order to allow the crews liberty in American ports.

Secretary Daniels said the Fall cruise to the Mediterranean would inaugurate a policy of periodically giving the enlisted men of the Navy a foreign cruise for their education and recreation.

The nine battleships to steam out of Hampton Roads, and their destinations will be as follows:

Wyoming, flagship of Rear Admiral Badger, commander-in-chief, Malta; Vermont and Ohio, Marseilles; Arkansas and Florida, Naples; Utah and Delaware, Villefranche; Connecticut and Kansas, Genoa.

It is expected the Wyoming will arrive at Malta Nov. 8. Sailing three days later for Naples, the flagship should leave that port, Nov. 18, leading the two vessels which will then have completed their stay there for Villefranche, whence she will head the fleet on the homeward cruise.

Arriving at their home yards Dec. 15, the vessels will lie at anchor until after the Christmas holidays.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Mrs. Isabell Souther is confined to her home on Edison street by illness.

Maple Lodge K. & L. of Honor is to hold a whist party in Electa hall Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Annie G. Grignon and family have moved from Ellerton road to Bradford street.

Thomas McCaffrey, assistant agent at the Atlantic station is on his vacation and is being relieved by Mr. Twitchell of East Braintree.

Bertha Grass of Ardell street, Montclair,is sick with scarlet fever and it is feared another child in the same family also has the same disease.

Miss Helen Arthur of Pope street, Montclair, and Miss Marion Walters of Bodwin street, Bellevue Park are to attend school in Boston this winter.

Ada York of Botolph street is improving from infantile paralysis and it is expected there will be no bad results.

Labor Day on Monday will almost wind up the vacation season.

The public schools will open next Tuesday.

People in Squantum were shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. Eliza Schultz of Roxbury on Sunday. Mrs. Schultz was an aunt of Mr. Gustav Wunderlich Bellevue road.

Miss Doris Cummings of Clive street has given up her position as substitute stenographer, enters Burdett college on Tuesday to finish her course.

Usually Quincy has noon temperature below 70 in August, but 70 is the lowest this August. In 1912 and 1911 there were 60 degree days in August.

If the weather on the last Friday of the month is to govern the next month September will not be a very pleasant month.

Edward P. Osborne who has been station agent at Neponset for forty years died suddenly of appendicitis at a private hospital in Boston Wednesday noon. He was at the station Tuesday morning but feeling ill, went home and summoned a doctor, who immediately ordered him to the hospital, where he died before it was possible to operate. Mr. Osborne had many friends in Atlantic and Norfolk Downs as the freight business of those places is done at Neponset.

Rev. T. W. Davison has been conducting religious services in the Vacation house at Squantum this summer. The attendance has gained steadily and it is hoped by many that a religious society will be organized before winter sets in. With the growing interest and large Sunday school possibilities the Vacation house may be procured for religious and social work in Squantum. Miss Maud E. Read of Squantum street will sing two solos at the three o'clock meeting on Sunday and Mrs. Brigham of Squantum will sing the following Sunday.
